Reagan defeats Mondale handily in Mock Election

By JOSEPH MURPHY

Walter Mondale should “start looking for a job,” said Bill Healy after Notre Dame students went and won one for the Gipper in yesterday’s Mock Election by a margin of 61.3 percent to 36.1 percent, President Ronald Reagan defeated former Vice President Walter Mondale.

Healy, the representative for Reagan/Bush on campus, said the win was “fantastic.”

Mike Brogoli, the Mondale/Ferraro representative for Notre Dame, said, “It isn’t over. The real election is on Tuesday. And the 61 percent still have a chance to redeem themselves.”

Healy said, “Now, the large scale campaigns being conducted are very enthusiastic about the numbers. It’s good to be on a winning team. Notre Dame is strongly for Reagan.”

Reagan would capture 70 percent of the vote, but he said, “Brogoli should be happy it wasn’t a larger landslide.”

“Mondale made the election a question of leadership, and Reagan’s proven he’s good at that,” Healy said. The students also voted on several issues.

They rejected the Equal Rights Amendment with 53.5 percent opposing the ERA and 45.2 percent favoring the amendment.

Brogoli said, “Conservative men tend not to like the ERA.” Approximately 70 percent of the voters were male. Bill Healy said he was glad to hear of the amendment’s rejection by the students. Reagan opposes the ERA; Mondale supports it.

By an overwhelming majority, the students support some type of nuclear freeze. Twenty-two percent favor a unilateral freeze, while 57 percent support a bilateral freeze and 21 percent favor no freeze.

On the question of the placement of weapons in space, 56.6 percent opposed the idea, and 39.6 percent favored it.

David predicts passage of Dry Driving Club resolution

By MARY CAROL CREADON

A resolution calling for the formation of a Dry Driving Club will be presented to Student Senate at its Monday meeting, said Cathy David, student body vice president, who is confident the measure will pass.

A student participating in a Dry Driving Club may receive free coffee or soft drinks at a restaurant or bar, after agreeing to refrain from alcohol sold to drive others in his group home.

Marquette University instituted such a program this year to help reduce the number of alcohol-related accidents in the Milwaukee area.

“The resolution will pass easily,” said David. “We think it’s a great idea, and the recent focus on drunk driving has caused us to take a more responsible look at what we must do about it. We are all touched by drunk driving. There have already been three bad accidents this year at school and we can no longer just stand by,” she said.

David and Rob Bertino, student body president, plan to meet with South Bend Mayor Roger Parent soon to discuss plans for starting the club. David said they will be calling on the Five Points taverns to seek sponsorship by Corby’s, Kenny and Nickie’s, Bridger’s and the Commons.

They also hope to have Senior Barr, Healy’s, Chip’s and the Marriott and restaurants such as Azar’s and Donny’s sponsor the program.

David said she believes the Governor’s Task Force To Prevent Drunk Driving will be very supportive of the program, too, she said. The program since Todd claims no one has abused the system elsewhere.

She hopes students will be supportive of the club, and she said she is not worried about people abusing the program since Todd claims no one has abused the system elsewhere.

Marketing of candidates represents drastic change, says McCarthy

By ANN KALtenBACH

The mass media’s ability to sell an image of a candidate may be the most drastic change in the American electoral process in recent years, said Abigail McCarthy last night in Saint Mary’s Stapleton Lounge.

Decrying how politicians are marketed as if they are consumer goods, McCarthy said, “What works to sell anything is used for a candidate. If our electoral process is to continue, we must get control of this.”

She also lamented the banishment of many who work in the news media. “Today’s investigative journalist fails to sort out what is and isn’t important.”

McCarthy, wife of former Minnesota Sen Eugene McCarthy, gave the 1984 commencement address at the College.

Addressing the changing of the election process from her perspective as a wife of a senator, she told the largely student attended audience, “You see things in a different light than I did in my lifetime.

“…”When I was in college, poll taxes restricted people from voting. No federal aid was given to public schools, and Social Security and Medicare were nonexistent for women. Government has changed all of this,” she said.

McCarthy discussed the increasing amounts of money being poured into political campaigns, noting that the average House election today costs approximately $1 million.

“In 1948, my husband got a $100 contribution from the Democratic National Committee, and we thought that was respectable,” she said.

“Now, the large scale campaigns being conducted are possible because of television. TV requires the use of political consultants and they have altered the picture of campaigns.”

McCarthy said that in 1948, campaigns were controlled by the political parties. She suggested, however, that this control has shifted, partly because of rising media power.

The conservative coalition between young and old

One of the most historically significant aspects of this election year is the conservative coalition formed between the younger generation and the older generation.

The middle-aged generation, a product of the social protests and liberal lifestyles of the 1960s, have broken out of their isolation and have become more active in politics.

The younger generation has also become more politically active, and the two generations have formed a strong coalition, especially in the southern states.

The president and Congress are both members of this coalition, and the result is a conservative Congress that is more likely to support conservative policies.
WSND-FM joins national network

By CAROL BROWN

Classical music fans may anticipate a special live broadcast from Vienna, Austria, on New Year's Eve because WSND-FM has recently joined the American Public Radio network.

WSND-FM is the University-owned and operated classical radio station.

He said one reason for joining American Public Radio is it fills the University requirement of broadcasting a certain percentage of news and informational programming, while still preserving and contributing to the musical interests of the station.

Economic advantages also contributed to the decision to join the network, Wimmer said.

Tape rentals and syndication costs will be eliminated since American Public Radio will provide WSND-FM with its programming materials. Wimmer emphasized the program's cost effectiveness, stating "it really does save thousands of dollars.

A key benefit, according to Wimmer, is the diversification American Public Radio will provide the station. American Public Radio, a satellite network, will give WSND-FM access to an "extremely wide range of shows from around the world.

Wimmer is optimistic about WSND-FM's future with the American Public Radio network, but said "no one really knows" what will happen until the program actually begins.

The program will start when a satellite dish is installed. Wimmer anticipates this will be "anytime soon."

Chair in int'l business established

Special to The Observer

The Bay W. and Kenneth G. Herrick Chair in International Business has been established at Notre Dame by a Michigan family with business interests in the air conditioning industry and philanthropic interests in education, hospitals and health and welfare agencies.

The Herrick Chair in International Business is underwritten by the Herrick Foundation of Detroit in honor of its founder, the late Bay Herrick and his son, Kenneth Herrick. Ray Herrick founded the Tecumseh Products Co., Tecumseh, Michigan, in 1934 and established the Herrick Foundation in 1949. Kenneth Herrick currently serves as chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Tecumseh Products Co., a manufacturer of small engines and components for the air conditioning industry. His son, Todd Herrick, is a 1967 graduate of Notre Dame and serves as President of Tecumseh Products Co.

"We are indebted to the Herrick family for its generosity in furthering Notre Dame's commitment to the study of international business," said University President Father Theodore Hesburgh. "Although the roots of our College Business Administration were in foreign and domestic commerce, it is now more important than ever that we strengthen this academic endeavor in the realization that we live and work in a world economy."

It is the intent of a search committee to fill the chair by the fall of 1985.

Judicial Council tries to organize

By BOB MUSSELMAN
News Staff

The Judicial Council spent its weekly meeting last night in the Newman Science Hall doing the same thing it did at the council meeting last Monday by establishing committees that will function for the rest of the year.

At the council's last meeting, coordinator Bill Bergamo asked members to sign up for four committees established at that meeting last year, but few bothered. Poor attendance was cited by Bergamo as the main reason for the low response.

Eighteen members attended yesterday's meeting, while only ten were present at last week's meeting. "If we don't get them organized and going soon, we might as well bag the whole year," said Bergamo. He said the council needs to "prove to the campus that we are working body and get something done." Bergamo reminded the council be would be "leaving in December, hopefully," because of graduation.

An assistant coordinator, who would succeed him, should be chosen so that he or she can "get used to the job before I take off," he said.

Specifically, the coordinator must represent a student who appears before Associate Vice President for Residence Life John Goldrick when requested to do so. For that reason, the coordinator must "know the rules around here."

In addition, the coordinator occupies a seat on the Student Senate and the Campus Life Council, and is responsible for holding weekly meetings and overseeing council projects.

ND to install 8 pros in academic chairs

Special to The Observer

In 1510, at England's Cambridge University, the first endowed professorship was established: Notre Dame did not have one until more than 450 years later.

On Nov. 8, however, Notre Dame will install eight professors in endowed academic chairs, bringing to 27 the total number so honored to 32, including five persons holding chairs as visiting professors. Another 13 chairs are fully funded with occupants being sought.

The eight chairs and their occupants to be honored by a banquet, preceded by a celebration of Mass, are as follows:

- The John H. Cavanaugh Professor of Humanities, Frederick Cronon of the Department of Philosophy.
- The Frank M. Feinmann Professor of Physics, John Dow.
- The John Cardinal O'Hara Professor of Philosophy, Brian Mc Manus.
- The Frank O'Malley University Professor, John Gilligan.
- The Julius A. Nieuwland Professor of Science, J. Kerry Thomas, department of chemistry.
- The Gilbert F. Schaefer Visiting Professor of Arts and Letters, Monique Begin of the department of economics.
- The Andrew V. Tackes Professor of History, Walter Nagert.
- The William P. and Hazel B. Herrick Professor of Fine Arts, Mark Baker.

