Scholastic must stop appeals before publication resumes

By REGIS COCCIA
Assistant Saint Mary's Editor

Scholastic will not be allowed to publish until it stops appealing the decision to suspend the magazine, Student Activities Director Joseph Cassidy said Tuesday night.

"When (Scholastic) gets to a point where they can discontinue appeals, they can start working with (the Student Activities Office) to get a compromise," Cassidy said.

"After both sides are clear on the perception (of how Scholastic should operate), things can go on running again," he said. "It was real clear to me that everyone had a different perception of how Scholastic was operating," said Cassidy.

Mabler Mouasher, editor of the Scholastic, said: "We've started a dialogue at the Office of Student Affairs with (Assistant Vice President for Student Services) Father Peter Rocca and (Assistant Vice President for Student Affairs) Sister Jean Lenz.

"We're at a sensitive point in the dialogue," Mouasher said. "More detailed commentary would not be in the best interest of Scholastic," he said.

"We're trying to get the thing resolved. I don't want to hurt the magazine or say anything that would affect the magazine in an adverse way," he said.

Cassidy said Mouasher met Tuesday with Lenz and Rocca to continue the appeals process. "We're waiting for (Rocca's) decision," he said. Cassidy added that the appeals decision is up to the Office of Student Affairs.

Scholarship editor meets with HPC

Scholar Editor Maher Mouasher, seeking support from the Hall Presidents' Council for the reinstatement of recently suspended Scholastic magazine, confronted Director of Student Activities Joseph Cassidy at the council's Tuesday night meeting.

"All we ask from the HPC," Mouasher said, "is that they support a Scholastic free of censorship such that there can be open discussion.

However, the HPC decided not to vote on support for Scholastic until definite proposals regarding its editorial status have been worked out between Scholastic's editorial board and the Office of Student Activities.

Cahill began the discussion by asking for a clarification of Scholastic's editorial status relative to other student publications such as The Observer.

Cassidy said that his office is "responsible for what happens in the Scholastic," Juggler and Dome. He said The Observer is "not Catholic to benefit from our religious beliefs, so untied," he said. "It was real clear to me that everyone had a different perception of how Scholastic was operating," said Cassidy.

Cassidy added that the appeals decision is up to the Office of Student Affairs.

Saint Mary's professor criticizes SMC's 'lily-white' composition

By MARILYN BENCHIK
Assistant Saint Mary's Editor

Answering the question "If you were giving your last lecture, what would your final message to the world be?" Dr. David Pilgrim, assistant professor of sociology at Saint Mary's College, spoke Tuesday at the first of the Last Lecture Series.

Pilgrim in his lecture studied the question, Why is Saint Mary's College lily-white? He first pointed out that there are "only a handful of black administrators, faculty members, and students" on campus.

"There have been, and are, so few blacks here that it makes any statistical analysis impossible," he said.

He explained, other colleges, some very similar to Saint Mary's, have removed the editors (of their publications) to continue the appeals process. They are run on money that comes from the student body, Pilgrim said.

I have talked to recruiters who admit they make no effort to visit schools with large enrollments of black Catholics," he said.

Another excuse Pilgrim has experienced is "blacks are too poor to attend Saint Mary's College. He said there is a growing and sizeable middle class.

"I'd like to ask one question of everybody," Reagan said to reporters and to the business group. "Everybody that can remember what they were doing on August 8, 1983, raise your hands."

lines every weekend all the way down the stairs."

"A lot of Saint Mary's students show up," said Assistant Manager Tom Utter. "We found that a big draw is free food," Bink added. "Mostly freshmen and sophomores go, especially freshmen because they need a place to go," said Utter. "But I have programmed things for upperclassmen." Bink said, "We used to get a lot of upperclassmen between two and three a.m., after the bars closed."

But after damage to the club on a weekend night, Student Activities began closing the club at 2 a.m. Utter said. Bink explained that although the club is under the direction of Student Activities, it is not financially supported by the Student Activity fee paid by students.

She said the name Theodore's was circulated around campus for advertising two years before the club opened. "We got the name Theodore's—we were just joking around really—because this is (University President) Father Ted's (Hesburgh) last year. No one took it seriously at first, but it caught on. He thought it was pretty funny," Bink said.

