WASHINGTON - The Reagan administration yesterday hailed European curbs on Libyan trade as "essential if we're going to combat terrorism on an international basis," said White House spokesman Larry Speakes.

"There are the kind of steps, this is the kind of cooperation that is essential if we're going to combat terrorism," Speakes said. "This, together with the arrest of 21 Libyans in Britain but European actions on Libya negative votes constituted a veto."

Ronald Reagan complained he "can't see any justification " for spokesmen Larry Speakes.

Striking out against enemies only generates more hatred

In the ten days since President Ronald Reagan launched the counter-terrorism raids against Col. Muammar Qaddafi, his hatred rhetoric have arisen over the justification of U.S. military intervention in Libya.

A flurry of newspaper commentary, political talk shows and even public demonstrations followed the Middle Eastern confrontation.

People quickly took sides on this very dangerous situation. Within minutes of the attack it became possible to discuss plans and solutions that only months before were completely precluded.

Here in America, our information concerning the event flowed rapidly from our government. Reagan's frequently worded speeches allowed the American to understand the operation in a mask - at least that is what we would like to believe.

While House officials largely shielded the president's views. We were told that the nighttime raids on the Libyan capital were "surgical strikes" meant solely to destroy the terrorist facilities of Qaddafi's regime. Larger motives were also attributed in the reverse, but the violence and destruction was intended only to make a blow against terrorism.

Patriots would like us to imagine that their mission was largely successfully in that the number of innocent victims of their bombs was kept to a minimum.

The anti-American demonstrations that have rocked the Middle Eastern capitals this past week, including those previously hostile to Qaddafi's cause, tell a different story. What happened on the night of April 14 was much more than limited retaliation against terror bases.

The volunteer reactions towards the American state even by nations whose benefit from the raids is greater than our own speak clearly of the complexity of third world politics.

Clearly the United States is caught until a swelling communalization of various Middle Eastern forces. Our actions against even a single fanatic are carefully evaluated by other organizations across the board. If we hope to deal with all of these forces effectively, we must make a deliberate effort to understand them.

Rhetorical speeches that focus our attention on a single object of hate, in this case the regime of Qaddafi, may lead us from a thoughtful consideration of our actual situation.

Dialing in an interest is not simply a matter of choosing sides. It is not a case of us against them, or the good guys against the bad guys, at the expense of the dark gray hazy area in between.

The cowardly use of violence involved in planting a bomb in a crowded airport or the fanatical devotion that drives the suicidal attack are cases of extremem behavior. Most crowded airport or the fanatical devotion that drives the suicidal attack should have learned that they will pay a high price for their violent actions.

The actual outcome of the air raid is not special, what this narrowed view predicted.

From a Libyan point of view, Qaddafi is likely to be stronger than before. His wild claims about the inherent evil of the United States can now be backed with physical proof.

Even if the relatively few that were frightened were frightened from their aims, our performance was not improved. While our bombs were falling the world was watching. The consequence has been that sparked the anti-American passions around the world will only generate more enemies against our country. And more enemies translates into more terrorism.

A passive stance towards terrorism is not what I suggest. My point is simply that the narrow-minded view that urges us to strike out blindly against any of our enemies generates more hatred. O nly by ending the hatred will the terrorism be stopped.

HPC plans more dorm interaction

By MARGIE KERSTEN
Sue Mary's Editor

"Hall Presidents' Council is a unique body and is one of the most important parts of student government because of the representation from every hall," said Joannie Cahill, newly elected co-chairperson, at last night's HPC meeting.

Her comments came after the HPC had distributed presidential surveys, discussed the Sorcerer award and announced other events.

Discussing the ambitions of the HPC, Cahill said, "Our goals are first to make activities within the dorms and to increase the events the HPC has sponsored between the dorms and to increase the events the HPC has sponsored as a body."

Sponsored activities in the past have included lecture series and the development of party rooms, according to Cahill. "We want to do more between the dorms like fraternals, retreats, picnics and other planned activities," she said.

