Hall presidents call for student input in future evaluations of rectors

The Hall Presidents' Council is dissatisfied with the administration's methods and decision to remove Carroll Hall Rector Father Steve Tyson.

They want the students to have more input in the evaluation and hiring of rectors in the future.

Tyson met with HPC Chairman Kevin Howard before the meeting to detail the procedures used when hiring rectors. According to Howard, there are four steps which rector candidates need to take before the University will hire them.

The three major areas the University concentrates on when evaluating rectors are: character and qualifications, ability, and past experience.

According to Howard, anyone seeking a position passes to a first screen after they are judged to possess the necessary disciplinary, administrative, and pastoral abilities.

Tyson, along with administrative officials Father Francisco Cabrilho, Sister Jean Lenz, and John Goldrick, conducted a second screening. At this point, according to Howard, a final selection of rectors goes through another interview.

This interview is with a four-member team, which does include four hall resident assistants.

"Father Tyson did not specifically warn them, but they should have known better," said Howard. "They just don't know."

Borg said that he talked to the band before the show. He said, "I didn't specifically warn them, but they should have known better."

According to Kern, Tyson was the last straw.

"Blacks will crossover to vote for Jesse Jackson," said Foster, because they had been taught that it was a new experience every day." was the question Wednesday night at Senior Bar when the Urban Guerrillas, the Minneapolis band of the year, were thrown off stage by the management.

John Bowie, manager at Senior Bar said, "The band was blatantly offensive. That song — "My Mother" was the last straw."

The band opened their performance by asking the crowd, "Are you drunk enough to drink semen?" and abruptly ended their show with their song — "My Mother."

According to the band, the man who hired them, senior Bill Borg, had seen their show before. Larry Sahagian, the spokesperson for the band, said, "We've done the same show in many other high schools and colleges and never had any complaints. Bill saw our show and he hired us."

Borg had a different opinion. He said, "This was not the same act that I had seen. They were worse last night."

About being thrown out, Sahagian said, "We only did two things that were objectionable. If we had known it was going to be such a big deal we wouldn't have come. The crowd didn't want us to leave. They were cheering us on for more music."

Bowie disagreed. He said, "The patrons were disgusted. I received numerous complaints about the band."

Whether or not the Urban Guerrillas win their money, they were booked for Wednesday and Thursday nights at $250 a night, and they want all $400. Bowie said, "We are still consulting with lawyers about that matter of payment for Thursday night's show. We'll reach a decision tomorrow."

President of the College, both men, members of a newly formed ad hoc committee on College investments, said they believe investment may be a good new to the administration. "Up until recent years - because our investment portfolio was not that large - this was not an important topic," said Ruhe. "Now, with $35 million to invest we have begun to take notice of our investments. Granted, we are not a Harvard, Yale or Notre Dame. But we should represent the views of the College."

A new committee made up of students, faculty, administrators, and Sisters of the Holy Cross, completed a statement on corporate responsibility in investments two weeks ago. The statement addressed the South African issue, as well as such topics as corporate response toward women and minorities. This account was adopted by the Board of Regents last Saturday.

In this statement, the committee listed three specific goals which must be fulfilled when considering investment for the College. These goals were:

• Looking for and investing in firms whose mission statements and/or actions ensured dignity of persons and the quality of life and the environment.

• Considering annually at least one issue for education for all campus constituencies.

• Identifying current issues of social concern and recommending appropriate investment strategies.
LaFortune "business district" could meet student's needs

The student-run stores at Notre Dame are evolving. The latest in this evolution will determine if student-run stores will meet student needs effectively in the future.

"Our experience is that students can be very responsible running businesses," said the present A-1 parking area south of Fitzpatrick Hall of Engineering and east of the Post Office will be cordoned off and used for storage of construction materials and vehicles of workers. Monitors using this area for storage of construction materials and vehicles of workers are asked to use the remainder of the A-1 lot, B-1, or the stadium parking area. The Observer

The renovation of LaFortune will not solve every problem with the student businesses. The newest student-run store, the Student Saver, has the most bugs to work out.

Hoover said the administration does not have direct control over the day-to-day operations of the business. But they can influence the long-term direction of student businesses.

