Federal jury finds Time magazine did not libel Ariel Sharon in article

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A federal jury decided yesterday that "Time" magazine did not libel the former Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon when it linked him to a massacre of Palestinians, but is said some Time employees were careless in putting together the story.

The six-person jury decided that Time did not show "actual malice" in publishing a disputed paragraph, which is easier said to be both defamatory and false. For "actual malice," it would have had to prove Time published the paragraph knowing it was false or with "reckless disregard" of whether it was true or false.

Both sides claimed victory: "A lawsuit is very much like a war," said "Time" attorney Thomas Bart. "Who wins the battle is not particularly important. Who wins the war is terribly important. The war is over and we won." "We came in order to prove that Time magazine lied and we managed to prove that they lied," said Sharon of his $50 million lawsuit.

Sharon claimed a Feb. 21, 1983, Time story libeled him in reporting he "discussed" revenge for the assassination of Lebanon's president-elect, Bashir Gemayel — who headed the Phalangists — one day before the Christian militia massacred hundreds of Palestinians at two refugee camps in Israeli-occupied West Beirut.

After announcing the verdict, the jury foreman, Richard Paul, read a statement in which the jurors said several Time employees were careless in organizing the story.

"We're most pleased with the verdict," said Roy Do, a partner in the New York law firm that represented Sharon, "Time won this case."

In Brief

President Reagan and his 6-year old grandson “really had a ball” building a snowman on the White House lawn over the weekend, Michael Reagan says. Michael was a guest in the White House for Reagan’s inaugural celebrations along with his wife Colleen, daughter Aubrey, 20 months, and Cameron, Michael, who had complained of not being invited to the White House, was pictured at how well things went between his father and his son, Cameron, the New York Daily News reported yesterday. “Dad called me in my room and asked if he could take Cameron into the garden. They spent about half an hour building the snowman,” Michael said. “They really had a ball.”

Three professional basketball players announced plans yesterday in New York to raise money for starving Ethiopians. “We do feel we can make a difference,” Bernard King of the New York Knicks said at a news conference with fellow Knick Ernie Grunfeld, Quinn Buckner of the Boston Celtics, National Basketball Association Commissioner David Stern, and Mayor of New York City Ed Koch. They said players in the Feb. 10 NBA All-Star game in Indianapolis would contribute their pay, totaling about $50,000, and the league would match their contribution, raising the total to $100,000.

Weather

Another arctic front is expected to plunge into Indiana early today pushing the temperature to zero and 5 above, with snow possible. It will be sunny tomorrow with highs from the upper to mid 20's.

Bowling for Domers

Many years ago, there was an all-campus event which may have rivalled the current Bookstore Basketball Tournament in popularity, at least when taking the smaller size of the University into account.

In 1938, Scholastic, then a campus newsmagazine, sponsored a bowling tournament on campus, in which 752 people participated. It was held at Beacon Bowl, or some other location far from the campus, but rather near the original site of the Bookstore Tournament: in the basement of Walsh Hall.

The lanes are gone now, part of the laundry room, mail room, and other rooms. But the former location can still be seen on the eastern side of the basement, below the main stairwell, where the floor is raised several inches.

According to Professor Thomas Schleher of the American Studies department, who has written a walking history of Notre Dame, two lanes were built there in 1908. No one seems to have any idea when they were taken out of use and partitioned, but all agree they were gone by 1955.

The end of Walsh Rec Lanes was not the permanent end of bowling on the Notre Dame campus. According to the Schedule of Oct. 8, 1954, the Hammes Shopping Center, which would open in the fall of 1955, would include a 10-lane alley in the basement. The lanes included such modern features as automatic pin setters, which, according to Brother Frank Guech, cost $10,000 a year to rent.

In this period, bowling was very popular on campus, and then, the available student interest, and storage and shipping.

Saint Mary's is awarded large grant

BY MARY FRAN GISCH

News Staff

The National Endowment for the Humanities has awarded Saint Mary's College a $275,000 challenge grant which will be used for faculty development in the humanities. The grant will fund the College's first chair, for Professor Bruno Schlesinger, the chairman of the Humanistic Studies Department.

"Because of its uniqueness, the Humanistic Studies Program helped obtain the grant for Saint Mary's," said Anne Reed, assistant vice president for college relations.

Schlesinger developed the Humanistic Studies Program in 1956. Previously, he taught history and originally wanted to start the program within the history department.

The Christian Culture Program emphasizes the unity of culture through an interdisciplinary approach. The undergraduate program is based on ideas of the late English scholar Christopher Dawson.

