Howard resident critically injured in hit and run early Sat.

O riented to be increased from the 90-degree temperatures Saturday at the East Race

By MARK PANKOWSKI

A Notre Dame freshman remained in critical condition last after a hit and run driver struck him on U.S.
1-33 between Saint Mary's and Notre Dame early Saturday morning.

Kevin Hurley, a Howard Hall resident, was in intensive care and "holding his own" as of 10 p.m. last ight, said Lydia Vaughn, a registered urse at Memorial Hospital of South Bend.

Hurley had undergone approximately nine hours of surgery Saturday for multiple injuries, including a fractured pelvis, bruised lung, fractured lower left leg, and numerous abdominal and head injuries, Vaughn said.

Mary Beth Gallivan, a 23-year-old South Bend resident, was charged Saturday with criminal recklessness involving bodily injury, said Rex Rakow, assistant director of Notre Dame Security.

Gallivan and a male acquaintance, also a 25-year-old South Bend resident, had gone to the St. Joseph County Police Department Saturday afternoon and said they were the ones who were in the car when it struck Hurley, said Rakow. Gallivan stated she was the driver, he said.

"We won't say no to a fee increase if it's shown to be necessary," he said.

As they crossed, a 1970 Firebird Trans-Am traveling northbound at an undetermined speed "came out of nowhere," and hit Hurley, Rakow guited one of the students as saying.

The driver did not stop, Rakow
said.

One of the students stayed with Hurley, who was conscious the insious, while the other ran to the Fatima Rec Center and called an ambulance, said Rakow.

Hurley was taken to Memorial Hospital and surgery was begun at approximately 9 a.m. after doctors had completed their diagnosis of his injuries. Rakow said. He came out of surgery at approximately 3:30 p.m.

Although Gallivan was arrested and taken to the county jail Saturday, Notre Dame Security is continuing its investigation with the assistance of the St. Joseph County Police Department, Rakow said.

Gallivan's lawyer has instructed her not to make any voluntary statements, he said.

Gallivan's vehicle has been impounded and will be processed by an evidence technician for physical evidence this morning, Rakow said.
Investigators also will interview a man claiming to have witnessed the accident.

ND class governments want more of student activity fee

By MARK PANKOWSKI

Copy Editor

Everyone seems to agree on the problem: Notre Dame class governments need more money.

Few, however, seem to agree on the solution.
The problem stems from the increased role class governments have come to play in students' social life.

Although the classes' role has changed, the 1984 fiscal policy has not and classes still must share 20 percent of the student activity fees with clubs, student government, and special projects such as the United Way campaign, one
obligated to clubs and organizations,
and one obligated to those groups under the 80-percent committee.

Instead of a third budget committee, Domagalski favors the creation of one committee that would "have all the students sit down and decide how to divide 100 percent (of the funds) among all the organizations."

That way, he said, if there has been a change in the needs of the students, each year's senate can look at that change and fund accordingly.

There is "no room for immediate change," because of the way the in­ cal policy is set up now, Domagalski
said.

One advocate of an increase in the student activity fee to be increased, the approval of the several University officers and Board of Trustees also would be required.

One advocate of an increase in the 35 student activities fee is Bill
Healy, student body president.

"It's not only the classes that want more money, it's the clubs too.
Everyone wants more money," Healy said. "Raising the fee would help clubs, student government, and the Student Activities Board."

Another advocate of an increase in the fee is Jon Neal, director of student activities. "Each university, Neal said, "can be charged with raising the same amount of dollars as much as we do.

If the senate recommends an increase and it can justify the need, Tyon said, "he could get it approved by the officers as well as the Board.

"We won't say no to a fee increase
if it's shown to be necessary," he said.

If the senate bolts on raising the activities fee, Neal said she would support the addition of a third budget committee.

She would recommend one committee be obligated to the classes and special projects such as the United Way campaign, one
obligated to clubs and organizations,
and one obligated to those groups
now under the 80-percent committee.

Companies offer instant credit to college students

Instant credit.

The typical college student's mailbox is stuffed with letters offering an array of plastic for just a signature. And hoarders of students are responding to these offers.

