Claim of commissioner clarified

By CHRIS SKORCZ

There is only one "acting OC commissioner," said Tracy David, student body vice president and chairwoman of the ad hoc committee controlling elections. "Doug Honeywell is the off-campus commissioner."

"He still attends the HPC meetings. I'm just acting. She explained that she got a letter from the student body treasurer (A1 Novas,) which was addressed to the "acting OC commissioner." "I didn't just make it up," she said.

In Thoman's posters, the fourth paragraph begins, "I am currently the acting OC Commissioner." Her classified advertisement said, "Elect current OC Commissioner Tracy (Race) Thomas for another year of O.C. Freedom!"

"I don't see why we need to break it up," he said, adding "If you look at other schools, are student government and student activities one big organization, or are they separate? I think you'll find the latter."

"We want to promote home-ownership," Hardy said, and he saw no problem in supporting sincere students who are interested in what NHS has to offer. "We are concerned about the housing conditions for students, and we are getting students who are interested in buying houses."

"I don't think class presidents need a vote," he said. "I don't think activities fee was no more a class issue than any other. Senator Tom Abood also thought class officers had no jurisdiction." nugatious agreement that well. Overhaul resolution tabled after discussion in Student Senate

By MIKE MILLEN
Senior Staff Reporter

After a heated debate, the Student Senate last night tabled a resolution calling for a general overhaul of student government. Presented by the Committee for Restructuring Student Government, and authored by Executive Coordinator Doug Wurth, the plan calls for a new senate to be composed of 24 hall senators, divided of class officers and hall presidents. It also contains provision to make the Judicial Council and Campus Life Council purely advisory bodies.

Lee Brounard, who was unanimously approved by the senate as the 1985-1986 Student Activities Board Manager, was unhappy with the proposed removal of Ideas and Issues and Campus Services from his jurisdiction.

"Student Activities Board has a certain role on campus. It's performing that well. I don't see why we need to break it up," he said, adding "If you look at other schools, are student government and student activities one big organization, or are they separate? I think you'll find the latter."

President-elect Bill Healy said the plan's purpose was to "provide accountability." Currently, the Student Senate is informed of the board's expenditures only at the end of each fiscal quarter.

Jim Domagalski, sophomore class president, and Dean Chervin, senior class president, both spoke against the exclusion of class presidents from the proposed senate. Chervin argued there were instances when it was important classes be represented, citing last year's proposal to raise the student activities fees.

Wurth disagreed. He said the activities fee was no more a class issue than any other. Senator Tom Abood also thought class officers had no place on the senate. "I don't think class presidents need a vote," he said.

Senators were generally divided on the issue of reducing the Campus Life Council to an advisory body. Wurth said, "We don't see the logic of student refundements being voted upon by faculty and administrators." Senator Javier Oliva was not in favor of that part of the proposal. He said the opinions of faculty and administrators on some issues are important.

After more than 70 minutes of debate, the entire proposal was tabled. It will be discussed in a special senate meeting scheduled for this Thursday.

Karen McCluskey and Ed Augustine, chairpersons of the Committee to Lobby for Student Financial Aid, said they will make postcards available, which students concerned with President Reagan's proposed budget cuts could fill out.

The pre-addressed, pre-stamped cards will be in the dining halls Sunday and Monday.

Program provides an alternative for off-campus housing

By TIMOTHY GIANOTTI
Senior Staff Reporter

Neighborhood Housing Services of South Bend is offering a new alternative to students who wish to live off-campus: the purchase of their own homes.

"Housing can be acquired at rental market rates," said NHS Executive Director Bill Hardy. "It is an excellent way to get started, and then you can start building equity. It is very affordable housing with tremendous potential.

Both of these areas are "target areas" for NHS, a non-profit corporation which has been dedicated to the revitalization of South Bend neighborhoods since 1979. The near-northwest neighborhood was the first community in the city to be targeted, and while work is still going strong there, NHS has decided to move into the north-east as well.

"We want to promote home-ownership," Hardy said, and he saw no problem in supporting sincere students who are interested in what NHS has to offer. "We are concerned about the housing conditions for students, and we are getting students who are interested in buying houses."