Co-chairperson Sheila O'Connor was not at the meeting last night.

Other business included the distribution of presidential surveys to the HPC members. These surveys are to be forwarded to the members of the individual hall councils to be completed. Cahill said the Board of Trustees asked the HPC for their input on the presidential search. "We really want student opinion so please try to get them in," she said, adding that the results would be presented to the Board on May 8.

Cahill explained the Sorcerer Award, which was designed for finalists that show excellence in spirit. Keenan Hall currently holds the award in recognition of the Keenan Review, said Bill Jelen, HPC secretary.

Plaid said the Sorcerer Award "is a way of saying thank you to those minorities into the journalistic field."

Referring to the deceased CBS-TV broadcaster Edward R. Murrow, Kuralt said, "I think he would be impressed with how much more advanced our lights and wires are . . . Because he was fair-minded and humane, I think he would be pleased that not everybody in all television these days is looking for a white male."

Professor Bellis wins annual Sheedy Award

By ROB HENNIG
News Staff

Dr. James Bellis, associate professor of anthropology, has been selected as the recipient of the 1986 Sheedy Award for Excellence in Teaching in the College of Arts and Letters.

Bellis "makes the long, dim outlines of the human past live in the minds of his students, regardless of their major fields of interest. Inside or outside the classroom, counseling in his office or speaking in a dormitory, he has demonstrated that all good teachers race as much for whom they teach," according to a citation accompanying the award announcement.

Bellis was chosen by a committee composed of students and faculty and chaired by Dean Michael Loux, of the College of Arts and Letters.

"I was very surprised and very pleased. It's a very, very nice feeling," said Bellis about being chosen to receive the Sheedy Award. "Teaching is a kind of interesting profession...the rewards you get are few and far between and the rewards are very personal," he added.

"I'm one of the few teachers not that in good, but that got formally felogated. Many of my colleagues deserve this," Bellis said.

The Sheedy Award was established in 1970 by an anonymous donor "to recognize excellence in teaching in the college," according to Loux.

"Winning it is one of the high points of your professional career," said Loux. The winner receives an honorarium in addition to the award, he added.

Bellis taught high school social science from 1961 to 1964 in New Albany, Indiana. He received his PhD. in anthropology from Indiana University in 1972 and has been a member of the faculty at Notre Dame since 1970.

Bellis has conducted archeological research in Ghana, West Africa, and in several midwest sites in America. He specializes in the origins of gold mining in West Africa. Most recently, he has been involved in underwater archaeology at a site off Key West in Florida, he said.

Last year's Sheedy Award winner was Katherine Tillman, an associate professor in the Program of Liberal Studies.

occurred early in the morning on April 15, Libyan time.

State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb said the department had no comment on the arrest of a Palestinian in connection with the bombing of a nightclub in West Berlin on April 5, which killed an American serviceman and a Turkish woman.

In Berlin today, officials said a Palestinian arrested in the discotheque bombing is the brother of a man held in Britain in connection with the attempted bombing of an Israeli airliner.

In an interview with four reporters, Reagan was sharply critical of France for forcing U.S. warplanes based in Britain to skirt Europe to get to Libya.

“I think it is difficult to understand, if we're all in this together and supposed to be sharing the protection of all of our countries, to deny the right of our planes to fly over,” Reagan said, “I can't see any justification for it.”

But he added, “I think it's something to be considered now and talked rationally between us as to what the effect might be.”

The Observer/Robert Jones
While President Reagan is vigorously fighting terrorism in one foreign policy area, specifically Libya, he is subtly promoting terrorism in another, the nuclear arms race. While arms control does not grab as many headlines as Colonel Khadafi's terrorist activities, it is a far bigger threat to world peace.