Ten years ago it would have been difficult, if not impossible, for a college student to have a credit card in his or her own name. Today, if you're a junior or senior, a whole army of banks, department stores and gas companies are vying for a spot in your wallet.

For a student to receive credit from a bank such as Citibank, he or she probably would have to hold a $2,000 per year job. Most college students have no steady source of income, no collateral and are at least several thousand dollars in debt. Why then are companies vying for students' credit?

The reasons aren't terribly difficult to understand. Most students aren't burdened with loans of ready cash, but with a credit card, one doesn't need cash to get by. If for those with plastic money, food, gas, books and certain forms of liquid entertainment are all just a signature away. But few students are in need of credit for emergency or impulse purchases, there's always the almighty credit rating. We're warned that without this mystic of an approval, we'll be unable to buy a car or rent an apartment upon graduation. How does one build a credit rating? Hold (and use) credit cards, of course.

For the need of a good credit rating is not only a reason to apply for credit; it also serves as insurance for the creditor. No ambitious college student is going to risk a good credit rating by defaulting on a MasterCard bill. He or she will find some way, be it a raid on the savings account or a check from mom and dad, to cover at least the minimum payment.

According to Michael Fromm, public relations representative for VISA, "Students have as much to spend as everyone else and are as reliable as everyone else."

Citibank, the largest bank in the country, is also one of the most innovative in cracking the college market. Three years ago, they launched a test campaign at 300 schools. Today they have programs at 1,500 colleges and recently announced a credit hot-line. Students can now dial a toll-free number to request applications for a Citibank Visa or MasterCard, as well as several depart-

Citibank offers students money now, when their needs and funds are comparatively minimal, knowing that when they graduate they'll be carrying that Citibank credit card.

A huge untapped market of reliable customers, and a well-planned attack on that market - a very smart business venture by Citibank. The lower the credit barriers mean to students?

Coup overthrows Thai government

Associated Press

BANGKOK, Thailand - A group of military officers seized control of official Radio Thailand early this morning and announced they had seized power "to correct the seriously deteriorating situation of the economy."

Father reporters had said some air force officers had attempted a coup but encountered opposition from army units.

But the broadcast over Radio Thailand said military men led by a former armed force supreme commander, Gen. Sarm Nananok, had overthrown the electoral government of Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanonda, who was on an official visit to Indonesia.

"There is no change of the commanders of the police and the military," the broadcast said. "Any percent bracket and put in the 80-percent bracket."

"We should consider them as a major hindering obligation rather than as a club of organization," Abood said.

Whatever the solution turns out to be, Healy said, the classes will be receiving more money in the future.

"Ever since the alcohol policy, there's been an assumption in the idea that students at Notre Dame deserve a social life," he said.

"Everyone is now committed to that including the Board of Trustees," Healy added.

The current state of affairs in South Africa has occupied the front pages of our hometown newspapers all summer. The situation lies heavily on the conscience of Americans according to polls, and lawmakers, reacting to the growing public pressure, have called for some sort of punitive action by our nation.

no easy solutions

Most Americans agree on the necessary eradication of the evil system of apartheid, but few agree on how to go about it. It has been suggested that dismantling apartheid is good for its country. It is difficult to escape the idea that continued violence and an eventual revolution, whether successful or unsuccessful, are inevitable. Hard-line conservative and liberal Americans have ready-made prescriptions to cure South Africa's ills. It would be so nice to believe that either will be a panacea, however, the interested observer increasingly becomes frustrated the more he learns about the situation.

Some troubling facts make our dilemmas all the more perplexing.

"The white Afrikaners have been in South Africa for centuries. To say they do not belong in Africa or do not deserve a share of power is akin to claiming today's Americans do not have the same rights in what was once Indian territory. Most of the black South Africans are more recent arrivals to the area than the Afrikaners."

"No existing government in power ever is truly moderate. In seeking for one-man/one-vote, the reformers actually are calling for the removal of white authority in South Africa. Although one-man/one-vote is what we as Americans agree is moral and in the interests of the United States, the white government in Pretoria never will concur because in its opinion, this system amounts to political suicide."