The price tag for endowed professorships has doubled from $500,000 to $1 million over the years, but the attraction for donors has remained strong. Since 1967 when Notre Dame announced its first endowed professorship, the University has made endowed chairs a cornerstone of faculty development, and its greatest success came during "The Campaign for Notre Dame" between 1975 and 1981 when 14 endowed professorships were filled and another 15 fully funded.

Endowed chairs both enhance the academic enterprise and relieve a financial burden. They allow departments either to recruit outside scholars preemptive in their field or to recognize the highest level of scholarship and teaching among their own faculty. Of Notre Dame's 27 chairs with permanent appointments, 17 candidates came from without the University and 10 were previously endowed (not endowed). But because endowed professorships are supported not from operating monies but from invested funds, they remove some of the most expensive senior faculty positions from dependence on income such as tuition and tie them to appreciating funds.

The independent student newspaper serving Notre Dame and Saint Mary's is accepting applications for the following positions:

NEW DELHI, India - Soldiers were ordered to shoot rioters on sight in six major Indian cities yesterday to stop lynchings, beatings and arson that have killed at least 157 people in northern India since the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

Hindus were reported to have hanged Sikhs, beaten them to death, and burned their shops, cars and homes in revenge for the prime minister's death Wednesday. At the hands of two of her Sikh bodyguards.

Sikh numbers 13 million in the predominantly Hindu nation of 730 million people; whom the 66-year-old prime minister ruled for 15 of the last 18 years.

For the first time since India's independence from Britain in 1947 the army was called into the capital to help police maintain law and order. When roaming Hindu gangs defied a round-the-clock curfew, authorities ordered the troops to shoot rioters on sight.

Black smoke from burning buildings, shops and cars billowed over the city of 6 million. Rajiv Gandhi, 40, who was selected by leaders of the ruling Congress Party to succeed his mother, met with opposition leaders last night and issued an appeal for peace. "This madness must stop."

More than half a million people stood in a two-mile-long line to view the flag-draped body of the slain prime minister. Police used tear gas on crowds from 14 to 22 times.

Rajiv Gandhi, who was sworn in as the new head of the Congress Party to succeed his mother, met with charges that the United States was involved in the assassination of his predecessor since June. Soviet press suggests U.S. involvement in Gandhi's death

Associated Press

MOSCOW - The Soviet press yesterday linked the United States to the assassination of Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, saying the slaying was inspired by those who "preach gangsterism in relations with the U.S.".

Official comment on the slaying Wednesday in New Delhi stopped short of directly stating that the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency had engineered the killing.

But stories on the state-controlled radio, in newspapers and on the official news agency Tass reported Mrs. Gandhi's assassination in connection with charges that the United States conducts a policy of "state terrorism."

The reports blamed the killing on "India's opponents abroad," and accused the CIA of supporting Sikh separatists in an alleged effort to overthrow the New Delhi government.

"We strongly resent the Soviet allegations that the United States, and specifically the CIA, were involved in, or inspired, this act of political terrorism," said spokesman Alan Romberg.

"We reject in the strongest possible terms the outrageous Soviet allegations. They are absurd and irresponsible," he said.

The most strongly worded suggestions linking the CIA to the slaying came from the state-run Radio Moscow in English-language broadcasts.

The "gangsterism" phrasing is frequently used in references to the United States.

FBI cracks Honduran assassination plot

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The FBI arrested eight Honduran citizens yesterday in what it called an alleged plot by exile businessmen to assassinate Honduran President Roberto Suazo Cordova and take over that Central American government.

FBI director William Webster said the bureau learned of the alleged plot last July from a U.S. citizen and inserted an undercover FBI agent into the scheme as one of the triggers.

Webster said the FBI had seized 180 pounds of cocaine Sunday at a remote airstrip in south Florida. The drugs, which would have been worth $10 million wholesale, were to be used to finance the overthrow, Webster said.

Thousands of Poles mourn slain pro-Solidarity priest

Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland. - Thousands of Poles mourned a slain pro-Solidarity priest at his Warsaw church yesterday, and a group of Solidarity activists from Gdańsk called a one-hour strike on Saturday to protest his kidnap and murder.

After first announcing that the priest, Jerry Popieluszko, would be buried on Saturday in a Warsaw cemetery, church officials said he would be laid to rest instead at St. Stanislaw Koska Church, where he had served.

Popieluszko's coffin was to be brought to the church to rest on the altar until the funeral, church officials said.

The body of Popieluszko, 37, was pulled from a reservoir in northern Poland Tuesday, 11 days after he was abducted Oct. 19. Three secret police officers have been charged with the abduction and may face murder charges.

The strike call by the Gdańsk group was addressed to the workers of the northern port city, but apparently was aimed at workers nationwide.

The statement was signed by a former leading figure in the now-outlawed union, Andrzej Gwiazda. It marked a split between Gwiazda and Solidarity founder Lech Wałęsa, who has urged calm and moderation in the wake of Popieluszko's death.

The strike call was the first by a leading union activist since Nov. 10, 1982, when the Solidarity underground leadership unsuccessfully appealed for a nationwide general strike to protect the outlawing of the free trade union.

The St. Stanislaw Koska Church fence was ringed by thousands of burning candles and covered with flowers yesterday. All saints' Day, a holiday in this predominantly Roman Catholic country.

The prime minister, Cardinal Józef Glemp, visited Popieluszko's grave and surrounded by church officials following a midday Mass at which he called Popieluszko an apostle of peace.

"We should remember that the candidate who believed in a clean heart is one who makes peace and who suffers for justice so well to the late Father Jerry Popieluszko, who is dear to our hearts," the prime said.

Retailers post slight sales gains; new construction spending rises

Associated Press

Major U.S. retailers posted sluggish October sales gains yesterday as unseasonably warm weather discouraged winter clothing purchases and demand for big-ticket goods weakened.

But they stepped up their spending last month, however. New construction spending, propelled by gains in office buildings, apartments and shopping centers, rose 1.1 percent for the best increase in four months, the Commerce Department said.

And initial jobless claims totalled 426,000 in the week ending Oct. 20, up 54,000 from the previous week.

McCARTHY

"In former years, people would listen to entire speeches of candidates on radio. Now we only hear what Tom Brokaw says on the nightly news.

"In this sense, the candidate has become the observer," she said.

McCarty said it is difficult for a candidate to control his own image because of the overabundance of public relations and advertising firms involved in political campaigns.

The idea of what sells often differs from what the candidate sees as his strengths, she said.

Addressing the recent name calling in such campaigns as the Illinois Senate race between Paul Simon and Charles Percy, McCarthy said, "Unfortunately, destructive ads pay off because the electorate responds."

In searching for a solution to the image making of a candidate, she said that it is hard to control the media because it sees the candidate as a commodity.

"Journalists could learn to be more responsible. Young journalists tend to expose anything about candidates with the assumption that they are better informing their readers," she said.

McCarthy said that voluntarism used to be an important force in the political world. Now, computers provide lists for mass direct mailings which fuel large scale campaigns, she said, making it increasingly difficult for new candidates to defeat an incumbent.

* The increase was the strongest since a 2.5 percent gain in May; spending had dropped in June and July before edging up 0.3 percent again in August.

Rising interest rates were blamed for the mid-year building slowdown, but those rates have been declining recently. In another report yesterday, the government said the rate on conventional fixed mortgages fell to 14.72 percent in October from 14.9 percent in September. They had hit a peak of 15.23 percent in July.

The construction report said spending on residential buildings fell 0.9 percent in September for its fourth straight monthly decline. But non-residential construction rose 5.5 percent, and spending on shopping centers and other commercial buildings jumped 9.4 percent.

Robert Ortmier, chief economist at the Commerce Department, said declines in mortgage rates should help to reverse the slide in single-family construction.

The Labor Department's weekly jobless claims report also showed that in the week ending Oct. 13, an estimated 2,669,000 people were receiving regular state-paid benefits, usually lasting 26 weeks, an increase of 165,000 over the preceding week. It was the highest level of regular claims paid in a single week since April 2.

Letters to a lonely God

The largest of all brotherhoods is the community of suffering. The body counts are endless. The casualty list includes the war dead, the hunger victims, the genocides and the abortions. We keep seeing pictures that remind us of the agony. You could fill a gallery to the ceiling with the faces of children born in misery. Suffering shouldn't be a spiritual problem for the atheist convinced that life is absurd, brutal and nasty in a world that's blood- red jungle.

Confusion comes when you realize that a loving God allows evil to touch you. Communism belittles religion for promising pie in the sky but God offers the whole world in His Hands.

A few years earlier, another student entered a night school for his years of pre-med and medical studies. He kept thinking of the children he might stop from dying if the were earning money to send them now. For the sake of a more effective apostolate, he decided to let God take care of them. Next year, he'll be a licensed doctor, working in Appalachia. By becoming a professional, he has multiplied the opportunities open to him as a servant of the poor.

