A Student Senate proposal calling for divestment of the University's holdings in South Africa was one of the topics discussed at Tuesday night's Hall Presidents' Council meeting. Student Senator John Gardiner reported on the Senate's vote on a resolution to impose a deadline for University divestment. Gardiner said: "I think that Notre Dame's involvement, Gardiner said. "I think that Notre Dame's investment in South Africa is about 9 percent of the endowment, about $32 million dollars."

Gardiner said the movie "Witness to Apparition" will be shown at the CSC Wednesday at 7:30 P.M. and a candlelight vigil will be held Thursday night at 7:30 at the War Memorial. Also, there will be a rallyvigil on Friday at 12:15 P.M. at the CCE (where the Board of Trustees will meet).

Dan Van Haitsma of the Academic Commission of Student Government addressed the council regarding the Faculty Course Evaluation, a comput- erized system of course instructor ratings.

SMC Programming Board responds to surveys

Responses on the success of student government awareness surveys given to students Tues- day night in Saint Mary's dining hall were presented at Saint Mary's Programming Board meeting Tuesday night. "The questions were good, but dinner time's not a good time to do it," said Vice President of McCandless Lisa Montpetit.

"People usually object to surveys because it's an inva- sion of privacy," said Cardinal Commissioner Mary Carol Cahill. Throughout the sur- vey, which was given orally, should have been presented beforehand by R.A.'s or through campus mail.

"Freshmen had no clue," said Athletic Commissioner Kim Drabota. "They didn't know positions, offices, anyth- ing."

Erotic messages from a woman were heard on the Greater Madison Convention and Visitor's Bureau entertainment agency's Madison-Wisconsin police say. Bureau employees set a tape-recorded message to play after 5 p.m. Friday, but found the erotic message Monday morning. The subpoena said someone may have discovered a code that allows bureau employees to call and update the message and substitute a recording from a dial-a-porn service.-Associated Press

The Lodi School Board has indefinitely postponed a decision to remove the symbol. Students have said they like the symbol and want to keep it. The Notre Dame Board of the Lodi Presbyterian Church proposed several months ago that the symbol be removed, but that the school keep the name for its athletic teams.-Associated Press

Police officers, arriving with billy clubs in hand, walked toward the students. The crowd then moved back to LeMans where they were met by police officers and their dogs. The Officer reported.

Held on a short leash, the dogs were walked in the general direction of the students, who were eventually herded back to U.S. 31.

Fish, speaking at the senate meeting, described the dogs as "150 to 200-pound monsters trained to mutilate whatever came within their reach, pulling along a 160 pound cop."

Police dogs to stop the panty raids?
And you thought we have it bad

"Senate Censures Use Of K & P Police To Stop Panty Raids," the headline read. No waaaaayyyyy, I said.

But there it was, right on the front page of The Observer's April 20, 1986 issue: South Bend and St. Joseph County police had used dogs and tear gas to break up the annual panty raid.

According to the article, the Notre Dame Student Senate reacted by passing a resolution condemning the use of K & P dogs and tear-gas bombs as weapons against a harmless demonstration.

During the meeting, Student Body President Jim Fish said about 1,500 students participated in the panty raid on the Saint Mary's campus.

Fish said he had gone to the police right after the disturbance ended.

"I was standing talking to one of the policemen when one of those mongrels lunged at me," Fish was quoted as saying. "I never saw such a big grin and bright eyes as I did on that mug. I ran for the nearest tree."

Because of their capture and subsequent identification during the panty raid, eight students received punishments ranging from indefinite probation to expulsion from their dorms, the article said.

One student said he was apprehended while returning to Notre Dame. "A cop came up and said to get into the car. I wasn't too willing to get in," he said. "I started to run, but I stopped when he said, 'Stop or I'll shoot.'"