"It is a complete neighborhood program," said Hardy. It involves the participation of local financial institutions, businesses, real estate

Financial assistance, said Hardy, involves working with lending institutions to design loans which will conform to the needs of each individual, a factor which makes NHS programs available to lower income families and individuals who would otherwise fail to qualify for a loan.

Financial assistance also involves personal budget and financial counseling. The Observer/Michael Griffin

Seventh ticket named in class race, previously omitted by Cathy David

BY CHRIS SKORCZ
Staff Reporter

There is a seventh ticket running for next year's sophomore class leadership. This ticket is composed of Steve Lowrey, Carrie Roberts, Kevin Gilmore, and Ann Shipman.

Speaking for the ticket, vice presidential candidate Roberts said, "Our main idea is in a service project for the needy in South Bend around Christmas. As far as social functions, we want to have a Winter Carnival, a sort of winter time An Tostal."

"Since we are the first class to have to deal with the alcohol policy for four years, we are encouraging non-alcoholic alternatives. We also applaud the efforts of the student government to have more non-alcoholic alternatives." He noted that the ticket's interest in the issue is part of the educational division of the campus and the community's youth leaders.

Student Body Vice President Cathy David explained the absence of the Lowrey ticket as "nothing more than an oversight on my part. I am sorry."

Of the former ticket she said, "I hope to resume Little Sibs' weekend. We want to establish a sophomore class loan fund like the fund Morrissey has."

Curriculum proposal changes meet with some opposition

By BOB VONDERHEIDE
Editor in Chief

A proposal to replace Notre Dame's two-semester requirement in philosophy with a four-semester introductory course met with some opposition during last month's session of the Academic Council, according to the meeting's minutes which were released Friday.

The proposal is part of a 17-page report issued last year by the University Curriculum Committee. The committee's report suggested some sweeping changes in the University core curriculum, including new requirements for two additional core courses, the fine arts category and the other in history or social science.

The Academic Council, which includes students, faculty and administrators — has to accept the proposals or reject them. The final approval is given by the Board of Trustees.

The council's meetings are closed to observers, and the minutes are published each month in the Notre Dame Report.

During the Feb. 4 meeting of the Academic Council, a representative of the College of Business said the proposed philosophy course during the sophomore year would upset the "timing and impact" of the college's current requirement of Information Logic and Ethics in Business.

And the College of Science argued that "the new format (would) adversely affect the essential connective nature of a configuration of science courses," according to the minutes.

The philosophy department, initially suggested the change, said introductory philosophy is best taught in a single course early in a student's career.

According to the minutes, other comments during the meeting also pointed out the potential problems in logistics for ROTC students and student who change majors.

Representatives for the ROTC program said earlier that the additional course requirements would overload their students, especially those in engineering. A subcommittee was set up last December to resolve the ROTC problem and should issue a report soon, according to the minutes.

The council also had some questions about the proposed requirement in fine arts or literature.

Father Edward Malloy, associate provost and chairman of the University Curriculum Committee, said studio or creative writing courses would not satisfy the requirement. He added that because a variety of courses would meet the requirement, "increased load will not be borne by a single department."

Final determination of which courses would satisfy the criteria "will probably be made by the Dean of Arts and Letters," the minutes say.

The council also discussed at length the proposal to place another history/social science requirement in the University curriculum.

"Father Malloy explained that the University Curriculum Committee was concerned with a perceived problem about the 'absurd' quality of the current curriculum," the minutes say. According to statistics on the Class of 1982, 16 percent of the students graduated without a course in history.

Several members of the council said why history could not be required alone instead of a choice between history and social science.

The council decided that the proposal should suggest one history and one social science, even though the requirement could still be filled by two courses in either area alone.

In other matters:

• Kathleen Maier Weisger, an assistant director of the Center for Social Concerns, "spoke strongly for a requirement" in experiential learning. Malloy said his committee "could not support a requirement" but definitely supported student volunteer work.

• A segment on drug and alcohol use will be incorporated into the physical education curriculum according to the minutes. "A brief discussion followed on the merits of PE at a sport-oriented place like Notre Dame."

• A foreign language course will not be required because of a "nigglingly structured curriculum, especially in professions-oriented colleges." Father Theodore Hesburgh, University president, reiterated his belief that foreign languages can be self-taught.

