Demonstrations to highlight Alcohol Awareness Week

By ELIZABETH R. CORNWELL
Staff Reporter

The campus group Bacchus has teamed with student government to declare this week Alcohol Awareness Week. The groups are sponsoring a series of demonstrations and lectures to promote the responsible use of alcohol, based on the theme “Friends Keep Friends Alive.”

“The demonstrations are aimed at catching people as they go by - looking at their attention, and getting them to stay and watch,” according to Junior Class President Cathy Nonencamp.

“They’ll be run by the Indiana State Police and Notre Dame Security in two different dorms each night. First they’ll pick over twenty-one volunteers from the audience and give them each six beers, monitoring them the whole time. Then the officers will give a ten or fifteen minute talk about the effects of alcohol,” said Nonencamp.

Finally, they’ll use the students as examples of what they’ve been saying, giving them tests to demonstrate the alcohol’s effects on their motor control, speech, reaction times,” she said.

The demonstrations will take place at 10 p.m. each night, today in Stanford/Keenan and Walsh, Tuesday in Alumni and Zahn, and Wednesday in Planter and LaFortune. Student Body President Mike Switch and Off-Campus Commissioner Race Thoman are scheduled to be two of the student volunteers in Wednesday’s presentation in LaFortune, according to Nonencamp.

“There will also be a lecture at 10 p.m. Wednesday in the New Orleans room at LaFortune, but we don’t have the specifics as to topic or speaker yet,” Nonencamp continued.

“We decided going into this that we’d take a risk to make it hit home. After the alcohol-related injuries of last semester, we thought we should do it. They didn’t. It’s too easy to forget the shock - go out on a Friday night, have two beers, and it’s forgotten. Hopefully this will keep people aware. We can’t let them let it go.”

“Last year they ran a pretty predictable program - films and lectures that students didn’t attend. We heard it all before. This week we decided to take a different approach. Maybe by using campus celebrities and using the momentum of the tragedies, we can get some attention,” said a campus source.

“The problem is not getting better, if anything, it’s getting worse, if anything, it’s getting worse.”

Morrissy Hall will forfeit one SYR and will not have an other SYR until certain community service work is performed as part of the penalties stemming from the condition the Memorial Library Auditorium was left in after the Morrissy Hall Christmas skits, according to Father Thomas Streit, rector of Morrissy.

Penalties for the Morrissy Hall Christmas skits were discussed by the hall government of Morrissy and John Goldrick, associate vice president for residence life, in a meeting 4 p.m. Friday, said Jim Ryan, Morrissy president.

The meeting was the most recent of three conferences concerning the skits, and it led up to an agreement that specific performers in the Morrissy skits will be obliged to give two to three hours in community service every Saturday for three weeks, according to Ryan. Ryan said the work will include acting as “big brothers and coaching basketball at St. Hedwig’s,” a local parish that sponsors an outreach program.

The action came in response to this past year’s Christmas skits performed by Morrissy Hall on the evening of December 15 in the Memorial Library Auditorium.

“The content of the skits was raised in the meeting, but Dr. Goldrick made it clear this was not the reason for the sanctions,” Ryan said. “They were sanctioned only in the condition that the auditorium was left in.”

Except beer cans and squashed twinky wrappers littered the library auditorium the day after the skits took place, said Streit.

As a result, the Office of Student Activities immediately banned the hall from using the auditorium for performances this year.

A new student monthly addressing social issues will appear on the Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s campuses Tuesday.

The editor of Common Sense, Joe Merchant, said the journal will be circulated in a similar manner as The Observer and The Scholarist, but he emphasizes that, unlike these two publications, Common Sense will not cover campus news.

Instead, he says Common Sense contains essays meant to “stimulate discussion on issues of justice and peace in a wide range of areas” including economics, culture, and politics.

According to Merchant, the journal will not particularly aim to be liberal or conservative. “We are just trying to be thought-provoking,” he said.

Common Sense operates on financial donations from students, faculty, and others outside the University. Merchant said the printing is donated by “a friend” in South Bend. Common Sense receives no money from Student Activities because the journal formed too late to apply for assistance.

