Nomination of Gates withdrawn by Reagan
Associated Press
WASHINGTON - Newly installed White House chief of staff Howard Baker announced Monday that Robert Gates' nomination as CIA director was being withdrawn at Gates' request and said President Reagan was ready to tackle the Iran-Contra problem head-on in his speech to the nation.

Appearing formally for the first time before the White House press corps, Baker said of Reagan: "I've never seen him better than today." Baker said "the original plan" was for Reagan to announce a new nominee at the same time Gates' withdrawal was announced, but "it didn't quite come together that way."

He said choosing a successor for William Casey as director of the CIA was "an urgent item on the president's agenda."

He said Gates had written a letter to Gates at the president, saying, "It is apparent that there is growing sentiment in the Senate to await completion, at minimum, of the work of the Senate Select Committee on Iran before acting on my nomination."

"I believe a prolonged period of uncertainty would be harmful to the Central Intelligence Agency, the intelligence community and potentially to our national security," he said.

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said Sunday mostly agreed with the administration's thinking but had concerns about the willingness of the Senate to act."

State Sen. Richard Codey said anyone who worked at the hospital where he was treated to get cigarette ashes and butts into his mouth is a "moron."

State officials responded by launching an investigation of hiring practices and conditions at Marlboro Psychiatric Hospital for the next two to six days as an orderly last minute.

"If in fact the picture he described is an accurate one, it's an unacceptable, if not outrageus, situation," said Human Services Commissioner Drew Altman. Codey said he proved his account of prospective workers at mental facilities are rarely scrutinized.

In 1985, he alleged, more than 300 of the nearly 4,000 employees at New Jersey's seven psychiatric hospitals had criminal records. Under a policy in effect since October 1986, the Department of Human Services requires background checks, including checks of fingerprints and Social Security numbers, for all prospective employees of state psychiatric hospitals.

To determine if hiring practices had improved since then, Codey applied for a job at Marlboro, which has about 900 adult residents, using the name, address and birthdate of a dead convicted rapist and the Social Security number of a dead convicted armed robber. He described himself as an unemployed restaurant worker.

The 40-year-old Democrat said he was hired as an orderly after interviews with two administrators that took 30 minutes, and began work Feb. 17. He said he was shocked by cavalier attitudes among fellow employees and in witnessing the abuse of patients. He said one worker told him he couldn't wait until evenings, when he would sexually assault sleeping female residents.

Codey, in his third Senate term after serving eight years in the Assembly, said some employees not only condoned beatings, but also learned how to administer them without getting caught.

"One person said "If you hit them and someone sees you, you get fired. So what you have to do is put them in a closed and then give them a beating," Codey said.

He described seeing a patient eat cigarette butts and ashes. "I saw him get up at 3 in the morning and dive into a trash can to get cigarette ashes.

Undercover senator finds evidence of physical abuse at mental hospital

TRENTON, N.J. - A law-month mental institution although he used the name of a dead convicted rapist said Monday he had found patient abuse and incidents that "made One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" look like a picture.

State Sen. Richard Codey said he went to a closed state correal and prod patients with a pointed, bear co-worker are to be able to relax sleeping female residents and was ordered not to intervene when a disturbed patient stuffed cigarette ashes and butts into his mouth.

State officials responded by launching an investigation of hiring practices and conditions at Marlboro Psychiatric Hospi-

Proposal passes asking for meat entre on Lent Fridays
By BUD LUEPER

The Student Senate passed a resolution Monday night asking that meat be served in the dining halls on Fridays during Lent.

Student Sen. John Gar-diner, who proposed the resolution, argued that "it's not a real sacrifice" if meat is not offered along with non-meat entrees.

Gardiner said that students who were not Cath-总监 should not have to abide by the rules of the Catholic Church and should not have to eat elsewhere if they want meat for their meal.

