The two main themes of the novel, reflected in Anania's two selections, discuss American attitudes toward communism and their dark history of developed atomic bomb.

For instance, the main character, Arnold, and his teen-aged friends, enjoy a moment of peace, hearing that "dead men never breathe again." The book then decides to "write a letter to the Russo bears" where they hope to get their atomic bomb somewhere else or if they don't want to get hexed and have both over them.

Anania paints a vivid picture of high school age cheerleaders and jock in a typically '50s malt shop before school. Arnold and his gang dance in, arm and arm, singing a California tune. Is it you or is it you in a Comma? Doo-wop, doo-wop.

After "entertaining" the various unimpressed couples, the boys proceed to walk towards their destination. Arnold says, "Do you see that school? Five, four, three, two, one, bam. Gone man. Just gone."

The second excerpt centers around Arnold's first day working as a dishwasher in a hotel restaurant. A fellow worker, Louie, shares with Arnold some of his personal observations about communists. "Why a Communist ain't no better than a queer. Worse. Least a queer will buy you a drink. A Communist won't shut up until you agree with him. And then he won't even give you a bowl of soup."

Louie also says that part of going to "Communist school" is that they give the men ugly girlfriends. "You ever see the women that go around with Communists? Ugly and fat, every damn one of them."

This year's valedictorians chosen;
A high GPA not the original goal

By MARK S. PANKOWSKI

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Roman Catho lic Bishop William McNamar of Prop, Wash., South Bend, Ind., has resigned his Church leadership position, and John D'Arcy of Boston, whom McNamara has been named as his successor, Church officials said Monday.

No reason was given for the resignation of McNamara, 74, who had led the archdiocese for nine years.

D'Arcy, 52, has been an auxiliary bishop responsible for the Lowell area in the Boston archdiocese since Feb. 11, 1975. He is also in charge of the archdiocese's spiritual development office.

"It's my choice," he said. "I just could stick around until I turn 75." McMahon said at October 1985 that he intended to retire early last year.

There are basically two types of students who make excellent grades in college: the genius and the hard worker. Both types may be represented by any student who takes a different grade point average in college. "I don't consider myself a genius," said Banas. "I probably put in five hours of outside claswork a day. It was a lot of hard work."

The honor of valedictorian is given by both Notre Dame and Saint Mary's to the senior with the highest cumulative grade point average in her or his graduating class.

St. Mary's College valedictorian, Laura Banas, is of the latter type. Banas, whose grade point average is above 3.9, attributes her success to a lot of studying and hard work. "I don't consider myself a genius," said Banas. "I probably put in five hours of outside claswork a day. It was a lot of hard work."

"I never really thought about being named valedictorian," she said. The chances of escaping without getting one was "very small," he said. "There was a lot of luck involved, especially in liberal arts courses. If I had taken a different English course I might well have gotten less than an 'A.' Things like lab tend to be good equalizers too. It's pretty easy to get a 'B' or an 'A.'"

"In those," Banas, a French and history major, also said becoming valedictorian was not a goal.
Friends of New York Mayor Ed Koch have made a bid to buy the Village Voice, a forerun for some of the mayor's most avid detractors, but the newspaper's owner, Rupert Murdoch, refused to sell. The architect of the bid was Howard Blum, a friend of the mayor, who said yesterday he conceived the idea while writing a novel about a weekly "similar to the Voice." Blum approached one of Koch's aides, Dan Wolf, who put him in contact with Murdoch early last fall. A group of investors backing Blum presented Murdoch with an offer "between $30 million and $40 million" on Jan. 7, he said. --AP

The five reputed leaders of New York City's Mafia families were rounded up overnight and charged yesterday in a federal indictment with being the "ringing body" of a criminal enterprise that dealt in drugs and other racketeering activities. Officials predicted the federal indictment would encourage crime victims to cooperate with police and begin violent struggle within the families.

"This is a bad day, probably the worst ever, for the Mafia," said U.S. attorney Rudolph Giuliani. Never before, he said, had a federal indictment charged so many bosses. --AP Mafia families were rounded up overnight and charged yesterday in Alabama, authorities said. Billie White Price, 54, was arrested Sunday night as she was purchased for $130 per year ($20 per session) by writing master) by writing.

Cuba's push in the 1980s to lure Western tourists and their dollars has made little progress, to the frustration of government officials who blame the Reagan administration's ban on U.S. tourists and their dollars has made little progress, to the frustration of government officials who blame the Reagan administration's ban on U.S. tourists and their dollars. --AP

The United Religious Community will sponsor a workshop for volunteers who work in its overnight shelter for the Homeless. Joseph Biech will lead a workshop at 7 p.m. today at First United Methodist Church on Route 31 and other places are getting hit. --AP

The Observer, Wednesday, February 27, 1985 — page 2

Sunny and seasonably cool today. Lows in the lower 20s to low 30s tonight. We knew it was too good to last. --AP

Furthermore, Terry suggested this idea in his Notre Dame campus security to leave and make your hit. Use a brick to get windows will not be noticed. --AP

Advice that can save a life

FAMOUS LAST WORDS FROM FRIENDS TO FRIENDS

"Are you OK to drive?"
"Yeah, I'm perfectly fine." --AP

"Did you have too much to drink?"
"I just drunk a beer with my eyes closed." --AP

"What's a few beers?"
"You kiddin', I'm perfectly fine." --AP

Sobering advice that can save a life

DRINKING AND DRIVING CAN KILL A FRIENDSHIP

Wednesday, February 27, 1985 — page 2

In Brief

The Observer

Weather

The Observer

Mary Healy

Features Editor

A kid from Notre Dame. You could pull in, wait for Security to leave and make your hit. Use a brick to get through the window, and you could be taking apart the radio, within minutes. When the patrol returns, you simply die in the seat - chances are the broken window will not be noticed.

Taking exist precautions often seems to backfire. Junior Trent Rock equipped his Camaro with a security system and locked the wheels. But when vandalism in D-2 last November found they could not break in, they "got frustrated and keyed their initials into the top of the roof. Then they "bombed slammed it into the side of the car," seriously denoting it, according to Terry.

The break-ins happen to cars in all lots, although D-2 is especially hard-hit, with 41 cases of larceny last year. Nevertheless, Terry suggested this idea in his annual report, he said, but moneys for it has not been budgeted.

Automobile security is a serious issue, and must be addressed as such by both security and students.

Until it, must every student on his way to the parking lot dread finding his car only a shadow of its former self?

"...and cheap, on and off-campus, have been abused.

There are more drastic possibilities, such as closing off the lots with gates that can only be opened with a Deere-like card, issued to those with registered cars in the lots. But what happens when a student has lost his card and just has to get to the airport in 20 minutes? --AP

Another answer would be to build a fence and give students a pass to right across from the East Gate, and keep that gate open 24 hours a day. Terry suggested this idea in his annual report, he said, but moneys for it has not been budgeted.

Nevertheless, Terry suggested this idea in his annual report, he said, but moneys for it has not been budgeted.

Automobile security is a serious issue, and must be addressed as such by both security and students.

Until it, must every student on his way to the parking lot dread finding his car only a shadow of its former self?

