Students give little support for upcoming peace march

Only one Notre Dame student may participate in a cross-country march that aims to garns support for global nuclear disarmament, according to Student Body President Bill Healy.

Because students would be forced to miss part of this semester in order to make the entire trek, the Great Peace March has lacked student support, according to Healy.

"You have to take nine months off," said Healy, who said he wouldn't be participating because of his academic and leadership responsibilities.

"A lot of people would want to support something like this. (There are) a lot of different ways to express dislike for the arms race," he added.

According to Healy, the one student who may participate in the march is Felicia Leon.

But even she is "doubtful" about participating in the the march, Leon said.

The Lyons senior said she wanted to walk with the group, but because the march begins on March 1, she would have to miss her final semester at Notre Dame.

Although she likely will not make the entire march, Leon said she may join the marchers in the summer if it "gains momentum."

"I'll see how it starts out," she said.

The march's organizers had expected to have as many as 10,000 persons undertaking the journey, but they're nearly 3000 short of that amount, according to Mealy.

"There have been no problems in the construction of the fountain," Dedrick said.

"Building the fountain in the winter presents an advantage because the frozen ground supports the weight of the columns," he added.

Dedrick said there are eight limestone columns, each weighing 85,000 pounds. Across the top of these columns will be a crosspiece, he said.

"On the face of this crosspiece will be inscribed the names of Notre Dame's war veterans since World War II. The Latin phrase 'Pro Patria For Peace,' will also appear on the crosspiece," said Dedrick.

He said he has spent a great deal of time planning the movement of the limestone columns with the Indiana Limestone Company.

"We have arranged all the details with the company, and there should be no problem in setting the remaining columns into place," said Dedrick.

The ceremonies began Monday and were put in place the following day. Each column is 20 feet high and will be topped by a 10-foot limestone piece. Other sections will arrive each Monday, Wednesday, and Friday until Feb. 7.

"The project could be completed by commencement," said Dedrick. It depends upon the construction rate of the flat granite. "John Burgee, a Notre Dame graduate, is the architect and designer of the project," he said. "He is based in New York and following the construction process closely."

According to Dedrick, the late Maude Clarke underwrote the cost of the War Memorial Fountain.

Students join pro-lifers at Capitol Hill march

WASHINGTON - Members of the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Right to Life Club joined an estimated crowd of up to 100,000 yesterday in Washington, D.C., for the annual march and protest of abortion.

Thirty members of the campus group went on the trip, the largest turnout ever according to the club's Vice President Bill Ryder. For the first time, ND/SMC Right to Life was able to fill an entire bus for the trip.

"We've gained a lot of momentum. Everyone is starting to realize the mistake that was made in 1973," Ryder said, referring to the 1973 Roe vs Wade Supreme Court decision which legalized abortion.

March organizer Nellie Gray, crying "look how strong we are," to the demonstrators, estimated the crowd at about 100,000.

However, District of Columbia and U.S. park Police estimated the crowd at 36,000-to-57,000: a bit more than half last year's crowd.

"I'm proud to stand with you in the long march for the right to life," Reagan told the crowd.

After listening to more than an hour of similar remarks from mem­bers of Congress, the protesters marched down Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House to the Supreme Court building.

They carried posters and chanted slogans such as "Life - yes! Abortion - no!" and "Hey! Doctors! Leave those kids alone!"

Notre Dame students shouted "Notre Dame loves life" in response to Marquette University students' shouts of, "Marquette loves life."

Ryder said he was encouraged by the march.

War Memorial slated for completion in May

Obesity associated with genes, not childhood eating habits

Associated Press

BOSTON - Whether people grow up to be fat or skinny depends in large part on their genes and seems to have nothing to do with the eating habits they learn as children, a new study concludes.

The researchers help explain why some people remain chubby even when they diet constantly, while others stay trim no matter what they eat. Fattiness and thinness are in their genes, not childhood eating habits.

The findings were based on a study of adopted children. They of­ten grew up to be the building blocks of their biologic parents. Slim adoptees, however, frequently had slender natural parents and overweight children had fat ones. There was no evidence that they mirrored the shape of the adoptive parents who raised them.

Many experts believe that heredity plays at least some role in obesity. But they also often theorize that fat people get that way because they learn bad eating practices early in life.

"The real surprise is that the adoptive family has no impact at all, as far as we can tell," said the study's director, Dr. Albert Stunkard of the University of Pennsylvania. Authorities have long argued over whether nature or nurture is the key to obesity that runs in families. Dr. Theodore Van Italie of St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center in New York concludes that the new research "appears to resolve that controversy."

