Surgeon general attacks Living Will during ND lecture

By MARK PANKOWSKI
Assistant News Editor

The "Living Will" threatens traditional medical ethics and the rights of doctors to provide care and symbols of surrogate general, who spoke yesterday at the Notre Dame Law School.

"... The Living Will, in most cases, goes in only one direction, the direction of withholding treatment," Dr. C. Everett Koop said. According to the 69-year-old pediatric surgeon, most forms of the Living Will are quite simple. Basically, he said, these "wills" allow competent persons to sign a statement directing their physicians to withhold treatment from them if it only prolongs the dying process.

The Living Will is thus linked to euthanasia, which he defined as the "deliberate killing, whether by act or omission, of oneself or another out of motives of compassion; the desire to save another from suffering, or to promote the dignity of the suffering person."

Farled by the growing elderly population and society's need to control rising health costs, the Living Will likely will lead to "burning the traditional ethic of Primium Non Nocere - Primum Do Not Harm," said Koop.

Keenan Revue ticket distribution, parietals discussed at HPC meeting

By ALEX PELTZER

The argument over who should get Keenan Revue tickets reached the presidents Council last night as Chris Cooke of the Keenan Revue Program Committee gave a report at the HPC meeting.

Cooke told the council about the opportunity to buy advertisements in the revue program, saying that it was a way to help Keenan cut the costs of the program.

He also discussed the revue committee's past policy of offering tickets to presidents of halls who buy advertisements in the program. He explained that in the past, while all presidents had received some tickets, those presidents whose halls bought advertising in the program received extra tickets. He did not say what the committee's policy would be this year.

"We don't know if it's fair for half presidents to get tickets because their dorm bought an ad," said Cooke.

Carr Hand, president of Panquattel East, said she did not think it is "fair for it (ticket distribution) to be contingent on whether or not we buy an ad in the program." She said Keenan should make the decision to give or not to give tickets to presidents whether they buy space or not.

Cooke said the revue committee will be discussing the policy over the next few days.

Another issue brought up at the meeting was parietals during finals week. Mimi Soule, president of Cooke, said he would draft a letter to Vice President for Student Affairs Father David Tyson about the matter.

Student Body Vice President Diane Lawrence reported on the that students' parietals concern on Friday and Saturday nights.

She said the administration justified this rule by saying that Friday and Saturday should be study days. She said she was disappointed, however, to find classrooms closed early on Friday and Saturday nights.

"Assuming that Friday and Saturday were supposed to be study nights, then the classrooms should be open," said Soule. "There's a lot of inconsistency here."

She also pointed out that Lafortune closed early on those nights and then permanently for the rest of the week.

"Not everybody can study at the library, even if they wanted to," said Soule.

She said the HPC should voice its disappointment about the policy so similar inconsistencies will not recur. HPC Chairman Kevin Howard said he would draft a letter to Vice President for Student Affairs Father David Tyson about the matter.

Car bombing in Lebanon kills 22, injures 102

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon - A car packed with explosives, gasoline and oxygen bottles blew up in a huge ball of flame and shrapnel yesterday on a busy street of Christian east Beirut, killing at least 22 people and wounding 102.

It went off 50 yards from an office of President Amin Gemayel's political party, but authorities were not sure whether that was the target. The only damage at the Phalange Party office was shattered windows.

A dozen passing motorists were killed in the car bomb blast, which enfolded the street. Witnesses said scores of pedestrians and shoppers were cut down by shrapnel or turned into human torches by burning gasoline that sprayed over a 50-yard radius.

Blood-splattered Red Cross squads clawed through the smoldering wreckage of eight buildings, under a dark cloud of smoke and ash that hung over the scene. Officials said they feared the death toll would climb.

The bombing followed a week of fighting between Gemayel loyalists and Syrian-backed Christian and Moslem rivals in which more than 400 people have been killed and 800 wounded.

Those battles, including a day-long showdown Jan 15 in which Gemayel crushed his main Christian opponent, cost a Syrian-sponsored peace agreement signed Dec 28 in Damascus by leaders of President Amin Gemayel's political party.