The resolution passed 7-4 with Student Body President Mike Swieck breaking the tie. Gardiner said he would write the cover letter of the resolution to Director of Food Services William Hick-
Administration avoids ‘Irangate’ by revoking Scholastic suspension

I had already outlined a very sarcastic article about the suspension of Scholastic magazine last Thursday when suddenly a great misfortune had to occur: the Office of Student Activities rescinded the suspension and retreated from its original position.

Today was supposed to have been D-Day. I would have pointed out that not only had the administration violated its own rule book, but while the Office of Student Activities was suspending a student magazine for printing a blury picture of what looked like one person leaning over another (if one squinted), it was showing such wholesome, values-oriented flicks like "9 1/2 Weeks" in the Engineering Auditorium.

Yet what did the administration do? At the last moment it blinked, and poor me was left with no story.

Or so I thought last Thursday. Yet after some reflection I realize there is a very important story here.

Right now the administration looks rather foolish, now that it has in effect admitted that it was wrong all along, even if it hadn’t exactly said so. Still there are worse things than looking foolish once in a while. One of those things is trying to save face, regardless of the costs.

The prime example of this, of course, is the national premiere of “Bono II” which came to television stations everywhere with the disclosure of the White House’s attempted machination with the Ayatollah. As it was, of course, the President acted with transcendent stupidity in authorizing the Israelis to ship missiles to Iran because of the “moderates” in the Ayatollah’s regime and in letting Pointe Dextre and North wreak their mischief with the Contras.

Yet by pretending to be infallible and denying any regret for their action at the onset, Reagan made an embarrassing issue into a disastrous one. People quickly put two and two together: It was a blunder. Now, what other scandals has he presided over by simply smiling and nonchalantly saying “Well”?

By contrast, the administration of this University passed its own version of the Iran-Contra affair—I suppose if the suspension had lasted longer we would have eventually called it Scholasticate to be gimblicky like the national press—by concerning itself more with doing right rather than saving face, and not making an admission that they had made a mistake, even if the admission was only tacit.

Cody said he was told not to intervene.

There was no immediate comment from the hospital's executive director, David Sorensen. He did not return a telephone call to his office Monday.

Cody said patients were herded into a day room in the mornings and spent the next 16 hours there, leaving only for their three meals.

Referring to Ken Kesey's novel about a mental institution, Cody said: "what I saw made 'One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest' look like a picnic."

Cody, chairman of the Senate Institutions, Health and Welfare Committee, said he plans to draft legislation that would force state psychiatric units to screen applicants better.
Erroneous broadcast says Rockford hit by tornado

Associated Press

CHICAGO - A national Weather Service bulletin that erroneously said the city of Rockford had been demolished by a tornado was sent to hundreds of Midwest radio and television stations Monday and read on the air by some announcers.

One broadcaster whose station used the bulletin said "that's very upsetting to find out you may have panicked thousands of people needlessly."

The bulletin, sent on the weather service's wire at 4:35 a.m., said: "At 4:35 a.m. CST a tornado hit the Rockford, Ill., weather office. This storm was moving southeast at 50 mph. This is a dangerous storm. Take cover immediately.

"The entire town of Rockford has been demolished. If you are in the path of this tornado, you should go to a basement shelter if available... Abandon cars and mobile homes."

Five minutes later, a disclaimer was sent explaining that the bulletin was transmitted by mistake, said meteorologist Steve Kahn at the service's Chicago office.

The bulletin was part of a test being conducted to prepare for the upcoming tornado season, and was designed only for weather service personnel, Kahn said.

He blamed a change in computer software at the service's Chicago office for letting the bulletin get out.

Kahn said a weather service worker in Rockford who saw the bulletin called the Chicago office and said "I'm a survivor" and laughed."

