Northeast residents oppose re-zoning for student housing

By MIRIAM HILL

Loud parties may be a part of off-campus life at Notre Dame, but residents of South Bend's Northeast side say this aspect of students' life-styles clashes with their family-oriented neighborhood. Although the residents appreciate the work Notre Dame students do in the area, they opposed a rezoning petition which would have allowed up to 30 more students to move into their neighborhood.

Two dozen residents stormed the Area Plan Commission meeting last July to voice their complaints about the zoning change. The petition asked for a change from "A" residential status to "B" residential status on a lot at 7713 N. Fir Road. "A" residential status allows for single-family dwellings, while "B" permits more than one dwelling. Barcombe, Richard Barbour of LaCrosse, Wis. and Thomas Barcombe of South Bend, were asking for the zoning change in order to build six five-bedroom apartments on the 19,000 lot for the APC, gave the petition an unfavorable recommendation and sent it to the South Bend Common Council for a final decision.

The petition was struck from the council's record at their Aug. 5 meeting because the developers did not appear to present the case. According to councilman Ann Puzzello, "absence constitutes refusal to appear before the APC meeting. "We got the feedback from the neighbors the very elderly, They objected to more student housing. They were there for us." Robinson said. She complained to the APC that students have little regard for the neighborhood and often leave messes after parties. But she added, "The students organize on campus are really quite beneficial to us. We just can't continue without them. " Notre Dame students participate in house beautification programs in the area, tutor neighborhood children, but help residents complete their income tax forms. Noting that the neighbors had worked hard to get a "A" residential zoning status in 1964, Robinson said, "We want to keep it for family housing. Barcombe, who owns the land and presented the APC for the zoning change, disagreed with his neighbors and said they were not being fair to the students. "There's no doubt these people are doing something against students," he said.

Barcombe said the neighbors failed to consider that there are many non-students living in the area who neglect their property. He also said the parties sponsored by Notre Dame students were minor compared to some colleges where he has visited. The apartments would have brought badly needed revenue into the neighborhood, he added. "There's much and for the poor and for the students. "Barcombe asked.

Robinson said the neighbors would have opposed the apartments even if students were not going to live there. "We have had quite a bit of problems with rental property, "she said. "Lodgers have been very bad. The tenants some of the lodgers have put in the houses haven't been very good for the neighborhood. But, I'll tell you this, you can really see the difference in the area when the students are away on vacation."

Anthony Quigley, a Notre Dame engineering professor who lives in the area, said residents are not reacting to the possibility of more students moving into the neighborhood. He said the residents opposed the petition because it was an example of "spot zoning," which he defined as changing zoning status solely for the personal gain of the petitioner and not for the betterment of the area. The neighbors' complaints have not changed developer Barbour from the areaforever. He said he will petition the APC in the near future for permission to build 12 units on a triangular lot on Notre Dame Avenue.

News of singer's cancellation

'Stings' SAB concert promoters

By JOHN FLORY

Sting will not appear at the ACC, despite attempts by the Student Activities Board to bring the performer here, according to SAB Music Entertainment Commissioner Ron Mileti.

The Student Senate had approved a resolution last Monday to bring the entertainer to Notre Dame on Nov. 7, but Sting's promoter declined the offer because he was looking for an arena bigger than the ACC for concerts. The concert which would have closed Sting's 1985 U.S. tour, Mileti said.

Sting's promoters were asking for $50,000 to $85,000 plus 80 to 85 percent of the concert's profits. After the administration reviewed the concert figures, the chances of Sting appearing here were "remote," Broussard said. While the SAB and administrators were considering the problems involved in financing the concert, Sting's promoters still had not confirmed whether the singer would appear at the ACC.

Before the SAB decided how much money to offer Sting, they wanted to know whether he would agree to play the ACC. Assistant Director of Student Activities Ciel Paulsen said: "All this was strictly in the talking stage," she said.

Sting's agent later responded that Sting would not play at Notre Dame because they were looking for a bigger arena. Mileti said. "Mileti added that the agent was uncertain whether Sting's management wanted to work with Heidi Swaab, a promoter in Little Rock, Ark., who was given the job of promoting and financing the ACC concert. Millet said the agent had found a larger arena for the concert.

Mileti said he arranged for Swaab to share 50 percent of the costs involved in promoting the concert in return for a 50 percent share of the profits. If the concert lost money, however, Swaab would have been liable for 50 percent of the losses.

