Head Football Coach Lou Holtz

By JEFF BLUMB

It was a very happy day for one man and a very sad day for another man yesterday at the ACC.

Arriving around noon was new football coach Lou Holtz, set to begin his task of revitalizing the Notre Dame program. Picking up his belongings was former coach Gerry Faust, uncertain about what the future might hold for him.

The first priority for Holtz will be to assemble his staff. He met early yesterday afternoon as a group with all of Faust's assistants, and later began speaking with each on an individual basis. Determinations on their status will be forthcoming soon, and it shouldn't be long before a full staff is in place.

Later in the day, Holtz addressed the team for the first time when he went to a meeting where player awards and next year's captains were being selected. Meanwhile, Faust was preparing to move to a vacant office in the rear of the ACC, where he will spend at least the rest of this week tying up loose ends.

At the press conference announcing that South Dakota, Iowa, Minnesota, and Wisconsin are made for Holtz to be at Notre Dame that afternoon for the official announcement.

2:30 p.m. - Holtz arrives in South Bend, where he met at the airport with Corrigan. The magazine Athletic Director Roger Valdisseri.

4 p.m. - At a press conference in the ACC Monogram Room, Corrigan introduces Notre Dame's new head football coach.

Associated Press

Much of the upper Midwest was paralyzed yesterday by snow that drifted up to 6 feet high, closing highways, stranding hundreds of travelers, and closing schools and universities. A new Pacific storm, moving swiftly northward, threatened the Northwest with wind and wet snow.

"It was quite a blizzard," said Mary Taulbee, a National Weather Service forecaster at the Marquette County Airport in Michigan. A blizzard warning remained in effect yesterday for parts of northern Michigan, where snow piled up nearly 6 feet deep along Lake Superior.

The storm blew blowing, roof-spanning snow into northern Indiana and Ohio, northwestern Pennsylvania, and western New York state.

The storm was blamed for at least 16 deaths in the upper Midwest. Ice and wind knocked out power to thousands during the weekend snowstorm that closed out November's record of cold and snow from the Northwest to the Great Lakes.

Secondary roads and side streets remained closed yesterday in parts of South Dakota, Iowa, Minnesota, and Wisconsin. Many major highways were open although they had ice and packed snow and some were open only in one lane.

Michigan officials estimated it would take nearly three days to clear the state's 1,500 miles of streets and alleys. The Department of Transportation estimated it would take another three days to clear Michigan's 1,500 miles of streets and alleys. About 500 people spent the night at the Minnesota-St. Paul airport when flights were delayed or canceled. High wind and blowing snow also delayed and canceled flights at Chicago's Midway and O'Hare airpports.

The Notre Dame Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps program has been awarded an "Outstanding" rating by the Inspector General of the Air Force's Air Training Command. This is the first rating of its kind awarded to any of the country's 150 AFROTC units in more than three years. Notre Dame Detachment 225 received the 1982-83 "Right of Line Award" as the number-one ranked ROTC unit in the Air Force. With its "Outstanding" rating, Det. 225 hopes to claim the top spot once again. The Observer

First snow creates changes in appearance, attitude

Amy Stephan
Managing Editor

I love snow. Snow is Christmas. It means little kids in mittens and snowsuits. It means sledding, skating and hot chocolate. Snow is a reason to be happy. It means the holidays are coming. Snow means everything is white. It means snowball-fightin' weather is here. But the most popular winter sport on campus is one that is unique to Notre Dame - dodge the snowplow.

For students who have not yet enjoyed the thrill of this winter athletic challenge, the rules are simple. Like vampires, snowplows generally avoid the daylight. But if you hear a strange noise as you round the corner or feel a jolt as you approach an intersection, look out. A snowplow is coming.

Snipers and sledding people are not the only hazards of snow. Snow is wet, cold, slippery and almost invisible. Snowplows only protect the lanes they are clearing. When they are not visible, they are not cleared.

The wise student, however, will soon learn the true beauty of snow - as viewed through a window. Forget snowmen, snowplows and digging out cars. The best way to enjoy snow is inside, with a hot chocolate and some warm and cozy music. And don't forget to put out one for Santa.

El Salvador situation unimproved five years after missionary murders

BY MARILYN BENCHIK
Staff Reporter

December 2, 1980 marks the date when Jean Donovan and three American nuns were unjustly killed at the hands of Salvadoran rebels. Ana Carrigan recalled this tragedy in her lecture concerning El Salvador just prior to the slayings of the American missionaries.

"Things have changed in El Salvador, but they haven't necessarily changed for the better," Carrigan said at the beginning of her talk. She said at the beginning of her talk. She changed for the better," Carrigan recalled this tragedy in "The week prior to the slayings, we were on Thanksgiving Day, six of the most prominent rebel leaders were beaten and murdered in broad daylight. Archbishop Romero was killed at his own altar nine months before the Dec 2 slaughter. This was the first time in 100 years a religious leader had been slayed at his own altar. This presents a powerful historic image," Carrigan said.