"The program is strong now, but it has been stronger in previous years as well," said Schlesinger.

"Originally I was the only full-time professor in the department and now we have two others. Gail Mandell and John Shinnerns are definite assets to the program."

Reed said the endowment is an honor for the College. Saint Mary's was one of 46 institutions to receive the award. The NEH based its choices on the institution's ability to plan and administer programs efficiently and to show financial stability, according to Reed.

"Each dollar the endowment awards Saint Mary's must be matched by three non-federal dollars," said Reed.

Schlesinger points out the money will be used for all the humanities at Saint Mary's including English, history, philosophy and modern languages, as well as the Humanistic Studies department. "I want to make that distinction clear that the award is for all the humanities, not just the Humanistic Studies Department," said Schlesinger.

Despite the setback, Sharon, 56, now minister of industry and trade, was unbowed after the trial, which began Nov. 13. In a news conference on the courthouse steps he noted his earlier victories on the falsity and defamation issues.

"I feel that we achieved what it was that brought us here. I respect the American judicial system. It was a long struggle but rewarding," he said.

"We're very happy with the result," said Sharon's attorney, Milton Gould.

Discrimination charged against managers

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — The city Human Rights Commission will pursue legal action against apartment owners and managers who practice racial discrimination in renting, a commission official said Tuesday.

"We know where the discrimination exists," commission Chairman Edward Levy said. "We have the names and you can believe we're going back."

His comments followed the release of a commission report that said at least eight of 18 area apartment complexes practice racial discrimination in renting.

The report contains the conclusions of an eight-month study in which blacks and whites, working for the study, asked apartment managers and owners for rental information. The testers visited sites within a few hours of each other and gave similar information about themselves.

Some testers were given contradicting information about waiting lists and apartment availability in a manner that discriminated against blacks, the report said. The report did not identify the apartments visited during the study.

Levy said the commission will use the report to identify apartments found to discriminate and will seek both administrative and legal action.

"We have given everybody in the city of South Bend warning that the South Bend Human Rights commission exists," he said.

The report was written by Richard Lamanna, professor of sociology at the University of Notre Dame, and Timothy Kenny, a consultant to the Human Rights Commission.

"This is not a trivial problem," Lamanna said.

INTERHAL BASKETBALL RACES HEAT UP

By FRANK HUEMMER

As the frigid temperatures of South Bend begin to rise, the men’s interhall basketball "A" league action is starting to heat up. The races in the three leagues are unfolding into tight battles in which all remaining games are certain to be packed with excitement as the teams struggle to reach the playoffs.

"The ACC division will go down to the wire and right now anything can happen," said Flanner captain Pete Volodyka.

His analysis appears to be correct as the ACC league shows Flanner, Dillon, Off Campus and the Irish eyeing a second-place finish. The Ireland is proving that they can play and are determined to break the 20-point barrier. Since the injury, Anderson has failed to continue from page 8

"We play Maryland, not just Branch and Bias," says Phelps. "I'm not concerned about two guys getting 40 points because I think it's coming down to how well we do and how we play offensively. We've been concentrating on our offensive execution because that's where our letdown has been recently. We just have to score some points on the board in key situations.”

If this is a typical Notre Dame-Maryland game, it can be sure that there will be quite a few "key situations.”

IRISH ITEMS - There will be no television for tomorrow's game which begins at 1 p.m. ... The Feb. 9 Syracuse game in the ACC has been changed from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. for NBC Television.

Irish take to road to continue classic series with Terrapins

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

January 27, 1984 - In front of a national television audience, Notre Dame stays close to the fifth-ranked Terps all night. With 18 seconds left and the score tied, Irish senior Tom Sluby takes the right side for a layup and is fouled in the process. He finishes off the three-point play and the Irish go on to win, 52-47.

The Maryland Terrapins and Notre Dame began playing each other in 1974. At the time both teams were among the best in the nation, so it appeared that the series had the potential to become one of college basketball's best rivalries. After 11 games, of which Notre Dame has won six, it is obvious that the Terp-Irish rivalry has been everything anyone could have expected.

Three of the last four games in the series have been decided by one point, while each of the last six has been decided by five points or less. It is not too early to look past tomorrow's game between the 9-4 Irish and 14-5 Terps and see a good chance of becoming one of the series in thrillers.

As usual, both teams enter the game with a lot to gain from a win. Charles "Lefty" Driely's Terps have flirted with the Top 20 all year and are doing everything they can to keep them within breathing distance of the list. More importantly, however, Maryland needs to pile up as many wins as possible outside of the brutal Atlantic Coast Conference, because ACC wins are always tough to pull up.