The Student Saver is an exception to the rule which prohibits the student businesses, according to the administration, from having control over their day-to-day operations. The position was created two years ago specifically to link the student business manager and the individual business managers. This link has brought a unified direction to the student businesses.

If the five current stores continue with the same type of merchandise in the future? The Student Business Manager Rob Hoover said changes are already on the drawing board.

The Student Saver general store and the Rock du Lac record store will merge if the administration clears the change, according to Hoover.

"If we combine the stores, it will help," said Hoover. He said the strengths and weaknesses of the two stores are different. For instance, Rock du Lac is in a high traffic area, which is good for a business. The Student Saver is in a geographic traffic area, but it sells products which are more essential for students every day living. A merger would benefit both businesses, according to Hoover.

The biggest changes will result from the renovation of LaFortune. The renovation will begin this summer and is scheduled for completion in the fall of 1986.

While the renovations are in progress, the student stores will have temporary locations.

More important to the future of the businesses will be their permanent place in the overall renovation scheme of LaFortune.

The renewed and remodeled LaFortune will contain a "business district," composed of the SAB businesses and the businesses presently located in Radio Hall.

"The renovations will help us immensely," said Hoover. "For instance, you can wander around here (LaFortune) for days and never find the shirt shop." He said, "It is to the key to the future," said VanRavenswaay. "Once they (the businesses) get down there, (the base- ment of LaFortune.) I think it will be a turning point," said vanRavenswaay.

Two SMC juniors chosen to enter U. of Chicago early-entry program

By SHANNON OAKES

Saint Mary's is one of twelve small liberal arts colleges across the country to be chosen for the Chicago early-entry program of the University of Chicago: Kristi Stathis and Maribeth Kehl.

According to program administrators, the varied backgrounds of the liberal arts students will enable them to offer additional skills to potential employers. "It will make a difference in the working world," said Stathis. "It's a great opportunity. It will help me a lot. I'm looking forward to meeting people that I would not normally meet," said Stathis.

At least two Saint Mary's seniors will not be spending the summer on the beach as they get a head start on graduate school work at the University of Chicago.

Kristi Stathis and Maribeth Kehl have been selected to participate in the early-entry program of the university's Graduate School of Business. The program, new this year, was designed by the University of Chicago to encourage liberal arts majors or students with a well-rounded education to consider attending MBA school.

"It's a great opportunity. It will help me a lot. I'm looking forward to meeting people that I would not normally meet," said Kehl, a math major with a minor in business.

According to program administrators, the varied backgrounds of the liberal arts students will enable them to offer additional skills to potential employers. "It will make a difference in the working world," said Stathis.

The program, which runs from April 25 and 26 Engineering Auditorium to May 19 at 9PM, 11PM, and 1AM showing of "The Making of Michael Jackson's Thriller," is designed by the University of Chicago to encourage liberal arts students to consider at least two Saint Mary's juniors could have been detrimental to me. This program offered me a much better opportunity to get into a school of the caliber of the University of Chicago," she said.

The program, which runs from late June to late August, enables undergraduates to receive MBA credit for the classes they take. The students are on full scholarship at this time. After graduation the students may defer for up to three years or enter MBA school upon receiving their undergraduate degrees. They are guaranteed admission.

In addition to taking courses this summer, the students will also attend seminars given by prominent businessmen. "I can get information from people that I would not normally meet," said Stathis.

Kehl said the University of Chicago said a business background is not necessary. The students chosen for this program have the confidence, intelligence and capabilities to perform well, she said.

According to both Kehl and Stathis, some background in business would not hurt because the program is on the graduate school level. "I think it's really an honor for the University of Chicago to include Saint Mary's," said Stathis. "I encourage people next year to look into the program."

Correction

Because of a reporting error, some information about the Tommy Shaw MTV concert was incorrect in yesterday's Observer. Glenn Goodwin, who is producing the concert video, has not worked with the Police or the Rolling Stones, nor on the movie "The Making of Michael Jackson's Thriller." That movie was directed by Jerry Kramer, who also will direct the tomorrow night's concert video.

Because of a reporting error, the speaker at Washington Hall last night was incorrectly listed. The correct speaker was Professor Tom Foster.

Center nominates educator of year

By CHRIS REDNARSKI

William Bennett, secretary of education, has been nominated by the Thomas J. White Center for Law and Government as educator of the year.