"We have allowed El Salvador to become the lost child with Nicaragua. We can't allow that to happen," Carrigan added. She provided statistics to demonstrate that although El Salvador may not be receiving the press coverage that it did five years ago, the problems are still as serious. She said the conditions are even worse in some areas. "Five years ago there were at most 20,000 refugees and 10,000 deaths prior to the Donovan slaying. The refugee number has now increased to 1 million, consisting of 20 percent of the population. Fifty-five thousand Salvadorans have been killed in the last five years," Carrigan said.

Carrigan discussed U.S. aid to El Salvador, which now consists of 55 percent of El Salvador's budget. U.S. policy is to give the equivalent of 5 percent to a country's economy. "Only 15 percent of the half billion dollars in aid goes to development. The remaining funds are war-related," Carrigan said.

The justification for this aid has been that El Salvador sponsored the most sweeping land reform program in South America. This program is currently stagnating. "El Salvadoran democracy was the (so-called) success of Central American politics. By whatever standards you use to judge a democracy, El Salvadoran democracy is an illusion," Carrigan said.

Carrigan said that the problems of El Salvador create a challenge for Christians everywhere. "The struggle will be with our generation and with the next generation. Salvadorans need our solidarity. This means a great deal. We can help by writing to our senators and congressmen. Through them action can be taken," she said.

Carrigan has written, produced and published many books and films concerning the victims of the December killing. Her works include "Salvador Witness," "Rows in December," and "Choices of the Heart." In most of her works, Carrigan said she examines the reasons these women remained true to their missionary. "Even though there were no official statements of regret and there were no elected officials that were in attendance at the unloading of the caskets from the plane, there was a truth that these women stood for. They stood for all of the best traditions that this country has held sacred. This truth overcame the negative reaction that our politicians exhibited," Carrigan said.

"Expulsion would be too good for them," he added.

Quad battle of snowballs damages hall windows

BY ALEX FELTZER

A peaceful December evening in Zahm Hall was shattered last night by a barrage of snowballs hurled by South Quad residents. The result was the outbreak of what has become Notre Dame's annual civil war.

"We were just sitting on our couch watching the Bears game when a snow ball came flying through the window," said Zahm resident Brian Padian.

Students suffered minor injuries including glass cuts as a result of the fight traditionally held after the first snowfall of the year.

From Zahm the South troops advanced to Keenan where at least five windows were broken, according to Keenan resident Brian Bonaventure Scully. Keenan residents said they suspected Dillon Hall as the attackers.

Meanwhile, Zahm had gathered a force of their own and began the attack on Dillon behind enemy lines.

South troops returned to their home turf only to find attackers in front of and behind them. Close range combat took place in front of Dillon as both armies grew in size.

From there the battle see-sawed between quads as both sides traded snow barrages. Along the way windows in Dillon, Alumni, and Cavanaugh were reportedly broken.

One Dillon resident estimated the damage to the South troops as greater than the North's. "I think South broke more windows so far so I guess we're winning," he said.

At least one rector did not agree with this measuring of success, however. Zahm Rector Father Thomas King, whose hall had at least eight windows broken, was furious with the actions of the attackers.

"I don't know what hall they're from but I know they're idiots," said King. "Anyone who would throw rocks at students was not available from campus security.

King said that some action ought to be taken against the offenders. "Exulsion would be too good for these people," he added.

"I'm not looking at Knute Ver, an old friend and confidant of the president, was on leave of absence pending the court verdict. Marcus signed a law early today setting a special presidential election for Feb. 7. That may be a contest between him and Aquino's widow, Corazon. Mrs. Aquino called a news conference for later today, and posters expect her to accept the opposition's nomination. The president's foes had predicted the acquittal, but there had been rumors some defendants might be found guilty of negligence, a minor offense.

Mrs. Aquino said the verdict did not matter because Marcos was her "No. 1 suspect" in the death of her husband, who was Marcos' main political foe. Opposition leader Salvador Laurel called the acquittal "madness." Roman Catholic Cardinal Jaime L. Sin, the nation's most prominent religious leader, said the verdict "could push our country to the brink of violence and despair."

With its finding, the court rejected a year of investigation by a fact-finding board, which concluded that the killing was a military conspiracy. Small but notable demonstrations against the verdict occurred outside the courtroom and in a street leading to the presidential palace.

O'Hare security deficiencies cited

CHICAGO - Undercover investigators were hired as security guards and other workers at O'Hare International Airport were undergoing background checks, and they easily boarded airplanes without being searched, a watchdog group said yesterday.

"Clearly, the airport public is not nearly as safe or secure as the authorities would have us believe," said Marcus said in a statement that he hoped "calm and reason will settle on this most distressing and tragic case."

Marcus welcomed Ver with a handshake and a salute at the presidential palace right after the acquittal, and issued a handwritten order restoring him to his post. The president, who has governed the Philippines for 20 years, said the reinstatement was "for such a period as may be decided upon by me and by sensitive officers of the armed forces."

The qualification appeared intended to blunt criticism here and in the United States of the return to command of a man under whose direction the army has been accused of widespread human rights abuses.

U.S. officials have demanded reforms in the military to counter a growing communist insurgency. Some American congressmen had urged that Ver not be returned to the top military job.