ATT lines stop calls from Domers

By AMY BAKER
News Staff

Notre Dame students were unable to reach out and touch anyone last Thursday afternoon because of repair work on an ATT trunk line.

"We rarely have problems with the phone system. What happened last Thursday was an accident," said Edward Hums, assistant comptroller for the University.

The problem that occurred last Thursday prevented students from making long distance phone calls from the student system Ron Wagner, a Kresan Hall junior, said he tried to call home Thursday afternoon to tell his sister to send him his credit card number, but was unable to reach an outside operator. Wagner then called the Notre Dame operator and was told the system was being worked on.

According to Hums, Indiana Bell worked on the trunk routes from approximately 2 to 4 p.m. They accidentally had fallen down and were being repaired by ATT crews. Wagner said students and were able to call long distance by 4:30 that afternoon. Indiana Bell completely repaired the trunks later that day.

Hums said in addition to working on the trunks, the Bell system installed additional screening. This addition prevents third party calling. He said there has been fraud in the past with students charging long distance phone calls to a third number.

Hums said that the Notre Dame student phones were the only ones affected and last Thursday's problem was an accident.

The shaded areas on this map of portions of South Bend represent the major target areas of the Neighborhood Housing Services. The NHS targets specific blocks to concentrate their revitalization efforts. (Shaded area on left) is bounded by Lincolnway West, Scott Street, Portage Avenue and Cottage Grove. The Northeast Target Area is bounded by Sover Street, Edely Street, Howard Street and St. Peter Street. Both areas are not far from the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's campuses.
Does Rice serve the best interests of the campus?

Few issues in America today generate more controversy than abortion. Debate on the subject rages endlessly. In fact, it will probably continue for most of our lifetimes. Indefinite tenure about abortion is rare since most people have a definite opinion as to whether or not abortions should be performed.

Groups on both sides of the issue fight vehemently for their causes. For example, those who take a strong pro-life stance now judge candidates for political office solely on the basis of their abortion position. Pro-choice groups work equally hard to maintain "the right of a woman to control her body." For the most part, the debate, while at times heated, has remained non-violent.

Recently, though, violence has reared its ugly head. Radical opponents of abortion, frustrated by their inability to stop what they label genocide, have taken matters into their own hands. Bombing clinics and offices where abortions are performed. Twenty-four such bombings occurred in 1984. The Army of God, East Coast Division, the group which claimed responsibility for an attack on a clinic in West Virginia, December 2, that may have warned that the attacks will continue until they succeed in killing those who provide abortions.

On Jan. 5 of this year, President Reagan condemned the bombings as "violent, un­ legal activities" and pledged that the per­ petrators would be brought to justice.

The National Right to Life Committee condemned Reagan's condemnation. President of the group, John C. Wilke, said, "If we were to ask the exact tactics of those who promote abortion by using violence ourselves, we would surely destroy the very ethic and rep­utation of our pro-life movement.

"Four people face trial later this month in U.S. District Court in Pensacola, Fla., accused of committing a series of bombings in that area last year. Charles Rice, professor at the Notre Dame Law School, along with two others with ties to Notre Dame, have been charged with the crime.

"It is the East Coast Division, which does little to serve the anti-abortion cause. For a Notre Dame professor to offer to defend those responsible gives those lunatics in Florida credibility they do not deserve."

The bombing of abortion clinics may seem more dangerous in the eyes of some pro­ life proponents. However, it remains illegal under federal law and is a reprehensible action which does little to serve the anti-abortion cause. For a Notre Dame professor to offer to defend those responsible gives those lunatics in Florida credibility they do not deserve (one of the accused, when turning himself in, said he received a direct order from God)." Notre Dame students are constantly reminded by the administration that they rep­ resent the good name of the school wherever they go. Students even have been threatened with expulsion for actions occurring out of town during vacation periods. This, some feel, is going too far. But given that it is current Notre Dame policy, shouldn't the same standard apply to faculty? Does Rice serve the best interests of Notre Dame by his actions?

CUTTING WON'T SAVE ABUSE OF FINANCIAL AID

Not going to the beach for spring break?

Hoping to buy a car this summer?

Not so fast, friends. William Bennett, the new secretary of education, thinks you're trying to pull a fast one. Get a student loan and hop off to the Bahamas leaving David Stockman holding the bag.

