Two killed, 25 arrested during riots in England

Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, England An angry crowd attacked Britain's law enforcement officers yesterday after the scene of overnight rioting and arson that left two people dead in the country's second-largest city.

The violence started Monday night in a confrontation between blacks and a policeman and ended with 50 shops gutted by fire. It was the worst rioting to hit Britain since 1981, when racial violence raged for two days in parts of London, Liverpool and Manchester when the worst racial break-down of law and order in this century.

Home Secretary Douglas Hurd visited the rundown district of Handsworth yesterday afternoon to view the destruction and quickly turned over the investigation to the police. Hurd was hurried into a crowd. Hurd was hurried into a crowd.

Party in Ann Arbor

By MARY REYNOLDS

All students who were lucky enough to get tickets to this weekend's Notre Dame/Michigan football game, and even those who weren't so fortunate, are invited to a kick-off party this weekend in Ann Arbor.

Sponsored by the Notre Dame Club of Ann Arbor, the party will be held Friday night from 8 to midnight at the St. Patrick's Church Parish Center on S. Main Street.

Admission, $10 at the door, includes "all the food you can eat," according to Club Publicity Chairman Jerry McKay.

Corrigan to HPC: 'Keep off the field'

By SCOTT BEARBY

"Keep off the football field." Director of Athletics Gene Corrigan asked the Hall Presidents' Council last night to relay that request to students who foed the Notre Dame football field during home games.

Corrigan told HPC that a few incidentss before games last year led to confrontations with security and opposing football players. He said, "This is not what Notre Dame is known for. This is not what we can accept as an embarrassment to anyone associated with Notre Dame.

The situation became particularly bad before the game with University of Miami. As a result, Miami Head Football Coach Jimmy Johnson wrote a letter to the University of South Carolina coach telling him to expect Notre Dame fans to cause maximum embarrassment to his football players.

We seek students intimidating opposing players spread to Michigan State, which will be bringing security to the upcoming game against Notre Dame, according to Corrigan.

Corrigan said they are appealing to the student body to stay off the field. Students may feel that being on the field prop up the team, but Corrigan says this is not true. He further added that pep-up the team can take place by cheering loudly from the stands.

While addressing the HPC, Corrigan also informed the group about the new regulation concerning the University of Miami fan who kept the parking lots before, during, and after football games. The University was involved in a landmark legal case in which it was determined that Notre Dame had instructed it to remove its fans from the campus and in the parking lots during games, according to Corrigan.

Although Corrigan said he is not banning anyone, he will be restrictions on bringing in excessive

New ‘animal house’ to hold research beasts

By KATHY A. CEPERICH

Notre Dame will soon have a new ‘animal house.’

The almost complete addition to Galvin Life Science Center, the Frank M. Friesen Biological Research Facility, will house research animals and facilities, according to Director of Athletics Gene Corrigan.

The new facility was built to comply with the regulations, he said. The University, however, could have delayed construction several years before losing accreditation for the research center, added Francis Castellino, dean of the college of science.

The new Friemann facility contains 33 rooms, most of which will be used to house research animals: rodents, cats, dogs, and the various parasites which feed on them.

Two will be used as procedure rooms, where animal blood and tissue can be collected, he said, and two other rooms will contain equipment for performing necropsies, animal surgeries.

There will also be a receiving and a quarantine room, he said.

Spence explained that species isolation rooms are essential in raising healthy animals.

New Personnel boss provides ‘progressive’ touch

By BOB MUSELMAN

Notre Dame employees can look forward to a progressive change in the art personnel department, according to new Personnel Director Roger Mullins.

Mullins, 37, assumed the position in May. He replaced Tom Bull, who resigned as the department head last year.

The new trend in personnel management, Mullins said, emphasizes human resources.

The term "human resources" encompasses other departmental concerns such as staff relations, compensation and benefits, labor law issues and union power, he explained.

"Actually, personnel is not quite state-of-the-art terminology," he said. Most employers think of personnel solely in terms of employment, which is only part of the department’s purpose, Mullins said.

Mullins most recently worked as vice president of human resources at Elkhart General Hospital.

"Historically, there has been an adverse relationship between employers and employees," he said. Though he could not comment on specific problems Notre Dame has had, he said such a relationship is typical in such institutions.

The human resources approach tries to be "pro-active," attempting to solve problems before they surface, past personnel strategies have been "re-active," mere answers to worker discontent, he said.