I hope I will never counsel anyone to be temperate in the zeal that makes them outstrip agitated the helpless, or encourage them to think only of themselves. I get sick to my stomach remembering cancer patients judged incurable in countries that spend billions on missiles, and takes up nickel and dime collections in the movie houses for medical research. It is cruel to the generations which God has mandated.

Eternity isn't soon enough to wipe away tears that Christ will wipe away tears for a while. Stop trying to lift the crosses down from the cross. This is Christ's passion too. Get your own house in order before you tell others to destroy. Remember that God has the whole world in His Hands.

Michiana Regional Airport flying high

Cat Francis
features columnist

Every year, hundreds of Notre Dame students pass through one of South Bend's largest and fastest growing establishments.

Is it a mall? A bank? A car factory? A McDonald's?

No, no, no and no. It is the Michiana Regional Airport. In the past few years the airport has experienced enormous growth. This increase in size and activity has taken the forms of terminal and runway construction, commercial car service, and company plane use, and the South Shore Railway. In the future, it may even be declared a Foreign Trade Zone.

In 1978, the airport again saw a sorely needed expansion and modernization drive. A total of 16.5 million dollars was allotted to a number of varied projects. The airport is now "multi-modal," that is to say, serving more than just planes. At the airport, one can, besides leaving on a jet plane, take a bus, hire a limo, hail a taxi or hitch a ride with a friend.

The airport is also hoping to add to this impressive repertoire in the form of extending the tracks of the South Shore Railway to the airport, for the convenience of those who take the train either to Chicago or one of the stops in between South Bend and Chicago. To accomplish this, they have applied for a Federal grant which would amount to almost $5 million.

The airport has extended its north/south runway to 4,250 feet and is now hoping to relocate a 100-foot electric line to the north. This move would allow the runway to be extended an additional 1,950 feet, making it 6,200 feet long.

The extension would make the north/south runway to join the east/west runway in being suitable for larger planes. At the present moment, there are occasionally times when the larger planes can not land or are delayed in landing due to a strong wind from either the north or south. Pilots prefer to land into the wind, since a wind from any other direction must be compensated for when landing the plane.

The airport has applied for an estimated $2 million in Federal funds to allow them to carry out several other projects. These projects include a relocation of the air cargo service and fixed base operations at the airport, since it is limited by Federal Aviation Authority rules, which prohibit using federal funds on any portion of the airport not used by the general public. Finally, the funds were raised by industrial revenue bonds and economic development funds.

Growth of the airport is an encouragement to similar growth in the South Bend area. It provides a number of jobs and valuable services.

Previously, the street had bisected the airport land, stifling any growth. The payment for the relocation of air cargo service and fixed base operations was tricky for the airport, since it is limited by Federal Aviation Authority rules, which prohibit using federal funds on any portion of the airport not used by the general public. Finally, the funds were raised by industrial revenue bonds and economic development funds.

Growth of the airport is an encouragement to similar growth in the South Bend area. It provides a number of jobs and valuable services. Additionally, the presence of a large and quality airport in the area encourages businesses to select South Bend as a site for establishing new operations or to expand existing operations and concerns.

Much of the airport's funds have gone into making the airport convenient and attractive for travelers. The airport hopes to have away some of the travelers from the Chicago area. It offers service to both Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan.

Planes leave from the airport to most major cities in the Midwest and East. There are a total of 41 flights leaving daily, with a capacity of 2,000 passengers.

The total of passenger loadings has fallen from its peak in 1978, when the airport estimates it had a total of 51,500. The lowest point for the airport came in 1982, because of the recession, when it fell to 262,000. However, the numbers are on the upsurge, and the airport is well on its way to fulfillment of the $50,000 it predicted for itself this year.
Rebounding Irish square off against Middies

ND needs win to go above .500 mark, but first must stop revamped Navy offense

By LARRY BURKE
Sports Writer

With a 1-3 record at Notre Dame Stadium this season, the Irish are hoping to register a victory Saturday against the Midshipmen of Navy in Notre Dame's home away from home, Giants Stadium.

Navy has compiled a 3-5-1 ledger in 1984 under third-year head coach Gary Tranquill and, like the 4-4 Irish, the Midshipmen will be trying to get back over the .500 mark when the two teams take to the Meadowlands field.

Coming off an impressive win over the LSU Tigers, the Irish will have to be careful to avoid a letdown this week, as they stand to gain little from a victory, but figure to lose plenty from a defeat.

Navy's offensive vs. Notre Dame's defense:
Navy's offensive game plan looked pretty simple heading into this season. With Heisman Trophy candidate Napoleon McCallum at tackle, the Midshipmen figured to have an explosive running attack, spaced up with a few timely passes. But when McCallum broke an ankle in Navy's second game, things changed dramatically. Now the Midshipmen have had to rely more on quarterback Bill Byrne at the helm. Don't look for Byrne in the Navy press guide, however; because there's no profile of him there. The 6-3, 200-pound Pacifica, Calif., native was ranked sixth on the depth chart earlier this fall, but came strong and won the starting job. He has connected on 98 of 194 passes (51 percent) this season for 1,340 yards and a school-record 11 touchdowns.
Byrne, whose brother Tom is a freshman quarterback for Notre Dame, figured to have an explosive running attack, spaced up with a few timely passes and with increasingly effective passing.

Navy is currently on a school record-setting pace, averaging 222 yards passing per game with sophomore quarterback Bill Byrne at the helm. Navy has been quite successful playing at the New Jersey complex, with a better won-loss percentage for "home" games for many of the Irish subway alumni and Eastern fans. Of the over 70,000 spectators expected to come close to filling Giants Stadium on Saturday, many promise to be supporting the Irish.

Senior shows that big not always best

The cliché that "good things come in small packages" has never been truer than it is for Joe Howard. But, in certain situations, his size is very important. And anyone who knows about Notre Dame football would have to agree about the value of Notre Dame's own "Small Wonder," Joe Howard.

"In my first starting role against Navy in the seventh game of 1981, Howard has been an integral part of the Irish defense. He has been a constant force, even in the football cleats and donned basketball shoes to put his talents to work for the Irish basketball team.

"But, although he has accomplished many things during his football career, results are not nearly as important to him as simply having the chance to play. "Success is not winning or losing," states the Clinton, Md., native. "For and determination a person has, not the size."

Howard made everyone aware of his newly found scholarship at Notre Dame. "I was the last freshman with a 171-pound senior. "Most recruits receive their offer when they visit the campus, but I played the way I knew I could. I was the smallest guy a bit

"Coming out of high school I was recruited for more basketball than football," says the point guard who averaged 5.5 points per game. "I had the making a decision between the two and it was kind of hard for me. But in the long run, I felt there were more smaller guys getting into football than into basketball.

"I don't think a lot of people think that football and basketball are not for small guys, but I don't believe that. I can do anything you want to, so I try to prove it."

...Middies

Only once this season have the Midshipmen surrendered less than two touchdowns in a game, and the Irish offense should be able to put plenty of points on up board, as long as it avoids turnovers. The kicking games and specialty teams:

Saturday's game will feature two of the nation's outstanding placekickers in Navy's Todd Solomon and Notre Dame's John Carney. Solomon has established the Midshipmen's longest field goal, 52 yards, and has returned one kickoff for 17 yards and seven punts for a 9.5-yard average. His 24-yard punt return against South Carolina. Carney has been successful on 12 of 15 field goal attempts, including a long of 52 yards against Princeton which set a Navy record. He has also hit 13 of 14 extra points. Carney has been just as consistent, converting 11 of 12 field goal attempts, the longest being a 46-yarder against South Carolina. The obvious conclusion is that both of these teams are tough to keep off the scoreboard so that is not surprising that neither team has been shut out this season.

The Kicking Game

Carney and Viracola have been pleasant surprises as they handle chores steadily

By JOE BRUNETTI
Sports Writer

No one will contest the fact that the 1984 season has been a bumpy road for the Notre Dame football team, but a kicking game that entered the season as a big question mark has seen only smooth sailing since the season began.

The kicking duties, for sophomore kicker John Carney and senior punter Mike Viracola were responsible, was an area that was suspect coming into this season, not because the players lacked the ability to do the job, but because Carney and Viracola had been virtually untested in a game situation. Carney handled the kickoff duties as a freshman last year, but he never attempted a field goal or a PAT during the 1983 campaign. Viracola was also essentially untested in the punting department, attempting just four punts last season.

However, any doubts have now been squelched, and head coach Gerry Faust has called the kicking game a "pleasant surprise."

Carney came to Notre Dame as an "invite-on" who had been recruited for his punting, not his placekicking, because the coaching staff had told him that the kicking duties were wrapped up by Mike Johnston. During the preseason practices, though, the business major earned the kickoff duties because of his ability to hit the ball deep into the end zone. What followed was an outstanding performance as he hit 32 of his 33 kicks into the end zone, allowing only 25 of his kicks to be returned. His exceptional performance earned him a monogram, but not a scholarship.

