Secord under investigation
Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Richard Secord's last full-time Defense Department job was in a Pentagon division that supervises arms sales to many foreign countries. It employed several people whose names have surfaced in the Iran-Contra affair.

Secord, a retired Air Force major general who reportedly played a key role in the diversion of profits from the sale of U.S. arms to Iran to the Nicaraguan rebels, retired in May 1983 as director of defense sales management at the department's International Security Affairs section.

Secord oversaw Near Eastern and South Asian affairs at ISA, according to the Congressional Directory.

Between July 11, 1983 and Nov. 11, 1984, after his retirement, Secord was authorized to serve as a consultant to ISA for a total of 229 days at $324 a day. But Pentagon records show that he "did not serve any days in pay status," a spokesman said. Secord, however, was a member of a special operations advisory group until his term expired last August.

Federal investigators have said privately that Secord, 54, is under investigation in connection with the transfer of money - through Swiss bank accounts and international arms merchants - from Iran to the Contras, the guerrillas fighting against Managua's Sandinista government.

The ISA, where Secord worked, formulates policy on political-military activities for non-European countries, and also "provides supervision, in the area of security assistance (i.e., foreign military sales and military assistance programs)..." the official U.S. government manual states.

In his ISA job, Secord lobbied in 1981 for the controversial $8.5 billion sale of the AWACS surveillance planes to Saudi Arabia. He reportedly worked on the project while he was director of Near Eastern Security, the National Security Council staff deputy who was fired for his role in the Iran-Contra case.

At ISA, Secord worked with Noel Koch and Norton Sanchez, both of whom held the title of deputy assistant secretary, the 1983-1984 Congressional Directory shows.

A month after Secord officially left ISA, James Kelly joined the staff as a deputy assistant secretary for East Asian and Pacific affairs, Pentagon records show.

Since March, Kelly, a former Navy officer, has been a special assistant to President Reagan on the National Security Council, handling Asian affairs.

Kelly's brother, John, is the U.S. ambassador to Lebanon.

Sanchez, head of ISA's Latin America section, is a former CIA officer, who, sources have told The Associated Press, was involved in a private supply network helping the Contras cut off military assistance for the rebels in 1984. The sources spoke only on condition they remain anonymous.

Retired Gen. John Singlaub, another Contra supporter, said two years ago that his efforts to send supplies to the rebels had the backing of the White House, the Pentagon and the State Department.

"I've worked (at the Pentagon) with Sanchez," he said.

Koch, formerly in charge of ISA's Africa programs, left the Pentagon in May, but has remained a consultant, collecting $201 daily when he works, records show. He has worked for 25 days since June 19.

National Security promotes alcohol education
By GREG LUCAS
Staff Reporter

In an effort to help students learn how much alcohol they can safely consume before becoming legally intoxicated, Notre Dame Security offered blood alcohol content tests to students last Friday night in the Lewis bus shelter.

According to Assistant Director Phillip Johnson, Security surveyed 194 students.

Johnson said 41 of the students tested students were found to have exceeded the legal limit of 0.1 percent alcohol in the blood, while the other 153 were probably impaired.

"After 0.6 percent," said Johnson, "you could be charged with driving while intoxicated, based on other supporting evidence, such as erratic driving, staggering or swerving."

Johnson said "the logic (behind the tests) is some people can get a blood alcohol concentration of 0.03 and it puts them right over the end, they can't handle it."

According to Johnson, the vast majority of those who responded to the survey were male. "Most had been drinking 3 to 6 hours before taking the test," he said. Johnson said most of the respondents who exceeded the legal limit had more than 6 drinks before the test.

"Most respondents said they don't drink and drive," said Johnson, "and most said they felt they had driven a motor vehicle at some time while they were intoxicated." He added that a majority of the respondents felt their chances of being apprehended were that great.

"When asked if they would stop a friend from driving if they thought he or she were legally drunk, they said 'sometimes,'" Johnson said. "Most respondents said they'd like to see more educational programs about drinking and driving," he said.
Expression of Thanks

Dear Notre Dame Family,

There has always been much said about the closeness and compassion flowing from the Notre Dame community. In our three years here, we have felt the unity of this special place many times. At no time, however, has this feeling ever been greater than at the passing of our roommate and close friend, Michael Cogswell.

Mike was an incredibly special person, as those of us who were close to him already know. Mike had a unique ability to relate to most anyone. Underneath his fun-loving, outgoing side was a special sensitivity that touched us all. Each of us who knew Mike will always remember our treasured moments with him: tailgaters, trips, late-night conversations. Upon his death we all fully realized just how much his presence meant to us.

