Proposed funding cuts will take loan eligibility from 2 million students

By DIANE SCHROEDER
News Staff

A proposed 25 percent cut in funding for higher education which would cause students to greater debts with loans requiring repayment of over 15 percent has been one argument for the amendment proposed by President Reagan for fiscal year 1986.

These loans will be obtainable only through private institutions and thus will be inaccessible to many students.

Of the total $2.5 billion cut, $2.2 billion will come from student aid. Some two million students would lose their eligibility for federal grants or loans.

All other forms of aid would be reduced drastically. Aside from direct aid, categorical support programs would also be abolished, including foreign language and area studies.

The lower and middle classes will be hardest hit by the proposed cuts, effectively denying nearly every student who receives some form of financial aid. One argument for the reduction of the Guaranteed Student Loan Program is that students must become more responsible for the cost of higher education.

However, as Notre Dame’s Student Lobby Commissioner Karen McCluskey said, “Part-time employment and work-study programs are insufficient means to finance a full-time college or university education at an independent institution of higher learning.”

Run-off elections won by Georgi, McDonald

By CHRIS BEDNARSKI
Staff Reporter

Steve Georgi and Tom “Beaver” McDonald were victorious in yesterday’s run-off elections for sophomore class president and off-campus commissioner.

In the sophomore race, Georgi received 545 votes (53 percent) to the 532 votes (51 percent) of his opponent, Ted Smith. Each had earned 26 percent of the vote in Tuesday’s election forcing the run-off. The other campus race saw McDonald earn 162 votes (57 percent) to opponent Race Thomas’ 123 votes (43 percent).

Georgi said a run-off was inevitable, “All the candidates were well prepared and worked hard,” he said, and the time and efforts the candidates put into showing their dedication to the class.”

Through “perseverance,” he now plans to “work hard to improve the class.”

Student Senate votes to add two proposed amendments

By SCOTT BEARBY
Staff Reporter

The Campus Life Council will still have the power to have equal representation of the composition of the council in order to have more interaction with the senate, according to a vote taken last night at a special student Senate meeting.

The senate postponed voting on a third amendment to the Committee to Restructure Student Government’s plan to alter the current government structure. The amendment would put the Student Activities Board under direct control of the senate.

The overall CREST plan calls for one senator to be elected from each hall and from off-campus. The function of the senators will be to serve as legislators on four standing committees.

While this general structure has gained the approval of the senate, other portions of the restructuring proposal have not.

At last night’s meeting, the senate took up the issue of what role the CREST plan will play in future years. The amendment to the CREST plan called for a two-thirds of the senate to serve as a voting body on senate resolutions, as it currently functions. By a 9-5-1 vote, the amendment was defeated.

Arguments for the amendment were led by Executive Coordinator for Student Interests Doug Wurth. He argued that the CREST, currently composed of faculty, rectors, administrators, and students, does not need to vote on issues which the administration will approve or disapprove anyway.

Wurth further said Vice President for Student Affairs Father David Tyton does not need the CREST plan to make decisions. Documentation supporting an idea will determine an idea’s passage or failure, he concluded.

Other senate members countered Wurth’s arguments and were able to vote down the amendment.

Joanne Cahill, Hall Presidents’ Council representative to the senate, said, “student government has to work with the administration since they have the final say-so.”

Student Body President-Elect Bill Healy and Vice President-Elect Diane Lawrence echoed Cahill’s statement by saying student government would become weaker if the CREST plan were an advisory body. “Stronger proposals can be made with more interaction with the CLEM,” Lawrence added.

Healy did caution that he is thinking about asking the Notre Dame Board of Trustees to change the composition of the council in order to have equal representation of rectors, administrators, faculty, and students. This, he hopes, will make the CLEM more effective.

A second amendment to the CREST plan proposed that class presidents continue to serve as voting members of the senate. The senate voted by a 3-2 margin to defeat the amendment and exclude class presidents as voting members, as CREST originally proposed.

They argued that class presidents were elected representatives with specific interests, interests which they feel hall senators could not represent adequately.

The two also argued that their financial interest and their social role on campus were also reasons class presidents should serve as voting members.

The two-thirds of the senate which rejected the amendment saw Domagalski and Christy’s points, but felt that presidents did not need a vote. Wurth summed up the amendment opposition by stating, “It’s not an issue of how we listen to them.”

He said the senate will continue to value the input of the class even if the presidents do not have a vote.

Wurth also said adding presidents to the voting body would dilute the legislative authority of the elected senators.

“Adding people to the senate would help to bring back the ladder we have right now,” Healy said.

Determining whether the Student Activities Board should become a part of student government was the third topic of debate.

According to Healy, the SAB would become a branch of the presidential cabinet.

No major revamping of the SAB was to take place in the coming year, but the branch would be in the position to be incorporated into the standing committees or left as it is now after the CREST system has been in operation for at least one year.

Although Healy stressed that the SAB is functioning well, making SAB part of the student government would ensure better accountability to the senate.

After some discussion, the meeting was adjourned due to previous commitments by some of the senate members.

According to current Student Body President Bob Bertino, the third amendment to the CREST plan will be considered at the next senate meeting on Monday, Bertino is not sure when the overall CREST plan will go into effect because of senate differences in trying to decide the large task of what is best for Notre Dame student government.

March 15 is upon us, and if you’re a Notre Dame senior and haven’t turned in your commencement ticket request, there are only a few more hours for you to do so.