As troubling as it sounds, the establishment of true democracy in South Africa involves an overthrow of power, and probably violence and bloodshed. This is repulsive to all of us. Growing pressure from the right-wing conservative party in South Africa only delays any attempt at reform by Botha and the ruling national party. Even more unsettling is the growing membership of several racial-military parties which call for any and all measures to combat reform. They are willing to use violence to maintain apartheid and their racially segregated society. There are enough administrators near Botha who are insufficiently moderate that slow progress and convince him reform only will lead South Africa down a path of "communism" and disaster.

"The blacks in South Africa are not unified in their proposed means for change. Range from blacks who work for the government as informers, to those who align themselves with the outlawed African National Congress and see violence as the only means toward reform, the blacks have had little success in finding a leader who represents all of their interests. Currently, Desmond Tutu seems to be the most visible black leader but large groups such as the Zulus, led by Gaba Butheteli, and the United Democratic Front, are represented publicly with Tutu on the methods of reform. Other interests and conflicts sometimes divert the attention away from the original goals. The two largest black organizations in South Africa, the Inkatha and the UDF, currently are locked in a struggle for land and influence.

There is no guarantee that international economic pressure, such as that from the United States, will improve the situation for South African blacks. American conservatives make a substantial claim that it will hurt the blacks more than it will help them, even driving unemployed blacks back to the Israeli/Buddhist/Protestant, the blacks agree. Divestiture sends Pretoria an unclouded show of American disapproval that our consciences merely cannot dismiss. Tutu claims the loss of black jobs is a price his people may have to pay to achieve the political rights they deserve.

The entire controversy is complex. Additional problems include the unions, the Indians and coloreds, the mixed feelings of the South African press and other complicating matters. We begin to see why there is no simple course of action for the United States.

One nation needs to take more action, but how? A sophisticated problem such as this one calls for a sophisticated solution, one that Washington does not have at the moment. One thing we can say in neither Reagan's nor Bush's method is working.

Ken Kollman is a sophomore English and government major and a regular Viewpoint columnist.

President Reagan has done little more than associate this emergency. Unfortunately, President South Africa all the more, causing a backlash how does the world's most powerful country, according to polls, and lawmakers, reacting to the growing public pressure, have called for some sort of punitive action by our nation.

The next day, some students expressed their attitude toward the planned structure by stacking boxes in the Old Fieldhouse Mall. These boxes were arranged as a replacement of the planned structure in an attempt to save the University more than half a million dollars. Such activity reveals that students at Notre Dame are not as apathetic as many say. In fact, students act quickly when they saw what was at stake (more than $500,000).

The structure depicted in The Observer readily revealed Notre Dame is not a parochial place. One of the published comments on the memorial said it would be similar to the Greek memorials to their dead. Another report said Notre Dame's memorial would be a tribute much like Stonehenge (a memorial to the Sun God).

Since neither of these civilizations were Christian, and certainly not Catholic, this addition to Notre Dame is a tribute to our ecumenical spirit. It portrays Notre Dame's willingness to embrace pagan cultures and to be conformed to them.

Various deprecating comments have been forthcoming from many quarters. Most of these comments have centered around the tremendous expenditure of money for what seems like a funerary like monument to the fallen.

Such comments reveal that students fail to grasp another attribute of this memorial. Just as the military has spent $5,000 on a coffee pot, Notre Dame is able to spend $500,000 on these stone columns. We are becoming chic. In a similar vein, various states have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars decorating their highways with what they claim to be art, so too is Notre Dame decorating its quadrangles. Thus, Notre Dame is drawing the ability to stay abreast of the current artistic fashion.

Some of my fellow students do not understand this mentality. Their varied comments express a different attitude toward memorials. The suggestions they have given for a memorial to our fallen heroes range from a chapel to a new building on campus dedicated to the fallen warriors. Or maybe the University could endow some faculty chairs as a memorial. All of these alternatives surely were considered and rejected for 'good' reasons.

These criticisms and comments about the new structure indicate that students fail to appreciate the practical benefits of the stone columns standing in a pool of water.

Since the memorial will be located on the mall, students will pass it every day and be reminded of their fallen classmates. Many of these students will be so touched by this memorial they will say a short prayer for the fallen. At the very least, the students will be forced to reflect on the horrors of war and the nuclear threat under which we all live, and because of which we all might die.