Sunny and seasonably cool today. Lows in the lower 20s to low 30s tonight. We knew it was too good to last. --AP

The Observer

Weather

The Observer
The Observer
Wednesday, February 27, 1985 — page 3

Cavanaugh's Andy Sowder fund may near projected $10,000 goal

By DIANE SCHROEDER
News Staff

Six years have passed since former Cavanaugh Hall President Andy Sowder died in St. Joseph's Hospital of spinal meningitis.

Cavanaugh Hall residents hope this is also the year their Andy Sowder Scholarship Fund reaches its $10,000 goal.

Andy Sowder, a Notre Dame senior at his death, was on a ski trip during February 1979 and returned with what he thought was a severe cold or the flu. He went to the infirmary. His parents arrived that day morning when he had severe shock to everyone, and that he was having 200 close friends. "It is a miracle he lived that long," commented Cavanaugh Hall Council to spearhead a memorial fund. This fund took the form of a scholarship in Sowder's name. A fund also began in Idaho, raising $2,000, and the Knute Rockne trophy was renamed for Sowder: The trophy is presented to Notre Dame dorms for excellence in some field of endeavor. The scholarship, however, is Cavanaugh's own project. The goal is first to raise $10,000. After that amount is obtained, the interest will help to pay the college expenses of a needy student from Texas. The project, unique in the history of the University, was approved by Notre Dame officials who helped set up the fund.

So far, $8,000 has been raised. According to Miceli, donations pour in from all over — Sowder's parents and relatives, friends; former residents of Cavanaugh; a Lenten collection from the hall chapel as well as proceeds from special hall projects such as an annual auction. For the past five years, Cavanaugh has put on musicals and talent shows in addition to the annual ball party. This year's play, "Barefoot in the Park," was raised in Fortunette. Bob Ellsworth from the play's publicity staff said, "Production was by far the biggest. The acting is excellent and the people are really enthusiastic about it."

Celebrate Life!
Help the March of Dimes
Fight Birth Defects

By SHANNON OAKES
News Staff

Notre Dame and Saint Mary's freshmen see success, money as future goals

Alumni Hall resident Paul Clements feels freshmen are more success-oriented. "They want the best that the world has to offer," he says. "This is a whole new generation. They feel that by coming to college they are on their way to their dreams realized."

Wendy Harris said she came to Notre Dame because of the school's reputation. "Employers are looking for a college degree because it is a certain type of person. For us, college was recreation," she said.

The atmosphere at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's stresses studying, according to Harris. "I don't think there's much of an escape from school, you have to work here. People come here to get a good job, they don't come here to have the sake of going to college. They want the whole package," she said.

Regina Hall Director Margaret Caven said, "Many students seem to be more career minded...real career choices where they can advance to reach their money and position." Caven said she feels this is a nationwide trend, one that is carried over from Notre Dame or Saint Mary's.

For money is definitely up-to- perrson in the minds of most freshmen. After graduating, Harris said, "I want to have a good job making a lot of money." Clements commented, "I think that our main goal is to be successful. It's a good goal, a nice one - monetary success and good standing in society.

Mama Marriott's
Wednesday Night Italian Buffet

Every Wednesday it's Mama Marriott's Italian Buffet in the Looking Glass Restaurant. A "buen gusto" array of antipasta, minestrone, fetuccine, lasagna and more four sauces, cheese, breads and desserts. It's all served up in a festive Italian atmosphere — checkered tablecloths, a strolling musician, the works.

Every Wednesday 5:00 p.m. - 10:00 p.m.
All you can eat for $6.95
Children under 12 $4.75
Reservations appreciated.

SOUTH BEND Marriott
125 N. St. Joseph St., South Bend, Indiana (219) 234-2000

STUDENT APPRECIATION NIGHT FEB. 25-MARCH 2
30% OFF • 30% OFF

5 p.m. - 10 p.m.

PRESENT YOUR ND OR SMC ID and receive 30% OFF all items on the menu.

Chris's Ice Cream
Homemade Ice Cream
Banana Splits
Homemade Waffles
Cones
Sundaes
16 Mix Ins
62 Flavors

Within walking distance
6 MILE EAST OF I-80
ON ST. RD. 23 TRY US!

SOUTH BEND Marriott
125 N. St. Joseph St., South Bend, Indiana (219) 234-2000

SOUTH BEND Marriott

Mama Marriott's

Wednesday Night Italian Buffet

Every Wednesday it's Mama Marriott's Italian Buffet in the Looking Glass Restaurant. A "buen gusto" array of antipasta, minestrone, fetuccine, lasagna and more four sauces, cheese, breads and desserts. It's all served up in a festive Italian atmosphere — checkered tablecloths, a strolling musician, the works.

Every Wednesday 5:00 p.m. - 10:00 p.m.
All you can eat for $6.95
Children under 12 $4.75
Reservations appreciated.

SOUTH BEND Marriott
125 N. St. Joseph St., South Bend, Indiana (219) 234-2000

Celebrate Life!
Help the March of Dimes
Fight Birth Defects

By SHANNON OAKES
News Staff

Notre Dame and Saint Mary's freshmen see success, money as future goals

Alumni Hall resident Paul Clements feels freshmen are more success-oriented. "They want the best that the world has to offer," he says. "This is a whole new generation. They feel that by coming to college they are on their way to their dreams realized."

Wendy Harris said she came to Notre Dame because of the school's reputation. "Employers are looking for a college degree because it is a certain type of person. For us, college was recreation," she said.

The atmosphere at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's stresses studying, according to Harris. "I don't think there's much of an escape from school, you have to work here. People come here to get a good job, they don't come here to have the sake of going to college. They want the whole package," she said.

Regina Hall Director Margaret Caven said, "Many students seem to be more career minded...real career choices where they can advance to reach their money and position." Caven said she feels this is a nationwide trend, one that is carried over from Notre Dame or Saint Mary's.

For money is definitely up-to- perrson in the minds of most freshmen. After graduating, Harris said, "I want to have a good job making a lot of money." Clements commented, "I think that our main goal is to be successful. It's a good goal, a nice one - monetary success and good standing in society.

Alumni Hall resident Paul Clements feels freshmen are more success-oriented. "They want the best that the world has to offer," he says. "This is a whole new generation. They feel that by coming to college they are on their way to their dreams realized."

Wendy Harris said she came to Notre Dame because of the school's reputation. "Employers are looking for a college degree because it is a certain type of person. For us, college was recreation," she said.

The atmosphere at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's stresses studying, according to Harris. "I don't think there's much of an escape from school, you have to work here. People come here to get a good job, they don't come here to have the sake of going to college. They want the whole package," she said.

Regina Hall Director Margaret Caven said, "Many students seem to be more career minded...real career choices where they can advance to reach their money and position." Caven said she feels this is a nationwide trend, one that is carried over from Notre Dame or Saint Mary's.

For money is definitely up-to- perrson in the minds of most freshmen. After graduating, Harris said, "I want to have a good job making a lot of money.” Clements commented, “I think that our main goal is to be successful. It’s a good goal, a nice one - monetary success and good standing in society.”
Prof speaks on civil rights groups

By CHRIS SKORCZ
Staff Reporter

Joseph Scott, professor of sociology at Notre Dame, recently spoke at the Colfax Cultural Center in South Bend on the leadership of several of the nation's more influential civil rights organizations.