Obviously his loss is hard to bear. It has been greatly eased, however, by the outpouring of sympathy we have received from the friends around us. This compassion was not only felt by his roommates and close friends but also, most importantly, by his family. We cannot begin to describe how much your care relieved their suffering. To know that their child was so loved and cherished by so many helped Mike’s parents immensely. It also helped all who were his friends. To all those who showed their consideration and support, we thank you. Your help has truly shown us just how special a place Notre Dame is.

With great appreciation,

Mike’s roommates:

Furmark tells version of Casey's role

Associated Press
WASHINGTON - CIA director William Casey said Thursday he did not learn of possible diversions of Iranian arms sales profits to Nicaraguan rebels until he was tipped off by a New York businessman in early October.

Casey spoke to reporters after he testified for more than three hours before a heavily guarded, closed-door session of the House Intelligence Committee. A few minutes later, Casey's purported tipster, Ray Furmark, went before the Senate Intelligence Committee to tell his version of the story.

Furmark, a former legal client of Casey's, refused to talk to reporters as he entered the closed Senate hearing. But Casey said it was Furmark who first raised questions in his mind about transfers of funds from secret arms sales to Iran.

While Furmark testified, Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, emerged to report that "he is being as candid as he can; he is answering all our questions." Another source said Furmark apparently was an intermediary between Casey and Middle East arms dealers.

Congressional sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Senate Intelligence Committee had learned before Wednesday of Casey's conversation with Furmark, leading at least some panel members to question the CIA director's claim of Wednesday that he was unaware of the diversion of funds.

Casey denied a report in The Wall Street Journal that he knew as early as last spring that profits from the Iranian arms sales were being funneled to Nicaraguan insurgents, or Contras. One House Foreign Affairs Committee member, who spoke only on condition that he not be identified, said the senators were complaining that they had not been repaid adequately.

"No, that's wrong," Casey told reporters who pursued him down a corridor in the Capitol after his appearance before the House committee.

Asked when he learned about the diversion of funds, Casey responded, "I first learned about this when Meese told everybody." It was on Nov. 25 that Attorney General Edwin Meese disclosed that between $10 million and $30 million in arms sales profits were diverted to the Contras.

"Before Meese informed you, did you start asking ques­tions?" Casey was asked.

"Oh, I had questions about it, yeah," he replied.

"When you had questions, was that because of your con­versations with Mr. Fur­mark?"

"That did precipitate the questions, sure."

Government sources, who spoke only on condition that they remain anonymous, said Casey told the House Foreign Affairs Committee on Wednesday that Furmark had telepho­ned him Oct. 7 with word that unidentified Canadian business­men who had put up the money for the Iranian arms were complaining that they had not been repaid adequate­ly.

The Canadians were threatening a lawsuit because they had received only $10 million when they had expected payment of $20 million, the sources quoted Casey as saying.

One House Foreign Affairs Committee member, who spoke only on condition that he not be identified, said that sometime after Casey's conversation with Furmark, the CIA director summoned Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, a member of the National Secur­ity Council staff who was coor­dinating the administration's efforts to aid the Contras.

We, the residents of Howard Hall, would like to express our extreme displeasure with the administration’s handling of the decision to convert our home to a women’s dormitory in the fall of 1987. While we recognize the need to increase the enrollment of women at Notre Dame, we feel there is no excuse for the lack of sufficient time given to the residents of our hall to react to the administration’s intentions. At the very least, it is inconsistent to implement a long-term plan on such short notice.

As members of the Notre Dame and Howard family, we feel that we have been mistreated and abandoned. The administration should not be allowed to take such drastic action without even consulting the people involved. We hope that the troubles and disturbances that we are suffering will serve to remind the administration and the student body of the need for open and continual communication.

Respectfully,

Ford, Chrysler to employ air bags

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Two of the top three U.S. automakers said Thursday they plan to equip at least half of their 1990 model cars with air bags, prompting predictions that more than 2 million new cars sold that year will have the safety devices.

Ford Motor Co. and the Chrysler Corp. told a Senate hearing that their plans to put a large number of the driver-side protective bags into their fleets as standard equipment is contingent on the federal government extending its 1989 deadline for passive protective devices for both front-seat occup.

The Transportation Department already has said it plans to grant the extension so that automakers will be induced to equip cars with air bags at least on the driver side, while continuing the development of bags or belts to protect the passenger.

The bags, which automatically inflate to protect a car occupant in a crash, are favored by many auto safety advocates over passive belts that automatically wrap around a car occupant because the belts can be detached if considered cumbersome.

With the commitments indicated by Ford and Chrysler there likely will be a minimum of 2 million new cars sold during the 1990 model year that provide air bag protection for the driver, said Brian O'Neill, president of the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety.

O'Neill said in an interview that Japanese automakers "have been silent" on their air bag plans, but that most of the European manufacturers are expected to equip their cars with driver-side air bags by 1990. Mercedes-Benz already makes the devices standard equipment in its car lines.