The disciplinary action came as the result of the first of two panty raids on Saint Mary's that week. The first raid began after a shouting match between residents of Cavanaugh and Bren-Hill's halls. Firecrackers, cherry bombs and shouting attracted the attention of other halls' residents, the article said.

Shouting "We want panties" and "Go Irish," the crowd moved from the quad to U.S. 31. There a sheriff's car had the crossroads blocked, The Observer reported. The students moved around the car and across the road to the threats of the police.

Speaking on a public address system, one deputy told the students. "All right now, you guys, we'll give you one more chance to come back to your own side of the road before we set the dogs loose. That road was met with jeers and dutes, the article said.

The police managed to move the crowd from the front of Le Mans Hall. The students, however, then moved to the front lawn of McCandless, where they "were greeted by a shower of panties, bras, and Sunday pieces of female undergarments floating down." The Observer reported.

Falwell to give lecture at ND

By CHRIS SKORCZ
Staff Reporter

Dr. Jerry Falwell, outspoken leader of the Moral Majority, will speak Thursday night at 7 in Washington Hall. The title of his lecture, sponsored by the Student Activities Board, is "The Evangelical Vote: Is it Monolithic?"

According to Steve Georgi of the SAB, Falwell will most likely use this lecture as an opportunity to discuss the issue of religious leaders, such as himself or televangelist Pat Robertson, running for public office. Falwell will discuss the likelihood that such a religious leader can persuade those sharing his faith to vote for him and effect a strong church-state relationship, Georgi said.

Falwell comes to Notre Dame free of charge. Georgi said that the SAB extended approximately thirty invitations last spring to prominent individuals asking them to speak at Notre Dame as part of the SAB's Distinguished Lecturer Series.

Getting to know the students and helping them organize their goals is the first step toward solving the problems faced by many minority students at Notre Dame, according to Kenneth Durgans, the new minority affairs director.

Durgans replaced Edward Blackwell, who left Notre Dame last summer to take an advanced position at Colby College in Maine, according to Sr. Jean Lenz, assistant vice president of student affairs.

As director of minority affairs, Durgans has several responsibilities.

"I will be involved in the advising and recruitment of minority students, both undergraduate and graduate," said Durgans. "The bottom line is to help the various minority groups to fit in with the Notre Dame community and have financial equations," he said. "In other words, the risk is limited" with the financial experience he brings to the computer.

If a student wished to become an investor in the group, Siewert said he or she could take one of two courses. "If a student has a particular idea as to an investment opportunity, he/she would have to present the idea to the group," he said. Depending on how convincing the student's presentation is, "the student's idea could be accepted or rejected by a vote of the board members," said Siewert.

the group has applied for a tax number from the I.R.S., "as it will want information on individuals in the group and in the future a list of names and the home addresses of investors."

"The group is research intensive," Siewert said; "with an automation of portfolio." This means that there are computer programs which, for example, "determine undervalued stocks in industry according to their needs recognized." Durgans said he is still being familiar with the situation at Notre Dame, but he believes it is reflective of the situation of minorities in society at large.

"Isolation is the biggest problem minorities face," said Durgans. "It is difficult for many minority students to maintain their cultural uniqueness and at the same time fit in with everyone else."

Durgans attributes such isolationism to the failure of minorities to be acknowledged and to have their needs recognized. He said his first goal is to help minority students understand and organize their goals in order to achieve recognition. By getting to know the students on an organizational level, Durgans said he hopes to help them deal with each other as well as the rest of the Notre Dame community.

"I'm not setting any goals for the students, I'm just helping them organize the goals they already have," said Durgans. As a result, Durgans said he hopes to see minority groups also doing more activities with each other as an effort to preserve their cultural uniqueness.

Durgans graduated from Baldwin-Wallace College in Berea, Ohio in 1977 with a degree in political science and history. In 1981 he earned a master's degree from Kent State University, and in July of this year he received a master's degree in school counseling from the University of Dayton.

