American warships reportedly close to Lebanese territory

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon - U.S. warships were reported within 30 miles of Lebanon on Tuesday, and official sources in Cyprus said civilian aircraft flying near the ships were ordered by radio to veer off.

The warships of the 6th Fleet were in international waters. The sources in Cyprus, which lies 100 miles northwest of Beirut, spoke on condition of anonymity.

The United States marshaled a strong battle group in the eastern Mediterranean over the past week in response to rising tensions in the Middle East and following a spate of kidnappings of foreigners in Lebanon.

The kidnappers, and Moslem leaders in Lebanon, warned that any military action by the United States would mean death for the captives.

Pentagon sources stressed in Washington on Tuesday that the U.S. battle groups had received no orders to prepare for any military operation.

The sources, who demanded anonymity, said the carriers Kearsarge and Nimitz, part of a Mediterranean Amphibious Ready Group of roughly 1,900 Marines, were steaming on a "routine patrol pattern" in the southeastern Mediterranean, south of Cyprus and relatively close to Lebanon.

The force consists of about 22 warships, and 1,900 more Marines were moved out of Spain on Tuesday to join the battle fleet.

Also Tuesday, Iran's Foreign Ministry denied reports that Anglican Church hostage negotiator Terry Waite was held by Iranian Revolutionary Guards in Lebanon.

The fate of Waite, 47, remained a mystery. The 6-foot-7 emissary has not been seen since he left his hotel in Moslem west Beirut on Jan. 28, apparently for a meeting with the Shiite Moslem kidnappers of two Americans held since 1985.

Lebanon's justice minister, Nahih Berri, said in Damascus, Syria, on Monday that Waite had been "arrested" by the kidnappers. He did not elaborate. Unconfirmed reports last week said Waite was spotted in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, a Shiite stronghold and base for about 400 Iranian Revolutionaries.

'Blood War' and special advertising discussed by HPC

By REGIS COCCIA
Assistant News Editor

"The Blood War" and advertising in an issue of The Observer commemorating the retirement of University President Father Theodore Hesburgh were among the topics discussed at Tuesday night's Hall Presidents' Council meeting.

Richard Gund, an Alumni Hall sophomore, announced to the Council that a pizza party will be given for "people who participated in the winning dorm's 'Blood War.'"

According to Gund, "The Blood War" was initiated by Alumni and Stanford halls in response to a request by the St. Joseph County Blood Bank.

"Publicity (for "The Blood War") will be handled by Alumni and Stanford in the dining halls," Gund said.

He said the dorm with the most pints of blood donated, counted as a percentage of the total number of dorm residents, will win a pizza-and-beverage party at Barnaby's. The Council also heard from Joe Murphy, editor-in-chief of The Observer, regarding a special issue marking the end of Father Hesburgh's presidency.

Murphy asked the hall presidents for advertising support to defray the cost of the special issue.

("We're going to have an issue sent to all 78,000 alumni," Murphy said. "We tried to get the lowest rates possible. Production costs alone are over 9,000 dollars. The total cost of the issue is going to be over 22,000 dollars," said Murphy. "We'd like to get ads from each dorm, congratulatory ads for Father Hesburgh," said Murphy.

According to Murphy, the first round of which was printed Tuesday.

"The Council also heard from Andy Shannon, who demanded that any military action by the Kuwaiti National Guard be avoided," Murphy said. "We'd like to get it set by next week because the deadline is Feb. 23," Lee said.

In other business, HPC Co-Chairman Joanne Cahill announced the appointment of Jack Lee, advertising sales representative for The Observer.

"Colleges and Universities at the University of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's (for "The Blood War") was initiated by Andy Shannon, who demanded that any military action by the Kuwaiti National Guard be avoided," Murphy said. "We'd like to get it set by next week because the deadline is Feb. 23," Lee said.

Freshmen no longer housed in lounges

Freshmen no longer are housed in study lounges, said Evelyn Reinebold, director of student residences.

Eighty-four freshmen were housed in lounges, freshman housing area director Jack Lee said.

As residences became available during the year, fewer people moving off campus and fewer vacancies for freshmen last year," said Reinebold.

She said she did not feel there would be such an extensive problem next year, but indicated there is always a certain amount of ambiguity: "I don't know how many openings we will have for freshmen next year," Reinebold said.

Howard Hall's conversion to a woman's dorm, however, will probably cause some overflow, she added. Although in the past both male and female freshmen had been placed in temporary quarters, this year all were male, she said.

Reinebold said some freshmen see FRESHMEN, page 6

Impooverished Americans should not be patronized

"Ninety percent of the young people of the ghetto never come in conflict with the law... Despite the over-swelling odds, a majority of people in the ghetto go on living, go on hoping, go on striving. This is the miracle." - Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Dr. King used these words concerning poverty in America more than 20 years ago. Poverty is about as timeless as the sun, the moon and the British Crown. King's statement, then, is still applicable to today's society.

