Aquino visits her alma mater and receives school's highest award

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Philippine President Corazon Aquino returned yesterday to her alma mater after visiting the suburban Boston house she shared with her husband before he returned to the Philippines and was assassinated.

Mrs. Aquino was taken to the College of Mount St. Vincent, from which she had graduated in 1953, and was awarded the school's highest honor, the Elizabeth Seton Medal.

She and her former classmates met for about 20 minutes, posing for a class photo and discussing children, careers and school memories, including Aquino's periods of exile in the early 1980s.

Aquino said that when her husband, Benigno "Nino" Aquino was killed in 1983 by President Ferdinand Marcos, she recalled what she had been told when she visited her former home, now a museum to her husband. "We'll have her back," she vowed.

"Here is a little bit emotional for her" to visit the house, said board member Cervino Babic. "It was nice to have her back."

At St. Ignatius, Cardinal Bernard Law noted parallels between the Philippine and Polish struggles for freedom and presented Mrs. Aquino with a replica of the painting of Our Lady of Chetochowa, Poland's black madonna.

Earlier in her U.S. tour, Mrs. Aquino had her first meeting with President Reagan, after which senior aids signed an agreement that will make available to her country an additional $150 million in economic and military assistance.

She also addressed a joint meeting of Congress. The House immediately voted to give the Philippine's $200 million in aid; the Senate has yet to vote.

Against the advice of doctors, University President Father Theodore Hesburgh was released from a Connecticut hospital yesterday after spending the night under observation because of a fainting spell.

Hesburgh, 69, lost consciousness for about five seconds while standing outside his hotel at about 7 p.m. Saturday, said Richard Conklin, assistant vice president of University relations.

Hesburgh was taken by ambulance to the emergency room of Yale-New Haven hospital and evaluated there, Conklin said. He was later admitted to the coronary care unit for observation.

Tests revealed Hesburgh's "vital signs were stable and his electrocardiogram normal," said hospital spokesman Tom Urtz.

Urtz said some of Hesburgh's doctors advised him not to leave yesterday morning.

"Certainly we wanted to take a conservative approach with Father Hesburgh, and some (doctors) suggested another two days," said Urtz. "But he felt well enough to return to work today.""...the Senate has yet to vote.

Although alcohol is consumed by students on campuses across the nation, BACCHUS, a new club at Notre Dame, would like to do something about it.

BACCHUS has more than 200 chapters at universities nationwide and seeks to promote responsible attitudes toward drinking.

Our major message is to get the negative attitude associated with alcohol out of Notre Dame, said John Sheehy, president of the club at Notre Dame.

"We're not saying don't drink, but learn what alcohol is about and drink responsibly," Sheehy said.

BACCHUS also seeks to promote awareness of the effects of alcohol on the body, according to Sheehy.

"One thing that must be noted is that BACCHUS is very pro-drinking," said Vince Willis, vice president of the Notre Dame chapter.

"Drinking can be a very positive thing, why turn it into a negative one?" Willis said.

Interest in bringing BACCHUS to Notre Dame began last fall after club members Laurie Bisk, Sheehy, Willis and Assistant Director of Student Activities Cell Paulsen at Notre Dame began spreading the word.

"We'll have that support for BACCHUS is coming out of the student body. Willis expressed hope that the University would see BACCHUS, page 4

To some it's "cornfusing." To others it's "cornfounding." But to three homeowners in Evans, Colorado, it's just a nuisance. For the past four years, they say, corn kernels have sporadically fallen out of the sky onto their roofs and back yards. "I'd probably have to knock it all up," said homeowner Gary Bryan. Kobel and Bryan say all the obvious explanations don't seem to fit.

There are no corn fields near their houses, and the closest grain elevator is about five miles away. There are no trees or overhead wires for squirrels to drop corn from, and frequently no birds or planes are visible when the corn starts to fall.