Prior to his arrival at Notre Dame, Durgans served at Westminster University and is a member of the American College Personnel Association, the American Association of College Admission Counselors, and the Mid-American Association of Educational Opportunity Program Personnel.

A student could also go to the group with money and ask for the group to invest it, he said. Then by careful consideration, the group would decide where the best sources of investment would be, "but the management fees would be greater," he added.

The investment board consists of seven members: sophomore Sam Siewert, managing partner; freshman Jeff Heilert, operating manager who calls the broker directly; and sophomore Pat Zelton and freshman Nick Rossi, marketing managers who handle all advertising and promoting.
Charity Ball for Ethiopia planned

LISA DAVISON

To promote social and political awareness throughout the country, and specifically at Notre Dame, a Third Annual Notre Dame-Saint Mary’s Charity Ball For Ethiopia is planned, according to Dan Harrison, chairman of the ball.

The first organizational meeting for the third annual ball in May is scheduled for Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the International Student Organization lounge in La Fortune, Harrison said.

"The meeting is open to anyone who wants to get involved in committees," said Harrison.

Harrison said the committees are selected according to the person’s individual interests. "After Wednesday’s meeting, we’ll choose chairpeople from each committee and they will be my working committee," he said.

Discussing the upcoming ball, Harrison said, "This year I want to have as great a success as the past two years have been."

According to Harrison, the first ball grossed $7,000 and the second ball netted $10,000. "The money goes to the Catholic Relief Fund and they distribute it to the Ethiopia Fund. It goes to direct relief of the starving," Harrison said.

"I believe you have to help people that do need help," Harrison said. "At Notre Dame, we are growing, morally mature human beings and should be more aware of what we could do for other people."

"The first year of the ball, it was estimated that 75 to 100 people were dying every hour," Harrison said. "To me, it was just unfathomable that people were dying like that."

"What we try to achieve is facilities to students for the best."

In other business, Cahill said anyone interested in Aerobics for United Way, a fundraiser to benefit the United Way, can sign up in the Dining Halls during lunch on Wednesday and Sunday at dinner. According to Cahill, the events will take place Nov. 22 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the ACC. She said Aerobics for United Way will consist of three two-hour shifts and feature prizes.

Panzeralla Hall West Court President Colleen Kreutz, Theodore’s HPC representative, said the club offers chips and pop every night.

Kreutz said Theodore’s is featuring a DJ this Wednesday and Thursday from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m.

A description of the divestment resolution in the Student Senate meeting story in Monday’s Observer was incorrect. The resolution said “the University should set a specific deadline for corporations engaged in business activities in South Africa to divest unless the Government of South Africa makes significant progress toward dismantling its system of apartheid and takes genuine measures toward negotiating with black leaders."

If neither the corporations divest nor the government makes significant progress toward dismantling apartheid by the established deadline, the University ought to completely divest from these corporations.”

"The issue of women's role in the Catholic Church of the 1980's is a controversary that will not fade away," writes 1969 Saint Mary's College graduate Joyce Kenny Cassetti.

Gertie Wimmer private I

Women are now inspecting their positions. "It is not the Church that is describing us, but we are starting to find our way," Wimmer says. She has been a nun for 45 of her 62 years, she has never before thought to find fault with the teachings of the Church. "I have been involved with an advertisements that went out in the New York Times in October 1984. Along with 24 other nuns, she has been under Papal investigation since signing the ad. She added under the title "A Diversity of Opinions Regarding Abortion Exists Among Human Catholics." Sponsored by a small Washington-based group called "Catholics for Free Choice, " the advertisement argued that there was more than one "legitimate Catholic position" on the issue of abortion and used as evidence the signature of 97 prominent Catholic women. Wimmer claims that the ad was forgeries. O'Connor directly challenged the Church's constant teachings about the immorality of abortion. "This, however, didn't alter the decision of any of the sister. They held fast to their beliefs."