Each time I visit a large city, I try to notice little quirks of human nature that I wouldn't normally have the opportunity to see. (Being a "Bender," it's always fun when I have the chance to expand my mind by really seeing the world.) On a recent trip to Chicago, I noticed two opposite ends of the sociological spectrum. The beggars, representing blatant poverty, first caught my eye, and then the Yuppies appeared on the scene during rush hour.

The appearance of the beggars stood in direct contrast to that of the industrious Yuppies, who looked like they had just pranced off the pages of Vogue, Cosmopolitan and Gentleman's Quar­ terly. These Young Urban Professionals had success written all over their faces.

But it was the beggars on the street asking for money who really touched my heart. Anyone's first reaction to such a sight might have been one of horror, pity or despair (for the poverty-stricken person and for modern America in general). Then came my first reactions as well. But, it was the tremendous fan of Charles Dickens who admired the values, ethics and the determination of Victorian society's desti­ tute, that I was able to keep a hopeless романтический. The heroic spirit of the impoverished really inspired me. They reflect courageousness, willingness, and true independence. Even the most cynical among us, must admire these qualities.

A friend of mine commented that the poor didn't need to take refuge in the streets because there were shelters for them to visit in times of trouble. This is true, and in many instances shelters are necessary for people to take refuge. These shelters also help people to make a new start, or they offer opportunities the poor would not have otherwise.

Shelters do not necessarily take away inde­ pendence from people, but the situation is "dif­ ferent" for the souls who decide to rough it out on their own. "This roughing-it" attitude represents a uniquely American theme. The United States is renowned for its frontier spirit and the independent poor represent a modern frontier mentality in this country.

There are numerous opportunities for many students in the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Com­ munity to help relieve the plight of the poor. Unfortunately, it is also very easy to patronize this segment of society.

What some people need to realize is what Dickens realized over 100 years ago. Many of the impoverished may be unable to implement direct change in their present economic situa­ tions, but that does not mean the poor are not as moral and independent as anyone else on these two campuses.

At any rate, the beggars, who for instance played their guitars and saxophones on the street-corners for any pittance that was thrown into their instrument cases, did honest justice to their art. Like their music, the beggars should be recognized, not patronized, for the inspiring contributions which they make.
Reagan’s chief of communications adds name to list of resignations

Associated Press

WASHINGTON Patrick Buchanan, President Reagan’s combative chief of communications, added his name Tuesday to a growing list of administration resignations, saying he could work for conservative causes more effectively outside the White House.

Buchanan, who announced last month that he would not run for president, has seemed frustrated in his two-year campaign to get the administration to follow a hardline conservative script.

He will leave the $77,400-a-year job March 1, joining an exodus of top administration officials departing with two years left in the administration.

Buchanan — with his combative chief of communications reputation — does not intend to stay out of the headlines.

He will seek out conservative causes more effectively outside the White House.

Fitzwater also acknowledged there seems to be "kind of open speculation around town" that Richard Perle, a top administration policy-maker in arms control, is poised to resign as an assistant secretary of defense.

Vote in Philippines shows little support for Communists

Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines - The Philippine government said Tuesday the overwhelming vote in approval of the new constitution shows Communist insurgents have little popular support, and offered to reopen peace talks with the rebels.

Juan Ponce Enrile, the former defense minister and President Corazon Aquino's main right-wing opponent, conceded defeat in the campaign against the charter along with several leftist groups.

Aquino fired Enrile from the Cabinet in November. The new constitution legitimizes her revolutionary rule, which began nearly a year ago, and she contends it will help stabilize a government beset by challenges from both the left and right.

Defense Minister Rafael Ileto said in a statement: "This shows repudiation of the Communist claim that support, and offered to reopen peace talks with the rebels.

Tuesday the overwhelming vote of the people. It is clear our position is gaining ground."

Official returns from Monday's referendum were not expected for days. An unofficial tally of just over 86,018 precincts by the private monitoring agency National Movement for Free Elections, known as NAMFREL, showed the charter with 78.51 percent of the vote.

NAMFREL said 7,754,012 voted for the constitution and 2,662,011 against it.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles Redman called the results "an impressive institutional triumph for a resurgent Philippine democracy and a remarkable personal victory for President Aquino in her steadfast efforts to restore stability and prosperity to her country."

The only one of the country's 13 regions in which the constitution was defeated was Cagayan Valley of northeastern Luzon, which includes Enrile's home province. The margin was 53 percent to 47.

Aquino and her constitution supporters were winning 52 percent to 48 in the Ilocos region of northern Luzon. That includes the Ilocos Norte home province of former President Marcos, who fled the country last Feb. 26 in the face of the civilian-military uprising which brought Aquino to power.

"The trend is already decisive," said Edgardo Aniceto, chairman of NAMFREL. He predicted a final affirmative vote of at least 75 percent.

A cease-fire with the Communist insurgents expires in four days. Defense Minister Ileto said the referendum victory gives Aquino a clear popular mandate and the upper hand in peace talks.

Negotiators for the estimated 25,500 insurgents withdrew from the talks last week, accusing the government of "inexcusably" and the military of abuses.

Ileto said: "Mrs. Aquino now has the support of the military and the other side will have to be very careful because they have seen the reaction of the people.

"It is clear that people ...