However, the study, published in today's New England Journal of Medicine, was not intended to imply that people have no control over their weight or that calories don't count.

"What has been shown here is that there is a strong genetic factor," said Dr. Jules Hirsch of Rockefeller University.

In an interview, Stunkard cautioned that his findings certainly don't mean that the war on fat is hopeless. Lots of people with two fat parents probably have the highest genetic risk for obesity, take off weight and keep it off, instead, he said. The research helps explain why "it's more diffi­cult for some people than for oth­ers."

A 7-year-old girl was suspected of driving when the car carrying her and her stepfather plunged into a canal in Cape Coral, Fla., police said. "It's speculation, but the position of the wheel does lead us to believe she might have been driving," police Chief Jim White said. The car and the bodies of Krany Nicole Neuberger and Harold Conover, 70, both of Cape Coral, were discovered Sunday by a fisherman. 30 programs to be represented at Center for Social Concerns Festival

By KATIE CRONIN

Those forgetting to read the "yellow pages" in The Observer two days ago can still find out what they need to know about community service from 6 to 9:30 tonight at the Center for Social Concerns Festival. More than 50 student groups and community agencies will be represented at the festival, according to Kathy Royer, the festival coordinator.

Included among these groups will be the Big Brothers and Big Sisters programs, the World Hunger Coalition, and the Neighborhood Study Help Program, Royer said. The Shelter for the Homeless and the Logan Center will also be at the festival, she said.

There are a large variety of programs in which one could become involved, Royer said. More than 1000 students are presently involved in at least one area of community service or social action, she said.

The Neighborhood Study Help Program has the largest number of participants, according to Royer. There are approximately 300 students who volunteer to spend a week in the study program, which provides tutoring for South Bend children, she said.

The Dumas House is a new program in which students work to establish a community of students and former prisoners, Royer said. The program, which the church is designed to rehabilitate former prisoners, is looking for interested students, she added.

Students may come to the Center for Social Concerns Festival tonight if they want to find out how to become involved, she said.

Word of the excommunication came from program broadcast Tuesday on several cable television outlets. The show's narrator, Father John Paul, made the disclosure, calling her "public enemy No. 1 of all babies being killed in the womb in Rhode Island."

Planned Parenthood leader claims excommunication won't affect her

The Associated Press

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — The head of the state's Planned Parenthood organization yesterday said that her excommunication from the Roman Catholic Church for what it called activities causing "the sinful termination of human life" would not affect her work or her religious beliefs.

"I am a Catholic and I will always be a Catholic," Mary Ann Sorrentino said. "Whether they give me communion or bury me in their church isn't going to change that. I can sit in my living room and talk to my God. I don't need to go to their church."

The Diocese of Providence excommunicated Sorrentino in June, saying in a letter that her efforts had "resulted in the sinful termination of human life." The Vatican City liason in Washington supported the move.

"It is incomprehensible that you cannot possess a principle that you are an accomplice when you direct an agency where...approximately one-sixth of the state's 7,000 abortions a year are performed," the June 14 letter said.

Sorrentino, 45, has been executive director of Planned Parenthood of Rhode Island for nine years. The organization provides counseling on birth control and performs abortions.

"It's an opportunity to express something we should believe in. We can't let this issue die through apathy," she said.

Nicaraguan rebels divided, U.S. military aid will not help

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - A U.S.-sponsored Nicaraguan rebel unity group, central to President Reagan's plan to resume military aid to the insurgents, has failed to heal the deep divisions that have plagued the war against the nation's left-leaning government, prominent Nicaraguan exiles say.

Many of the exiles, longtime opponents of Nicaragua's Sandinista government, also expressed doubt that even renewed American military aid can avert the rebels' ultimate defeat as long as the move is run by leaders the exiles consider are hand-picked by the U.S. government.

Several added that the only realistic hope now for ousting the Sandinista government is direct U.S. military intervention to crush the Soviets-supplied, Nicaraguan army - an option the Reagan administration has repeatedly rejected.

The grim assessment by leading Nicaraguans in Miami and Washington, and prominent exiles in Reagan's preparations to ask Congress for as much as $100 million in military and non-military aid for the Contra rebels after it was created at the administration's urging last June. The AP interviewed 22 anti-Sandinista Nicaraguan exiles about their views on the political and military situation.

