Curran decides not to try to teach his classes

By REGIS COCCIA
Assistant News Editor

In addition, he said he wanted to avoid provoking Hickey into invoking the church's "canon 812," a provision that states: "It is necessary that those who teach theological disciplines in any institute of higher studies have a mandate from the competent ecclesiastical authority."

Curran's suspension was not based on that canon but on a declaration by the Vatican last summer that he was unfit to teach as a Catholic theologian because of what Pope John Paul II and other church leaders believe are too liberal views on birth control, homosexuality, divorce and other sexual issues.

The Vatican declaration is important in Curran's case because Catholic University, the only Vatican-chartered college in this country, requires a church-sponsored "canonical" license - or theological license - for teachers in certain programs.

Similar requirements do not exist in independent Catholic universities, such as Notre Dame, Georgetown and others. And the broader church authority - over professors spelled out in canon 812 has not been invoked at any U.S. Catholic school since it was issued as part of a general revision of church law four years ago.

Leaders of many U.S. Catholic colleges are vigorously opposing Vatican efforts to expand the brief canon in more elaborate regulations.

New activity director takes over for Neal

In Brief

"I don't know what I'm going to do with my life. At this point, I don't feel like I can do anything right," said a friend of mine who's back home during a conversation over break. I felt bad whenever my friend and I talked over Christmas vacation. Here was a person that I cared for deeply and things just were not going well for him.

He has had some bad breaks academically; decisions about women have been giving him problems; money has not actually been abundant for him. For the next year he will be working instead of going to college. My friend and I attended high school together and became the best of friends towards the end of our senior year. During the following summer we were out almost every night partying, enjoying a seemingly stressfree period before college. Then, I went off to Notre Dame and he went to LSU.

At Notre Dame, we seem to be eased into the system. There are rectors and counselors and the Freshman Year of Studies. We live in a controlled environment amidst seasoned students who are generally gung ho about Notre Dame. LSU, like most state universities, is rather different.

When my friend arrived at LSU, he was glad to be free of his parents and no people trying to stand in for them. Temptations were many; there was the attendance of a fairly low and a drinking age of 18. Like many students there, my friend could not balance the social scene with his academic life. He sat out a semester. He went back to school, wound up living in his fraternity house last semester, and fell prey to the same social scene. He is out for a year now because of his grades.

It was awkward talking about this situation with him. This is the second semester of my junior year at Notre Dame. I have been lucky enough to make it this far in my education and I hope to graduate in May of '88. But my friend could not hope to graduate by that time; he is stuck and frustrated. "I wish that I could have another chance to start all over. I feel like I want to turn things around right now . . . but I don't have that chance," my friend commented. He was sure that if he were given the chance now he could make things work. He did not need to make a gradual change; he needed it to work immediately.

We also talked about how much more meaningful it will be now that he has a whole year to change his attitude. He agreed, half heartedly.

The more we talked over break, the more evident it was that my friend was depressingly, very disappointed in himself. He had opportunities but managed to let them go. When he was on the borderline in any of his classes, things fell on the wrong side of the border. "You have to admit that life has dealt me a lot of Jokers," he said dolefully.

But he knew, as well as anyone, that he should not have been on the borderline so often. He, for the most part, was to blame for his situation because of his grades. He wanted to change this all. I also felt this was true; however, I didn't know whether it was my place to say it.

During our last conversation, my friend came out and admitted it: he had no one to blame other than himself for his dilemma. The way he said it was so disheartening. I don't know whether he ever had to do it, but it is painful to look someone in the face when he calls himself a failure. He did not think he had it in himself to do well in school, so he did not try; it gave him an excuse.

"I'm scared," he told me. "I don't want to try to succeed and find out that I really can't do it." It tore me apart to hear him say that. All I could do was encourage him and remind him that he had the ability to do anything he wanted - as long as he believed in himself. He nodded his head in agreement.

I feel that self-confidence will not be easily acquired by my friend. I looked at my own life and assured myself that acquiring self-confidence wasn't easy at all. I left my hometown after Christmas break wondering how many opportunities we all pass up because we don't have enough self-confidence. It's scary.

New Soviet negotiator meets with American delegation

Associated Press

GENEVA - Superpower nuclear arms talks resumed Thursday with a luncheon meeting between U.S. delegation head Max Kampelman and his new Soviet counterpart, Yuli Vorontsov.

The two delegation leaders met privately at Soviet reception, instead of heading a meeting of all three top negotiators from each side, which normally marks the beginning of a round.

The talks have been bogged down from the start by disagreement on when the next session, which was called "Star Wars." U.S. spokesman Terry Shroeder said he had no information on when the next session in the seventh round of arms talks would be. "I have nothing for the news media on this as yet," he said.

 Asked about the results of Thursday's session, which was the two men's first meeting, he said, "it went fine." He declined further comment.

The luncheon lasted just over two hours.

Church, society not separate, says priest

By MARILYN BENCHIK

Church and society, "I accept the separation of Church and State, refuse to accept the separation of the Church and State," said Hehir.

