Six dorms change rectors for next fall

One-fourth of the residence halls on the Notre Dame campus will have new rectors when students return next fall, according to an Observer survey of the current hall rectors.

The Observer contacted each of the 24 rectors about possible changes in the rector positions at each hall. According to the rectors:

- Brother Edward Luther is leaving his position at Breen-Phillips to become rector of Fisher Hall.
- Father Mario Pedi will not be returning to St. Edward's Hall next year.
- Sister Jodie Serres is leaving Lyons Hall, she added.
- Sister Nadine Overbeck will give up her position at Breen-Phillips to go on sabatical.

Father Merwyn Thomas will be replaced as rector of Fisher. Moira Baker, eight-time rector of Lewis Hall, has elected to take a full-time position teaching English at Radford University in Radford, Virginia. Repeated attempts to confirm the changes through the Office of Student Affairs were unanswered because Vice President for Student Affairs Father David Tyson was out of town and unavailable for comment.

The departing rectors all indicated that they did not know who their successors would be at their positions.

- "It is Father Tyson's policy to change rectors every six to eight years," said Luther, who has been rector for eight years.
- "Any move is difficult, like a see RECTOR, page 4"

State television showed colorfully dressed folk dancers performing there. The cause of the accident has not been revealed, but Soviet radiation expert Pavel Ramazsev said when asked yesterday if it was a meltdown of the reactor core: "I suppose that is so."

There were conflicting reports about whether the reactor fire had been extinguished. U.S. intelligence sources had said Wednesday in Washington it still raged and could burn for weeks.

Vitaly Churkin, second secretary of the Soviet Embassy in Washington, testifying before a House of Representatives subcommittee yesterday, was more optimistic, saying whether the fire had been put out. He said, "I don't know," and added that "the accident is not over with. That is clear. We have not told other countries that everything is OK and they can relax."

The U.S. Agriculture Department said shifting winds were carrying a radioactive plume from the stricken plant over the rich farmland of the western Ukraine and into Romania, Hungary, eastern Czechoslovakia and Austria. Poland reported less fallout than in previous days but said radioactivity levels in water and soil remain high.

The Soviet government said only that "efforts to implement a complex of technical measures continued at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant (NPS) in the duration of April 30. The radioactivity on the territory of the NPS and the NPS' settlement dropped 1.5 to 2 times."

"Work is underway to decontaminate the contaminated area adjacent to the NPS territory. Medical assistance is being administered to those affected of whom 18 are people in serious condition. There are no foreign citizens among those affected," said the Soviet government.

The "settlement" is Pripyat, a town of 25,000 built at the plant site. Officially, the casualty toll is two dead and 197 injured, but Secretary of State George Shultz said it was "by good measure."

An Israeli amateur radio operator in Tel Aviv said a Soviet hammer radio operator told him there were 300 casualties, but how many were dead was not clear.

David Ben-Basset said the Soviet ham operator told him Wednesday that he lived 30 miles north of the reactor and "nobody drinks the water. We are afraid." The Soviet Union's first public mention of any effect on other countries came in a report yesterday by the official news agency Tass on a meeting in New York between U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar and Yuri Dubinin, chief Soviet delegate to the United Nations.

It said: "the Soviet government has informed a group of European states of the accident and steps undertaken to liquidate its consequences, so that the governments see SOVIET, page 4"

Homosexual group proposes access to facilities

By MARK PANKOWSKI
News Editor

A homosexual group's set of proposals seeking access to University facilities and media remains under consideration, almost two weeks after it was submitted.

The campus-based group, the Gays and Lesbians at Notre Dame/St. Mary's College, submitted the proposals several days after an April 8 meeting with Student Affairs administrators.

During that meeting, the administrators offered to consider any proposals the group might submit.

The GLND/SMC's proposals seek to use the facilities of the Center for Social Concerns, to sponsor events in University-owned facilities and to advertise in University-owned and operated media, all privileges now denied the group.

The group also submitted a proposal seeking to establish a series of meetings with administrators to address issues now separating them.

Vice President for Student Affairs Father David Tyson, who attended the meeting and received a copy of the proposals, said he couldn't discuss the proposals because no decision had been reached on them.

Assistant Vice President for Student Affairs Sister Jean Lenz, Assistant Vice President for Student Services Father Francis Cafarella and Associate Vice President for Residence Life John Goldrick also attended the meeting and received a copy of the proposals. They also said they could not discuss the proposals because no decision had been reached on them.

Because the administration doesn't officially recognize the group as a student activity organization, the group is denied many of the privileges it is seeking, said one of the group's co-chairs, "Jenny," speaking on condition that her real name not be used.

Jenny, a senior at Notre Dame, said almost all of the group's 50 members are Notre Dame students. Faculty, staff, alumni, clergy members and citizens of the community make up the rest of the group.