For future concerts, Mileti said, a local promoter will be sought to help the SAB promote concerts. The SAB would be responsible solely for publicizing concerts on campus.

"Of course," he told reporters, "we're looking for the best. But we're going to be realistic when asked whether we're bringing in more artists. The administration is considering the concert, and the SAB is thinking about the concert. We're not going to agree to a concert that would be a financial loss."

John Mileti had told the Student Senate at last week's meeting that Sting charged $40,000 plus 60 percent of the concert's profit.

Life in Indiana offers more than farms and basketball

Examine the last Hoosier you talked to very closely. Does the person really make you think Indiana is some alien world? Or is it possible that this Hoosier isn't very different from you?

In the midst of the Around the Corner "Hoosier Hypotheses" there is no better time to begin understanding the state of Indiana and its Hoosier inhabitants. In an Observer article last week, Student Activities Director Jon Neal spoke of the purpose of Hoosier Hysteria: "Is it a project to better the image of Indiana's state? Is it to project a better image of the state in which Notre Dame students spend four years of their lives?"

Around the Corner chose "Hoosier Olympics" and the "Come as your Favorite Hoosier" dance as ways to improve Indiana's image. It is true, hoosiers square dances, and hayrides are a part of the Indiana tradition, as is the fine art of game show watching. Hoosiers do take an integral part of Indiana life, the hog calling and "watermelon activities" can be overlooked. Saint Mary's students are getting their money's worth from their education, according to "The Best Days in College Education," by Edward Fiske, education editor for the New York Times.

Fiske has selected 221 colleges throughout the country on the basis of the best quality for their price. He pays $100 per dollar to each college to be considered for this list. He also pays $100 per dollar to his own writing service for the listing, "but Saint Mary's reputation is stronger in biology, chemistry, humanities studies, English and art. (Saint Mary's is the only Catholic school accredited by the National Association of Schools of Art and Design.)" he said.

"Saint Mary's endowment, which has multiplied more than 15 times since the 1970's, has helped to keep down costs to students. The various facilities include a new $7 million library, a newly renovated science facility, a computer lab, new computer facilities and renovated art studios." he said.

"I've found, for my social studies class, that we want a small school connected to a large university. this is a good place to look." he said.

Fiske considered special qualities such as facilities known for their interest in students, quality libraries, counseling services, small class sizes, coherent curricula, and various special academic opportunities such as travel abroad.

In the Saint Mary's listing Fiske stated, "Students at Saint Mary's College have the best of two worlds - a soundly traditional education on their own campus and, right across the street, a dominantly male university with which to socialize."

He also noted, "A Saint Mary's education emphasizes several areas: writing, appreciation of literature, knowledge of social and political theory, exposure to scientific thought and analysis, and the knowledge of Christian traditions."

approximately two blocks south and two blocks east of the first location. This petition, like the one first, will ask for a change in the zoning status. But this time the change will be from commercial to residential.

Barbour said he thinks this petition will be approved. "The feeling in this case is that we'll be upgrading the zoning status instead of downgrading it."

The apartments will have single and double bedrooms and will be designed with an emphasis on security, according to Barbour.

Notre Dame student representatives and administrators expressed concern over the neighborhood.

Notre Dame student representatives and administrators expressed concern over the neighborhood.

"As far as the whole argument that students are loud, that's university," Goldrick said. "I just think they (the neighbors) have to be a little more tolerant."

He said he would discuss improving relations between off-campus students and the neighborhood in meeting with Off-Campus Committee member Thomas McDonald in the near future.

The committee will begin meeting in two weeks to discuss the problems of minorities at the College and to make recommendations to the administration, according to committee chairwoman Mary Lady.

Also of concern to the committee is the relatively low number of minority professors at Saint Mary's. Kollman said, "Students do not feel it is a problem with the homogeneous atmosphere at Saint Mary's, Kollman said. According to Student Body President Anne Marie Kollman.

Saint Mary's is the only Catholic school to be accredited by the National Association of Schools of Art and Design.

The Observer regrets the error of the listing, "but Saint Mary's reputation is stronger in biology, chemistry, humanities studies, English and art. (Saint Mary's is the only Catholic school accredited by the National Association of Schools of Art and Design.)" he said.

"I've found, for my social studies class, that we want a small school connected to a large university. this is a good place to look." he said.

The newly-formed Ethnic Diversity Committee at Saint Mary's aims to increase the number of minority students attending the College, according to Student Body President Anne Marie Kollman.