The Tehran radio broadcast Monday that the Swiss Embassy in Iran, protested Seib's detention to Iranian authorities and demanded his release.

"His continued detention is unjustified," Redman said. He added Tuesday that the Swiss had been unable to obtain an appointment with Iranian officials to discuss the arrest.

White House spokesman Martin Piltz said the Swiss had been denied access to Seib, so "we don't have anyone who has talked to him or seen him."

Seib had sought assistance from the Swiss Embassy after immigration authorities impounded his passport last Thursday while he was preparing to leave the country. He is based in Cairo.

Warron Phillips, chairman of the Wall Street Journal, said Monday he believes there is a "tragic mistake" has been made in the detention, and we fervently hope that the government of Iran realizes it has made a mistake and will set him free.

"He has not been seized by some mysterious elusive band of terrorists, but by the government of Iran, the government of America and by name to come to the country is more than 50 other American and foreign journalists."

Report for Wall Street Journal, arrested by Iranians as 'Zionist spy'

Nicosia, Cyprus - Iran confirmed Tuesday that it arrested American reporter Gerald Seib as a "spy of the Zionist regime" who entered the country in the guise of a journalist.

Seib, a 30-year-old correspondent for the Wall Street Journal, went to Iran with 56 other foreign correspondents by invitation from the fundamentalist Shiite Moslem regime.

He was arrested last Saturday and not allowed to leave with the other journalists.

The Tehran radio broadcast was Iran's first official confirmation that Seib was under arrest. It also said the United States had asked for his release, but Seib correspondents by invitation from the fundamentalist Shiite Moslem regime.

Big House pay boost takes temporary effect

Associated Press
WASHINGTON -- Congress allowed itself a $13,100 pay raise, at least temporarily, when the House let pass a midweek Tuesday deadline for rejecting the hefty pay increase.

Democratic leaders said the House would pass Senate-approved legislation on Wednesday that gives $50 million to the homeless and also disapproves the pay raise.

But House Democratic Whip Tony Coelho of California said it was unclear whether that action would, in fact, repeal the pay raise because the vote would take place after the midnight Tuesday deadline.

Still Coelho said, "There's still going to be a vote" later to repeal the pay raise. "Don't create the impression that we've voided all opportunity" for a repeal, he told reporters.

House leaders deliberately delayed action on the pay raise by adjourning for the day in early afternoon. When Majority Leader Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, D-Mass., motioned for adjournment, opponents briefly called for a vote but lost 221-17.

The maneuver brought a firestorm of protest to an issue that is always a nightmare for lawmakers who want a pay raise but are fearful of the political consequences of voting for one.

Rep. Connie Mack, R-Fla., called the adjournment maneuver a cleverly designed smokescreen. "We've lost credibility" with the back-door move, he said.

"The House leadership acted like a thief in the night, skulking away with its ill-gotten gains," added Rep. Tom Petri, R-Wis.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader said the maneuver "added treachery to their arrogant and avaricious behavior" and warned that the public outcry would force Congress to relent.

In addition to escalating congressional pay to $89,560 from the current $7,660, substantial raises were in line for 3,000 high-ranking federal officials and judges.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, acknowledged that pay increases for the federal judiciary were a stickier issue because the Constitution forbids recision of a Judge's pay raise.

The Senate turned down the pay raises last week, leaving the politically sensitive issue squarely in the House's corner and raising the hackles of some representatives.

Rep. William Ford, D-Mich., said the senators were trying to "look like heroes and then run for home. That's how I feel about their ungentlemanship conduct."

Associated Press
PALM SPRINGS, Calif. -- Liberace lapsed into a coma Monday night and remained near death Tuesday at his desert home, his lawyer said.

"His pulse has gotten weaker, and his breathing has gotten more labored," attorney Joel Strote said late Tuesday outside the house during a news briefing Tuesday evening. "He can't swallow."

"He is comatose," Strote said. "He is very pale but obviously resting very comfortably. He's not in any pain and basically his family is here--his sister, his deceased brother's wife Laura, his sister's daughter and his mother."

Asked how long he might survive, Strote said: "It's hard to estimate, but obviously it's not going to be long."

"It's real touch and go," said his publicist, Denise Collier, by telephone from New York. She said Liberace suffers from anemia, emphysema and heart disease. A spokesman last week denied a published report that he had AIDS.

Strote said there were no plans to hospitalize Liberace because "there is really nothing that could be done for him in a hospital, and it was his desire to rest comfortably at home."
Responsible drinking must be allowed on campus

Mike Wilkins

While some students have placed blame solely on the administration's alcohol policy, the majority are willing to acknowledge that drinking and driving is an individual decision and people who go out to drink are going to have a decision to drive or be willing to pay the consequences. Even students who feel the alcohol policy is the reason for the drinking and driving problem are likely to admit that, alcohol policy or no alcohol policy, people who drink must be responsible for their own actions and have enough common sense not to drive drunk.

Although student reaction indicates most of us are willing to accept blame for the drunk driving problem on campus, reaction from members of the administration has been nearly positive. Associate Vice President for Residence Life John Goldrick says the alcohol policy is "not at all" to blame for the recent drunk driving problem, according to Friday's January 23 Observer.