According to Rebecca Shuler, director of Notre Dame’s commencement, all seniors must turn in their commencement ticket requests, check the spelling of their names and home towns for the diplomas, and pick up their announcements by 4 p.m. today. Changes made after today will cost the procrastinator $10.

Each potential graduate who returns the form by today will receive four tickets. Requests received after today will be accommodated on a first-come, first-served basis.

Ticket requests can be submitted and the commencement program checked in the Registrar’s Office from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.
Student Saver's success depends on hours, marketing

Soap is a big seller. So is shampoo. And yellow highlighters. But so is Keenan Revue tickets.

But at the Student Saver store, soap is sold out. Ap­proval to stock highlighters is being sought from the administration. Meanwhile, however, fills several shelves.

Free enterprise, one might suspect, is off to a shaky start on the second floor of LaFortune. Open now at most two months, the Student Saver averages only $50 in daily sales volume. Customers trickle in spasmodically, he says, but he and Schimpf, manager of the store, harbors no doubts about the future of the Student Activity Board's latest retail outlet. "We will be in operation next year," he says with capitalist confidence that would make Adam Smith proud.

Moreover, Schimpf insists that the inventory problems were an unavoidable part of starting a business. "People came in and said we don't have what they want, and that was dis­pointing for them and for us," he says.

Schimpf believes he has ordering down pat, but having enough goods on hand represents only a small victory for the Keenan Hall junior. Truly serving stu­dents means planning the strategy, and Schimpf mistrusts the inventory in describing the obstacles: "The things holding us back are our restricted inventory and our hours."

The inventory restrictions came with the store itself. As a condition for the Student Saver's approval, the managers agreed not to stock the same items as the bookstores. Therefore, any new good must be approved by the administration, specifically Father Francis Caffarel, assistant vice president for student services.

This week, Schimpf plans to present a list of 25 addi­tional products - including contact lens solutions, tape, and miscellaneous items - to the S.A.B. Publicity Committee. "It has to happen," he says.

But a little-known clause in the agreement may jeopardize the success of the store even more than the inventory problem. According to the agreement, "The Student General Store will operate during non­operating hours of the bookstore." Essentially, that means late afternoon (3 to 7 p.m.) not bad, but the store loses out on any chance of tapping into the lucrative LaFortune lunch crowd.

It is clear that for the Student Saver to achieve long­term success, an expansion of the hours of operation is vital. The store's second label products supposedly now do not complete directly with the stodgy Hamme's Bookstore's products. So having both stores open at the same time should not endanger revenue at Hamme's.

The best suggestion and one endorsed by Schimpf was to combine the operations of the bookstore with the Student Saver, having the combined unit open all afternoon. Such a merger would fit in with Lafayette renovation plans quite nicely and would lower labor costs substan­tially. "It has to happen," he says.

For short-run survival, however, Schimpf did well to seek a few marketing whizzes, because the cam­paign so far has been a typi­cally listless, directionless S.A.B. affair. Now two months into operation, many students still do not know exactly what the store sells, among other prob­lems.

"I think one problem is the location - a lot of people don't know where it is," says Anda Liepa, a checker at the Student Saver. Schimpf, an accounting major, says he has tried, but working with the S.A.B. Publicity Com­mittee - where marketing innovation stops at the table top - has been a taxing task.

"I've given them a couple of ideas, and they just didn't get the job done. Maybe some of those ideas wouldn't have worked, but it still is a little frustrating," he says.

The mood remains upbeat nonetheless. Shoppers are supportive, and Father William Beauchamp, executive assistant to the president, even stopped by recently to make a purchase and wish the store well.

"A lot of people ask how the store is doing, and if we're getting stuff in. They usually say it's a really good idea," says Liepa.

For Schimpf, the task at hand is turning that good idea into a good store. Succeeding means getting the goods, getting the hours, and letting students know about them.
Pedaling for charity

Sophomore Mike Burgoyne seems to be pedaling as fast as he can Fri., Sat., & Sun.

It was accepted after being voted in by the seven other banks in the association - First Source Bank, St. Joseph Bank, National Bank and Trust, Valley American Bank, Midwest Commerce Banking Co., First National Bank of Elkhart and Salem Bank.

Kelly cited lack of knowledge about the association and not knowing if credit unions would be welcome into an organization comprised only of banks as reasons for not joining the clearing house earlier.

Larry Wagner of Valley American Bank, who assisted the credit union in joining the association, said the reason no other credit unions have joined is that none have applied.

The association is a local organization in which members can clear checks and drafts more quickly. Settlement is made with the Federal Reserve Bank in Chicago.

Wagner said the credit union was admitted because they wished to be and they were unanimously voted in by the members of the association.

The unanimous vote, said Wagner, is proof the banks were welcome to allow a credit union into the clearing house.

Wagner pointed out that joining the clearing house not only expedited handling of local checks, but also cut costs for the credit union.

Kelly said this lowering of costs would allow for greater growth by the credit union and would prevent rising costs for students.

Saint Mary’s curriculum honored

By SHANNON OAKES

Saint Mary’s curriculum is not declining, contrary to statements that appeared in the South Bend Tribune and elsewhere. In fact, Saint Mary’s was one of the colleges picked to participate in the study of college curriculum across the country conducted by the Association of American Colleges.

“The Association of American Colleges picked the colleges very carefully,” said Gail Mandell, professor of humanistic studies at Saint Mary’s. “They were considered to be the best of their types.”

Saint Mary’s was the only Catholic women’s college to participate in the study.