Articles in Common Sense are written by Notre Dame undergraduates, graduates, faculty and alumni. Merchant said he hopes this diverse group of writers will approach a cross-section of the campus and will help “bind the community together.”

The first issue of Common Sense will state as its “editorial purpose” that the journal was formed after a group of students, faculty and alumni spoke through painful firsthand experience that no adequate forum exists at Notre Dame for the dissemination of a wide variety of viewpoints on controversial issues, according to Merchant.

Merchant said he believes Common Sense will be “received well” by the community, especially by faculty and graduate students whom he thinks are underrepresented in the campus publication oriented toward them. The administration “quickly” gave its approval for the distribution of the journal on campus, he said.

The journal is named after Thomas Paine’s eighteenth-century pamphlet “Common Sense,” Merchant said.

Gipper, elusive quarterback key to Super Scandal Sunday

The Iran-Contra arms scandal has been brewing for nearly two months and already the investigators are going restless and bored. Polics now estimate that only twenty percent of the American public is following the issue with daily interest, and this of course could lead to second rate commercials between newscasts. Some say that the scandal has become nothing more than a feeding frenzy for democratic media sharks, while others argue that a plethora of legal investigations threaten to prevent a timely and just resolution of the controversy. What is certain is that the fans want quick action, not a lot of garbage on TV. To see the Reagan administration stalled over an objectionable call seems to many fans a waste of precious sports-spectating time.

On the contrary, what we have seen until now has only been the first quarter of a very exciting Super Scandal Sunday.

There seems to be some confusion as to the extent of the field and the number of players involved. This is because such multi-syllabic names as Khashoggi, Rafsangani, and Ghorbanifar do not quite fit across the back of a football jersey. Filthy accusations and a muddy field also make it difficult to see who's on which side.

Not withstanding the dirty shortcomings of the remarkable tear-away jerseys which every one deliberately wears, we must also notice that none of the players wears a proper helmet. Indeed, the go well beyond the class of Ron Ziegler's serious head injury. Even the unflappable Gipper himself seems dazed and out of breath.

The scandal of the quarterback is the key man on the field. In this match-up such an argument falls to the Reagan North, hometown boy and All-American hero. Even though Ollie's name was not quite so prominent early in the season it now seems that he was indeed responsible for many of the big plays. Long term fans must attribute to North's credit bold moves not only in Iran but also in Israel, Saudi Arabia, Switzerland, and Honduras. His swift moves fooled not only the opponents but even his own teammates in Washington. Ollie carried the ball so fast and so well that no one claims even to have seen him.

The embarrassing fumble of late November not only made the Reagan team forfeit the ball but now means an upgrading of his great. For reasons unknown, other than Ollie's sudden rashness, the coach immediately removed his star quarterback from the game. That time fans now need to know is whether North has been this one-man miracle machine or whether others have also held the ball. Specifically, has North followed Reagan's commands or made up his own plays on the line? CBS news would love to use their magic chalk-board to graphically illustrate the past few plays. Such mistakes are certainly embarrassing for the head coach. After all, how could the head coach not know what his team was doing? Or even worse, could the coach have actually ordered his team to deliberately violate the rules? In either event, the Super Scandal weekend is shaping up to be a major defeat for the Reagan team.

In a game of football such mistakes are embarrassing, but none-the-less understandable. Stupidity, cheating, and even deliberate up-sportsmanlike conduct will soon or later be forgiven as merely part of the game. Foreign policy is obviously a wholly different and far more complicated matter.

The football metaphor serves only to further the interest of those who would rather flip to a sports channel than watch the Washington action. And after all, the analogy is one much in line with the Gipper's line of thought. The evil empire is clearly the opponent in the Reagan game, and one for whom the etiquette of sportsmanship need not apply.

In the past the President has worked his magic by convincing the audience that they were really watching a game. He has played the mythical Gipper role quite well. But now that his team has blundered he knows nothing of their shortcomings. Reagan fires the quarterback and then passes the problem and blame to others. Meanwhile he and his prostate are injured, sidelined, and silent. The remaining time will certainly not be boring.