The award, named in honor of Thomas J. White, a 1937 Notre Dame graduate and well-known attorney, "annually seeks someone advocating educational policies consistent with those of Mr. White," said Professor Douglas Knies, White Center Director. White has continually advocated the financial ability of parents to choose between public and private education for their children, said Knies.

Bennett will speak at 12 p.m. Tuesday in the Law School lounge.

Bennett has suggested students meet aid cuts with "Divestitures of their children," said Knies.

Bennett has been criticized for his choice of Dr. Eileen Gardner as an official in the newly created Office of Education Philosophy and Practice. Gardner, in a 1983 paper, written while serving as an analyst for the Heritage Foundation, a conservative research center said "Laws for the education of the handicapped have drained resources from the normal school population, probably weakened the quality of teaching and falsely labelled normal children."

Gardner, and another Bennett aid, Lawrence A. Uzzell, both advocate ending most federal aid programs to education, said an April 17, New York Times article.

Bennett has even called for the elimination of the Education Department. In the New York Times article, Bennett would not comment directly on this, but did did say, "I do not think government would be worse off without me or anybody else in this job."

Bennett was chosen by a committee of very prominent educators from, among other places, Harvard, The University of Texas, and The University of Tennessee. "He has been a strong proponent of tuition tax credits and educational vouchers," said Knies.

Affirmative action does not support everyone

It was 1910. Baseball was on its way to becoming a national pastime, and the automobile had just recently been invented. Michael Flemons was a Notre Dame football player in the 1960s. The Flemons family did not receive the personal support they were entitled to. Where was the support? Where was the love? Doon esbury of Lester who were not injured? Attend the service but what about the friends Flemons needed his friends. To say otherwise? But I do know that Lester the players needed the practice and who am I last to judge the acts of another human being. There is love shown by sacrificing a player and family? It was 1910. Baseball was on its way to being a game of the masses. Five days blacks also could not vote, were legally negated and were not even considered equal to whites under the law. But despite this progress, advancement is still needed in social and economic circles, not just for blacks, but for all minorities. One program which is helping to achieve greater equality for minorities is called affirmative action.

Affirmative action is a program designed to give qualified minorities the opportunity to pursue their dreams, whether they be in the job market or in education. It is not designed, as many people may think, to prioritize less qualified minorities over more highly qualified whites. The intentions of affirmative action are simply to open doors to those who have had the doors closed upon them for so long. To understand the need for affirmative action, it is necessary to understand that doors do need to be opened to qualified minorities. There is discrimination in this country, and the following statistics on blacks in America, two years after civil rights, demonstrate this fact.

- Out of 2,100 daily newspapers in this country, two-thirds do not have a single black person on staff.
- Of the 2,400 predominantly white colleges in the United States, only 12 have a black president.
- Of the 9,500 commercial radio stations in the United States, only 119 are owned by a black person.
- Of the 9,000 television stations in the United States, only ten are black-owned.
- Only two to three percent of all the professional doctors and lawyers in this country are black.
- Of the 50 governors and 50 lieutenant governors in the United States, none are black.
- Only 5,000 of the elected officials in this country are black. That is one percent of the 500,000 elected officials in the United States of America.

Despite the need to correct the obvious imbalance in the social and economic realities of our society, many people are still worried that affirmative action keeps qualified people from getting jobs or educations because quotas must be filled.

This simply is not the case. Affirmative action requires, by law, that the highest qualified minorities be first priority over those who are less qualified than they. Quotas are simply an easy way to assure this. Quotas require that a certain number of qualified minorities be admitted to a school or offered jobs.

This is a simple, yet effective, way of preventing some of the discrimination in our society which results from unqualified whites being accepted to schools or being offered jobs simply by virtue of their color. Some argue that because of quotas there are more incompetent professionals, such as doctors and lawyers, because unqualified minorities are allowed to practice in various fields, rather than qualified whites.

In 1980, however, the American Medical Association announced there were two million surgeries performed by incompetent doctors in that year. Realizing that only three percent of the doctors in America are black, this means 97 percent of the incompetent surgery were performed by non-black surgeons.