Although a few Saint Mary's faculty are members, no Saint Mary's student is part of the group, she added. Because no student of the College is a member, the group hasn't sought official recognition from Saint Mary's, she added.

According to the letter sent along with the GLND/SMC's proposals, the group is "working toward a day when homosexuality is considered an ordinary, non-controversial aspect of everyday life."

"To be more specific, we look forward to a time when it will make absolutely no difference whether one's roommate, teacher, teammate, friend or colleague is gay, lesbian or nongay," the letter continued.

Following the opening statement were the group's proposals. Included among them was a proposal to establish an open-ended series of meetings during the summer and the next school year.

The proposed meetings, which would be open to all administrators, would "provide for ongoing dialogue see GAYS, page 5"
Finals thieves abound: So watch your books

Hang onto your books, boys and girls! It's end-of-the-semester time, that semi-annual period featuring early parietals, final exams, and final parietals (an activity which, Father Tyson figures, increases because of early parietals), newly-grown beards, and packing to go home. It is also the time to become increasingly cautious if one is in the habit of leaving a backpack full of books in such locations as dining halls or bookstore lobbies.

Why a typical backpack bandit waits until December or May to steal stray backpacks is beyond me. It seems as though he would do far better if he spent all semester pilfering books and hiding them until he could sell them. But he never surfaces until the final weeks. Maybe he does not find resorting to thievery necessary until he has spent so much during the semester that the next check he writes for over $2.47 will bounce. Maybe the pressure of finals becomes so intense that he uses crime as an escape valve. Whatever his reasons, the bandit always increases his activity at the end of the semester.

I gained my first experience with one of these delinquent last December. I went to lunch at South Dining Hall with a friend who committed the grave error of leaving her backpack unattended for a few moments while she went to the restroom. Two hours later the backpack, having been returned by a good Samaritan, who had found it abandoned near D-6 parking lot, reappeared in her room. Missing were a textbook and a calculus book.

The theft had stolen only the two books; he had left alone a checkbook and another textbook. A few weeks later the thief returned, having sold the checks for $40 worth of books to a bookstore. The thief had stolen only the two books; he left alone a checkbook and another textbook. A few weeks later the thief returned, having sold the checks for $40 worth of books to a bookstore.

The end-of-the-semester backpack bandit indeed is a unique sort. Not yet a hardened criminal, he may display hints of compassion toward his victims by not stealing items of personal value or by stealing only a limited amount from any one person. Given a chance, he would much sooner steal a test on personal finance than a checkbook.

Perhaps he sees himself as a sort of hero, stealing $40 worth of books as less "personal" than forging someone's name on a check for $40. The damage to the unfortunate backpack bandit—though, is the same, if not greater.

The loss of her calculus book was particularly unfortunate for me because since her in that class was scheduled for the following day. Luckily, a helpful freshman was able to rectify the problem as soon as possible.

We are unfortunately still without a typewriter, the machine which normally sets copy from our computer system. This means we have to type out the entire paper by hand, which may result in a few errors getting through. We are working to correct the problem as soon as possible. Please bear with us.
South African blacks stage nationwide work stoppage

Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa - Millions of blacks stayed away from jobs and schools yesterday, crippling factories, mines and stores in the largest anti-apartheid protest in South African history.

The nationwide strike, demanding in part that May Day be declared a national holiday, signaled a powerful new organizational strength among black workers, students and civic groups in the campaign for equal rights.

An academic monitoring group said at least 1.5 million workers, and possibly many more, struck for the day in the nation's four largest cities alone. A government spokesman also estimated at least one million urban black students boycotted classes for the day.

Beyond those 2.5 million strikers, there was no way to calculate how many others left school and work for the day in rural areas and the nation's 10 tribal homelands, scenes of turmoil in recent months.

The national Associated Chambers of Commerce reported "massive absence from work" across the country, ranging from 70 to 100 percent. The black workforce is estimated at more than six million in a population of 24 million.

Both Vincent Brett, manpower director for the chamber, and Professor Eddie Webster, head of the academic monitor group, agreed the strike was the largest ever in South Africa.

In Port Elizabeth in eastern Cape Province, researcher Glen Adler said a survey of 86 companies showed that just six of 11,000 black employees turned up.

Thousands of mixed-race people joined the strike, and many Asians closed their shops in sympathy. Supermarkets tried to cope with white staff, but checkout counters were jammed.

Transport to and from townships halted as bus, train and taxi drivers joined the strike. Most companies adopted a policy of "no work, no pay, no penalty."

Shultz defends Marcos' rights as 'free man'

Associated Press

BALI, Indonesia - Secretary of State George Shultz said yesterday the Reagan administration considers deposed Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos "a free man" entitled to call supporters in his homeland and to move from the United States if he wishes.

In bluntly-spoken language exposing tension between the administration and the government of Marcos' successor Corazon Aquino, Shultz also said "we don't have infinite capacity to provide money" to Manila.