The temptation to drink and drive does exist and it's furthered by a policy that has forced students to go off-campus to drink.

Donneshbury

The administration's reaction to last semester's drunk driving accidents is typical of the administration's reaction to the issue of drinking on campus. Members of the administration have worn blinders as they churned out policy upon policy, seemingly oblivious to the effect such policy would have on student life. Fr. Tyrone's remark that the University has no reaction to the drinking driving problem or the impact of the alcohol policy on the problem is just another example of the administration's "we sweep our problems under the rug." For that kind of unnatural life, years ago, the administration was awake enough to recognize an alcohol problem on campus, a problem that has been growing for some time. But rather than get tough with the people who abused alcohol, the administration more or less banned alcohol for the majority of students here. Although consumption of alcohol was allowed in some limited and unrealistic circumstances, the administration basically pushed Notre Dame's alcohol problem into the streets of South Bend.

Now we have this great alcohol policy and there's no more drunk students kicking holes in walls and there's no more guys trying to drink each other in dorm basements and there's so many groups of girls going from dorm to dorm to drink and there's no more disgusting smell on Saturday and Sunday morning. But the problem has been transferred. The alcohol policy was designed to correct one cause but in a number of different ways.

The answer is not simply to allow drinking the way it was for four or more years ago. The majority of students are willing to acknowledge that there was an alcohol problem on campus and that stricter rules on alcohol were certainly needed. But attempts to solve the alcohol policy has largely failed and have created new and more serious problems. We've tried the old policy and now a new policy is needed. Allowing drinking in a realistic but controlled atmosphere is needed. The administration should encourage moderation and help students learn to drink responsibly. Students who refuse to drink responsibly

Presidental hopefuls receive encouragement

Dear Editor:

They said it. They said it couldn't be done. We knew we wouldn't win. We didn't want to win. But it happened. Before we knew it we were the students, the body of students, the president and vice president. And we were shocked, scared real. But we lived through the first few weeks and things got better, much better. On February 17, elections will be held for a new president and vice president. This evening there is a mandatory meeting for possible candidates.

Now it's time for someone else to come out of the woodwork. Let's face it, if we can do the job, anyone can. All it takes is a little enthusiasm and creativity. We're going to be honest, you can't do everything. We had a lot of ideas that we just couldn't get pres-ident with, no matter how hard we tried. There are a lot of things that go on that nobody knows about, and nobody cares. But you have to do them. The key to this job is to keep things in perspective. You can't change the University overnight. Don't try. But you can change a few things. You can do small things. We weren't great. We were good. We did enough to affect a few people. Hopefully, we made some people smile.

It's a big job and it takes more people than ever before. You can make it fun or you can make it a drag. We had fun and we learned a lot. You can too. We wholeheartedly encourage everyone who is even thinking about running for office to do it. Get off your couch, dust off your crayons, and go out and give it a shot. Why not? It's free, it's fun, and even if you lose, people at parties will know your name. If you win, well that's your problem.

A look behind the news

MARK MEMEC

P icture this: A Notre Dame student, Danny Doran, is giving a tour of our beautiful campus to the Smith family, a group from a retirement home in Muskegon, and a man named Morty. Of course, this tour group is the only one that you can see the Knute Rockne Memorial and to your right is the ROTC building. As far as where all services of our country are represented...

"Welcome!"... "Johnny Smith asks as he points past the ROTC building to a small two-story building about with five radar dishes in its back yard, "It looks like Metropoles from the Transformers."

"That is WNDU," Ezekiel replies. The station serves two purposes. First, they are a commercial broadcasting firm and they must assume all of the responsibilities that accompany that title. Secondly, they must provide a learning environment for students wishing to begin a career in that field. This is their obligation they to Notre Dame. A student who helps fulfill this obligation is Harold Rekovian, vice president of WNDU, and professor of the telecommunication department at the University of Notre Dame. A select few of his students actually become interns at WNDU to help them get a head start in the business. But what about those of us who are interested in working in television and can't get an internship? What advice would we receive?

"Try to get an R.B.A. and make more money," said Mike Collins, co-anchor of the evening news. "Writing is extremely important. If you cannot express yourself someone else will do it for you. So that is one thing you must do well. Once you get started in this business, you have to be willing to work hard for promotion while until you start to move up in the business."

Collins is an intern who is running in the WNDU news spot.

"Writing is very important; it is one of the most important things in this job," he said to my astonishment. He looked at my apparent shock. "That's one of the common misconceptions about writing... that we just read the news, either off a paper or a teleprompter machine. Actually, every news anchor writes his own stories and does his own editing."

T here are some interviews that you just don't want to do. When presented with the rather curious assignment of interviewing a head anchor person Maureen McFadden, I was excited. But I had some reservations: the topic of the interview, "the importance of writing" seemed rather dull. I had never actually seen the WNDU news or McFadden.

"I had never heard about Maureen I was a little bit worried," I thought. But when I talked to her on the telephone, she sounded pleased that I was actually interested and the appointment was set.