“The project was on redefining the meaning and purpose of baccalaureate degrees. We had a whole series of conversations. We were asked to share ideas. Much of the report was built around our experience as colleges,” said Mandell.

The first draft of the report prepared at the end of the study titled “Integrity in the College Curriculum” was compiled by Linnea Vaccia of the English department and Mandell.

Three other professors from Saint Mary’s participated in the investigations. Margaret Cavanaugh of the chemistry and physics department, Donald Horning, department of sociology, and William Hickey, the vice president and dean of faculty at Saint Mary’s.

The Association of American Colleges had called for a retraction to be published in the South Bend Tribune appearing.

“The original reports were wrong,” said Mandell. “We were analyzing and going through (the association) the criteria to analyze other schools.”

Saint Mary’s has recently completed an evaluation and update of its own curriculum.

Grad student describes father's imprisonment

By CATHY ANN REYNOLDS
Staff Reporter

Haider Raza, a Notre Dame graduate student who is a father, is a "prisoner of conscience" in Pakistan and was arrested in January 1984, later moved to administrative detention in Lafourt's Little Theatre of the "irregularly horrible experience personal­ly, and in the realm of human life itself." This happened after he was sponsored by Am­nesy International as part of the Peace with Justice Week.

Raza spoke about how the govern­ment of Pakistan took his father, Raza Kamin, Jan. 9, 1984, from his home in Lahore, Pakistan, and the "next day put him in a cold, five by seven cell with no window, no bedding, handcuffed, where the next morning he was taken through a torture chamber to hear the screaming of others being tortured," without any official warning or rea­son.

Not until March 26 was Kamin's wife taken by unidentified men to see him in Islamabad, where he appeared weak and mentally dis­oriented, said Raza.

And not until June 26 did the High Court order the Pakistani govern­ment to identity Kamin's whereabouts and charges against him.

"My father couldn't possibly tell my sister of what they did to him," Raza said, when some of the family visited in August and asked about the torturing. Then, in January, Raza, his brother-in-law visited him and "pressed questions about the torturing."

Raza said his father had seen one of his friends "returned to death." The military had killed his friend "by tying him on ice and then his hands were nailed," when his father was in college in 1951. Raza said his father couldn't tell his son in-law of the tortures now.

Haider said when he pursued his father's whereabouts in January 1984 the U.S. State Department left him "dangling," and the "CIA being involved," the torture.

The Student Lobby Commission, headed by McCloskey and Edward Augustine, stresses the urgency of the pending cuts. Although college students are threatened by the proposals, they are not powerless, according to ANC Toby.

The Commission is launching into action this weekend, seeking stu­dent support for "the most crucial issue since the draft." During lunch and dinner Monday, and lunch and dinner Tuesday, students will have the opportunity to be heard.

People will be in the Notre Dame dining halls providing post cards to be signed and sent to Congress. The cards read, "Is there another way to reduce the deficit without ending all government assistance to over one million American college students?" To support opposition to the cuts, students only need to sign their names and add any additional com­ments if they wish. The commission will take care of postage.

The commission's protest doesn't end Monday. A memo expressing stu­dent support for "the most crucial issue since the draft." After break, from letters will be available and the commission urges students to write, call, fax, or even visit senators to express their concerns.

The Student Lobby Commission, which is reaching out to 2,500 encourages suggestions and new ideas.

McCloskey added, "These proposals will do much damage. Stu­dents are not powerless unless they choose to be."

 Observer names general board

Yesterday The Observer announced the selection of 11 students to complete its general board for 1985-86.

Dan McCullough, a junior English major, will continue in his position as news editor. McCullough is from Oak Lawn, Ill., and has served as The Observer's news editor since April 1984. He also has worked as a news copy editor and senior staff reporter.

Keith Harrison also will serve as news editor. He is a sophomore from Pittsburg, Pa., and is majoring in American studies. Harrison has been assistant news editor of The Observer since November 1984. Before that he was a news copy editor.

The features department again will be headed by Mary Healy, a junior Arts and Letters pre­professional and government major. Healy was named features editor in April 1984. Healy's past ex­perience at The Observer includes assistant news editor, assistant features editor and design editor.

She is from Westport, Conn.

Therea Guarino has been selected as executive Saint Mary's editor. A third-year communications and history major from Oak Park, Ill., Guarino has been an assistant news editor since April 1984. A government major from Robinsdale, Minn., Jeff Blumberg will head the sports department. Blumberg is a junior and is minor ing in the Arts and Letters Pro­gram for Administrators. He has been assistant sports editor since October 1985. Also, he has served as a sports copy editor and began covering sports for The Observer as a freshman.

Joe Murphy has been named viewpoint editor. He is a sophomore from St. Louis, Mo., and is majoring in government. Murphy's past experience with the newspaper includes assistant viewpoint editor and staff reporter.

Returning as photo editor, Pete Laches is a junior government major from Plainview, N.Y. He has headed the department since April 1984. Prior to that, Laches served as assistant photo editor.

A new position on The Observer's editorial board is that of copy chief. Frank Lipo, a sophomore from Highland Park, Ill., has been selected for this posi­tion. Lipo is an American studies major and has served as news copy editor since October 1984.

Bill Hilditchbeck has been named controller of the newspaper. Hilditchbeck, a junior accounting major from Syracuse, N.Y., has served as head typographer since January 1985. He also has worked as typesetter and typist for the newspaper.

Anne Culligan, a sophomore from St Paul, Minn., will continue in her position as advertising manager. A position she held since October 1984. Culligan is an American studies major.