Shultz said Philippine Vice President Salvador Laurel, in a meeting with President Reagan, was told the administration believes the courts and not the executive branch of the U.S. government must resolve claims by the Aquino government that Marcos stole billions in money and other valuables belonging to the Filipinos.

Asked whether Reagan had provided to Laurel sufficient assurances of U.S. support for the Aquino government, Shultz snapped to reporters: "You will have to ask Mr. Laurel if he is satisfied. Let me remind you the president is not on trial here."

In his last full day on this tropical island before heading on to Tokyo and the seven-nation international economic summit, Reagan met with Laurel, conferred separately with Indonesian President Suharto and spoke to the foreign ministers of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN). Reagan then was joined by his wife Nancy for an elegant evening dinner and cultural performance hosted by Suharto and his wife, Tien.

In a toast, Reagan noted strong ties between the two nations "even though our methods of government differ."

During his address to the Southeast Asian officials, Reagan voiced great disappointment that Vietnam had broken off talks on the search for Americans still listed as missing in action.

Soviet nuke catastrophe sends futures skyrocketing

Associated Press

LONDON - The nuclear accident in the Ukraine, one of the Soviet Union’s biggest farming regions, has caused a sharp rise in wheat and livestock prices on world markets, commodities analysts said yesterday.

In the absence of any word from the Soviet Union on possible radiation damage to soil, water, crops and herds, commodities markets have been gripped by speculation that the Soviets will be forced to increase imports of grain, sugar and milk products.

Commodities analysts said it was too early to assess the extent of radioactive pollution in the Ukraine from the Chernobyl nuclear reactor but that heavy fallout could damage Soviet agricultural output for years to come.

Sweden and Denmark have already banned food imports from the Soviet Union and some Eastern European countries.

"The market is going through the roof," said Bill Kemaria, an analyst with the London-based International Wheat Council. "We haven’t seen excitement like this for months and months."

In Washington, the U.S. Agriculture Department reported shifting winds were carrying the radioactive plume to the southwest yesterday, in a direction that could ultimately affect some of the Soviet Union’s richest, black earth areas.

Analysts in London and Chicago attributed the commodities rally mainly to speculative buying and said it could fizzle out.

Screes said she is unsure where she will be geographically, but will be "researching creative ministries for church leaders."

"A rectress has a demanding schedule, but it has been rewarding. The reward has been working with quality, inspiring undergraduate women," Screes said.

Screes, like the other rectors, said she had no word on who would be replacing her. She did say that interviews were still going on and that she was on the selection committee.

The rectors said they have no information on when the incoming rectors will be announced or if students will be informed before they go home for the summer.

"The University wants to do everything it can to keep us quiet. We're not the type of image that the University wants conveyed," the graduate student said.

Cafarelli has said the public service announcements were banned because allowing them to be broadcast would make it seem the University was endorsing the group.

Although the group has a 15-year history, only at the beginning of last year did it make a group meeting primarily for parties to a more socially-active organization, said the graduate student.

In addition to informing its members about developments of concern to gays and lesbians, the group attempts to educate the com­munity about homosexuality, he said.

The group has provided lect­ures to four classes at Saint Mary's as a part of this education process, Jenny said. The group also has co-sponsored a poetry reading with the Saint Mary's College Cam­pus Ministry, an organization which has been very cooperative with the group, she said.

Another member of the group said the real issue for the group is censorship.

"For the radio station, the issue is censorship," said the member, a Notre Dame student who also spoke only on condition his name not be used.

"We're not the type of image that the University wants conveyed," the graduate student said.

"Sexual activity is not part of our corporation," said Jenny. She said.

"If people find out, you're pigeonholed," he said. "People no longer look at you as the smart skinny student but as a homosex­ually pigeonholed," he said. "People no longer look at you as the smart skinny student but as a homosex­ually pigeonholed," he said.
Senior pre-med accepts Niland service award

By ELLYN MASTAKO Senior Staff Reporter

The first Patrick John Niland Memorial Service Award was awarded to John Muffoletto, a senior pre-med, at the volunteer recognition banquet of the Big Brothers/Big Sisters of St. Joseph County.

The award was named for Niland, a 1982 graduate of Notre Dame. A Big Brother while at Notre Dame, he was killed in a car accident in 1985.

When asked why he thought he was chosen for the award, Muffoletto said, "I think I've had a big impact on my Little Brother. He was put into a foster home and then sent back home, and I kept seeing him and helping him through it all."

In his presentation speech, Father Edward Malloy, associate provost of Notre Dame, said when Niland's accident occurred, Niland deliberately swerved to save his brother, so it really is easy.

Malloy, a close personal friend of Niland, represented Father Edward Malloy, University president, at the banquet.