In particular, Scott responded to comments made in a November "Civil Rights Update," Pendleton has come under fire for making an industry out of racial politics. Scott said, "His rhetoric is very insidious and deceptive. He attacks traditional civil rights groups such as the NAACP, a group which has worked hard to change laws which upheld segregation." In a paper titled "1984: The Public and Private Governance of Race Relations," written in August of 1984, Scott maintains that "the government of race relations has shifted from the public to the private corporate bureaucracies. Blacks, women, and other visible minorities continue to be held back and held down by . . . bureaucratic rules and procedures of private corporations."

"Private corporations, in the aggregate, have in America . . . the power of determining who works and who does not and at what level of remuneration regardless of the skills, knowledge, and performance of the employees," said Scott.

"This country began as a libertarian democracy in rhetoric and became a totalitarian democracy in fact," concluded Scott.

Dave King, 17, a student at Bishop Luers High School, spent six hours Monday tossing sandbags onto a river dike and volunteered again to fill bags from a six-foot high sand pile at a southside parking lot. "What's hard is tossing bags onto the dike," Pence said. "I couldn't hardly move when I got up (this morning)."

She came back for more of the tiring work because friends of mine's houses are going under. People need help. You've got to pull together.

Mike Pence, 17, a student at Bishop Luers High School, spent six hours Monday tossing sandbags onto a river dike and volunteered again to fill bags from a six-foot high sand pile at a southside parking lot. "What's hard is tossing bags onto the dike," Pence said. "I couldn't hardly move when I got up (this morning)."

She came back for more of the tiring work because friends of mine's houses are going under. People need help. You've got to pull together.

Joseph Scott, professor of sociology at Notre Dame, recently spoke at the Colfax Cultural Center in South Bend on the leadership of several of the nation's more influential civil rights organizations.

In particular, Scott responded to comments made in a November "Civil Rights Update," Pendleton has come under fire for making an industry out of racial politics. Scott said, "His rhetoric is very insidious and deceptive. He attacks traditional civil rights groups such as the NAACP, a group which has worked hard to change laws which upheld segregation." In a paper titled "1984: The Public and Private Governance of Race Relations," written in August of 1984, Scott maintains that "the government of race relations has shifted from the public to the private corporate bureaucracies. Blacks, women, and other visible minorities continue to be held back and held down by . . . bureaucratic rules and procedures of private corporations."

"Private corporations, in the aggregate, have in America . . . the power of determining who works and who does not and at what level of remuneration regardless of the skills, knowledge, and performance of the employees," said Scott.

"This country began as a libertarian democracy in rhetoric and became a totalitarian democracy in fact," concluded Scott.
Dancing keeps 'Fast Forward' on its feet

John Hines

Movie review

What do Wonder Bread, Ohio and the recently released movie 'Fast Forward' all have in common? Each is flat and boring. Those of you who like Wonder Bread live in Ohio may have my deepest sympathies. To those who go to see 'Fast Forward' after fair warning, I can offer no solace.

What begins as a quest for success story about eight high school students up-dancing to New York to "break into" show business, emerges as a rehash of a well worn story line. The eight from Sandusky, Ohio, win a talent contest and head for New York for a one-in-a-million shot at stardom.

Sidney Poitier may be a good actor, but if "Fast Forward" is any indication, he's a mediocre director at best. With a couple of exceptions, no character is very well developed. Most of the acting in this film is amateur as melodies flowing uphold in warmtone. The dialogue, actions and facial expressions of the characters appear forced and artificial.

When these characters get excited, they get too excited, and when they are depressed, they look too depressed. The secret to good acting, I'm told, is not to appear to be acting. These folks could not have done much worse if they'd have looked straight into the camera lens. In fact, these actors were chosen for their dancing ability, not their acting technique. It shows.

The choreography in this latest of the dance films/musical genre is not bad. Although few of the actors in this movie can actually act, they can dance extremely well. The cast manages to perform some complex dance numbers flawlessly. While the dialogue in this film seems forced at times, the movements on the dance floor are smooth, precise and a pleasure to watch.

The script, however, does not exude originality. Throughout the film one longs to see some character development or character depth, anyone or anything interesting. Some ingenious person could have added some excitement to this film by letting the audience see different, interesting characters develop, change or even stay the same - as long as these people were presented as people, not as cardboard cutouts with Ultrabright - white smiles. Whether Richard Wesley, the screenplay writer, or Timothy March, the author of the story, is responsible for a notable lack of originality is not clear, but some body goofed.

Sorry to admit it, but "Fast Forward" could more accurately be entitled "Eight is Enough" Goes to New York via a Low Budget Hollywood Film. These teenagers look as though they belong on reruns of "Eight is Enough" or "The Brady Bunch." The acting and the script are of the same caliber. The movie "Fast Forward" simply does not seem like a full - fledged Hollywood film. It's definitely a "B" grade film.

All in the family — all 15 in the family that is

Margaret McCabe
assistant features editor

It's one of those standard getting-to-know-someone-questions sort of two people are you from? or what's your major?

When you ask Ellen Brown how many people are in her family, be prepared to drop your jaw.

Brown, a junior and an education major at Saint Mary's College is from Riverside, California where the houses were close to each other, "We lived there until - well, the houses were close to each other," says Brown. "We were always a brother or sister in town."

Considering the number of statistics that Brown deals with when discussing her family, it's understandable that once in a while she pauses and does a few finger calculations. When the tally is finally in, Brown explains, "Eight of us are already married and there are 15 grandchildren.*"

Four girls, eleven boys, hmmm, one might suspect that Mr. and Mrs. Brown were determined to have their own football team. This may be the case. Every one of the Brown boys has played, is playing, or is coaching football. Seven of them played college ball and at one time, John, Jim and Dennis played as linebackers for the same team. This may be the case. Every one of the Brown boys has played, is playing, or is coaching football. Seven of them played college ball and at one time, John, Jim and Dennis played as linebackers for the same team. This may be the case.

Eventually, they made their way to Riverside, California where they reside now. Of course, the oldest being 37, the entire family does not reside at home. "The youngest is Vickie, she's 19. There are only five of us at home now."

"From Thanksgiving on, my poor mom is practically wanting to South Bend for school - 1 really hard for me to come all the close, " says Brown, infact, "it was so much for the pumpkin pie."

Brown's family has its share. "We're all together, it always starts well, so much for the pumpkin pie."

"Eight is Enough" or "The Brady Bunch." The acting and the script are of the same caliber. The movie "Fast Forward" simply does not seem like a full - fledged Hollywood film. It's definitely a "B" grade film.

From Thanksgiving on, my poor mom is practically at the stores everyday, open til close, until Christmas."

John Scott Clough and Tamara Mark embrace and dream of stardom in "Fast Forward."

Margaret McCabe

November 27, 1985 — page 5

*The youngest is Vickie, she's 19. There are only five of us at home now. Considering the number of statistics that Brown deals with when discussing her family, it's understandable that once in a while she pauses and does a few finger calculations. When the tally is finally in, Brown explains, "Eight of us are already married and there are 15 grandchildren."