He also was asked if there were any clauses in this contract which would allow him to leave, to which he responded, "Other than for survival, no."

Holtz' salary was not disclosed, but almost assuredly included substantial pay cut from his Minnesota salary, which was in the $100,000 range. Many observers feel his salary at Notre Dame is probably closer to $60,000, which is about what Faust made.

Undoubtedly, salary was not all that important to Holtz. Nine million heisted during Brinks robbery

Associated Press

COLOMBES, France - An armed gang of about 10 men kidnaped two Brinks employees from their homes yesterday, forced them to open the company's headquarters and looted an estimated $9.4 million from safes and strong boxes, police said.

Gang members, armed with rifles and hankies, broke into the employees' homes, tied up members of their families and took the employees to Brinks headquarters in this northwest Paris suburb, police reported.

Some gunmen remained with the families during the robbery, and police said the robbers communicated with each other by radio and also monitored police calls. After the robbery was completed, the employees and their families were released.

Investigators speculated that the first employee seized may not have been able to open the Brinks office door so the robbers kidnapped a second employee.

Police said gang members overpowered two guards and two employees at the Brinks headquarters when they entered the office early in the morning.

The robbers opened strong boxes and safes and took cash and checks, which police estimated had a value of $72 million francs, the equivalent of $9.4 million.

When four other security guards arrived for work at about 5 a.m. they were held at gunpoint while gang members finished locking the office.

The gang escaped before dawn in a stolen van, leaving the guards, the employees and their families unharmed.

Neither police nor officials of Brinks would provide further details.

A Brinks spokesman did say, however, that it was only the second robbery of the firm in the last six years.

Police thought they were dealing with a homicide on April 6, when Diane Cooley discovered her husband's body in a bathroom photo darkroom.

An autopsy showed Cooley's skull fractured in two places. Tests of the 52 blows were severe enough to have knocked him senseless, Lake County Coroner Daniel Juzwicki concluded.

But as police pursued their investigation, it didn't square with murder, Juzwicki said. "The evidence we gathered supports the suicide finding."

What detectives found was a depressed man battling cancer. What they didn't find was a suspect or motive. No signs of struggle. No forced entry. Nothing missing. They consulted experts, who concluded Cooley probably killed himself.

"Case closed. Suicide."

Thomas was outraged. He'd already determined Cooley was killed. "It's a homicide, and we're not going to let it go by as a suicide," he declared. "This case is ludicrous. It's a laughingly minor."

The wounds were so massive there was no doubt, said Thomas, a surgeon for 21 years and coroner since 1983. His office investigated 110 killings last year. Three days after Cooley's death, Thomas ruled homicide. Cause: severe injuries to the brain.

While Thomas has final word on the death certificate, he isn't willing to let the case die with a difference of opinion. He repeated its findings in assembly meetings recently. He has asked the county prosecutor and state attorney for a second opinion.

Cooley's family has remained out of the fray. However, his brother, John J. Cooley, said the entire city of Hobiob wants the case reviewed. "We're not satisfied."

At the heart of the dispute is whether Cooley was inclined to kill himself and whether he could have hit himself 52 times with a claw hammer hard enough to fracture his skull twice.

Sergeant Rod Engelt, a homicide detective in the Metairie police department's headquarters in Portland, Ore., told The Associated Press: "It's probably the most bizarre case I've worked. He's killed himself and whether he could have hit himself 52 times with a claw hammer hard enough to fracture his skull twice.

The death of James Cooley has been investigated by a coroner, a medical examiner and a private detective.

The organization will combine its investments to affect South Africa directly, because they cannot avoid seeing the consequences of their investments each month until a complete divestment is achieved. The ultimate will affect South Africa directly, though, because the pamphlet is distributed as part of a press package by the South African embassy. Secondly, apartheid in South Africa has been in effect since 1948. If time is truly going to change this system of injustice, how much longer will it take? The indications show that the violence is not decreasing but rather increasing. Therefore, the international community will daily reassess South Africa's economic position, the lucrativity of their investments to be used against South Africa. It is the lucrativity of their investments that will determine Apartheid. One finds it hard to believe that this is an effective means against apartheid, though, because the pamphlet is distributed as part of a press package by the South African embassy.

The various groups are right to protest against "Hail Mary," but they are wrong in seeking to ban the film. The most effective form of protest is to speak out against the show and list the reasons why it may be objectionable to some. When we disagree about a film, we don't want to see it, the film should not be banned. Banning this film is censorship. And censorship, in any form or no matter what the reasoning, is something which we cannot afford to let happen.

Even in our free nation, censorship exists. All across the country, books have been banned from schools and libraries. These books are not necessarily bad, just controversial. I certainly do not want to see it, the film should not be banned. Banning this film is censorship. Buildings at Notre Dame have much to offer

Recently I had some friends visit me for the weekend. During the week before I arrived, I thought about everything on campus that I probably should have told them to be among the few Notre Dame that I have grown to love and call my home in the past three months.

guest column

When they arrived Friday night exhausted from a long car trip, I had already spent a couple of hours waiting for the shuttle bus on campus and spent a few hours of the day chatted for awhile before the guys headed off to one of their friend's dorms where they would call. As we walked through campus past the Faw conclusion Building, Lafortune, and gazed down on the Rock, I told them a bit of trivia about each building. I knew that there were some facts left behind every building, but I knew the personal and express buildings in various corners of each building.