When Reagan recently ordered a new detonation at the Nevada Test Site, he was squandering the best opportunity to promote arms control in recent history. Indeed, it may have been the best opportunity since the fiery dawn of the Atomic Age. Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev promised to continue the Russian's eight month self-imposed testing moratorium if the U.S. discontinued their test explosions. He also proposed negotiations aimed toward a total ban on testing, offering the Americans (for the first time) the right to make on-site inspections to verify Soviet compliance with the treaty. And this all occurs at a time when experts agree that the U.S. is ahead of the Soviets in the sophistication of its warheads.

Why is President Reagan forsaking this excellent, unprecedented opportunity? Why is he the first U.S. President to oppose a comprehensive ban on atomic weapons testing? Reagan insists that testing is necessary to preserve nuclear deterrent. He argues that "a limited level of testing assures that our weapons are safe, effective, reliable, and survivable."

Indeed nuclear testing will help develop "better" weapons. But better weapons are not safer weapons. Much of the current nuclear testing is devoted to certain parts of the proposed weapons, not to the overall strategy. The promise of security that SDI proponents guarantee is as imaginary as the movie in which the project is named. Even the most enthusiastic scientists concede that "Star Wars" will not intercept all incoming Soviet ICBMs. And "Star Wars" makes no allowances for slow-moving delivery systems that move through the earth's atmosphere, such as bombers, cruise missiles, and even weapons smuggled across borders. Insensive countermeasures, such as decoy missiles made of tin foil can easily be deployed by the Soviets just as quickly as "Star Wars" technology is developed. In other words, SDI is a dead end.

Better, more accurate and powerful weapons will tempt both superpowers to initiate a preemptive first strike to knock out the other's missile silos. More precise weapons will offer general on both sides the opportunity to fight "tactical" nuclear wars that they oddly assume, against all historical precedent, will not escalate to a full-scale nuclear exchange. "Better" weapons are a dead end in every way.

A total test ban offers the most promising method of halting the spiraling arms race. Experts, including former National Security Advisor Brent Scowcroft and former Defense Secretary James Schlesinger, both of the Ford Administration, agree that a test ban could make a "significant contribution to slowing nuclear proliferation."

A test ban is the best first step because it halts the development of deadlier weapons. A test ban is now more verifiable than ever given the promise of on-site inspections as well as new satellite and seismological technology. There is little risk to the nuclear deterrent that we rely on to defend such important areas as Western Europe. A test ban would only halt the deployment of new weapons, not eliminate current weapons in place.

Negotiating a test ban, or at least agreeing to the present moratorium would contribute to some trust and good will between the superpowers that could lead to actual disarmament agreements later on. It is only a first step, but we have to begin somewhere.

Maybe Reagan is not convinced that the current nuclear arms race is bad in itself. The development of nuclear weapons is a very expensive proposition, especially in this area of Gramm-Rudman. It consumes resources that could be better used to confront such problems of world hunger. It is, in fact, stealing from the poor in a very real way.

The assembly of nuclear warheads produces lethal wastes, some of them remaining radioactive for thousands of years. Thousands of tons of these wastes are being produced each year by the nuclear arms industry; a terrible legacy to our children.

The nuclear arms industry does not produce jobs. It is capital intensive. Other industries would produce far more jobs for the amount of money spent.

Ronald Reagan made a serious mistake when he ordered the 79th nuclear detonation at the Nevada Test Site two weeks ago. He should halt testing, seek a moratorium, and begin negotiations while there is still an opportunity. In this way he will stop the wasteful and dangerous nuclear arms race while it is still possible. He is doing far more to promote a secure world in this way than by dropping a bombs on Khadadafi.

Force not acceptable as terrorism deterrent

Dear Editor:
The Pax Christi USA organization has released the following statement on the bombing of Libya:

"Pax Christi USA deplores the air attack on Libya by U.S. military forces. While we condemn terrorism without reservation, we also condemn military force as an acceptable way to deal with the problem. The bombing of Tripoli and other Libyan targets has resulted in what the U.S. is calling 'terrorist attacks': the injury and death of innocent civilians. The bombing will certainly cause what it was meant to prevent: more and worse terrorist attacks.