The ultimate aim, Mullins said, is "to make the personnel department an integral part of the university," while making employees feel they are an important part of the total process.

That, he said, has been difficult for universities to do.

While books like "Megatrends" and "In Search of Excellence" have proposed new management techniques and major corporations such as IBM have implemented the theories, higher learning institutions have been slow to change, their management philosophies, he said.

Spence emphasized the emphasis at universities to be to deliver education to the students, he said, while

It happens every year, and it all starts with Activities Night. Hundreds of bright-eyed, curious students, many of them fresh out of high school, wander around Spesan Center and Angela Facility gathering information about campus clubs and organizations. At every table, enthusiastic club leaders greet the inquiring students with a smiling face and a first handshake. Basic information on the organizations is exchanged and the students move on to the next table, where the process is repeated.

Of all that took place last week, this week, many of those clubs and organizations are moving into the second phase of their recruiting plans: the organizational meeting. A typical organizational meeting often resembles a football pep rally. A feeling of excitement permeates in the air. The club leaders stand up and proclaim that this will be the best year ever for the organization. Countless goals and ideas are discussed. Volunteers are lining up for every available position. But how long will it last? Not very long and current trends are to bebelieved. Call it the dissolving Alka-Seltzer tablet theory.

Nearly every campus group, from the business and engineering societies to student government and The Observer, signs the year with big plans and droves of excited volunteers. But as the leaves start falling off the trees, the volunteers start falling off the bandwagon.

In short, enthusiasm dissolves like an Alka-Seltzer tablet in a glass of water. And as that enthusiasm dissolves, so does the number of active members. "That's what enthusiasm is all about. You have to keep your enthusiasm up," said a member of Toastmasters who fights dwindling enthusiasm with a slightly different approach to keep members involved.

"We have weekly meetings where attendance is required," said President Thomas J. Farley. If a member misses more than three meetings in one semester he or she is forced to resign from the club. "We only do that because we know people have a tendency to lose interest and not come to meetings," he said. "We also want them to get the most out of their membership dues."

Though their methods may differ, most organization leaders are fully aware of the need to fight dwindling student enthusiasm. If they are successful, the dissolving Alka-Seltzer tablet theory will be proved wrong, and the only rioting heard on these campuses will come from the plop, plop, fizz, fizz, of that hangover remedy.

Plop, plop, fizz, fizz
that's what enthusiasm is

A lack of communication can cause an organization's decline as well. Students join groups for a variety of reasons, but a common one is to meet other people and possibly make new friends. If you're the people in leadership roles get to interact on a regular basis, the group's members may feel unmanned and lose interest.

Japan Club President Wayne Wenneck says, "What you have to do is build up a family atmosphere where everyone knows each other at least as early as possible." Wenneck said, "If you can do that, then people will be motivated easily and make time to attend club events."

Increased communication, especially through the use of newsletters, is the way Big Brothers/Big Sisters President John Euntermann will fight dwindling enthusiasm.

"I think that when it gets to exam time, a lot of clubs will only put out one newsletter per month," Euntermann said. "But that is just the time when the club leaders have to do a little more work, to make sure everyone will stay involved."

The Saint Mary's chapter of Toastmasters uses a different approach to keep members involved. "We have weekly meetings where attendance is required," said President Thomas J. Farley. If a member misses more than three meetings in one semester he or she is forced to resign from the club. "We only do that because we know people have a tendency to lose interest and not come to meetings," he said. "We also want them to get the most out of their membership dues."

Unusual talent not traditional fare

Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. - The usual Miss America talent fare of singers, dancers and piano players will be jacked up this year when Miss Michigan breaks a 4-inch thick piece of concrete with her foot and walks on broken glass.

Other unusual talent selections include a comic monologue by Miss Alaska, clog dancing by Miss South Carolina, down-home fiddling by Miss Texas, and presentation of an original commentary on the impact of advertising by Miss District of Columbia.

Those who selected talents less familiar to pageant audiences said they were only doing what they do best. But some acknowledged that there might be a strategic purpose behind their choice.

"It will help me stand out," Alecia Rae Manakoski, 23, of Muskegon, Mich., said of the opening of her karate performance, in which she'll stomp across a bed of broken glass to demonstrate her powers of concentration.

"You feel it," she said of the feat that will be a first for the Miss America stage, "but a little prickly."

But she said she thinks the bagpipe is ready for a Miss America with a black belt.