"Some people expected that I would get a scholarship after last year, but after talking to the coaches I understand the situation," comments the Cardinal Newman High (West Palm Beach, Fla.) graduate. "They said I had to do things are going to work hard so that I could get to a position where I was consistent enough to compete with him. He's a helluva kicker. He's the reason I'm doing so well. It's something that is key to the team," says Viracola. "If I start worrying about my average, then I get away from my original responsibility to the team, and that's when you mess up your concentration and then you get the 10- and 15-yarders.

Carney's kicking partner, Viracola, is in his fifth year at Notre Dame and his first year in the MBA school. He entered Notre Dame both as a punter and a wide receiver, but a torn hamstring muscle in the early stages of his freshman season kept him out of action for both his first and second seasons under the Dome.

"The injury affected me both mentally and physically, and as a sophomore it still bothered me mentally," explains Viracola. "I had two doctors tell me that I would never kick again. That combined with the fact that I was a walk-on made it difficult to come back. So I went to a kicking specialist and he helped me get myself back up.

Prior to Viracola's junior year he was told he wasn't going to make the travelling squad, but he did, in fact, suit up for every game and earned the backup for the season. Heading into his senior season, the coaching staff told him that he would eventually take over Kiel's punting duties because they wanted Kiel to concentrate on only playing quarterback. But, after Steve Beuerlein boot ed Kiel for the quarterfinals at the Miami game, the coaches didn't want their captain sitting on the bench.

Once again, Viracola was reinstalled to the backup role.

After not receiving a scholarship in either his junior or senior year, Viracola was disappointed. "I thought that if I had been a scholarship only last year, if my junior year, because I was the back-up, I travelled when I was told I wouldn't travel, and I was there in case anything happened to Kiel."

After the end of the senior season last year, the coaching staff tried to entice Viracola to return as an extra year and use his last year of eligibility by giving him a scholarship. He accepted. "I was planning on going to MBA or Law School anyway," he explains. "When the scholarship was offered to me I decided to go ahead and take it because I could go to MBA school and it would be paid for.

The scholarship was a major motivating factor in Viracola's decision to complete his last year of eligibility, but the Texas resident was also driven by his desire to prove himself. "A real motivating factor for me to come back was that I had a lot to prove not only to myself, but also to a lot of people," comments Viracola. "I hadn't had the chance to come back I would have known if I could do it. I would have felt inside that I could have, but I never would have been able to say that I did.

' I would have rather taken the chance of having a lousy year and saying that I wasn't good enough to cut out to do the job than not to do it at all. I have proven what I set out to prove to myself and to others."

Coming into this year Viracola had only punted four times for a 34-yard average, and had not really proven himself to the coaching staff and earned his confidence, so he worked extensively on his consistency. "The coaches had never seen me under fire so I had a lot to prove to them so that they would relax. You can't have the coaches wondering what kind of kick you are going to have every time," he says. "If I kick the ball 40 or 45 yards then I have done my job. That's something that I have accomplished except for the setback in the Miami game."

Game. The deal was that I did well my freshman year I would be eligible for a scholarship, but that I had to win the kicking job to get it.

After winning the starting job this year, Carney was granted his scholarship one week prior to the Purdue game. No one can complain that he isn't worth it after only missing one field goal.

The sophomore has hit 11 of 12 field goals with his only miss coming against South Carolina from 30 yards. He is also an impressive 6-0 from the 40- to 49-yard range.

"I'm pretty satisfied with my performance," says the southern Ohio resident. "Everybody always seems to say we've had very consistent holds and sniffs by Mike Viracola and Kevin Kelly and the blocking has been great. Everything has just been going smoothly, and I think everyone involved in the kicking game is pretty excited about how things are going."

Each week, the Observer sports staff, a random student picked at the discretion of the sports editor and some well-known figure in the Notre Dame community predict the outcome of the week’s major college football games. Records are compiled as to how each person does against the spread. In other words, it isn’t enough to pick the winner of a given game. The person must pick the winner and give the underdog points. "Wilson is a professional," Rozelle said. "We feel he has a problem. Wilson will be ineligible to play until he reports to the team's rehab, "Webb said. "The Bengals have not suspended Wilson, who recently participated in an alcohol-drug rehabilitation program.

Suglich, injured early, adjusts well to collegiate volleyball

Suglich, the junior goal-tending sensation for Notre Dame's field hockey team, has been able to practice. By doing so, she has continued fine play as it travels to the Pittsburgh Volleyball Tournament this weekend to go head-to-head with some of the best teams in the country. South Carolina and Penn State join the Irish and Pitt at the two-day event.

A top volleyball talent from Lourdes High School in Chicago, Suglich spent four years in a varsity starter in her high school program. And her four years there were dandy indeed. Her freshman season brought her Rookie of the Year recognition. And she added to this by earning MVP honors in her final three seasons.

But then it was good-bye high school, hello college. Now out under the Dome, Suglich has adjusted. "She is really doing well now," said Lambert. "She's blessed with tremendous athletic ability. She has a lot of desire and she's beginning to be a good setter. In fact, I think she can be a great one."

Suglich is the key. And Coach Art Lambert already has one class of recruits tucked away under his belt, having stepping stones for the seasons to come. Their scholarship player is freshman setter Jill Suglich, from the south side of Chicago.

With the end of the volleyball season near, Suglich has worked her way into a starting role at the setter position with junior Mary McLaughlin. "It's great to be playing," she said. "I was looking to play as a freshman. Coach Lambert said that the team was in a building year to playing time was a good possibility."

But Suglich has struggled along the way. "She had a slow start, as you expect any freshman to have," said Lambert. The college game proved to be a learning experience, a big switch from high school. "On the college level it's more of a mental game," said Suglich. "There was more to learn than I thought. More strategy. And it's more competitive." As if learning a new system was not enough, mishap struck Suglich in early August when she suffered Achilles tendinitis, a nagging injury that bothered her for a month. The injury restricted her playing time, but Suglich bounced back, and since that time the nifty "5'8" playmaker has done well.

The Notre Dame volleyball team will be looking forward to her continued fine play as it travels to the Pittsburgh Volleyball Tournament this weekend, to go head-to-head with some of the best teams in the country. South Carolina and Penn State join the Irish and Pitt at the two-day event.

Stingy Gallagher stops offenses cold at goal

Patti Gallagher, the junior goal-tending sensation for Notre Dame's field hockey team, has closed the door on opposing offenses during the last 10 games, with the Irish posting a record of 9-1 from those contests.

On the fourth day of practice, Gallagher had the misfortune of pulling a quadricep muscle in her leg, which sidelined her for the duration of the pre-season. She was fortunate, however, to be healthy by the time of the first game, but obviously not as sharp as she could have been had she been able to practice.

Gallagher's confidence increased, and she said, "The Western Illinois game was the turning point of my season. That was the first game I felt that I played to my full potential. It gave me a lot of confidence."

The victory against Southern Illinois put the Irish over .500 with a record of 4-5-1, and from that point on the Irish field hockey team has been rolling.

In the 10 games following Southern Illinois, Notre Dame has compiled a 9-1 record, winning the last five games.

Gallagher has allowed only three goals in these games for an incredible goals against average of 0.3 - more than four times less than her GAA in the first eight outings.

Gallagher said her coach and teammates have contributed to her success. "Jill Lindenfeld is an excellent coach," she said. "Not only can she teach the fundamentals to us, but she also has the ability to keep the team's intensity level and spirit at a peak."

"Our offense and defense has also been outstanding this year. They have been able to control play thereby limiting the opposition's shots on goal."

"That makes my job a lot easier," she said.

Gallagher is enthusiastic about the prospects for next season. "We should have an awesome season next year. We have nine starting seniors returning from this year's team."

Personally, Gallagher said her "main goal (next year) is to keep my GAA under 1.00 because if I can achieve this it will show that I have played good consistent hockey."

Gallagher is from Bishop Kentrick High School in Norristown, Penn. As a freshman at Notre Dame, she was captain of the undefeated junior varsity field hockey team.

Gallagher has started the last two seasons at goalie for the varsity squad, and this year she is co-captain.

With Gallagher starting in goal next season, the Irish are looking forward to another banner season, perhaps doing better than this year's 13-4-1 record.

Notre Dame's final games of the 1984 season will be played this weekend in the St. Louis Tournament. Also scheduled to compete are: Southwest Missouri State, Western Illinois, Louisville, Dayton, SUU Carbondale and St. Louis.

Zahm Hall earns spot with five other teams in Sunday's playoffs

By BRIAN McCARTHY

Sports Writer

Zahm Hall, who has not made the interball football playoffs since 1970, fulfilled coach John Looney's preseason predictions beating Holy Cross, 2-16, two weeks ago to ensure itself a spot in post-season play.

Seeded fourth, Zahm faces fifth-seeded Howard Sunday at 1 p.m. on the first seed and unbeaten Sorin in the first round. The two seeds do not have to play in the opening round.