For instance, I told the tale of my first day here, when I almost walked into Farley, ready to plant myself in the room I had acquired from a friend long on the temporary housing. Then I realized Breen-Phoenix was one more building down. Boy, did I feel like a freshman. I went back and found my friends the dining halls, the hours of stories of the food, the food fights, the queenly dining halls, the service, the music in North. At the library, I told them about the great view from the 15th floor and the architecture and the library and showed them the ACC, the stadium, the Rock, and the ROTC Building. (They thought the ROTC Building was a great color.)

Eventually we came to the Grotto I had saved the best for last.

When I visited Notre Dame as a senior in high fourth, I stopped at the Grotto to see the Blessed Virgin to help me do my best so I could return to be a part of this community. On my first night here, I again went there to say a prayer of thanks with hopes for a great future here. Since then, I have returned many times for many different reasons.

The Grotto and every other building, and feature of this campus are unique and are big parts of what makes Notre Dame the great place it is. There is much history behind each building, who designed it, who paid for it, and who has taught or lived in it. These facts set the precedent for the future building of Notre Dame, but what each one of us experiences on this campus is what continues it and strengthens it.

Every place on campus holds something special for me. The Snite Museum of Art and the Art Gallery and the Music Building and the radio station or newspaper office or even know where they are? Has anyone gazed at the skies on a clear night through the telescope in Nieuwland Hall? We all have.

When they arrived Friday night exhausted from a long car trip, I had already spent a couple of hours waiting for the shuttle bus on campus and spent a few hours of the day chatted for awhile before the guys headed off to one of their friend's dorms where they would call. As we walked through campus past the Faw conclusion Building, Lafortune, and gazed down on the Rock, I told them a bit of trivia about each building. I knew that there were some facts left behind every building, but I knew the personal and express buildings in various corners of each building.

For instance, I told the tale of my first day here, when I almost walked into Farley, ready to plant myself in the room I had acquired from a friend long on the temporary housing. Then I realized Breen-Phoenix was one more building down. Boy, did I feel like a freshman. I went back and found my friends the dining halls, the hours of stories of the food, the food fights, the queenly dining halls, the service, the music in North. At the library, I told them about the great view from the 15th floor and the architecture and the library and showed them the ACC, the stadium, the Rock, and the ROTC Building. (They thought the ROTC Building was a great color.)

Eventually we came to the Grotto I had saved the best for last.

When I visited Notre Dame as a senior in high fourth, I stopped at the Grotto to see the Blessed Virgin to help me do my best so I could return to be a part of this community. On my first night here, I again went there to say a prayer of thanks with hopes for a great future here. Since then, I have returned many times for many different reasons.

ROTC collects toys

The time has arrived for mature college students to make a great sacrifice - to give up that Jack-in-the-box on your desk, bid farewell to Barbie and Ken, and relinquish the roommates' Etch-a-Sketch. Santa Claus is requesting some help in this year's collection and distribution of Christmas toys and goodies, and Notre Dame's Marine ROTC Program is answering the call of duty by asking for your old toys.

The Toys for Tots program, founded in 1947 by Marine Colonel Bill Hendricks, is designed to bring Christmas presents to needy children through the collection of old and new toys. This program is sponsored at Notre Dame by Semper Fidelis, made up of Navy ROTC members who plan to join the Marines after college. The toys collected will be donated to handicapped children at Logan Center for Christmas.

According to Senior Bill Liu son, he and his fellow Senior Marine ROTC members participate in some type of service project each semester. "We thought Toys for Tots would be a good project to do," Liu son said. "It's a way for all the students to do something for the South Bend community for Christmas. It's easy to drop off a toy into one of the collection barrels.

Liu son said that Notre Dame was invited to the Toys for Tots program last year, but very few toys were donated. With additional publicity and more collection barrels, Liu son hopes to collect more this year. In addition, Semper Fidelis is also asking hall presidents at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, as well as organizations at Indiana University at South Bend, to contribute money for the purchase of new toys for the children.

The collection barrels, located in North and South Dining Halls, LaFortune, Sacred Heart Church and the Credit Union, have been in place since early November and will remain through the first week of December. The distribution of the collected and purchased toys to children at Logan Center will take place in the second week of December before final exams.

Since 1947, the Toys for Tots program has grown from an annual Los Angeles area program to a nationwide toy-collecting effort by the Marine Corps Reserve. Founder Colonel Hendricks, executive at Warner Brothers and member of the Los Angeles Advertising Club, launched a publicity campaign that has, since its initiation, featured such well-known supporters as John Wayne, Bob Hope, Johnny Carson and Bruce Jenner, as well as the famed Dennis the Menace, Bugs Bunny and Mickey Mouse of course. Celebrity chairmen since 1972 have included Nancy Reagan, Henry Winkler and Sugar Ray Leonard.