In Brief

Actor David Soul was sentenced yesterday to two years' probation and fined $1,000 for his role in a demonstration last year on behalf of the unemployed. Soul said his actions stemmed from his concern for the jobless and were in keeping with his family's history of civil disobedience. His brother, the Rev. Daniel Solberg, is a Lutheran minister and supports Roth, a leader of protesters calling for a full investigation by the Senate's Select Committee on the Denominational Ministries in Foreign Countries.

The group contends local banks and steel companies contributed to unemployment in the Pittsburgh area by investing in plants eligible for tax breaks.

Bob Geldof, founder of the Live Aid relief movement, will meet President Francois Mitterrand today to appeal for more aid in a new famine crisis in western Sudan. Geldof said yesterday that relief food stocks for 2.5 million people in western Sudan "ran out a week ago last Friday." AP

The long Christmas break is over, and the second semester and the new year are both young and promis­ing. Freshmen at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's feel a sense of accomplishment. Those who survived the first semester now have adjusted to college life and are ready to begin a brilliant career in their chosen major.

For most seniors, this semester is the beginning of the end. Or the end of the beginning. Whichever is the case, there are many of those who are graduating in a little more than three months who have already completed their major field of study. It will be difficult for them to probably their last chance to take the courses they always wanted to take.

Those sophomores and juniors in between have new courses, new professors and new opportunities. And spring is in the air. At least for now.

Last week, as the temperature temporarily peaked at tropical levels, some of the more adventurous students wore shorts for the first time this year as they topped around the mud puddles on their way to class. This is a symptom of the anxiety students ex­perience under the pallor of oppressive skies and stif­fling schoolwork.

Many of the local taverns were filled wall-to-wall with drinkers, not only on Friday and Saturday nights, but all of last week as well. Parties lacked the off-campus apartment area last weekend as youthful Dionysians danced around pools legs. Music pulsed from nearly every dormitory window and RAs had their hands full trying to quell the celebrating masses.

It is to state the obvious to say that the second

Reagan ordered to slash spending

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Controller General Charles Bowsher, carrying out part of a budget-balancing law that the administration says is unconstitutional, directed President Reagan yesterday to slash government spending by almost $12 billion.

Under the Gramm-Rudman law, Reagan has no choice but to order the cuts by March 1. Congress could pass its own alternate package of cuts or could act to block them entirely, as some members have advocated. But as Congress returned from its winter recess, leaders said such action was unlikely. "We'd run into a buzzsaw," said Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., a House member who helped write the final version of the Gramm-Rudman Act.

Bowsher, who directs the General Accounting Office, said that additional cuts in the military of $44.6 million and in domestic programs of $5.5 million must be made above those outlined last week by congressional and White House budget offices.

Under the Gramm-Rudman act, the GAO is required to tell the president how much must be cut from each federal account to meet deficit-reduction targets, using figures supplied by the two budget offices.

The law is named for its sponsors, Senators Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and Warren Rudman, R-N.H. In most cases, the cuts detailed by the GAO yesterday were identical to those announced last week by the Congressional Budget Office and the White House Office of Management and Budget.

In all, the GAO made more than 70 changes in the figures outlined by the OMB and the CBO, but most were minor.

U.S. officials debate anti-terrorism response

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Secretary of State George Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger are engaged in an unusually public Cabinet-level policy debate that could determine whether the United States someday attacks a country that backs terrorists.

Ever since U.S. forces withdrew from Lebanon after attacks on U.S. Marines, Shultz has advocated agetough stand toward terrorists that would include strikes against targets in countries such as Libya that support terrorism.

In a 1964 speech in which he said innocent lives might have to be put at risk, Shultz declared, "We cannot allow ourselves to become the Hamilton of nations, worrying endlessly over whether and how to respond."

Weinberger, on the other hand, has warned against hastily planned strikes that could "kill women and children," aggrivate terrorism and lead to chaos that could undermine U.S. strategic interests in the Middle East.

The Pentagon also has in mind the experience in Lebanon, where 241 U.S. servicemen were killed in a single suicide bombing. They were there fulfilling a mission that Shultz had endorsed, but that Weinberger had opposed from the outset.

Another consideration of those who argue against retaliation is the danger of inciting revenge-seeking, Mideast-style terrorism in the United States, especially if innocents are killed.