Kollman said she launched the committee to "increase sensitivity" to the minority issue. Too many students are becoming uncomfortable with the homogeneous atmosphere at Saint Mary's, Kollman said. "Students do not feel it is a problem unless they are a minority," she said.

The committee will begin meeting in two weeks to discuss the problems of minorities at the College and to make recommendations to the administration, according to committee chairwoman Mary Lady.

Also of concern to the committee is the relatively low number of minority professors at Saint Mary's. Kollman said each area of the College is forming their own committee to research possible action at their level. Attracting minority professors is "definitely on the minds of the the College," Kollman added.

Correction

Because of a reporting error, an article in yesterday's Observer gave an incorrect title for a speaker at last night's Industry Banquet for engineering students. Calvin Blatter is a vice president of engineering and operations for McDonnell Douglas Astronautics Company. Also, Mary George is the president of the Society of Women Engineers.

The Observer regrets the error.
Study says ‘Star Wars’ program will partially increase safety

South Africans assualted while in jail

Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — A judge barred police from assaulting jailed activists yesterday after a white government doctor testified that hundreds of her inmate patients had complained of assault on admission.

Judge J.P.G. Easteen’s order covered all prisoners held under emergency powers in the Port Elizabeth and Uitenhage regions of the eastern Cape Province.

In Port Elizabeth Supreme Court, 43 parents and relatives of detained activists joined Orr in seeking an injunction restraining police from assaulting prisoners held under the emergency powers.

The national police department did not oppose the order. Easteen instructed the prisons department to read the decision to all prisoners at jails in Port Elizabeth and Uitenhage.

She found that at least 286 people had complained of assault on admission to prison from July 22 to Sept. 16, and in 153 cases the injuries “could not have been inflicted lawfully.”

In other developments:

• The government announced it was redrafting the borders of three tribal homelands in the Transvaal Province, giving more land to the black homelands but also taking away some tracts and setting them aside for whites. The result is that 125,000 blacks previously scheduled for resettlement will not have to move because their numbers have been increased to the homelands. Government officials said, adding that at least a few dozen people will have to move under the new boundary plan.

• Police headquarters said riot patrols found the charred body of a black woman in Lange township near Cape Town.

Controller cited in near-crash

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Investigators who examined tapes of tower communications concluded yesterday that the pilot of a helicopter that forced a crowded Eastern Airlines jet to abort its takeoff had received clearance to cross the runway, federal officials said.

A spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board said a controller at National Airport in nearby Virginia had given the helicopter general takeoff clearance but had not specified a direction that would avoid crossing the main runway where the Boeing 727 had been cleared for takeoff.

The Eastern jet skidded to a stop about 130 feet from the Potomac River in the Tuesday evening incident.

Eastern's 5 p.m. "shuttle" flight from Washington to New York, with 175 passengers and a crew of seven, came to rest on ground that had been a river bed before being filled in only last year as a runway extension safety feature.

One person sustained minor injuries and neither aircraft was believed damaged in the Tuesday incident.

NTSB spokesman Bill Bush said investigators had been told by the controller's supervisor that the helicopter pilot thought he had directed the helicopter to take a northwesterly departure route, but that an examination of the tapes showed otherwise.

The controller, who was handling helicopters exclusively, was in the airport tower alongside another controller who was handling the departing jet traffic, FAA officials said.

FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said the controller had been restricted to administrative duties pending further investigation. He was not identified.

Among the passengers were David Harriman, husband of First Lady "Good Morning America," and New York Daily News executives James Wilten and Michael Pakenham. Most passengers boarded another Eastern flight to New York.

In 1968, Jack Valenti, then head of the Motion Picture Association, was instrumental in establishing a voluntary rating system for films. The familiar G, PG, and R ratings, as well as the new PG-13, were included in the movie-going public wanted to know what a movie was about. It is required before a film can be sold or purchased on video. But the movie ratings are limited, and some parents are not satisfied with what they see. "There are many films that show violence and other things that should not be shown to children," said a parent. "I think a rating system is necessary to help parents make informed decisions about what their children can watch."

As I frequent my classes and talks on campus, I often hear about the administration of either institution. The new administration is reported as accurately and objectively as possible. Undergraduates report the opinion of a majority of the Administration. Commercial-type, they sometimes present their view of the university. Column spaces are available to all members of the community and the free expression of varying opinions on campus is encouraged.

from my room with the cash I was informed by the older brother that due to the apparent nonexistent administration of the university, I started a fund-raising campaign where I sold raffle tickets for $25.00 each. Keeping in mind that these two young people had in common the possession of two general admission passes for Saturday night game. Their price was a cool $250.00 each. Keeping in mind that these two young people placed me and a friend in a much better location in the stands than the ten yard line.