Upcoming events at Theodore's include a Mardi Gras Ball on Feb. 27 and the "Nazi competition" on March 7, according to Utter.

In other business, Lisa Lawler, commissioner for traditional events, previewed events planned for An Tostal. She said there are plans for the annual picnic, a "Dating Game," a "Mr. Campus" contest, a "Timbuk 2" concert, and a canoe race on Lake Marion.

Lawmakers said special congressional panels investigating the affair may vote as early as Thursday to grant immunity from prosecution to several individuals believed able to shed light on what happened.

"Fawn Hall, North's former secretary, who has been reported as telling Walsh's investigators that she destroyed documents, showed up for a brief photo session for news photographers at her lawyer's office, smilingly posing but refusing to comment on the case."

"Former President Gerald Ford, referring to the scandal that brought down President Richard Nixon and made Ford president, said at a Fort Wayne, Ind., appearance that "this crisis is not comparable to Watergate (and) I hope and trust it doesn't reach the stage Watergate did."

"Former Reagan aide Robert McFarlane checked out Bethesda Naval Hospital, a研究所 after a drug overdose that police called a suicide attempt. McFarlane's lawyer, Leonard Garment, said he would "go back to work and resume a normal life as much as the various investigations will allow.""

McFarlane, who was Reagan's national security adviser from 1983 through December 1985, has testified that the president approved the 1985 arms shipment to Iran.

For three months, the commission headed by former Sen. John Tower has been seeking to learn, among other things, the precise nature of Reagan's role in the initial stages of the program of secret arms sales.

Reagan was questioned Tuesday in light of a published report in The New York Times. That report said Reagan's inability to state with certainty his role in the 1985 Israeli shipment of U.S. arms to Iran's allies caused things for commission members trying to sort out conflicting accounts.

It was confirmed independently by Reagan that his decision to authorize the Aug. 30, 1985 shipment.

Elsewhere in Washington, House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, asked to comment on the Times report of Reagan's uncertainty, said, "Well, that's an appalling thing."

Asked if he believed it possible someone could have forgotten such a decision, he said, "I find it believable that someone might have forgotten, and if the president has a lot on his mind, maybe he did forget."
Professor says racism not to blame for problems plaguing minorities

By JOHN KELLY

Walter E. Williams, professor of economics at George Mason University, spoke to a near capacity crowd in the Cushing Auditorium Tuesday afternoon highlighting economic problems in minority communities in a lecture titled "Does racism explain everything?"

"There is a conflict of visions on how the world operates," said Williams. "I recognize that discrimination exists."

He said discrimination commonly does not lead to adverse effects on the achievements of those discriminated against. He cited the historical examples of the Japanese and Jews who have survived intense racism to become some of the most prosperous groups in the United States.

The issue is not to justify or minimize discrimination. The point is that if discrimination does not explain everything, then instead of putting your resources into fighting discrimination maybe there is a greater payoff in focusing your resources in other directions," said Williams.

Williams spoke "in a challenge to the conventional wisdom." He characterized the civil rights vision as resting on two assumptions, that "Statistical disparities measure discrimination, and statistical differences would not arise and persist without discrimination."

"There are some other differences that explain income differences among different groups that have nothing to do with discrimination," said Williams.

He said the statistical disparity in median incomes between blacks and whites is primarily due to the difference in median age of the two groups.

"If you keep the age group under 46 and control income relevant variables then make the comparison, then you have an 8 percent unexplained variation. I doubt whether that 8 percent can be called racism," Williams said.

He added, "One of the most devastating things to the economic welfare of the black community is crime. A lot of people say it is caused by discrimination; that is why there is so much disorder. Black people were more secure in their neighborhoods in times when there was much more discrimination in the United States."

Pietrzak ticket prevails in SMC junior class run-off

By MARGIE KESTEN

Saint Mary's Editor

The Pietrzak ticket of Rose Pietrzak, Anne Palamara, Barb Guilfoil and Katy Burns won Tuesday's second run-off election for Saint Mary's junior class president, vice president, treasurer and secretary, respectively.

The Pietrzak ticket won 53 percent of the votes, while the competing ticket of Christy Wolfe, Michelle Agostino, Tera Sternitzke and Lisa LaMalfa captured 46 percent of the vote.