The Toys for Tots program has enjoyed great success both in the United States and abroad. The program drew international participation in 1959 to provide toys for children of Nagoya, Japan, which was destroyed by a typhoon. A Los Angeles television station sponsored an award-winning Toys for Tots Circus in 1960, and the New York Yankees initiated a "bring a toy" baseball game with the Washington Senators in 1962, which drew support for the program from many associations of American athletes. More recent success includes the collection of more than 1.5 million toys in 1984.

So dig deep in your closets to donate those once-treasured, now-forgotten toys for a charitable cause. Santa Claus is coming to town, and no little stockings should be left empty this year.

Food Bank gives food to poor

MAUREEN FARLEY

The guy next to me at lunch the other day obviously was having a bad day. As he gloomily surveyed his tray, he remarked with a sigh, "You'd think we'd get a decent meal once in a while." I don't blame him. He looked as if his best friend just died. But how many comments like that trip off our tongues unthinkingly? Stop and think. We do have decent meals. We haven't enough money to buy a 'decent meal.'

Ed Novak, senior resident at Fisher Hall has had first hand exposure to the pain so prevalent in the South Bend Community. Living off campus last year opened his eyes to the plight of the poor and the hungry. Novak is heading a campus-wide collection, sponsored by Fisher Hall, the purpose of which is to provide money to the South Bend Food Bank located on Chapin Street. Funded entirely through contributions, the bank provides families, depending on their need and size, with a balanced selection of food - enough for approximately one week.

Novak's idea for the drive was inspired by the administration, not only in approval but in offers to help in any way they can," Novak said. "We are trying to present this idea with simplicity while at the same time trying to achieve results."

Novak has organized the drive as to make it very simple and convenient. Students won't have to go out of their way to make a contribution. Collections take place at dorm food sales each night, in front of the dining hall and in front of the Oak Room. Hall representatives are in charge of collections and money may be given directly to them.

Novak's goal is 50 cents per student. "We ask no more than that," he smiles.

Dorm support has been positive thus far. But in these next weeks, when things begin to get hectic, it will be easy to forget these people who so badly need your help. The support of the men and women on the Notre Dame campus would be extremely welcome.

ND students seek to help the needy

The Miami Student
Gaining insight from the Urban Plunge

LESTER L. FLEMONS

Few will argue that the University of Notre Dame is the place to visit if one seeks to experience poverty, injustice and segregation in the inner cities. Most students at Notre Dame have little or no knowledge of the transient poverty and incessant despair existing in many American cities. Almost none of them realize the fact that one percent of all Americans live in poverty, and that the "Vatican" ranks 7th in the world in keeping infants alive during their first year of life.

Every January, however, a group of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students bravely venture out into some of the most impoverished urban areas in the United States. As participants in the Center for Social Concerns Urban Plunge program, these individuals seek to experience the plight of the impoverished and to gain a deeper understanding of the numerous organizations designed to increase social justice in the United States.

Last January, approximately 253 Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students visited 37 states and 51 sites as participants of the Plunge. For most of them the experience was an immersion into a lifestyle they had no experience of and would certainly never forget. "There are people in this country who have no shelter and no medical care," stated Scott Bearby, a sophomore from Humboldt, Illinois, and director of the Urban Plunge. "The Plunge not only allows students to experience poverty first-hand, but it also gives them the opportunity to study the systemic causes of poverty in this country."

According to Webb-Phillips, the students each spend a period of 10 hours a day in a specified urban environment where they participate in a variety of activities including tours of nursing homes, welfare offices and urban neighborhoods. Lodging for the students is provided by a variety of sources, including social workers and alumni of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's.

The Plunge usually takes place in the home area of the students, commented Webb-Phillips. "After the immersion begins, however, the students will live in an environment that is deeply rooted in our society," concluded Webb-Phillips. "This program constitutes one of the most powerful ways that the University can sensitize students to the over- whelming need for social action in the world. Poverty is something that is deeply rooted in our society," concluded Webb-Phillips. "The plunge offers students an opportunity to get at the bottom of those roots."

Dolphins end Bears' dream of perfection

Associated Press

MIAMI - Dan Marino reverted to his record-breaking form of 1984 Monday night, passing for 270 yards and three touchdowns as Miami shocked Chicago 38-24 to end the Bears' bid to become the first team since the 1972 Dolphins to complete a National Football League season without a loss.

The victory was the fourth straight for the 9-4 Dolphins, who pulled into a three-way tie in the American Conference East with the New York Jets and New England Patriots.

The Bears, who had outscored their three previous opponents 104-3, fell to 12-1 before a national television audience and a sellout crowd of 75,594 in the Orange Bowl.

Miami quarterback Dan Marino completed 14 of 27 passes, including scoring strikes to Nat Moore and Mark Clayton, as the Dolphins defeated the Chicago Bears, 38-24, last night in the Orange Bowl.

Women's basketball loses against Purdue, rebounds at W. Michigan

By NICK SCHRANTZ
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's basketball team opened its season with a disappointing 71-54 loss to Purdue last Saturday at Hinkle Fieldhouse.