Joe Murphy has been named viewpoint editor. He is a sophomore from St. Louis, Mo., and is majoring in government. Murphy's past experience with the newspaper includes assistant viewpoint editor and staff reporter.
He looked toward the church, one block from the Capitol, where King once preached, and said, "They've got new devices now. Martin and his aides following the march. We've got 20 years later we don't have any difficulty meeting you." Lowery said.

Wallace said race relations have improved in the past two decades but "we always have room for improvement. We will work toward that end." Wallace, a one-time segregationist who won a fourth term with crucial black support in 1982, said also, "I'm very thankful to the black people of Alabama for making it possible for me to do the only thing I know how to do - be governor of Alabama."

At the Capitol rally, Lowery said this week's 50-mile march showed how far blacks have come in 20 years. He called for a nationwide movement to prevent "a California cowboy from turning the clock back on racial justice."

It was exactly 20 years since "Bloody Sunday," when about 600 blacks were clubbed by state troopers and sheriff's deputies in a demonstration for voting rights in Selma. That Black violence inspired the second march, led by King.

Joining Lowery at the steps of the Capitol on Thursday was the Rev. Jesse Jackson, the former King lieutenant who ran for president in the Democratic primaries last year. Jackson spoke before the white-domed Capitol where Jefferson Davis was sworn in as president of the old Confederacy.

Jackson said the focus of the civil rights movement has shifted to economics, with poverty striking whites as well as blacks. Mrs. King praised young people for attending the rally. "We've learned that freedom is not really free."

Five Mexicans assaulted in Texas

"It looks like it was a robbery," said Texas Rangers spokesman Bruce Casteel in San Antonio.

The men "were picked up in San Antonio by two individuals," Carter said. "A deal was cut to haul these people up to Denton and they were robbed. Our information is they were taken out of the car and knocked down and were shot." Denton is about 35 miles north of Dallas.

Authorities were searching for two suspects believed to be driving a large blue vehicle. Carter said.

Comal County Sheriff's Sgt. Ed Mullins said he was led to the shooting scene after being flagged down by a motorist, who had put two of the victims in the back of his truck.

"One was laying in the road face down, and another one was walking from the other way, and one was back in the brush," Mullins said.

Unnecessary trips cheat those who might benefit

Dear Editor:

As Spring Break nears, the decision facing most students is what to do with the week of free time. Others, notably the seniors, are making decisions which will affect the course of their lives, that is, career or school options. This is a very important, even nerve-wracking, decision. It should be looked upon as being more important than it had been in the past because it is still sending out resumes. First, they are misleading schools and companies which may be on a tight budget and can offer only a limited number of trips to students who are actively involved in choosing their careers. Second, they are depriving truly interested seniors of much-needed job experience. One of the real jobs is when the cops are so willing to do the job of vigilantes when the cops are so willing to do their job.

I recently read an article about the availability of meat on Fridays during Lent. It is said that Poles admirably don't under-stand the Catholic Church's teachings. The ND bookstore as a social alternative

Rev. Robert Griffin
Letters to a Lonely God

If I were as faithful about going to the Grotto as I am in visiting the campus bookstore, I would probably get the same report as your own vision of the Virgin Mary.

If I were as regular about saying my prayers as I am in looking at books I don't own, I could tell Brother Andre, CSC's only beatified member, "Move over, Brother. I'm marching home with the saints."

I go to the bookstore every day, and some days I go two or three times. Looking over the last week, I found a newly published novel by Graham Greene's that I didn't know existed. Greene has been my favorite writer for many years.

I get as excited by a new book of his as I did in my days as a seminarian, hearing that the French had invented a new sin. Later it turned out to be a fresh wrinkle in a well-worn vice, but for a while it looked hopeful, as though the church had invented a new sin. It later turned out that if God wanted me perfumed like an even screen, He would have made me a fine tree.

Two hours to the thirsty: Alka-Seltzer sold in 8-tablet bottles is not a bargain, no matter how you slice it. And in buying them, you are in essence paying for the desire of ownership it arouses in you as a person of impeccable taste.

The bookstore's prices on Waterford are very reasonable, as comparative shopping could show you. Conan must have an Irish connection that gets us a deal on left-handed merlot like the box office to bring him home. Occasionally it's enough to have the pleasure of getting the books you want at any local shop outside of Fanny Farmer's.

I'm not being paid or rewarded for promoting the bookstore trade. As an old glutton who knows where the bodies are buried, I'm giving you advice to save you legwork. Some drug stores offer their displays of tchotchkes and novelties. But I can't afford to afford it, you can find yourself for the desire of ownership it arouses in you as a person of impeccable taste.

"Take the challenge!" Notre Dame students are more familiar with just such a phrase. Whether it be in the classroom or on the football field, they are constantly being urged to strive for the best.

During the past few weeks, an other group on campus has been spotlighting its efforts to motivate the student body. University Food Services is currently sponsoring "Festival of Health, A Challenge to Your Wellness," a program which challenges the Notre Dame community to eat well, exercise regularly and become aware of current health issues.

"The Festival focuses on total wellness," says Suzanne Farnia, manager of Marketing and Nutrition Services. "It deals with forming good health habits now and it deals with preventative topics. Whether it be in the classroom, for the best."

In order to raise the consciousness of the student body on "total wellness," several activities are taking place during the Festival of Health. "Eat a Better Breakfast Contest" is designed to allow students to suggest to University Food Services some breakfast combinations they would enjoy. Entries will be judged on the basis of nutrition and creativity. Five winners will receive breakfast in bed for themselves and their roommates.