Perhaps though, the best comment about this new structure was made by a student who noticed the structure's stone material and flowing water. These attributes of the structure coupled with its proximity to the men's dormitories on the north quadrangle mandates that men walking from Senior or the Four Corners will pass directly by it. When they do so, they probably will not reflect on the fallen heroes, nor on the beautiful artistic touches. But in a fit of need, they will too show their creativity and do what the early Christians did to so many pre-Christian buildings: they will transform it to suit their needs.

Have faith, I sense a party could be happening.

Hey girls, come to our 14 by 11 room for a ball. This party is not very exciting. Our next stop is off campus. This event will take you far away to some street named after a city larger than South Bend. Look, there are 200 times the amount of people here as in the dorm room.

The party might last two or three hours depending on how fast the infamous decline level rises. Luckily our hosts have informed the South Bend police of the party so they can break up the gathering. After all, I do not want to have too good of a time.

George Rickey — a world-renowned artist comes home

George Rickey, an internationally recognized artist, is known for his kinetic sculptures that move with the wind. Their distinct reflections in the water create a multi-dimensional effect.

Rickey, who was born in South Bend in 1917, returned to his birthplace last week with an evening exhibit at the South Bend Art Center, the Snite Museum, Saint Mary's Hammes Gallery, Indiana University at South Bend, and Rickey's childhood home on West Washington Street.

For the Snite exhibit, Rickey chose sculptures that were constructed using principles of engineering. "At the Snite there are four or five drawings that are elementary theories of physics," he said. "Two Conical Segments Gyratory Gyratory II" has large curved segments that twist in the air.

Also in the Snite exhibit, "Two Open Rectangles Horizontal," "Two Open Rectangles Excentric," and "Four Open Rectangles Excentric" use repetitions of the same basic shapes. These sculptures at first look the same, but become different as they move in the wind.

Close by is a photograph of a similar sculpture outside a building that shows these themes in a much larger scale. Rickey said he considered "small to big" when planning Notre Dame's exhibit.

Rickey's exhibit at the Snite Museum features jewelry and small sculptures made for Rickey's wife Edith as well as figurative drawings. "Where the girls are, why not adornment?" Rickey joked. One set of earrings and a necklace is part of the five-campus exhibit at the South Bend Art Center.

Rickey's major exhibitions have been at The Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington D.C., The Guggenheim Museum in New York City, The Walker Art Center in Minneapolis, Neue Nationalgalerie in West Berlin, and the Stedelijk Museum in Amsterdam.

Rickey's interest in things mechanical can be traced to his youth, when after moving from South Bend at the age of six, he spent a great deal of time at the shipyards in Glasgow, Scotland. Rickey also remembers his grandfather, the clockmaker, who could make the village clock run.

Rickey says, "I design what I want." But he employs "an engineer for anything that is concerned with safety." His engineer calculates the extent and types of damages possible if the steel sculpture falls from high winds.

Rickey explains that "whatever diverse mechanical devices I conceived, I was always dealing with the very ancient device - the pendulum whose movements through time and space are a compromise of force and freedom.”

The exhibit opened formally at the South Bend Art Center on Thursday. Saturday heralded Rickey's return with an evening banquet.

By a slim 91, ND and SMC break the world record for musical chairs

Phil Wolf
features staff writer

They start when they are about six years old. They spend hours practicing alone in the basement, and they are the terror of the birthday party circuit. They dream of someday going to Notre Dame to compete with the best.

They are collegiate musical chairs players, and they are not a pretty lot.

They assemble by the thousands on the outskirts of college campuses to play their controversial game. They display a blatant disrespect for the rules of the game as they run, dive, push and elbow their way into history.

And now they have brought a national championship to Notre Dame. No, make that the world championship. Imagine: Notre Dame, led by the musical chairs capital of the universe. The subway alumni will be flocking to the campus and buying musical chairs paraphernalia by the bundle. The bookstore already has contracts with companies to stock official Fighting Irish musical chairs belts, elbow pads and T-shirts. The possibilities are almost endless.

Of course, there are those who do not approve of the sport, particularly at a Catholic institution such as Notre Dame. They attack the musical chairs establishment for corrupting the minds of the future leaders of our country and our Church. They say that the players are too competitive, that the sport has lost its fun aspect. They question the evil connotations of the "snake" pattern used for the large contests. Society is not equipped to deal with these junkies and the chaos they may cause.