The first day of the playoffs features what could be an emotional rematch between third-seeded Morrey and sixth-seeded Dillion at 2 p.m. Dillion handed Morrey its only loss of the year, a 16-0 defeat in the second week of the season. The survivor takes on second-seeded Central States the following Sunday.

Quarterback Mark Polakos scored one touchdown and passed to Phil Kelleher to lead Zahm two weeks ago against Holy Cross. Steve Dombrowski scored the third touchdown as Zahm, the only team whose playoff hopes were in doubt heading into the final week's games, finished the regular season with a 5-1 record. The team grabbed the Leahy division wildcard berth.

In other games during the week before break, Grace's Jim Book finished the regular season with a 3-2 record. The team, which compiled an impressive 23-1-1 mark while competing in the two divisions, earned the Rockne division wildcard berth for the playoffs.

Hockey team starts new season sporting renewed venerable status

By ED DOMANSKY

After a one-year absence, varsity hockey will again make its debut at Notre Dame.

"We're very excited about the start of the new season," said 17-year Head Coach Charles "Lefy" Smith. "Going back to varsity makes it even more special."

For 15 years hockey had operated as a varsity sport, but last year it was demoted to club status. A Division Independent, Penn State will provide the Irish with their first opposition of 1984-85 as the Nittany Lions invade the ACC today and tomorrow for 7:30 p.m. contests.

"We're pretty pumped up to play," said junior co-captain Bob Mikel. "It's been working hard to long in practice. Now we have to go against someone besides ourselves so that we can really see what we can do."

SMC volleyball team plays in NAIA tonight

By KELLY PORTOLESE

Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's volleyball team, coming off a close loss to Marian College last Monday, takes on the Lady Titans again tonight in the opening round of the NAIA tournament.

"We are looking forward to it. The girls really want to win that match," said second-year coach Brian Goralski.

The Belles played unimpressed volleyball Monday, losing a five-game, two-hour and 40-minute match 3-15, 15-10, 15-19, 18-16 and 18-16. Goralski said because of Fall break, it was 11 days since the team had played together, and he does not think it played up to full potential.

That's why Goralski stresses tonight's game, to be played at Frankie Hall in Franklin, Ind., just south of Indianapolis. The game is at 7:30.

In conference play Saint Mary's finishes with a 6-2 record and stands as the sixth rated team out of 20 in the NAIA. The Belles overall regular season record is now 16-0.

The eight participating teams are seeded in two brackets. The winner of the Saint Mary's-Marian battle will advance to the semi final round Saturday morning at 11 a.m. to take on the victor of the Goshen-Saint Francis match. The winner will meet the survivor of the second bracket in the championship match to be played later in the day.

In preparation, Goralski said the team has been practicing extra hard. "We're working a lot on blocking and setting."

Penn State, on the other hand, finished the 1984-85 season with a 23-15-1 record. The highlight of its season came in March when the Lions won the National Club Team Championship in Tucson, Ariz., by defeating the Arizona Wildcats, 7-5.

ND wins season's final soccer game

By PHIL WOLF

Assistant Sports Editor

Rich Herdegen, playing in his last collegiate soccer game, scored half of Notre Dame's goals as the Irish defeated Valparaiso in overtime, 6-4, yesterday.

Herdegen scored the first two goals and the final insurance goal in overtime for the Irish. The three-goal outing was Herdegen's third in his four years at Notre Dame and his body but trick of this season.

The Irish ended the season with a 12-2-2 record after yesterday's game. The win was Notre Dame's third consecutive victory over the Crusaders, whom the Irish have out scored, 92-16, in eight games.

It was the Crusaders who got on the scoreboard first yesterday, however. They began the game with a lot of enthusiasm and were able to maintain possession of the ball in Notre Dame's half of the field for the first few minutes of play.

Less than two minutes into the game, Valparaiso was ahead, 1-0. The goal came when Irish goalkeeper Dan Coughlin slipped while attempting to make the save. The shot was from only 10 yards in front of the goal, where the field was particularly muddy.

Most of the field, in fact, was extremely wet, which hindered play for the entire game. Several large puddles caused the ball to stop suddenly and unexpectedly many times, and the ball made it difficult for the players to move.

The Valparaiso goal brought the Irish to life, and they began to dominate several scoring opportunities, and keep the pressure on the Crusaders' goal.

Herdegen tied the game for the Irish with his first of three goals. The play actually began with a foul called against Notre Dame.

The Valpo goalkeeper was trying to gain possession of the ball in front of his goal when Tom Daley kicked it out of his grasp. The referee called a foul on Daley and awarded the Crusaders a free kick. The Irish keeper kicked the ball only about 25 yards, however, and it came right to the feet of Herdegen. The Irish tri- cap blazed a shot from 20 yards that whizzed past the surprised goalkeeper.

Less than two minutes later, Herdegen scored his second goal to give Notre Dame a 2-1 advantage.

The Irish then launched several shots at the Crusaders' goal, only to be turned away by excellent saves or see SOCCER, page 16

Stars shine for Reagan

by David White

Erica Kane, high-priced fashion model and tempestuous extraordinaire of television's All My Children, may have never heard of Walter Mondale and probably thinks that a Ferraro is some kind of expensive sports car. But Susan Lucci, the actress who plays Erica on the hit ABC daytime soap opera, is quite a bit more politically inclined in real life.

Lucci, in fact, is one of countless celebrities who have overstepped the traditional boundaries of their entertainment careers to take an active interest in this year's presidential campaign by publicly endorsing Ronald Reagan. Television personality John Davidson isn't the only one who's joined the '84 campaign by lending his name to the Reagan-Bush ticket.

"I feel like we have a winning team...we need to put him back in there for four more years," says Joe Frazier, former professional heavyweight champ, on the whereabouts of President Jimmy Carter.

Students' support; their message has been "Sorry, Fritz!"

Reagan's popularity among younger voters has become one of the most widely discussed stories of this campaign season. Is this support the beginning of a more conservative trend among college students? Whether Reagan can translate his personal popularity into long-term Republican gains is a question best left for the future, but one thing is certain: today's young people are looking back at the last four years and deciding they like the Reagan presidency a whole lot better than anything else they remember.

"Can you blame them?" asks Liz Pickens, coordinator of the Youth For Reagan effort. "A college student today has become politically socialized under two presidents -- Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter. It's not that difficult a choice to make."

When questioned closely on the subject, students point to the economic recovery that has taken place under a Reagan administration. Their older brothers and sisters graduated from college to find their only secure place in society down at the unemployment office, and today's students see 6.5 million new jobs as a much better incentive to head out into the real world.

Reagan finds support on campus

by Derek Hankerson
University of Maryland

Just when he thought it was safe to go back on the campuses,

Today's college students have taken a good look at Democratic presidential nominee Walter Mondale and, by overwhelming majority, their message has been "Sorry, Fritz!"

According to Time Magazine, voters between the ages of 18 and 24 prefer President Reagan by a whopping 63 percent to 18 percent margin over Mondale.

Reagan's popularity among younger voters has become one of the most widely discussed stories of this campaign season. Is this support the beginning of a more conservative trend among college students? Whether Reagan can translate his personal popularity into long-term Republican gains is a question best left for the future, but one thing is certain: today's young people are looking back at the last four years and deciding they like the Reagan presidency a whole lot better than anything else they remember.

Their older brothers and sisters graduated from college to find their only secure place in society down at the unemployment office, and today's students see 6.5 million new jobs as a much better incentive to head out into the real world.

With a healthier economy, young people have more spending money, money that's purchasing power has not been gutted by inflation. More parents can spend their children to college, as lowered interest rates have made loans easier to obtain.

Another reason that today's students seem to prefer the President is more abstract; they talk about patriotism and a renewed sense of pride in their country. "I spent over a year hearing about the hostages and Iran and that stuff," says one University of California student. "Now, I don't have to feel like America's being pushed around."

Today's college students are proud, independent, and motivated. They seem to desire the same qualities in their president.

My father, the prez

by Ronald Reagan, Jr.

I've never thought of my father as a politician, perhaps because he doesn't think of himself that way. That may seem a strange thing to say about a man who has been in and out of elected office for almost 19 years, but the label 'politician' just doesn't seem to fit. Whereas most people in government arrived fresh out of college or after very brief careers elsewhere, Ronald Reagan spent more than 35 years in radio, film and television. So he sees himself, still, as a kind of citizen politician, a classification he regards as infinitely preferable to professional bureaucrat.

PAID FOR BY REAGAN-BUSH '84 COMMITTEE
Q: How important is the youth vote to the President's re-election?

R: I think the most important factor that is out there today is among young voters. There's a tremendous number of young voters, first time voters, second time voters, who are identifying with this president, and they in turn are going to vote Republican for the first time.

Q: Will college students who are supporting the President vote for other Republicans?

R: If they vote for this president, they may very well vote for a Republican congressman. I think there is just a great opportunity with the baby boomers who are going to be the dominant political force for the rest of their lifetime, to vote independent or Republican and move away from the old line liberal policies of the Democratic party.

Q: Will this trend lead to the Republicans becoming the majority party?