Students join in Washington march

By BUD LUEPKE Copy Editor

A raid of Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s pro-lifeers arrived home this weekend after braving snowstorms and police opposition to participate in the fourteenth annual march on Washington protesting the 1973 Supreme Court decision to legalize abortion.

Theresa Harrington, vice president of the Right to Life Club at Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s, said four Saint Mary’s students and six students from Notre Dame chartered a bus to Washington D.C. with pro-life activists from Valparaiso. Harrington said the bus arrived in the nation’s capital at 10:30 a.m. last Thursday, Jan. 22, the fourteenth anniversary of the Supreme Court’s controversial decision to legalize abortion.

According to Harrington, the fifteen inches of snow that fell the night before they arrived closed the entire city and prompted organizers to “officially cancel” the march. However, the Notre Dame-Saint Mary’s group and an estimated 5000 other protesters were not deterred by the weather. “We said we came all this way and we’re going to do it,” said Harrington.

Harrington said the protesters assembled in a park behind the White House to listen to a message from President Reagan and law-makers and then marched to the steps of the Supreme Court.

There, Harrington said “police with billy clubs” were used to prevent a demonstration by the marchers. Cathy Flynn, a protester from Saint Mary’s, said, “The cops were giving us a hard time, telling us it was illegal. No one left; we just laughed at the cops.” However, Harrington said she thought “at least 40 people did get arrested.”

According to Harrington, five felons were brought to the demonstration by “extreme factions.” She also said every abortion clinic in Washington was shut down by sit-in protests. But Harrington said she does not approve of such tactics. “ Personally I don’t like those kinds of points. Generally, the demonstration was peaceful.”

Harrington described the pro-life cause as a “war on apathy.” She said 5000 abortions are performed every day in this country and, she said, “We’re on the offensive and we will be there every year until the law is changed,” she said.

The Right to Life Club met with Rep. John Hiler, R-Ind., for 45 minutes before the march. Harrington said that Hiler said he was “99 percent behind us. I didn’t ask what the other one percent was.” Flynn said Hiler “was great, really supportive.”

Harrington said fewer Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s students participated in the march this year than in previous years. Noting her club sent 35 students on its own bus last year, Harrington said the smaller number of students could be attributed to “a young club that is rebuilding” from the loss of its senior officers who graduated last year.

Harrington said snow prolonged the trip home to 20 hours. But Harrington and Flynn agreed the effort was worthwhile. “It was really worth it, I know we went and went to Washington and we just laugh at the cops,” Flynn said. Harrington said snow would not deter her from going again next year,” Harrington said.

auditorium for one year, the rector said.

Streit added although “the decisive factor was the poor condition in which the library auditorium was left, this also reflects the quality of the skits.”

“The content of the skits are the subject of further discussion internal to Morrissey,” said Streit.

Ed Bielsky, who participated in the off-campus skit, a parody of a Christmas special which won a skit competition later in the year, said, “I personally didn’t think the event was in bad taste whatsoever. All was meant to be taken in good fun. Someone who didn’t understand the tradition and spirit of the event made an uneducated judgment call.”

Bielsky said he agreed with the penalties enacted against the performers of the skits, however, “We were responsible for cleaning up the auditorium, but we didn’t. For this we were justified punished.”

A resident assistant who was particularly offended by the skits said, however, that the content of the skits was never in question with regard to the penalties enacted by the administration. “From my knowledge, neither myself nor any of the staff ever brought forth (to the administration) the content of the skit with respect to the sanctions. The only reason for the sanctions was the lack of responsibility in cleaning up the auditorium.”

However, the resident assistant added that although the skits were “not as vulgar as in the past,” and that everyone had “taken them in the way they were intended, . . . some people might say they weren’t as funny.”

a worse. As I see it, we need to promote responsibility in regards to drinking. The problem is not only drunk driving, but also injuries that occur when students are out of control and walking the streets or wandering around their halls. The fact is that you are responsible for yourself when you’re drunk, and you’re responsible for your friends, for the people you’re with,” Nonnencamp said.

