Investment policy studied by Trustees

By SCOTT BEARBY
Assistant News Editor

In the wake of increased focus on South Africa and its apartheid system, the Notre Dame Board of Trustees established a committee to evaluate current University investment practices with companies in that country.

Yesterday, the Board of Trustees Ad Hoc Committee on South Africa Investments met to review its policy statement and several proposals to the Board of Trustees.

According to committee member Richard K. Wilmouth, University Investment Practices Committee, a tentative proposal was completed at the meeting, which will be made into a final document.

Neither member could elaborate on the specifics of the recommendation, but it is expected that the committee will consider the proposal until after the Board of Trustees is informed of normal procedure.

Williams did say "all relevant issues" of the South African situation were discussed with much debate. The committee evaluated the current set of standards on investing in companies in South Africa passed in 1978.

The 1978 policy statement in part calls for companies to adopt principles, such as the Sullivan Principles, whose objective is to provide guidelines for companies to implement "practices for non-whites." Failure of companies to abide by the policy statement would mean possible action by the University.

According to Williams, the ad hoc committee was formed in response to increased awareness of the apartheid system, particularly by students. Getting attributed the additional attention to the efforts of the International Affairs and Studies Professor and Director of the African Studies Center, A. Peter Walshe, and student government at Notre Dame.

Both Walshe and three student government representatives also served on the ad hoc committee. Williams said they had an active voice in the committee and were treated as equal members. He added that this opportunity is "the finest students have progressed in University decision-making.

The committee members also included Bill Healy, student body president; Pat Baccarani, a member of the student government South Africa Investment Practices Committee; Thomas P. Carney, Notre Dame Board of Trustees chairman; John Caron, trustee; Phillip J. Facenda, trustee; Lee A. Tavis, business administration professor; and Policy Wilmouth, University Investment Practices Committee chairman.

According to Williams and Dettling, the committee's final draft of the proposal will be sent to the Board of Trustees and voted on at their October meeting. Williams, however, did add that faculty could call a meeting of the Board of Trustees Executive Committee and have a vote on the recommendation before the general meeting.

SMC chief hunt continues

Sainet Mary's Executive Editor

The search goes on at Saint Mary's, as the College continues its hunt for a new president to replace John Duggan, who resigned last February.

William Hickey, former vice president and dean of faculty, has taken the position of acting president since July 1. Dorothy Friel, chairwoman of the chemistry and physics department, has replaced Hickey as acting vice president.

Last spring, the Board of Regents appointed a search committee to find candidates to recommend to the Executive Governing Board of the Board of Regents, the administrative members of the College. The search committee includes representatives, faculty and student representatives.

Student Body President Anne Marie Kollman is a committee member. "My role is student input," she said. "I think I can make a pretty big contribution."

The committee is still in the recruiting stages of work, according to Friel, who is spokesperson for the group. "We're still gathering and reviewing data at this point," she said.

The committee met regularly over the summer, beginning its work by advertising and soliciting by mail and word of mouth. Two publications carried advertisements for the position. One, The Chronical of Higher Education, called it a primary journal that would reach those most interested in the position. An advertisement was also placed in The New York Times.

In addition, the committee made widespread contact with educators around the country. "We sent letters all over, to presidents of colleges around the country," Friel noted. "We also took recommendations from faculty and alumni."

Friel called the response "pretty good" in terms of those who replied. "A number were nominated and contacted," she said. "The pool is there."

The mechanics of advertising was the committee's first job. Letters were then sent out to those recommended, informing them of their nominations.

Citizens raise stink over ethanol; demand elimination of foul odor

By DAN McCULLOUGH
News Editor

After a summer away from South Bend, students returning to campus may have been surprised to smell the odor of ethanol still lingering in the air.

The odor from the ethanol plant on the city's west side, which was owned and operated by the New Energy Company of Indiana, has been a source of controversy and complaints among the citizens of South Bend as well as among members of the Notre Dame community since the plant opened late last fall.

The odor comes from the plant's grain dryer and is carried into the atmosphere in particle from through huge stacks. The odor varies in intensity, but on some days it can be smelled as far away as Elkhart and Granger.

Although city officials have been cooperating with New Energy management in attempting to find ways to control the odor, South Bend Mayor Roger O. Parent has conceded that a solution is a long way off.

On July 18, New Energy conducted an odor neutralization experiment which injected a deodorizing chemical into the stacks through which the odor-causing particles traveled.

A volunteer sniffing committee of citizens and city officials sat in a field downtown from the ethanol plant while the deodorizer was pumped into the stacks. The committee was doubtful of the deodorizer's ability to deodorize and results of the experiment are inconclusive.

On July 24, a closed-loop odor control system was named as the ideal solution to the ethanol problem by New Energy general plant manager Billy Cribbs.

The system, which carries a price tag of $5 million, is similar in one used at the Harris Walker distillery in Windsor, Ontario. Representatives of the mayor's office traveled to Canada in July to observe the system at work.

The whiskey deodorizing system is much smaller than the one being considered for South Bend, which would be unacceptably in size and cost, according to engineers from New Energy. Officials at the company have said the system would probably take more than a year to design and build.

Meanwhile, as tests continue at the ethanol plant, the mayor has said the city cannot afford to pay for the system. New Energy said it cannot afford the system either and has requested the city to assist in locating outside funding for the project.

But Parent said outside funding is "pretty good" in terms of those who replied. The committee met regularly over the summer, beginning its work by advertising and soliciting by mail and word of mouth. Two publications carried advertisements for the position. One, The Chronical of Higher Education, called it a primary journal that would reach those most interested in the position. An advertisement was also placed in The New York Times.

LaFortune robbery investigated

By KEITH HARRISON JR.

Notre Dame Security is still investigating last week's theft at LaFortune Student Center, in which two pieces of furniture and Student Body President Bill Healy's office keys were stolen.