"I found someone car parked in the WNDU guest spot, and I was perhaps a bit less com­monly involved within the glass covered building. McFadden was already 10 minutes late and thought of "Who does she think is" percolated slowly to the surface. Thoughts of "What does she look like?" followed. I continued to think, "Maureen, (I call her Maureen now) entered fully 15 minutes late, but she looked nothing like the Jean Harlow type I had pictured. She didn't even wear a fur coat or evening gown, subtle clues that success and popularity in the South Bend area hadn't gone to her head.

"After a somewhat delayed, yet polite introduction, I was welcomed... to the world of South Bend Broadcasting. We passed the lobby and the clean, modern-looking offices, up the guard­bar­stalled staircase and into the rather well­decorated conference room. True to my assignment, begin the interview and ask her about the importance of English writing in her field, that of a television anchor woman.

"Writing is very important; it is one of the most important things in this job," she said to my astonishment. She looked at my apparent shock. "That's one of the common misconceptions about writing... that we just read the news, either off a paper or a teleprompter machine. Actually, every news anchor writes his own stories and does his own editing."

"For "spot news" which is what we call WNDU-TV and our Woman Maui..."
Our station has mainly yuppie-all. Analysis had shown that seconds to catch what the easy for them as possible. They don't get to read the copy, and they probably don't get to play back the show or segment they missed. We just try to make it easy for them as possible. We aren't aiming at the children; our audience is 18 and over.

Speaking of public image, I thought it about time to ask her about her person on the screen. "The physical is important, of course, because everybody likes to have an attractive person talk to them, but no one will curl up and die if he finds out the next day that a hair was out of place. I have to wear heavy makeup on the set because the lights bleach out skin tones, but I apply everything myself. There are no makeup rooms, or anything like that."

Thinking of the dressing room analogy, I asked her if she didn't feel like an actress while on camera at times. Maureen just laughed. "I really wish I were more of an actress. I took only one acting class, an Intro, at Saint Mary's when I was there. It would be easier for me on camera if I could remove myself from myself, but I can't. It's funny, I think I am more nervous now to go on the air than I was when I started. Then it was nonexistent, now I know how many, many things can go wrong while I'm up there. It's easier for me to speak in front of a crowd than in front of the camera. I'm more comfortable with real people."

When asked which classes she had taken during her four years at Saint Mary's to prepare for her job at WMGM, Maureen had to think. "I was a speech major when I graduated, so I'm sure I took things like Public Speaking and Oral Interp., with Peg Ballew, if I can remember. I also took a lot of English and writing classes. I really enjoyed taking those, I know I took a journalism class as well, probably newswriting. I generally took a lot of liberal arts courses, though."

I checked my watch. It was 4 pm, and I knew she had to start on her long day's work of writing. So I asked my last question on the official list, and the second last question on my mind. "What advice do you have for me, or for anyone else who would like to break into the business?"

"Take as many writing courses as you can," she said immediately. "Write. Read a lot. Take creative writing classes because it can be very important when you have to pull something catchy out of your head." She smiled at me, and I felt almost ashamed to ask my last question, but I knew my friends would kill me if I didn't. She laughed as she led me back through the studios and to the door.

"To tell your boyfriend and the other guys at Almanil that I don't color my hair. My husband and I just went on a short vacation in Florida, and the sun bleached it out. It's funny how people pay attention to those sort of details."

It's up, it's now and it's '80s. It's the social alternative for Winter 87. Yes, sports fans—its broomball. And not the version played on ice by seven foot muscle-bound and skilled sadists playing a dog eating dog world of TOURNAMENT PLAY. Surprise! This great fun is all sponsored by your friendly neighborhood SAB. Yes, folks, it's Winterfest time once again, those two short weeks when we try to battle the February blues and beer better.

"Now, don't panic. We're not like talking (gasps)..." EXERCISE, y'know? Well, okay, you may have to expand your daily regimens above and beyond the call of the beer can or the Jeopardy/Million Dollar, Chance of a Lifetime (that half-hour channel change can be just agony.). "Broomball is just hockey in the snow," explained tournament co-chairman Mike Arnold. "All you need is a ball and a broom to play and we'll give you all that. Just bring your team of five and have fun. Covered teams are, of course, encouraged."

Games are scheduled to last about half an hour so frigid won't be a problem either. The rules for the game are few. The tournament begins Monday, Feb. 9, and continues to Saturday, Feb. 16, in which all teams haven't been eliminated by then. "We can't let the game get too rough, and there is no kicking the ball, but just about everything else is allowed," said Arnold.

"We wanted something different to do in the snow since we do have to live with it, so we figured we'd have this tournament and let people have a little snow break," added co-chairman Christian Barrett.

To top it all off, how about a little fame, fortune, and thrill of victory? I know, you'll just take fortune, but SAB can't provide the beverage money; however it does provide food and juices.

"Besides the fact that I'll be a blast, we don't expect you to make a fool out of yourself for nothing. So we have prizes for the top couple of winners like a pizza party at Barnaby's or gift certificates to The Cellar," said Arnold. SAB Special Events Commissioner Erik Timpenman thinks Broomball can become a big part of Winterfest.