As a remedy, Bennett says cut. And that's exactly what his boss says too. President Reagan has proposed a decrease of 25 percent in all student aid programs, including a plan to deny Guaranteed Student Loans to families earning more than $32,500 a year. The proposal also would limit Pell Grants, Work/Study awards and other federal aid only to those families who make $25,000 or less.

A study by the American Council on Education predicts 460,000 students (or 14 percent of those students receiving loans) would lose their GSLs. Private colleges, including Notre Dame, say that 50 percent of their students who receive GSLs would be affected if Congress accepts the cuts.

Bennett's callous attitude has intensified the opposition to Reagan's deficit-reducing plan. At his first press conference last month, Bennett went to great lengths to show his contempt for college students. He stated, "There may be some reason for hope, perhaps, that their demands may be more easily met this year in a more important way - a more effective way than through the tax dollar."

The cuts, he said, "may require, for some students, divestiture of certain sorts - stereo divestiture, automobile divestiture, three-weeks-at-the-beach divestiture."

Students, Bennett said, are just going to have to get used to the idea that not everyone can go to expensive, private colleges. "The administration wants to help the students who might not go to college at all," he said. Others will have to tighten their belts. "And tightening the belt," Bennett added, "might have the effect of sharpening the mind."

Reagan's proposal and Bennett's loose tongue, however, have drawn much criticism, and the plan to cut student aid doesn't hold much support in Congress, according to Joseph Russo, director of financial aid at Notre Dame. Indiana University's student government called for Bennett's resignation, as has national columnist David Broder. And Sen. Robert Stafford (R-Vt.) said, "If I were he, I would make these kinds of statements, he would not be the secretary of education."

But the main brunt of criticism should be aimed at Reagan, whose myopic approach to budget cutting will only preserve abuses in the system. Instead of cutting off - and cutting out - qualified students, Reagan should have Bennett direct his energies away from his mouth to his brain so as to study more sensible alternatives, such as:

• Requiring loan payments by lenders to be made in two installments: one for the first semester, another for the second. This would serve as another check against those students hoping to finance spring break off Uncle Sam.

• Changing the federal law that allows college students to declare themselves financially independent. Independent students are eligible for more aid, and many dependent students who are calling themselves independent are abusing the system. This abuse especially has gotten out of hand at lower-cost colleges.

• Revamping the law that allows any student whose family earns less than $30,000 to receive a GSL. No-questions-asked. Approximately 40 percent of today's college students - including many who fall below the $30,000 cutoff - are local, inexpensive college. Why should these students receive $2,500 a year when they haven't really proven a need?

• Decreasing the special allowance the federal government pays lenders from 5.5 percent to 5 percent. While some smaller lenders might drop out, the GSL program still would be too profitable for larger banks to do so. And millions of federal dollars would be saved.

The answer, Mr. Bennett and Mr. Reagan, is not so much to cut as it is to restructure. Abuses within the GSL program occur in all income brackets. A $32,500 cutoff misses the point - and the problem.

As Russo says, "Before we start using the sledge hammer to kill the fly, let's get some common-sense suggestions."

The scoop on the spring fashion forecast

Maureen Farley
features staff writer

There is something so charming, so utterly romantic about spring. Every little thing seems new and fresh just waiting to be experienced. We are in the mood for a glorious change, a change of attitude, a change of lifestyle and most enjoyable of all, a change in dress.

Naturally we want to look fantastic. However, people all too often become concerned with dressing to create a certain look. They want to project an image not so much of how they are but more or less of how they wish to be seen. The best look of all is the look of ourselves - uncluttered, pure, and simple.

In Bazaar's February Issue, Ralph Lauren said, "My statement is that clothes should be the backdrop to the person. They should never dominate. I don't think the first thing anyone says to you should be about what you're wearing."

Now Ralph isn't saying that neon is out, not by a mile. (He isn't saying it's in either, mind you.) What he is saying is that neon shouldn't be such a contrast to your character that its glare (rather than you) is what grabs your viewer's attention. Clothes that accent your personality are key.

The hit of the season is big shirts. Bazaar says, "The idea is to let those shirttails fly over shorts or a straight simple skirt perhaps." A variation of this will be big shirt jackets that knot at the hip or relaxed multi-level layering for a cooler, sophisticated look.