Speaking for her ticket, Pietrzak said, "We would like to thank our class for their continued support. Our goal is to get everyone involved next year and we think their eagerness throughout the election shows a great deal of promise."

According to Elections Commissioner Sandy Cerimele, 51 percent of the sophomore class turned out to vote as compared to 54 percent voting in the first election and 59 percent voting in the second election.

The reason is that it is a high voter turnout in spite of the two run-off elections is because of the campaigns themselves, each ticket had great ideas and also because of Jeannie Heller's organization has increased student awareness and participation tremendously," Cerimele said.

Agostino, the opposing ticket's candidate for vice president commented on the election. "I thought it was a very well planned and fair election." Both tickets put forth an effort, she said adding, "We were just excited with a winner-no matter who."
know what's going in, how can we be responsible? The University wants to make sure this publication is acting in a manner appropriate for this model," he said.

"We cannot function as a truly student publication if there is to be prior censorship. We want to be responsible for what we print," he added. "Our first responsibility is toward our editorial integrity."

Cassidy said he could not guess how long Scholastic would be suspended but said, "We're as anxious to get it cleared up as much as Scholastic."

In another business, the HPC announced that it will distribute a letter to student concerning student drinking, the Buzz Bus and the designated driver program.

Chairman of the Charity Ball Lisa Jochum asked each dorm to donate $100. She said the dance will feature the band, "The Law."

Cassidy added that the Student Activities Office acts as publisher of both Scholastic and the Jugger, "Like any publisher, we want to be informed of what is going to be in it. When the picture came out, we had no idea it was going to come out," Cassidy said.

"Scholastic did feel that they had the right to print the picture. The University looked at it and felt they didn't. The two groups have to get together and look at this," he said. "They are not allowed to publish any form of publication."

"(Scholastic) gets to determine how far they want to carry it out. As long as they're held up in appeals, the longer they're not going to be able to publish," Cassidy said.

"Why does any student come here? Pilgrim said. "Why would a black student come here?" Pilgrim said.

"I have some smart students, and I have some students who are not committed to scholarship. The same would be true of any blacks we admitted," he said.

He also discussed the administrative contention that "our students will mistreat them." Pilgrim admitted there are students with prejudices, but "most young people are malleable; they can be taught to be prejudiced or open-minded."

Pilgrim said our students are denied one of the greatest joys of college in interacting with people from diverse backgrounds. "The world does not look like a Saint Mary's classroom, therefore we are cheating our students."

He also said administrators claim that, "blacks nationwide are not attending college as much" and "there aren't any black faculty to serve as role models."

In answer to the first problem, Pilgrim admitted there was an upward trend in black student enrollment, but "there are still thousands of blacks who would consider coming to Saint Mary's, if our house was in order."

Regarding the lack of black faculty, Pilgrim admitted this is true, but it is not the black student's fault. He said there should be at least three black faculty members. "The administration must commit itself to hiring black faculty," Pilgrim listed proposals he said the administration needs to implement in order to integrate Saint Mary's.

Future telegram serves as warning to leaders

Yesterday, I received a telegram. It was sent by Prescilla Hall, Prescilla and I dated some last year when I was a senior at Notre Dame. The telegram said: Tragedy struck Notre Dame last week. Stud Sneath committed suicide. I know not why. I shall write again soon. All my love, Prescilla.

Bruce Lohman

So here I sit wondering why did Stud kill himself? I can’t answer this question, either. But, I chose to write for another reason. To share with you what I have learned from Stud.

Stud and I never got along. We had different views on almost everything. But, more fundamentally, I think that we had different approaches to life. I try to ask positive questions. When difficulties arise, I always try to look forward rather than backward. How can I ever come this problem? How can I improve this situation?

Stud, in contrast, was always pessimistic. He always thought of himself as a student leader. In the end, that question is one of the least important.

Stud, however, knew for sure that he was a campus leader. The campus leader, in fact. His decisions were his own and his approval rate was 100%. His opinions were resolutions. He was actually quite funny at first. Soon, he became simply a nuisance.

Seldom did Stud ever come up with an answer to the job, a student leader can be trusted. Stud was unable to come to terms, precisely those limitations with which he might have had about parading around in his unbashed nakedness. That would have been the ultimate sacrifice for a student leader.