"In the '80s, women can be strong and capable of defending themselves and be feminine at the same time," said the woman who was the Midwest karate champion at age 16.

North Dakota sells self on signs

Associated Press

Bismarck, N.D. - State tourism officials fear many travelers may think North Dakota is just a long haul on the way to somewhere else, so they're setting up billboards to explain why they should stop and look around.

"Stay in North Dakota, Carter Was Healthy When He Left," will say one roadside announcement, said state tourism director James Fuglie.

"It will help people know the northern plains aren't just a drive through," Fuglie said Monday.

And for those who haven't heard about winter on the northern plains, another message will read, "Welcome to North Dakota, Open Year-Round."

The campaign was inspired by a column written by Lloyd Omdahl, director of the Bureau of Governmental Affairs at the University of North Dakota, who suggested the state make traveling fun by putting up entertaining signs.

Omdahl offered several suggestions, including "Isn't This The Hottest Place You've Ever Seen?" and "You Are Now Entering Minnesota. Why?"

Gunmen take Duarte’s daughter; security guards killed, wounded

Associated Press

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Gunmen attacked presidential security guards outside a private university here yesterday, and witnesses said the daughter of President Jose Napoleon Duarte was kidnapped.

Employees at a local radio station owned by the daughter, Ines Guadalupe Duarte Duran, 34, also said they had been notified by the family that she had been kidnapped. One of her security guards was killed and one was wounded in the shootout.

“We only know that she has been kidnapped and that there is one dead,” said an employee of the Armed Forces Press Committee when asked about the reports.

An official at the presidential house, Gertrudis Sandoval, identified the slain guard as Mauricio Alfredo Elena Palomares and said he and the wounded man were Mrs. Duarte Duran’s personal bodyguards.

Troops and presidential security guards swarmed over the area on a main street on the west edge of the capital where the New San Salvador University is located.

Students said Mrs. Duarte Duran was studying advertising and public relations at the university and apparently was grabbed as she left the building.

One phone call helped me begin to change all that. Kevin Howard, Notre Dame student

Everyone on campus is aware of the fact that South Bend police are breaking up parties in dormitories. They have been doing this since the administration of either institution. The news is reported as accurately and objectively as possible, but it happens. I apologize for the supposed lack of urgency, but I hope to see a promising year raised. Please take the time to show others around you that you respect them and we will reciprocate. Have a good time, but don't do it at the expense of others!

Dear Editor:

Fountain will not save students from heat

Kevin Howard, Notre Dame student

The intense heat and humidity of South Bend summers are no secret, yet, each year students return to sweltering dorms and unventilated classrooms. When my dad helped me move in, I thought he was having a heart attack at my dorm building flashed. My mom called today to see if I was still alive. Students, faculty, and parents express awareness and concern about the health hazards of poorly ventilated rooms in hot, humid weather. The administration needs to fund the installation of air-conditioning campus wide.

In a few weeks the weather will be cooler. Those of us who survive the humidity will have forgotten how bad it was, as we don our Notre Dame sweaters and head for the football stadium. The administration will have sweated out another summer season, squandering our tuition on a fountain cooling thousands of dollars. Come April, do not be surprised to see me jumping it in. It will be the only way to cool off around here. What can you expect from one of the wealthiest private schools in the country?

Gary Trudeau

Dear Editor:

Most prestigious and financially endowed universities in the country. My own dorm, however, suffers from the same structural inadequacies as my high school. There is no such thing as a breeze in Pasquerilla East. The position of an open window prevents the air from entering the building. The cinderblock walls create the effect of a microwave oven. Obviously, the architects assumed that the Pasquerillas were to be airconditioned. What must have gone wrong with the budget for these dorms. Meanwhile, we are here stuck to the furniture.

I realize that a majority of the buildings on this campus are stone saunas. I sympathize with the student not fortunate to have classes in Hayes-Healy, Galvin, or Fitzpatrick. Most of my classes are in O'Hag, or even worse, Cool Hall. There I sit, glued to my chair, resuming the urge to run up and loosen my professor's tie. I wonder how he feels lecturing to an audience of folders flapping like fans. Who can bear when sitting there is emotionally and physically draining.

Gu Qi smiled broadly and tried to concentrate. He has a tough time with English. "I feel very lucky to be at Notre Dame," he said.