Sure, they're mostly freshmen, but not all of them. Twelve of the top 16 finishers last Friday may have been rookies, but certainly all 5,151 were not first year players. How can we excuse the actions of "responsible" upperclassmen such as Domagalski and his counter-part at Saint Mary's, Michelle Coleman? How can we explain the involvement of every class government, the student body government, the Student Activities Board, the Student Activities Office and the Notre Dame Alumni Association.

How could this have happened at Notre Dame? "We thought musical chairs would be fun," said Jim Domagalski, the leader of the musical chairs movement at Notre Dame. "It's kind of a college thing to do, trying to play musical chairs with 5,000 people."

Just imagine what the administration is going to do when it discovers that almost 6,000 students had fun last Friday night. Bye-bye musical chairs.

And what about all of those MC junkies who will be out on the streets? Never again will they be able to enjoy a simple game of musical chairs with only 200 people. They always will be trying to organize bigger and bigger groups to play the game. Society is not geared to deal with these junkies and the chaos they may cause.

People recognize it? Or will they ignore it as they have ignored Bookstore Basketball, the world's largest basketball tournament? Whatever Guinness says, however, there still are problems to be dealt with on campus. Like the case of winner Bill Brosnan, a Flan-ner freshman who now spends hours a day waiting away in front of his new color television. Rumor has it that Brosnan will be on the collegiate MC circuit soon, but the Notre Dame ticket office says it will not provide students with the opportunity to get tickets to any of the away events.

Then there is Carrie Deane, a Saint Mary's freshman who now is wired permanently to her new personal stereo, her prize for a second place finish. She says she was just out there Friday to have fun, but anyone who was there knows better.

This musical chairs thing has gone too far. Something has got to be done before Domagalski and his henchmen branch out into pin the tail on the donkey. Soon the whole campus may be eating cake and ice cream three meals a day. Surely, this sort of activity must stop.

players should be valuable to the team.

Completing the team are freshmen Ellen Boyle, Donna Conley, Mary Crawford, Becky Davis, Therege Harrington and Anne Precious.

As sponsor of the varsity sport, Samey’s handles the expenses and its scheduling. According to Aker, when soccer was a club sport, the College funded only a portion of the expenses. Student Activities and Athletics was the liaison while the NVA also contributed to the soccer club, but the players and their parents were responsible for their transportation and uniform costs.

The team’s varsity status allows them to compete against inter-college teams, producing a more demanding schedule than those of previous season.

“We play some of the best women’s collegiate teams in the Midwest, including Indiana, Michigan State, Wisconsin-Milwaukee and Marquette,” said Aker.

Such a schedule requires long practices and intense training. Team members have been practicing daily for two weeks to prepare and train with other soccer teams.

“I think we have the potential skill wise to go far,” Aker said. “It’s good for these schools,” Aker said. “Whether we have the physical strength and stamina, there’s no telling right now. We can compete with them, though.”

The Belles begin their season tomorrow at Angel Field when they play host to Cal State Dane Game time is 4:30 p.m.

Men’s soccer

The men’s soccer team had been practicing since the end of June. As of Monday, the team had spent two weeks scrimmaging with collegiate opponents and inter-collegiate teams, producing a more demanding schedule than those of previous season.

“We play some of the best women’s collegiate teams in the Midwest, including Indiana, Michigan State, Wisconsin-Milwaukee and Marquette,” said Aker.

EVEN STRAIGHT'S CAN'T HELP IF YOU FLUNK TUITION.

Today, the toughest thing about going to college is finding the money to pay for it. But Army ROTC can help — two ways.

First, you can apply for an Army ROTC scholarship. It covers tuition, books, and supplies, and pays you up to $1,000 each school year it's in effect.

But even if you're not a scholarship recipient, ROTC can still help with financial assistance—up to $1,000 a year for your last two years in the program.

and blocking game with much more confidence and success, helped in large part by the efforts of Bennington.

Unfortunately for the Irish, Kentucky responded with an 8-1 run to put the score at 9-5 in favor of the Wildcats.