For example, officials take seriously the threat of such a leader as Moammar Khadafy, who has warned that if attacked he would send terrorist suicide squads to the United States.

The long-running debate between Shultz and Weinberger surfaced anew in the aftermath of the terrorist attacks on the Vienna and Rome airports in December in which five Americans were among the 197 dead.

Although the attacks occurred in European countries, and one of the terrorist suspects said their motive was to "kill Israelis," Shultz has treated the attacks as an assault on the United States that must be answered, with Libya the most likely target.

Weinberger again was in the posture of urging caution.

"It must be clearly and unequivocally the policy of the United States to fight back," Shultz said last December at a conference on terrorism.

But Weinberger told the same conference: "I think there are a lot of people who would get instant gratification from some kind of bombing attack somewhere without being too worried about the details. We have to consider the appropriateness of the response and whether what we are doing will diminish and discourage terrorism in the future.

A senior aide to Shultz, who asked not to be identified, said the State Department advocated a punitive strike against targets in Libya after the airport attacks. Such a move was rejected by Warren Christopher, the deputy secretary of state.

But Reagan sided with Weinberger and opted for economic sanctions.

After the hijacking of a TWA plane last year in which one American was killed and dozens of passengers held hostage, Reagan named a special task force on terrorism, headed by Vice President George Bush, to study the issue.

But the group's report is ambiguous on the question of retaliation, neither recommending it nor ruling it out.

the expense of the traditionally dominant Christians.

No group claimed responsibility for yesterday's midmorning bombing in the Furn el-Shubhak district. Police said the car was detonated by remote control.

An eyewitness reports said the bomber parked the Mercedes on the sidewalk, pretended he had engine trouble, then walked away and detonated the bomb.

It was the first car bomb in Lebanon this year. Last year car bombs killed 513 people in Lebanon, according to police figures.

Youssef Bitar, the top police explosives expert, said the car was packed with 550 pounds of explosives, extra tanks of gasoline and oxygen bottles to turn it into a huge fire-and-shrapnel bomb.

Syrian-backed militia continued their pressure on Gemayel's forces yesterday in the Christian heartland north and west of Beirut. Syrian army units were reported to be deploying in the mountains east of the capital. Western sources said Syrian parachute troops and paratroopers moved into several villages overlooking Gemayel's hometown of Bikfaya, 10 miles northeast of Beirut, in the previous 48 hours.

They said the buildup apparently was intended to GST Weapons and leftist Gemayel militias Syria has sent against Gemayel's forces.

Associated Press correspondent Rama Salameh reported sporadic clashes with artillery, anti-aircraft guns and rockets in the mountains between the Lebanese army units and the militias. There was no word on casualties.
South African industrialists support apartheid abolition

Associated Press

Johannesburg, South Africa - White South African industrialists called yesterday for an end to apartheid in an effort to re-establish confidence in the nation's economy as the inflation rate hit a 6-1/2-year high.

A government information agency, said the inflation rate jumped to 18.4 percent in December. That was 1.4 percent more than the previous month and almost double the rate of two years ago.

Also yesterday, police said they found the charred body of a black man in KwaZulu Natal Province near Port Elizabeth, a not-plagued area on the Indian Ocean 600 miles south of Johannesburg.

About 100,000 people, most of them blacks, have been killed in 16 months of violence related to apartheid, the system of segregation under which five million whites dominate 24 million raceless blacks. Most of the deaths came at the hands of security forces, but some were cases of blacks killing other blacks suspected of collaborating with the white government.

The Federation of Chamber of Industries, the country's largest employer alliance, said in a statement that political rights and freedom should be extended to all races.

The group called on the government to create a climate for negotiation by releasing all political prisoners, abolishing discriminatory laws and permitting blacks to work and live wherever their skills and wealth allow, and to share in governmental power.

But the "rights of minorities" should be protected, the statement said. "The process of political roundtable bargaining cannot and will not start until all parties are convinced that government is genuinely willing to negotiate a new constitutional dispensation based on power sharing up to the highest level," it said.

charges of unprofessional conduct, or even criminal misconduct, charges he said. Furthermore, Koop added, patients clearly cannot predict the future. "If a person, for example, is impelled to sign a Living Will by the prospect of prolonged, painful death in an intensive care unit, some patients clearly cannot predict the future, said Koop.