"UNO is designed to do battle in Congress, not to do battle in the front lines, with the people of Nicaragua," said Salva Argentina Cardenal, a former Nicaraguan vice president, now living in Miami. "It owes its existence . . . exclusively to the U.S. intelligence agencies that provide it direction and exercise strict day-to-day control over its military operations and political pronouncements." Jose Medina Cuadra, a Nicaraguan attorney living in Miami, said he resigned from UNO because "the group was set up to function on paper, but not in action."

Even with a big infusion of U.S. military aid, the rebels "can never overthrow the Sandinistas on their own," Medina said. He said he would support direct U.S. intervention in Nicaragua "because the Soviets and the Cubans have already intervened and control Nicaragua."

Conservative exiles sharply criticized the inclusion of former Sandinista officials, Armando Cruz and Alfonso Robelo, in the censure that runs UNO. They hold Cruz and Robelo responsible for the Sandinistas' confiscation of their property and they contend the U.S. attempt to broaden the rebel movement by including them has deepened divisions.

The third UNO leader is Adolfo Calero, head of the CIA-organized Nicaraguan Democratic Force, FDN, the largest rebel army. But his presence, too, has been divisive, with rival rebel factions charging that UNO's management of $27 million in non-lethal U.S.-aid - mostly medicine and clothing - is intended to subvert them under the conservative FDN.

Armsmig Wiggins, a spokesman for an Indian contra group, Miskraza, said UNO has used the U.S. logistical aid to divide Indian organizations and lure Indian fighters into the FDN at the expense of other groups.

Bad art clogs American airwaves
The University of Notre Dame should continue selectively divesting from its holdings in South Africa in order to encourage a long-term attitude change in both whites and blacks, by using a low inducement level and by creating dissonance, as all companies following the Sullivan code do. According to social psychology the next two points may be the answer to South Africa's racial problems. Low inducement has been proved by social psychologists to attain the highest degree of attitude change. Dissonance creates the change, yet, since a low level of inducement is needed for a strong attitude change, the Sullivan code provides a theoretical answer.

Randy Battistoni

Social psychology studies the relationship between social institutions, social groups and the individual behavior. The problems in South Africa deal with social institutions (companies), social groups (apartheid vs. African National Congress), and individual behavior (President Botha and Nelson Mandela, for example). Thus, social psychology would be the place to look for reasons to divert. The fact that the United States has made significant strides in overcoming racism in the past few decades through these theories would be proof that a feasible solution exists.

Low inducement will attain the greatest attitude change. When an attitude changes with little or no inducement, the change becomes internalized. For example, if a person was asked to move to a different country he would most likely be opposed to leaving, yet if he heard another reason he would change his attitude. This change in attitude would be easily taken into this person's set of values because he freely decided to go. Since he decided that going would be to his advantage he most likely would internalize this behavior permanently. On the other hand, if that same person was faced with a large sum of money (high inducement) to go, the attitude would not be internalized since he could tell himself, "I only went for the money.”

Divestment would bring about high economic pressures for the whites, who in turn might change their policies yet will still feel hostility toward blacks. Notre Dame, as a Catholic university, should maintain its investments and try to create a low inducement atmosphere both on apartheid and on the black community through these companies. The low inducement should be a rationale for moving toward equality. Notre Dame's investments may very well help this low inducement work.

The Sullivan code creates a great deal of dissonance which is not required by low inducement. Dissonance theory states that attitude change can be achieved by causing one to engage in behavior that is discrepant with one's attitudes. Brehm, a social psychologist, showed that if one is given two attractive alternatives, our attitudes toward the rejected alternative will become more negative. The dissonance theory was used in the United States to fight apartheid. Social scientists, who evaluated how well this theory worked, found it to be effective. This theory creates inconsistency between a person or a group's attitudes and their actual behavior. If the behavior is done under duress or inducement, this does not even an excuse for the behavior could be made and thus the attitude would change. The new attitude would be internalized. An example of this appeared when the pepper-spraying was done. A child, by law, had to go to school, yet the parents could send him to a private segregated school. Since the conditions of our migrant workforce have much as a private nursery does. Campbell has acted with FLOC in establishing contracts with 90 farmers in Ohio, and 98 percent of these harvest mechanically. Records corroborate that Campbell is in full compliance with the Fair Labor Standards Act, that Campbell has recognized the right of migrant workers to organize and that Campbell is directly subsidizing living conditions that exceed Ohio requirements.

Not only is Campbell working on behalf of these workers, but the company is also keeping the families of these workers in mind by establishing full-time day care centers which serve to care for migrant children while the workers are away doing their harvest.