Obviously, the problem is one of admitting unqualified,不合格, people, not just unqualified minorities. Certainly the admittance of qualified minorities would not result in less medical, or any other proficient, care. It is clear that despite the need for social and economic equality for minorities, it will not happen overnight. It did not happen in the first 20 years after civil rights and it will probably not happen within the next 20 years.

But equality will not just happen by itself. The people and government of this country must make a concerted effort to overcome the difficult task of helping minorities achieve equality. And programs such as affirmative action can lessen the amount of time it takes for minorities to achieve social and economic equality.

Kroeger does not grasp horror of the Holocaust

Dear Editor:

I was very disturbed with some of the comments Dave Kroeger made about Reagan's program to give a German cemetery containing 35 graves. The crudity of some expressions made me shiver. How do you call six million dead Jews "a bunch of bones lying halfway across the world?"

Have you ever tried to imagine what it would be like to get tattooed with a number and to see your family and friends gassed or shot by St. Petersburg? Your comment "Holocausts are a dime a dozen" displays incredible mental shallowness. Holocausts are tragedies not to be forgotten. The fact that they occur regularly should not mean that they are a fact of life. If people like you refuse to understand these events then our generation is doomed.

There are better ways to recognize Ger­man­ians. Reagan could have visited Roemmel's grave and others who tried to overthrow Hit­ler's regime. He could have honored the some dozen" displays incredible mental shallow­ness. Holocausts are tragedies not to be for­ gotten. The fact that they occur regularly should not mean that they are a fact of life. If people like you refuse to understand these events then our generation is doomed.

I can imagine that final night when the last Catholic priest ever heard of on earth, said the last Mass that history remembers.

He gathered a dozen Christians in a ceremony its beginnings sons from the Gospel of John, and then celebrated the Eucharist. After Communion and the Blessing, he blew out the candles on the table of the Lord - all that was left was the darkness.

The world didn't come to an end, of course. The myth of the Second Coming was one of the errors of history. It remembered.

The church was the repository of folktales. The days of the denominations were numbered. For all of them, the myths and legends of their founders were not any more successful in converting a new people than those foolish Mountain men. Every now and again, the rumors hung around like a ghost. Christians tried to be purer or less political reasoning went, and the lesser patriarch, who claimed to be in touch with the Holy Spirit, just shook his head, saying: "He tried it once. Dollars to doughnuts. He won't try it again." It's hard to propitiate the year that Christianity died. The priest who said the Mass. A room was killed by the Commissary, betrayed by one of the Communists who sat at the table as a last-day Judas. The priest knew he was one of the last of his line, probably the very last, unless God was keeping a spare that He wasn't talking about. The priest gave the left-over Eucharist to one of the women to take care of, as long as the Sacred Document endured under the form of bread. He hoped for a new miracle of the multiplication of loaves by which Christ would keep His promise to stay around always.

In the last homily, the priest said: "We have come to an end of the holy symbols. Jesus gave us this sign of His death and suffering. After His death, the church would celebrate it as the Living Bread that comes down from Heaven, the food on which the hungry sheep are nourished. From tonight on, God will withhold the manna, and the people will perish without food and drink in the wilderness. Of all the mysteries, the hardest to understand, Why, God, do you consider us so unworthy? The only answer He gives us is silence."

It wasn't a great curtain speech, though the soul-searching sounds sincere. It seems like a damn shame that God couldn't have left us something of Christ's message to hang onto. So far as we can judge, He took back all His grace and the last of His恩典 once. Dollars to doughnuts. He won't try it again. "I've never heard a rabbi on a talk show say, 'It's hard to pinpoint the year that Christianity died.'"