We Americans like to think that we have one of the fairest electoral systems in the world. When we go into the polling booth on election day we are confident that our voice is being heard and that the will of the people will be translated into a set of winners and a set of losers. But what about our own electoral system? The choice between two candidates is considerably preferable to no choice at all. Yet it must be admitted that even our electoral system effectively operates as so to limit our choices on election day. Most of us have had the experience of going into the polling booth, reading the names of the Democratic and Republican candidates for a certain office, and wondering if there were no one better to vote for. Of course, there are usually other parties on the ballot, for example, the Socialist, Worker, and Libertarian parties. Everyone realizes that these other parties have no chance to win. Even when an Independent presidential candidate such as John Anderson in 1980, succeeds in getting enough public attention, sympathetic people are afraid to waste their votes. Why this? Is it simply a matter of Americans being loyal to the two major parties? Apparently not. Recent studies have consistently shown a decline in party loyalty over the last generation. Whereas previous generations had been willing to identify themselves with one of the two major parties, many people now are calling themselves independents. Yet despite the rise of independence, nearly all nations have electoral systems that are not democracies. In many countries, elections are decided by some form of proportional representation. Even if the United States were to adopt a PR electoral system, the actual popular vote would be more fairly reflected in the make-up of the House of Representatives. If forty-five percent of the American people voted Democratic, then forty-five percent of the House seats would go to Democratic candidates. If fifty-five percent voted Republican, the same proportion of seats would be allocated to this party. Under the PR system, would not only serve to prevent future instability, but would ensure more fair representation of all groups and communities in this country who wish their voices to be heard.

Speaker’s motives not prescribed in invitation

Dear Editor:

My colleagues Fred Freddoso and Janet Smith’s Viewpoint piece on the election day (November 6, 1984) displayed many a discontent, but it was difficult to locate their precise target. They endorsed the idea and the fact of a debate, but were unhappy with the choice of Maguire, and most unhappy because Maguire predictably turned the invitation itself into a pretext for legitimizing “dissent” aberration among Catholics. So much is clear; but they appear to charge Richard Mcbrrier, another colleague, with responsibility for Maguire’s misuse of the event to the end of our two-party system. If the United States were to adopt a PR electoral system, the actual popular vote would be more fairly reflected in the make-up of the House of Representatives. If forty-five percent of the American people voted Democratic, then forty-five percent of the House seats would go to Democratic candidates. If fifty-five percent voted Republican, the same proportion of seats would be allocated to this party. The film's subsidies are from the College Of Arts and Letters; The Department of Communication and Theatre; The Snite Museum. The rental fees for films, according to Falkenberg, vary from $45-$50 for older movies, to up to $700 for new movies. Most commercial theatres, she adds, make most of their money from concessions, which they don't have in the Annenberg series. "The series is a service to the community," says Peterson.

Upcoming movies recommended by Professor Falkenberg are: "Home Of The Brave," about the multi-media performances of avant-garde rock star, Laurie Anderson. "Purple Rose Of Cain," a Woody Allen film, and "Sans Soleil," an unusual film about the oriental culture. Professor Peterson says, "We just don't have any bad films." His favorite upcoming films are "Hearts and Minds," about the Vietnam war, "Repost" and anything odd like "Repo Man."

The film series is becoming more and more popular among the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community. As students become more aware of the variety of films offered, the Friday night films may become incorporated into the Friday social scene.

Saudi Arabian still adjusting to declining oil prices, profits

By YORK DAMM

Saudi Arabia, the most powerful member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), is struggling with low oil prices which cause major losses in revenues for the country.

A Shell report points out that the $90 per barrel quota of Saudi Arabia's income is derived from the export of oil. Thus the drop of prices on the international oil market hurts Saudi Arabia considerably.

Major construction and investment plans, which were initiated when oil prices quadrupled after the 1973 oil shock, have been brought to a halt. Revenues obtained during the 1973-1983 period enabled Saudi Arabia to invest heavily in its infrastructure, industry and agricultural sector.

Until recently Saudi Arabia was the largest reserve holder in the world, all of which changed with the decline of oil prices from $30 per barrel to under $10. The forced oil producers to draw upon official foreign assets which have reportedly declined by $50 billion.

The reduction of petroleum policies considerably.