Theologians discuss integrity, unity

Special to The Observer

Some fifty Catholic bishops, prominent theologians and academic administrators held a colloquium last week at Notre Dame to discuss their relationship and respective roles in the Church.

Much of their discussion concerned the responsibilities of the three offices for the maintenance of doctrinal integrity and Church unity, especially as these were affected by the teaching of theology at Catholic colleges and universities.

According to Father David Burrell, professor of philosophy and theology at Notre Dame and convener of the group, "the entire meeting offered an opportunity for us to learn from one another about our diverse roles.

In that spirit, we were able to explore further ways of collaborating as well as procedures for unscrambling situations of potential conflict," he said. "The ability of a group like this to address such delicate issues candidly offers fresh hope for the American Church.

Participants in the meeting included Father Theodore Hesburgh, president of the University of Notre Dame; Father Edward Malloy, president-elect of Notre Dame; Father James Burtschell, professor of theology and former provost of Notre Dame; Father Richard McBrien, chairman of the department of theology at Notre Dame; and Father Richard McCormick, professor of theology at Notre Dame.

Also attending were Father Thomas Oddo, president of the University of Portland, Bishop William McManus, former bishop of Fort WayneSouth Bend.

Others who attended the meeting were Father John Alexandre, chancellor of the diocese of Rockville Center, New York; Father Raymond Baumhart, president of Loyola University of Chicago; Father Michael Buckley, professor of theology at Jesuit School of Theology in Berkeley; Father Donald Buggert, professor of theology at Washington Theological Union; Father William Byron, president of Catholic University of America; Father John Coleman, professor of social ethics at Jesuit School of Theology in Berkeley; Monsignor John Egan, director of the Office of Human Relations and Ecumenism for the Archdiocese of Chicago; Cardinal John Dearden, retired archbishop of Detroit; Raymond Fitz, president of the University of Dayton; Sally Frazor, provost of the University of San Diego; Alice Gallin, executive director of the Association of Catholic Colleges and Universities; Ann Gannon, professor of philosophy and former president of Mundelein College; Father Timothy Healy, president of Georgetown University; and Father Bryan Hehir, general secretary for justice and peace at the United States Catholic Conference.

Also attending were Monika Hellweg, professor of theology at Georgetown University; Bishop Howard Hubbard of Albany.

In 1987 it is no secret that the white college environment is one of enormous stress for many minority students. They worry that assimilating into the dominant culture is as difficult as maintaining black identity. It is really an introduction to counseling and other support systems for minority people's diverse cultures not to do it. Sometimes we may turn to a counselor for help in sorting out our questions or problems, but that may not always be appropriate. The relationship a client develops with a counselor is a very special one that is hard to duplicate with a friend. Whether you see a counselor only one time or once a week for several weeks, he or she is interested in only you during that time together. In addition to helping you focus your energies in resolving your issues, a counselor is objective and your session is strictly confidential, which may not always be true with a friend. The staff at the U.C.C. are professionals trained to work with university students. We deal with a wide range of concerns from time management, career counseling, or overcoming shyness, or improving one's self-concept and ability to make friends, to more serious issues such as the loss of a significant person in one's life, eating problems, or depression. We see clients either in a one-to-one session or in a group session depending on the nature of the student's concerns. While students often feel they want individual counseling, there are many times when a group is much more beneficial to them. Some people come to the U.C.C. just for the groups we offer and we're expanding those offerings all the time. This semester we have the following groups available: Alcohol & Drug Abuse Prevention Training (ADAPT); Coed Weight Group; Adult Children of Alcoholics (CAP); Relationship Group; Eating Disorders Group; Personal Growth Group. Another word needs to be said about confidentiality. Even though the U.C.C. is part of the University of Notre Dame, we adhere to Indiana state law and the American Psychological Association's ethics guidelines in keeping students' files strictly confidential. This means that you don't need to worry about your visit to the U.C.C. going on your school record. Except in rare instances where there is a danger of personal harm to oneself or others, no one ever knows you have even come in, unless you tell them. Chances are that when you're looking back on your college years, a few years from now, you won't even remember some of the intense concerns and crises you've lived through. Memory has a unique way of coloring our past in bright or neutral shades rather than in the more somber colors which would reflect some of our pain. For a growing number of students those positive memories will include the rewarding experience of working with a skilled and helpful counselor.