Colors are both bright and muted, but a particular emphasis is placed upon the same hazy whitened look in the women's fashions. It's a distinctly masculine appeal but slightly more casual than we have seen in the past. Fashion should be pleasurable. Dressing is so closely tied with how we feel about ourselves that we ought to dress in order to express ourselves not a fashion image. Leave the images to the store mannequins. Ralph Lauren, Esprit, and Oscar de La Rente are successful only as long as we see ourselves in their fashion lines. Projecting ourselves through our style of dress ought to be easy this spring.

Los Lobos' songs throb with life

Slash Records has brought to the American consciousness a number of electric, non-mainstream bands, like the Violent Femmes. Los Lobos is the latest of these, and their first full-length album, How Will the Wolf Survive?, is quite impressive. The group hails from East Los Angeles and along with producer T-Bone Burnett they have managed to synthesize their Mexican roots with rocks, rockabilly, and country into a delightfully uncommon sound.

Lead singer David Hidalgo lofts his smooth tenor in contrast to guitarist Cesar Rosas' rougher vocals on the sweet, often melancholy melodies. The material varies from the boogie-meets-blues of "Don't Worry Baby," the hardest rocking song on the album to "I Got Loaded," an energetic bluesy rockabilly romp which is also a MTV video.

The nostalgic "A Matter of Time," with a gentle strumming guitar, crooning sax, and bitter-sweet melody recalls the 50's. And "Serenata Nocturna," a sort of Mexican polka sung in Spanish and accompanied by accordion. However, the gem of this superb collection is "Will the Wolf Survive?" a beautiful blues rock number about survival in the world. The song opens with haunting images of a wolf on a frozen winter's lake running for his life. Later, Hidalgo sings:

> All across the nation
> Coming from our hearts and minds
Battered drums and old guitars
Singing songs of passion
It's the truth that they all look for Something they must keep alive
Will the wolf survive?

The Losobes seem to have created an anthem for themselves and all others who sing of the common man. Other numbers include "Our Last Night," a song that could have come straight out of Nashville. "The Breakdown," a dirty written with T-Bone Burnett and sounding like "60's rhythm and blues with an accordion," and "Lil' King of Everything," an instrumental guitar piece that has occurred in our country since the American Revolution. Bob Mould actually sings pretty well on this one. The song is about a guy who's in love with a girl who loves to read about and study outer space. He watches her watching the stars, and decides:

> I'm going to turn into a lens
> And focus all my attention > on finding a new planet and > naming it right after her.

Sure it's a sappy ending, but it's funny, but it's true. Grant Hart gets a tip of my hat for "Perfect Example" both contain bits of it, but for different ends. The former is an evocative ode to the carefree days of summer, when you get back to basics and hang around. Towards the end of the song, Bob Mould literally unleashes a guitar break that harks back to the Ramones' three chord beginnings but then the tempo slows and the acoustic guitar calms things down. This is a lot like how summer has to come to an end, and eventually, it too must slow down.

> Plans I Make" is a terrific hardcore jam, with its frenetic playing and superficial lyrics. It ends with Mould grunting, "Plans...make, plans...make," which sounds a lot like the Johnny Rotten yelling, "Prob...lem, prob...lem..." at the end of the Sex Pistols' song, "Problems." Apparently, the Huskers haven't forgotten their roots. Two of New Day Rising's songs contain片段es at today's society and the people in it. "I Don't Know What You're Talking About" hits right on the mark with these lines directed at belligerent types:

> There's more to life than being right and wrong
> There's something in between called getting along

> And "Folk Lore" laments the change

Punk fused with social awareness

Tim Adams

Record review

One of the most promising punk bands of this decade is Husker Du (pronounced HooSkur Do), a hardcore trio from Minneapolis. The Huskers specialize in a smart, unique style of punk that fuses the extreme power and volume of hardcore with an acute social awareness.

So far they've produced four albums and one EP, and among these, 1985's Metal Circus EP and last year's double LP, Zen Arcade, stand out as some of the best new music produced in the '80s. Upon hearing Husker Du's fourth and latest album, New Day Rising, I can safely say that they haven't begun to decline just yet. However, they do seem to be backing off a bit from their preoccupation with society's problems.