R: I think the encouraging thing is that many of the young voters who vote Republican this time may not register as Republicans. They may register as Independents, but I think that any good Republican candidate will always have the opportunity to get them again.

Q: What traditionally has happened is younger voters have thought of themselves as Democrats and have voted for Democrats the first couple of times they have voted. Then they get a little older, start making some money, start having a family, start Philosophy changing a little, then they may in mid-40's change and vote for Republicans.

Q: But I think the fact that they are willing to vote for Republicans the first time out of the box and the second time is very encouraging, because I think there is a tendency there that they may vote for other Republicans, and stay Republican.

Q: It has been said that young people support Ronald Reagan on the basis of style, not substance. Is this true?

R: I think all the rhetoric about Ronald Reagan being an image candidate is just a bunch of bunk. Ronald Reagan has turned the direction of the country around, he has rescued the national agenda. The Democrats themselves are now talking about deficits and balanced budgets which before was hereby Mondale is now talking about peace through strength in his commercials. That was the Reagan slogan four years ago and the Republican slogan for many years that he (Mondale) belittled several months ago.

Q: Are young people turning conservative on other issues as well?

R: I think realistically the young people today are going to be a different kind of voter, in the sense that they may not agree on the social programs of the President. My estimation is that the young voters are going to become more and more conservative on fiscal policy and foreign policy, and probably a little more libertarian on the social issues.

Many of them have grown up in a more libertarian environment, where its kind of where you do your thing. I do my thing. So I think some on the other hand, have more conservative social issues they may not totally agree. But they are not saying that if you disagree with me on one issue, I can't vote for you. I think they are more agnostic and they are going to vote for the individual.

Q: Why did this trend surprise all the so-called experts?

R: That was the Reagan slogan slogans really haven't handled the emerging voter group out there that is very few political scientists, and it's very few political historians, that is very few political scientists, and it's very few political historians, that are going to vote for the individual.
Paul Laxalt, the first friend

by Joe Gonyea
University of Santa Clara

Laxalt is a gracious host. Any stray stereotypes of how politicians are supposed to behave are quickly dispelled upon entering the Nevada senator's inner office.

There is no arrogant air of importance surrounding the man, as you would expect from one of the most influential men in the nation. Nor does he attack his guests with the false sense of fellowship, the backslaps and the hearty handshakes that many old pols throw down at the first scent of publicity.

No, despite having spent a majority of the last twenty years firmly rooted in the political scene, Laxalt is a single word - hospitable. But that's Laxalt as is, a single word that has the capacity to erase the coldness from his face and sharpen the soft tongue. The word is "landslide," and as the chairman of the Reagan-Bush '84 campaign, it is a word Laxalt has become increasingly, and unhappily, familiar with.

'I've seen race after race where margins larger than this have disappeared," says Laxalt, referring to the fifteen to twenty-five point advantage Reagan showed at the time this interview took place. 'This election isn't going to be decided in September. There's a long time to go until election day, and over-confidence is the worst thing that can happen to any campaign.'

The conversation soon steered back to the ground, luckily, and the senator relaxed. People tend to like Ronald Reagan both as a person and what he stands for ... the support we're seeing, especially among young people is very encouraging," he said. "Our support among first- and second-time voters in this election is extremely important."

Laxalt agreed, however, that somehow inspiring youth to vote in greater numbers was a concern, as less than half of the eligible, college-age voters actually cast ballots in 1980. "I think they will vote in greater numbers this time around. I'd like to see young people dispel the conventional wisdom that they talk, but don't do anything ... that they don't vote.

Talk then turned to the future, and whether the conservative trend appearing on college campuses would benefit the Republican party in the long run. Although dismissing the idea of permanent realignment, Laxalt did stress the importance of the continuation of such a trend.

If these young people vote Republican their first time that they're able, a lot of them especially young Republican. That's critical to the future of the Republican party and the future of the conservative cause," he said. "It's an investment in the future, and it's reassuring to see so many young people coming back to conservative values the way they are.

For Ronald Reagan the Labor Day campaign kickoff brought sunshine, brass bands and a cheering crowd of 50,000 supporters to a rally in California's Silicon Valley.

Walter Mondale's and Geraldine Ferraro's campaign kickoff was greeted by clouds and sparsely crowded as the two candidates begin their tour of Northern California's Silicon Valley.

Mondale's and Ferraro's campaign kickoff was greeted by clouds and sparsely crowded as the two candidates begin their tour of Northern California's Silicon Valley.

Not true. Some interviewed by Kevin Paetree, an assistant with the Voter Information, coordinating volunteers and handling the phones in that office. She was encouraged to come to Washington because of her performance in Dallas.

For these people and others, the Reagan-Bush Reelection Committee is their first extensive political experience. They are young, but contrary to popular expectation, they are not envelope-stuffers and furniture movers. Their responsibilities are critical to the operation of the campaign.

Along with the excitement of the campaign is the commitment to the President. According to Jennings, 'It's easy to work here because the President is such a strong leader and his programs are important for the nation.'

Says Wiegand, "If someone had told me I'd be making a real contribution to reelecting Ronald Reagan, I wouldn't have believed it ... but here I am, doing all this.'

The President's economic recovery has created 6.5 million new jobs. More Americans are working today than ever before.

The Reagan Record

Inflation: The President's anti-inflationary policies have reduced the rate of inflation to less than four percent for two consecutive years - a truly spectacular achievement.

Job Creation: The President's economic recovery has created 6.5 million new jobs. More Americans are working today than ever before.

Productivity: Worker productivity under President Reagan rose over three percent in 1983 - the largest gain in eight years. As a result, real wages have risen more than three percent during the past two years.

Defense and Arms Control: The Reagan Administration is rebuilding our defenses to keep America safe, while at the same time pursuing the most ambitious arms reduction policy - the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks.

Women's Advancements: During his first two years in office, President Reagan appointed more than 1,400 women to important government positions, including Sandra Day O'Connor to the Supreme Court, Elizabeth Dole as Secretary of Transportation, Margaret Heckler as Secretary of Health and Human Services, and Jeane Kirkpatrick as US Ambassador to the United Nations. Under President Reagan, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission recovered more back pay awards for job discrimination against women than the previous Administration.

"Don't walk ahead of me, for I may not follow. Don't walk behind me, for I may not lead. Walk besides me and be my friend." In order to understand "Nancy Reagan, the Laughing Face" you must also realize her strength of character. She has involved herself extensively in foster care and anti-drug programs. She is far more than a smiling figurehead, a White House hostess. She has played a major role in the development of Ronald Reagan into the man he is today... the forty-third president of the United States.

The President sees Nancy clearly as his mainstay. There is nothing he does not tell her. "As far back as I can remember in the marriage, anything that happens, the first thought in my mind—the first image in my mind—is that I'm going to tell her about it."

As first lady, Nancy effectively balances the dual role as wife and White House hostess. "When we first moved into the White House, my instinct was to make it home for my husband. Until that was accomplished, I didn't feel ready for other things." "I had no idea... that being first lady was a full time job. The demands on my time are enormous, but so are the rewards. The opportunity to get things accomplished from this position is very gratifying."

It has been a time when she has come to better understand the problems of the country. Even prior to this time, when Reagan was Governor of California, Nancy wrote a syndicated column during the Vietnam war and donated her salary to the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Action in Southeast Asia.

Mrs. Reagan also became the moving force behind the highly acclaimed Foster Grandparent Program, because she realized that the "elderly have so much to give and so do these handicapped children. The Foster Grandparent Program just gives them a way to make the happy exchange." She also continues to work to bring the project to a national level and to promote private funding in local communities.

Another interest area of Mrs. Reagan's is the fight against drug abuse. Among other projects she has narrated a two-hour documentary on the subject for public television. She remarks, "I have seen the ravages of drug abuse and the sadness of children who think there's no point in living, who don't know there's a whole rich and wonderful world out there—kids who have in a way given up on the world before they even got to know it."

And she hopes she and Ron can have an influence on this next generation. "I think he's (Reagan) the best man for the job and he will have a chance to continue what he started. I don't think we've had a continuity really since Eisenhower. Just as people get use to somebody, they're gone. It makes it difficult."

She applies this theory to her own life, "you have to keep pushing it. You can't let it die. I feel, and I hope I'm right... you like to think you contributed something."
Experience serves Bush well in #2 spot

by John Breheny
Purdue University

After graduating from Yale in the spring of 1948, young George Bush took advantage of one of the many personal friendships and connections he had acquired during his four years there to land his first real job. Bush had decided to learn the oil business, so he set out for the description of West Texas, to a position with Dresser Industries sweeping floors. He started at the bottom. After pushing a broom all day, he would return each night to a mobile home on the edge of Odessa to his young wife and son. To many of his classmates, this life-style may have seemed less than idyllic. But, for Bush, it was perfect, for at the age of twenty-four, Bush had already packed more danger into his life than most men do in a lifetime.