Because of Niland's commitment to the Big Brothers/Big Sisters program, his family established this award to recognize a Notre Dame student for exceptional service as a Big Brother or Big Sister volunteer.

Niland service award

In March of every year, each caseworker in the program nominates a Notre Dame senior or graduate student currently serving as a Big Brother or Big Sister whom they think fulfills the eligibility and selection criteria for the award.

Some of the criteria for the award include general quality and evidence of extraordinary contributions of time, caring and self-sacrifice.

"It's a really good feeling to have received this award," said Muffoletto. "After reading about Niland and what the award means, it seemed more important. Actually, when I got it, I had a really special feeling," he said.

Muffoletto has been a Big Brother for over two years. He said his roommate's involvement in the program prompted him to get involved. "I feel that since I've been here four years, I should do something in the community," said Muffoletto.

Muffoletto said he spends about one afternoon per week with his Little Brother, Chris. "We go bowling or to the movies; the possibilities are endless. I just do the things I did with my older brother, so it really is easy."

"Chris is a great kid. We've built a really open relationship over the years," said Muffoletto.

Muffoletto encouraged students to join the Big Brothers/Big Sisters program. "For people like myself who were a bit leery of joining the program, give it a try. You learn much about yourself through the experiences you have with the child."

Fear of homosexuality separates us from God

Going into the Roar: Exploring Attitudes Toward Homosexuality

As the story is told, the old toothless, clawless king of the pride tolls till leads the hunt long into his old age. When the pride enters the field for the hunt, the king goes to one end and the younger lions to the opposite end. Then they lie in wait and when the prey enters the field the old king lets out his mighty roar. The prey turns, flies from the roar, and runs directly into the paws and claws of the waiting pride. And so it is with us, I think.

Elizabeth Smoyer

Guest Column

When we avoid our own negative feelings about those we label "fag," "queer," "fairy," one of "those kind," we risk losing our very soul as our own attitudes about homosexuality in their own attitudes about homosexuality. If we fear or avoid contact with them, we may deny their existence by the existence of gay/lesbian persons. We may choose to isolate or reject gay/lesbian persons. We may choose to isolate from the hurtful experience, fear, or questioned value or other people in our lives, we stand behind our walls of fear. We deny one another renewed and deepened life. Old relationships are blocked and controlled by forces within us. For all the time we spend resting old relationships, we lose much of the truth of the new person in our lives. In other words, we are cut off from, if fearful, aspects of ourselves. Each of us is isolated and this prevents our true selves from growing beyond hurt, fear, and anger.

I suggest that fear, projection, and a perceived threat to a cherished value may contribute to behaviors such as isolating, labeling and rejecting gay/lesbian persons. To the extent that I isolate, label or reject any person, I cut myself off from our own wholeness and, by extension, the community's wholeness. Such attitudes do much to keep the gay/lesbian members of our community isolated and rejected, living as outsiders in our midst. We, as a community, become responsible for a social sin of oppression of a minority group. We may come to fear and project so much that we act as though a part of us is unlovable, unreadable and worthy only of denial and intolerance. This may be our unconscious message to the gay/lesbian persons in our community. I fear that these unintended attitudes create split divisions in our community. The more we cut ourselves off from this painful reality, the more we cut ourselves off from the life-giving, reconciling spirit of God who creation and life is lost to us individually and community.

May we have had a difficult or hurtful experience with a gay/lesbian person. Maybe we fear a gay/lesbian piece of ourselves. Maybe we see a value we cherish being questioned by the existence of gay/lesbian persons. If we project the shadow of that hurtful experience, fear, or questioned value onto other people in our lives, we stand behind our walls of fear. We deny one another renewed and deepened life. Old relationships are blocked and controlled by forces within us. For all the time we spend resting old relationships, we lose much of the truth of the new person in our lives. In other words, we are cut off from, if fearful, aspects of ourselves. Each of us is isolated and this prevents our true selves from growing beyond hurt, fear, and anger.

Because we are fascinated by the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ, we Christians are called to face the "deaths" of fear and hurt. Each time we celebrate the Eucharist together, we renew our commitment to this call, trusting in our fundamental, unbreakable union with God in love. Will we continue choosing to isolate ourselves from those of our community we fear because they bear the label gay/lesbian? Will we risk persevering in our feelings about them? Will we, on the other hand, trust that each and all of us, gay/lesbian or not, are unique and lovable expressions of a loving and gracious God?

Will we perish in our fear, or will we "go into the roar"?

Land of the Genises mixes rhythmic Afro-reggae with some of the reggae which has been hailed for its "dreamy" sound. Thomas "Tom" 99a Washington, a producer/arranger who has worked with such popular stars as Phil Collins, the Jacksons, and Earth, Wind, and Fire, worked with Dallol on the album.