An Arkansas printing company made quite a hit with Allan Hancock College's box office crew when it sent the school 64,000 World Series tickets instead of theater tickets. When Marcy Refero, assistant box office manager for the college's Pacific Conservatory of Performing Arts, opened the cases of tickets Friday, her first thought was, "We're going to New York." The tickets had been printed for the New York Mets. Weldon, Williams and Links Inc. of Fort Smith, Ark., sent the college some of the tickets it ordered for upcoming plays. In place of the rest were four cases of tickets containing about 16,000 field and box seat tickets worth $40 apiece. When college president Gary Edelbrock calculated the value of the tickets—about $2.5 million—he said, "I think this is better than the state lottery." Associated Press

Israel to back allies with gunships

Rabin told reporters the Israeli assistance was meant "to absolutely break these attacks by inflicting large casualties" on Shiite Muslim guerrillas. A senior military officer, demanding anonymity, said Israel would deploy troops to reinforce the South Lebanon Army militia on a case-by-case basis, but did not intend to send in a big force.

The latest rocket attack Saturday wounded three Israeli soldiers, the Israeli military command said. The attack occurred in the Israeli-occupied buffer zone of southern Lebanon, which stretches six to 10 miles deep along the border and is meant to prevent guerrillas from attacking Israel itself.

Two soldiers suffered slight injuries, and the third was hospitalized with moderate stomach wounds, the command said. The attack came one day after five French soldiers with the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon were wounded by a rocket fired at their barracks in south Lebanon.

Rabin briefed the Cabinet on the stepped-up assaults against Israeli troops, their Lebanese allies and UNIFIL in southern Lebanon.

Speaking to reporters afterward, he warned that "if there will be no tranquillity on our side, there will be no tranquillity on their side."

Rabin blamed Iranian-backed Hezbollah extremists and the Shiite Amal militia for attacks which killed four French peacekeepers and at least 12 militia members of the Israeli-financed South Lebanon Army in the past six weeks.

Peace Corps looks for Notre Dame students

By DAVID T. LEE

While some students after graduation will be busy spending their first paychecks, others may be spending a couple years in Africa, living in a modest hut, and teaching the basics of good farming to people who speak Swahili and practice polygamy.

Peace Corps representative Dan Smolka said he can give seniors that chance if they enter the Peace Corps after graduation.

Smolka said that now is the best time to sign up for the Peace Corps. Signing up "should not be a spur-of-the-moment decision," he said.

Peace Corps volunteers must have a college degree, six months experience in a skilled trade, such as carpentry, and some type of social service in their background," he said.

Smolka said any college degree is sufficient, although those in engineering and the sciences are preferred. He said liberal arts graduates, called "generalists," make up 40 percent of the Peace Corps.

He said Peace Corps workers are given free medical benefits, free transportation, and a monthly allowance while working in a country. Upon returning to the U.S., the worker receives $4200 in "readjustment allowance," he said.

After enlisting and completing the three-month training program, volunteers work for two years, although a person is always free to leave if dissatisfied, said Smolka.

The Peace Corps is looking for unique people, said Smolka.

"If he does not have the social and cultural sensitivity, he is not going to be a good Peace Corps representative," he said.

Smolka said Peace Corps workers will be given positions of leadership they might not find in the United States.

WASHINGTON - Secretary of State George Shultz continued yesterday to signal the Reagan administration's determination to press for a superpower summit "most unlikely" until the case is resolved.

Meanwhile, members of Congress supported the Reagan administration's position that Daniloff should not be freed.

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennadiy Gerasimov, appearing Sunday on CNN's "Face the Nation," said resolution of the Daniloff case is "not a very big problem at all."

"Mr. Daniloff is under investigation, he is charged and usually he's going to be put to trial, but because we don't want this particular case to be an obstacle in our relations, we can find some kind of solution and let him free," he said.

Gerasimov said, "There are several ideas in air" to resolve the Daniloff case. "They were discussed and they can continue to be discussed," but he declined to disclose specifics of the ideas.

Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., objected to any plan to release Daniloff in exchange for accused Soviet spy Genady Zakharov, even to effect an arms summit.

East, West countries agree on peace pact

Associated Press

STOCKHOLM, Sweden - Delegates to the 35-nation East-West security conference agreed Sunday on a package of information-sharing measures designed to reduce the risk that war could break out in Europe by accident.

It is the first East-West security accord since the SALT I pact in 1979.

A formal vote on the agreement was scheduled for late Sunday but was put off until Monday so the document could be printed. It then must be ratified by the 35 governments, and is scheduled to take effect Jan. 1.

Both U.S. and Soviet delegates praised the accord as contributing to a more stable military situation in Europe and improving East-West relations in general.

Soviet chief delegate Oleg Grinevsky described it as a "new foundation for the peace process in Europe." U.S. delegation chief Robert Barry said the agreement "shows East and West can say yes to each other for a change."

However, a ranking U.S. delegate, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Soviet-required restrictions on verification through on-site inspection made the agreement inadequate.

The agreement stipulates that any nation conducting military maneuvers involving 17,000 soldiers or more must invite observers from other participants in the Stockholm conference.

When maneuvers involve amphibious landings or paratroops, nations must notify the other side if just 3,000 or more are involved, and invite observers if 5,000 troops or more are taking part.

The Stockholm Conference on Security and Confidence-Building Measures and Disarmament in Europe began in January 1984, with delegations from the United States, Canada, the Soviet Union and all European nations except Albania.

Spartan fullback

Morse follows father's footsteps

By ERIC SCHUEERMANN

Sports Writer

Michigan State senior fullback Bobby Morse, a man with quite a few ties to Niles, didn't do anything fancy Saturday. But when it was all over, his contribution to the Spartans' 20-15 defeat of the Irish was evident.

There were the main blocking back for Spartan Heisman Trophy candidate Lorenzo White. On Saturday, it was Morse block that sprung White for a 4-yard gain on his way to a 1-yard touchdown.

Much has been made of the fact that Morse's father, Jim, started the right halfback for Notre Dame from 1934-36, blocking some Paul Hornung when the latter won the Heisman in 1956. Morse's older brother Jim also played for the Irish as a reserve defensive back from 1976-77.

"It's ironic that both my father and I may have been in the same backfield when Heisman winner Jim spoke," Morse said. "But my dad was a running back and Hornung was a quarterback. My dad ran the ball and called the ball for Hornung more than he blocked for him. I mainly block for Lorenzo. Our roles are different, but I'd like to do something to talk about.

Morse carried the ball twice Saturday for five yards, caught one pass for five yards, and returned two punts for 18 yards. But most of his duties this season will revolve around providing protection for White.

"No, I don't feel overshadowed," says Morse. "I'm not here for publicity, I go out there for personal satisfaction. Lorenzo needs the ball to win scholarships, the team needs a great kid, and I want to help him win. I think I'd be disappointed if my dad didn't like what I did for his fault.

With Morse's Notre Dame ties, one might think he would have ended up with the Irish four years ago. But such was not the case. Morse attended the University of Notre Dame.

"I wasn't highly recruited," says Morse. "I came out of Muskegon Catholic on the western side of Michigan and there's not much publicity there. Michigan, Notre Dame and Michigan State wanted me, but I didn't speak to them. I heard about (MSU head coach) Dino Babers, but I didn't talk to him except to thank him for making an offer. I never even met Michigan State coach Bo Schembechler. But if the deal with Ann Arbor comes through, there's a possibility I may be on the road a lot.

So Michigan State gained a hard-earned win to take over the lead in the Big Ten, and Morse was grateful for the victory over his old backdrop, the Notre Dame locker room was after the loss, there was still confidence that things are going to come together one of these days. If one.

Of course, there are no guarantees. But there's still time to go back, get things straightened out, and get Notre Dame back on top.

As for now, it's any consolation, any hope of a full-time student-athlete and a 19-yard quick kick, and you've got pretty good formula for a guaranteed loss.