A couch, a chair, four keys to student government offices and several office items were taken during the theft, which occurred between 8 p.m. Thursday and 8 a.m. Friday, according to Glenn Terry, director of Security.

The two-cushion couch, taken from the main lobby, would cost $300 to replace, said Brother Francis Gorch, manager of LaFortune.

But Terry is trying to avoid replac­ ing it. He has given a description of the couch to residence hall maids and janitors and asked them to call Security if they see it.

Although Terry suspects students were responsible for the theft, he is not sure the couch will be returned.

"Some of the maids and janitors may be afraid of student retaliation and others just don't want to get involved," he said.

The other items were taken from the lobby of the student government office on the second floor of LaFortune.

"The most serious items taken were our office keys," Healy said. Keys to Student Body Vice President Duane Lawrence's office, Student Activities Comptroller Jack Gallagher's office and the student government computer room also were stolen, Healy said.

The keys were taken from Student

Students pay price for education

Amy Stephan
Managing Editor

We chose to attend a top University and must pay to keep it there.
Those who attend Notre Dame generally make a commitment to graduate from Notre Dame. Why pay for three years of a Notre Dame education only to bail out the fourth year and graduate from another school because you are unwilling to foot a $765 increase?
Financial aid, however, should keep pace with tuition increases. No one owes us a Notre Dame education, but if Notre Dame wants to attract top students, as it wants to attract top faculty, it must be willing to pay.
Thomas Mason, vice president for business affairs, said in an interview with an observer reporter: "We certainly don't want to become a rich students-only university." Notre Dame is comprised of many middle to upper-middle class students. Were this to change, the character of the University would change significantly. And this would be a shame.
Notre Dame now doles out financial aid to 66 percent of the student body, and the average amount is more than $5,000.

According to Mason, the University has a goal to raise the financial aid endowment up $300 million to $600 million. The administration should stick to this commitment and make it a reality, just as they made increased faculty salaries a reality.
The University must show the same commitment to the students that it does to the faculty. It must keep its promises.
Welcome back. And enjoy your year at Notre Dame. You're paying for it.

ND tuition/living fees increase; college costs escalate nationwide

By MARK PANKOWSKI
Copy Editor

Notre Dame students and their parents again received bad news in a letter from the administration last June.

The bad news: Notre Dame's current budget of $162,664,700 depends on an increase in tuition and fees.

Undergraduate tuition will rise this year by almost three times the current rate of inflation, and the average room, board and laundry charge will increase by more than twice the current inflation rate.

The 1985 inflation index is running at 3.7 percent, yet tuition this year increased by 10.8 percent, up $765 to $7945. The average room, board and laundry charge was increased by 7.6 percent, from $2365 to $2545.

Graduate school tuition rose 11.3 percent, to $7650; the Law School 13 percent, to $9300; and the regular M.B.A. program 11 percent, to $7750.

The increase is nothing new, however. Last year, undergraduate tuition rose by 9.7 percent, the average room and board charge 6.7 percent, graduate school 9 percent, Law School 12 percent, and the regular M.B.A. program 9 percent.

The bad news of tuition increases wasn't confined only to the Notre Dame campus, however.

According to the College Board Annual Survey of Colleges, the average tuition and fees of four-year public institutions this year were 9 percent more than last year, to $1,245; for four-year private schools, $5,116, an 8 percent increase.

The average room and board charge for students living in a dormitory also jumped for a public institution, the figure this year was up 9.6 percent, to an average of $2,473, for private schools 8.18 percent, to $2761, according to the College Board.

The reasons for the rise in costs at Notre Dame were many and varied, according to Thomas Mason, vice president for business affairs.

Among those reasons cited by Mason for the tuition increase were inflation, the pay raise given to the university staff, new academic programs and positions, rising insurance costs, new library books, and the expense of operating new buildings.

Salaries and benefits for the University's staff, said Mason, are a large part of the budget. Because the University had a goal of having its faculty salaries in the top 20 percent of salaries in the country, for the past six years the administration has given the faculty an annual pay raise averaging 9 percent.

"The University is trying to upgrade the quality of the faculty," said Mason. "This increases our ability to attract better faculty by having salaries that are competitive with other universities.

The new pool, to open in September or October, had an operating cost of $131,000 built into the budget, said Mason.

"We also have a few of students from one specialty to another," said Mason, explaining that the colleges of business and engineering hired to help extra faculty handle additional students entering those programs.

Although the other departments are losing students, he said, "They're only losing two or three students in each class so you can't take away a position."

The reason for the hike in the room and board charge, said Mason, is because Notre Dame is spending $2 million per year to fund dormitory renovations.

"We're getting a lot of money that comes out of the room, board and laundry funds back into student benefits," said Mason.

The increase doesn't seem to be discouraging new students from enrolling, however. There are approximately 1,830 students in this year's freshman class as opposed to 1,790 last year and 1,775 the year before.

Neither has there been an increase in the number of students withdrawing because they're unable to bear the added expense, said Edwin Harris, associate director of financial aid.

"I think it's a combination of families digging deeper and borrow­ ing more," said Harris.

Mason, who helps determine the University's budget each year, can relate to those families, as he too has children attending Notre Dame.

"I'm cognizant of the parents' situation," said Mason. "These are more than just figures to me . . . 1 look at both sides of the coin when I'm looking at the budgets."

Three new trustees named to board

Special to The Observer

Notre Dame added three persons to its board of trustees in June. They are Elizabeth T. Kennan, president of Mount Holyoke Col­ lege, South Hadley, Mass.; James Rinehart, chairman of the board of the Clark Equipment Co., South Bend, Ind.; and Alfred Stepan, dean of the faculty of international and public affairs at Columbia University.

A specialist in medieval monas­ ticism and intellectual history, Kennan has published extensively and lectured in colleges and univer­ sities in the United States and abroad.

Rinehart has a doctorate in law and in management at Harvard University.