What lesson that seems obvious to me. I can only imagine the reaction of the devout Jew to the news that the Lord's passover was over. His promise to stay around always. His promise of forgiveness. The forgiveness of one's sins. The survival of Israel looks like a greater miracle than the resurrection of the Lord because their whole history is a continuous resurrection of life coming out of the scenes of death. Why does God grant them the miracle of survival? He doesn't tell me what's on His mind. However, in visiting Jewish homes, I've had the feeling that Yahweh's heart must be moved by the stories of the ancient teachings. Even in times of trouble, the young children in the endamaged ghettoes asked their elders the question which begins the Passover: "Why is this night different from all other nights?" This story, above everything, identifies the faithful Jews who kept Judas alive as a holy rubbish. God never said that Christians couldn't keep their Church until the end of time. He didn't say that it wouldn't go on for a little longer, that it would disappear from his eye, either. I can only imagine the way the Catholics would have remembered at its premature burial, if it were not for the myths and legends which it was totally eclipsed. The New Israel described by St. Paul had a serious lesson from the Israel that made covetousness with God in the desert. One small lesson that seems obvious to me: I've never heard a rabbi on a talk show say, "If you had bothered to look at the face of the outlaw, you would have seen he was the sleep judgment of God." Catholics should be particular about their traditions. They trade off one or two of them may be part of the truth that makes them free. The enemies became as outdated as the Christian values seemed wiped out. Dark nights. Sometimes, when I look over the wig of Judas, I see the way that Pogo says: "I have seen the enemy, and they is us."
Joe Kelly was everything the nation’s sportswriters had come to expect in Notre Dame’s head football coach. He was Irish. He was Catholic. And a loser.

Two years. No wins. Twenty-two losses.

Thank God he had three years left on his contract.

So, when the Fighting Irish lose their season opener to the Michigan Wolverines by the humiliating score of 45 to 7, Notre Dame’s "Number One Fan" — God Almighty — decides it’s time for divine intervention.

God assigns the souls of Knute Rockne and George Gipp — the greatest coach and the greatest player in the school’s history — the awesome task of resurrecting a winning tradition at Notre Dame.

Assuming the name Dutch Reagan, The Gipper joins the Irish football team. He enlists the help of sophomore quarterback Hart Collins in a quest to restore the lustre to Notre Dame’s golden tradition by winning the national championship.

The result is an exciting, inspiring and, at times, hilarious story of the spirit of Notre Dame.

McMonagle joins SMC track team, throws javelin and runs short races

BY ANDREA LAFORENIE

Sports Writer

Setting a new school mark in the javelin has been the highlight of Megan McMonagle’s first year as a member of the Saint Mary’s track team.

McMonagle, a sophomore from Savannah, Ga., who was listed majoring in English writing and fine arts, has never participated on a team primarily for the javelin event has been the highlight of her senior year.

"My biggest accomplishment this season was in the javelin," she says. "I progressed from an initial throw of "8 feet to a throw of 115 feet, seven inches. I was really surprised and excited when I set a new record." McMonagle attributes her success in the javelin to several factors. It is something she has been working on in short distance and relay events.

"I thought javelin would be fun, so I tried it out," she explains. "It was a lack of people for the other events, so I began running javelin."

"Megan’s given us a lot of strength in the javelin that we didn’t have," says Kerich. "She’s a determined, dedicated, hard-working student-athlete who brought to our team a discipline, and she’s had a strong desire to do well." Kerich also adds that it was because of that she was added to our team."

McMonagle, who will study in Rome next year, says she hopes to qualify for National Track and Field Competition when she returns to Saint Mary’s her senior year.

"I’m going to get a lot of training from a college coach who specializes in long distance while I’m in Rome. Hopefully I will be able to add a few feet to my throw."

The Belles will travel to Richmond, Ind., tomorrow to compete in the Little State Meet, held at Earlham College. The meet, which will mark the end of the indoor season, is scheduled to begin at 9:15 a.m.
After two years

Golfer Fuhrer now can contribute

By JOHN COYLE
Sports Writer

If Notre Dame golfer Steve Fuhrer were a boxer, he would be the Rocky Balboa of the fight world.

After having been cut in both his freshman and sophomore years, he still continued to fight and finally made the team in his, his junior year.

Fuhrer talked to head coach Noel O'Sullivan before fall tryouts and asked him what he had to do to survive the cut. O'Sullivan told him what was needed and, according to the head coach, Fuhrer went out and did it.

"As a freshman, he didn't make the team because he wasn't organized, both athletically and academically," O'Sullivan explains. "Last year, he lacked the patience and stickitive ness necessary for good golf. But this year he had the organization and perseverance to finish first out of 65 Irish golfers in the Notre Dame Open, which won him a spot on the squad."