But how does a team find a way to go down that 12-7 deficit? Well, to begin with, the Notre Dame locker room was after the loss, there was still confidence that things are going to come together one of these days. If one.

Spartans pull out 20-15 win over sloppy Irish

Late ND rally denied at goal

By MARTY STRASEN
Assistant Sports Editor

EAST LANSING, Mich. - One of three days the Notre Dame football team is going to give its fans the "Cardiac Kids" instead of a cardiac arrest.

For the second straight week the Irish outgained an opponent offensively and outplayed an opponent defensively only to see a last-minute attempt at a comeback victory fall by the wayside. This time it was an inspired Michigan State team playing the culprits, as the Spartans pulled out a narrow 20-15 victory in front of 79,895 fans Saturday at Spartan Stadium.

And for the second straight week, inappropriate mistakes, silly penalties, bad kicks and bad breaks made the difference. Because of these factors, new Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz finds himself winless in two attempts. Holtz' current team joins Hugh Devore's '63 squad and Dan Devine's '78 team as the only Irish teams of this century to lose their first two games.

"I thought we had a chance right up to the end," said Holtz in a low voice. "I am disappointed, certainly, but we know it wouldn't be easy. Our football team played hard but see SPARTANS, page 5.

Going by the statistics, the Notre Dame soccer team had two blowouts in this weekend's action. But going by the scoreboard, the Irish could only manage to win one of the two contests.

Despite controlling play, the team dropped a 1-0 decision to Michigan State on Friday. The team responded, however, with a 7-0 thrashing of Tri-State yesterday.

In the Michigan State contest, the Irish kept playing the Spartans' end the entire game. The Irish totalled 13 shots compared to three by the Spartans, and 17 corner kicks to one by Michigan State. The normal number of corner kicks in a game usually near seven for a team, so the Irish offense played well above par.

Despite the number of shots, three of which went off the posts, the Irish could not get it past Michigan State's keeper.

"We dominated Michigan State, the sixth-ranked team in the Midwest, and I'm proud of the boys," said Coach Dennis Grace. "Everyone played very well and the substitutes we put in played as well as the starters."

The Irish played as a team throughout, with the defense consistently backing up the offense and feeding them from the half line. Senior Pat Santus did an excellent job at sweeper and was complemented by freshman Pat McClaughan who held his own at the stopper position.

Michigan State's goal came early in the first half. It was bought down the wing and centered at the top of the penalty box. From there it was chipped into the upper left corner, slipping past keeper Hugh Breslin.

After that goal, the rest of the game was all Notre Dame. The Irish controlled the ball and kept all the pressure on the Spartan defense in an attempt to tie the score.

"The man was open in the middle and wasn't challenged. He put it in the right place," said sophomore stopper John Guignon. "We dominate them and know we should have won. Even though we didn't, we're pleased with what we did and so was Coach Grace."

Grace, well known for the little praise he gives his team, was uncharacteristically free with the kudos for the way the team played.

"I was very happy with the way they played," he said. "They played as a team and worked well together. They played their best and if we continue to play like we did Friday, we'll win. (We) have character and we'll be back."

Against Tri-State on Sunday, Notre Dame sent the almost-unheard-of total of 41 shots at the Spartan goal. But even with a 3-0 halftime lead, Grace was not happy with his team's sloppy play.

"We didn't execute very well," stated Grace. "We sent the ball over the post with some moon shots, and we overpassed in front of their goal."

Kevin Kade put the Irish up immediately with a goal at the 11:18 mark, and then proceeded to assist on the second goal, a Joe Sternberg shot at the 9:23 mark.

McCourt increased his team-leading point total to 22 with a goal two minutes before the half.

Sternberg notched a second goal, and then freshman Keifer Burks scored to give Notre Dame a 5-0 lead.

Pat Murphy and Shawn Magig both scored the first goals of their careers as the Irish continued to pour it on in the second half.