The question of pesticide usage in fields where migrant workers have been harvesting has also been raised. I understand more facts detailing Campbell's safety and health requirements that exceed even those of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Campbell Soup Company, like many other industries, has been boycotted simply because of its name and reputation. The attacks launched against the company by Notre Dame's FLOC supporters are unjustified, un-founded and unfair. Campbell has been a leader in improving migrant lives, and for its efforts is being boycotted. The question will be put to your student body very soon as to whether or not to continue the boycott. CAMPBELL'S NOT TREATED FAIRLY BY THE BOYCOTTERS

Dear Editor:

I am a chairman of the Indiana College Republicans, and I often come across many events taking place on campuses around the state. None have so far shocked me as much as the Notre Dame boycott of Campbell Soup Co.

In recent columns in The Observer by Sud Yadin (Oct. 14, 1985) and Patrick Markley (Dec. 10, 1985), support was given to the Farm Labor Organizing Committee (FLOC). The conditions of our migrant workforce have been proved by social scientists who have evaluated how well this theory worked, found it to be effective. This theory creates inconsistency between a person or a group's attitudes and their actual behavior. APARTHEID SUPPORTERS SHOULD GET FACTS STRAIGHT

Dear Editor:

While I do not intend to answer the vicious, ignorant ragimacoleio presented by Chris Edwards to his piece on apartheid, he makes one analogy which ought to anger Americans. To compare the American “green card” with the “pass” the South African black has to carry is obscene. The “green card” is designed to welcome and include; the “pass” is there to degrade and exclude. Edwards, a government major, needs to go back and take an introductory course on American citizenship.

His whiff of the pariah government in Pretoria and the underlying racism of his article is suffocating to those protests, Trembath show s no understanding of their character. Black South Africans are not inferior of any kind. All races, including white classes who “are suffering enough as it is,” so no further disruptions please! It is extraordinary to find a theologian arguing for business as usual with South Africa’s military-industrial complex.

Trembath should read the recently published Karien Document, signed by ISD leading South African Christians - blacks and whites from every denomination. It reminds us that “the church must avoid becoming a third force,” a force between the oppressor and the oppressed. Rather the church “must now take sides unequivocally and consistently with the oppressed” against an “unbearable regime that has lost any legitimacy” a tyrant, that vis-à-vis the common good persistently and in the grossest manner.

Here I stand

This was the question Gary Gartung and John Moody asked my philosophy class freshman year. The class filled the Library Auditorium, and almost all of the students stated they would kill the one to save the other.

In answering the question, I proposed another question, as a good philosopher should do. Suppose the next day the dictator takes one of the starving village and promises to feed half of the people, and kill the other half. If you act, you will all die of starvation anyway. Wouldn’t you kill half of the people to save the other half?

The only thing I really changed was the numbers, the principle remained the same. Once one reduces human life to its benefit to the majority, where does one draw the line?

I was fortunate to have learned the principle was important, and not the numbers; letters and the inside column presents the views of their authors. Column space is available to all members of the community and the free expression of varying opinions on campus as through letters, is encouraged.

skills and she has the shot. Sandy has just got to go to the ball with confidence and move to the basket with confidence." Questionable for tonight's contest is freshman guard Lisa Kulkin, who suffered an injury to her right foot in last weekend's victory over Notre Dame. Kulkin is being evaluated on a day-to-day basis.

Tip-off tonight is at 7:30 at the ACC, and students are admitted free of charge upon presentation of a current ID card.

McMahon is ready to play despite injury

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS - Chicago quarterback Kevin Concannon didn't have much to do Monday. McMahon had his acupuncturist Wednesday. And, have you seen his right foot in the Big East Bowl.

After sitting out much of Tuesday's practice, McMahon was treated before Wednesday's session by acupuncturist Harriett Shriver, who said the team's management has decided he would be ready to return to action today. No present or former varsity basketball players may participate. The winning team will receive the championship game being held in an NBA arena. For more information call the Angela Athletic Facility.

Off Campus and Alumni dominate in interhall hockey action at ACC

By ORLANDO RUBIANO
Sports Writer

Worcester — Things are just getting under- way goodly, as Ross’ coach Claire Walsh said of her team, but those words could very well describe the situa- tion of all the women’s interhall bas- ketball teams.

Forfeits, team withdrawals, and most recently, game cancellations have characterized the young season for many of the teams.