Prior to his enrollment at Yale, Bush had enlisted in the armed service. He became the youngest commissioned pilot, at 18, in the Navy at that time. While on carrier duty in the South Pacific, he was shot down and two fellow crew members died; he was rescued by a U.S. submarine later awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Learning the oil business quickly, Bush co-founded a small royalty firm, Bush-Overby Development Company. Two years later, he co-founded Zapata Petroleum Corporation, and one year later, at age 30, he became president and co-founder of a third firm, Zapata Offshore Company. Much of the energy produced today is drilled by his legal Zapata pioneered in 1966, Bush won a seat in the House against a right-wing Democrat with 57.1 percent of the popular vote. Then, during the decade of the 70's Mr. Bush gained experience in various positions that would later prove invaluable. From 1971 to 1973, he served as U.S. Ambassador to the U.N., and as Chairman of the Republican National Committee from January 1973 to September 1974. In October 1974, he was appointed as Chief of the U.S. Liaison Office in the Peoples Republic of China. After that, he served a stint as the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Former critics give great credit to his performance as vice president. Longtime Reagan associate Lyn Nofziger, a conservative ideologue who initially opposed Bush's selection as the 1980 running mate says "George has done a heck of a lot to find any instances in three and one-half years of backhandedness, of that sort of thing. He has played the role of vice president as well as anybody I've ever seen."

In March 1981, for example, the attempted assassination of Reagan thrust Bush forward. His calmly reassuring performance during that period may have done more than anything else to cement his reputation. Last year, he won rave reviews for a European trip designed to preserve allied support for U.S. nuclear arms initiatives.

Due to his strong performance as vice president, Bush is considered an early front-runner in the race for the nomination of the Republican party in 1988. But for now, Bush has chosen to focus his attention on the job at hand - the reelection of Ronald Reagan.

Vice-President George Bush

Fritz's stumble for the roses

by Daniel Schnur
Carleton College

During the final race of his high school track career, almost forty years ago, Walter Mondale stopped running. With twenty yards remaining in the contest, and no real chances of winning, the high school senior pulled up short and walked off the track, saying there was "no point in continuing."

There is little chance that now, embroiled in a race with President Reagan, U.S. oil production is up, while the price of imported oil and the proportions of imports to total consumption is down.

Energy Independence:
The vulnerability of the U.S. economy to the whims of OPEC is a thing of the past. Under President Reagan, U.S. oil production is up, while the price of imported oil and the proportions of imports to total consumption is down.

Crime:
Under President Reagan, the crime rate dropped seven percent last year - the biggest drop in a generation. The rate of serious crime fell by four percent in 1982, and five percent during the first six months in 1983. Reagan has proposed legislation to compensate the victims of crime.

Ally Relations:
American leadership at the Williamsburg Summit in the spring of 1983 marked the beginning of world economic recovery. The seven nations presented agreed to a common program to combat inflation, resist protectionism, and aid developing nations.

Waste in Government:
Through the President's Council on Integrity and Efficiency, the Administration saved the taxpayer $31 billion that would have been lost to fraud or waste.

U.S. Competitiveness:
The President, through deregulation and tax cuts, has helped to make American companies more competitive abroad. He is continuing to work for the eradication of trade barriers between nations.

for gaining office through party connections can be upset by Gary Hart early in the Democratic primary race, Mondale was forced on the offensive, and almost completely destroyed Hart's candidacy. But he then reverted to form, and Hart seized the opportunity to rise from the ashes and contest the nomination through the final round of primaries.

After securing the nomination, it took a round of severe tongue lashings from the party elite to shake Mondale from his doldrums and drag him into battle with his opponent, President Reagan. Even while running mate Geraldine Ferraro was fighting for her political life during the midst of her financial disclosure troubles, Mondale was blissfully fishing deep in the wilds of Minnesota, happily avoiding the controversy. Only when faced with imminent landslide possibilities did the reluctant candidate finally force himself into the fray.

So, for now at least, Mondale the Meek has become Fighting' Fritz. With his jacket slung over his shoulder, his tie wrenched askew, and as his allies had begged him, his hair finally let down, Mondale is attempting to wage a volatile, spirited campaign in a last-ditch effort to avoid the electoral embarrassment suffered by his former employer four years ago.

His fellow Democrats, seeking to save their seats in the Senate and House, have been abandoning him in droves. There have even been whispers that his party is offering him as a sacrificial lamb in opposition to an overwhelmingly popular incumbent, while they prime for other, more inspiring candidates four years from now.

But even everyone, especially the candidate himself, knows that if he can not somehow mount a miracle comeback this fall, he will never get a second chance. The young Democrats, the Gary Hart devotees, see him as a dinosaur, the last of the New Deal Democrats still reciting from a litany of old-fashioned remedies for modern problems. They almost welcomed the nomination from the old-line party bosses this time around, and their lackluster support of their party's ticket this fall indicates their confidence in finally seizing control of the party come 1988.

Still, Walter Mondale continues. He derives the current economic recovery as 'mortgaging the future' and proposes additional taxations and government spending to deal with a federal deficit that he fears will ruin our economy. He sees America's renewed strength and confidence as a harbinger of possible war, and urges radical changes in our foreign policy. His attacks on the president's social agenda have left the electorate unimpressed.

But this time, he can not quit. Not even twenty yards from the finish.
Reagan fights for equality
All the President’s women

by Kim Paap
University of California

Ronald Reagan has selected more women for policy-making positions during his first two years in office than any of his predecessors. All told, women hold more than 1,600 positions in the White House and throughout the Executive Branch.

Since being elected, the Reagan administration has vigorously supported legal and economic equality for all women.

Reagan has stated that women should be protected against discrimination in all forms, but that these protections should take the form of specific legislation. He believes that legal equality should be guaranteed, but the power to establish that equality should be left with the elected representatives of the people.

He has also called for and produced stronger enforcement of protections already written into the statutes. At his direction, Justice Department workers actively enforce possible violations of equal rights legislation passed in the past.

In 1981, Reagan created the Task Force on Legal Equity for Women to work with the Justice Department in finding and cataloguing gender-biased laws and rules, so that they can be effectively changed or eliminated. As a result, more progress has been made to correct gender-biased federal statutes than in any previous administration.

The Task Force also recommended internal reviews within the administration to determine possible bias in its own regulations, a recommendation followed by all 42 federal departments.

Reagan has endorsed 122 changes in federal law recommended by his task force on legal equality to remove provisions that discriminate against women, and another project of specific legislation. He has sparked forty-two of the fifty states into examining their own laws to identify and eliminate gender-discriminatory language.

Individual Retirement Account (IRA) rules have been liberalized, in order to recognize the value of non-working spouses to provide greater retirement savings. The President has proposed raising the spousal IRA limit from $2,250 to $4,000. The "marriage tax penalty" also has been greatly reduced, bringing great savings to lower-income families with two breadwinners.

In addition, since President Reagan took office, women have been selected more than all Americans, from lower taxes, reduced inflation, lower interest rates, and, most importantly, more job opportunities. He has also reduced the "marriage tax penalty, virtually eliminated the estate tax, expanded savings opportunities for spouses, put teeth into child support enforcement legislation, and worked for pension equity for women.

"We must work together to ensure women can participate in our national life in the manner they choose and that they are treated equally," he has said. "We, in this administration, are committed to eliminating once and for all, all traces of unjust discrimination against women."

Equal rights: the real story

Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole

leader not because she was a woman, but because she was the best person for the job," Reagan said. There was no tokenism or cynical "symbolism." She became a leader of her party, and prime minister of Great Britain because she was judged by her peers to be a superior leader. And that is how the first republican woman president will do it.

The women who have advanced in the Republican party, coming up through the ranks, and doing it by merit. These women are changing America, and they are changing it for the better. The American people recognize this and will support such a woman when she runs for President of the United States.

Today’s students: Quieter, but still concerned

by Eric Nelson
Dartmouth College

In the spring of 1984, all eight candidates seeking the Democratic presidential nomination arrived in Hanover for the first debate of the campaign. Simultaneously, in an attempt to gain publicity for their causes, Pro Life and Pro Choice activists, along with a few other activist groups, took advantage of this attention by protesting before, during, and after the debate.

But these demonstrations were rather sparsely attended, and almost all were held on the college grounds, very few students participated. What has happened to the student activism of the Sixties and early Seventies?

Critics will quickly relate to you that today’s college students have lost interest in demonstrating and have become concerned about their potential salaries. They claim that those members of our society between the ages of 18-24 have become narrow-minded, self-centered, stereotyping students into the Me Generation. These critics form an image of today’s student as an uncaring and uninformed group that refuses to put forth the effort to acquaint itself with the issues. While these critics may feel they have all the answers, the one thing they don’t quite possess is a perfect concept of reality. To those well acquainted with the Eighties Generation, its members come across as interested, informed, and concerned about the issues and the political scene that surrounds them.

While they may not be as vocal as their counterparts from earlier generation, they often seem more interested in acquiring knowledge about our political process. As a result, they have learned how to get their issue into the limelight by using the system and by avoiding the use of violence and destruction.