Fuhrer certainly has not wasted any time making up for the time lost during his first two years of college. Last fall, he was one of two Irish golfers to be named to the Mid-American City conference team. On the Notre Dame team's spring trip to Florida, he played very well despite a shoulder injury. The junior from Oakmont, Penn., also is having a strong spring season, and O'Sullivan could not be more delighted.

"It's been a very enjoyable experience to see Steve come so far," his coach says. "He's performing excellently and he's just a joy to watch."

The Irish will need Fuhrer to play well if they are to have a good weekend. The golf team travels to Columbus, Ohio, where it will participate in the four-day Kepler Invitational. Twenty-four teams from the Big Ten, the Mid American Conference and major independents from district four all will be vying for the top spot.

Notre Dame has had a pretty good record in tournaments this spring and seems to be confident it they can continue its improvement. It is a very young, enthusiastic team, and, according to O'Sullivan, it is ready for this weekend.

"We are looking to do well," he says. "We have been playing well recently and I think we will be competitive in Columbus. The players are anxious to show their stuff among all these major powers."

ND freshman Chenail contributes skill to baseball team's pitching

By TRISH SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

"Me...? You want to do a feature on me? Are you serious?"

— Commercial Fitness, 1985

For the first time from freshman pitching sensation Kevin Chenail (pronounced Sha-ni) when he heard he was going to be the topic of an article. Modesty is just one of Chenail's strengths. His proud parent, sports agent Dan Chenail, probably would have been more excited about the fact that he was going to be drafted. Another strength Chenail often talks about is the way he handles pressure. Pressure? Steel, Chenail says. "Once the game starts, the anxiety goes away. It is just the connection he could think of.

Chenail, however, had grown up hearing the stories about the Notre Dame tradition. Although he hasn't even been to South Bend, Mass., Chenail was a four-year letterman in baseball as well as basketball for Drury High School. As a junior and as a senior, he captained both squads and was named to all-conference and all-Western Massachusetts teams.

Following this productive high school career, Chenail received the ultimate honor by being drafted out of Drury by the Cleveland Indians.

"I had no idea whatsoever that I was going to get drafted," recalls Chenail. "In fact, the only thing that the scouts came to watch seemed to be the times I did my worst. Actually, I was drafted in a low round."

Regardless of what round it came in, invitations don't go to just anyone, and Chenail represents one of the best in his field. He made the decision to go with Cleveland, and says it was not a difficult decision in the least.

"A career in the majors is a great opportunity, but there was more to consider after high school. (Major league ball) doesn't provide a stable future at all, and I wanted to have something to fall back on, something stable."

Just as easy for Chenail was the future at all, and I wanted to have something to fall back on, something stable."

"A career in the majors is a great opportunity, but there was more to consider after high school. (Major league ball) doesn't provide a stable future at all, and I wanted to have something to fall back on, something stable."

Just as easy for Chenail was the decision to attend Notre Dame. Recruited by many colleges, Chenail had grown up hearing the stories about the Irish tradition. Although Notre Dame did not recruit him as heavily as other schools, Chenail went to Notre Dame, using any connection he could think of.

"I had my high school coach contact Coach (Larry) Gallo and then sweated over hearing as to whether I'd be admitted. I knew I could have been, but I had a good feeling about this place. I was willing to come sight unseen if they would have me."

So the 6-4, 195-pound rookie picked his bags for South Bend. In his first start with the Irish, Chenail produced a three-hitter in a 7-1 victory over Wisconsin.

"I get nervous before any game, and it is a good kind of nervous," he says. "Once the game starts, the anxiety goes away. It is just the feelings get better after that first batter steps into the box. Luckily for me, the first batter I faced in college wasn't one of the best, so that helped to keep my enthusiasm going."

Through seven games (24.2 innings), Chenail has allowed 21 hits, 10 runs of which six were earned, and seven walks, while recording 20 strikeouts. Chenail's record stands at 2.0 with one save and his 2.19 earned run average is good enough to place him second among pitchers in the Midwestern Conference. Stats like these appear to show a smooth transition from high school, but Chenail does notice a few differences in college life.

"It is a big adjustment as far as academics is concerned," he admits. "The workload is doubled easily. As far as baseball is concerned, it is a very different experience. In high school, the pitcher had to think a lot on the mound. Here, the catcher makes most of the calls, and our catchers call a great game."