Traxler claims that the ad was formulated as "a partial response to the highly-publicized anti-abortion statements of Archbishop John O'Connor as the chairman of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops for a Constitutional Amendment, proposed by Republican Senator Orrin Hatch of Utah, which would have allowed state legislatures to restrict or even ban abortions. Along with the National Coalition of American Nuns, which Traxler helped organize in 1969 and which is the first and only organization of feminist sisters in the United States, Traxler condemned the Bishop's support statement. Issuing her own opinion on the Phil Donahue Show, she said that "the Catholic hierarchy would be better advised to educate men on the responsibilities of fatherhood."

All this has been submitted as something different for you to read and for you to form an opinion about. Yes, there was a time when women would simply go into the Church and ask for the ordination of their husbands or next to their fathers and not really think about what might have been done (recanted) "under any circumstance."

Many women of both categories left the Church as a result of this seemingly irreconcilable division. Between the declaration of the Second Vatican Council issued the historic statement urging religious women to ease their old restrictions in order to capture the intentions of their founders, and in the process, to re-evaluate their calling and the form their calling took. While the 1965 statement seemed to many a recognition of the new importance and freedom that the sisterhood was taking, it led to a sharp division between the older, more conservative nuns and those usually younger and more liberal who were delighted with this chance to merge in a small way with the secular life.

Marching Band gets credit for dedication

Dear Editor:

With all the hubbub lately about who the next Notre Dame president will be and whether the giant sprinkler on the Fieldhouse Mall should be razed or not maintained that catching the Band marching out to practice on one of my occasional forays to the library, and hearing the fight song and subdue spirit and the halftime fun they have provided me with will reserve a place for them in my heart as one of the thumbs-up groups at this place. We owe it one more thing to make it a good show on Saturday. I think that their happy passion to the Christians would be much more enjoyable with a little musical accompaniment.

Robert Ingersoll

Quote of the day

"Happiness is the only good. The place to be happy is here. The time to be happy is now. The way to be happy is to make others so."
The Board of Trustees is the governing body for all academic, financial, investment, public relations, and student affairs at Notre Dame, but how many students are aware of their activities and the role the Trustees play in preserving the Catholic tradition and heritage of Notre Dame? The Board has made the major decisions through the University's 142 years of growth, from the admittance of women to Notre Dame to investments of Notre Dame's endowment to the election of each new President.

Father Hesburgh described the Notre Dame's Board of Trustees as "truly unique, a microcosm of our country." "We have Trustees that are black, white, regular, men, women, Hispanic, Protestant, one Jew, and they come from all over the country and beyond," he said. Of the 50 members of the Board, 13 have earned doctorate degrees, roughly half are Notre Dame alumni, and 21 have academic experience as teachers, deans, and presidents of universities. The Trustees represent a cross-section of the country, wrote the 1976 board from New York to California, Massachusetts to Oregon, from Illinois to Texas and Florida. Some trustees even come from as far as Japan and Panama.

Since the founding of Notre Dame in 1844 under charter from the State of Indiana, the University has been governed by a Board of Trustees, originally six Holy Cross priests. In 1967, however, that clerical Board initiated the first major reorganization of its government in 125 years by giving their sole control of University affairs to lay and Jesuit trustees of Notre Dame's endowment. They created the Fellows of Notre Dame, the University's University, but since then it has been an active and respected voice in the governance of the University's affairs. Accurate, consistent, and comprehensive, it was a practical move to add competent and professional laymen to the University's affairs. of the University over to the Trustees without asking for anything, with no conditions. It had to have been the largest amount ever handed over to lay control.

According to the Statutes of Notre Dame, all fellows of the University are a self-perpetuating body of 12 members. Six members are Holy Cross priests, or clerical fellows, and six members are lay fellows. Six of these fellows hold office ex officio, namely, the Provincial of the Indiana Province of the Holy Cross order, the President of the University, the Provost, the Executive President, and the Chairman and Secretary of the Board of Trustees. All other fellows hold office for terms of six years, and are simultaneously elected to the Board of Trustees. The University President acts as Chairman, and the fellow holding office ex officio annually.