"The tournament is starting out small-scale now but we would like it to become an annual, a tradition like Bookstore Basketball," he explained.

Timpenman also highlights some other up-and-coming Winterfest events. "Winterfest kicks off with a bash Friday night at Theodore's with The Bottom Line. There is also a Bendix Woods trip, a cross-country ski race, a dorm snow-sculpture contest, and a Multiple Sclerosis Valentine's Day Dance planned—wth awards for most of them." Winterfest is just for fun. Don't take it seriously and go out and have a good time," adds Timpenman.

So you're sold on broomball and want to know where to sign up? Well, just head on up to the SAB offices on the second floor of Lafortune between 9:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. with your creative team name and sign on the dotted line. The deadline for team signups is Thursday, Feb. 5, so hurry and get off that couch.

If you have any earth-shattering questions or are feeling a ambitious and want to help out, just give Eric or Mike a call at 1155 or 239-7757 and they'll do their best to help you out.

any maintenance workers cut­ turn into the justillant Notre Dame players cutting down the nets, a few feet above the mayhem on the floor.

The fact is, this year's season was the type for the front pages of Notre Dame history with the upset over North Carolina. They erased the nightmare of blowing an 11-point lead while succumbing to UCLA's pressure defense and the disintegration of not being able to control the game for one night. It was a big night for Notre Dame to overcome West Virginia. This team, seemingly dragging to the floor, has shown some touch of mediocrity, has skinned the top dog. And nobody will be able to take that away from them on the day because of the big night.

But the team must really tune its attention forward to make the big win as beneficial for them as possible. They need to forget the glory of their day on the stage. I, on the other hand, am just a fan. And I'm going to savoir for a while.
Knight fights back against council criticism by putting his nose in council flower debate

Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Indiana Coach Bob Knight is offering his help in resolving a Faculty Council debate on flowers. He says it’s his way of showing his appreciation for the council’s interest in basketball.

Knight, referring to the council’s recent condemnation of verbal and physical abuse of athletes by coaches, sarcastically said he wasn’t upset with the intrusion into his domain.

And in his weekly television show on Sunday, Knight referred to a bouquet of red roses placed between him and host Chuck Marlowe, telling viewers to be sure not to miss the third segment of his show when he would explain the signification of the flowers.

When the segment of the show arrived, Knight began: “I just kind of figured that the taxpayers of Indiana have paid my salary to coach basketball, and I’ve not gotten into teaching geometry, or physics, or philosophy or anything else,” he said. “I’ve just tried to stick to basketball.

“To me, I’m not at all upset with that. Knowing how much time I have to put into teaching basketball, for those professors to take time away from their classrooms and their students, to devote it to basketball, just pleases me tremendously.

“I’ve got a suggestion. Since our (university) colors are red and white and everybody likes those colors, why not roses? What’s more emblematic of America than roses.”

Knight urged all those who like roses and the idea of red and white roses instead of petunias or daffodils, write a notation to the Bloomington Faculty Council, simply care of Indiana University, Bloomington, Indiana.

SMC sets new goal for itself after 65-56 win over St. Fran

By MARISA A KOSLA Sports Writer

After defeating league rival St. Francis, 65-56, Saturday at the Angela Athletic Facility, the Saint Mary’s basketball team has set a new goal. For the win Saturday pushed the Belles record on the season to 5-3 and moved them one step closer to District competition.

“The team has really pulled together,” said Saint Mary’s head coach Marvin Wood. “After this weekend’s big win the squad is treating every game like a playoff game.”

The keys to the victory over St. Francis came from an aggressive offense led by freshman Julie Radke, who posted 17 points. Junior Tammye Radke, meanwhile, also chimed in with 11 points while Rachel Bir added 10 points.

The Belles attribute their recent success to a much greater utilization of their strengths. A balanced offense, coupled with intense rebounding, has placed the team at the top of the NAIA.

The squad, however, realizes their weakness in the area of consistancy, and knows it must maintain an unrelenting intensity if it is to reach its new goal of going to Districts.

“We are the talk of the district,” noted Wood, “because we have beaten some of the best teams while falling to other opponents.”

Another thing Wood and his Belles squad must have if they are going to play in the postseason is in the continued contributions of players such as senior Kim Panteleiers, junior Stephanie Duke, and sophomore Jennifer Harte, each of whom complements the Radke sisters and Bir on the court.

The Belles as a team, meanwhile, will get the opportunity to move another step closer to their new goal when they take on Taylor University Saturday at 1 p.m. at the Angela Athletic Facility.

NVA Olympiad brings people out to compete for Special Olympics

By THERESA KELLY Sports Writer

While the real Olympic Games kick off in Atlanta, Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s students will be able to participate in their own Late Night Olympics, Friday, February 13 from 9 p.m. to 4 a.m. in the ACC.

Sponsored by Non-Varsity Athletics to benefit the St. Joseph County Special Olympics, the Late Night Olympics will pit 12 teams of combined dorms against each other in a large Olympic-style sports competition. In addition, there will be a Not-Quite-So-Olympic Games for those who decide to just drop in.