The bombing which alienates Arab nations will only serve to strengthen the determination of these nations to increase terrorism aimed toward a total test ban treaty, or to encourage others of this community to let their authors. Column space is available to all members of the community and the free expression of varying opinions on campus, through letters, is encouraged.

consume many more calories. We eat off supermarket shelves, and our diet is that we have become a country of the richer nations though Americans are Americans. America's consumption of food is dominated by organically grown foods as illustrated by the booming health foods industry.

But the ugly truth is that America's consumption of food is not nearly as healthy as that of poorer nations though Americans consume many more calories. From 1908 to 1913, complex carbohydrates made up 56.1 percent of our diet. In 1986, they make up approximately 35.7 percent of our diet. In other words, one half of our carbohydrate intake seems to have drifted to the refined form of refined white sugar. The average American consumes roughly two pounds of sugar per week. That's 104 pounds per year.

One problem with our imbalance diet is that we have become a country of immediate gratification. We eat off supermarket shelves, reaching for what is fast, convenient and most of all, what is easy to prepare, instead of listening to what our bodies need. Processed foods are relatively inexpensive to produce and generate huge profits.

At the expense of our health, we are continuously bombarded with advertisements for food that can essentially lay the groundwork for our peace of mind. We eat more fish and less red meat. We concentrate more on natural, chemical elements: carbon, hydrogen and oxygen. The most famous of all, what is easy to digest, are made from the same produce and generate huge profits.

This is the best computer store in town. It's the only place to buy a computer. Now you can have your own computer.

The store is open seven days a week, and they have a big selection of computers. They even have a Wall of Computers where you can see all the different computers in one place.

I've been to this store before and I was really impressed. The people there are really helpful and they have great deals on computers.

I bought my computer from them and I've never been happier.

The store is located at 123 Computer Street. They're open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. every day. Come by and check it out!
Women down OSU
fall to Miami (Ohio)

BY CHRISTOPHER KOSTER
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's tennis team continued its strong play to win a match against Ohio State and Miami (Ohio) this past weekend. The challenge to the two Ohio universities began with the victory over a talented Ohio State squad.

"We were very steady," said Irish head coach Michele Gelfman. "No one had a really big game for Ohio State, so it was easy to capitalize on their weaknesses." The number-one singles player for the Irish, Susie Panter, sparked the squad by defeating Kris Colgrove of Ohio State, 6-3, 6-1. Mary Colligan followed stride, taking her Ohio opponent Yvonne Lohrer, 6-3, 6-1. The third and fourth-place players for the Irish added a solid loss. Michael Dasso pulled out a close match over Ohio State's Jodi Saunders, 7-6, 6-4, followed by a narrow victory for Ohio State when Christine Peterson defeated Loy O'Brien 6-4, 6-7, 7-6. The weekend also brought about a temporary change in Notre Dame's normal singles and doubles flights. Joanne Blafore, comfortably platooned in the sixth position, was unable to travel with the squad because of the MCAT testing. Thus, Team Scholar Natalie Illig bumped up to the number-five spot and freshman Natalie Ilii, generally in the exhibition match, took the number-six flight. Schmidt defeated Michele DeCosmo of Ohio and Illig lost an exciting match 7-6, 5-7, 6-4.

"Natalie played her best tennis all year," said Gelfman. "It's very encouraging to find.

"Against Miami (Ohio) we needed to have a big game. I think the girls were a little intimidated, thus they played a little more timidly."

This match against reputable Miami (Ohio) ended in a 6-2 loss for the Irish, putting their overall record at 14-4. The number-one singles game was suspended because the other matches had been completed and this game would have made no difference in the final outcome. The matches of the day culminated in the Irish dropping four out of five in singles action. However, a fine performance was turned in by Illig and a come-from-behind victory over Miami's Leslie Kibler, 2-6, 6-2, 6-3.