O'Neill and other air bag advocates, meanwhile, predicted that General Motors Corp., the largest manufacturer producing about 4.5 million cars a year, is likely to feel competitive pressure to expand its line of cars with air bags.

3rd district vote tallying continues

Associated Press

SOUTH Bend, Ind. - State auditors tallied more absentee ballots and checked recorded vote totals against impounded voting machines Thursday in the continuing recount of the 3rd District congressional race.

Hubert Hoffman, a State Board of Accounts field supervisor, said 90 more St. Joseph County precincts had been tallied by mid-afternoon.

In Elkhart County, a computer tally of hand-counted punched and blank ballots from three precincts was delayed, said David Link, dean of the University of Notre Dame Law School. County officials were awaiting authorization of payment for computer time, he said.

Link was appointed to direct the tallying by the member-state Recount Commission. Democratic challenger Thomas Ward, a Knox attorney and Notre Dame law graduate, requested the recount after losing by 66 votes to Republican incumbent John Hiller of LaPorte. The race was the nation's closest contested congressional election.

Auditors working in St. Joseph and Elkhart counties have also conducted a re-tallying of the disputed Indiana House 5th District election. Completion of the tally in that race depends on the running of the delayed computer tabulation.

The 3rd District's 450 precincts also reach into portions of Kossuth, Marshall, Starch, and LaPorte counties.

While we understand the need for increase female housing on campus, the Student Senate is thoroughly appalled at the way the University is handling the Howard Hall switchover. Here are just a few of the problems we've found.

- The residents have to move after next semester, they found this out on Monday, the week before finals.
- The rector of the hall was informed, by phone, on Sunday night.
- No special provisions of any significant value have been made for the misplaced residents.
- These guys have to decide where they are going to live next year before the end of January.
- It appears that no effort will be made to keep groups of friends, sections, or even old roommates together in their new dorms.

There simply was not enough advance notice given, it's not fair, and we strongly disapprove.

Elf debuts as parking attendant

Associated Press

CONCORD, N.H. - Concord's parking elf, captured after a nationwide search, made his debut at the downtown garage Thursday, frustrated by the computerized meter system he was hired to make "user friendly" for the holidays.

"It's flawed," said Charlie Bonjorno, a 76-year-old retired barber who answered Concord's call for someone to wear the elf suit.

"You only get 20 seconds' time when you're supposed to remember where you parked your car, have your change ready and push the numbers," Bonjorno said. "If you're slow - that's it, you've lost your money."

Parking in the garage dropped from 100 percent to almost nothing when a computerized meter requiring a good memory and quick fingers was installed this year, said Ken Lurvey, the city's director of economic development. "People got confused, they got ticketed and they got frustrated," he said. "It's far from user friendly."

Parking tickets had prompted a steady flow of letters to the editor and complaints to police and city officials.

So the city agreed to hire a parking attendant as part of an advertising campaign to boost downtown shopping, but couldn't find anyone willing or able to wear the size small elf costume required for the $5.50-an-hour job.

When the city went public with its holiday plight, aspiring elves from all over the country answered the plea, but Bonjorno, a former Californian who moved to Concord three years ago, won out.

"I'm helping out the city and getting some money to buy Christmas presents for my children and grandchildren," he said. "I try to help people and hopefully the city gets enough publicity that they'll be able to pay my wages and make some business out of this parking garage."

The meter is outside, but the 22-degree temperature didn't appear to affect the elf's sense of humor.

At a news conference Thursday, he said he should have negotiated a better deal: "I should've charged them a percentage (of parking revenue) instead of a flat rate."

"I've met so many policemen doing this, I should be all right in the future as far as getting parking tickets," he said.

And he asked parking enforcement officers, "I'm not getting any more tickets, am I?"

Homosexuals are not ashamed but cautious

Dear Editor:
I am writing in response to the recent publicity of homosexuals at Notre Dame, such as the lectures by John Finntato and Jeanne Grammick. Many times, in the dining halls and elsewhere, I have heard students wonder aloud why so many homosexuals choose to remain anonymous. They usually conclude that these people are ashamed to be homosexual.

I would like to remind these people of a time, not so long ago, when people were "ashamed" to be Catholic. Job applicants would simply enter "Christian" on their applications, because a Catholic would probably not be hired. In Philadelphia, the buildings of Catholic churches were hardly a rare phenomenon. Many bigots, including the Ku Klux Klan, would verbally and yes, physically abuse Catholics. My own grandfather lost his job as principal of a high school when his employers discovered that he was Catholic (he was too proud to enter "Christian").