Dr. Patrick Utz is the director of the University Counseling Center.

game. Rivers scored 15 of his team-high 36 points in the first half and came up with some key steals and loose balls early in the half to help the Irish to their lead. And until the last 2:18 minutes, his full-court defensive play was key to the Irish victory. The UCLA-Notre Dame series is very good for college basketball.

UCLA leads 23-20 all-time in the series, 20 of which occurred in the 1970's.

Rivers finished with 16 points on 7-of-17 shooting, with missed field goals typical of the second half. The Irish had built the lead by halftime, but the game was never in doubt, even as UCLA outscored the Irish 20-10 in the final 3:08, UCLA outscored the Irish 20-10 in the final 3:08. PASADENA, Calif. - John Elway did everything but kick for the Denver Broncos in yesterday's Super Bowl. They might wish he had done that, too.

Elway's running and passing had staked the Broncos to a 10-7 first-quarter lead. Then, two missed field goal attempts by Rich Karlis in the second quarter wrecked Denver's momentum. The New York Giants pushed across 30 points in the last half to rout the Broncos 39-20.

Karlis kicked a 48-yard field goal on the opening series of the game, tying a Super Bowl record for the longest three-pointer. It also was Karlis' 10th straight field goal, including one in overtime in the AFC championship game against Cleveland that sent the Broncos into the Super Bowl.

But on subsequent attempts of 23 and 34 yards against the Giants, he was wide right, leaving Denver with a slim 10-7 halftime edge and opening the door for New York's second-half outburst.

Karlis, with his head in his hands and chocking back tears in the locker room, said, "I just pushed them. 1 blocked them off to the right. I didn't get my hips through. It's like when you play golf and you don't get through the ball and you put it into the woods on the right." Karlis said the snap and hold were good on both aborted attempts.

"I just feel like I let everyone down," he said. "I think I really hurt us. I pride myself on making big kicks, and those were big kicks.

"I hit the 48-yarders as good as I've hit a ball. We didn't want to waste many opportunities today, but I did. I don't think it was pressure but maybe I was a little anxious." The Broncos actually blew a prime touchdowns opportunity preceding Karlis' first miss. Elway's 34-yard pass to Vance Johnson helped move the Broncos to the Giants' one. But three running plays lost five yards, and Karlis' 25-yarder sailed wide.

Denver got to the Giants' 10 on a subsequent march before the half, but after two incomplete passes, Karlis missed again just outside the upright. "I thought we should have scored about 10 more points in the first half," Denver Coach Reeves said. "We knew going into the game that if we didn't take advantage of every opportunity we had, we would be in tough shape. We missed a couple of field goals and got first and goal at the 1 and didn't score." Denver linebacker Tom Jack­son, playing in his second Super Bowl for the Broncos, said Karlis "didn't lose the game for us. If not for Rich, we wouldn't even be here.

Karl's converted a field goal in overtime to lift the Broncos past Cleveland 23-20 in the AFC championship game two weeks ago.

"I'm sure Rich feels bad," Jackson said. "The syndrome when you lose in the Super Bowl is usually to blame yourself. I feel I lost the game because I didn't play much."

Jackson suffered a knee injury midway through the second quarter and didn't return. "I don't know the extent of it yet," he said.

Elway completed 22 of 37 passes for 394 yards, throwing a 47-yard TD pass to Johnson late in the game and running 6 yards on a quarterback draw in the first quarter.

Phelps voices displeasure with refs, but Richardson thinks differently

By DENNIS CORRIGAN
Sports Editor

LOS ANGELES - If Notre Dame head coach Digger Phelps had a song on his mind following Saturday's 63-59 loss at UCLA, it may have been "Three Blind Mice" dedicated to Charles Range, Willis McNuckin and Mark Reischling the three Pac-10 officials who refereed the game.