An authority on Latin American af­ fairs, Stepan is the author of numerous monographs and two books, one dealing with Peru, the oth­ er Brazil.

His father, Alfred C. Stepan, who died last year, was for many years a trustee of Notre Dame.

A graduate of Yale, Rinehart has done post-baccalaureate study in the law and in management at Harvard University.

An authority on Latin American af­ fairs, Stepan is the author of numerous monographs and two books, one dealing with Peru, the oth­ er Brazil.

New student affairs position filled

By LYNNE R. STRAND
Staff Reporter

There is a new lady at Notre Dame, but this time she is under the golden dome.

Dr. Ann M. Firth was appointed to the newly created position of director of residence life by the Office of Student Affairs last June. Firth, who assumed her new position in August, described herself as the "primary hearing officer" dealing with University policies.

As director, Firth handles all violations of University regulations severe enough to be referred to student affairs.

Such violations include the alcohol policy, parentals, theft, and property damage. One or two cases have already been reported, said Firth, but they were not serious.

As part of new role, Firth will be working closely with Dr. John Goldrick, associate vice president for student affairs.

"The primary purpose for creating this position is because residence life is so important and large. Goldrick couldn't be solely responsible (for residential matters)," said Father David Tyson, vice president for student affairs. "Now that area can be put in its proper place and expand (the position's) responsibilities."

The new director position was formed this year because the budget allowed the necessary funds, said Goldrick.

"We want policy decisions that benefit the students," said Firth, explaining the approach that she hoped to take in dealing with judicial matters. She added that extremely difficult decisions will arise when suspension or dismissal is required, or when serious injury or death result from a student's actions.

Such decisions also hurt those making them," she said, explaining the difficulty of making certain decisions.

Firth, formerly of Chicago, received her bachelor's degree from Notre Dame in 1981 and a law degree in 1984. "I never thought someday I'd be working here...This is something I'm very excited about, and I'm very well aware of students' concerns."

Firth's appointment is a positive step toward reconciliation of the academic and social life, "a reconciliation of both centers," said Tyson.

"There's a great opportunity for the residentiality of Notre Dame to expand and integrate," he said.

Goldrick, "There's a great opportunity for the residentiality of Notre Dame to expand and integrate" the academic and social aspects of the University. He cited hall fellows and faculty parties as answers to residential and academic problems.

Before assuming her new position, Firth worked as a litigator for Orris, Wasserman, and Moore in Chicago.

Theft

The thieves probably entered and exited through the main doors of LaFortune, according to Joni Neal, director of student activities.

"The front doors were locked, but they were probably opened by someone already inside the building," Neal said.

That door has a crash bar which leaves the door unlocked if you're not careful to replace it when you go out.

"Someone in the building probably left and didn't know about the crash bar," she added. "That left the front doors open for anyone to come in and take the couch."

The class officers and Observer employees also were working in the building at the time, Neal said.

She did not give the names of the band members. "I don't want to have them accused of something they didn't have anything to do with," she said.

The class officers and Observer employees entered through the north doors, which had been left open for them by Security, she added.

Neal said the couch could not have been taken through the north doors because the main lobby is separated from that area by a door which was locked at the time.

The primary purpose for creating this position is because residence life is so important and large. Goldrick couldn't be solely responsible (for residential matters)," said Father David Tyson, vice president for student affairs. 'Mercy killer' receives no mercy from Florida cabinet members

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. A 76-year-old man sentenced to life in the "mercy killing" of his wife lost his bid for freedom yesterday when two more Florida Cabinet members rejected the governor's recommendation to free him while he appeals his murder conviction.

"The law does not give one person the right to kill another because of illness or age," said Comptroller Gerald Lewis, the last of the six-member Cabinet to take a stand on the case of Roswell Gilbert.

Lewis' decision left Gov. Bob Graham with only two of the three votes required from members of the independently elected Cabinet to allow Gilbert to leave Avon Park Correctional Institution near Tampa.

"The law does not provide that an adult who commits a criminal act shall be judged according to age," Lewis said.

Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner announced earlier yesterday that he would not support conditional commutation for Gilbert, who was convicted in May of first-degree murder.

Conner said he hoped his decision would send a message to young people who lose touch with their elderly parents.

"I'm condemning young people who live on Wall Street and practice law and go to banks and offices every day and have elderly parents in Florida and don't know what's happening to them," Conner said.

"I think Florida is going to suffer as a result of this. But most importantly, elderly people, senior citizens in our state are the ones who are really suffering," Conner said.

Conner said his office had received calls on the case from across the nation and said he spoke with one of Gilbert's neighbors who was uncomfortable about the possibility of the retired engineer returning home.

"We are receiving messages from all over the country," Conner said. "They're rather invalid. Mr. Gilbert did not have the solution to this serious problem.

"There were some alternatives. I regret that Mr. Gilbert did not pursue those alternatives,"

Gilbert has been in prison since he was convicted in May.

search committee has no precise number in mind," Feigel said. "We're simply looking for good candidates." January, 1986, will not necessarily find Saint Mary's with a new president. As of right now, there is no real target date for the committee to finish its work, she said.

According to Feigl, "We'll take the time we need to get the person we need."

Little girl with big achievements dies in tragic plane crash in Maine

Associated Press

AUBURN, Maine — Samantha Smith, the schoolgirl whose correspondence with Soviet leader Yuri Andropov provided her a tour on a tour of the Soviet Union to promote world peace, died in a fiery plane crash, her mother said yesterday.

Samantha's father and six other people aboard the Bar Harbor Airlines plane also died when the Beechcraft 99 turboprop plane crashed late Sunday in rain a half-mile from the Auburn-Lewiston Municipal Airport, authorities said.

Thirteen-year-old Samantha and her father, Arthur, 45, were returning from a trip to England, said Jane Smith, the girl's mother.

Smith said she visited the crash site, adding, "It's just a pile of ashes."