“We’re looking for each team to register and participate in every event,” said Sally Derengoski, Assistant Director of NVA.

The Olympic sports will include a co-rec obstacle course, broomball, and innertube water polo. Also planned are water lacrosse and Nerf football for men, as well as tournaments for men and women in volleyball, indoor soccer, basketball, and racquetball.

The teams will be made up of Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s dorms. Each team antest $100, and earns points for participating in as well as winning events. The overall points winner and St. Joseph County Special Olympics will split the proceeds from the event. The grand prize will be awarded and distributed among the two or three halls of the winning team. Donations to the Special Olympics will be accepted.

Students interested in participating in the Olympic sports should contact their dorm representative. The deadline for registration is Monday, February 9.

In addition to the Olympic events, the Not-Quite-So-Olympic Games also will be held. These games will include such sports as darts, put-put, Nerf basketball, pool, and a celebrity dunk tank.

A Soc Hop will be held by WVFI and the Student Activities Board in the Monogram Room, while University Food Services will sponsor an Olympic Village Cafe on the main concourse.

Derengoski claims the key to the Late Night Olympics is the advanced registration.

“I have no doubt that people will be interested and excited,” she said. “They have to contact their dorm reps for all the information.”

“We have all the halls committed, with great support from the Hall President’s Council,” she added, noting that no dorm events have been planned that would conflict with the Late Night Olympics. The event will use nearly every facility in the ACC, including the ice rink, fieldhouse, and pools.

“We have so much planned, this should go over big,” said Derengoski, who also hopes this will become an annual event. “We are fortunate to have so many people interested in making it a success.”

People who fail to sign up for the Olympic sports will not be left out. The Not-Quite-So-Olympic events, the dance, and other events are planned for drop-ins.

The 12 teams taking part in the Olympic competition, meanwhile, will be constituted in the following manner: Pangborn, Carroll, Farley, Fisher, Howard, Laetsch, St. Ed’s, Sorin, Lyons, Alumni, Augusta/McCandless, Cavanaugh, Holy Cross, Breen-Phillips, Dillen/Regina, Flanner/Walsh, Grace/Ballin, Keenan, Cross/SCMC, Morisseys/Pasquerilla East, Stanford/Lewis, and Zahm LeMans.

LaSalle's starting five is rounded out by sophomore Craig Contil who, despite standing only 6-4, is averaging close to 10 points a game. These five have started every game for the Explorers. The attack is balanced, with Legler having the highest scoring average (19.5 ppg.) and the playmaker Tarr having the lowest average (9.1 ppg.).

With an injury to center-forward Eric Lee, the Explorers use only two players off the bench. Forward Ron Barnes averages 4.2 rebounds a game, while sophomore guard Len Robinson, a starter last season, contributes 3.1 points a game.

LaSalle, however, will have to deal with a problem many Irish opponents have had to deal with this season—a stingy defense. While the Explorers average 76.5 points per game, the Irish are holding opponents to an average of only 59 points a contest.

IRISH ITEMS—LaSalle is 0-7 against Notre Dame in the ACC. Approximately 100 tickets for tonight's game, returned by LaSalle, are available at the ACC Gate 10 ticket window.

LaSalle tied a game after starting the campaign on a blistering pace. It was also the first time the Broncos have been held to less than 60 points all season.

Bunsek and Botham were not to be denied late in the game. "This was a good game for both Heidi and Sandy, and that's very important for us," DiStasi said. "(Western Michigan) knew we were looking inside and they really packed it down. Our ball movement made it so that some guys would open up, and the girls found them. It's a real plus to see both of them playing well at the same time."

The Irish led by as much as 12 points early in the second half after poor shooting (39 percent) plagued Western Michigan in the first 20 minutes, but the Broncos' speed began to pay off with just over 10 minutes to play.

Some nifty inside moves by leading Bronco scorer Shannon Pickell (17 points) brought Western Michigan closer and closer, and a Tracy Wells feed to Alletta Miller off a fast break with slightly less than eight minutes to play gave the visitors their only lead of the game at 55-51.

A pair of Botham fade-aways from the baseline put Notre Dame back on top, however, and some key rebounding and inside play down the stretch locked up the win for the Irish, their second in a row.

"One crucial thing that we've got to work on is our rebounding," said DiStasi, who said the Irish have to work on numbers somewhere, and that rebounding was a good place to do it. "We've been having the guards hit the boards a lot more recently and it worked pretty well tonight."

So well, in fact, that Gavin collected a personal-best eight rebounds in the game, while Toney added six.

For Western Michigan, last night's loss was its third in a row after starting the campaign on a blistering pace. It was also the first time the Broncos have been held to less than 60 points all season.

The Irish will look to make it three in a row on Saturday when they face a quick Miami (Fla.) team at 1 p.m. at the ACC Gate 10 ticket window.

Houston Rockets forward Ralph Sampson (left), shown here battling Cleveland's Scooter McRae in a game earlier this season, suffered a knee injury in last night's 107-105 Rocket loss to the Denver Nuggets. Sampson is expected to be out at least six weeks.