While Dallol has risen to prominence in the United States, the members have made it a point to keep Africa in mind. "Especially since the ravaging famine which has claimed 500,000 Ethiopian lives in its catastrophic dimensions in 1983. The many money-raising shows we have raised have netted nearly $20,000 in hunger-relief aid. Percussionist Sellasse has said that the band has planned "... to do as many more benefit shows as possible to raise money - even though we have to cancel work for which we would have been paid." The spirit fits in well with the goals of the RASTA President Cathymian Reynolds says that Dallol is the perfect bridge to link the United States with those who have less, and who are in need. "Once we have seen that, RASTA plans to use the money raised from the concert to initiate specific projects, to reach the humbler relief organizations Oxam and Catholic Relief Services decide where the money will go, according to what area the relief project needs immediate attention," said Mazza. "This is the second year of this ball. We raised $5,000 last year for Ethiopia," said Povinelli. "For every concert and the Joys in the second act showed incredible creativity and execution. These performances coupled with an extensive choreography of "The Dance at the Gate" and "Jealousy" made for a very enjoyable show worth fighting to get tickets to see. The evening was extensive. Moving balconies, and instant scene changes. The meal will be simple. The food and the drinks attract people to next year." We are striving to make Notre Dame a community. We want a community response," he added. "It will be very well organized. Like Junior Parents Weekend we hope it will become an annual event. We have many corporate sponsors and dignitaries joining us for this year. This is our response to the community."

CODEL; RASTA will have personal contact with these groups, and it will monitor the programs until their completion. This "hands-on" approach ties in better with RASTA's aims for furthering awareness of the African famine and African culture than only donating a lump sum.

about as I shout to them from the sidelines: "Be fair."

Fairness is one of the courtesies that gets trumped when the forces of light battle the darkness of A rmando. Demand for fairness seems to mean that you've broken a weapon as a weapon, and you've been using in the war against anti-Vietnam. Wanting to be fair shows that you've got a conscience, and it's not an accident. Our world needs peacemakers. The desire for fairness shouldering a cross. "Bear ye one another's burdens." I have been inspired to continue to act and sound the bell of the counter-culture, denouncing the President, as though all the pacifists were lovebirds, and none of them were uniformed, if they wanted to be counted as children of God.

Judge not, that ye be not judged, for ye judge as one to sit in judgment for His mercy. Yet, even with the conviction that we are as foolish as God, we use the inter­language, "Abortion is murder," the powers read the end of us, as though this were the truth as Christian tell it, leaving you sick to your stomach with the unfairness of extremists.

"Hypocrisy" is another of the self-appointed words. Society is unfair to minorities; the world is not made to serve the tail, the fat, the left­handed and the smokers. Notre Dame is a monument to the injustice of the creation, which are passed down from parents to children in another. Like the effects of original sin. Judging from the criticism, we'd think the world had made the human condition. I hate the injustice which teaches that the city was a cross of the spoiled to brotherhood, human rights and faith-incorrectness for the fellow, and I hate the world.

Love has never meant that anything good would come of it. The Lord hasn't shown us what love means byshouldering a cross. "Bear ye one another's burden," we are urged.

Those times had their domestic heroes, who protested the war in the streets. Some of them were penalized by being sent to prison, where, reportedly, they got treated roughly. Other kids, going to the green hell, paid an ever higher price. Years later, Viet­nicks, standing at their Wailing Wall in Washington, with streaming down their cheeks, gave us their version of history. We were drafted to fight a war that the country hated, and watched our world get in the use of the war.

When we came home, college students spit on our faces and called us crooked.

Vietnam was undoubtably one of our most unjust wars. I did my share of protesting during Vietnam, sometimes standing around as though they had appointed the moral officer to the flower children. Then I began to notice the ROTC students in uniform coming daily to Mass: obviously it was their war, too. My mother wrote that Max, the kid next door who used to do her errands, died in the Vietnam war. He had been qualified as a baby- broadcaster, in fact. I thought he was defending his country.

"Men of Notre Dame, follow me." The great Irish Catholic tradition is that good-hearted men have all the right to be heard when their country is threatened and energy with it.

When we came home, college students spit on our faces and called us crooked.

Vietnam was a mess we shouldn't have gotten into. My job was to be all things to all students asking for the grace of Christ. I 'd have been inapporpriate to continue to act and sound the bell of the counter-culture, denouncing the President, as though all the pacifists were lovebirds, and none of them were uniformed, if they wanted to be counted as children of God.

"Men of Notre Dame, follow me." The great Irish Catholic tradition is that good-hearted men have all the right to be heard when their country is threatened and energy with it.

The Irish are very fair people," then I began to notice the ROTC students in uniform coming daily to Mass: obviously it was their war, too. My mother wrote that Max, the kid next door who used to do her errands, died in the Vietnam war. He had been qualified as a baby- broadcaster, in fact. I thought he was defending his country.