Samantha attracted worldwide attention two years ago when she wrote to the late Soviet leader Andropov expressing concern about the potential for nuclear war. Kremlin leaders responded by inviting her to a two-week, all-expenses-paid tour of the Soviet Union.

In her letter Samantha asked Andropov, "Why do you want to conquer the whole world, or at least our country?" The Soviet leader replied that his country wanted "nothing of the kind."

She and her parents got VIP treatment during the three months later - though she never met Andropov although some critics held that she was exploited by the Soviets.

The Soviet news agency Tass reported Samantha's death yesterday, saying, "She saw for herself the reality of life and death."

In Augusta, a few miles from the Smith's home, Gov. Joseph E. Brennan issued a statement saying, "I don't know what's going to happen to me."

"If people keep picking me up for other shows (such as "Lime Street"), I might wind up being an actress after all. But if things don't really happen after this show I might end up being a veterinarian, or a hair stylist, or make-up artist or, I don't know."

"Samantha, upon returning to Manchester after her trip to the Soviet Union, was met with a limousine, given a key to the city by the governor, and cheered by thousands in a parade. She also was in demand on television interview shows, and wrote a book about her experiences.

Talk-show hosts including Johnny Carson and Phil Donahue lined up to reserve dates on Samantha's calendar, and she made dozens of appearances. Her trip was the subject of several TV specials.

She delivered a speech at the Children's International Symposium for the 21st Century in Japan, and wrote a book about her trip to the Soviet Union.

"I never thought it would result in all this," she said last summer.

"Samantha couldn't accept man's inhumanity to man," her mother said in a statement. "She stood fast in the belief that peace can be achieved and maintained by mankind."

At the scene, most of the wreckage was unrecognized, except for a tire dangling from a tree, a partially buried piece of the cockpit, and a charred section of the tail. The plane had skidded for about 100 feet, leaving a trail of jagged metal and luggage, before going over an embankment and landing in a ravine in the woods.

"It will be a matter of months" before the cause can be determined, said National Transportation Safety Board member Patrick Bursley.

One woman who lives near the crash site said the plane barely missed her house and sheared off the tops of tall pine trees in her front yard.

A memorial service for Samantha and her father was planned for tomorrow at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Augusta, said Ted Warren, a friend of the family.
Alumni given university honors, Mazzaoli among the recipients

Special to The Observer

The Rev. John J. Cavanaugh C.S.C. Award, presented for the first time this year, will be given to Congressman L. Mazzaoli of Kentucky, a 1950 graduate who has been a leader in immigration reform in America.

The award is named for the University's 14th president and honors a former student "performing outstanding service in the field of government, patriotism, public service and local, state or national government."

Mazzaoli has served as a U.S. representative since 1979 and is chairman of the House Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on Immigration, Refugees and International Law. He is also active on the District of Columbia and Small Business committees.

A former member of the national alumni board and a 1985 honorary degree recipient at Notre Dame, he will receive the award at an October 18 meeting of the national board on the campus.

The University of Notre Dame Alumni Association will present awards to three former students during activities planned on the campus this fall. Two of the awards for distinguished service were recently established and will be presented for the first time.

The Rev. William Corby C.S.C. Award, honoring Notre Dame's third president and noted Civil War chaplain, will be given to Monsignor Francis Hampson, assistant for ROTC to Notre Dame's president, Father Theodore Hesburgh, this fall.

The award, to be presented during the football game with Navy on November 2, is intended for a student, living or deceased, "who has exemplified the values and true spirit of Notre Dame while serving in the active or reserve armed forces." Monsignor Sampson, a 1937 graduate, jumped with the 101st Airborne Division during the Normandy invasion in June, 1944. He was awarded the second highest American military award, the Distinguished Service Cross, after being wounded while ministering to 14 servicemen who were unable to return with their groups to safer areas.

He was twice captured by the Germans in subsequent action.

This year's Harvey Foster Award will be given to James Mello, a former All-American football player at Notre Dame who has spent the last 26 years assisting mentally handicapped children and honoring Notre Dame's third president, the late 1960's, a treatment leading to the concept of the Special Olympics. The 1997 International Committee of this program is scheduled for Notre Dame's campus.

The award honors a 1939 graduate who served as president of the national association, an FBI official and vice president of American Vista during the late 1960's. It is given to a living alumni who may be an athlete or involved in athletic endeavors who distinguishes himself or herself through University achievements or civic involvement.

The award will be presented to Mello during halftime ceremonies of Notre Dame's Army game Oc­ tober 19.

War on Salvadoran people blessed by ND

The University of Notre Dame committed a grave mistake by confirming a doctorate on Jose Napoleon Duarte, president of El Salvador. Its award gave a blessing to a puppet of U.S. intervention and helped legitimize the continued war on the Salvadoran people.

Since Duarte’s election not one member of the regular armed forces has yet been punished criminally for a human rights violation against other Salvadorans. All people are the same despite differences

What compels one man to embolden his right appendage with a tattoo commemorat­ ing the 1962 chuck-wagon rodeo, clumps up three stories into the cab of a 1966 Ford pick­ up, tune in the radio to his all-time favorite rendition of “I left my heart in your childhood,” and proceed to wheel off, making a noise comparable only to the sound inside of a hull? People who might make after eating that infamous chilidog?

Carol Brown

Perhaps it is the same thing that causes another man to sport his impeccable Brooks Brothers fall sportswear collection, prop a pair of Porsche sunglasses on the bridge of his ever-so-straight nose and then casually hop into the driver’s seat as the glare from his million dollar smile reflects off his blindingly waxed red Mercedes convertible.

Doonesbury

As the remains of a plug of Remington chewing tobacco hangs off the corner of his longhorn steer mustache? I was definitely befuddled.