Last night, they bounced back to defeat Western Michigan 94-65 at the Agganis Center in Boston.

"Notre Dame is on the boards that badly," said afterward. "Notre Dame is awesome. We're not that bad, but Purdue is 54-26 in the game, much to our advantage, the Bulldogs stayed in the rebound department. Notre Dame owned a 28-11 score close in the early going, but we never controlled the tempo and we ran into a buzzsaw, as Purdue was disappointed with her team's initial performance, but gave Purdue much of the credit for causing her team's problems.

"We didn't play as well as we needed to," said afterward. "Our team performance was not good enough.

"We're physically in condition and prepared, but Purdue was a rude awakening," she continued. "It showed us that we have to become more ascetic.

The Irish outscored Butler 12-10 in the first half, 16-14 in the second half, and 10 in each of the final minutes.

"Our free throw percentage, which lagged at .400 line.

"We played pretty good early. We were able to overcome a 10-point lead against such a fine team. But at the half, it was 48-38, 10 points.

"At that pace," she continued. "It was a first half to strike fear into the hearts of Notre Dame basketball fans who remember last season's 70-69 overtime loss to Butler.

"There isn't many teams that win 20 attem pts from the free throw line.

"What we don't want is to lose the game in the first half," said afterward. "They have a team that can step up at any given time.

ND basketball takes on Indiana in televised big early season challenge

By GREG STOHR
Sports Writer

Notre Dame men’s basketball faces its first significant challenge of the young season tonight when the Irish will meet 1-0 Indiana University at Assembly Hall in Bloomington, where the Irish have not won since the 1973-74 season. The contest begins at 7:30 and will be televised on WSBT-TV.

JNIEXPORT, it’s very, very hard to control him.” said Phelps. “I doubt very much if we can do it (containing him) again below his 18.1 season average.

Alford is a 20-point ballplayer,” said Phelps. “Now they’ve got the quickness to match up with us. It’s a different Indiana team.”

The observation by holding the Olympic gold medalist to just four points, well below his 18.1 season average.

“No way,” says Irish head coach Digger Phelps. “Now they’ve got the quickness to match up with us. It’s a different Indiana team.”

The mainstay of the Hoosier lineup, however, is standout junior guard Scott Hicks, who pumped in 24 points against Kent State. Last year Scott Hicks and the Irish defense keyed the Notre Dame victory by holding the Hoyas to just four points, well below his 18.1 season average.

“Alford is a 20-point ballplayer,” said Phelps. “I doubt very much if we can do it (containing him) again this year. It’s very, very hard to control him.”

Other top Hoosiers include junior Daryl Thomas, sophomore Delray Brooks and seniors New Robinson and Winston Morgan.

To improve its series record to 31-18 against Indiana, the Irish will need the continued backcourt dominance of David Rivers. The sophomore is averaging 21 points a game for Notre Dame, including 22 in Saturday’s 87-56 victory over Butler.

Phelps feels that his team will also need to control the boards to win. The Irish out-rebounded their first two foes by an average of 16.5 per game.

“I think that’s what this game is going to become — who dominates on the boards,” said the 15-year Irish coach. “That’s got to be a factor for us to score points.”

Ken Barlow leads the Irish with 19 rebounds. The 6-9 senior forward is also averaging 16.5 points per game.

After victories over relatively weak St. Joseph’s and Butler squads, Phelps recognizes the journey to Indiana as his team’s first true challenge.

“I think we just have to see how good we are,” said Phelps. “It will be a typical Notre Dame-Indiana battle.”

IRISH ITEMS - Phelps says that senior forward Tim Kempton will start tonight. Kempton had missed the Butler game due to a back injury.

The U.S.C. and the Notre Dame women’s volleyball team closed out the season in Kalamazoo, Mich., playing in the Ransler Invitational over the weekend.

Unfortunately, the Irish dropped a pair of matches to Western Michigan, 15-5, 15-5, 15-6; and to Houston, 15-5, 17-15, 9-15, 14-16, 16-14. That leaves the Irish with a 12-21 season record for a team that played an almost suicidal schedule.

“The win-loss record does not tell the whole story,” said Coach Art Lambert. “The team showed improvement during the year. Everyone gave 110 percent all the way.”

The Irish had it rough with Western Michigan and just missed pulling off an out-of-this-world comeback against Houston that would have been an almost suicidal schedule.

Faust expects to have new job soon

By LARRY BURKE
Assistant Sports Editor

MIAMI - Saturday's debacle in Miami was Gerry Faust's farewell to Notre Dame, but it was apparently not his last hurrah as a head football coach.

The 56-7 loss to the fourth-ranked Hurricanes left Faust's Notre Dame record at 26-42-1, which represents the most losses of any coach in Irish history. Despite his lack of success at Notre Dame, though, the 50-year old Faust said Saturday he expects "that in two or three weeks I'll be coaching as a head coach somewhere else."

Faust refused to be specific about where he might be headed, but he said before the Miami game, "It's not up to what Notre Dame standards are. I know that, I'm not kidding anybody."