Were these people actually ashamed? Of course not! Gay people knew that the bar scene was becoming an embarrassment, and for awhile we even proclaimed that we had uncovered student transvestites. We had drunk and disoriented, and were disgusted by the circle at the bar. We built our own tavern, where students could drink and be drunks. There was only fruit juice and soda served at the dance (no liability). The students, however, booked rooms for the night: an entire floor was set aside for them. Nothing was shut back and forth throughout the evening. Booze on one floor and dancing on the other. After the bars closed, the activities moved entirely to the hotel.

I think that there were serious issues that we were not there. Nothing has changed. We were not there when the bars there had a joint formal dance. It was a big dance, in a downtown hotel (our campus is apparently too small for dances). There was only fruit juice and soda served at the dance (no liability). The students, however, booked rooms for the night: an entire floor was set aside for them. Nothing was shut back and forth throughout the evening.

An editor at the Notre Dame has written an article about the messes found in the other art and thought to be Catholic? Of course not, but they are too proud to enter "Christian". Covered that he was Catholic (he was represented by its rector, for about four or five years. The other dorms and clubs and entertainments differed from the general. Whereas the students lived or studied or ate or were too drunk to find their way home, it was a place that they were not there. Life is too precious. If this message reaches just one of you, we will have achieved our goal. Please just don’t drive if you’ve been drinking.

Simple message is do not drink and drive

Dear Editor:
This article is not the first you’ve seen about drunk driving and it will not be the last, but it carries a message unlike the messages found in the other articles. How many voices, how many ads, advertisements, how many posters have you told to not drink and drive? Too many. No, not enough.

This past weekend we lost a friend who has been a dear friend for more than two years now. The loss is one which we cannot describe—mere words cannot explain the kind person Mike was and what he meant to us. We can tell you, though, that it is just too hard. Please believe us. Don’t ever allow yourself or a friend to take a chance.

Mistakes are made and mistakes are forgiven, but the pain is never forgotten. We love parties and bars and dances, but they only last a few hours. Friends last a lifetime, and when a good time takes a friend away, it takes on a new meaning. Please listen to this—drinking is not that important. We cannot and do not live to pay for a good time anymore. Life is too precious. If this message reaches just one of you, we will have achieved our goal. Please just don’t drive if you’ve been drinking.

I have a way to express my faith by checking the appropriate box. If Herzog is so repulsed by the thought of these children learning through playing, then it is possible that the donated toys will also help immunize the children to the joy of a Christmas toy to needy special children at Logan Center that would result (similar to this is yes, more women should be admitted. This is not only for their educational benefit and the benefit of women exists now), but for the advantage it would provide the men also.

In this respect, I am not referring, as Herzog did, to the fact that more women on campus means more possibly to learn. Some of the most accomplished women here are trying to clean it up so she can move back in with her four children now. She hasn’t the money to hire labor. The donated toys will also help develop the skills of the handicapped as well as children learn through playing. The dearst and most precious possessions of a child are his toys, and our small individual small gifts together have brought great joy to many.

The aftermath of the Punk movement in Britain

MCCLAREN was vital to the success of the groups that were to become the focal point of the punk explosion. Kids identified with bands like the Clash, Sex Pistols, Stiff Little Fingers and Generators in their rebellion against their parents and against their parents’ music, which had become the arena rock that was so popular in the mid-1970s. All kinds of groups of kids were brought together under the umbrella of PUNK. There were fascists and anarchists, capitalists and communists, from both the lower and middle classes, and while they often fought among themselves, there was something that they all shared, and that was their clothes.

Suddenly, it was cool to wear leather jackets and torn clothing with spiked hair and pierced appendages. What had begun as a legitimate form of rebellion had become a marketable fashion commodity. McClaren became rich by promoting bands like the Sex Pistols as the savors of rock ‘n’ roll and more importantly, by selling the clothes worn by the bands to a youth market eager to consume. Due to its inherently volatile nature, punk rock quickly self-destructed, but the packaging of punk as a marketable product continues; the ‘punk rockers’ of London are now as much a part of the British tourist as the Queen and the rest of the Royal Family.

Since 1978, there has been a succession of music-fashion waves in Britain, all of which have been promoted based on the model of the punk movement. Included in these movements are the two-tone movement, the new romantics, glam rock and the current soul boy craze. One result of this is that the British music scene is as much concerned with fashion today as it ever was.

America has been relatively unaffected by punk and the other British music movements, except in isolated areas. There are several reasons for this. First of all, American young people, unlike their British counterparts, do not equate their identity with their clothes and their clothes with those of their favorite band, at least to any large degree.

Secondly, the British have a television show called “Top of the Pops” that is shown nationwide and runs down the British top 40 from the previous week, featuring a few of the artists from that week’s charts. This gives kids a chance to see their favorite artists as well as the latest sensations from London. If a band looks cool and makes a good impression, their sales can skyrocket.