"I felt that in the last four minutes, I don't think we got one call from the officials," said Phelps. "It was the worst Pac-10 officiating I've had here in Pauley in 16 years. There was a lot of bumping and shoving going on. If you're going to call it, call it both ways. I just think it went their way."

Particularly galling to Phelps was a charging call on David Rivers with three seconds left in the game. After Reggie Miller bottomed out a three-pointer from 28 (or more) feet, Rivers drove the length of the court and headed down the lane. What happened next was either a solid defensive play or a lazy call depending on whose bench you sat on.

UCLA's Dave Imhoff slid over to seal the lane and Rivers moved off to the left, making contact. The officials whistled Rivers for the offensive foul.

"The last play was not a charge," said Phelps.

Guard Mark Tillmon connected on a pair of 3-point baskets to cut the deficit to 10-67. A free throw by the Blue Demons' Dallas Comegys made it 71-67, but Tillmon hit a running one-and-one, but instead they just came out of bounds saving a ball before it hit his back, which led to a call and Tillmon hit his game-winning shot from the foul line. Phelps declined to comment as Mark Stevenson turned over the ball 10 seconds left and the Irish up one, the officials waved off the basket.

"I thought Mark got tripped on that play and lost the ball," Phelps argued. "(Miller) goes down and shoots the three point play because we can't get people back there to stop him." Phelps' squad. As Mark Stevenson brought the ball up against UCLA pressure, he fell down and lost the ball to Miller, who hit the game-winner seconds later.

"I'm pretty mad. I think people can lose better than that just like people can win. I didn't hear anything mentioned about the last year and I was pretty mad. I think people can lose better than that."

Reggie Williams' 3-point field goal with 38 seconds remaining yesterday highlighted a 13-1 run that gave Georgetown a 74-71 victory over previously unbeaten and sixth-ranked DePaul.

Irish fall to St. Joe

Special to The Observer

The St. Joseph Hawks outscored Notre Dame 27-16 over the final 10 minutes to secure a 71-57 victory.

The Irish stayed with St. Joe in the first half, which ended in a 39-39 tie. Mary Gavin led the Irish attack with 12 first-half points, and the Irish enjoyed a 16-10 rebounding edge. They also shot 60.9 percent from the floor.

In the second half, Teresa Carmichael scored 11 of her 15 points to help the Hawks distance themselves from the Irish. Debbie Black led the Hawks with 16 points.

alignment - a run, a pass, a hit on the enemy. "I was really surprised. I'm going, 'We're going to run a fake here?' I looked over at Bill (Parcells) and said, 'Are you touched?' But it worked. The only way they could have stopped it was to have a goal-line defense.

Immediately after the play, starting quarterback Phil Simms passed for 12 yards to Joe Morris and 23 more to Lee Rouson, putting the ball at the Denver 17-yard line. The Giants' defense had two plays left for a 16-10 lead and never looked back.

"I think it was a big, big play," Rutledge said of the sneak. "It was really minor on my part. I was really surprised that they called it. That's the first time I've ever done it." In New York's 19-16 victory over Denver earlier this season, the Giants ran the play with Jeff Hostetler at quarterback. He handed the ball to Rouson, who ran for a first down.

"The linebackers never walked up to the line. That's what I was waiting on," said Rutledge, who delayed calling for a snap from Oates.

Track team turns back Spartans in meet that tough on the records

In a meet filled with record-breaking performances, the Notre Dame indoor track team downed Michigan State, 78-53, Friday night.

In all, six meet records, two Notre Dame records, and one ACC record were established by the two schools.

Irish shuttle runner Tim Krause set the tone early in the evening by setting a meet record and qualifying for the NCAA championships with a time of 54.2 seconds. He edged Notre Dame's Tim Brown and Tony Ragunan, who both set school records and qualified for the ICA's with identical band held times of 2:53.2. Once again the start hurt the Irish as Brown's start was termed by Head Coach Joe Phane as "sinful."

Notre Dame's Mike Rogan then set a meet record in the mile with a time of 3:57.5. He edged teammate and fellow New Yorker Mike O'Connor by two-tenths of a second.