Four girls, eleven boys, hmmm, one might suspect that Mr. and Mrs. Brown were determined to have their own football team. This may be the case. Every one of the Brown boys has played, is playing, or is coaching football. Seven of them played college ball and at one time, John, Jim and Dennis played as linebackers for the same team. This may be the case. Every one of the Brown boys has played, is playing, or is coaching football. Seven of them played college ball and at one time, John, Jim and Dennis played as linebackers for the same team. This may be the case.

Family traditions? Of course, Brown's family has its share. "Water fights." is one that comes quickly to her mind, "whenever we're all together, it always starts up and eventually someone gets thrown in the pool." At Thanksgiving, the weaponry gets a little more sophisticated, "that's when we have our traditional whipped cream fight," laughs Brown... oh well, so much for the pumpkin pie.

Brown's family is clearly a contradiction to any psychologists' theory that children in large families get lost in the crowd or feel like numbers. "We're all very close," says Brown, "I was really hard for me to come all the way to South Bend for school - I miss everybody a lot."

When most of us have difficulty staying in touch with Mom and Dad, let alone brothers and sisters, imagine the job a Brown "out of town" would face. "I try to write or call everybody," Brown swears, "but as you know, either requires lots of time or money. Two precious things for any student."

Now to answer the question that would be on anyone's mind. What's it really like to have 14 brothers and sisters? Brown seems to need a little reflection time to answer this question. "It's hard to say," she comments, "I guess I never considered what it would be like not to have so many... I mean I've never known it any other way."

If the truth be known, I don't think Brown Number 13 would want it any other way.
Urban transit will suffer under Reagan's budget

Railroading, the president said in his State of the Union address, should be returned to the private sector, where it belongs. But it has never been there, entirely, John Noonan, in his new book "Bribes," tells how our great railway system was driven across the country by a series of federal giveaways, sold by bribes to senators. Land was granted, naval preparations made at the Pacific end of the 19th century. So much for the prairie by offering favorable rates or by bribes to senators. Land was granted, the latter half of the 19th century. So much for what was a corrupt bargain? Once in place, president subsidies are backing huge expenditures. The difference is not with all its resources, is to serve the tangible economic uses for space, just as towns out on the Indian plains gave city funds to the railroad, hoping to cash in later. What we have, then, is not a division between government favoring business and government favoring people and place.

The very people who claim to resent government subsidies are backing huge expenditures on the space shuttle. Apart from possible defense uses of this work, the "free enterprise" of Silicon Valley point to future economic uses for space, just as towns out on the Indian plains gave city funds to the railroad, hoping to cash in later. What we have, then, is not a division between government favoring business development and government favoring business subsidies for development and subsidies for maintenance. The difference is not between government action and inaction, but between government favoring business development and government favoring business subsidies for development and subsidies for maintenance. The difference is not between government action and inaction, but between government favoring business development and government favoring business subsidies for development and subsidies for maintenance.

Looked at in the long term, the determiner of economic outcome seems like an important umpire called the market than a putatively virtuous market. The market called success. The market, with all its resources, is to serve the tangible lasting, while keeping clear of the mythical former.

But maintenance of the railroads is maintenance. We have, then, a not a division between government favoring business development and government favoring business development and government favoring business development and government favoring business development and government favoring business products and members of the National Guard of the state, it should be clear that a frank discussion of strategies for dealing with apartheid is such an emotional issue, because apartheid is such an emotional issue, it and thus worsen the dearth of political realism or from gaining an understanding of the immorality of apartheid is undeniable, and even the vice-consul would not defend it. Given this consensus, a more productive discussion would have been to pursue particular options or strategies available for remedying the situation. Though moral protests abide serve good purposes, at times the declarations of outrage and condenmation at this lecture were superficial in light of this consensus, and even appeared self-indulgent in some cases. They certainly distracted from discussion of strategies for dealing with apartheid or from garnering an understanding of the immorality of apartheid is undeniable, and even the vice-consul would not defend it. Given this consensus, a more productive discussion would have been to pursue particular options or strategies available for remedying the situation. Though moral protests abide serve good purposes, at times the declarations of outrage and condemnation at this lecture were superficial in light of this consensus, and even appeared self-indulgent in some cases. They certainly distracted from discussion of strategies for dealing with apartheid or from garnering an understanding of the immorality of apartheid is undeniable, and even the vice-consul would not defend it. Given this consensus, a more productive discussion would have been to pursue particular options or strategies available for remedying the situation. Though moral protests abide serve good purposes, at times the declarations of outrage and condemnation at this lecture were superficial in light of this consensus, and even appeared self-indulgent in some cases. They certainly distracted from discussion of strategies for dealing with apartheid or from garnering an understanding of the immorality of apartheid is undeniable, and even the vice-consul would not defend it. Given this consensus, a more productive discussion would have been to pursue particular options or strategies available for remedying the situation. Though moral protests abide serve good purposes, at times the declarations of outrage and condemnation at this lecture were superficial in light of this consensus, and even appeared self-indulgent in some cases. They certainly distracted from discussion of strategies for dealing with apartheid or from garnering an understanding of the immorality of apartheid is undeniable, and even the vice-consul would not defend it. Given this consensus, a more productive discussion would have been to pursue particular options or strategies available for remedying the situation. Though moral protests abide serve good purposes, at times the declarations of outrage and condemnation at this lecture were superficial in light of this consensus, and even appeared self-indulgent in some cases. They certainly distracted from discussion of strategies for dealing with apartheid or from garnering an understanding of the immorality of apartheid is undeniable, and even the vice-consul would not defend it. Given this consensus, a more productive discussion would have been to pursue particular options or strategies available for remedying the situation. Though moral protests abide serve good purposes, at times the declarations of outrage and condemnation at this lecture were superficial in light of this consensus, and even appeared self-indulgent in some cases. They certainly distracted from discussion of strategies for dealing with apartheid or from garnering an understanding of the immorality of apartheid is undeniable, and even the vice-consul would not defend it. Given this consensus, a more productive discussion would have been to pursue particular options or strategies available for remedying the situation. Though moral protests abide serve good purposes, at times the declarations of outrage and condemnation at this lecture were superficial in light of this consensus, and even appeared self-indulgent in some cases. They certainly distracted from discussion of strategies for dealing with apartheid or from garnering an understanding of the immorality of apartheid is undeniable, and even the vice-consul would not defend it. Given this consensus, a more productive discussion would have been to pursue particular options or strategies available for remedying the situation. Though moral protests abide serve good purposes, at times the declarations of outrage and condemnation at this lecture were superficial in light of this consensus, and even appeared self-indulgent in some cases. They certainly distracted from discussion of strategies for dealing with apartheid or from garnering an understanding of the immorality of apartheid is undeniable, and even the vice-consul would not defend it. Given this consensus, a more productive discussion would have been to pursue particular options or strategies available for remedying the situation. Though moral protests abide serve good purposes, at times the declarations of outrage and condemnation at this lecture were superficial in light of this consensus, and even appeared self-indulgent in some cases. They certainly distracted from discussion of strategies for dealing with apartheid or from garnering an understanding of the immorality of apartheid is undeniable, and even the vice-consul would not defend it. Given this consensus, a more productive discussion would have been to pursue particular options or strategies available for remedying the situation. Though moral protests abide serve good purposes, at times the declarations of outrage and condemnation at this lecture were superficial in light of this consensus, and even appeared self-indulgent in some cases. They certainly distracted from discussion of strategies for dealing with apartheid or from garnering an understanding of the immorality of apartheid is undeniable, and even the vice-consul would not defend it. Given this consensus, a more productive discussion would have been to pursue particular options or strategies available for remedying the situation. Though moral protests abide serve good purposes, at times the declarations of outrage and condemnation at this lecture were superficial in light of this consensus, and even appeared self-indulgent in some cases. They certainly distracted from discussion of strategies for dealing with apartheid or from garnering an understanding of the immorality of apartheid is undeniable, and even the vice-consul would not defend it. Given this consensus, a more productive discussion would have been to pursue particular options or strategies available for remedying the situation. Though moral protests abide serve good purposes, at times the declarations of outrage and condemnation at this lecture were superficial in light of this consensus, and even appeared self-indulgent in some cases. They certainly distracted from discussion of strategies for dealing with apartheid or from garnering an understanding of the immorality of apartheid is undeniable, and even the vice-consul would not defend it. Given this consensus, a more productive discussion would have been to pursue particular options or strategies available for remedying the situation. Though moral protests abide serve good purposes, at times the declarations of outrage and condemnation at this lecture were superficial in light of this consensus, and even appeared self-indulgent in some cases. They certainly distracted from discussion of strategies for dealing with apartheid or from garnering an understanding of the immorality of apartheid is undeniable, and even the vice-consul would not defend it. Given this consensus, a more productive discussion would have been to pursue particular options or strategies available for remedying the situation. Though moral protests abide serve good purposes, at times the declarations of outrage and condemnation at this lecture were superficial in light of this consensus, and even appeared self-indulgent in some cases. They certainly distracted from discussion of strategies for dealing with apartheid or from garnering an understanding of the immorality of apartheid is undeniable, and even the vice-consul would not defend it. Given this consensus, a more productive discussion would have been to pursue particular options or strategies available for remedying the situation. Though moral protests abide serve good purposes, at times the declarations of outrage and condemnation at this lecture were superficial in light of this consensus, and even appeared self-indulgent in some cases. They certainly distracted from discussion of strategies for dealing with apartheid or from garnering an understanding of the immorality of apartheid is undeniable, and even the vice-consul would not defend it. Given this consensus, a more productive discussion would have been to pursue particular options or strategies available for remedying the situation. Though moral protests abide serve good purposes, at times the declarations of outrage and condemnation at this lecture were superficial in light of this consensus, and even appeared self-indulgent in some cases. They certainly distracted from discussion of strategies for dealing with apartheid or from garnering an understanding of the immorality of apartheid is undeniable, and even the vice-consul would not defend it. Given this consensus, a more productive discussion would have been to pursue particular options or strategies available for remedying the situation. Though moral protests}
Mouasher's definition of integrity is unclear