It was then Notre Dame's turn to rally, as it evened the score at 9-9 behind the serving of Kathleen Moran. The Irish could do no better, however, as Kentucky scored the last six points to win the third game, 15-9, and complete its sweep.

While understandably upset over his team's performance, Lambert praised the play of Bennington.

"Tracy played well," he said. "She was really the only bright spot on the team tonight."

Lambert stressed the importance of the group coming together soon, since the schedule only gets tougher.

The Belles were up against Marquette on Sunday, and at the No. 1 singles match Dimberio lost to opponent VanLieshout 1-6, 6-3 while Boyd was slammed by Lohr 0-6, 1-6. Drahota was defeated by Ploetz 6-3, 6-6 and teammate Heratz was shut out in two sets, 0-6, 0-6, by Marquette's Janusonis. To wrap things up, Campbell and Szajko both fell short of a victory with 6-0, 6-1 and 1-6, 6-6 losses against Foote and Murray at the number-five and six singles spots, respectively.

"In the Marquette singles matches, the girls knew they were good and that they had the shots," Laverie pointed out. "Keeping confident when you are behind is the key."

Dimberio and Boyd could not bounce back against Marquette's VanLieshout and Murray, the number-one doubles team, and were defeated by a score of 6-0, 6-1.

"We have to work together and know each others games," said Dimberio, a freshman from Ft. Wayne. "Our team is young and for our first collegiate match, we played well," added freshman teammate Boyd.

Drahota and Heratz fell short to Lohr and Janusonis 6-0, 6-1 while the Belles' Campbell and Szajko could not volley to a win against Marquette's Foote and Ploetz and lost by a score of 6-0, 6-0 in doubles competition.

Choosing a long distance company is a lot like choosing a roommate.

It's better to know what they're like before you move in.

Living together with someone for the first time can be an "educational" experience.

And living with a long distance company isn't any different. Because some companies may not give you all the services you're used to getting from AT&T.

For instance, with some companies you have to spend a certain amount before you qualify for their special volume discounts. With some others, voice quality may vary.

But when you choose AT&T, there won't be any surprises when you move in. You'll get the same high-quality, trouble-free service you're used to.

With calls that sound as close as next door. Guaranteed 60% and 40% discounts off our Day Rate—so you can talk during the times you can relax. Immediate credit for wrong numbers. Operator assistance and collect calling.

So when you're asked to choose a long distance company, choose AT&T. Because whether you're into Mozart or metal, quality is the one thing everyone can agree on.

Reach out and touch someone.

Notre Dame women's tennis team wins Evansville, Marquette

By JOHN COYLE
Sports Writer

Notre Dame also appeared strong in doubles, winning all three matches in straight sets. The story was pretty much the same in the afternoon against Marquette. Panther, Colligan and OWen defeated the first three matches, as all three again won in straight sets. Davis defeated Lyn Davis 6-2, 6-0 in the fourth match and Biswara was victorious 6-0, 6-5 against the next match. Schmidt completed the single competition, topping Mary Foose 6-1,6-1. The Irish finished their perfect day by crushing through the final match.

Gefman obviously was pleased with her team's performance. She gave most of the credit for her excellent victory to the team's preparation during the week and to the players' positive attitude. "I made the practice matches this week as difficult and challenging as possible to the actual matches were a breeze," Gefman said. "I felt very comfortable and confident because the gentle practice going all along. They give me 150 percent, whether in practice or in a match."

Despite the apparently flawless performance, Gefman said she feels that the Irish doubles play has room for improvement. The doubles winning crossing was a big deal for the team, as both players had faced tough competition. "I would have liked to have seen, but the said that she believes that time, things should come together.

The next match for the Irish is Sept. 17, when they return to DeVilbiss to meet the Blue Devils. The transition to the clay courts of Notre Dame could present a problem for the Irish but Gefman said she is confident that her players are strong enough to adapt and to play well.

ND soccer team loses third game as Wisconsin team wins 3-2

By GREG STOHOR
Sports Writer

Wisconsin-Milwaukee handed the Irish their third straight loss with a come-from-behind 3-2 overtime victory at Alumni Field Saturday.

Notre Dame now 0-3, never trailing in the first half of the game, its home opener. A shot by Michelle Dasso in the 21st minute of the second overtime deflected off the leg of Irish defender Paul Gleckner into the goal to give the Panthers the win.