Doonesbury

Yes then I begun thinking (heaven forbid) - there has to be a common link between these very different types of people (he is ever so smart as compare the local “tough guy,” mild boy’ country to the seemingly infallible James Bond. For instance, compare the Hoosier’s (no offense to Indiana residents) crude call of “crank me a cold beer,” to Bond’s ever so suave “one very dry martini - stirred not shaken.” Isn’t the message the same? No matter how it is said, it is clear that both men want the same thing - an alcoholic beverage. The only difference lies in that Bond simply has more money, more taste or merely more pizazz than our Charlie Daniels fan. Or maybe it simply boils down to honesty and the importance we place on appearances. Barroom Billy is thirsty and he simulates a beer. He is not afraid to voice this desire, and in no uncertain terms. Perhaps James Bond is secretly craving an icy cold beer too, but he, unlike Billy, is afraid of how drinking a common beer might tarnish his impeccable image. OK, I know what you are saying - “James Bond is not afraid of anything.” But really, hasn’t anyone ever seen Bond downing a beer in public! I will leave that one for you to ponder.

And of course there may be other similarities. Perhaps similarly, it is the same macho feeling from chewing a plug of tobacco that Bond acquires from speeding in super-rigged sports car. And who is to say that barroom Billy isn’t just as happy picking up the pitcher in his truck and taking her to the local steak house as Bond is when a beautiful foreign spy he has just met picks him up in her yacht and cruises to the Greek islands.

Wherever the cause of these seemingly great differences between people - be it one of environment, circumstances, society, money, upbringing or whatever, it is pretty clear that people are basically the same all over the world. Individually they are driven by many different desires, needs and aspirations, but the different underlying all of the differences is the universal need for acceptance, love and fulfillment that we all share.

Of course, after all is said and done, I would still prefer the possibly dishonest charm of a James Bond type to the honest crudity of barroom Billy. But have ever said honesty is all the ways the best policy?

How to keep wet on a dry campus

by Amy Stephan
features staff writer

Summer vacation may be over, but if we're lucky South Bend may be graced with a few more weeks ofreasonable weather. Now, while the air is warm and the workload light, it's time to enjoy the last few days of sun and sand, and hit the beach.

The astute reader will have noted that we are now in Indiana—the nearest ocean is a good 12-hour drive away (15 if you drive the speed limit). A day at the beach may have to wait until spring break.

It's true waves are about as common as hills in Indiana, but for those who love the feel of sand between their toes, all is not lost. There are several (freshwater) beaches within striking distance.

The Warren Dunes in Michigan— the site of Emil's famous freshman picnic—are a scant 45 minutes away. Located on Lake Michigan, the park features plenty of clean beach area, a challenging dune to scale, and year-round swimming (for those who care to brave the waters of Lake Michigan in mid-winter).

The park is open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., and admission is $3 per car for out-of-state residents. And for the senior carrying only 12 credit hours, the beaches also feature a campground.

Alcoholic beverages and glass bottles are prohibited in the park area, according to Evelyn Marx, a staff writer at the park office.

To get to the Warren Dunes take Route 31 to Route 13 until you reach the town of Three Oaks. Turn right at the stoplight and drive seven miles to U.S. Highway 12. Turn right onto Red Arrow and the dunes are a mile and a half down the road.

Also 45 minutes away is the New Buffalo beach. New Buffalo may not have dunes, but it does offer Redmanas, which bills itself as the home of the world's greatest hamburger.

The New Buffalo beach is open year-round until 10 p.m. Alcoholic beverages are prohibited at this beach also, but said Tom John, city manager of New Buffalo, "normally people don't get too haulered" for having alcohol on the beach.

The rule against glass bottles, however, is strictly enforced. After all, the beach and broken glass are a hazardous mix.

John notes that the beach is "very large and there's lots of nice sand." There's no charge to swim, but there is a $3 parking fee.

According to John, the quickest way to New Buffalo is to take the Indiana Toll Road west to the LaPorte exit and then follow Michigan 39 for about 8 miles to the beach.

If you don't have access to a car (and don't mind that picture that big) you can satisfy your craving for sand right on the Notre Dame campus.

St. Joseph's beach (located on St. Joseph's Lake) will probably be open from noon to 5:30 p.m. on weekdays and from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on weekends, according to Brother Louis Hurcik, director of Notre Dame's swimming program.

The weather and usage will determine when the beach will close down for the winter, said Hurcik.

The temperature of St. Joseph's lake is generally good for swimming between 75 and 80 degrees, since the water is heated by the power plant nearby. "It's the world's largest heated pool," said Hurcik.

Despite the warm water, generally "you'll find more people laying out, reading, than swimming," said Hurcik. "Serious swimmers come here in the spring, and for the last part of the season, we have the Rockne pool open for (the) competitive advantage." The Rockne pool may not offer sun and surf, but it does provide clean towels and European Spa body shampoo. Most of the recreational swimming is lap swimming, according to Hurcik, so serious swimmers will find the Rockne pool a good place to work out.

But be warned—the Rockne pool enforces a very strict dress code. No cutoffs, gym shorts or leotards will be tolerated. One must wear a "regular swimsuit," according to posted regulations.

Men have the option of swimming in one of a kind Rockne swimsuit, or using their own. Until last year, men were required to wear the Rockne suit. Why? Because some men had a tendency to toss their wet swimsuits in their lockers. As anyone who has been in the Rockne locker rooms will tell you, the lockers are not exactly new and tend to rust. Wet swimsuits-only accelerate this process.

But most swimsuits are now nylon, not cotton, they dry more quickly. Thus the ban on outside swimsuits is lifted and men are now free to wear whatever "regular swimsuit" they choose.

Freshmen confused by their campus maps may wonder if there aren't two pools on campus. But although it has been done, swimming in the library reflecting pool is "against the rules," said Juday, library monitor.

Glass and other unsafe objects thrown in the pool are the main reasons swimming is prohibited, said Juday, adding "I don't know why anyone would want to swim in there anyway, it's so dirty."