"You have to admit," the old lady yelled, "you're getting a little close to the truth than the cheap shots Hollywood can work on the conscience searches for. It wouldn't be untruthful to hope that all the best wars are over.

Giants make their marks on this campus. God bless the giants. May they remain at peace after the battles and trials of the day. I hope they know they have admirers who watch them from afar.

Editor's note: This is the 24th and final episode in The Observer's serial publication of The Notre Dame football story, "The Gipper's Ghost," by Notre Dame graduate Robert Quakenbush. In this episode we celebrate the Notre Dame victory over the first-ranked Trojans.

"Gentlemen, there are 30 minutes of football left on the field. The Irish have a standard, I' ll give you one. 23 points. Do you measure up?"

"No," said Kelly. Hurt Collins had taken a towel. Slowly, almost reverently, he had been rubbing his helmet. He had polished it until it gleamed. Almost reverently, he had been rubbing his helmet. He had polished it until it gleamed. He lowered his head and charged the two Trojan linemen who used to do her errands.

"It's time to go, George," he said, "Our team's done."

A joyous celebration surrounded Hart Collins. The band struck up "The Victory March." The Fighting Irish of Notre Dame thundered on the field.

Things were relatively simple for Pinkett in those days four years ago when he and his classmates first came to play for ex-head coach Gerry Faust. Faust, secure in his job, watched Pinkett burst on the scene with some dazzling rookie running and then get most of the media attention. This year, however, Pinkett often became the reluctant team spokesman for media probing into the reactions of the players to Faust's steadily deteriorating job security.

"It was strange because week after week it wasn't how well we had played, just what the situation with Coach Faust was," he said.

"We as players just tried to ignore it but I think some of the players may have been hurt by it all." Pinkett, however, took it all in stride and kept carrying the ball and Irish hopes. He finished his career as the Notre Dame leader in rushing attempts, rushing yards, rushing touchdowns, total touchdowns, total points, and in several other categories. In addition, his 17-yard burst against Army last Oct. 19, which pushed him over Vagas Ferguson as all-time rusher, provided a stirring memory for all fans who had viewed his successes for four years.

"The impact of the record really hasn't hit me yet," said Pinkett. "I owe it to the guys on the line of scrimmage who paved the way. It was just me trying to help Notre Dame win and I guess the records came to the event of that.

For Pinkett, who follows sophomore basketball player David Rivers as recipient of the Krause Award, still greater challenges appear on the horizon. This summer, he takes third-round draft choice of the Houston Oilers will attempt to gain a spot on the roster of the NFL club. It will be just another obstacle to run around, and Pinkett, so doubt, will do it with class and style.

"I'll miss this place but I'm looking forward to moving on and facing up to the one heck of a challenge that awaits me," he said. "One thing I'll always have with me, though, is the pleasant memories of this place. And I just hope I can continue to represent the Notre Dame community well."

over each of the last ten years. He also coached four present Notre Dame fencers, including Janice Hynes, Charles Hicks, Don Johnson and Tom Vaughn." Sullivan, ranked in the top 10 senior fencers in the nation, will compete in National this June. He will continue to compete on the Olympic point system in order to qualify for the University Games and the Pan-Am Games next year, and ultimately for the '88 Olympic team.

Under the point system, five major events are scored each year, and the lowest finish is dropped. Points are accumulated over a fencer's career.

"Aside from being named an alternate to the '85 Junior World Olympian team last spring, Sullivan has competed in the '84 Junior World, '85 World Championships and the Pan-Am Games next year, and ultimately for the '88 Olympic team.

Under the point system, five major events are scored each year, and the lowest finish is dropped. Points are accumulated over a fencer's career.

"A lot of girls on the team were disappointed because they couldn't pick up points against Penn in the NCAA meet," said Sullivan.

"But we have come a long way. We are not losing anyone next year, and we will definitely win the team title."

Sullivan is reserved about her success this season. "I am surprised about all this, and I really don't know what to think of it. My victories have always been a personal thing."

Last year's recipient of the Krause Award was senior basketball player Trena Keys, Notre Dame's all-time scoring leader.

and Shields. They kept constant pressure on the goal and made the most of their opportunities.

The win raised Notre Dame's overall record to 9-3, and an unblemished 5-0 Great Lakes Conference record. Ohio State fell to 6-7, 3-1 in the conference.

The Irish had established in their last time at bat. A bright spot for the Irish was Tom Shields who went 3-for-3. Following the game, Gallo wondered whether or not the team enjoyed winning.

"Sometimes I wonder if the team enjoys prosperity," said Gallo. "We could have easily won our last three games. It has been frustrating all year long. The situations and opportunities were there for us to win, but we didn't. We never capitalized. Since our Bowling Green win, we should have won 9-0 in our last nine games. It is frustrating not to win the games we knew we should have."