LaSalle hoping for big ND letdown as teams prepare to battle tonight

By PETE GEGEN Assistant Sports Editor

Here's the picture. The Irish are just off one of the biggest wins in Notre Dame basketball history. The players have been watching tapes of the NBC coverage. Banners are flying from dorm windows. Fans are still congratulating the players on the victory.

Meanwhile, LaSalle is in town preparing for tonight's 7:30 contest at the ACC. The Explorers have to be hoping for the one thing which usually follows big victories—an Irish letdown.

"We have to put that all behind us," said Irish forward Mark Stevenson. "They're very aggressive and scrappy—a senior team. When it was crunch time, they came out and crunched.

"It's frightening when a team throws a press on you—especially a successful one—but I thought Didi (sophomore Dondra Toney) and Mary (junior Mary Gavin) really controlled the game when they had to.""--------

Gavin dished out 11 assists and added 11 points in the game, while Toney chipped in for nine points and set up six Notre Dame buckets.

But last night's messengers of the recent emergence of the Irish were spreading the word in the paint. Heidi Buneck, a 6-4 sophomore, and 6-2 junior Sandy Botham poured in 19 and 13 points, respectively, and were both in double figures on the boards with 11 and 10, respectively.

Even against the packed-down zone of the Broncos, see BRONCOS, page 14

LaSalle definitely is not a team to be taken lightly. The Explorers are 11-9, including a 93-86 win over Villanova. And perhaps even more impressive, they lost narrowly to both North Carolina, 79-72, and DePaul, 58-54.

"I really like the way LaSalle plays," said Irish head coach Digger Phelps. "They're scrappy and they hustle, and they really impressed me the way they gave North Carolina fits.

The Explorers boast one of the hottest freshman players in the country. Forward Lionel Simmons is the leading rookie scorer in the country with an 18.6 points-per-game average.

The former Philadelphia high school player of the year also grabs 9.7 rebounds a game.

"Lionel Simmons is one of the most impressive freshmen I've seen this year," said Phelps. "He's obviously had a huge impact on their team from a scoring and rebounding standpoint, and he really gives them the kind of force you need on the boards."

LaSalle also has experience in the form of 6-7 senior forward Larry Koretai and 6-4 junior guard Tim Legler. Combined with 6-1 junior guard Rich Tarr, the trio form a serious threat from three-point range, having made 40.3 percent of their shots.

Players must forget, but do we have to?

By MARTY STRASEN Assistant Sports Editor

Attention, all who are expecting a letdown tonight. You won't get one. Notre Dame head coach Mary DePaul is such a good coach that you would run out of fingers and toes if you had to count the number of offers Brown has gotten from other basketball teams, both pro and college. But if Sean Connor could launch a few three-pointers like he did Sunday against the Tar Heels . . .

"I thought Didi (sophomore Dondra Toney) and Mary (junior Mary Gavin) really controlled the game when they had to.""--------

see LASALLE, page 14

Beating the top-ranked team in the nation is certainly cause for celebration, but it's time to get on with business. It was another historic moment in Notre Dame history, showing that Digger Phelps, the ACC and No. 1 teams mix no better than drinking and driving. The main concern now, however, lies in the remainder of the schedule.

Notre Dame begins a crucial stretch in the schedule, one that will determine which post-season tournament it will participate in. LaSalle provides the first obstacle tonight, and the Irish will be somewhere above human and a notch below saintly if they avoid a letdown. The Explorers will certainly be searching for an upset, but if Gary Voros can continue rebounding and scoring like he did against North Carolina . . .

Knock it off. That game is over. It's time to move on. Well, going against Vanderbilt will be tough on the road, seeing as they are currently 7-2 at home, and they have beatem Indiana, something the Irish couldn't do. Kansas will be a chore. Danny Manning and the Jayhawks are ranked 11th in this week's AP poll and Allen Field House does not treat visitors with much respect. And Larry Brown is such a good coach that you would run out of fingers and toes if you had to count the number of offers Brown has gotten from other basketball teams, both pro and college. But if Sean Connor could launch a few three-pointers like he did Sunday against the Tar Heels . . .

Stop it. Victories in these upcoming games would put just as big a marker in the "W" column as the North Carolina win did, even if none could approach its appeal with the NCAA tournament selection committee. A win's a win, right?

And in less than two weeks, those Devils clad in blue from Duke will visit the ACC, to renew the respect of their ACC (Atlantic Coast Conference). They have survived the loss of two NBA first-round draft picks, Johnny Dawkins and Mark Alarie, quite nicely. Duke is ranked 16th by the AP, and it knows all about noisy crowds. Another near-spotless game will be required from the Irish to upset the Blue Devils, but they definitely can do it. Especially if David Rivers can take control in the final minutes like Sunday when he . . .

Oh, who am I trying to kid? I can't help it if I can't get that upset off my mind. If I tried to watch the CBS Chalkboard explain anything right now, the lines would turn into streams of toilet paper like those that bombarded the floor following the first basket of Sunday's game. If I would see a prison riot on television, it would turn into the masses of students on the floor after the game in my mind. And