Faust fashioned an impressive 174-172 record in his 18 years at Cincinnati's Moeller High School, but he was unable to win more than seven games in any of his five seasons guiding the Irish. His season loss dropped Notre Dame's season record to 5-6, and Faust said the team's first coach had to get a job post two losing seasons. (His '81 team was also 5-6.)

He said Saturday he wants to remain in college coaching and has in fact had several offers since he announced his resignation a week ago. "But that's something that I have to sit and evaluate, which I'll do this week," he said. "I've had some calls and things like that and I really haven't made my mind up what I'm going to do. I'll do the best of my ability to look in touch with me in the middle or the third of the week."

"I have some business opportunities also and I told them to get back to me in the middle of the week. If I had a gut feeling right now, I think that I probably would like to stay in college coaching, working with young people. But I want to think about it for a couple of days. It's not the time to make a decision one way or the other right now. I wouldn't make it if we won 40-0 something to nothing or anything I'm going to do it after we lose the way we did."

He said that he has especially enjoyed working with athletes on the college level.

"I really like college football because I think it's really exciting," Faust told reporters Saturday. "It's really a science because of the passing game and because of the intricacies of pass defense and things like that. It's really a challenge, and it's more fun. You've got so many great athletes at the college level. Every football team has great athletes."

"I think the key to college football is that you've got to have a great quarterback and you have to have a good defense. And I think that if you have a great quarterback and some skilled athletes and a great defense, that's a pretty good recipe."

He said he felt his experience at Notre Dame would help him at his next stop on the coaching trail.

"I have improved," he said Saturday. "I think the difference between me in my first year and me now is a 500 percent improvement. I hope even more. If I haven't improved, then I'm really definitely think of getting out of the game."

"But I feel so much more comfortable now at making decisions. And I'm excited about starting over if I have a new opportunity because I'm not going to make the same mistake twice."

Before the Miami game, Faust described the kind of job he was looking for.

"I want to stay as a head coach if there's a university where I can go and win with the ethics that I think are necessary to win," he said. "If it's a university where I can go and win with the ethics that I think there's a university where I can go in my first year and me now is a next stop on the collegiate coaching run. If I haven't improved, then I would really definitely think 500 percent improvement, I hope something special to him."

"Nobody knows the position until they sit in the chair," he said. "You can always talk about it and everything like that, but until you sit in that chair you really don't know what it's like. As far as the criticism goes, I just let it go in one ear and out the other."

"I'd start back tomorrow, though, to be honest with you. I've said that all along. It's a tough position and everybody shows for it and everything like that. But you can't beat the young men you work with. They're just tremendous kids. They work hard, and they've got a lot of pressure on them academically and athletically. They're quality kids."

"I don't have any regrets about my years at Notre Dame. You've got your ups and downs in life, and I've had a couple of down but I'll be back up again. It's been a great experience and I've loved every minute of it. Times like now you don't really like but that's part of the game of football. That's part of sports and you just have to learn to live with those things and bounce back."

When asked Saturday about the possibility of staying at Notre Dame in another position, Faust said "No, I've never even talked to them (the administration) about it, to be honest with you."

"My boys' going to go to Notre Dame next year and I'm really happy about that. So I'd have one (child) at Notre Dame, one at Saint Mary's College and one at the University of Dayton. So I've got to get a job that pays a little money so I can get them all through college."

After the Miami game, Faust tried his best to talk about his players rather than himself.

"No, I really didn't think about this being my last game," he said afterwards. "We just wanted to win the football game, and we didn't execute well enough to win the football game and they (Miami) did execute well."

"My feelings are probably for the players more than anything, to be perfectly honest with you. I wouldn't have to have seen those seniors go out in a good, tough football game. And we didn't do that. You have to feel a little bit bad because they're great kids and they work very hard and it just didn't work out today the way they would've liked it to work out, nor the way we would've liked it to have worked out."

He said that he had wanted to players to keep their mind on the game instead of his personal situation.

"Before the game I just told them to keep their mind on the game, not the time to make a decision one way or any of that stuff. Just block and tackle well and handle yourself well on the football field, and let's come home with a victory."

"After the game I just told them to hold their heads high because they're from Notre Dame and we're very proud of them, and they should be proud that they are Notre Dame men. I wished the underclassmen good luck and told them I'll be watching them next year and I hope they have a great year. To the seniors I just said I wished you could've gone out in better style, but I wouldn't have traded any of you for anything in the world."

Miami manhandled by fired-up Hurricanes, 58-7

Testaverde keys devastating aerial attack with 536 yards

By LARRY BURKE
Assistant Sports Editor

MIAMI - For Gerry Faust, the "dream come true" ended in the worst of possible nightmares.

Saturday evening produced no storybook finish to Faust's turbulent five-year stint as Notre Dame's 24th head football coach. It produced only the ugliness and embarrassment that the Irish were forced to face after they were manhandled, 58-7, by a talented Miami team that ob­viously felt it had something to prove.

And afterwards there was little doubt that the game's spirit crossed over.

The motivation for Sugar Bowl-bound Miami was plain. Head Coach Jimmy Johnson and his fourth-rank Irish needed to prove that they are the best team in the nation. And what better way for them to accomplish that than by beating up on a Notre Dame team that they admitmey do not like, before an Orange Bowl crowd of 49,236 and a national television audience?