To enjoy only oneself, I believe, is impossible. Stud came as close to living this impossibility as anyone whom I have ever met. Yet, in the end, it was he who Stud disliked the most. Unable to cope with the demands of student leadership, which he might have had about parading around in his unbashed nakedness. That would have been the ultimate sacrifice for a student leader.

I never much wanted to be like Stud. With his different... Rather, he did precisely those limitations with which Stud was unable to come to terms, whose existence a student leader needs to recognize immediately. By doing so, there will be greater regulation of the jobs in order to make sure that each employee is looking for employment in the private sector while filling a government-subsidized job.

It seems that this funny little word has been in the news an awful lot lately. Many highly respected doctors are calling condom ads the most effective way to stop AIDS. Just the mention of this funny little word sends them off the deep end. Well for these people, I will not listen to such talk.

The mention of one funny little word (not even a profane one) sends them off the deep end. Well for these people, I will not listen to such talk.

This unexpected openness and forceful manner of the author of the "Letter" an elderly scientist who was seven seconds too late but still continues to cling to an underlying hope in the survival of the human race. In the dream, he sees himself inextricably bound to a railroad track. Bearing down upon him with greater presence and velocity is a huge locomotive. His last fleeting glimpse before a startling awareness is of himself, hands on the throttle, sitting in the engineer's seat. He interprets the implication of his society's complicity in its own destruction, making specific reference to Soviet society and even its politicians.

Secondly, we should begin an open examination of our endowment investments. President Dwight D. Eisenhower recognized that "Every gun that is made, every warship launched, every rocket fired signifies in the final sense, a theft from those who hunger and are not fed, those who are cold and are not clothed." He identified the major instument of this theft as the "Iron Triangle" formed by the U.S. military-industrial complex. It is this corporate political web that enrages us in the spell. Its fires are fed by capitalistic economic interests, propagated in such companies as General Electric, General Dynamics, Boeing, Lockheed, Honeywell, Texas Instruments and their many hidden subsidiaries. Again, this is not an easy task for investment in the spell, which binds and blinds humanity, have been profitable.

Finally, we should refuse to continue to train and encourage our students to tend the fires of destruction through our ROTC programs and monumental glorification of the military. Herein lies perhaps the greatest price to be paid in breaking the spell for it would put us in propitious opposition to the dominant trends of American society. The American tradition is very familiar with the concept of "foolish prophets" must bear.

Nonetheless, no moment could be more timely for us to embark on such a course. For, unfortunately, in our society courageous talk unfulfilled by similarly courageous action is labeled as rhetoric or charged with hypocrisy. We can help legitimize his prophetic stance and strengthen his voice by choosing, for humanity, to take the first steps in breaking the spell.

Pretending to be a Coach of the Year, Dallas Consegal has finally shown some improvement from his freshman season, after two seasons where his intensity was frequently AWOL. With the rest of the players filling roles ad, miraculously these Demons have made all but one of their opponents blue thus far.

The Irish, on the other hand, have made concession stands a big money-maker at every arena they play by keeping every fan until the game’s end. They have survived enough buzzer-beaters to make Head Coach Digger Phelps go through his whole wardrobe.

But it is doubtful that Phelps minds a little thread ripping in return for the performance he has received from this year’s edition.

With a few disappointments aside, the West Virginia yawner and UCLA fiasco come to mind, Phelps finds it hard to suppress his happiness with his team this year.

With both teams headed straight for the NCAA Tournament, there seems to be little at stake. But these two almost-conference foes have a good rivalry going and have had some very memorable clashes in the recent past. Besides, Phelps has already assured that it will be another classic. Another upset at the ACC? Weren’t wins over Duke and North Carolina too much to ask for already? Under normal circumstances, I would say so.

But when the Amateur Athlete of the Year competes in something called the heptathlon, these obviously aren’t normal circumstances.

Ellery chooses ND

Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Ky. - Washington County High School basketball standout Kevin Ellery, who is among the state's leading scorers this season and a candidate for Mr. Basketball, verbally committed to Notre Dame on Tuesday.

Ellery, however, cannot sign a national letter-of-intent until April 8.