To judge someone on the actions of others is simply a generalization that any person with a thread of logic would view as absurd, one. Despite the instructions of Browne and Cahill, these posters were not used to further the Browne/Cahill campaign. These truly heinous acts, this "serious breach of rules" did occur. I understand the University's position regarding the responsibility for what others did against their wishes, and the morality of their actions is questioned. The way I see it, it takes more integrity to face up to one's mistakes, admit you were wrong and keep pushing forward than to quit and whine over your mistakes, which seems to be much too vague in these speeches.

Although Mouasher considers himself the author of the campus controversy letter, he cannot correct him on the most serious charge against Browne and Cahill, concerning a failure to report campaign expenditures, and his campaign" letter. First, 1000 platforms not 20 platforms that would be "bought" as the Mouasher's definition of integrity is unclear. If Browne wanted such a large number of campaign materials to be printed, why were they not used to further the Browne/Cahill campaign? I understand the principle of clearing what you're doing with the Copy Center. But, it seems to have been overlooked here. People walk by every day including the OUBD rules committee, print them? Would it not be foolish not to report campaign expenditures, and due to his position he may judge the integrity and morality of Pat Browne and Joanie Cahill? Unfortunately some of the information in Gibson's article is historically inaccurate and all of his arguments are unconvincing.

Julie Popham, Badin Hall

Catholics should be educated in their faith

Dear Editor,

This letter is in response to Mark Gibson's article, "Role of Papal Authorities Shows Change," published in the Feb. 21, 1985 edition of The Observer.

For so many years, the Catholoc Church has been divided between the traditionalists who believe in Church doctrine and the liberal Catholics who believe in Church teachings. The traditionalists believe in the authority of the Pope and the Church hierarchy. The liberal Catholics believe in the authority of the individual and the Church's teachings are merely guidelines.

This division has led to many problems within the Church. The traditionalists believe that the Church must be rigid and follow the teachings of the Pope and the Church hierarchy. The liberal Catholics believe that the Church must be flexible and allow for individual interpretation of the teachings.

In my opinion, both sides are correct. The Church must have a balance between the authority of the Pope and the Church hierarchy and individual interpretation of the teachings. This balance can be achieved by educating Catholics in their faith.

Thanks to Bill Hickey on improvement efforts

Dear Editor,

There are two signs that a winning team makes manifest in one manner or another. First, the team has a strong leader who sets goals, creates the means to achieve those goals, and subsequently, achieves them. Second, the team is constantly trying to improve.

Noire Dame Food Service is just such a team and William J. Hickey, the director, is just such a leader. Before you skip to the next letter, hear me out. Because this editorial shall compliment a job well done, it is a type of letter that I have seen rarely in our community.

Bill Hickey has been a strong leader who has set goals, created the means to achieve those goals, and subsequently, achieved them. The team is constantly trying to improve.

Noire Dame Food Service is just such a team and William J. Hickey, the director, is just such a leader. Before you skip to the next letter, hear me out. Because this editorial shall compliment a job well done, it is a type of letter that I have seen rarely in our community.

Bill Hickey has been a strong leader who has set goals, created the means to achieve those goals, and subsequently, achieved them. The team is constantly trying to improve.

Gibson is inaccurate, unconvincing in article

Dear Editor,

On Feb 21, Mark Gibson's article concerning the role of papal authority appeared in The Observer. After reading his article, I now understand why the Theology Department recently changed its requirements so all Notre Dame students would have to take a class in Theology.

In the beginning of his article, Gibson states, "The Church has taught for 2000 years that ..." This is incorrect. According to the Church's teachings, the Church does not teach that there is only one God. The Church teaches that there is one God, and that God is three persons: the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit.

Also in his article Gibson presents his research as conclusive, but his evidence is inconclusive. Women cannot be ordained. In explaining his reasoning, he uses the Bible to support his argument. He states that the Bible does not allow for the ordination of women. However, this is not true. The Bible does not explicitly state that women cannot be ordained. Therefore, Gibson's argument is flawed.

In conclusion, I believe that Gibson's article is inaccurate and unconvincing. I encourage all readers to carefully examine the evidence presented in his article and to form their own opinions on the issue of women's ordination.
Sports Briefs

The ND Water Polo Club will be meeting for practice tonight at 11 p.m. in the Rockne Memorial Building. Anyone who is interested may attend. Club members, should bring $4 to order team shirts in form for information, call Mike at 283-1471.