Lastly, the fact that England is a small country both in population and geographically, in comparison to America, is the most important factor in the ease with which fashion movements take hold in the U.K. London radio has the ability to broadcast essentially nationwide and since London is the cultural center of England, the kids from outside of London pay close attention to what is cool in the city. In other words, people all across England are exposed to the same media and these sources of culture have become very powerful in shaping taste.

If London’s Capitol Radio decides to add a song to its playlist, an immeasurable impact on the fortunes of that band and song is artificially created. Radio can therefore create new music-fashion movements simply by identifying them as such and by playing the singles by the groups that are supposed part of this new movement. Then, due to England’s relatively small size, a band needs to sell only a small number of singles to make the Top 40. Then, they are featured on ‘Top of the Pops’ and their record sales increase exponentially.

America’s large size and relative diversity of both people and media sources make it virtually impossible for such music and fashion waves to enjoy the large-scale popularity they do in England. What is popular in New York or Los Angeles just doesn’t catch on in Des Moines or Peoria the way it does in Manchester. As a result, these new movements never receive the publicity they need to become nationwide phenomena, like they are in the U.K., and the bands that are a part of them wallow in relative obscurity in this country.

In other words, the current British music scene is predominantly concerned with fashion and the bands that are a part of it, while beginning as underground or cult bands, quickly become popular nationwide as a result of England’s small size and small number of media sources. The American scene, on the other hand, is anti-fashion for the most part and its bands stay relatively obscure because of America’s large size, diversity of population, and conservatism of its media.

If you feel like us, you're starting to get tired of the usual Friday night grind. You know - a little bar or party hopping, some drinking, etc. Well, we've got an alternative for you: a relaxing evening at Ribs and Blues where you can enjoy the best rhythm and blues and soul food in the area.

The Bar Beat

(out of four)

It all started one Friday night. We were sitting around wondering what we could do to get away from the usual routine. When suddenly, Emmet had a flash of the Blues - "Michiana's Home of the Blues." Ribs and Blues.

Well, we were right. As soon as we entered the front door the pulsating blues beat produced by "Peter and the Rhythm Flames" brought Emmet back to reality. After relaxing to a couple of sets of fantastic rhythm and blues music, we started to get a little hungry. We decided to try a bit of everything, which at Ribs and Blues isn't a bad idea. The ribs and rib tips were excellent. The meal was tender and smothered in a sauce that was not too hot but was full of great barbecued flavor.

The catfish was equally satisfying. It was tender and juicy like the ribs and had fantastic batter coating. Each of these were served in huge portions with fries, cole slaw and bread.

After devouring these delicious entrees, a Mexican-American hitchhiker who happened to be sitting near us leaned over and suggested that we try the pig ear sandwich. At first we weren't to sure, but being the crazy guys we are, we went ahead and ordered it. Still curious, Bill Argenta asked "Hey, what's in this pig ear sandwich," and Peter Dames, the owner, responded "It's Pig Ear." We all eagerly awaited its arrival at the table and when it finally arrived we knew we were in trouble. It looked, smelled, tasted, and was, a pig ear sandwich. After trying it we all decided to stick with the ribs and catfish. But, who knows, if you like soul food maybe pig ear is the meal for you. After all, as Peter Dames stated, "It's real soul."

Besides this delicious dinner menu, Ribs and Blues also has soul food lunches, served after 11 a.m. which include ham hocks, pork steak, cubed steak, mashed or sweet potatoes, greens, corn bread, and much more. All of these selections are moderately priced and served in huge portions that would fill anyone's desires.

The overall atmosphere is laid-back and inviting, but also very interesting. The crowd consists of many different types of people and everyone seems to get along great. While we were there, Joe "The Magnet" Keller got out on the dance floor and soon there were people of all ages and backgrounds out there dancing with him. This friendly atmosphere is added to by the generosity and hospitality of Peter Dames and the waitresses. It's a great change from the hectic, cold scene that some of the popular bars seem to produce. Ribs and Blues, overall, is a place where you can kick-back and forget that endless stream of tests and papers, and really relax to some excellent rhythm and blues bands.

During the month of December, there will be live bands from Chicago on Thursday through Sunday nights. There is a $3 cover charge but it is well worth it and yes, they do serve alcohol.

Music starts around 9:30 p.m., so get there a little early and enjoy the great soul food and the relaxing blues sound. To get there, go south on 51 and take a right on Western Avenue. The address is 5201 Western Avenue.
Solar Babies' is an annoying failure

Movie review Solar Babies

Released to the discredit of Brooksfilms studios, the film attempts to achieve a jumble of effects, but is destroyed from the outset by the story it tells.