Gu is a 27-year-old freshman from Peking, China. His presence at Notre Dame is the product of the thaw in Sino-American relations, and the attempts of Father Theodore Hesburgh, university president, to establish links with the Chinese scientific community, said Director of Admissions Kevin Rooney.

Rooney said Hesburgh and Provost Timothy O'Meara have visited China several times in recent years to establish academic ties with the Chinese Academy of Science. The secretary general of the academy is Qi's father. Gu Naijun, who was a Notre Dame graduate student taught by chemistry professor Emil T. Hoffman in 1946, and who was awarded an honorary degree at this year's commencement exercise, through his father Qi was offered the chance to study at Notre Dame.

"It is a fortunate chance for me," Qi, who was a peasant in the countryside from 1969-75 during the Cultural Revolution period of Mao-Tse-Tung's rule, said. "Then I read books I like."

In 1978, he went to Peking and became a student. From 1980 to 82, he studied electronics, learning Fortran computer language. He was already working with "expert computer systems" before he began preparing for his freshman year in the United States.

"I was married June 24 - I leave for America June 26 - just two days after," Qi said. He could not comment on whether he missed his new bride because he could not understand the word "miss" as anything but an unmarried woman. "This is a difficult question. I'm sorry," he said.

Once in the United States, Qi toured around the country.

He could not comment on whether he missed his new bride because he could not understand the word "miss" as anything but an unmarried woman.

primarily in the Midwest, for a month before coming to Notre Dame where he worked in the biology lab.

This fall Qi has a standard course load for a freshman, including Hoffman's chemistry class, composition, literature and physical education. "It is difficult. English, sometimes I forget the words. He said, gesturing with his hands. "But I believe I study hard for degree - in engineering, then for masters and Ph.D."

Qi, who expects to be in the United States for two years before returning home to visit, is not the only Chinese person on campus. Rooney said: "There are also at least two Chinese graduate students on campus as a result of Father Hesburgh's efforts." He said: "In most cases of non-traditional students they come seeking us, but they usually stay with local schools because of the high tuition here."

"They decide to let me come to Notre Dame as I prepared English very hard," Qi said of his chance to be a Domer. "I like America - many things I like. For example, my roommate. I want to thank you and Notre Dame for the opportunity."

Book review

The New Trouser Press Record Guide

Ira A. Robbins

Charles Scribner's Sons, $13.95, 463 pages

People often ask me where I hear some of the music I like. And if groups like Naked Raygun and the Meat Puppets don't ring a bell maybe you'd ask, too.

Aside from friends' recommendations and impulse purchases, most of the music I buy comes from reading about it. Sounds stupid, right? It isn't. You'd be surprised at how often rock critics are right about good music.

Edited by Ira A. Robbins, this guide serves as a useful tool in building a decent record collection. The various contributors make an effort to cover even the most unheard-of bands (Animal Slaves, Screaming Mee-meets), and the general tone is sympathetic toward new groups.

Each entry gives the titles of all the releases by a band through May of this year (in some cases, going so far as to list singles), the year they were released, and on which label they were released. A whole page or more is devoted to major artists like David Bowie or the Clash describing in detail all their records.

In general, the criticism is insightful, especially that of Robbins. This book is complete and accurate all the way through, it was obviously a labor of love for him.

The only quibble I have with this book is that Robbins omitted the section on compilation records which was included in the original edition. He explains that it seemed "uncool," but he doesn't know what he's talking about. Compilations are a great way to sample whole genres of music inexpensively, be it cow punk or industrial music.

For the adventuresome, the book is essential. For the novice, it will certainly entertain. Robbins and the other contributors have done an excellent job in assembling reviews of every major record of alternative music ever released, as well as some that are not so important.

Facilities abound

By BILL HESSION
Sports Writer

Even with the football team preparing for its big opener at Miami, many people on the Notre Dame campus are getting ready for the hoops season. In fact, basketball could be considered the campus sport of Notre Dame.

Every day from midnight until long after sunset, students flock to participate in one of America's favorite games - pick-up basketball. Conveniently located, the many basketball courts provide an excellent opportunity for weekend jocks to work out, have fun and improve their game.

Here's a rundown on the best places to play basketball at Notre Dame:

Rockne Memorial Building

The Rock is long. Whether summer or winter, the Rock always has the best basketball to be found on campus. You can find its polished hardwood floors constantly in use. One reason for the Rock's popularity is the fact that you can borrow a basketball with the presentation of a student ID. During the off-season, you can even find the best varsity athletes playing pick-up games.