Yesterday, the Irish decided that the frustration of the week's games had been enough. On Jake Kline Field, the Irish easily beat Valparaiso, 6-1. Craig Passilla pitched a complete game. Over nine innings, Passilla allowed one run on four hits, struck out three and walked none. Ken Soos and Tom Shields led the team in hitting. Soos went 2-for-3 with one RBI and Shields went 1-for-3 with two runs batted in. The Irish also played solid defense committing only two errors during the game.

With this win, the Irish will bring a 21-23 record into this weekend's four-game series with Northwestern. Gallo believes that injuries have prevented the team from a better overall record.

"I wonder how well this team would have done if we did not have so many injuries," he said. "Conservatively speaking, I think that we could have achieved between 28-18 and 33-13. We have never had our predicted season lineup in a game once this year. We have always had to fill empty spots because of injuries to key players."

The weekend series with Northwestern will be a tough one for the Irish. Northwestern has 13 scholarship players on their squad to provide depth and balance. Last year, the Irish lost all four contests to the Northwestern team. On Saturday, the Irish travel to Northwestern for a doubleheader which starts at 1:00 p.m. CDT. On Saturday, the Irish will play their doubleheader against Northwestern on Jake Kline Field at 1:00 p.m.

For O'Brien, it's time to move to a different court

By TRISH SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

From the tennis courts to a court of law, Notre Dame senior Izzy O'Brien will attempt to dominate the justice system much the same way she has dominated opponents during her short stint with the Irish women's tennis team.

O'Brien transferred to Notre Dame at the beginning of her sophomore year, forgoing a season of eligibility. But her first year with the squad she compiled a 27-6 record at the sixth singles spot and this season stands at 11-7 in singles and 16-3 in doubles with a partner Mary Colligan, as she heads to law school after graduation.

"Izzy has definitely improved since the fall and her doubles play has been outstanding this season," comments head coach Michele Gelfman. "I am very happy to have had the experience to coach her and get to know her as an individual. She will be very missed and very difficult to replace."

O'Brien began her athletic career as a swimmer, competing for eight years before trying her hand at tennis. She began later than most, at the age of 14, but that didn't seem to hinder the Augusta, Mich., native any. She lettered all four years at Gull Lake High School and was Wolverine Conference champion in her sophomore, junior and senior years. O'Brien became disillusioned because there was always someone older and bigger he can kill me."

"I stopped swimming because there wasn't a swim team in our high school and I was getting a little tired of it," recalls the Walsh Hall resident. "So my brother and I started taking private (tennis) lessons and that's how it all started. It was great having him around because there was always someone to hit around with. At first I would beat him, but now that he's gotten older and bigger he can kill me."

O'Brien became disillusioned with Michigan during her first year and began searching for another college. After looking into the tennis program and visiting the campus, she knew Notre Dame as the place to come. The program was on its way up and the academics were unbeatable.

"I have no regrets about transferring," adds O'Brien. "I've enjoyed my experience here tremendously. And I've gotten the chance to see the team grow in many ways, least of which is the move to Division I this season. I think we've done a good job with the switch, and although we won't have any postseason to look forward to, I would do it all over again."

First year coach Gelfman is certainly glad O'Brien was a part of the team when she came. The coach uses words such as "Quiet, methodical, intense, mature and coachable," in describing her senior leader. Gelfman and the team had the last practice of O'Brien's career yesterday as the Irish head into a weekend of season-ending action.

The team will travel to Northern Illinois to take on Northern and Bowling Green. The squad should come out on top if everyone maintains their game.

"I want to win both," says Gelfman. "But I want to come off knowing that we played the best tennis we can possibly play to the end the season. I want to have outstanding performance all the way down the line."

"The odds are in our favor," echoes O'Brien. "We definitely should beat them both this weekend. Everyone's game is doing well and since this is the last stand for us seniors, we want to to out on a winning note."

Pinkett, Sullivan named top athletes for 1985-86

ND’s No. 1 rusher maintained poise

By MARTY BURNS Assistant Sports Editor

For Notre Dame tailback Allen Pinkett, 1985-86 was a year that presented bigger challenges than just carrying a football past 11 hurrying bodies 30 times a game. With the all-time school rushing record within his reach, frustrated Irish fans on his mind, and a relentless media grilling him about his head coach, there was more than enough pressure on the 5-9, 181-pound dynamo from Sterling, Va. But always the gentleman, Pinkett maintained poise and showed greatness both off the field as well as on it.

Because of these contributions to the 1985 Notre Dame football team, Pinkett has been named the winner of this year’s Edmund A. “Moose” Krause Award with his team going 5-6."

The up-summer season slate of ’85 was one of the few disappointments for Pinkett in a year which saw him rush for 1,100 yards and 11 touchdowns in 255 carries. In addition, the year brought him a total of 4,131 rushing yards - the largest number ever accumulated by a Notre Dame player.