Of all the problems the movie has, the most dismaying is its failure to make any sense. The viewer emerges from the most dismaying. Its failure to make any sense. The viewer emerges from the most dismaying.

The main characters are the members of a future hockey-on-roller-skates team chosen to save the world. They just spent an hour and a half staring at a blank screen. The main plot revolves around a group of teenagers who roller-skate their way through an annoying ring to it.

The title was aptly chosen. Like the Solar Babies (oops, I guess we need a new name), too) might even be a decent movie. The sad thing is that a group of better actors could have done little more with the script.

Director Alan Johnson falls in the herculean task of drawing credibility out of the cast, and the movie's average pace seems to drag on under the weight of the given plot. The special effects are wasted on such things as creative torture devices, which do come off as pretty disgusting, and thus, I suppose, succeed. The little ball Bodhl is cute and zings around with animation, but it looks like something that fell out of a Christmas special, and doesn't really belong in this warped world.

There is, of course, some underlying meaning to the film—something symbolic about the search for the savior that will restore water to the earth—but the viewer has no desire to remember, let alone analyze, such an irritating movie. Which is sad, because with the simple substitution of a totally different story line and the replacement of a few actors, Solar Babies (oops, I guess we need a new name, too) might even be a decent movie. As it stands, however, the only way I'd recommend going to see it is if you plan to wander into the showing of another movie.

Game Theory consists of two men and two women, led by guitarist and lead vocalist Scott Miller of the self described "miserable white." It's true. Miller's voice is somewhat high, but it tends to the uniqueness of the group's sound and punctuates their well-crafted songs.

And perhaps the biggest influence on their sound - and it's definitely a positive one at that - is the production of Mitch Easter who worked with his own group, Let's Active, as well as others such as R.E.M., who provided a definition and cohesiveness not apparent in Game Theory's earlier releases.

The album's opener, "Here It Is Tomorrow," is a powerful, forceful song for Game Theory, at least. Building up from a monotonephygic drums, guitar and Miller's angry voice, the song bursts into a pop plateau in the chorus with harmony, keyboards and ringing guitars.

Miller, with his "miserable white," stretches it a bit when he tries to sound angry, but his voice knows how to plead and explain on the beautiful slower songs such as "A Northern, Regenerat" and the album's last song, "Like a Girl Jesus." "Regenerat" in particular will win you with its harp-like, spindly guitar, the more alienated vocals and the chord of harmony in the chorus. Similarly, "Like a Girl Jesus," with its slow, string-by-string beginning builds up with echoes and effects until the drums and guitar kick it into a deep, ringing chorus.

But the majority of Game Theory's songs are punchy pop songs which bounce between drums and guitars-punctuated by keyboards and harmonies-which will look into listeners' sound after a couple of spins. But that's the key - you have to hear it, first.

which God's love is full of surprises. The Incarnation is far more humbling than any statistics Carl Sagan could give us. Perhaps faith would be easier If God had scaled things down, so that we wouldn't have to be amazed at His exhibition of power. Maybe we would be happier in a universe of more modest dimensions.

At Tuesday night's Penance Service, Father Andre read the parable of the Prodigal Son. The young lad in the story needs his father's forgiveness: the father, of course is the God-figure extending Himself in mercy to the sinner guilty of wasting grace. On Wednesday, I reflected. Father Hesburgh would be offering a memorial mass for a Notre Dame student who died at age 20, the latest on that long list of Deadmen dying young. I wondered: does God ever feel He needs forgiveness from us? A younger son threw away a fortune on riotous living, finally feeling ashamed of himself, he went home to his father on his knees. Qod's love is full of surprises. The Incarnation is far more humbling than any statistics Carl Sagan could give us. Perhaps faith would be easier If God had scaled things down, so that we wouldn't have to be amazed at His exhibition of power. Maybe we would be happier in a universe of more modest dimensions.

The world would be poorer without it. Everyone a carol is sung, I believe the magic assuring me that God so loved the world that he gave His only begotten Son in the way the Gospel says He gave Him. I wish you the grace of believing as Christmas. Merry Christmas from Darby O'Gill and me. We never said we didn't love you.
WHEN IS THE RIGHT TIME TO CALL HOME BEFORE THE HOLIDAYS?

a) When another hour of cramming for the stats exam isn’t going to help anyway.

b) When that Xmas Club money is almost gone, and you haven’t even started buying presents.

c) When you just keep thinking about unwinding after finals with the whole family together again.

Okay, maybe exam time isn’t the season to be jolly. But a call home might be just the thing to bring a little early holiday cheer.

And there’s no more reliable way to call than using AT&T. You can’t beat AT&T’s high quality service all year round.

But there’s no time like those weeks before vacation to talk to your parents. It’s a time to make plans. A time to talk about gifts:

- You’re thinking of buying.
- A time to reminisce about other years when the family got together.
- And a time to warn them that bombing out in statistics is, well, astatistical nightmare.