The Saudi government reacted immediately by abandoning its role as OPEC's swing producer. The swing producer has so much oil that it is able to flood the market at any time to order to cause a change in oil prices. The Saudi budget deficit ran a high $25 billion which could only be covered by drawing from foreign assets which were built up during the 1970's.

The pressure on Saudi Arabia's policymakers grew with the news that even OPEC producers were perceived to be exceeding their production quotas and, these violations of the cartel's negotiated ceilings were at Saudi Arabia's expense.

The Saudi government reacted immediately by abandoning its role as OPEC's swing producer. It began exporting its crude oil on a "net-back" basis. This brought price advantages on international spot markets. As of May 1986, production averaged 4.5 million barrels a day.

However, because Saudi Arabia is the second largest oil producer after the Soviet Union and has resources which total 25 percent of the world's reserves, it seems that Saudi Arabia can wait for better times in patience. With Hisham Nazer replacing Sheikh Ahmed Yamani by Royal decree in December 1986 as the Minister of Petroleum and Mineral Resources, Saudi Arabia is aiming for prices that will exceed the present $18 per barrel price.

The December meeting of OPEC showed for the first time that all 13 members were willing to agree upon production ceilings to prevent further losses in revenues for their economies. So far, some improvements have been made in the market, with two million barrels of oil being taken off the market as a result of restricted output.

Saudi Arabia, however, does not only represent a major oil power. It is also a country which is trying to become less dependent on the exportation of petroleum by building up highly competitive industrial complex with the help of the United States, Japan, France and West Germany.

One example of the ambitious goals of King Fahd and his advisers is the construction of two new cities, Yanbu and Jubail, which are being constructed near the "kingdom's most ambitious petrochemical, refining, steel and petroleum related projects," according to Bill Price Waterhouse Publications.

Minor league owners score with inexpensive franchises

Everybody knows that major league baseball players make big salaries. In fact, 20 of the 26 teams are running at a loss these days, mainly because of these high labor costs. With their salaries averaging over $400,000 and their use of the hero's image, they enjoy the benefits of lower salaries, but the players in the minors are running at a loss these days, mainly because of their salaries averaging $30,000. For $5 million. These are the minor leagues?

As for profitability, the team A. Ray Smith paid $23 billion in 1985. Exports suffered a major loss from almost $20 billion in 1983 to about $30 billion in 1985.

Joseph Buras also believes in the system. This 68-year-old paid $22 million for the bankrupt Reading Phillies in 1978 only to bail out eight years later for $1 million. He didn't bother calculating his annualized return: "The majors are subsidizing us tremendously. You have to be real stupid if you can't make money in this environment."

F ans notice a big difference with the lower-salaried players. If they aren't picky about watching players with experience, a family of five can enjoy a night of hot dogs, soda, and baseball for less than $20. In the majors, the same clan would have trouble just getting bleacher tickets for that amount of money.

This heaven, however, may not last forever. Already the farm clubs are required to provide financial statements to their partners in the majors, and the majors may insist on a cut in the future. Surprisingly, this would lead to the minor leagues helping out the salaries for major league players.

The Saint Mary's basketball team, 12-8, concluded it's season last Thursday night with a 73-59 loss to IUPUI-Indianapolis in NAIA district semifinal action.
The Belles, however, kept things close throughout the first half against the number-one seed of the tournament.
"The game was close in the first half because the girls worked hard at both ends of the court and everything worked well," said Head Coach Marvin Wood. "But IUPUI capitalized on a couple of field goals and a foul shot to go up at the half 38-31.
But IUPUI took advantage of seven Saint Mary's turnovers to burst into a 46-37 lead. It was an uphill fight for the Belles the rest of the game.
Tammyle and Julie Radke led the offense with 18 points each. Jennifer Harte added eight and Donna Wolfe contributed six.

Stanford and Sorin to fight it out for the Interhall basketball crown

By CHRIS PAULISON
Sports Writer

The men's A League Interhall basketball championship will be on the line tonight when Stanford and Sorin clash at 6 at A1C PCP.