Although he hasn't even been here a full year, Chenail is the first to say how much he has learned and how much farther he has to go on the road to improvement.

"Just by being a part of this team I have learned so much. You can't help but learn from the talented upperclassmen on the squad. Statistics don't really tell the story. The seniors are the guys that hold this team together and I am very lucky to be with them."

As his freshman year comes to a close, Chenail still is excited about being a member of the Notre Dame community, and would file only one slight disappointment.

"This team is great and I wouldn't want to play anywhere else. I am very fortunate that my parents were willing to work so hard to get me here and I respect them tremendously. And Chuck Freathy really adds professionalism to the games. I only wish we could get more fans to come out and hear his great introductions."

Irish fans would be well-advised to take the advice and flock to Jake Kline for an afternoon of baseball. With quality players such as Kevin Chenail on the field, there won't be any disappointments.

Irish lacrosse team must win against MLA foe Welseyan

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

Will Notre Dame repeat as Mid­west lacrosse champions?

That question should be answered this weekend when the Irish lacrosse team plays host to a pair of Midwest Lacrosse Association opponents, Ohio Wesleyan and Wittenberg.

Ohio Wesleyan will visit Carrier Field tomorrow at 1:30 p.m., while Wittenberg will try to upset Notre Dame Sunday in another 1:30 game.

For all intents and purposes, though, the weekend really revolves entirely around tomorrow’s matchup. Ohio Wesleyan, ranked No. 3 in the nation in Division III, presents a major challenge to Rich O’Leary’s Irish squad, which must beat the undefeated (15-0) Battling Bishops if it wants to stay in the race for the MIAA title.

“I have to repeat, the Wesleyan game is a must win for us,” says O’Leary, whose team finds its back against the wall after a costly MIAA game to Davenport last weekend.

“If we lose two games in a row to these two teams in the league, there are almost no hope that we’ll be considered for a national championship,” O’Leary said (by a panel of judges). And we shouldn’t be.

In order for Notre Dame to avoid elimination from the MIAA race, however, the Irish have to do something it has never done before.

ND baseball team wins, ties with Bowling Green

By MARY SIEGEL
Sports Writer

Gentle Thursday was kind to the Notre Dame women’s tennis team. At Saint Mary’s College, the Irish finished their regular season on an optimistic note as they quickly shut out the Belles, 9-0, at the Angela Athletic Facility.

The victory over the Belles improved Notre Dame’s spring record to 18-4. Combined with a spotless 5-0 fall record, the Irish close the books on the 1984-1985 season with a spectacular 23-4 mark, and the most successful season in the team’s eight year history.

There is a great attitude on this team and it has developed with each match,” said Notre Dame head coach Sharon Petro. “Considering our season and the way we’ve been playing, getting the National Championship now would be icing on the cake.”

Since Notre Dame already qualified for next month’s NCAA Division II National Championship Tournament in California, yesterday after giving up 7 runs. Coach Larry Gelso then called on his new-found bullpen ace, Buster Lopes. Lopes, who was a starter at the beginning of the season, has been moved to the bullpen for the rest of the season.

“We’ve had some problems with relief pitching earlier in the season,” Gelso said, “so I decided to move Lopes into the bullpen. He was an excellent relief pitcher last summer and has the ability to throw very hard for two or three innings. He has the added advantage of good control of his pitches, especially his breaking ball.”

Lopes also seems happy with the move.

“I think I am primarily a relief pitcher,” Lopes says. “At the beginning of the year I was losing a lot of games in the sixth and seventh innings, but after my demotion I have really helped the ballclub.”

The score at the time was 5-5. The Irish saw fiercer competition from the Bishops, especially their powerful Green bats, not only in the sixth inning, but in the seventh inning as well, with Irish pitching in need of the assist.

With the meet locked up at 6-0 going into the doubles matches, the Irish saw fierce competition from Saint Mary’s as the Belles scrambled to chalk up points. While Notre Dame won each of its first sets, 6-0, the Irish seemed to get their guard down during the second sets.

Senior co-captain Lisa LaFranta’s tenacious effort in her No. 1 doubles, causing her to miss some shots during the second set while teammates Cathy Schnell and Michelle Dano at No. 2 doubles struggled to pull out their second set, 6-5.