ND women’s hoops goes west for holidays

BY MARTY STRASSEN
Assistant Sports Editor

The Notre Dame women’s basketball team is hoping that a trip to the west coast over the holidays will give the California sun a chance to shine on its efforts.

Thus far, the Irish have struggled to an 0-4 record in a less-than-impressive start to the 1986-87 season (the worst start in the school’s history, in fact), and have lost their only senior in Lavetta Willis because of her decision to quit the team while citing personal reasons.

But eight games over Christmas break will give Head Coach Mary DiStanislao’s team a chance to improve on those numbers.

Notre Dame is at home for a pair of games, against Loyola and St. Ambrose, before the players head for their own homes to celebrate Christmas.

Before the new year, however, the Irish will head to the west coast for the Seattle Times Classic and a pair of games in California.

Here is a quick look at some of the obstacles awaiting Notre Dame (Irish home games are in orange over Christmas break):

LOYOLA - The former North Carolina Conference rivals lost their best player in Kathy Leyden, but return senior guard Sharon Carr (12.8 points per game last year). The Lady Rams finished with an overall record of 26-7 last season and always play the Irish tough.

ST. AMBROSE - The Queen Bees from the state of Iowa won 30 games last year while dropping 12 and return five letter-winners from a nine-man squad last year. Junior Patty Campbell (15.1 ppg.) is a strong perimeter player.

The Seattle Times Classic - The Irish tip off action in this tournament against last year’s Big Eight champion, Oklahoma, which won the conference regular season record.

The good news for the Irish is that the Sooners lost 11 players from that team and will rely on the conference tournament against last year’s Big Eight champion, Oklahoma, which won the conference regular season.

Thus far, the Irish have finished 22-15, while Pac 10 champion Washington finished last season at 24-6.

At Loyola-Marymount - The Lions won only three games last year and return just two players from that team. The Irish should do well in this one.

At UCLA - The Bruins struggled to a 12-19 mark and a fourth-place conference finish last season, but just only one letter-winner heading into this campaign. Junior Jamie Brown (11.6 ppg.) is the top returning scorer and should anchor a quick squad.

At Montana - The Irish beat the Terrapins by a 49-40 score last season, but Maryland has six players returning, including sophomore Deana Tate, who averaged better than 16.5 points an outing as a freshman.

At Northern Illinois - The Huskies, who won only eight contests last season. The top returner for Northern Illinois is senior Shelly Roberts, who averaged nearly 14 points in her Junior campaign.

Some people may be dreaming of a white Christmas, but Notre Dame wrestling coach Fran McCann would be satisfied just to see a couple of his wrestlers healthy again. He takes his squad to California on Jan. 4.

The Irish will compete in the Cal-State Fullerton Tournament on Jan. 4, then will face Cal-State Fullerton and Cal Poly in dual meets on Jan. 6-7. Notre Dame's chances of success in the three meets would greatly improve with the recovery of 126-pound sophomore Dave Carlin and 190-pound freshman Dan Mitchell.

Both wrestlers were injured in the season-opening Michigan State Invitational on Nov. 6. Carlin with a bad elbow and Mitchell with a sore shoulder. Neither one has wrestled since.

Carlin says he will be able to compete in the California meets, while Mitchell's status remains questionable.

"I'll be back in the lineup. It's almost 100 percent healed now," said Carlin. "I'll have to work hard over break and get in shape. Over the holidays, I'll practice with my high school. Then we come back to Notre Dame on Dec. 27, and I'll practice here."

The Irish can only hope that Carlin is starting to solve the injury riddle that has plagued the team all year. Junior 106-pounder Dan Carrigan injured his knee at last weekend's Las Vegas Invitational and is out for at least the rest of the year.

"It hasn't been a good year with injuries. You just don't expect injuries," said McCann. "We can't count on getting big decisions from our strong people. The competition's going to get tougher, and we'd better be ready."

Whether Notre Dame is healthy or not, the Irish do have their hands full at California. The Cal-State Fullerton Tournament will include over 20 schools, including nationally-ranked teams Oklahoma State, Arizona State, and Fresno State.

Only two days afterward, the Irish will have dual meets against the Cal-State Fullerton Titans and the Cal Poly Mustangs on consecutive days.

Notre Dame volleyball coach Art Lambert - A little national recognition for an outstanding season.

Notre Dame Athletic Director Gene Corrigan - 1) More home football games. East Carolina's looking for some more powerhouses for its schedule. 2) This isn't a Christmas wish per se, but it's past time for the following revelation: This writer is of no relation to Notre Dame's A.D.

Irish quarterback Steve Beuerlein - Some of the respect that eluded him throughout his record-setting career.