Three more meet records were set by the two teams. Michigan State's Chuck Cullen won the high jump with a mark of six feet, nine inches, while Chris Camponovo and Chris Matteo of Notre Dame tied for the pole vault record at 14 feet, six inches. Finally, Dan Garrett won the two-mile run with a time of 9:12.2.

In other meets, co-captains Jeff Van Wie and Robert Nobles both finished second in the 800 and 1,600 yard runs respectively.

"I wasn't surprised by it," said Phane. "All they have done is distance workouts. They haven't done any speed at all."

Brown gained revenge on Leonard in the 300-yard dash, dusting him by a two-second margin.

The Irish led the tie the entire meet, the closest score being 32-32 after the 440-yard dash. But an Irish sweep in the pole vault gave the Irish a ten-point cushion.

Notre Dame took the only relay of the evening, as Nobles, Yan Searcy, Peter Demo, and Chris McGuire won the mile relay. Nobles got the team to a large early lead, and McGuire held off Michigan State's Rodney Bensin to win the race.

Self-inflicted wound kills Purdue assistant

James Blackmon and the Kentucky Wildcats defeated Navy yesterday, 84-40. See the college basketball roundup on page 9.

James Blackmon killed Purdue assistant Willard G. Wells, an assistant football coach and recruiting coordinator at Purdue University, died at his home from a self-inflicted gunshot wound, the Tippecanoe County coroner has ruled.

Coroner Martin D. Auvil said Wells, 43, died at 7:30 p.m. Friday. Auvil said no note was found and no autopsy would be performed.

Wells came to Purdue in January 1985 to work for Leon Burtnett, who was forced to resign as head coach after that past season.

"Willard was a very close friend of the family, very close to my kids and very close to a lot of our football players," Burtnett said Saturday. "I am very, very sad at this point. We are all surprised and shocked."

Wells, a native of Chilliwack, British Columbia, Canada, played football at Boise Junior College and attended Franklin College before earning degrees from San Jose State in 1970 and 1971.

He began his college coaching career as an assistant with Burtnett at San Jose State from 1971 to 1975. He moved on to Tulane in 1975 to coach outside linebackers and then took over special teams in 1978. He was in private business in New Orleans when Burtnett hired him at Purdue.

"Willard and I go way back to San Jose State where we recruited together," Burtnett said. "He was a tremendous man and he recruited many, many fine athletes to San Jose State. That situation and our relationship continued here at Purdue."

Fake punt call helps turn the tide for Giants as they turn halftime deficit into big victory

Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif. - A simple nod by Coach Bill Parcells from the sidelines and the New York Giants in motion for the key play of their resounding 39-20 Super Bowl victory over the Denver Broncos yesterday. The play itself was simple, a 2-yard quarterback sneak by second-string quarterback Jeff Rutledge early in the third quarter, but it gave the Giants the first down at their own 48-yard line that started the rout.

The Giants had taken the second-half kickoff and were in a fourth-and-a-situation at their 46, trailing 10-9.

The Giants lined up in punt formation, but Rutledge was in the blocking back position, not Gary Reasons, who's usually the punter. The Giants shifted into a T-formation with Rutledge kneeling under center and punter Sean Landeta going in motion from his spot some 15 yards behind center Bart Oates.

As the 30-second clock came close to running out, Rutledge took the snap and plowed slightly to his right for the first down.

"We thought we really had to go after them offensively, not play conservative," Parcells said. "It's a gut feeling."

"We've been doing that same little punt deal all season. We've been practicing it for about 15 weeks. There are three day-four things we do out of it. Rutledge is really heady guy. If he thinks it's there, he's going to run it. If he doesn't, he's going to take the delay of game. He looked over at me and I nodded my head." Oates said he didn't know what was going on until he saw some strange faces around him.

"That's when I knew it was a fake punt," he said. "It was what we call our Arapaho related story on page 9

"It was looking for a place to mount up and shout the three," said Miller, who had a game-high 26 points. "I was going for the win because they didn't have anybody who could shoot the three-pointer. I knew they would come down and try to tie, so I was looking to mount up for the three."