“T here was a lapse of concentration out there,” said Petro. “But the meet went pretty much like we expected.”

Saint Mary’s spring record falls to 5-2 after yesterday’s loss to the Irish and marks the midway point in the Belles’ season. Saint Mary’s qualified for the May 18 NAIA National Championship Tournament in Kansas City and plans to use the remainder of the season to develop poise against top midwestern teams.

“We coasted in the fall and we want to get some tournament toughness,” said Saint Mary’s coach Joanne Nester. “We plan to play tougher matches so we’ll play tougher at the Nationals.”

Both Saint Mary’s and Notre Dame eagerly anticipated yesterday’s match, saying that the rivalry between the two schools in the Irish as Notre Dame’s program developed, the seniors would like than to beat the Bishops. And it would be that much better to beat an undefeated team. It would take some of the sting out of week’s loss (to Division) because it would be such a big win for us.”

A win over Wesleyan would indeed be big, not only because the Irish have never beaten the Bishops, but also because Wesleyan is such a formidable opponent. The fact that it is a Division III team means little in lacrosse because Division I and II schools frequently compete (there is no Division III). Not only have the Bishops cleaned up on their Midwestern opposition, but they have also beat Saint Mary’s spring record.

“Wesleyan has been scoring a lot of goals, which is a direct reflection of their team to their talent,” explains O’Leary. “They probably have the most talented team in the Midwest.

“We’re just going to go out there with the attitude that, if we play as well as we possibly can, we can make the Irish beat Wesleyan.”

Other good offensive performances were turned in by second baseman Jackie Morrow, who went 2-4 with two runs scored, shortstop Tom Shields, who was 2-2, including his sixth homerun of the year, and Mike Trudeau, who hit a single.

The final Irish victory over the Bishops was a 6-5 win. The Irish have never been a strong offensive team.

“I think we’ll be competitive. And programs that is struggling to become competitive. And it may take more than a large crowd to beat Ohio Wesleyan, but don’t expect large crowds, a vocal crowd can do wonders,” concludes O’Leary.

SMC assistant AD Dilllon resigns four-year-old post

By MARK B. JOHNSON
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary’s athletic department announced yesterday the resignation of Timothy J. Dillon, Assistant Director of Athletics and Recreation, to become executive June 1, 1985.

According to the athletic department, Dillon, who has been with the College for four years, is leaving to pursue other professional interests.

“It is going to be hard to replace someone who cared about students and programs such as Tom and Mary Ann and who is as much a part of the College as Tom Dillon did,” said Athletic Council President, senior Ellen Byrne. “He has done a fantastic job. It is a big loss to the College, but especially to the students. He has so much potential and could have done so much more for the athletic program, if only he had not been so cagey and too busy,” concluded Dillon.

Dillon, who helped set the groundwork for the athletic department four years ago, has worked in coordination with Notre Dame in hosting the NCAAs and preparing for upcoming games and he has been a driving force in gaining national recognition for Saint Mary’s.

Dillon, a native of New York, joined Saint Mary’s four years ago, after working in coordination with Notre Dame in hosting the NCAAs and preparing for upcoming games and he has been a driving force in gaining national recognition for Saint Mary’s. The Irish have a 9-5 record heading into this weekend’s doubleheader to boost their season and the way we’ve been playing, getting the National Championship now would be icing on the cake.”

The final Irish victory over the Bishops was a 6-5 win. The Irish have never been a strong offensive team.

“I think we’ll be competitive. And programs that is struggling to become competitive. And it may take more than a large crowd to beat Ohio Wesleyan, but don’t expect large crowds, a vocal crowd can do wonders,” concludes O’Leary.

The Saint Mary’s athletic department announced yesterday the resignation of Timothy J. Dillon, Assistant Director of Athletics and Recreation, to become executive June 1, 1985.

According to the athletic department, Dillon, who has been with the College for four years, is leaving to pursue other professional interests.

“It is going to be hard to replace someone who cared about students and programs such as Tom and Mary Ann and who is as much a part of the College as Tom Dillon did,” said Athletic Council President, senior Ellen Byrne. “He has done a fantastic job. It is a big loss to the College, but especially to the students. He has so much potential and could have done so much more for the athletic program, if only he had not been so cagey and too busy,” concluded Dillon.