For example, at the afore-mentioned debate, while the demonstration continued without many supporters, the auditorium was packed with students eager to hear the candidates. Other areas containing closed-circuit television screens were filled with those unable to gain entrance into the debate itself. Reagan-Bush campaign director Edward Rollins spoke here about the intricacies of campaigning. Gramming a hall that seated fifty, over two hundred students listened intently to the strategies of national campaigning. These students, representing a wide range of political viewpoints, came to learn and listen.

Student activism still has a strong presence on our campuses. It is only the methods we employ that have changed. No longer do we march and burn, but try to change the system by working with it. Perhaps a less colorful strategy, but ultimate ly, we think, more successful.

People, not symbols

You know, there’s just no way we can win.

In the 1960s, adults looked down at students for protesting. Then, in the ’70s, when young people were apolitical, they made fun of us for being apathetic.

So now we’re turning conservative, and they’re giving it to us with both barrels. We’re selfish. We’re shallow. We’re greedy. We’re short-sighted. We’re stupid.

Don’t we know that kids are supposed to be liberals?

No, we don’t know we’re supposed to be liberals.

We’re not supposed to be liberal any more than we’re supposed to be conservative or moderate or anything else.

Today’s college students are informed and open-minded and concerned. And we’re definitely not interested in fitting in with anybody’s twenty year-old stereotypes about what we’re supposed to be.

We’re not interested in conforming with party labels anymore. Maybe a few more young people are turning Republican, but most of us consider ourselves independents. With a capital ‘I’.

Yes, we’re supporting Ronald Reagan this time around. There are six million more jobs than there were when he took office, jobs that we’re going to need when we graduate. And we’re a lot more confident about the future, and a lot more sure of ourselves, than we were four years ago. Reagan deserves credit for that.

But that doesn’t mean that we’re necessarily Republicans forever. Our grandparents voted for FDR in 1932 and voted Democrat for the next forty-five years. Most of us are not making that kind of commitment and we will never do.

Maybe we’ll be voting Democrat ourselves in four years. Maybe not. But neither party’s going to be able to take us for granted, because we’ll vote for people and for ideas, not for donkeys and elephants.

The events in Dallas mark a beginning-of-the-end of sorts for my father. If he goes on to win the election (Will it snow in Alaska this winter?), he will be serving his third term in the White House.

In the mind of the average consumer, this means that he’s become a part of the White House establishment. In the mind of my father, this means that he’s become a part of the country’s future.

We want everyone to participate in this year’s presidential electoral process”, says Cameron.

GOP puts on voter blitz

Of particular concern to the leaders of this effort, though, is the historically poor turnout by young voters. Only forty percent of eligible voters between the ages of eighteen and twenty-four cast ballots in the 1980 election, and a repeat of that dismal performance could negate the immense popularity that the President now enjoys among young voters.

The future of America is riding on this election”, says Vice-President Bush. “And getting out the vote is what elections are all about.”
Campuses no longer just for liberals

by Jeff Jordan
University of Wisconsin

On college campuses, traditions have been lost to liberalism, conservative ideology would seem the farthest thing from any student’s mind. Burning with political outrage and protest during the Vietnam War years of the 1960s and early ‘70s, the nation’s college campuses have been a hotbed for liberal thought. Yet now, in the ‘80s, it appears the tide is turning.

Student leaders contend that students are fed up with liberal ideologies espoused by Democrats, and that conservatism and Republican support is growing on college campuses across the country.

Brian Rogga, chairman of the College Republicans, at the University of Wisconsin, points to a steady increase in his group’s membership. “We are the No. 1 political group on the University of Wisconsin campus in terms of membership,” he said.

This group of conservative thinkers formed in 1983 “because people were tired of getting one view on this campus,” Rogga said. “Between professors, the media, and the liberal ideology in Madison, we keep getting a constant leftist view.”

The conservative student newspaper on campus, the Badger Herald, boasts a circulation of more than 8,000 on the campus of 44,000 students. The Herald, a weekly publication, claims higher circulation than its daily counterpart, the Cardinal, which circulates 6,000 papers a day as of last spring.

Mark Hoske, editor emeritus of the Herald, says students are more conservative than they’d like to admit. “Individually, if you ask them, they may not admit to being conservative—but they are,” he said. “If you look at the student body as a whole, many students are voting Republican.”

On the surface, college students are still basically liberal, Hoske said. But compared to the late 1960’s and early ‘70s, conservatism is much more the trend and is growing at many of the so-called “liberal schools.”

Reagan’s big drawing card among students appears to be the president’s stand on economic and foreign issues. “After a lot of years of Democratic spending,” Hoske said, “students saw the trends and didn’t want their money going in that direction.” The students of the ‘80s are a group very concerned with their future and that of the country.

A new day is dawning on campuses across America and the trend is toward conservatism.

Confessions of a middle-aged Democrat

by Vic Gold

Hearing Mario Cuomo compared to the late Adlai Stevenson at this year’s Democratic convention reminded me of the first time I voted in a Presidential election.

The year was 1952. Stevenson was the Democratic candidate and, although he lost to Dwight Eisenhower, his style and eloquence attracted a good many voters to the Democratic party—voters like me.

A dozen years later, after I went to work in Barry Goldwater’s Presidential campaign, old friends would ask how I happened to change party allegiance. My answer was, “I didn’t change—the Democratic party did.”

It was an answer I used not only in 1964 but right up to this year’s Democratic convention. Then, listening to Mario Cuomo, Walter Mondale, Tip O’Neill and other speakers at San Francisco, I realized it wasn’t the right answer at all.

The reason I became a Republican 20 years ago—and why millions of young, middle-aged and older Americans are turning to the Reagan-Bush ticket this year—isn’t because the Democratic party has changed. It’s because the times have changed and the Democratic party hasn’t.

Everybody agreed that Mario Cuomo gave an eloquent disquisition of the Democratic party’s philosophy when he addressed the convention in San Francisco. There were media raves over Cuomo’s rhetoric and presentation. They style was 1964—but what about the substance?

It was as if Cuomo—like another New Yorker, Rip Van Winkle—had just awakened from a 52-year sleep and still thought the country was in the middle of the Great depression of the 1930s.

The America that the Democratic keynote saw that night in San Francisco wasn’t a country enjoying an economic boom, after years of economic misery under the Carter-Mondale administration. Instead, despite the Reagan Bush recovery of the past four years, the New York Governor rubbed his eyes and said, as he saw, things were terrible and sure to get worse.

And what was Rip Van Cuomo’s recipe to avert this impending disaster? The same as Walter Mondale’s, Geraldine Ferraro’s, Ted Kennedy’s, Tip O’Neill’s, and even the national Democratic leader of the past half century; government programs and more government programs. Bigger government spending. Higher taxes. Do we have a problem? Fine—just throw money at it and it’ll all be solved.

It all started with the New Deal in 1932. Then came the Fair Deal of 1948. Then the New Frontier of 1960, and the Great Society of 1964. Nobody argues that all these Democratic programs didn’t produce some good. But this is 1984, not 1932 or 1964, and the time has long since past when the American people looked to government for the answer to all problems.

Instead, what Americans are turning to is the Reagan-Bush program, which emphasizes free enterprise and individual initiative as the answer to our country’s economic challenges of the 1980s and beyond.

Once, perhaps, when Franklin Roosevelt came into office during the Great Depression, government could provide answers. But in 1980 the American people drew a line. What Ronald Reagan’s election that year said—and what the Rip Van Winkles of the Democratic party fail to understand—is that as far as the people are concerned, government today is the problem, not the answer.

Times have changed. The Democratic Party hasn’t. It’s as simple as that. Let Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro run against Herbert Hoover if they want, but what new voter in 1984 are more likely to recall isn’t the Great Depression but the Great Malaise of the Carter-Mondale years.

Vic Gold, nationally known author and lecturer.

Students speak out

Why do you support President Reagan?

I’m going to vote for Ronald Reagan in ‘84 because of the fine job he’s done for the past four years. His foreign policy stands are one which makes me feel proud to be an American. Reagan won’t stand for garbage that is handed to us by other countries. His economic policy has also proven itself. America is on its road to recovery one step at a time, and I believe Reagan should be at the helm.

Karla Meade, Bowling Green State University

The economic climate is of particular importance to me due to the fact that there is a direct relation between the prosperity of the United States and my parents’ ability to put me through college. It is also important to me that we are a strong nation, with a strong leader, one that does not get pushed around by other nations as they did in the past. It gives me confidence to know that we are a secure nation.

Alan J. Levey
University of Iowa

I support the re-election of President Ronald Reagan and the continued leadership of the Reagan administration. I feel that Reagan’s economic policies can successfully lead our nation towards economic stability with full support of American’s business and industry. I believe that Reagan’s firm stance on foreign policy issues must be continued for the safety of our nation.

Ronald Reagan will receive my vote in the November ‘84 election.

Laura Moreland, University of Santa Clara

Why vote for Reagan? It’s simple. This election is a clear choice between two different views of the role of government: the big spending, big government view of the Mondale as opposed to the free enterprise, limited government view of President Reagan.

President Reagan’s record speaks for itself. He has brought the country out of a period of economic disaster and national malaise which was brought on by the Carter-Mondale team and has restored the nation’s confidence in its leadership.