However, any qualified entry may be considered for incorporation into the breakfast menu.

In addition to being a fundraiser for the campus-wide drive for MS, the MS Bike Tournament offers the opportunity for inter-dorm competition. The winning dorm will receive a $150 prize for the purchase of sporting equipment. The tournament is designed as an aerobic exercise that will hopefully motivate students to exercise.

Farnia suggests that college-age students have four or more servings of bread and four or more servings of fruit and vegetables each day along with four of milk and two of meat.

"In the bread group, complex carbohydrates are as basic as the four food groups," says Farnia. "These are healthier than red meats such as beef."

Farnia hopes that the Festival of Health will help students increase their awareness of their own "wellness" at this point in their lives. "Forming strong health habits now should be the goal of students as they begin to form their personal lifestyles."

"In the fruit and vegetable group is the most important. If you eat well in this area, you are bound to receive all the vitamins you need, so vitamin supplementation is not necessary" Farnia adds that broiled, baked or boiled meats are better to eat than those that are fried. Also, poultry and fish are healthier than red meats such as beef.

"People in the college-age group are making decisions on whether or not to exercise, who they will eat with and what they will eat. It's typically a healthy time, but it's hard for 19, 20 or 21-year-olds to know that they do now will affect their health twenty years down the line," explains Farnia. In order to raise the consciousness of the student body on "total wellness," several activities are taking place during the Festival of Health.

"The Festival focuses on total wellness," says Suzanne Farnia, manager of Marketing and Nutrition Services. "It deals with forming good health habits now and it deals with preventative topics. Whether it be in the classroom, for the best."

The "Festival of Health, A Challenge to Your Wellness," program which challenges the Notre Dame community to eat well, exercise regularly and become aware of current health issues.

"The Festival focuses on total wellness," says Suzanne Farnia, manager of Marketing and Nutrition Services. "It deals with forming good health habits now and it deals with preventative topics. Whether it be in the classroom, for the best."

In order to raise the consciousness of the student body on "total wellness," several activities are taking place during the Festival of Health. "Eat a Better Breakfast Contest" is designed to allow students to suggest to University Food Services some breakfast combinations they would enjoy. Entries will be judged on the basis of nutrition and creativity. Five winners will receive breakfast in bed for themselves and their roommates.

However, any qualified entry may be considered for incorporation into the breakfast menu.

In addition to being a fundraiser for the campus-wide drive for MS, the MS Bike Tournament offers the opportunity for inter-dorm competition. The winning dorm will receive a $150 prize for the purchase of sporting equipment. The tournament is designed as an aerobic exercise that will hopefully motivate students to exercise.

Farnia suggests that college-age students have four or more servings of bread and four or more servings of fruit and vegetables each day along with four of milk and two of meat.

"In the bread group, complex carbohydrates are as basic as the four food groups," says Farnia. "These are healthier than red meats such as beef."

Farnia hopes that the Festival of Health will help students increase their awareness of their own "wellness" at this point in their lives. "Forming strong health habits now should be the goal of students as they begin to form their personal lifestyles."

"In the fruit and vegetable group is the most important. If you eat well in this area, you are bound to receive all the vitamins you need, so vitamin supplementation is not necessary" Farnia adds that broiled, baked or boiled meats are better to eat than those that are fried. Also, poultry and fish are healthier than red meats such as beef.

The Milk Group

What makes a serving
- 1 cup whole, lowfat or buttermilk
- 1/2 slices cheddar-type cheese
- 1/3 cup ice cream
- 2 cups cottage cheese

Key Nutrients
This group provides the greatest percent of your daily calcium needs. Calcium is a vital nutrient at all ages for maintenance of bone structure. Milk also has a significant amount of protein, Vitamin D and Riboflavin.

Special Significance
The fat content of whole milk products could significantly add to the total number of calories and fat in the diet. The use of lowfat and skim milk products is encouraged, as these foods are more nutrient dense.

The Bread Group

What makes a serving
- 1 slice bread
- 1/2 cup cooked noodles or rice
- 1 small roll, biscuit or muffin
- 1/2 cup cooked cereal
- 1 cup ready-to-eat cereal
- 6 saltine-type crackers

Key Nutrients
The bread group, which includes whole grain and fortified products, is a rich source of the B vitamins. High in complex carbohydrates, this group is a good energy source.

Special Significance
Should be given to the selection of whole grain products within this group. Though enriched bread and cereals contain an equivalent amount of nutrients, the refined product removes most, if not all, of the dietary fiber. Fiber is a nondigestible component of foods which helps the digestive tract function better by providing bulk.

The Fruit and Vegetable Group

What makes a serving
- 1 small potato
- 1 medium piece of fruit
- 1 cup raw fruit or vegetable
- 1/2 cup juice

Key Nutrients
The fruit and vegetable group is the most nutrient-dense group, providing the most nutrients for the least amount of calories. It is important that a good source of Vitamin C be eaten every day, and a Vitamin A source every other day. Good Vitamin C sources include broccoli, cantaloupe, grapefruit, green pepper, oranges, strawberries, tomato and watermelon. Good Vitamin A sources include dark green leafy vegetables such as spinach, turnip greens, kale, apricots, cantaloupe, carrots, broccoli and winter squash.

Special Considerations
This group provides vitamin supplements unnecessarily.