Notre Dame has even more to gain. The Irish can use a trip to the Top 20 to prove that it can be one of the best teams in the nation on the road. With a win, they should have no trouble in the easy place for visits to players, so it will take a solid effort by the Irish to come out of Maryland with their 10th win.

"Maryland is probably as good, if not better, than they were last year," says Digger Phelps about his hosts. "Last year they won the ACC tournament, and that 12-0 Terp record is what Lefty's best teams as far as personnel who complement each other." This year's Terps are coming off a seven-point loss to last year's, finished 24-14, losing to Illinois, 72-70, in the second round of the NCAA Tournament. Center Ben Coleman and forward Herman Michiel are back and graduated, and their loss has been felt in the middle as the Terps have occasionally had trouble on the boards.

However, the one-two scoring punch of forward Len Bias and guard Adrian Branch has made Maryland fans forget about the losses. Bias, a 6-8 junior, and Branch, a 6-0 sophomore, are averaging 19.4 and 19.5 points per game, respectively. They are the only players in the ACC with over 20 points per game. Notre Dame's best players are averaging 17.5 points per game.

SMC holds tourney

By KELLY PORTOLESE
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's basketball team will host its third annual Royal Rumble Classic beginning this afternoon when an array of Great West Conference (GWAC) teams come to the Angelis Athletic Facility for two days of contests.

"It should be an even matchups of teams," said Saint Mary's coach Marvin Wood. "All the teams will be looking to get a ranking in the books, so it should bring out the best in everyone." The games begin at 6:30 p.m. today when Grace College of Warren, Michigan, and the University of Phoenix of Grandville, Michigan, will clash. Immediately following the first game, Saint Mary's Calumet, one of the strongest teams in the tourney, will be pitted against George Williams College of Downingtown, Ill. Chicago State is slated for a 6:30 p.m. contest against Manchester College, which handed the Belles a 65-54 loss earlier this season. Saint Mary's sis will face Albion College of Albion, Mich., at 8:30 p.m. in the nightcap.

Saturday's round of play will begin with consolation games at 9:30 and 11:30 a.m., with the championship game in the consolation bracket to be played at 3:30 p.m.

The winners' bracket will play Saturday at 1 and 3 p.m. The survivors of those games will then collide for national championship at 7:45 p.m.

In last year's tournament, which featured only four teams, Saint Mary's was eliminated in the first round. However, with a full week of practice under their belts, the Belles are looking to make an impressive showing in this weekend's tourney and improve on their 2-9 record.

Fencers hope to keep their winning ways at 9-team meet

By KEVIN HERBERT
Sports Writer

Today and tomorrow the Notre Dame fencing teams will try to continue their winning ways when they compete in a nine-team meet in Columbus, Ohio.

Fencing coach Mike DeCicco said he is confident going into the meet. "We are an excellent team right now. I would be very surprised if any of the teams we are facing, excluding Ohio State, gives us any fits."

The men's team is currently 6-0 and highly ranked on the national level. DeCicco attributes the team's success to its outstanding balance. "The secret to our success this afternoon is at 4 p.m. when they take on Cornell. The Irish thin squad is going to have a tough time trying to prove that it can beat one of the best fencers in the nation. Sunil Sabharwal is an all-American fencer who placed sixth in the NCAAs last year."

Sabharwal, however, will have to go against another of the nation's best fencers. Notre Dame sophomore Charles Higas-Coldhard currently is 13-1 and one of the hottest fencers in the country. This matchup certainly should prove to be one of the best of the meet.

Notre Dame will open the meet at 11 a.m. when they take on Michigan State, then Miami (Ohio) and Oberlin College.

The Notre Dame women's fencing team also will be participating in the nine-team meet. The women bring a 2-9 record into Columbus, but they will be fencing without their freshman sensation, Molly Sullivan.

Sullivan will be participating in a national tournament at San Francisco City University. In the tournament she is ranked 12th in a field of 65 of the best women fencers in the country.

Naturally, the team's strength is weakened by the absence of Sullivan. DeCicco, however, said he still feels that Notre Dame has a good chance of success. "Without Molly we are going to have a tough time beating some of these teams. Still, it can be done, but our fencers will have to fence to their full potential."

The Notre Dame men's and women's fencing teams will face some tough competition over the next few days in the nine-team meet in Columbus. At full strength, they have a much easier time than the women's team minus Sullivan, but both squads will face ample challenges from their competitors.