Indiana basketball coach Bob Knight - An autographed copy of A Season On The Brink by John Feinstein.

Miami quarterback Vinny Testaverde - A diploma. It's the only way he'll get one. He could polish the Heisman with it, at least.

The NCAA 1) paint remover. Get that three-point line off the court. 2) guts. After years of senseless and harmless sanctions, perhaps the NCAA will get some finally and suspend SMU for its infractions.

The NFL - a copy of Orwell's 1984. After all, Big Brother's been watching the officials all season. Winston had more courage than the zebras have had this season.

The NBA - the rest of the season off. Can't the Rockets and Lakers play now to see which of them plays the Cel­tics? Better still, just hang another banner in the rafters of Boston Garden.

Jack Nicklaus and Willie Shoemaker - continued health and happiness. Their wins in the Masters and Kentucky Derby, respectively, were two of the warmest stories of 1986.

All who knew Len Bias and Don Rogers - thoughts of what might have been. At least their cocaine-related deaths made people realize that something has to be done about the problem of drugs in sports. Unquestionably the most tragic stories of the year.

Sports fans everywhere - a Merry Christmas.

Irish survive Hurons in OT, 81-76; Free throws key in ND comeback

By RICK RIETBROCK

An old friend returned to the Notre Dame basketball team during the stretch drive of its contest with Eastern Michigan last night. The free throw, which had been so elusive in previous games when the Irish needed it most, came back and Notre Dame used it to overcome a fiesty Eastern Michigan squad in overtime, 81-76.

David Rivers and Mark Stevenson combined to convert six of six from the gift line in the overtime to help the Irish pull away from the Hurons in the extra period. But what was Notre Dame's saving grace also served as Eastern Michigan's demise as the Hurons missed three successive front ends of one-and-one situations in the final four minutes of regulation to allow the Irish to crawl back from a seven-point deficit with 4:41 to the Irish to come back. Stevenson's three-point basket and Sean Connor's jumper pulled the Irish to within two at 65-66. Eastern's Lewis Scott then missed the front end of a one and one with 1:36 to go. Stevenson missed a fading jumper, but the Irish regained possession with 30 seconds remaining. After passing the ball around the key, Rivers penetrated and found Connor open on the right wing. Connor, slowed by a sprained ankle, sank the 17-footer with eight seconds on the clock to send the game into overtime.

Eastern appeared confused, and with the bench calling for a time-out, the Irish were able to hold the ball on the court run out before getting a shot off. Connor said he felt confident taking the clutch shot in the waning moments.

"My shot was feeling good," he said. "I had hit a few in a row and I was in my rhythm, so I just tried to block out the circumstances at the time and let it go."

ND faces Ala.-Huntsville tonight

Irish look to break .500 mark

By PETE SKIKO

The Notre Dame hockey team will be looking to improve upon this season's 5-5 record at the expense of Alabama-Huntsville, which comes to the ACC this weekend for a two-game series with the Irish. Friday and Saturday nights' games will start at 7:30.

Head Coach Lefty Smith feels that the way to that success is by capitalizing on the numerous scoring opportunities that have been opening up for the Irish over the last few games.

"What we've been having a few problems with," says Smith, "is deciding, in his fifth year as head coach, "in that we've been pretty spotty with our scoring chances, especially on the power play. Overall, our play has been all right, but special teams play a big part in deciding the outcome of a hockey game, and we just need to be a little more consistent in those areas for the balance to start tipping our way."

Alabama-Huntsville has a steadily improving program which has played the Irish evenly over the past few years. The Chargers own a 4-4-1 record against the Irish overall but have yet to win at the ACC arena. Smith, however, is wary of their team's ability.

"Huntsville has a fine skating club," says Smith. "They attract a lot of talent out of the Detroit area and always seem to play us tough. We've shortened practices a little to keep the guys rested and caught up with their schoolwork over this last week, but I think we will do well this weekend and that we'll be prepared for Alabama. It would be nice to finish out the first semester with a couple of wins."

Junior Jeff Henderson will start in goal for the Irish on Friday night, and senior Tim Lukena will take over in the nets on Saturday. Sophomore left wing Matt Hanel is out with a knee injury, but otherwise the Irish are healthy for this weekend.

After taking on the Chargers this weekend, the squad will come back early to prepare for another two game set in North Dakota against the Bison of North Dakota State. The Bison are off to the best start in the history of their program and will prove to be a formidable opponent for the Irish. Smith is slightly worried about the lack of preparation time for the series over Christmas break.

"The squad gets back on January 4th, and we play in North Dakota on the 5th," said Smith. "That really only gives us four days of work but if we go twice a day, I think we should be all right. Again, I don't think we'll be able to put the puck in the net."