But while Miller, who had only connected on one of six three-pointers before The Shot, had every confidence in his shot, at least one of his teammates had a different opinion.

"I was mad that he took it," said Richardson. "I thought he should have passed it back out to me. Maybe he didn't know how much time we had left."

As for Hazzard, whose 12-4 (6-2 in the Pac-10) team has made a habit of late rallies, it was business as usual.

"They've conditioned me to expect the unexpected. I was not happy being down by 11, but I didn't feel like the other night against Oregon St. when we blew a 2-point lead," said Haz- zard. "I've been there with this club before. A year ago with this team, it probably would have gone the other way, but with this year's team's spirit and talent, it never quits."

"Somewhere, we'll see that same kind of effort for 40 minutes from our team. Other teams take note, lead is safe against us. Our best playing is yet to come of us."

Miller's last second heroics overshadowed an almost-brilliant second half by Rivers, who showed no signs of the ankle injury which had limited his practice time before the

LOS ANGELES - Sometimes, a shooter just has a feeling. "I knew it was in all the way," said UCLA forward Reggie Miller of The Shot, the 3-pointer that cinched a 1-point victory against Notre Dame, 63-59.

The Shot came with just 10 seconds to play and the Irish leading, 59-58. When Notre Dame's Mark Stevenson lost control of the ball against the Bruin press near midcourt, Miller scooped up the ball and raced up court, beside the Bruin bench and Head Coach Walt Hazzard - 28 feet from the basket. With Stevenson on him, Miller turned and fired up The Shot which brought the house and the Irish down.

A controversial charging call on David Rivers with three seconds remaining sealed Notre Dame's fate, as the Irish lost their second straight and third of their last four games in falling to 9-5 on The Shot.

"I was looking for a place to mound up and shout the three," said Miller, who had a game-high 26 points. "I was going for the win because they didn't have anybody who could shoot the three-pointer. I knew they would come down and try to tie, so I was looking to mound up for the three."

Simms named game's MVP; Giants beat Broncos, 39-20

Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif. - The New York Giants vs. John Elway? how about the Denver Broncos vs. Phil Simms? The Giants won their first NFL championship in 36 years yesterday, scoring 30 points in the second half to beat the Broncos 39-20 in their first Super Bowl.

The Giants' victory was earned primarily in two areas: the highly publicized defense and the underpublicized Simms, who found a distant second to his blend Denver counterpart in the pre-game hype.

All Simms did was complete 22 of his 25 passes a Super Bowl record 88 percent. He threw for 268 yards and three touchdowns to be named MVP of the game.

Simms also set a Super Bowl record with 10 consecutive completions during the third and fourth quarter, when the Giants turned a 19-9 halftime deficit into a 33-10 lead without allowing as much as a first down to Denver.

"Our offense had a lot to prove coming in to it," Simms said. "When I was warming up I told everyone, 'I've got it today.' I was throwing real well."

"I think that ought to dispel any myth about Phil Simms," Giants Coach Bill Parcells said of his quarterback, frequently booted during his eight years in New York. "He was absolutely magnificent today. That's as good as he has ever played."

"New York's second-half surge started innocently enough. Three plays netted 9 yards, and the Giants' punting team ran onto the field to punt from its own 66. Suddenly, the Giants shifted out of punt formation, and Jeff Rutledge, the second-string quarterback, came up behind center.

The ball was snapped and Rutledge gained 1 yard and a first down.

Six plays later, Simms hit tight end Mark Bavaro for 1-yard, the Giants led 16-10 and the rout was on. "It was about two feet," Parcells said of the fourth down.

Denver Coach Dan Reeves lamented: "We just didn't have enough to make it interesting. They certainly are a great football team and they played a great game. In the first half, we should have scored for more points at least.

"We knew going into the game if we didn't take advantage of every opportunity, we'd be in tough shape," Reeves said. "The field position in the third quarter really killed us. We were backed up to our 15-yard line by Denver, and the G iants' punt ing team deployed there.