In mid-October the Rockne is scheduled to be joined by a new aquatic facility in the ACC. According to Dennis Stark, who will administer this new pool, the facility will feature underwater music and two underwater viewing areas where swimmer's strokes can be videotaped.

The new pool will measure 50 yards by 25 yards, with two moveable bulkheads, which will allow the pool to be divided into three smaller pools. It was "designed for flexibility," according to Stark, and will be used extensively by all facets of the swimming population of Notre Dame.

Although the pool will be used mostly by the men's and women's swim teams during the competitive season, look for it to house physical education classes, aerobic conditioning, recreational swimming, and eventually synchronized swimming.

The new aquatic facility may be open after October break, and will literally quadruple the volume of water made available for indoor swimming at Notre Dame.

Racing the rapids in South Bend

by Mary Healy

If I were getting wet enough, I'd wash my car on the way to go all the way to the Snake River for water that's your speed.

Right here in South Bend, the nation's only artificial white water course was challenging enough for the U.S. kayak team tryouts last spring, and for an international kayak race a few weeks ago.

Although its rushing currents are not capable of top speeds, the Snake River may be the home of the world's greatest kayak facility. According to Dennis Stark, who will administer the new pool, the facility will feature underwater music and two underwater viewing areas where swimmer's strokes can be videotaped.

Gillen leaves ND for Xavier; Baron gets promoted

By JEFF BLUM
Sports Editor

There was a shuffling of bodies this summer in the Notre Dame basketball offices, all of which was started by the departure of assistant coach Pete Gillen to take a head job at Xavier. The resulting changes saw part-time assistant Jim Baron promoted to the vacant full-time position and Matt Kilcullen hired to take Baron’s spot.

Gillen left Notre Dame’s employ- on Aug. 12, when he accepted Xavier’s offer to be its head coach. He was interviewed for the job on a Friday night, and present Musketeers assistant Wayne Morgan, who had turned down a 195,000 annual assistant coaching post at Nevada-Las Vegas, Syracuse head coach at Wake Forest. He got Irish staff since 1980 and was Notre Dame’s chief recruiter. A 1968 Fair- field graduate and a native of Brook- lyn, N.Y., Gillen was excited by the opportunity to become a head coach.

“I think the situation at Xavier is a great one,” he said. “I’ve always said that if I were to become a head coach, I wanted a job where I had a chance to succeed. I think I have that at Xavier.”

Once Gillen left for Cincinnati, Phelps immediately replaced him by promoting Baron.

“When Pete Gillen accepted the job at Xavier, there was no question in my mind that Jim Baron was the person who would move into that spot,” Phelps said. “He has paid his dues as a part-time assistant for four years, and he know our program as well as anyone. He deserves this opportunity to increase his responsibility as far as our overall staff is concerned.”

Baron came to Notre Dame in time for the 1981-82 season following previous college coaching ex- perience at St. Bonaventure, Loyola (M.I.) and the University of Rochester. His playing experience includes time as a three-year starter at guard for St. Bonaventure and a brief stint in the Continental Basket- ball League.

“I’m very happy for Pete,” Baron said. “My new job will be more chal- lenging and it is something that I definitely was looking forward to doing one day.”

Baron now will be allowed to go on the road to recruit. His respon- sibilities will be center more on recruiting and less on scouting, as they previously had. Part-time assis- tants are not allowed to do off- campus recruiting.

Kilcullen is no stranger to Notre Dame. He has been on the coaching staff of the Notre Dame basketball camp for each of the past 10 years.

“We consider Matt to be one of the bright young talents in the coaching profession,” said Phelps. “We’ve had a chance to watch him and work with him during our sum- mer camp, so we’re quite familiar with him. He comes from a solid bas- ketball background.

The 30-year old Bronx, N.Y., native had been an assistant at Siena College the past three seasons, and reportedly was set to become an assistant at Rutgers before the Notre Dame job came along. Following a 23-7 record by Siena last season, its best mark in 33 seasons, Kilcullen was promoted earlier this summer to the position of associate head coach.

“One day I had worked at camp,” said Kilcullen, “it became a goal of mine to one day be a coach here. I’ve always kept in touch. I’m not overly familiar with Notre Dame’s personnel, having only watched them on TV, but know that the nucleus is very good.

“Growing up as an Irish kid in the Bronx, I’ve always followed Notre Dame. I don’t think I could be hap- pier anywhere else right now.”

Previously, Kilcullen had been head coach at Castleton State Col- lege in Castleton, Vt. for three seasons.

LSU cancellation leaves ND, NBC with open date in Dec.

By PHIL WOLF
Assistant Sports Editor

It may seem as though there is a lot of time before basketball season starts, but the Notre Dame basketball team already has encountered difficulties. Although the scheduling of games usually is completed by the end of the summer, Notre Dame's 1985-86 schedule still is not finished.

The "final" schedule was released in late June, but since then, a nationally televised contest with Louisiana State has been cancelled, forcing NBC Television officials to scramble to find a new opponent for the Irish.

NBC had arranged for LSU to visit the ACC for a Saturday afternoon contest on Jan. 18.

The Tigers agreed to the date but then discovered that they were unable to rearrange their schedule to accommodate the game. As a result, LSU backed out of the agreement, leaving Notre Dame and NBC with an open date.

"They (LSU) had committed to the Notre Dame game," NBC's Rich Hussey explained. "and we had worked very hard with the conference to get their SEC schedule juggled so that they could make it.

"The sticky point," Hussey said, "was that they could not get out of an away game outside of the conference. They tried, but they could not come up with anything that was satisfactory to the people they had contracts with."

Notre Dame Athletic Director Roger Valdiserri noted that LSU's backing out of the scheduled game was an unusual move.

"I don't know why they said yes to begin with," he said, "without having gotten out of a game."