Before his lecture, held at the Law School's student lounge and sponsored by the Thomas J. and Albertha White Center for Law and Government, Koop told reporters "the three major life issues, abortion, infanticide and euthanasia, are all associated."

Infanticide, which gained publicity in the last several years when severely handicapped infants were denied food and water, "is euthanasia in an age group," said Koop, whose responsibilities as surgeon general include advising the public on health matters.

Unless the public's attention is called to this problem, Koop said, "you could very well get into a situation a few years later when the public will say, 'you've done this with infants for such a long time, why do you worry so much about old people?'"

An Arts and Letters degree won't limit me to a specific job.

Joe can use his imagination as he chooses an occupation with his Arts and Letters degree, just like many Notre Dame graduates have done before him. The following are just a few examples of how some Notre Dame Arts and Letters majors have found unusual and innovative occupations with their majors.

Tammy Moss, a fine arts major, is using her talents as an underwater artist. An anthropology major, Kelly Bernard, has spent time onCrete diving for a salvage company off Key West, Florida. One government and international relations major, Robert Sam Ansom, worked for the National Park Service in the Bahamas.

Having an anthropology degree, according to Maguire, helped him to do a better job. While working in the juvenile system, his background enabled him to recognize the criminal subculture.

Michael Maguire used his anthropology major background while at a Vista volunteer, which is something like working in a local Peace Corps, in the North Carolina Department of Corrections. He continued in this type of work at the State Training School for Boys and later at the State Training School for Girls in Missouri. When need for additional space for women's correction forced the closure of the State Training School for Boys, Maguire started a new facility for girls in Kansas City.

His parents are constantly plagued by questions like, "Whatever possessed you to major in that? Do you really expect to find a job? Why don't you want to become a doctor like your cousin Larry? What about engineering or accounting? At least then you could be guaranteed of a fairly well-paying job."

A presentation of the hard facts on abortion

Wednesday, January 22, 1986 - page 6

The slaughter of babies will go on until we stop it

As to the question of abortion, I do not want to influence you so much as educate you. So let me just state some scientific and legal facts about it. I have tried last year in a similar column, and many will cite next year until the medical evidence becomes so overwhelming that no one can deny human life is low by abortion. You decide for yourself if the fetus is a human life or not! Here are the facts: At conception, the fetus has different chromosomal makeup from either of its parents. As its journey towards birth begins, the fetus further differentiates itself from its mother. It can have a different blood type, be of a different sex, and can replace its own dying cells.

Janet E. Smith

Here I stand

By 25 days from conception, the unborn child begins to beat. By 30 days its quarter-inch long body has a brain, eyes, ears, mouth, kidneys, liver and umbilical cord. By 45 days, the unborn child's skeleton is complete, in cartilage, not bone. Here, move ment begins. It can now swallow its amniotic fluid. By 65 days, it can grasp before its mother notices any Brainwaves can now be measured by an EEG. By 65 days, it can grasp before its mother notices any. By 8 weeks, it can feel the amniotic fluid, and will respond to noise. If its amniotic fluid digests and urinates. It is very sensitive to pain and will respond to noise. We know we need to redouble our efforts to provide food and health care and to long-term planning to prevent future pregnancies. We do all this because life is precious, because we value each and every life, no matter how remove from our immediate concerns.

The phrase "life is precious," a phrase often repeated by "right to life" groups, becomes clearer. The emphasis on "rights" by these groups is not completely adequate to describe the challenge that faces us. It is not just that people have a "right to life," we do not believe this. We should be glad that they share with us the world's goods and add to the world's goods, and value, respect and respond to what we do and what we serve to the best of our ability.

But we know that it is not the right response. We know we need to redouble our efforts to provide food and health care and to long-term planning to prevent future pregnancies. For all these, we do all this because life is precious, because we value each and every life, no matter how remove from our immediate concerns.