The duties of their office include electing the Board of Trustees by a two-thirds vote, amending the bylaws of the University, preserving the physical property and material goods of Notre Dame, and preserving the essential character of the University as a Catholic institution of higher learning.

The Board of Trustees is a 50-member body including ex officio members as follows: the clerical fellows and the President and Senior Vice President of the Alumni Association. All other Trustees serve terms of three years, and two of the Trustees must be recent graduates of the University, one male and one female, under the age of 30, who only serve one three-year term. The retirement age for Trustees is 70, at which time the retired Trustee has the status of Trustee Emeritus, and may still attend meetings, although he has no vote.

The Board meets bimonthly and its seven standing committees reflect its broad range of University control as follows: Executive, Nomination, Academic and Faculty Affairs, Student Affairs, Financial Affairs, Investment, and Public Relations and Development. The Board approves the Executive President's action on other duties, but it is unique from other university boards in that all academic regulations are left to the Academic Council, a 60-member board representing the interest of administration, faculty, and students.

Father Hesburgh said he would not change a thing about Notre Dame's Board of Trustees. "They are not just businessmen with barely involved with the University, preserving the physical property and material goods of Notre Dame, and preserving the essential character of the University as a Catholic institution of higher learning."

The Board of Trustees will make the decision on a successor to Father Hesburgh's 35-year term this Friday.

Good blend of experience, youth has SMC swimmers looking ahead

By JANE SHEA
Sports Writer

With the arrival of four freshmen and the return of an experienced group of swimmers that suffered only two graduation losses, the Saint Mary’s swim team is counting on a productive 1986-87 campaign.

At least that’s according to Saint Mary’s head coach Nancy Jo Kuzmitz, who will take her Belles squad into its first meet of the season Friday at North Central College.

“We have a strong team this season,” said Kuzmitz, “and a variety of strokes which will add a lot of depth.”

This fact, along with a new schedule that features more teams of Saint Mary’s caliber, should translate into a good year.

“We are swimming in the NAIA this year,” said Kuzmitz, “which is a better association for our team.”

Last Friday, the Belles were invited to swim in the Notre Dame Relays where they tied Marquette for fifth place out of 17 teams.

“We swam excellently for our first meet,” said Kuzmitz. “The races were close and we were up against some good swimmers.”

One Saint Mary’s group, the 500-yard relay team, swam particularly well on Friday, placing second in the event. The team, which consisted of senior captains Mary Fisher and Patty Juckneiss, junior Mary Hogan, and freshmen Erin Tierney and Julie Courtney recorded a time of 5:13.3, the Belles’ best finish of the day.

Fisher, Juckneiss, Courtney, and Tierney also swam well in the 400-yard freestyle relay with a time of 4:072.

In other competition, meanwhile, Tierney finished notably in the 400-yard butterfly relay along with classmates Sarah Maurer, and freshmen Claire Druey and Ann Geigley. Their time was 5:04.9.

Looking toward next season, the forward line was plagued with injuries halfway through the year. Co-captains Corrine DiGiacomo and Mary Wagner, the biggest scoring threats for the Irish, both were lost for the season, substan­tially reducing Notre Dame’s offensive production.

DiGiacomo ended her career with a time of 9:59 in the 200-yard butterfly relay along with classmates Sarah Maurer, and freshmen Claire Druey and Ann Geigley. Their time was 9:59.

Waller, Irish keep rolling along; win streak will be on line tonight

By BRIAN O'GARA
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame volleyball team puts a team-record nine-game winning streak on line tonight as it travels west to Chicago to face the University of Illinois at Chicago in a 7:30 p.m. CST match.