"It's an unusual situation," Hussey agreed, "that someone would turn down national exposure against a high-quality program like LSU."

Official word has not yet been released, but the latest indication is that LSU will play the nationally televised game on Jan. 18 instead of the Bruins' previously scheduled contest at the ACC on Dec. 7.

"To the best of my knowledge," Hussey said, "it's a deal, but I would prefer that Roger (Valdiserri) make that announcement."

The Notre Dame sports information department has not made any announcement that the UCLA game has been rescheduled, but Valdiserri did offer an explanation of Notre Dame's situation.

"If UCLA switches from Dec. 7 to Jan. 18," he said, "that leaves a hole for us. Now we're going to have to scramble to get somebody."

It will be Notre Dame's responsibility to replace the Dec. 7 contest with another game.

Valdiserri said that the Irish will not play fewer than 28 games - the maximum allowed by the NCAA this season. Therefore, Notre Dame may be forced to schedule a less-competitive opponent to fill out the schedule.

"It's awfully late in the year," Hussey pointed out. "Most people have their schedules set." As it now stands, the Irish schedule features 14 games against teams that played in past season tournaments in 1985. Notre Dame will face NCAA qualifiers Maryland, DePaul and Dayton and NIT entrants Marquette, Butler and Butler at the ACC.

Notre Dame will continue its home-and-away series against Midwest independent teams, Marquette, Dayton and DePaul. The Irish also will play at North Carolina, Duke and Syracuse in nationally televised games.

Valdiserri explained how the networks schedule the big contests which they televise.

"The big matchups on TV are made by the networks."

"They want to see good TV matchups."

"That (TV exposure) is what has helped college basketball," he continued. "It started with the Notre Dame/UCLA game years ago."

They were such great games, and other teams want to be on, but the games had to be inter­sectional to maintain a good level of interest."

In addition, Valdiserri said, "when you make out your schedule, you try to arrange to get good teams on weekends so that they might be good television games."

Right now, it appears as though Notre Dame is faced with an open date on Saturday, Dec. 7. Considering that it is so late in the year, the Irish may have difficulty scheduling any team for that day, even without worrying about at­tracting the networks.

Yves Auriole, fencing coach at Portland State for the past 10 years, was named head coach of the Notre Dame women's fencing team. In addition, he will assist Mike DeCicco with the men's team and Notre Dame's physical education department.

Auriole brings 20 years of experience to Notre Dame as a competitor, coach and private instructor. A 46-year-old native of France, he served as the United States Olympic fencing coach in both 1980 and 1984.

Amateur Wrestling News ranked the Notre Dame wrestling team's class of freshman wrestlers as the fourth best recruiting class in the country this fall. The Irish were listed by the publication as behind only powers Oklahoma, Oklahoma State and Northern Iowa.

At 150 pounds, Greg Goad was named head coach of the Notre Dame women's tennis team. In 1980. He will continue to teach at New Prairie, where he was named head coach of the Irish by head coach Joe Piane. The 35-year-old South Bend native earned his undergraduate degree in physical education department. A 48-year-old native of Brooklyn, N.Y., Gelfman earned her undergraduate degree from Northeast Missouri State in 1976, then moving to Indiana to complete her master's in physical education in 1977.

A member of the United States Professional Tennis Association and the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association, Gelfman also had earned various awards for her playing ability and was a finalist for the East Coast Clay Court Championships a few years back.

Gelfman will direct the Irish women's team this year as it moves up to Division I play following a finish as national runner-up at the Division II level last spring.

Heading the Saint Mary's tennis team in her first head coaching position is Debra Laverie, a 1985 graduate of the College. Laverie, who played tennis for the Belles at the number-one singles and doubles position for four years, ended her collegiate career ranked first in both singles and doubles competition in District 23 of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics. She currently ranks 10th nationally in the NCAA.

Laverie, a Columbus, Ohio, native who has played tennis competitively since the age of 12, served as captain of the Saint Mary's team for her final two years and earned most valuable player honors all four years. In addition, she also was awarded the College's prestigious Athlete of the Year award her junior and senior years.

Tom Carroll is set to join Irish hockey coach Lefly Smith's staff this fall as an assistant. The 24-year-old native of Edina, Minn., was a member of two state championship teams at Edina High School and later attended Wisconsin, where he played on two national championship teams of the Badgers.

He was an assistant coach at Calvert Military Academy in Culver, Ind., last season.

Steve Beurelein was selected as one of eight NCAA representatives on drug abuse. He will tape a public service announcement as part of a program to prevent youth drug abuse, with the announcements scheduled to run this fall during college football games.

Beuerlein will be ready, but Griffin out for year

QB says he'll play in opener vs. Michigan

By JEFF BLUMB

"I'll be ready for the Michigan game," said Beuerlein, "but I don't want to give any more than my mind." Notre Dame quarterback Steve Beuerlein said last Friday he was quite ready to bring energy to the offense to test any rumors to the contrary.

Beuerlein underwent successful shoulder surgery on April 16 to repair a painful chipped collarbone which hampered his throwing last season. Many observers had pinned Notre Dame's hopes for success in '84 on his ability to make a complete recovery in time for the season. That question mark now may have been eliminated as a possibility that he will be under center, when Sept. 14 rolls around.

Surgery was performed by Dr. Frank Jobe, a shoulder specialist and the architect of the Los Angeles Dodgers. The procedure involved removing a small piece of clavicle bone from Beuerlein's shoulder. Jobe had been 100 percent successful with this type of surgery in the past.

Beuerlein, who has thrown at both of the team's two-day practices on some days and at only one other session, said he plans to go through with his rehabilitation.

"The arm still gets a little tired," he said, adding that he isn't ready yet for full practice.

Broken right ankle sidelines Irish first-team nose tackle

By JEFF BLUMB

"It's a tough break," said Notre Dame head coach Gerry Faust, "but Mike Griffin is a tough player and he'll be back and ready to go next fall."