The Meat Group

What makes a serving
- 2 to 3 oz. cooked meat (beef, veal, lamb, liver)
- 2 to 3 oz. cooked fish, poultry without bone
- 1 egg or 1/2 cup cooked dry peas, beans, lentils
- 2 tablespoons peanut butter

Key Nutrients
Rich in the complete proteins that your body needs, this group also provides a good source of iron and B vitamins.

Special Considerations
The meat group extends beyond the confines of meat itself, but only animal sources of protein will be complete. Vegetarians need to combine whole grains with beans, peas, or lentils to achieve this. Among animal protein, fish and poultry will provide the same amount of protein with less fat.

Recommended daily servings

- Milk: 2 cups or equivalent
- Meat: 2 servings or more
- Fruit: 4 servings or more
- Vegetable: and vegetable
- Bread: 4 servings or more

Witnessed the drama of the first-round tie into the finals. The top-seeded team in the tournament, where they went on to beat Grace into the losers' bracket, coming down to this final game.

Both teams started the game off cold from the floor. This could be attributed to championship jitters and nervousness. However, both teams settled down and traded baskets for the entire first quarter. Grace had a chance to build up an early lead but missed four out of five from the line. The count at the end of the quarter was 12-11 in favor of Morrissey.

Grace showed some signs of the dominance they exhibited in game one of the championship series when they built a 21-18 advantage in the second half, which iced the game. The entire team shot 15-17 in the second half, which iced the game.

The key to their game was their defense and dominated the entire game. Pascuazzo, Grace captained, was the big gun for his team, scoring 11 points, including 7-of-7 from the line. The count at the end of the quarter was 12-11 in favor of Morrissey.

Pascuazzo wasn't the only Grace player efficient from the charity stripe. The entire team shot 15-17 in the second half, which iced the game.

"The key to their game was their defense," said Steve Treacy, Morrissey captain. "They just didn't miss.

The game was close throughout, all they got up six in the fourth quarter. We tried to foul, but they made all of their shots, which made it impossible to come back."

Pascuazzo said he was very pleased with his team's performance. "We put everything together," he said. "Everyone on the team played well and we felt this was the only way we were going to beat them."

However, the Manor came back by playing strong defense and forcing their opponents to turn the ball over and missing shots. They scored the last eight points of the half while holding Grace scoreless for the last five minutes. The score at halftime was 26-21.

Although Morrissey increased its lead to seven in the third quarter, they then the ball away and took low-percentage shots throughout. Grace could not capitalize because they were too busy making their own mistakes. Morrissey made a charge in the fourth quarter. They tightened up their defense and didn't allow any second shots. Offensively, Pascuazzo was making things happen by hitting shots from long range as well as dishing off a few assists. Pascuazzo's 12-point effort just was not enough as Greg Diggins and Brian Kuehn scored 12 and 13, respectively.

The Grace rally was spurred by what had plagued them the entire evening: turnovers and poor shot selection. They reduced Morrissey's lead to one, 41-40, with a little over a minute left on the clock. Grace was forced to foul. Morrissey converted on their attempts from the line and that was all she wrote.

Morrissey ended the game with a 9-1 run, which made the final 50-42.

"They're a good team," said Morrissey co-captain Keith Veselik, "but we played our game and were a little more professional than them."

Morrissey's players ought to consider themselves lucky that they did not fall victim to the valiant efforts of this come-from-nowhere Grace squad.

The only thing is, don't count on it any tickets being left at that time, especially if someone like Purdie also is playing here. What it comes down to is that if the Irish are assigned to play here, not only will you have to buy tickets for all the games, but you also ought to get out there early in the morning to see the available tickets. The general public will have the same shot at the available tickets as students.

The stretch run was a Borkowski highlight film. In the last six minutes, the flashy guard made a steal, hit a jumper, drove down the lane for a layup, pulled down two rebounds and dished off three assists. The foul shots came after Borkowski was hit hard by PE's Richter. It appeared for a moment they were going to give Farley a 21-20 lead, but they had to fight for every rebound, every loose ball and every basket. Farley could only stretch its lead by one point, entering the fourth quarter with a slim 29-27 advantage.

"It was called 'the miracle on Juniper Avenue' by them who scored in the ACC Pit, 50-42."

Observe the guidelines set down by the NCAA which Notre Dame must follow. Single-session tickets cannot be sold until 24 hours before the first game, meaning Wednesday at 12:07 p.m. Whether any of this seems fair or not is really a moot point. Notre Dame must follow the guidelines set down by the NCAA. The University is only acting as the NCAA's ticket agent in all this, so it can afford to look out for its own interest only marginally, although it would try to get as many tickets as possible should the Irish play here.

If Notre Dame should be assigned to the ACC and you want to see the games, the best advice is to be at the ACC ticket office Monday morning at 9:00 (if not sooner) with your $30 in hand. It means the chance at tickets beyond the scramble route. Before the games break out their sleeping bag to buy two tickets, though, the Irish still must be assigned to play here. And, in all honesty, that is no sure thing. They will be in the tournament, but not necessarily here.

Seniors head to NCAA track finals

Football team announces coaching changes for spring

Ron Hudson, offensive coordinator for the last two years for the Notre Dame football team, has asked head coach Gerry Faust to reassign his duties so Hudson can devote more of his time to working with the quarterbacks.

"Ron felt there was just not enough time to do the job he wanted when it came to working with the young quarterbacks as well as coordinating the ideas of the offensive staff," Faust said. "He's done a super job with Steve Beuerlein, and he knows it's going to be important to spend a great deal of time with (Terry) Andrysiak, (Tom) Byrne and (Pat) Pesavento this spring.