Hehir addressed how the Church can practically interact with society. "The question that needs to be answered is what role do religious institutions play in society? And I think what needs to be drawn upon are histories from Western and American political courses. Voluntary associations are groups that are not organized by the state," he said.

"Voluntary associations are organized from below in society. The forces in Voluntary organizations must define what role it plays in society," Hehir discussed the role of the Church concerning the United States' abortion policy, nuclear policy, the military policy in Central America and the equity of the economy in Central America.

"It is virtually impossible to find another organization that joins the position on abortion and nuclear war in a distinctive way. The Church cuts across these issues in a distinctive way."

Hehir said there is a two-factor moral equation in relation to abortion. The question of the state and the individual leads to the question of expanding the role to invade individual freedom.

Hehir cited the abortion issue as an on-going struggle in society. "It is a remarkable factor that 13 years after the decision concerning abortion was made, it is still regarded as not acceptable," Hehir said.

Planes collide over Salt Lake valley, debris hits houses

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY - A commuter airplane to land and a private plane that had just taken off collided over the Salt Lake Valley on Thursday, killing at least 12 people and showering debris over a residential area, authorities said.

Falling wreckage damaged three houses, but there were no immediate reports of anyone hurt on the ground, said Salt Lake County Fire Marshal Frank Brown, who confirmed the death toll.

Deputies and firefighters rushed to the snowy crash site about 15 miles southwest of downtown Salt Lake City and cordoned off the neighborhood after the collision between the Skywest Metroliner and the private plane occurred shortly before 1 p.m. They are picking up bodies here and there, whenever people call us to report them," Brown said.

There was confusion over the death toll. Salt Lake County Sheriff Pete Hayward said 12 people - 10 from the commuter plane - were killed in the collision. Brown said a total of 16 people were dead.

The twin-engine jet prop Skywest airplane was flying from Pocatello, Idaho to Salt Lake International Airport, said Dick Meyer of the Federal Aviation Administration in Seattle. He said it can carry 18 passengers and two crew members.

The private plane, a blue and white Mooney, had just taken off from Airport No. 2, a small facility near the crash site, Meyer said.

The accident was the first U.S. commercial aviation disaster of the year. It came at a time of increasing concerns over air safety in the wake of a Aug. 31, 1986, collision in Ceritos, Calif., of a private plane and a Aeromexico DC-9 that killed 82 people.

Martin Bee of Kearns said he was outdoors when he "heard a boom - a big boom - and I looked up and there were just parts flying all over. You couldn't tell one thing or another. You couldn't tell what was what. I was just ducking and trying to stay out of the way of things."...

In Washington, the FAA said the Skywest plane "disappeared from radar" at 12:32 p.m. MST while flying at 7,000 feet about eight miles southwest of the main Salt Lake City airport over Kearns.

Tom Doyle, the airport's assistant air traffic manager, said the plane was about to turn into its final approach when the collision occurred.

Visibility at the time was 30 miles with a cloud ceiling of 7,000 feet, according to FAA spokesman Fred Farrar in Washington. Winds up to 60 mph were whipping through the area shortly afterward. Several inches of snow lay on the ground.

A temporary moratorium and command post were set up at St. Francis Xavier Catholic Church, where parts of bodies fell in the parking lot and on the steps of a nearby church-run school, said sheriff's Lt. Bill van Wageningen.

The 80 students were immediately evacuated uninjured from the area.

"Our staff has decided we're going to keep the hours the same as they've been. We don't feel we need to change the present policy," Rozum said.

Most rectors of undecided dorms run a small facility near the crash site, said Salt Lake County Fire Marshal Frank Brown, who confirmed the death toll.

The "extension seems to be a reasonable request, on the part of the students," noted Grace Hall's Father Gerald Lardner.

Sister Marietta Murphy of Badin concurred with Lardner.

"We haven't had a need to change Sunday night parietals in Badin because our mass is at 6:30 Mass. But if other dorms do need this change, we're open to the idea," she said.

The decision in most dorms will be a group effort by the rector, assistant rector and resident assistants, whose duty hours would be extended to ensure the new hours. In Badin Hall, however, each student will cast her own vote.

"We're going to let the women in the dorm direct us on our decision," rector Murphy said.

Brian Holst, chairman of the Student Senate committee on parietals, presented the idea last semester as a way to facilitate "co-ed receptions" after hall masses.

The Campus Life Council passed the proposal to extend Sunday parietal hours at a Nov. 20 meeting.

Tyson approved the proposal one week later, giving hall rectors "discretion to withhold this extension," as explained in his letter to Student Body President Mike Switek.

Compassion was not shown in Howard decision

Dear Editor:

We were once more treated to Adolfo Calero's "inside story" on Nicaragua in Viewpoint (December 2). I cannot forget his disruptive "interventions" when Edgar Chamorro spoke here last semester, he should have been told that fact. Moreover, Calero's breezy, than a year before the actual action. We were once more treated to Adolfo Companionship is not possible. Unsigned editorials represent the opinion of the majority of the Editorial Board. Columnoomtimes encourage people to stay on campus rather than leaving the campus to drink, which endangers lives. In all, we are treated to a series of proposals from driving off campus while intoxicated under the open alcohol policy, security could monitor the students as they left the parking lots. Gates could be erected and manned on Friday and Saturday nights at the parking lot exits. To avoid inconvenience for those who have not indulged in alcohol, the exits should be manned only during those hours in which alcohol consumption is most likely to occur.