On New Day Rising, Husker Du seems to focus on more personal issues, such as friendship or lack thereof. Musically, they still crank their way through the song. "New Day Rising" links Husker Du's past to its characteristic stomping bass and new-style message.

To be forever haunted by the ghosts of "’50s rhythm and blues" that occurs after the title track signals a more flowing feel through the singing as well as through the hair-trigger bass drum and loud-cymbals, and Greg Norton's discreet but reliable bass help guitarist Bob Mould scream his way through the song. "New Day Rising" links Husker Du's past to its old-style playing and new-style message. One of the newer aspects of Husker Du's songs is their recent assimilation of '60s style into their own music. "Terms of Psychic Warfare," the album's best song, features Grant Hart rambling like a modern-day Bob Dylan. Hart sings about a broken relationship and the "psychic warfare" that occurs afterward.

It's all that the means they just won't justify the ends
To be forever haunted by the ghosts
Of all your friends
Sad, yeah, that's the way you're thrown to it
Concern can you think of anyone besides me?

The extra "they" in the first line, plus the words "yeah" and "'em" are very Dylan-esque.

Overall, "Terms" achieves a fresh
Get personal.

U.S. Olympic Committee leader dies while jogging
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA America's amateur athletic icon, the 57-year-old Kelly, collapsed Saturday morning and died in a Philadelphia hospital.

Kelly, a Democrat who served on the City Council from 1968 to 1970, was a lifelong rower, swimmer and amateur sports fan. He was an early chairman of the 1972 United States Olympic Committee. Kelly was a member of the 1948 Olympic team that won the gold medal in the 57-year-old Kelly, who made his mark in sports, politics and business.

Kelly is survived by his wife of 35 years, Lynne A. Healy; four sons; and six children by a previous marriage.

"Carl lost a couple of tough matches," McCann commented. "Carl really hustled, but both times, but was in both matches." With McCann's first season now complete, he must turn to the task of landing some top recruits in order to achieve his goal of a top twenty wrestling program at Notre Dame. "I don't think we could have done any better," McCann said of his first year at Notre Dame. "We did as well as we could with the kids we have here right now. When I came in here I didn't want to put any pressure on them with expectations I just wanted to get them to get the maximum out of their ability. That's a margin of success in my mind."
Bookstore Basketball registration starts next Sunday in LaFortune

Bookstore Basketball doesn't begin until April 9, but sign-ups for the 14th edition of Notre Dame's annual springtime tournament are this Sunday, March 10. Registration will be held from 1-5:30 p.m. in the New Orleans Room of LaFortune and the fee will again be $5.

Last year 512 teams participated in the tournament, with 22 late-comers on a waiting list. As the tournament staff is unsure whether it will expand the tournament beyond 512 teams this year, it is recommended that teams register early or risk not getting into the tournament.

Eligibility for the tournament extends to all graduate and undergraduate Notre Dame-blooded men, women, faculty, and staff. "Staff" includes any person who works for ND/SMC, for instance, maintenance workers and dining hall staff. Students must be currently enrolled to be eligible. No alumni or future students are allowed.

The Bookstore commissioners have made a few other simple rules for those who are trying to put together teams.

"You can play for more than one team. Teams advancing beyond the first round are free to use players other than their original five, but new team members cannot have already played for another team.

Only one former or present NCAA Division I basketball player, male or female, is allowed on each team. In addition, no more than three varsity football players are allowed on a team. But if a team has a varsity basketball player on it, then there can only be two varsity football players. Should one booth be unable to play for his team, another football player may be substituted for him as long as he has not played for another team. Varsity basketball players, however, may not be substituted for varsity basketball players. "Football players" are those players who were listed on the previous fall roster or on the current spring roster.

The names of two team captains and their phone numbers must be given at the time of registration, and the person signing up the team should indicate whether that team has any football players on it so that they may be scheduled only for late games. No games will be rescheduled.

Team names containing vulgarity (i.e., any of George Carlin's seven dirty words) or flagrant attacks upon other students will not be accepted by the tournament staff at the time of registration. Teams refusing to give an acceptable game will be assigned a team number.

The Bookstore XIV finals will be held on Sunday, April 28, culminating the week-long celebration of AnTont at Notre Dame.