An open broomball tournament, to be played at 10 a.m. by WLN at Sanderson from 3:45 p.m. to 6:45 p.m. The deadline to register rosters of six or more players is today at the NVA Office. - The Observer

Classifieds

NOTICES

TYING CALL CHIWA 2A-RSA

TYING AVAILABLE 267-4692

EXPERT TYING 267-7204 AFTER 6:00.

WORKING PROCESSING AND TYING 267-7204.

EXPERT TYING SERVICE CALL 267-7204.

Tying Word Processing - also copying. Call Alida, 5th floor in whenever.

WORKING PROCESSING

Student available for babysitting, LIGHT COOKING, CALL 267-7204. Call John, 3rd floor in whenever.

LOST/FOUND

REWARD: $50.00 offered for return. Arrangements have been made for the bike that was signed over to Doug Stott. Call John Joe or remember him at a chance to help the student. PLEASE, 674-3903 or 267-2003.

CAMPUS

REWARD

If you find this personal item, please call and we'll pay you. Elaine.

CAMPUS

IT'S NOT TOO LATE TO ORDER THE NEW YORK TIMES. THE WORLD'S 1

ONE

D an iel

LaFortune

P E R S O N A L I S T

TO WHOMEVER TOOK MY WALLET

CA N KEEP ANY MONEY IT CONTAINS,

TO WHOMEVER TOOK MY WALLET

CA N KEEP ANY MONEY IT CONTAINS,

TO WHOMEVER TOOK MY WALLET

CA N KEEP ANY MONEY IT CONTAINS,

TO WHOMEVER TOOK MY WALLET

CA N KEEP ANY MONEY IT CONTAINS,

TO WHOMEVER TOOK MY WALLET

CA N KEEP ANY MONEY IT CONTAINS,

TO WHOMEVER TOOK MY WALLET

CA N KEEP ANY MONEY IT CONTAINS,

TO WHOMEVER TOOK MY WALLET

CA N KEEP ANY MONEY IT CONTAINS,

TO WHOMEVER TOOK MY WALLET

CA N KEEP ANY MONEY IT CONTAINS,

TO WHOMEVER TOOK MY WALLET

CA N KEEP ANY MONEY IT CONTAINS,

TO WHOMEVER TOOK MY WALLET

CA N KEEP ANY MONEY IT CONTAINS,

TO WHOMEVER TOOK MY WALLET

CA N KEEP ANY MONEY IT CONTAINS,

TO WHOMEVER TOOK MY WALLET

CA N KEEP ANY MONEY IT CONTAINS,

TO WHOMEVER TOOK MY WALLET

CA N KEEP ANY MONEY IT CONTAINS,

TO WHOMEVER TOOK MY WALLET

CA N KEEP ANY MONEY IT CONTAINS,

TO WHOMEVER TOOK MY WALLET

CA N KEEP ANY MONEY IT CONTAINS,

TO WHOMEVER TOOK MY WALLET

CA N KEEP ANY MONEY IT CONTAINS,
Major league baseball studies future expansion

Associated Press

Quashed up like Little Leaguers at the general admission window, potential franchise cities are waiting patiently for baseball to start selling tickets to the major leagues. Standing in line are the good people of Denver, the central Florida metropolitan area of Tampa-St. Petersburg and their neighbors to the south in Miami. The Washington, D.C., contingent just got in line, and some citizens of Phoenix, Ariz., and northern New Jersey have arrived. Then there are the groups from Indianapolis, Buffalo and Vancouver, British Columbia.

"Go from East to West, North to South," American League President Dr. Bobby Brown says. "I'd be surprised if we didn't hear from all of them."

Major league baseball studies future expansion

Associated Press

"When? I feel it will be soon, but by that I mean over the next two to five years. Exactly when, I can't predict. " Commissioner Peter Ueberroth says. "Ueberroth says. "When? I feel it will be soon, but by that I mean over the next two to five years. Exactly when, I can't predict. " Commissioner Peter Ueberroth says.

The questions are when and where. The owners will have to determine. "Bob looks for perfection. I don't think he's been on an albatross," A. McGuire, referring to the reason why he has won three technical fouls and angrily reprimanded by the Big Ten Conference, said Tuesday.

"Every other coach is happy when they win. But Coach Knight seems only content when it's done right. You'd set certain games, they'll be 20 up and he's going on like a Neanderthal man. He's coaching against the game. He doesn't know how to accept mediocrity."

McGuire said the U.S. gold medal team in the Los Angeles Olympics last summer was reprimanded by the Big Ten Conference in the fall for missing the annual pre-season coaches' meetings. And Knight faces possible further regulation from last Saturday's ejection from a game against Purdue, when he received three technical fouls and angrily threw a chair across the court.

"I think the best way to determine the competition is not to look at who is the most aggressive but which one of the cities represent the most logical expansion areas," Stone says.

McGuire comments on Knight's troubles this year as Hoosier coach

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS - Indiana basketball coach Bob Knight appears to be on an emotional roller coaster; and his uncompromising demand for perfection "might eventually become an albatross," at McGuire said Tuesday.

"Bob looks for perfection. I don't think he's been on an albatross," McGuire said. "You can't get to that level. You're right. But Coach Knight's indication that coaching them in L.A. It wouldn't have been that much of a thing coaching them in Tokyo, or London, or Munich, or Mexico City. But this was in your own backyard (with the Olympic Trials in Bloomington) and it was a long, drawn out run for Knight.

"Obviously something will be done," McGuire continued. "I don't know what."

McGuire described an interview with Knight that took place in Montagu a week after the Olympics.

"I know that in coaching - even when I was coaching, and I was one of the relaxed ones - your neck's gonna pop out and there's a tenseness in your shoulders. I can just imagine (the strain on Knight). He's really put three seasons back to back with a bust out, without getting away from it. I think that might be a major contributing factor," McGuire said.

On Sunday, Knight apologized for the incident in a formal statement released through the university's public relations office. Athletic Director Ralph Floyd is preparing a report to the Big Ten, which will then decide what action, if any, to take, Commissioner Wayne Duke said.

McGuire said Knight's indication that the incident stemmed from his frustration with Big Ten officiating is plausible.

"Bob looks for perfection. I don't think he's been on an albatross," McGuire said. "You can't get to that level. You're right. But Coach Knight's indication that coaching them in L.A. It wouldn't have been that much of a thing coaching them in Tokyo, or London, or Munich, or Mexico City. But this was in your own backyard (with the Olympic Trials in Bloomington) and it was a long, drawn out run for Knight.

"Obviously something will be done," McGuire continued. "I don't know what."

McGuire described an interview with Knight that took place in Montagu a week after the Olympics.

"I know that in coaching - even when I was coaching, and I was one of the relaxed ones - your neck's gonna pop out and there's a tenseness in your shoulders. I can just imagine (the strain on Knight). He's really put three seasons back to back with a bust out, without getting away from it. I think that might be a major contributing factor," McGuire said.

On Sunday, Knight apologized for the incident in a formal statement released through the university's public relations office. Athletic Director Ralph Floyd is preparing a report to the Big Ten, which will then decide what action, if any, to take, Commissioner Wayne Duke said.

McGuire said Knight's indication that the incident stemmed from his frustration with Big Ten officiating is plausible.