Johnson tipped his hand Saturday evening, saying the Hurricanes would "get on a plane, rest a little and come back refreshed after the massage were about the only things Faust could say about his game itself.

"There's been quite a bit of talk and controversy about polls and rankings this week and where a team should be ranked," Johnson said. "Everyone in his path.

And shake the hands of the two. A glowing smile remained on his face, politeness remained in his demeanor.

Faust to take out his frustration at the 51-point loss on Saturday, with a 39-yard field goal on Greg Cox midway through the first quarter, but as their defense got into the game, the Irish managed just one first down in the first quarter, which paved the way for Miami offense to take control of the game.

They began doing that on their second possession, which ended in a 47-yard touchdown run that gave the Hurricanes all the points they needed. Cox added another field goal, 47-yarder, late in the quarter to stake Miami to a 13-0 lead.

The Hurricanes started small Saturday, with a 39-yard field goal from Greg Cox midway through the first quarter, but as their defense got into the game, the Irish managed just one first down in the first quarter, which paved the way for Miami offense to take control of the game.

They began doing that on their second possession, which ended in a 47-yard touchdown run that gave the Hurricanes all the points they needed. Cox added another field goal, 47-yarder, late in the quarter to stake Miami to a 13-0 lead.

Miami - Dirty towels and tape were strewn all about the wet field. The deary room was virtually empty, only a small contingent of reporters remained in a semi-circle around Allen Pinkett. A few student managers rushed about in a last-minute effort to load up any remaining gear.

And there in the near corner of the room was Gerry Faust, seated in perspiration from "a long day at the office," signing autographs for two policemen guarding the locker room door. The team bus would be leaving soon and Faust still had to catch a shower beforehand.

He could have blown right by the two men in blue, but he had a five-minute meeting already penciled in for Saturday afternoon and it was at least four minutes later than his 1:30 checkout time.

"I admit you saw me too much. I wish I could handle adversity better," Faust said.

"I'm ready to go again," Faust said, grinning. "I'm still going to play tomorrow."

The truth is that he won't have the opportunity, resigned to a place in the Notre Dame record books along with the Miami tailback Allen Pinkett dives through a hole to score the lone Irish touchdown in the 58-7 loss to Miami. Pinkett ended his career as the leading rusher in Notre Dame history. Larry Burkes

"My feelings were more for the players," he said. "I wanted to see them go out better. I liked the kids. They gave us their best. I just didn't have a better memory, especially for the seniors.

"Winning the last one would have been a great way to go out, but I didn't bring it up. I simply told them that this was a game for the seniors. I will get another year. The seniors won't.

"They just didn't end up the way we'd like," Johnson said. "A lot of times during Faust's tenure at Notre Dame things didn't end up the way he might have liked. But while his coaching ability always will be called into question, his nature will not.

Bluntly, Gerry Faust is the nicest guy you could ever meet.

That's what made not only Saturday's game but the events of the last five years so painful for so many. Painful for fans and, yes, even painful for the media.

Face it, Faust deserved a better fate than that which came his way. Pinkett summed this up, saying, "Maybe it goes back to the old adage: Maybe nice guys do finish last."

Faust did not finish last, simply because success is measured by more than wins and losses. One of the most fitting tributes to Faust might have been bestowed upon him by defensive tackle Wally Kleine following Saturday's game. "He's been my friend, and he always will be my friend," Kleine said.

Faust is the friend of everyone he meets. There is no better way to describe him.

Finally, it was time for Faust to depart the locker room. Eventually he made his way out the door, and as he was the last to leave the tattered remains of both the locker room and his career. A handful of people met him outside, among them Pinkett's mother.

"We're with you. We'll always be with you," she said.

"God bless you," Faust replied. "Thank you and God bless you all."

God bless you Gerry Faust.

MIAMI - The bad blood which has existed between the University of Miami and Notre Dame football teams over the last several years was given a transmision Saturday by the Hurricanes' 58-7 rout of the Irish. Most everyone, save Miami fans, agreed the Hurricanes had run the score up unnecessarily.

With a 37-7 lead after three quarters, Miami continued to pour more than 50 percent of the time, even leaving first-string signal caller Vinny Testaverde in it until it was 63-7.

With the score already up to 51-7, Notre Dame players, fans angered by Miami's relentless style of play

25 men who preceded him. His 30-26-1 record won't put him in the company of such iron will. Faust did not finish last, simply because success is measured by more than wins and losses. One of the most fitting tributes to Faust might have been bestowed upon him by defensive tackle Wally Kleine following Saturday's game. "He's been my friend, and he always will be my friend," Kleine said.

Faust is the friend of everyone he meets. There is no better way to describe him.

Finally, it was time for Faust to depart the locker room. Eventually he made his way out the door, and as he was the last to leave the tattered remains of both the locker room and his career. A handful of people met him outside, among them Pinkett's mother.

"We're with you. We'll always be with you," she said.

"God bless you," Faust replied. "Thank you and God bless you all."

God bless you Gerry Faust.