Doonesbury

There are arguments that some kinds of life simply aren't worth living - the baby would be better off dead, either for his or her own sake or because of the trouble it would cause for those responsible for caring for the baby. But hasn't our response to the famine and starvation in Ethiopia shown us the way to respond to such plea? Does - the situation is just as deadly here, in the developing world and near death, and any kind of long-term solution seems even more far off. So shouldn't we just kill off the people who are near death and put an end to their misery and to our incom pliance with their rights?

But still, the battle is far from won. Recently in Minnesota, a pregnant woman was hit by a drunk driver, and as a result her eight and-a-half-month fetus was killed. We don't condone the killing of babies, but it is a reality of life. That being said, we can draw the line? Then, I ask, can we impose some majority favoring abortion. If there had been any abortions would not have used our courts as their vehicle for change. They used to have used the Congress.

The civil right movement used the courts to change the laws. After the law had been changed by Congress, it was then challenged by the courts. So why should pro-lifers not use the same argument to reverse America, a nation which values the right-to-life ethic? History repeats itself, although some would like to make the point that we are somehow imposing ourselves on society in a different way than the abortions of the Roe vs. Wade era.

I believe not only in women's rights, but in the right to life. I believe there are millions of babies. This is not a comfortable place in America for one to be. Why did the court make this decision? My guess is that the whole abortion fabric splits if we allow that this baby is a human being. For that reason, abortion, which allows the taking of life at any point until birth, would be allowing the killing of babies. So the court must adhere to such logic and rule that the eight and-a-half-month fetus is not a human being, otherwise we might have to admit that we are a country which has permitted the killing of millions of babies. This is not a comfortable admission for us. I am unable to explain why we say absurd things to avoid admitting it.

But admit it we must. We must. Fighting abortion is not the "job" of only a few, but much more so than was fighting slavery or the Holocaust. Most good people sat by and did nothing about slavery or the Holocaust and the evil went on. The killing of babies will continue until we stop it; even if it is not an easy task; even if we lose friends and are threatened to be fair. But we can make the right response. If there had been any abortions would not have used our courts as their vehicle for change. They used to have used the Congress.

So say "I here I stand. I will stand with you!"

Dear Editor,

Today, on the anniversary of the Supreme Court decision in Roe vs. Wade, I feel moved to express some thoughts I have on the pro-life movement.

When I first came to Notre Dame as a transfer student, I was overwhelmed by the baggage of a lot of unexamined views—one of the most disturbing being views on abortion. I was emphatically pro-choice. In fact, I felt an immediate disdain and lack of respect from the pro-life side. But this began to change as I listened to others' views and began to understand the ramifications of the choice.

Abortion is one of many justice issues such as nuclear arms, political oppression, poverty and world hunger—which transcend the boundaries of religious affiliation. There were some initial discussions about abortion among the country alone— all reflections of the same difference and moral malaise which allow this negligence to proliferate. For those who have dedicated themselves to the pro-life movement, abortion is among the greatest reflections of justice and human rights in our world today.

Abortion is not merely a threat; it is a potential devastation. Its killing occurs daily in a universal and individual way until it is terminated by the procedure, abortion entails another kind of death. "If we deal unjustly with the least of these, we shall be judged as guilty as those who bring upon ourselves a death of spirit. Those group a call and we see what we can do to help in a society which is desperately looking for something to believe in, it is especially vital that the unborn be given the basic respect and society (i.e. each one of us)."

This is why I joined the pro-life movement. I was taught at Notre Dame the importance of respect for human life, the need to promote human rights, and the need to protect the defenseless. I believe that people who are pro-life have a responsibility to stand up and speak out against this evil.

One of the first things I realized is that the pro-life movement is not just about abortion. It is about respect for all human beings. From the moment of conception until the day of death, every human being is worthy of respect and dignity.

In the pro-life movement, I have found a community of like-minded people who share my beliefs. We believe that all human beings, regardless of age, sex, or ability, are created in the image and likeness of God. We believe that every human being has the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

I have been blessed to have many friends in the pro-life movement, and I am grateful for the support and encouragement they have given me. Together, we have marched in the annual March for Life in Washington, D.C. We have participated in the annual March for Life in Washington, D.C. We have also participated in the annual March for Life in Washington, D.C.