Still, the repeated and bitter disappointment of more losses than he or the fans were willing to accept always took precedence in post-game press conferences over whatever personal feat he had accomplished. And though a 24-21-1 career record may not have been how he had wanted to finish it all, he made it clear on every handoff that he was willing desperately to wake the echoes once more.

I am very honored and I have to say I didn’t expect it," said Pinkett. "I guess this just goes to show that anything can happen at Notre Dame. If Paul Hornung can win the Heisman Trophy with Notre Dame going 2-9, then I guess Allen Pinkett can win a ‘Moose’ Krause Award with his team going 5-6."

Soph won NCAA, Great Lakes titles

By MIKESZYMANSKI Assistant Sports Editor

Because she has reached the pinnacle of collegiate honors, the NCAA individual title, sophomore fencer Molly Sullivan has been presented the Edward W. “Moose” Krause Award, which is given to the Female Athlete of the Year as determined by The Observer sports staff.

Sullivan flashed her way to an impressive season, culminating in her defeat of defending NCAA individual champion Caitlin Bilodeaux in the finals at Princeton. In her victory, she led Notre Dame to second place in the NCAA championships, the best finish in women’s fencing history.

Rarely does an athlete dominate a collegiate sport so early in a Dane’s life as has Sullivan. Posting a career record of 114-7 (.938), she went 71-3 (.957) over the course of her second season, which includes garnering the Great Lakes individual title for the second straight year.

The North Andover, Mass. native is no stranger to high-level competition. In 1984, she won both junior and senior gold medals at nationals this past summer, and was fifth place finisher at the NCAA tournament this past season.

Her dual with Bilodeaux stretches back to her years before college. “I have fended her on the Olympic circuits for years," said Sullivan. “We trade off deficiencies. I come from the same area of the country, and I followed her to both the junior and senior nationals this past summer.

Lacrosse team came back to beat Ohio St.

By PETE-SKIKO Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's lacrosse team once again exhibited its flair for the dramatic by pulling out a tense 13-9 victory over Ohio State on Wednesday at Carter Field.

Tomorrow, Michigan State rolls in for a 3:00 p.m. battle at Carter Field. Ohio State took early control Wednesday, jumping out to a quick three-goal lead in the first quarter. The Irish quickly erased that, however, and began to set the offensive pace. Notre Dame could not pull away from the stubborn Buckeyes, never enjoying more than a two-goal advantage until late in the fourth quarter.

The game's critical point came after Ohio State scored to tie the game at nine with just under eight minutes to go. Then, at the six- and-a-half minute mark of the final frame, senior co-captain Tom Grote beat Buckeye goalie Pat Leavy for what was eventually the game winning goal. Grote's tally sparked three more Irish scores which provided the final margin of victory.

Head Coach Rich O’Leary was more than happy with his team's effort and expressed confidence heading into the season finale at home against Michigan State.

“I thought our team played with a lot of character and poise,” said the sixth-year head coach. “We got behind at first, fought back and really took control of things in the fourth. Offensively, we played pretty well and our defense took everything they could shoot at us.”

The Irish are the only unbeaten (7-0) team in the country and are ranked third in the nation. Sophomore goalie Matt McQuillan recorded 16 saves in the game. O’Leary was satisfied with both team and individual efforts.

“Everyone played really well,” he added. “I was especially pleased with Grote. Franklin, see LACROSSE, page 11

Irish frustration ends with 6-1 win vs. Valpo

MICHAE KEEGAN Sports Writer

Except for yesterday’s home win against Valparaiso, this has been a very frustrating week for the Notre Dame baseball team. Since Monday, the Irish have dropped three games - a doubleheader to Western Michigan and an extra inning contest to Purdue.

Irish head coach Larry Gallo says the team’s performance has been inconsistent all week.

“It feels as though the team has been on a rollercoaster ride as of late,” said Gallo. “The situations were there for us to win, but we didn’t. We never capitalized on our opportunities, and as a result, we lost three of the four contests played this week.”

On Monday, the Irish lost a home game to Purdue. After the first inning, the Irish trailed, 1-0.

However, in the bottom of the fourth inning, the Irish grabbed the lead by scoring four runs. Pat Pesavento got the inning going with a one-out double. Tom Shields followed with a walk, and then John Laughran singled to drive in both runners. Two more runs crossed the plate and the Irish had a 4-1 lead. The lead was quickly erased as Purdue scored three runs in the top of the sixth to tie the game.

In the eighth inning, Chris Flynn hit a home run that put the Irish up by a run going into the top of the ninth.

Then the frustrations began for the Irish. After a one-out single, a wild pitch moved the Purdue runner to second. Following a fielding error, the runner to third. On the next pitch, the Purdue runner scored the Purdue runner from third to tie the game. After this, the Irish failed to score in the top of the ninth. see BASEBALL, page 13