Ellery said that after visiting the Notre Dame campus in South Bend, Ind., earlier this month, he decided playing for the Fighting Irish would be the right move.

"I feel it's the best place for me," Ellery said. "I think I can play there."

He was also recruited by Georgia, Auburn, Western Kentucky, Eastern Kentucky and Morehead State.

Ellery, a 6-foot-5, 230-pound forward, has averaged 29.8 points and 9.5 rebounds per game this season in leading Washington County to a 30-4 record, scoring at least 30 points in each of those games.

He has scored in double figures in 84 of the 85 varsity games he has started since his sophomore year, including the last 58 in a row.

Ellery said now that he has committed, he can concentrate on trying to lead Washington County to the state basketball tournament next month.

Pasquerilla East stays on top as IH basketball nears finals By KEVIN MCCORMACK Sports Writer

The playoffs have not yet begun for the women's interhall basketball league, but with only one more round of games remaining in the regular season, action has heated up to post-season levels. Leading the pack all season has been Pasquerilla East, who going into Thursday night's final regular season contest, boast an undefeated season thus far. On Monday night at the ACC, P.E. played once-beaten Farley A and ran away with a 49-22 victory. Things didn't go exactly as planned, however, at least in the beginning. "We got behind early, 10-3," explained P.E. captain Regina Richter, who finished with 12 points, "and we also knew that Farley was going to be one of the toughest games of the season. When we were still down by one at the half we knew we had to regroup." In the third quarter, however, P.E. went on an early 8-0 run and never looked back. In the fourth quarter, P.E. broke open a close game and cruised to a relatively easy 16-point victory. In another key women's interhall contest on Monday night, Breen-Phillips poor second-half performance doomed them to a 32-21 loss at the hands of Lyons. B.P. got out to a 13-8 lead at halftime, but went absolutely cold in the third quarter, scoring no points. In the fourth, B.P. was able to manage eight, but it was too little too late. Missing from that game for B.P., however, was leading scorer and rebounder Anne Curoe. Rounding out the action, Farley B defeated Badin 56-46 in a high-scoring affair, while Lewis A defeated Lewis B in a rout, 44-11. On Thursday, the key game of the night will be Lewis, defending interhall champion, against Lyons. The winner will apparently join B.P., P.E., and Farley in the playoff rounds beginning on March 1st. Applications for the 1987-1988 Assistant Managers of the Alumni-Senior Club can be picked up in the Student Activities Office. Job descriptions are displayed in the Student Activities Office.

The Irish, in improving their record to 9-15 on the season, played one of their best games of the season, using their advantages and following their game plan to perfection.

Two quick baskets by Diondra Toney and Annie Schwartz put the Irish up 4-0, and head coach Mary DiStanislao's team never looked back. Every Notre Dame starter had scored by the time just over five minutes had elapsed in the first half, and the Irish built up a 17-point lead (27-10) with 11:07 left before the intermission. That big lead was established thanks to an 11-point run midway through the half.

The Huskies, however, managed to keep the game respectable, trading baskets with the Irish through the latter part of the first period and getting the Irish lead down to 13 at the break. The tough Notre Dame defense held the Huskies to 400 shooting in the first half and 400 (30-of-74) for the game.

As a team, the Irish shot .535 from the field, slowing down in the second half. The Irish defense held the Huskies to 3-of-16 from the floor and 9-of-13 from the free-throw stripe for a 71-66 victory.

Sandy Botham and Toney chipped in 14 points each for the Irish, shooting 6-of-10 and 6-of-10 from the floor. Toney also had a nearly flawless game, shooting 8-of-10 from the floor and 9-of-11 from the free-throw stripe for a team-high 27 points. That sum was two short of her career high of 29 set earlier this season. She also pulled down 16 rebounds, tying her personal best, which also ties the Notre Dame single-game record.

Another Irish run, this time for 10 points, put them ahead 57-34 with 14:46 left in the game to bury Northern Illinois' chances at a comeback. Notre Dame repeatedly worked to get good shots from the open players, keeping the Huskies behind by double figures throughout the second half.

The victory was sweet revenge for the Irish, who lost 81-71 to Northern Illinois on January 13. What made last night's game different from that of five weeks ago:

“The girls made the decision to come out and play the best game they could," said DiStanislao. "We are a different team now because we are going into the games with a plan. We are anticipating the game we want to play, rather than just reacting to the other team's plan."