"Bob looks for perfection. I don't think he's been on an albatross," McGuire said. "You can't get to that level. You're right. But Coach Knight's indication that coaching them in L.A. It wouldn't have been that much of a thing coaching them in Tokyo, or London, or Munich, or Mexico City. But this was in your own backyard (with the Olympic Trials in Bloomington) and it was a long, drawn out run for Knight.

"Obviously something will be done," McGuire continued. "I don't know what."

McGuire described an interview with Knight that took place in Montagu a week after the Olympics.

"I know that in coaching - even when I was coaching, and I was one of the relaxed ones - your neck's gonna pop out and there's a tenseness in your shoulders. I can just imagine (the strain on Knight). He's really put three seasons back to back with a bust out, without getting away from it. I think that might be a major contributing factor," McGuire said.

On Sunday, Knight apologized for the incident in a formal statement released through the university's public relations office. Athletic Director Ralph Floyd is preparing a report to the Big Ten, which will then decide what action, if any, to take, Commissioner Wayne Duke said.

McGuire said Knight's indication that the incident stemmed from his frustration with Big Ten officiating is plausible.

"Bob looks for perfection. I don't think he's been on an albatross," McGuire said. "You can't get to that level. You're right. But Coach Knight's indication that coaching them in L.A. It wouldn't have been that much of a thing coaching them in Tokyo, or London, or Munich, or Mexico City. But this was in your own backyard (with the Olympic Trials in Bloomington) and it was a long, drawn out run for Knight.

"Obviously something will be done," McGuire continued. "I don't know what."

McGuire described an interview with Knight that took place in Montagu a week after the Olympics.

"I know that in coaching - even when I was coaching, and I was one of the relaxed ones - your neck's gonna pop out and there's a tenseness in your shoulders. I can just imagine (the strain on Knight). He's really put three seasons back to back with a bust out, without getting away from it. I think that might be a major contributing factor," McGuire said.

On Sunday, Knight apologized for the incident in a formal statement released through the university's public relations office. Athletic Director Ralph Floyd is preparing a report to the Big Ten, which will then decide what action, if any, to take, Commissioner Wayne Duke said.

McGuire said Knight's indication that the incident stemmed from his frustration with Big Ten officiating is plausible.

"Bob looks for perfection. I don't think he's been on an albatross," McGuire said. "You can't get to that level. You're right. But Coach Knight's indication that coaching them in L.A. It wouldn't have been that much of a thing coaching them in Tokyo, or London, or Munich, or Mexico City. But this was in your own backyard (with the Olympic Trials in Bloomington) and it was a long, drawn out run for Knight.

"Obviously something will be done," McGuire continued. "I don't know what."

McGuire described an interview with Knight that took place in Montagu a week after the Olympics.

"I know that in coaching - even when I was coaching, and I was one of the relaxed ones - your neck's gonna pop out and there's a tenseness in your shoulders. I can just imagine (the strain on Knight). He's really put three seasons back to back with a bust out, without getting away from it. I think that might be a major contributing factor," McGuire said.

On Sunday, Knight apologized for the incident in a formal statement released through the university's public relations office. Athleti
Castaneda contributes both talent and spirit to Saint Mary's fencing

By ANDREA LAFENIERE
Sportswriter

Six years of experience has put senior Mary Ann Castaneda at the top of the Saint Mary's fencing team. Castaneda is currently the team captain for the Belles and holds a season record of 38-18. According to Coach Mike Wells, "Mary Ann's good. She's very hard worker and a real plus for the team." "It's not only the team captain but also the team leader and has been from the day she set foot on the Saint Mary's campus," says Notre Dame fencing coach Mike DeCicco who also helps out the Belles. "She gives selflessly of herself to all the folks on the Saint Mary's team."

Castaneda began fencing as a junior at Culver Girls Academy in Indiana and was named team captain her senior year. "Our team did well, considering, we were in high school where there's not much competition," says Castaneda.

The Belles' varsity fencing team was the primary reason that Castaneda decided to apply to Saint Mary's, although she also chose the college because of its small enrollment. "I like the atmosphere here," explains the economics/spanish double major. "If you need help, you can get it. We get a lot of more attention here than at a big school. I was used to that and I wanted to come into it."

Castaneda joined the SMF fencing team her freshman year and has been competing since then. As team captain she has had a big influence on the other team members. "I try to appreciate Mary Ann's encouragement and her leadership," says sophomore Mary Jean Sully, "the spirit of the team is going.

Castaneda has done very well in spots, as she went 6-0 against Case Western Reserve on Feb. 16 and had a record of 14-2 when the team traveled to Boston and Philadelphia earlier in the season. "My record for the eastern trip was good," she comments, "I was very happy with my fencing at that time. As the season has progressed, I've been caught up in everything. I'm coming along, but with school work and all, I've been under a lot of pressure.

Castaneda hopes to attend the National Intercollegiate Women's Fencing (NIAA) Tournament later this season. "We went last year, and the coaches will decide if we go this year, depending on how we do at the Great Lakes Competition," she remarks.

Whether or not Castaneda fences for another school is still to be decided. She states, "Maybe yes Maybe no. We'll see.

Castaneda plans to return to California and work in the international department of a bank. "Fencing's not too popular in California," she says. "Coach Wells and I have searched for clubs there, but so far we haven't found any."

Castaneda is pleased with the fencing program at Saint Mary's. "The team itself is great and Saint Mary's supports us," she comments. "She would like to see the program expand, however."

"Next year there will be a lot of senior team members, so we need new students to put in a semester of notice and be very good enough to move to varsity," she says. "All it takes is attendance, skill, attitude and determination."

Coach DeCicco believes Castaneda has had a big influence on the SMF fencing program and the team itself. "Since Mary Ann, the success we've had at Saint Mary's for the fencing program and especially for the support of the team would not be what it is," he says.

"We need people for publicity and to get students to join the team. More than anyone else has been and is responsible for that.

The Observer
Wednesday, February 27, 1985 — page 10

Cochiolo maintains top of the Saint Mary's fencing team.

Women's Box Score

Portland losesDupree to serious knee injury

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Marcus Dupree, the 86 million Portland Breakers' running back who has been out since December. No wonder he is being treated here as the biggest thing to hit New York since that big ape in 1946. Dupree is little more than a prelude to the big event: the game between two of college basketball's top teams. The Associated Press reports.

Cochiolo and her teammates look forward to improving on last year's performance last year. I'll probably lift

Portland loses Dupree to serious knee injury

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Marcus Dupree, the 86 million Portland Breakers' running back whose United States Football League career has stalled from one injury to another, will be out for the rest of the season because of a damaged left knee.

Dupree underwent arthroscopic surgery yesterday at Providence Medical Center for ligament damage. Although the surgery was successful, the knee won't heal in time for Dupree back on the field this year, Breakers spokesman John Brunelle said.

The Breakers intend to replace their superstar with Buford Jordan, who ran for 1,276 yards on 214 carries last year as a rookie.

"We'll plug him right in," Brunelle said. "There aren't many teams than can lose their big gun and replace him with another big gun. We're fortunate that we kept both of these guys coming into this season."