The Irish have been playing on the road a great deal and feel they are, "learning more and more what we are capable of, and what needs improvement." In doubles play the Irish top team of Panter-Dasso was victorious, 7-6, 2-6, 6-3. Colligan and O'Brien dropped their team to Miami's Boyle-Brovovich. The number-three team of Schmidt-Ilii lost to Filus and Mill, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3.

On the horizon the women's team continues with its strong season and head to Kalamazoo, Mich, on April 23 as the team tries to remain aggressive in a set of games to close out the season.

ND tops BGSU, 6-3,
despite lack of 'polish'

Nobody ever said it had to be pretty. Notre Dame's tennis team showed its own version of winning ugly last weekend by slipping past Bowling Green, 4-1.

Head Coach Tom Fallon said he could take the win, regardless of its lack of polish.

"We really just played well enough to win," he said. "I'm not really excited by our performance, but it's still a win." Dan Walsh lost a tough 1-6, 7-5, 6-4 match, but the supporting cast came through for five singles victories.

Number-two player Brian Kalbas was a 6-4, 6-2 winner, number-three Tim Carr breezed to a 6-2, 6-1 win, and Tony Cahill struggled to a 7-6, 6-3 victory.

The Irish lineup was shuffled a bit because Paul Dagg suffered an eye infection. The injury should not keep him out of the lineup for the remainder of the weekend's play, which is hard for the sophomores to accept.

"It's really hard to sit and watch your teammates fight to win when you can't help them," Dagg said. "I really want to contribute."

The doubles competition was shortened to a single, ten-game set. Carr and Reiter moved up to the number-one doubles team with the Walsh-Dagg team unable to compete, and won, 10-5. Cahill and Joe Nelligan were defeated, 6-10, as the number-two spot, and the new team of Gelfman and Kalbas took an early lead, but couldn't hold on, losing, 8-10.

The Irish are now 20-8 on the season and head to Chicago for a match against DePaul this weekend. They then travel to Michigan State and Kalamazoo, before taking on two tough squads, Michigan State and Kalamazoo, this weekend.

SMC track falls short in bad-weather meet

By ANDREA LaFRENIERE
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

Monday's cold spell was partly to blame for the Saint Mary's track and field team's disappointing loss at home to St. Joseph's. The Belles were not able to keep up with St. Joe's, but they did finish ahead of Franklin at the meet and, according to Head Coach Jean Kerich, they gave a good performance.

"The weather had a lot to do with the results of the meet," she said. "It was miserable out there. We did pretty well in spite of it, though."

Freshman Jeanette O'Neill won the javelin event for Saint Mary's with her 98.9 toss. O'Neill placed fourth in the shotput, behind Beki Davis, also a freshman, who took third in the event. Davis and O'Neill finished third and fourth, respectively, in the discus as well.

In the remaining field events, Anne Blanco, a junior, placed fourth in the triple jump, and Davis took fourth in the long jump. Junior Cass Pearl ran the 100-meter hurdles with a time of 17.1 to capture first place. Davis finished third in the same event.

In the 400 and 1600-meter relay, Davis came in fourth in the long jump. Junior Cass Pearl ran the 100-meter hurdles, Pearl took second and Davis took fourth. Sophomore Stephanie Duke placed second in both the 100 and 200-meter runs, and senior Mary Luneen finished third in the 400-meter run.

In the 800-meter run, Theresa Rice, a freshman, won first place with a time of 2:30, and Cathy Kennedy captured first place in the 1500-meter run.

In the 400-meter relay, the team of Gill, Bianco, Bailey and O'Brien placed fourth in the 400-meter relay.

Rice and Kennedy came in third and fourth place, respectively, in the 1000-meter run. Pearl took sixth place in the 400-meter hurdles.

The Belles' next competition is Saturday at the Little State Meet at Indianapolis.

The team set two new school records at the meet, in which eight schools participated. According to Kerich, the Belles' performance was their best this season.

"We did just a terrific job at the meet," she said. "We were a close fifth, and we were far more competitive than we've ever been before at Districts. Each team member had a season best, so we were very pleased."