I am confident that the pro-life movement will continue to grow and to make a difference in the world. We believe that all human beings are created in the image and likeness of God, and we believe that every human being has the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

I urge all readers to consider joining the pro-life movement. Together, we can make a difference in the world and ensure a future for all human beings.

Sincerely,
Jan K. Buchanan

CIVIL RIGHTS

Today's city, the Great Society plan for human rights, is encouraged. To the contrary, the rights of the press and the rights of the public to information about the degree to which I had examined and accepted the inviolability of human life. Respect for the civil liberties of others, first among these being life itself, calls upon our humanity, not just our theology.

The administration of either institution. The news is reported as accurately and objectively as possible. Condensed by and accustomed to selfish choices, people lose their reason for another.

We place abortion among the most pressing of justice issues because its consequences are far reaching. The pro-life movement is dedicated to the protection of the unborn, the parents and the abortionist.

I feel moved by the Supreme Court decision in Roe vs. Wade, I feel moved by the Supreme Court decision in Roe vs. Wade, I feel moved by the Supreme Court decision in Roe vs. Wade. I am appalled at those who have been struggling to protect the unborn in the face of vehement and unfounded attacks against their efforts. Give the student Right to Life an opportunity to explain their views. We also had strictly enforced quiet hours so that the other men in the house could be asleep.

I feel for my friends and for my reason, I remember writing a letter back home to a girlfriend saying something like, "You won't believe this, but I have met a really nice woman who is pro-life and she's intelligent! She has good reasons to be against abortion!"

This statement should give you some indication of the degree to which I had examined my own view on the abortion issue; before coming to Notre Dame, I really thought little or nothing to do with human rights. It is, however, very much a question of human rights.

FATHER NOBREAU: Your anniversary is this weekend, we would like to wish you a Happy Anniversary.

THE CHICAGO BEARS WILL BE SHUFFLED on your TV screens tonight. I love the Bears even though I'm not a big football fan. The Bears have a lot of talent and they love to win. I love the Bears and their fans.

THE CHICAGO TRIP AND OTHER EVENTS WILL BE DISCUSSED. Do you like to go to games? Do you like to watch them on the TV? Do you have experience in Black and White or color photography? If you answered yes to any of these questions, we would like you to be a member of the black and white trip. If you are interested in photography in a really bad way and love to have fun, we would like you to be a member of the black and white trip.

they continue working hard, they will do it.

To help cushion the loss in the sabre division DeCicco will have to rely on a talented and dedicated group of seniors. Heading the list is three-time monogram winner Tony Consoli (Wayne, N.J.), a hard worker in every sense of the word, Consoli completed the tournament with a 7-1 record and could be a more than adequate replacement for Janz Senior John Edwards (Scottsdale, Ariz.), who also came away from the tournament with a 7-1 ledger. Heading into this years campaign, Edwards career record placed him fourth on the sabre winning-percentage (.853) list. "This squad is good on paper, but they aren't near where they should be at this point," adds DeCicco. "But it was a thrill to be exposed to a different culture. It was a wonderful time."

In contrast, the mood was quite serious at the Blue Gray Classic in Montgomery, Ala., where almost 200 scouts gathered to examine some of the best senior football players in the nation. The pro prospects did everything from taking psychological tests to practicing taking psychological tests to practicing every day in full pads. "There were scouts all over the field, watching everything we did, so that was a case where you really had to perform," says Scanned. "Down there we really concentrated on playing good football." Pinkett was named the Blue's outstanding player for his role in his team's 27-20 victory. Pinkett caught seven passes and rushed for two touchdowns in the game.

"I gave the scouts an opportunity to see our catch the ball," he says. "If ever there was a doubt about me I simply was happy to have an opportunity to play in front of so many scouts."

Furjanic starred on defense with eight tackles. Ballage added four tackles for the Blue and Dorsey made two stops. While his ex-teammates were flocking in Japan, Perino travelled to San Francisco as Notre Dame's sole representative in the East-West Shrine Game. Perino's blocking helped lead the way for 23 East running backs and an 18-7 triumph.