Drunk driving obviously leads to tragic consequences. We are already aware of this problem, which is enhanced by the alcohol policy, so let's find a solution.

As patriots, we believe in the American dreams, inherited as a birthright. Our politicians keep promising that everyone will have a share in the things that dream promises, though history shows us it is not true. "The seniors are in a position to help build for the future," he said. "When I come back here in the future, I would like to see the team doing as well or even better."
Denver predicts close game; New York thinks differently

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. - The word out of Denver is that Super Bowl XXI will be a close game because the Broncos weren't blown out in their visit to New York during the season.

Well, the Giants have heard the word and the message heading West Thursday is: "We're a lot better team now."

And it's being said by a lot of players.

"We were in a little bit of a down cycle offensively when we played them the first time," Giants guard Chris Godfrey said.

"It was a struggle for us. I think they are an excellent club, but we're playing better now." Fellow guard Billy Ard said the Giants were a team in transformation in November.

"We're not the same," he said. "We were going through some things. We were developing into a fine team. We're an excellent team now."

There is no doubt the Giants struggled on offense in posting a 19-16 victory over the Broncos Nov. 23. New York was outgained on offense 405-262 and failed to score a touchdown, with defensive end George Martin returning an interception 78 yards for the Giants' only TD.

"They didn't let us move the ball on the ground," said Giants Coach Bill Parcells, whose team gained 141 yards on 36 carries. "We got down close, but we didn't score TDs."

One of the major weapons missing from the Giants' offense in November was wide receiver Lionel Manuel, who was reactivated for the San Francisco playoff game after recovering from a knee injury.

"He definitely opens things up for me," said wide receiver Bobby Johnson. "He runs routes like nobody in the NFL. His speed is back and he's cutting on a dime. My ankles would break the way he cuts."

Giants tackle Carl Nelson said neither the Giants nor the Broncos came close to playing a perfect game earlier this year.

"I know there were a lot of things that we could have gone better," said Nelson. "The same can be said for them. It should be a good game."

Women's swim team drops meets, but improves times over Christmas

By THERESA KELLY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's swim team took a training trip to Philadelphia over Christmas break, and even though the team was beaten in its two meets, Coach Tim Welsh was very pleased with the trip.

The swimmers trained at Villanova from Dec. 28 through Jan. 11. On Jan. 9 they lost to LaSalle, 140-126, in a tough meet that was not decided until the last event, and the next day the Irish were beaten by Villanova, 135-81.

Despite the losses, Welsh said the trip was a success. "We were beaten on the scoreboard," he said, "but we made great improvements over our past times."

The intense training in Philadelphia made the team as fast or faster than before Christmas, when it trained lightly during exams. Welsh said the long period of concentrated training without the burden of tests and homework was very beneficial to the team.

"A trip like this is also very positive because the team became closer as a group," added Welsh. "Their greater unity, spirit and enthusiasm was apparent."

The trip was not all hard work for the Irish women. The men's team also trained at Villanova, and the swimmers visited historic Philadelphia, attended the Notre Dame-Pennsylvania basketball game and spent time with the families of four swimmers from the Philadelphia area.

The Irish will be tested in a three-day challenge this weekend, hosting Northern Illinois today, Western Ontario Saturday, and then travelling to Northwestern Sunday. A goal of the team is to have a winning record in dual meets this year, and Welsh said this weekend could be the deciding factor.

"The Northern Illinois meet is too close to call," said Welsh, noting that the Irish lost last year, 82-58. "We should have a slight advantage over Western Ontario, but will probably be at a disadvantage at Northwestern."

"Each meet will be decided in the water. The team can make its own destiny."

The Northern Illinois meet starts tonight at 6 and Western Ontario visits Rolfs Aquatic Center at 2:00 Saturday.

IRISH ITEMS - David Rivers and Scott Hicks have been slowed because of minor injuries this week. Rivers injured his right ankle and Hicks suffered a thigh bruise, and each was being held from practice as of Wednesday. Both are expected to play tomorrow.

Mike Phelps calls the toughest part of the schedule the next two weeks. After tomorrow's game, Notre Dame has a week to prepare for a game at UCLA, before returning home for four consecutive contests—against Dayton, Marquette, North Carolina and LaSalle.

Women's basketball returns home,...tries for fourth win against DePaul...averages 24 points a contest and is second in the nation with 14.2 rebounds per game. "Diana Vines is smaller than our kids, but she's very quick and very strong, which is going to present some match-up problems for us," added DiStanis-liao. Vines' mobility also gives the Blue Demons the ability to run their fast break, with the security of knowing Vines will pull down offensive rebounds from missed shots. DeStantis-liao expects DePaul to play a tough half-court, packed-in defense to stifle in-side scoring from Irish players, particularly Sandy Bethan, and Heidi Buneck. Botham is coming off a career-high, 28-point performance against Northern Illinois Tuesday night, while Buneck leads the Irish with 12.9 points and 8.1