The Irish are coming off an off day in their run of their weekend action, defeating Dayton, Northeast Missouri and the North Star Conference with a 28-10, 25-10, 30-13 score for 131 blocks this year to help their Notre Dame volleyball team to its team-record of 25-6 slate.

Brian O'Gara features Waller and details the team's upcoming action at right.

Sports Wednesday returns

Today's issue of The Observer reintroduces the Sports Wednesday page. This weekly page will feature schedules, standings and statistics for Notre Dame and Saint Mary's In-town and varsity sports.

Sports Wednesday also will include Associated Press polls and professional standings to keep readers up to date on the national sports scene. Graphics featuring interesting or unusual sports trivia round out the Sports Wednesday line up.

Field hockey key review

Irish suffer growing pains in '86

By MARGOT MACHECA
Sports Writer

When it comes down to the number of wins and losses for the Notre Dame field hockey team this season, the Irish may not look overly impressive with a final record of 6-12-1, yet the mood of the squad could not have been more positive during the Irish head coach Art Lambert praised Waller, agreeing that she has improved greatly but has yet to fully tap her potential on the volleyball court.

"She has made good progress from last year," he said. "She is very talented physically, and she can go as far as she wants."

Anyone who attended a home game this season surely will have noticed the enthusiasm that Waller brings to the court. Whether it be the form of a wide smile after a kill or a high-five to a teammate, Waller shows her emotions.

"I get really nervous before a game so when I do something good, it shows," Waller said. "When I get a kill, I think I play better if you're trying to have a good time. And anybody who's not having a good time is not having a good feeling to get a kill." Waller is a product of Lambert's first full recruiting effort since taking over the Irish in 1984. Waller, Zanette Bennett, Maureen Shewman and Stacy Terhall are all sophomores.

Pollsters upset Penn State's party plans

The pollsters went out and ruined the party. By demoting Penn State to No. 3, they have taken away the dream matchup if Michigan loses to Ohio State, which would give undefeated Penn State a chance to move back into the second slot.

As the Irish as a team are having a banner season, so expectedly, are several of the players. One of the Irish standout is sophomore middle blocker Mary Kay Waller. Lambert praised Waller's performance.

"I didn't play until ninth grade," she said. "My sister was starting the seventh grade and she talked me into it. I was so bad that I had never even touched a volleyball."

Waller improved slowly until her senior year in high school when she led her Lawrence High School team through an undefeated, state championship season that got her named to all state selection in Kansas.

Since joining the Irish last fall, Waller has continued to improve steadily. An outside hitter at first, Waller made the transition to middle blocker and has since become a steady force for the Irish at the net.

"Last year was my first year playing middle, and I wasn't too impressed with myself," said Waller. "Now it feels more natural. I can concentrate on hitting the ball harder. But I still feel like I'm learning volleyball."

Notre Dame head coach Art Lambert praised Waller, agreeing that she has improved greatly but has yet to fully tap her potential on the volleyball court.

"We never stopped trying the whole season," said Lindenfield.

The beauty of the game is a tradition in the land of the uniformed teams. Penn State has the highest uniform forms in the nation in the eyes of many, but I don't agree. The simple white-and-blues that look more like some teams' practice uniforms represent a little taste of college football in its purest form.

Quarterback John Schaffer has been quoted as saying that Joe Paterno would do away with the team's practice uniforms if he could get away with it. Simplicity has a beauty all its own.

Notre Dame's move to this year's edition of uniform is a move for the better. The change in colors will make it easier for teams to identify the players' names on the back, heavy stringy and rainbow colors. Traditional black shoes present an aura in which the game is played, not the players playing it. This move to last year's rain and mud added to all this, you have a picture that only John Madden dreams of.

If you compare scores, the Irish shouldn't have a chance. While the Irish fall to Alabama decisively, 28-10, Penn State went out and left the Crimson Tide with their mud bucket.

"We never stopped trying the whole season," said Lindenfield. No bowl representatives chomping at the bit. It presents a little tradition and old-fashioned charm.