A two-year monogram winner, Griffin is a veteran of 22 games in his Notre Dame career, and has been known for his solid play against the run.

Sophomore quarterback Terry Andrysiak also suffered a recent injury, but it was one of a far less serious nature. In somewhat of a freak accident that occurred while playing basketball, Andrysiak broke a bone in his left hand, below his little finger. The injury occurred two weeks ago, just before Andrysiak was scheduled to return to campus for the opening of fall practice.

Andrysiak's hand was fitted with a cast, but returning to Notre Dame and it is expected that he will have to continue wearing some sort of protection on his hand for the next four to six weeks. Because the finger is not on his throwing hand, however, he has been forced to miss any practices, and he has suffered no limitations on his playing time in practice thus far.

Andrysiak, along with classmate Tim Byrne, figures to be the permanent backup to returning quarterback Steve Beuerlein this season.

Special to The Observer

To some people, it may have seemed quiet at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's over the summer months as most students left the two campuses for home. Still, there was quite a bit happening at NDACM athletics over the summer. The following is a rundown of some of the more significant events:

Sharos Petro, Larry Gallo and Dennis Stark took on new responsibilities in the Notre Dame athletic department this summer. Petro became the director of the University's Department of Physical Education and head coach of the Irish women's tennis team, giving up those positions to become an assistant athletic director under Gene Corrigan.

After coming to Notre Dame in 1979, Petro served three years as the first women's basketball coach, taking a walk-on program and coaching it to a 20-6 record and a berth in the IAAW national tournament by her third season. Probably best known as coach of the women's tennis team, she put together an impressive 114-45 record over seven seasons. Under her direction, the Irish finished third in Division II play in 1983 and '84, before placing second last spring. That '85 squad went 25-5 and Petro was named NCAA Division II coach of the year.

She will continue to teach in the physical education department as she works in a number of administrative areas under Corrigan.

Gallo, in his sixth season as baseball coach, takes over Petro's duties as head of the physical education department. He has been a phys ed instructor since coming to Notre Dame in 1979.

After one season as an assistant baseball coach, Gallo took and the head full coaching job in 1981 and presently owns a 119-108-5 record following the '85 season. He owns both undergraduate and master's degrees from the University of Rhode Island.

Following 27 years as Notre Dame's men's and women's swimming coach, Stark gave up his coaching chores to take over as director of aquatics for the University's new swimming pool, which is nearing completion on the east side of the ACC. He will coordinate all activities in the yet-to-be-opened facility, in addition to continuing to teach in the physical education department.

A Notre Dame graduate, Stark compiled a 147-157-1 mark as head of the men's team and had been the program's only coach since it achieved varsity status in 1958. He also has been the women's coach for the four years it has been a varsity sport, twice earning North Star Conference coach of the year honors as his team has won consecutive NCAA titles.

Assuming the dual role of Saint Mary's varsity volleyball coach and assistant director of athletics and recreation was Mary Jo Lambert. Lambert, who holds a B.S. degree in education from the University of Idaho and a M.A.T. degree from Whitworth College of Spokane, Wash., taught Health and Physical Education at Saint Mary's last year in her first year with the College. She also assisted the Misawa Marian High School volleyball team to 1984 In­ dian sectional and regional championships.

Lambert previously taught and coached at Eastern Washington State College and Spokane Fall College Community. At Spokane, she founded the entire women's athletic program, which was the first in the state of Wash­ ington to award full women's scholarships. She also has served as a past chairperson of the Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (IAAW) Volleyball Division and was on the governing board for two years.

Named the 1981 Washington State Volleyball Coach of the Year, Lambert's college coaching record stands at 211-60, while winning championships at the regional and state level.

Lambert, who is married to Notre Dame women's vol­ leyball coach Art Lambert, will be serving in her first col­ legiate athletic administrative position.

Taking over as head men's and women's swimming coach at Notre Dame was Tim Welsh, who had been the coach at Johns Hopkins the past eight years. In that time, he took the Hopkins men's team to a NCAA Division III national championships, in 1978 and then again in 1979 besides winning eight Middle Atlantic Conference cham­ pionships.

A member of the NCAA Swimming Bishops Committee for women, Welsh also guided the Hopkins women's team to six winning seasons and one MAC Crown. He was named national Division III coach of the year in 1979.

A 40-year old native of Lansdowne, Pa., Welsh graduated magna cum laude from Providence in 1966, ear­ ning his master's in English from Virginia in 1967.

Football ticket distribution will begin with seniors on Sept. 2

Wednesday, August 27, 1985 - page 20

It is time once again for that annual experience known as "ticket distribution." All students who will receive season football ticket applications at their local on- or off-campus address by Friday.

Applications should not be mailed in. They should be brought, along with remittance (cash or check) and ID to Gate 5 of the ACC at the time specified for each class.

One student may present up to four applications and ID cards. Married students who wish to purchase tickets for their spouses must show proof of marriage.

Tickets will be distributed to seniors on Monday, Sept. 2, to juniors on Tuesday, Sept. 3, to sophomores and graduate students on Wednesday, Sept. 4, and to freshmen on Thursday, Sept. 5. The ticket office will be open from 3 p.m. to 8 p.m. each day.

Those students who have an incorrect class shown on their applications must obtain a letter from the dean's office of their college indicating their correct standing. This letter must be presented at Gate 5 along with the ticket application.

Any student who has not received his application by Friday should go to the Lafoture Ballroom between 5 p.m. and 9 p.m. on Friday or between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. on Saturday to pick up an application. The Ombudsmen will have a display set up to handle ticket applications.

Notre Dame Ticket Manager Mike Bobinski said that it will be possible for students to get a second set of tick­ ets by getting an application from the Ombudsmen.

"Some people may try to double up and get two tickets," he said, "but it is a matter of time before we cut them because we will be checking the write-in applications against the pre-printed ones."