"We want to be able to get into the fall with confidence in our backup quarterbacks," Faust continued, "and that's going to require all of Ron's attention this spring and in the fall. When it comes to planning the offense, the quarterback coach is going to be just as involved as anyone else, anyway."

Faust has appointed Mike Stock, Irish pass-receiver coach and recruiting coordinator, to take over the responsibilities of offensive coordinator.

"Mike has worked closely with our offensive system in the two seasons he has been with us," Faust said. "So I don't anticipate any real problems as far as what we do offensively."

Mal Moore, Notre Dame assistant head coach and running back coach, also will handle the Irish specialty teams in 1985. Stock held that job last season.

Other times in the past. With these impressive statistics, Constable won his event in five meets and finished third at the prestigious IC4A Championships and second at the Illini Invitational.

Patterson has competed in many events during his career, but this year has been able to concentrate solely on the long jump and high jump.

He holds the school indoor and outdoor records in both the long jump and triple jump. He set the outdoor record in 1984 and came on strong this season to set the indoor record. He triple jumped forty-nine feet, seven and three-quarters inches in the Indiana Intercollegiate Meet, to surpass the previous record by two inches. His leap of 25-5 in the IC4A long jump broke his old school record by eight inches.

Patterson has consistently long jumped over 24 feet and triple jumped 48 feet. The result has been five first-place finishes and several seconds in three large meets.

The quality of competition at the NCAA Championships will be tougher than at any other meet. However, both Constable and Patterson have jumped consistently all year and each has the ability to place high in his event.

Seniors head to NCAA track finals

The Notre Dame indoor track team has had qualifiers for the NCAA Indoor Championships in only two events in the last 15 years. This year, however, Irish seniors Lloyd Constable and James Patterson have surpassed the tough qualifying standards and will compete this weekend in the NCAA Championships in Syracuse, N.Y.

Patterson qualified for the long jump just last weekend at the IC4A championships in Princeton, N.J. He leaped 25-5 on his last possible attempt at 7-5, but his successful jump allowed him to participate this weekend.

Both Constable and Patterson held the Notre Dame record for both the indoor and outdoor high jump. He leapt 7-2 in an outdoor meet in 1982, while his jump against Iowa set the indoor record.

No other Notre Dame high jumper has cleared seven feet, but Constable has jumped 7-0 or better eight times this season and several other times in the past. With these

Seniors Quaroni and Janis have led Irish fences

By MICHAEL J. CHMIEL
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's fencing team recently finished an outstanding season as it went a perfect 25-0 on the year and captured its second straight Great Lakes Championship last weekend enroute to a possible 1985 national championship.

The Irish have always realized good fortune in fencing and especially in recent years. During the last four years, the Irish have compiled an 85-4 record. A common denominator in the success of the Irish during this period has been the epee-saber duo of Andy Quaroni and Mike Janis.

"Both of them came here and started on the same day," explained Irish head coach Mike DeCicco. "I learned very, very quickly how dedicated they were to their sport. Mike and Andy both became an integral part of our program."

Quaroni, born in Italy, came to the United States for his senior year at high school. After hearing much about Notre Dame from people both here and abroad, he put at the top of his list and decided to enroll. Currently he is a biology major with hopes of attending dentistry school at a major university.

"I had heard about Notre Dame since I was in Italy," said the senior. "When I came to the United States, I stopped by for a tournament and Coach DeCicco and the team made me feel real welcome and I liked the campus. I decided to attend, because I really felt at home."

In four years as a starter on the epee squad, Quaroni has compiled a 133-23 record and has been elected as the senior. "I think that's going to augur well for them in the future in being able to work with people because of the experience that they've had here."

Quaroni and Janis are unsure about fencing directly after graduation as they will be trying to establish their careers. DeCicco said he does believe that they will have no problems in future leadership roles with the examples that they set here.

"I gave them a lot of responsibilities and they handled them masterfully," said DeCicco. "In fact, I think that it's going to serve well for them in the future in being able to work with people because of the experience that they've had here."

Swimmers rank eighth in Midwest

After one day of competition in the Midwest Independents Swimming and Diving Championships at the University of Illinois-Chicago, the Notre Dame men's swim team is ranked eighth in a field of 12 teams.

Tim Bobdan led the Irish yesterday with a 2:04.88 in the 200-yard individual medley. His time was good enough for only eighth place to the meet, but it establishes a new school record.

John Koselka took sixth place in the 50-yard freestyle with a time of 0:21.95, and Mike Kenney won sixth place with 375.85 points in the one-meter diving competition.

In his case, he was pretty much the class of the team as a freshman," said DeCicco.

In four years, the senior has also been elected as a captain twice and compiled a regular-season winning record. With 155 wins against only 27 losses, Janis is third on the all-time list and showed he was a threat to fencing. With 155 wins against only 27 losses, Janis is third on the all-time list and showed he was a threat to fencing. Michael's case, he was pretty much the class of the team as a freshman," said DeCicco.

With 155 wins against only 27 losses, Janis is third on the all-time list and showed he was a threat to fencing. "I think that's going to be a key because no other team has the potential to place that many people on the all-American list as we could," said Janis.

In May, the Irish will lose these two leaders to graduation and will look to replace them. Coach DeCicco realizes that it may not be possible to replace such quality and that the loss will be great.