At this point Badin tops the stand- ings with a record of 1-0 after defat- ting Farley’s “B” Paquerau West 6-1 with a loss to rival PE. The remaining teams are all even at 1-1, but those records change as the season continues.

When the Breen-Phillips’ “B” team withdrew, Lyons’ remaining team withdrew, gaining wins by forfeit. Lyons’ loss was also on a forfeit to Farley’s “B.”

This weekend’s games have all been cancelled. Scheduling placed the games in conflict with the men’s varsity game against North Carolina. “So far it’s been a good season for the team,” said Badin captain Maureen Connelly. “We will not be usual in the way we are usually expected to play.”

The remaining teams are very evenly balanced, but Lyons’ schedule is weighted towards the end of the season. Lyons and Walsh both face off at 7 p.m. on Monday.

Secondly, Alumni may have something to say about Off Campus visions of the league title. For the second time in as many games, Alumni used its opposition for target practice. This time the victim was Fisher (0-2), as Alumni stormed by, posting its opponent, 10-2. Alumni, in its return to interhall play had outscored the rivals by a 22-5 margin.

Forfeits and withdrawals delay the start of women’s interhall season average. With the first time all year the Irish were outrebounded, as the Eagles grabbed 37 misses to 34 for Notre Dame. Fisher is a quick team,” said Lewis captain Katie Cavanaugh leading the backcourt attack, Lewis surprised Farley’s “A” team.

They were leading Lewis at the half, down 36-30, but had to battle back 27-24 for the win. The last game against Farley was surprising they could pull off the victory. Notre Dame only shot 1-10 from the field, and the Eagles had no trouble win- ning the game by skating past Stanford (0-2) and upped its record to (1-1) by virtue of a 5-0 victory over St. Louis Ed’s (1-1). Keenan (1-1) won its first game by skating past Stanford (0-2) by a 4-1 score.

No one wanted to win the game more than Tapscott, but he was not satisfied with his team’s performance. He said, “We came back and beat us.”

“I have three things to say about the game today: first of all, Notre Dame is terrific when they work together and play as a team. Secondly, we played a good game against such a good team. Finally, I was disappointed with the officiating tonight.” Tapscott was asked.

Irish track stands successful with middle distance crew posting gains

By JOHN COYLE
Sports Writer

Everything is right on schedule according to Head Coach Joe Piane for Notre Dame's Irish track team. The Irish ran solidly last weekend in their first meet of the '86 season, the Michigan Relays, and are looking to do well in Saturday's Western Michigan Relays, another non-scoring meet.

Piane is pleased with the progression of many of his runners so early in the season. These two non-scoring meets provide an opportunity for Piane and the Irish runners to experiment a little in preparation for the more competitive upcoming meets.

"We are getting ready for the Midwestern Collegiate Conference Championships here on Feb. 1. Some of the guys are coming along very well. I'm enthusiastic about the season," said Piane.

The two top finishers for Notre Dame at the Michigan meet, which was comprised of schools from the Big Ten and Mid-American Conference, were senior Jim Tyler and junior Robert Nobles. Tyler finished third in the 1000 meter run and Nobles took third in the 600 meter dash with an excellent time of 1:10.88. Piane was especially happy and also a little surprised by Nobles' performance.

"Nobles' had a bell of a time. I'm surprised in the respect that I did not expect it so soon, the first meet out. That time might be one of those that you might never try it before?"

DeCicco thinks it depends on the individual. "They (the Belles) are good fence. You'll have to work with me, particularly my starts. He takes time to work with me. I'm pleased with my start."

"Middle distance is the strongest part of our team. We'll be working on getting those four coordinated and ready," said Piane. They're training hard to achieve their main objective, to make the National Championships.

n National champion is Notre Dame's own Tony Ragunas, who was fencing for 10 years. "Saint Mary's meets them (the Irish) on a regular basis and it's a credit to them," says DeCicco. "They (the Belles) are good fencers."

So how does a student get interested in a sport like fencing if they've never tried it before? DeCicco thinks it depends on the individual.

"We have an open house at the start of the year," he says. "We tell them they don't have to know the sport as long as they want to work hard. And Saint Mary's has been very active over the years."

It's not all winning medals. It's a lot of fun and it's hard work. "It's a beautiful tie (between the two schools). It would be great to have someone like that here," says DeCicco.

"For his outstanding freshman swim performance, the Notre Dame swim coach Tim Welsh, echoes Proost's praise for his outstanding freshman swimmer.

"She is a winner," he says. "Mild mannered about her skills and a tough competitor," he added. "She has not had a shot at the distance races."