Coach Dick Coury said Dupree, a former University of Oklahoma star, and one of the highest-paid players in the USFL, had been "really coming along" after having no hassling problems in the past two weeks.

"Mainly, we feel bad for Marcus as an individual," Coury said in a statement. "It's extremely damaging to lose a superstar running back like Marcus, and we can just wish him a full recovery and hope that he'll be back with us next year."

The 20-year-old Dupree, who left school early in his sophomore season, was carried from the field Sunday at Sun Devil Stadium on a stretcher with just over two minutes to play in the Breakers' season opener against Arizona.

The 20-year-old Dupree, who left school early in his sophomore season, was carried from the field Sunday at Sun Devil Stadium on a stretcher with just over two minutes to play in the Breakers' season opener against Arizona. Dupree, in the second year of a five-year, $6 million contract, will miss the rest of last season with hamstring problems. He also missed most of this year's training camp with more hamstring injuries.
As the smallest member of the gang, Wendall was used as an attention-getter while cruising for girls.
Sports

Chicago - The Notre Dame women's basketball team took another big step toward the North Star Conference title last night by defeating defending conference champion Loyola 64-63 in a tense game played at Alumni Gym.

The Irish were able to hand the Lady Ramblers only their second home loss in two years (against 36 wins) and stay a game ahead of Dayton in the NSC race largely through the contributions of two freshmen, Sandy Botham and Mary Gavin. Botham scored 24 points and pulled down 12 rebounds, while Gavin scored two important baskets late in the game to come up with a big steal to seal the Notre Dame victory.

Gavin's steal with less than a minute remaining in the game killed the Loyola rally that had seen the Ramblers turn a seven-point halftime deficit into a five-point lead with 5:22 left. The point guard's two driving jumpers had given the Irish a 63-61 lead and her steal and a foul shot by Botham that ensured clinched for Notre Dame its ninth North Star title against one loss.

Coach Mary DeTélanou's squad once again relied on its strong inside game to control the tempo of the game. The Irish outrebounded their hosts by 16 in the first half, 29-13, as they built up a fairly comfortable lead despite 11 turnovers. With Botham scoring inside and Lynn Ebben and Trena Keys scoring outside, Notre Dame led by as much as eight points at the half.

The Ramblers, who had been blown out in the second half in last Wednesday's 84-59 loss at Notre Dame, emerged from the locker-room very strong, led by forward Jackie Harati, who scored 13 of her team's 15 points against interim Loyola, Loyola rallied back on the Irish lead, finally going ahead, 53-52, when Sue Wulst made a three-point play with 9:24 to go.

The Ramblers led reached 59-54 before Notre Dame bounced back. Ebben scored four points and Botham one before Gavin put the Irish ahead for good with her two baskets.

Team goes to Midwest Invitational

CHICAGO - The Notre Dame women's basketball team will send fifteen of its most talented athletes to the University of Illinois at Chicago today, to participate in the powerful Midwest Invitational. Venette Cochoilo, a junior and co-captain of the squad, will play an important role in the team's performance.

"All of us are really psyched for this one," says Cochoilo. "The conference championship means a lot, but the competition this weekend will be much more intense." The North Star Conference, as Cochoilo explains, has only been in existence for two years, and the Irish have captured the championship both years. The North Star was created by Notre Dame Athletic Director Gene Corrigan to provide a conference for the new team.

"Women's swimming was new to varsity sports when I was a freshman," continues Cochoilo. "I didn't come to Notre Dame looking for an intense, pressure-packed swimming program. We enjoy the sport, and we enjoy each other's friendship. It makes the time I put into my swimming worthwhile."

In Walsh Hall for the past three years, the attractive 5-9 brunette discovered Notre Dame on a trip to Wisconsin, where she competed on a national level in A.A.U. swimming. At the time, she was ranked twenty-second in the nation for her age category (15-18) in the 200-yard breaststroke.

Cochoilo is considering graduate school in psychology. She wishes to be a counselor for marital and family problems. As for swimming, she is eager to return for her senior year, when they will move from the Rockefeller Pool to the newly completed straight North Star Conference game. For more on last night's contest, see Mike Sullivan's story below.

Are games really games anymore?

Chuck Freeby

Irish Items

Hello again everybody!

Somehow during the weekend, the state of Indiana seemed to lose interest in sports. The basketball "game", the hockey "game", and some similar events were no longer games. They didn't even quality as sports. In fact, the only category some of these events suited for was organized mayhem. Despite that fact, let's try to look at these situations in a civilized way.

The trouble started in Bloomington, at that bastion of higher education known as Indiana University. The school's most renowned personality, a Mr. Robert Knight, was trying to perform one of his celebrated clinics in the game of basketball in his classroom at Assembly Hall. Sensibly, unfortunately some people in striped clothing were interfering with the execution of this clinic by penalizing some of Mr. Knight's star pupils. As any educator would do when his class is disrupted, Knight became incensed and scolded the perpetrators of this injustice. Then, as the class was beginning to resume, Mr. Knight hurled a chair at his colleague. Exactly what he thought about a chair combative Stu Knight was trying to get across to his pupils in this lesson in the art of furniture tossing is unclear, but it certainly is something you should accept at any institution of learning.

For instance, Mr. Knight's most favored colleagues, say a Mr. Richard Phelps, were to throw a chair across his classroom, how long do you think he would remain at Notre Dame? Probably not as long as it would take Coach Corrigan to get his term on courthouse at the Notre Dame bench.

This is not to say Notre Dame is innocent. It seems Mr. Knight's action spawned a wave of violence at other "games" across the state, as evident the other night in Mr. Joe Kromm of Michigan-Dearborn had entered the third period, and the fans were throttling to something considering that for many of the one hundred and five people in the stands, it is mark of that third century.

At this point, Mr. David Kromm of Michigan-Dearborn was found guilty of holding: an offense punishable by two minutes of solitary confinement in the penalty box. By the time justice had been delivered to Mr. Kromm though, several other offenses had taken place, which if committed outside a hockey rink would be punishable by fine to ten years at the state penitentiary.

Nine people were asked to leave the "game", thanks to various forms of fighting (assault and battery), swinging at the head with a stick (assault with a deadly weapon), and "molesting an official" (a penalty whose social implications we will not discuss here.) It appeared as though the players had tired of hockey and wished to try it's still a "game", you assume people are participating for pleasure. It's not, however, by slinging his racket across the arena in the general direction of a canvas. Obviously, Mr. Foo has not yet learned any lessons of self-control at Iowa. In the words of Mr. T., "I pay the Foo."}

V enette is a very enthusiastic swimmer and team member," he says. "As a junior, she has demonstrated a mature sense of leadership among her peers.

"We'll probably enter her in two individual medleys, a relay medley and two breaststroke events," he says. "Last year we entered her in the same events, and she managed four top-ten finishes. Her performance will be instrumental to our team's capabilities."

"Coach Stark has been a support to all of us," says Cochoilo. "He is a kind of mentor for the team. He is more than just a swim coach, because he also shows concern for the other aspects of our lives, like classes and family."

Beyond her career at Notre Dame, Cochoilo is considering graduate school in psychology. She wishes to be a counselor for marital and family problems. As for swimming, she is eager to return for her senior year, when they will move from the Rockefeller Pool to the newly completed...