"We were so disappointed because we outplayed them," said Irish captain Munch. "We have to with our ability and the composition."

Notre Dame head coach Grace Grace said he was not too disappointed with his team's performance as Wisconsin-Milwaukee had the Irish at 6-0, 6-1, 6-1 against Evansville.

"We just didn't have things go our way," Grace said. "They had a very good team. They've very well coached."

The Irish took the early lead on a Tom Gerlacher goal at the 10:47 minute of the first half. Smart McDonald passed to Munschler, who carried the ball into Panther territory before spotting Gerlacher at the top of the penalty area. The Panther then blasted a shot past Panther goalkeeper Janon Balensteiner into the upper left corner of the net for a 1-0 Irish lead.

Notre Dame remained on top until the final minute of the first half. Pippa evened the score just 21 seconds left in the first half. Pippa popped up a loose ball in front of the Irish net and boomed a shot off sliding Irish keeper Hugh Brown to make it 1-1.

Notre Dame controlled the early minutes of the second half and took a 2-1 advantage when Chris Nich.

Saint Mary's tennis team drops two to open season

By PAMELA CUSICK
Sports Writer

Saint Mary's women's tennis team lost two matches by identical 9-0 scores this weekend to open the season. The Belles dropped the two games to competitive NCAA Division III opponents. The Belles host Marquette University and Marquette University at the Angel Athletic Facility this weekend. "Belles" is another name for Saint Mary's team remained enthusiastic after a tough weekend. "Coach Debbie Laverie said she feels that the Belles should improve as the season progresses. "We can only get better after playing good schools," said Laverie, a former Saint Mary's' sabre. "This weekend was a good test for these two or two of the best teams we'll play and we should keep working and get it better."

The Belles' singles and doubles results against Evansville and Marquette indicate how close each match was. In singles play against Evansville, freshman Anne DLinkedIn 6-1, 4-6 in the first singles spot as no. 2 teammate Sonja Boyd was defeated by Sonja Owen 6-0, 6-0. Junior Kim Drabotta was defeated by three sets with Jennifer Dolick 5-6, 6-4, 6-3, while freshman Bridget Herlitz was edged by Sonja Sander 6-4, 6-2 at No. 3. Sophomore Sheila Campbell was defeated by Mary Longstaff 3-6, 6-0, and freshman Charline Snook was defeated by Jane Lanfond 6-4, 6-2 at the number-five and number-six spots, respectively.

"We were enthusiastic and a little bit nervous since it was our first match of the season," observed Laverie. "The number-five and number-six singles players went to three sets and that was an encouraging sign."

In doubles competition, Dimmert and Boyd were beaten by Sonja Owen and Decker 1-6, 6-3 in No. 2, as the second doubles team constructed the fastest 8-6, 6-3 victory. Campbell were edged by Owen and Sander 2-6, 4-6, 6-4 at No. 3. Number four doubles teammates Herlitz and Snook were sliced by Lanfond and Linn 6-4, 6-2. "The doubles matches were close. I think the team has to work on playing together a little more," said Laverie. "It's a matter of getting used to their partners and gain the experience and confidence of a successful doubles team."

Kentucky hand Irish volleyball team 3-0 loss

By CHRIS STARKEY
Sports Writer

The high hopes for the Notre Dame volleyball team suffered a setback Friday night in the form of a 3-0 losing battle against the University of Kentucky in its season opener.

Notre Dame failed to take a game from the Wildcats in the best-of-five series, as the Irish often were the victim of their own mistakes. "We just found too many ways to beat ourselves," Notre Dame coach Art Lambert said.

Notre Dame boasts a very talented team, but the lack of experience among the starting six hitters was evident. "At the end we had hero syndrome going on," said Lambert. "We carried the ball too much, and we tried shots that we shouldn't have tried." Both teams suffered from the near-100-degree heat on the field, but Grace dismissed the idea that the weather conditions were the cause of his squad's loss. "I thought the heat hurt them (the Panthers) more," he said. "I thought we would do well in the heat." "It was pretty hot out there, so we'd have to fight for every game. In the last two games we've been in a position to win."