Mike Van der Velden if they please, so their capabilities and if we (coaches) don't screw them up along the way." DeCicco also is optimistic about the future of the fencing program with the group of freshmen on the team. Fencers Yehuda Kovacs (Hod Hasharon, Israel) and Derek Homan (Beaverton, Ore.), sabre man Tim Collins (Morristown, N.J.), and epee fencers Ted Fay (Oakland, N.J.) and Todd Greller (Niles, Mich.) all have been performing well in practice and will be giving some of the monogram winners a run for their money. "I'm not sure we are on the right track to duplicate what we did last season at this point," DeCicco stresses. "Our concern is that the kids settle down and start working and make it happen. The potential is there if we work at it."

Irish try to forget about UNC concentration on American tonight

By ERIC SCHEUERMANN
Assistant Sports Editor

Although it is very easy to be looking forward to Sunday's matchup with Notre Dame, the Carolina State, Penn State and North Carolina. The Irish, whose record now stands at 11-2, face American University tonight at 7:30 in the ACC. Eric Scheuermann previews the game in his story at the left.

The Eagles stand at 7-8 and have lost eight of their last ten games. The Eagles' leading scorer is Frank Ross, who was averaging 22.4 points per game prior to his team's loss at Clemson on Saturday. He led his team in scoring in 11 of the first 13 games. Ross is considered to be the most dangerous player on the Eagle's squad, and will pose the greatest threat to the Irish.

Teaming with Ross in the back court will be 5-10 sophomore Mike Sampson, who is excepted to play a major role on the point guard for the Eagles. He was averaging 7.1 ppg and 4.8 assists per game. It is inside that the Eagles are the weakest. The Irish will try to take advantage of this with some strong post play.

6-6 sophomore Eric White starts at one forward position, and leads the team in rebounds with 7.4 per game. He also chipped in 10.9 points per game. Sophomore Chuck Kempton, meanwhile, will start at the other forward. Although only 6-2, West plays in the frontcourt out of necessity. And although playing out of position, West is second on the team with 12.9 points per game.

American's biggest question mark is at the center position. 6-7 junior Henry Hopkins starts there, and is averaging 11.3 points and 5.5 rebounds per game. 6-3 junior guard Pat Winning plays off the backcourt and has fine showings in individual defensive plays.

ND fencers hope to tap potential

By TRISH SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

"I just want to impress upon them what could happen if they train hard and fence to their potential." According to Notre Dame's fencing coach, Mike DeCicco wants his team to remember. To fence and compete at their potential, the Irish need to begin to re commit themselves to following 1985's performance. The combined epee, saber and foil teams compiled a 23-0 regular season record, winning a trip to the NCAA tournament. The team came up short, however, losing by one touch in the final bout to champion Wayne State. But DeCicco will lose only two monogram winners off that roster in epee captain Andy Quaroni and saber captain Mike Janis, while the foil squad remains intact.

The top contender for Quaroni's spot on the epee roster is Christian Kempton, a senior from Krefeld, West Germany. Kempton recorded a 34-8 slate last season and is a fixture to the national for the third time. He currently stands 6-5 after the tournament. He will meet with a strong challenge from Challenge from American's Mike Gostigan. Gostigan hasn't compiled the statistics over his career that some of the other fencers have and left Chapel Hill with a 4-4 slate. Kempton was once in training for the Olympic modern pentathlon event. Any added support for the epee squad will come from the strong junior Harald Scherpe, a senior from Miami (Ohio) in the ACC. He also chips in 10.9 points a game. 6-3 junior guard Pat Winning plays off the backcourt and has fine showings in individual defensive plays.

The key matchup could be on the inside where Tim Kempton's older brother Dolan absolutely shut down Talmadge in the first half of last year's game, holding him to four points without a field goal attempt. A similar effort will be needed Sunday as Carolina relies heavily on its big men, who scores 20.2 points per game.

Second in importance will be the defensive play of the Irish backcourt on Carolina's Steve Hale and Kenny Smith. The Irish did an effective job on Smith last year, holding him to 12 points. Hale, however, was on the sidelines with an injury, and his presence adds a lot to the Tar Heel attack. Both with of those guards shooting well over 50 percent from the outside, the Irish will have to throw Smith and Hale constantly to keep them shut down.

Still, it can be done. Opportunity is knocking on Notre Dame's door, but the only way to open that door is to slam it on Carolina's offense today.