I became even more curious so as not to arouse the suspicion of these obviously good characters. I casually handed them my copy of The Observer and while focusing on campus, is encouraged.

Recipe to get rid of ‘love handles’

Kevin Kennedy
features writer

A famous scene: Someone decides he wants to lose some weight, so he goes to drastic measures to try and instantaneousaneously shake off his fat.

Starvation diets and marathon workouts are typical paths taken by the uninformed person in their determination to lose weight. Unfortunately, those diets don’t work (yes, starvation diets will make you thin, but will probably put you six feet under in the process). A well thought-out program can save you years of wasting time with fat diets and so called “fat burner” plans. Everyone has been dreaming of a body like the one they see in an advertisement or on television. A body that is more toned, that looks a certain way, that has perfect proportions. This is not the way to achieve this dream, but a healthy and eating plan is the best way to achieve this goal.

Two words apply when making a weight loss program: consistency and discipline. Workouts must be done on a constant basis (every day or every other day) and intensity must be increased as fitness increases. A person must be disciplined in their diet as well as their exercise.

When starting on an exercise program, one must always remember to start conservatively and then increase the intensity and frequency. Eventually you will hit a maintenance (plateau) point where you won’t need to increase intensity anymore to maintain your current weight. Following is a basic list of sports, and their value, to help you get in shape:

- Tennis, racquetball and handball: Good for losing weight and building cardiovascular endurance. Fun to play.
- Basketball: Good for building muscle but does little for burning fat.
- Running: This is the best and the most practical way to lose weight. No additional equipment is necessary. Unfortunately, for most people, it’s incredibly boring.
- Aerobics: One of the most enjoyable ways to lose weight. Great for increasing flexibility and stamina.
- Martial arts: One of the best sports for developing personal discipline and mental awareness. Increases flexibility immensely. Recommended. Best overall sport for developing a muscular physique while simultaneously burning fat.

An exercise program should start with a short workout every other day for the first two weeks. Then, as fitness increases, workouts can be increased up to six days a week. This can be done by increasing the duration of each workout, or by increasing the intensity of each workout. A program should be designed for you by a professional trainer or fitness expert.

Weightlifting: Good for building muscle but does little for burning fat.

Finding time isn’t the problem; finding motivation is. The “I’ll do it tomorrow” syndrome. This can be overcome. Workouts are always the answer. The key is to be consistent in your workout routine. Schedule workouts in your life and make them a part of your daily routine. This will help keep you on track.

Beating the problem of the “Freshman 15” is no problem at all if you make a personal commitment to overcome it. Success in this area carries over into all facets of life, it’s not just a game of losing weight in one stone. Just remember to be consistent and disciplined and everything will fall into place.
Ireland - famous land of shamrocks and shrimzes, of castles and Cathedrals, of whiskey and wearing of the green, of Patrick's, potatoes and priests. How many of us honorary Irish here at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, who remain unconcerned about the myths of that tiny green isle, know anything about the real life Ireland of today?

Notre Dame sophomore Sean Evers says that the Ireland of the '80s is not exactly the pot 'o' gold at the end of the rainbow. Through his new club, the Irish Link, Evers hopes to lead club members away from these common misconceptions toward a greater appreciation of the environment of the real Ireland.

Evers, 19, currently is enjoying only his second full year in America. He completed high school in Dublin at 16, spent a year in college in Galway, Ireland, and worked for three consecutive summers in New York City as a waiter. He applied to and was accepted at some "Mickey Mouse colleges" in America, feeling they were "nothing to cross the Atlantic for." In July of 1984, he applied to Notre Dame as a transfer student, but was accepted with freshman status. Notre Dame's nickname, the " Fighting Irish," evidently did not draw Evers to the University.

Strangely enough, he had never heard of the nickname until after he was accepted and was wandering through the bookstore. He says he finds the name "a joke" now, but that he found the image of the leprechaun and the color green a bit insulting last year. It did not seem justifiable that the student body could claim this legend for their own, but know nothing about the real Ireland.

"America has such an interest in Ireland," Evers explains. "Everyone he meets claims an Irish background, he says: 'They're all so enthusiastic about it, which is great, but they really don't know about the Ireland of today.' One girl actually asked me, 'Do you really have leprechauns in Ireland?' I asked, 'Two to every house.' She was so serious."