Johnson also said that her experience in the 200-meter event, which he calls "the most sophisticated race in swimming."

"They (the Belles) are good fencers, you'll have to work with me, particularly my starts. He takes time to work with me. I'm pleased with my start."

Notre Dame defeats American U. despite poor shooting performance

By NICK SCHRANTZ
Sports Writer

With one eye looking ahead to Sunday's matchup against top-ranked North Carolina, the Notre Dame basketball team played just well enough to gain a 67-56 victory over the scrappy team from American University.

The Irish only led by a 32-26 score at halftime, but before they began to utilize their superior talent to pull away from an Eagle team that was more than ready to pull off a major upset last night at the ACC.

In fact, were it not for the 25 personal fouls committed by the visitors the Irish would have been in for a much closer ball game. Notre Dame attempted 18 more foul shots than the Eagles, and converted on 11 more to account for the final margin of victory.

The Irish connected on 21 of 30 shots from the charity stripe, but a 14 for 15 performance in the first half helped offset a lousy 7 for 15 of the Irish for the remainder of the game. Senior captain Ken Barlow led the Irish with 18 points, including a fine 5 for 8 shooting performance in the second half to give him an early lift coming out of the locker room.

Junior Jim Dolan added another superb performance, as he tallied 12 points on four for five shooting from the floor and corralled a team leading seven rebounds.

In addition, the 6-8 forward slowed things down when the team was out of control and made several nice outlet passes that led to fast break baskets when the Irish needed the points.

The Irish could only manage a 66 shooting percentage for the game, but according to head coach Digger Phelps that was not the reason for his team's poor performance.

"We had no concentration on what we should be doing, and thus a lot of little things broke down," Phelps commented. "We came out flat and it didn't go well. When we don't shoot free throws well it shows that we're not concentrating.

"Eddie's (American coach Ed Tapscott) kids always play hard. Phelps continued. "We knew they would play well on offense, as they normally have patience, and set solid screens. On the defensive side they were very harassing, as they try to take away some things we like to do."

Guard Frank Ross was the leading scorer in the game, as he poured in 10 baskets in 21 attempts to put 25 points on the board.

American forward Eric White was the only other Eagle to score in double figures, as he unexpectedly returned from a bout with high blood pressure to give his team five of seven shooting for 10 points.

Women's basketball uniting to play against rival Loyola tonight

By MARTY STRASEN
Sports Writer

The time has arrived when Head Coach Mary DiStanislao finds out what her women's basketball team is made of.

The Irish play host to Loyola (Ill.) tonight in a game which marks the first of six consecutive contests hard against opponents from the North Star Conference. Notre Dame dropped Detroit 72-58 in its first conference game, and can only hope to encounter the same success in its final 14 games of the season, 13 of which are against North Star rivals.

Dit馐stalo's attention to the fact that her team has entered the crucial phase of the season, and realizes that the Irish are going to have to start playing consistent basketball to secure a bid to the NCAA tournament.

The conference games are the season for us," she says, "in the non-conference games you fear your nest. Now every game is important.

The Irish have a long way to go if they hope to make the NCAA tournament, scoring 20-7 record. After 14 games, they hold an 8-6 mark for the season.

The Lady Ramblers appear to be one of the stronger teams in the conference this season, coming into tonight's game with a 9-3 record, winning both of their games against conference opponents according to DiStanislao, Loyola always comes ready to play.

"One thing I'm always impressed with about Loyola is their consistency," she explains. "They work hard. They don't do a lot of things, but they do what they do very well. They shoot well and they move well with and without the ball."

"They're not especially big up front," she continues, "but they are very, very active under the boards. We will only have a (rebounding edge) if we get good position. For the most part, though, we have the size and the strength (advantage)."

Notre Dame certainly established an advantage against Loyola in last year before they caught fire and ran away with a 59 trouncing and by 15 in a 64-63 win over Loyola. The Irish expect Loyola to try to counter a running game early, and DiStanislao predicts her squad's success will depend upon its ability to stop the Ramblers from rambling to the hoop for easy layups.

"We have to cut down Loyola's running game and challenge them on both ends of the court," she says. "We'll have to press them of fensively and we can't just let them run on us.

"If you stop that part of the game, you take away huge percentage fouls from them. One year, their margin of victory has been set by their ability to use the running attack."

Leading the charge for Loyola will be forward Jim Dolan (42) and center Ken Kempton in last night's game. Notre Dame managed a 67-56 victory despite their lackluster performance.