Irish sophomore forward Heidi Bunek played a nearly flawless game, shooting 8-of-10 from the floor and 9-of-11 from the free-throw stripe for a team-high 27 points. That sum was two short of her career high of 29 set earlier this season. She also pulled down 16 rebounds, tying her personal best, which also ties the Notre Dame single-game record.

But this attitude helps only Notre Dame and DePaul. Both teams have some notable opponents dotting their schedules to cover for some of the less-than-awe-inspiring ones. Marquette and Dayton, however, get lost in the shuffle.

They have not been as successful in luring top-notch teams to their schedules. Notre Dame and DePaul will take the top independents in the nation to national television have enormous appeal with recruits, and consequently, the rich do get richer. This snowballing effect lands the top independents in the NCAA Tournament consistently, and the next echelon battling with winners of the ECAC Metro, South, North and, whatever other direction they think of, for the precious few remaining tournament spots.

Irish jump out to big lead, hold on to paste UNI, 82-66, in ACC finale

Thanks to a quick start, the Notre Dame women’s basketball team overwhelmed the Huskies of Northern Illinois last night at the ACC. The Irish, in improving their record to 9-15, played one of their best games of the season, using their advantages and following their game plan to perfection.

Royal turns raw skills into team leadership

By RICK RIETBROCK
Sports Writer

Donald Royal, the raw talent, has evolved into Donald Royal, the complete player. Notre Dame's senior forward currently leads the Irish in scoring (14.7) and rebounding (6.5) and remains as one of the team's top defenders. The road from green freshman to savvy senior has been a consistent and steady trip for Royal.

Adding components to his game in bits and pieces, Royal has complemented his strong inside game with great improvements in his free throw shooting and defense. In his final season, he has also helped his offensive firepower with a consistent jump shot, one that Head Coach Digger Phelps credits with opening up the offensive game for the Irish.

"He's been the type of guy that can make things happen for us inside," Phelps says. "But the thing we've let him do lately, because he's ready to do it, is go outside, facing the basket, and shoot the jump shot. That adds a whole lot of problems for the other team."

The addition of the outside game has provided for one of the most illustrious rivalries in the Midwest, the ACC and left with one more in.

The game Phelps is referring to is Notre Dame's 59-54 loss to the Blue Demons on January 10 in Chicago. In that contest, the lead changed 18 times before DePaul scored seven points in the final minute and hung on to keep their 12-0 record unblemished.

The Blue Demons are currently 25-1, and Royal has proved that with Irish. He arrived for good in the second half of his sophomore campaign. Royal started the last 16 games and finished averaging 8.1 points and 5.5 rebounds a game.

Royal increased his value as a junior, by continuing to raise his scoring (10.6), and joining Dolan for Notre Dame's top defender award. In his senior year, Royal (who is still just 20 years old) has continued to round out his game. His consistent inside production, improving outside game, and thunder-dunks remain, but, in addition to his steady statistical improvement, Royal has emerged as a strong leader, sharing co-captain's status with Scott Hicks and Sean Strickland.

ND seeks next ACC victim with 'classic' against DePaul

Once again a nationally-ranked basketball team comes to Notre Dame, hoping to depart unscathed. Twice this month the Irish have had such visitors, but North Carolina and Duke both discovered the perils of the ACC and left with one more in the loss column. This time the challenge is closer to home.

Tonight, fourth-ranked DePaul brings its show to town, sporting a 25-1 record and a nine-game winning streak. The Blue Demons feature two legitimate all-America candidates in senior forward Dallas Comegys and sophomore playmaker Rod Strickland. In DePaul's win over Georgia Tech Saturday, Comegys and Strickland both registered personal scoring highs with 31 and 28 points, respectively, leading the Blue Demons to a 94-67 victory.

DePaul's Dallas Comegys

The Notre Dame-DePaul series has provided for one of the most illustrious rivalries in the Midwest, dating back to the first meeting in 1912. The Irish hold a 43-31 edge in the series, but the most recent game is the one on the mind of Notre Dame head coach Digger Phelps.

"What we remember about the DePaul game is being up one with a minute to go," said Phelps, "and that is where we want to pick up."