Others ask him if the Irish live on potatoes or even if there is television in Ireland. Dublin, Evers' home, is a modern city with a population of 1.5 million, and has, according to Evers, one of the highest crime rates in the world. A large portion of Dublin's population is young and educated, but unemployed.

Nearly 50 percent of the Irish population is younger than 25, and the economy cannot possibly support them all with jobs, says Evers. He added that crime and drug addiction are major outlets for the confusion and boredom of these young adults.

Evers says that Dublin has the largest heroin problem in the world for individuals aged 15 to 25, because the city lies along major heroin trading routes between America and the Netherlands. Of course, there will always exist the "simpler life" in the rural areas of the West. As for his new temporary homeland, Evers is excited about the enthusiastic reaction of the two campuses to the Irish Link Club. Sixty students attended the organizational meeting on Sept. 9. The format of the second meeting, held life under water

W hat does it feel like to be in an iron tank? It is an experience that allows you just to be yourself, yet at the same time forces you to be aware of what you are doing. Being submerged in a salt water environment offers a completely new concept of yourself and the world around you. To get a better feel for this, I decided to visit the first underwater tank at the Sandcastle in Oak Park.

The experience was a pleasant one from start to finish. I entered the reception room which was carpeted in plush red. The piped music was mellow, as was my host, who intently directed me to my tank. Since I was one of the uninstructed, he took me through the entire procedure, explaining the size of the tank, the temperature of the water I would be floating in, and the reason I would be floating, which is that the water is loaded with as much salt as the Dead Sea. You cannot sink, a feature I found very comforting indeed. Other comfortable features provided were my own fluffy towel, a room, shower, sundamp, vaetinie (to avoid irritation from the salt water) and ear plugs. The tank itself is about eight feet long and four feet high, but you aren't supposed to sit up in it. Although the water inside is only 10 inches deep, you never even touch the bottom. You just put your hands behind your head and float. The temperature is a delightful 98.6 degrees, creating a womb-like effect.

My pleasant and friendly host (his name was Phil), then left me alone, totally alone, in my room. The customers are advised to shower before they enter the tanks, although they don't have to. Even while I was deciding, and shedding my street clothes, I began to feel the thrill of being my own master, in my own universe, with no one to tell me what to do, I was perfectly safe and completely in control.

For the shower. Space Time provides shampoo, soap, and of course seawater. You can put the cup up, leave it down, turn on the sunlight, or turn down the lights. You can even get right in the tank if you wish. Whatever you do, its up to you.

Eventually, the time for the actual tanking came, and I was forced to enter. I said forced because it is a bit ominous the first time. In this pitch black tank I was left alone with my own thoughts for a whole hour. Those who have never tried that experience will be surprised how long an hour can be. I found that, due to the promptings of my friends, and due to my own preconceptions, I started thinking deep thoughts. Do not be alarmed. No one expected me to come up with something profound. I spent the hour enjoying myself, free from the expectations of the outside world, free of time perception, free of obligation. Actually, I spent the hour free of thought. I spent it floating. Wow how much would you pay?

At the end of the hour, Phil gently tapped on the outside of the tank, being careful not to make my reentry into the world unpleasant. After my second shower, I got dressed again, resuming having to go "out there," but leaving with a slightly different attitude than I came in with. After a cup of herbal tea, which I drank while seated on a plush red velvet sofa with Gary Meier, Chicago radio celebrity, who was also going tanking for the first time, I left, a new woman.

Tanking is an experience that gives you a chance to be different. I was thinking back to when graduating from high school, that feeling of a chest full of expectations all over again. You will not leave with the same attitude you came with.

Space Time Tanks is located on Lincoln Avenue, one block north of Fullerton Avenue in Chicago. That's not too far to travel to experience what I did.

A strong defense and enthusiasm of female firepower as it was whipped Walsh, 13-0.

“We have a veteran defense, returning and a rookie offense with a lot of talent,” comments B.B. captain Ann Schwartz about her team’s lineup this season.

Tuesday, Walsh was able to even up its record at 1-1 by defeating Badin (0-2) by a 13-6 score.

Farley, will have no easy task as it takes on a talented B.P. squad (1-0). Following the Lyons-B.P. matchup, the defending champions, Farley (1-0), will face a rebuilding Lewis team (0-1). At 9 p.m., will be the Paucarella war, as undefeated P.E. (1-0) will face also undefeated P.W. (1-0).

Then on Sunday, P.E. will face Lewis and P.W. will be pitted against Walsh.