"It's going to be very, very sad this spring when they graduate," said DeCicco. "They do possess a great deal of honesty and integrity. They're hard workers, and they're very, very much respected by the rest of the team as witnessed by the fact that they're both double-captains."

is two wins over DePaul during the season.
The Flyers also will be trying to average their 66-61 loss to the Irish at the ACC, in last year’s loss which ended a nine-game winning streak. Senior center Dave Colbert led all scorers in that game with 22 points on 10 of 12 shooting from the field and 2 of 2 from the line. Colbert continues to pace the Flyers, averaging 15 points and 7.4 rebounds per game.

Women

The game was 80-97, against Marquette on Nov. 22, 1983.

Also in a record the game was the 703 shooting percentage of the Irish from the floor, as they capitalized on an abundance of easy shots over the defense. As could be expected, many Irish substitutes saw action in the contest, including 6-3 freshman forward Kathy Brumback, who scored 26 points and grabbed 5 rebounds.

If the Irish can stop Xavier’s one-two punch of forwards Stacey Land, the bench should get another opportunity to show its stuff. The 6-0 senior has scored near the top of the conference charts all season with a 21.3 points-per-game average and an 8.0 rebounds-per-game clip.

"Land is real strong and uses her strength well," said Irish head coach Mary Hammel earlier this season. "She’s not particularly quick, but she can power the basket and has a good touch on her turnaround." 5-foot-7 Shannon Sowers also is potent in the Lady Musketeers’ attack, as he is 5-10 sophomore guard Maureen Schrecker, who averaged 17 points to pace her team in the first game against the Irish. Perhaps some comforting notes for Xavier would be that there is little chance that the Irish can shoot any better than they did in the first game, and that Brumback, who has been playing more carefully lately, in an attempt to cut down the sloppy ballhandling which translated into 32 turnovers in that previous meeting.

The only other Flyer to make much of a contribution in the first game was junior forward Danon Goodview, who averaged 15 points per game. He was in with 10 points in the game at the ACC. At the other spot up front, the Flyers start sophomore Anthony Gram (11.5 ppg. 6.5 rpg.). The backcourt was made up of seniors Scotti Toney (12.8 ppg.) and Larry Schellenberg (5.1 ppg., 1.4 assists).

Ken Barlow led all Notre Dame scorers in the Irish victory over the Flyers with 10 points. Barlow, who has been struggling somewhat lately, will try to get back on the right track tomorrow.

"Kenny’s been having some problems scoring lately," comments Phelps. "A lot of that can be solved by him hitting the boards harder and going to the hole more often. He can do those things for us, he’s done them for us in the past, and we need him to do them for us in the future. And he will do them." The Notre Dame women’s team will hope to maintain the level of play which has led to impressive performances so far this season. This last week, beyond that, the Irish will be hoping for something else—their 20th win and an NCAA bid.

Men travel to Dayton Arena for rematch of independents

By JEFF BLUMB
Assistant Sports Editor

DAYTON, Ohio — Both teams will have the same goal: 20 wins and an NCAA tournament bid — when the Notre Dame basketball team clashes with the University of Dayton tomorrow at UD Arena (noon EST; ESPN TV). To be sure, victory in this match will have implications for both teams with tournament bids coming into play.

For Notre Dame, the task of winning will be even tougher considering the location of the game. UD Arena is a pit where the Irish have struggled (2-9 mark since 1981-82). "I think our biggest concern is knowing how well they play at home," says Irish coach Digger Phelps. "The Dayton game has always been a tough one for us, and this year will be no exception. Their crowd will be fired up. Their team will be fired up. And I'm sure they'll be ready."

But from our standpoint, we just have to go over it, we're in a good groove right now, and if we play to our potential, I think it's going to be a heck of a game."

Phelps has refused to comment this week on the NCAA tournament outlook. "I don't think the 64-team field 1不由得, the announcement of the NCAA tournament will have implications for both teams with tournament bids coming into play."

From Dayton's point of view, a win would give it the uncontented status of a matrimony of midwest independents in the first year of the season. The Flyers would be tied with DePaul in both overall record and record vs. the Midwest. "For us, it's a win-win situation," says Dayton's Matt Smith. "Winning will be even tougher considering the location of the game. UD Arena is a pit where the Irish have struggled (2-9 mark since 1981-82)."

Believe it or not, the 1985 North Star Conference did not conclude its season with that big victory over Dayton last Wednesday afternoon. But the Irish may as well have ended it then. The regular season finale, tomorrow at 3 p.m. in Cincinnati against Xavier University, should give new meaning to the word "anticlimactic."

The Irish, now 19-1 on the season and 12-1 in the conference, will be looking for their second 20 win season in three years. They should reach that mark with a Lady Musketeer team that will limp onto the court for the last time this season, with a 2-23 season and a last place conference mark of 1-12."

As Xavier, which began its second year in the NCAA, with high hopes after finishing 16-16 last year (3-7 in the conference), the season has been one which the Musketeers will want to forget in as quickly as possible.

"I can't worry about how many wins it will take to get into the NCAA tournament," the Irish coach says. "I'm not on the committee and I don't know what they are thinking right now. I've just told the team to win this game and finish 20-8, and then you do all you can do otherwise."

The days of the NCAA tournament may be a hot item

DAYTON, Ohio — Last October 15th the Notre Dame basketball team faced the University of Dayton. The Irish were a part of this year's 64-team field. Not that it was much of a field, as the bracket was set number one seed Mike Latz in the NCAA tournament was a hot item. But the Irish may as well have ended it there.