Faces two day suspension

"I'm tired of the personal vendetta part of it," Dailey told the newspaper. "I'm not going to be Kevin LoFGherry. I'm Quinn Dailey." The suspension, the latest incidence in a stormy three-year pro career for Dailey, was levied by Bulls' General Manager Rod Thorn for "blatantly disregarding the rules of the team." It was announced shortly before Sunday's 11.7-11.3 loss to the New Jersey Nets.

Dailey also will miss Tuesday's home game against the Washington Bullets, but is scheduled to join the team against Boston Wednesday night.

Dailey has missed practices and team planes throughout his two-and-one-half season professional career. In the past week, he was late for a game against Cleveland and late for one practice. He completely missed a second two-hour practice session Saturday, saying his girlfriend had been in an auto accident.

"Who does he think he is — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar?" Thorn asked after announcing the suspension.

CHICAGO — Quinn Dailey's lawyer yesterday said that the Chicago Bulls' guard will rebuff the team after his two-day suspension and has no intention of bolting the team despite his highly publicized squabbles with Coach Kevin Loughery.

"I think the matter has been resolved," attorney and agent Bob Woold said in a telephone interview from his Boston office. Woold declined comment on other aspects of Dailey's publicly expressed disaffections with Bulls management.

Dailey, the team's third-leading scorer with a 16.6 average, was quoted by the Chicago Sun-Times Monday as saying of Loughery: "If he stays, I'm gone."

Competition narrows as 55th annual Bengal Bouts continue tonight

By JOE BRUNETTI
Sports Writer

The 160-pound division saw no change in today's finals, but all fighters will have to prove themselves tonight when Dan Waskie meets Tom Coleman. Steve Freschi will have to upset number one seed Tom Har- dard if he wants to meet the winner of the Anzalone-Coleman duel in the finals.

Dave Packo, an 85 Bengal champ, will continue his quest for another title when he meets Kevin Hamer in a 175 pound semifinal.

The Irish shattered five individual meet records this weekend and established four new varsity relay records. Freshman Amy Darling won the 1500 freestyle and 54.13 in the 100 yard freestyle races. She also swam on the record breaking 200, 400 and 800 yard freestyle relay teams.

Women's swim team finishes fourth at Midwest Invitational Championship Meet at University of Illinois Chicago.

When quarter-final action of the 55th annual Bengal Bouts concludes tonight in the Stephan Center, 17 fighters will be eliminated from the competition.

Winners of tonight's battles will advance to the semi-finals. Joe Brunetti preview tonight's bouts at left.

Jimmy Butler said it best when he belted out, "the pleasure is worth the pain."

After months of hard work and dedication, the Notre Dame women's swim team was rewarded last weekend in Chicago as the Irish captured fourth place in a field of 13 teams. The Irish dominated the pool all weekend, the 15 member travelling team left in the competition.

"Guy wrestled pretty well," said Sark. "We got many outside compliments, said Sark. "I think it gives us confidence that we can compete with other teams that are stronger."

Too bad things didn't go as well for the Notre Dame wrestling team this past weekend at the NCAA regionals as they did for senior Don Heintzelman. Notre Dame could only manage a ninth-place finish in the Regionals, while Heintzelman finished with a more than respectable sixth-place individual finish.

It was not so much that Heintzelman finished sixth that made him uncompetitive as it was the second-seeded 142 pound wrestler of the tournament that garnered him respect. Notre Dame coach Fran McCann was so impressed by the senior's win that he called it "the upset of the tournament."

And anyone who knows McCann knows the first-year mentor doesn't exaggerate.

Senior Gay Locksmith also pulled off a sixth-place finish in the two-day qualifying tournament. "Guy wrestled pretty well," said McCann of his 126-pounder. "He had a pretty good year considering he hadn't wrestled for a long time."

The University of Illinois Chicago. Notre Dame asked 308 points in the grueling three-day meet, and the fourth-place finish allowed the team to carry its 1985 season on a positive note.

Since training for this season began in September, many of the' swimmers are looking forward to resuming a normal schedule. "It will be nice to be normal students again, especially for the seniors who can start their senior year now," said Cocholico. "It was a long three days, but it was definitely worth it since we slaughtered our times."

"I think it gives us confidence that we can compete with other teams that are stronger," said Sark.