Stepan Center

Stepan Center provides the towers and the North Court with the best outdoor facilities on campus. With eight full courts, Stepan is by far the largest of Notre Dame's women's soccer club prevailed in the game by a score of 3-1, as Notre Dame freshman Sue Halling scored three goals in the first half to lead the Irish. Andrea Laventure has details of the game on page 12.

Auburn takes over top spot in latest AP poll

Associated Press

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer wasn't surprised that the Sooners lost their No. 1 ranking in the Associated Press poll yesterday.

"We got all the publicity in the preseason," said Switzer, whose Sooners were No. 1 in the preseason and first regular-season polls. "Now we don't play our first game until Sept. 26 and I knew people would forget about us."

White (4-0-1) Gulf Coast (3-2-1), which had seven first-place votes and 974 points. The Gators replaced Southern Methodist, which had problems before defeating Texas-Ft. Brown 59-23 and slipped to sixth.

Southern Cal rose from sixth to second with six first-place ballots and 970 points on the strength of a 20-10 rout of Illinois, which had been No. 11 but fell to 9th. Iowa, which has not yet played a game, dipped from fourth to fifth with five first-place votes and 911 points.

Wichita State's 9-15-1 season was the other top two-first-place ballots and 908 points.

Florida State vaulted from 17th to seventh with 75 points by upsetting No. 10 Nebraska, 17-17, and Oklahoma State went from 16th to eighth with 741 points by trouncing Washington.

Johnson slams Cards for Darling

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Howard Johnson hit a grand slam moments after a bench-clearing altercation, capping a five-run first inning last night that led the New York Mets past the St. Louis Cardinals 5-4 and back into first place in the National League East.

Johnson's grand slam came after Cox hit George Foster on the hip with a pitch. The two exchanged words, and both benches and bullpens emptied as umpires intervened and the two closed. No punches were thrown and order was restored within five minutes.

The victory in the opener of the three-game series, before a crowd of 50,195, gave the Mets a one-game lead over St. Louis. The Cardinals, who entered the game with the same 82-53 record as the Mets, had been in first place since Aug. 22.

Winner Ron Darling, 15-5, took a complete game and third shutout of the season. The 28-year old left-hander outlasted the Milwaukee Brewers last night as the New York Yankees outlasted the Milwaukee Brewers 13-10 for their 11th consecutive victory.

The win kept the Yankees within 1 1/2 games of the Toronto Blue Jays in the American League East. The 11-straight wins are the most by a Yankee team since September, 1964.

New york starter Ed Whitson, 10-7, pitched seven innings allowing eight runs on 12 hits. Bob Shirley came on in the eighth to earn his second save.

Milwaukee starter Ray Burris, 9-12, got tagged for seven hits and 10 runs in the 5 1/3 innings he pitched. He also yielded a solo home run to designated hitter Dan Pasqua in the fourth.

The Brewers collected 17 hits in the game while the Yankees knocked out 11.

The Notre Dame women's volleyball team dropped tough five-game match to OSU Buckeyes

By Jim Buch

The Notre Dame women's volleyball team played its heart out last night, but came out on the short end in an exciting five-game match against Ohio State at the ACC Gym. The Irish were two of the first three teams to qualify for the fourth game 14-13. With Notre Dame needing just three more points for the win, the Buckeyes reigned in the crucial fourth game, 15-13, and force the match to a decisive fifth game.

Notre Dame never recovered, dropping the deciding game by a 15-5 margin.

Earlier, Notre Dame had advanced to an early lead by winning the first game 15-11 and taking the third game by a 15-12 score. The Buckeyes took the second game, 15-13, despite some outstanding defensive play by the Irish.

Notre Dame dropped to 0-2 with the defeat, dropping its fifth match in as many outings.

Irish coach Art Lambert was pleased with his team's performance, saying, "We showed a lot of guts to get to four games, but would have been happier if his young team had chatted up its much-needed first victory. Notre Dame is playing a much tougher schedule this year than in past seasons, and the Irish coach knows that things will only get tougher for his squad from here on in."

According to Lambert, "We have a young team, and we were just psyched up for the match."

"I think we were too fired up for the match," said Lambert. "I'm looking forward to this weekend's tournament, as well as all the matches we play as junior varsity volleyball teams." Lambert added, "I have a lot of confidence in our young team and I am expecting good things from this long road trip."