Highlighting the team's performance were two new school records set in the 400-meter hurdles and the 1000-meter relay. Pearl finished the 400 hurdles in a record 70.29 to take fourth place, and the team of Luneen, Kennedy, Gill and Rice completed the 1,600 for a third-place finish.

Rice was district champion in the 800-meter run, completing the race in 2:25.2. Kennedy finished in second place in the same event with a time of 2:28.4.

Driscoll placed fourth in the 10,000-meter run, and Luneen was sixth in the 400-meter run.

The team of Gill, Blanco, Bailey and O'Brien placed fourth in the 400-meter relay.

Rice and Kennedy came in third and fourth place, respectively, in the 1500-meter run.

Pearl took sixth place in the 100-meter hurdles.

In the field events, Bianco placed third in the triple jump with her 13.14 effort. O'Neill was third in the triple jump with her 11.80 toss, and Karen Krajcir, a freshman, was fifth in the high jump.

The Belles' next competition is Saturday at the Little State Meet at Indiana Central College in Indianapolis.

Bookstore field is narrowed down; 15 of 16 pre-tourney seeds advance

By MIKE CARDINALE
Sports Writer

The Bookstore Basketball XV commissioners proved to be as effective prognosticators as organized this year, as 15 of the 16 teams originally seeded at the beginning of the tournament advanced to the second round. In fact, the only team that missed the 15-of-16 pre-tourney seeds advance was the losers, Kenesey and Mike Rimkus chipped shot 7-out-of-15, while Tim Woods led the winners with eight shooting 10-of-16 and pulling down seven rebounds.

The Fugitive Guys won the game with two pressure free throws after Showtime had it tied at 23-23. Tim Woods led the winners in points and assists in field hockey.

“I got pretty intense, and everyone responded to that,” he said. “We tried to play tough defense and get as many fast-break points as possible. We wound up with a lot of follow-up shots.”

“All, we were really tough underneath,” Joel (Williams) pretty much cleared out the middle for Casey (Newell) and Tim (Brown) to grab rebounds.

Manhood reached the final four last year, and have made only one change in lineup, replacing Howard with Newell. Huber feels this year’s team is better overall.

“We are a better team defensive-ly, and we put more pressure in the middle, Offensively, we really haven’t had a chance to play out of a set-up offense because of the fast break, but we feel we can in the next round.”

Much More Manhood will face Korean Females II today at 6:15 p.m. on Stepan Court 1. The final 16 place finish with a total of 645.

Despite the low finish position, the Irish can take solace in the fact that they fared better than fifth-ranked Kentucky and sixth-ranked Kent State. Coach Noel O’Sullivan, who was hopeful of a top four finish, said his squad played all that poorly.

“Finishing sixteenth in the standings doesn’t look good, but our team numbers were good in comparison,” said O’Sullivan. “Ohio State without question was the class of the field, but the difference

Chuck pops a quiz on ND trivia buffs

Hello again, everybody! I am firmly convinced that the worst two-word phrase in the English language is “pop quiz.” In four years at Notre Dame, I have heard this phrase used too many times (once is too many times), and I know the fear it can strike.

OK folks. Time for a pop quiz.

Fortunately, this one’s for fun. No pressure, no grade, no problem. Just get the gang together and see if anybody can come up with the answers to these “stumpers” on the subject of Notre Dame sports.

ND golf team performs well in Ohio’s Kepler Invitational

By ORLANDO RUBIANO
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame golf team spent the weekend in Columbus, Ohio, where it joined 21 other teams in an abbreviated Kepler Invitational tournament. The tournament, which was hosted by Ohio State, was shortened to 36 holes from the scheduled 54 because of rainy and cold conditions on Sunday.

The invitational was won by the host Buckeyes, who finished the event with a team total of 642. Miami (Ohio) finished second, followed 20 strokes behind Ohio St. The Irish, however, found the going rough, as they could only muster a 16th-place finish with a total of 645.