Depending on the outcome of Thursday’s games, the 7 p.m. Sunday matchup on Cartier field could be the greatest battle since Patton met Rommel in the African desert.

“Have something that we dearly want back,” says B.P.’s Schwartz of her team’s possible confrontation with Farley. “That gives us a great deal of incentive. We’ll be going after them with a few things that they haven’t seen before.”

The situation is simple: Farley wants to keep its crown, while B.P. clearly wants to recapture it. The two teams’ effective enthusiasm for victory is evidenced by the number of players who tried out for the team - 70 from Farley and 50 from B.P.

The season is still early, but a great deal is riding on each game as the women complete the first two games of a seven-game slate. There are some classic matchups today and Sunday, with games starting at 7 p.m. on the turf at Cartier field.

Joe Niekras wins first game for Yankees; Jays lose, 4-2

NEW YORK - Joe Niekras won his first game as a Yankee as Don Mattingly drove in runs, two on a two-run blast in the 13th inning, powered the Boston Red Sox to a 4-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays last night.

The loss, coupled with the New York Yankees’ 2-0 victory over Detroit, cut Toronto’s American League East lead to six games. The Blue Jays’ magic number remained at six.

Ayala’s two-run double gave the Indians a 2-0 lead in the first off Oakland starter Tommy John, 4-6.

ND's Rogers decided on baseball

By MARTY STRASEN
Sports Writer

The initial practice for the 1985 Notre Dame football team began slightly more than a week away with the first day of fall camp. Scott Rogers decided he would not put on the pads.

Instead, he would use that time to think about his future. He is thinking of switching from football to baseball.

"I had been thinking about it for some time," he says. "I had been thinking about baseball for some time, too." Rogers was one of few standouts on the team, and he had thought about the possibility of playing both sports at Notre Dame for the last two years.

"I really appreciate what Coach Faust did for me - letting me play baseball but still keep my football scholarship," Rogers says. "I don't have any regrets at all. I enjoy watching the baseball games and the guys on the team are still my friends. Right now, I'm thinking one thing - baseball. We've got a great bunch of guys here and the best coach I've ever played under. I'm glad I changed." The addition of Rogers as a full-time outfielder can only serve to better the Notre Dame squad, which finished last season with a 24-24 record.

Tisdale near an agreement with Pacers

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS - The Indiana Pacers and No. 1 draft pick Wayman Tisdale are "pretty close" to reaching an agreement, Tisdale's brother says.

Weldon Tisdale, who is helping negotiate the contract, said negotiations with the National Basketball Association club have resumed but "nothing conclusive has happened."

"We're hopeful things are solved before the week is out," he said Tuesday.

The Pacers open preseason camp tomorrow at West Lafayette, and Weldon Tisdale says he hopes his brother is under contract by then.

The Pacers hope to have Tisdale sign a contract by the time of an exhibition game against the Sacramento Kings Oct. 6 at Norman, Okla., where Tisdale started for three years at the University of Oklahoma.

The New York Knicks reportedly gave Ewing, an All-America from Georgetown, up to $15 million for six years.

"Ewing's contract tells us a lot about the market value and how much the Knicks want him," said Weldon Tisdale.

The Pacers also are trying to decide what to do with Jerry Sichting, a Pacers veteran and free agent who signed an offer sheet with the Boston Celtics Sept. 12.

"He's an excellent athlete," says Gallo. "He has very good speed and tremendous power - more than I think he realizes. His throwing arm is short and needs quite a bit of work, but he realizes that. I'm definitely looking to start him in either left or centerfield."
ND beaten by Purdue in three straight games

By CHUCK FREEMY
Sports Writer

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. - It came clear last night that it is only one thing keeping Notre Dame from beating a top-20 team.
Her name is Marlene Smith. Smith, Purdue's All-American middle blocker, scored 15 kills and 11 aces, numbers that were noticeable pleased with his team's effort.

"I think we just had one player who could put the ball away like Smith does, we could have won tonight," said Notre Dame coach Art Lambert, who is handling the Irish special teams this season.

"Even without a player like Smith, Notre Dame still had one of the best middle blockers in the country," says Lambert. The Irish started strong, capitalizing on Purdue's errors to jump out to a 9-2 lead.
But Purdue fought back and scored a touchdown before halftime, reducing the score to 9-7.

"The Irish are 2-3 on the season and it's time for them to start winning," says Lambert. "We need to find a way to get more points on the board in the second half."