Stanford, 7-0 in regular season play, has continued its winning, shock by shock, through the playoffs without losing a game. After receiving a bye in the first round, Stanford defeated Holy Cross and Morrissey on the way to tonight's final. Because the Stuarts are undefeated and Sorin suffered an earlier playoff loss in this double-elimination tournament, the Scrumps have to beat Stanford twice to receive the crown.

Although Sorin also finished the regular season with a clean record, a loss to Morrissey in the third round of the playoffs made its journey to the finals a bit more complicated. A victory over Dillon for the second time catapulted Sorin into the semifinals, setting up a rematch with the same tenacious Morrissey team it fell prey to only a few days prior.

In the hard-fought semifinal game which decided which team would meet Stanford, Sorin escaped with a 1-45 victory over the Manor. Sorin capitalized on good shooting by senior guard Steve Buehrlein, the leading scorer in the contest.

Sorin, though, is well aware that its toughest task lies ahead.

"With Andy Heck and Mark Trautman, our big men in the frontcourt, I would say we have a size advantage," said Sorin senior Mike Scotty. "However, if we're to beat a team of Stanford's caliber, it's going to take a total team effort and two nights of flawless basketball."

While Sorin hopes to utilize its size, Stanford will rely on its speed and quickness.

"We're small (only one player is over 6'2'')," said Stanford team captain Al Martin, "so we're going to push the ball up and let (point guard Dan) Niedermeyer run the fast break whenever possible."

Martin also credited his team's success to the fact that several team members have been playing together for a long time.

Three starters were members of last year's Bookstore Runners-up, the Leonia's Stallions.

Playoff action is also heating up in the B League. Dillon, like Stanford in the A League, is currently undefeated and awaits winner of tomorrow night's game between Sorin and Off-Campus for the finals later this week.

Men's tennis splits pair over weekend

BY KELLY TOWNSEND

In men's tennis action this past weekend, Notre Dame came out with an even record losing to Ohio State and defeating Ohio University. These two matches also keep this season's record even at 5-5.

The action against Ohio State was characterized by close matches and valiant efforts by the Irish. At the number-one singles spot, Tim Carr started with a strong 6-4 win in the first set, but was edged 6-7 in the second and dropped the last set 4-6. Dan Walsh also took his match into three sets, emerging with a 7-6, 3-6, 6-1 win against his Buckeye opponent.

The doubles teams fared better with wins recorded by Tim Carr and Dave Reiter and Mike Wallace and Sean O'Brien, who recorded a 6-1, 6-2 blowout. Despite the strong wins, the Irish were outpowered by the Buckeyes, losing the match 6-3, 6-2.

"We thought we had a chance against them," said Head Coach Tom Fallon, "but they turned out to be too strong for us.

Against Ohio University, Notre Dame evened out their record this weekend with wins by Brian Kalbas (6-1, 6-2), Dave Reiter (6-2, 6-3) and Dan Walsh, who held off his opponent with two sets of 7-5.

In doubles, the Irish won by forfeit in the number-two match and lost the number-three match, 8-6. The first doubles match was cancelled due to a lack of time and the Irish ended up with a 63 win over Ohio University.

Fallon saw several encouraging signs in the match against Ohio University.

"Kalbas' win shows that he is on the way to recovering," said Fallon. "Couple this with the improved condition of Tony Caball, and our team's strength will almost be up to par."

"Walsh and Reiter showed their strength this weekend when they challenge long-time foe Wisconsin and follow up with hard-hitting Gustavus Adolphus.

Irish notch 20th victory, ranking as they dump Brooklyn College

By BOB KEMPER
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men’s basketball team abandoned its heart-stopping brand of play Monday evening and coasted to a 75-65 victory over an outmanned Brooklyn College.

It was the seventh-consecutive victory for the Irish and insured them of their fourth 20-win season in as many years.

After Mark Stevenson made a layup off an offensive rebound to put the Irish up 4-2 at 19:26 of the first half, the Irish never relinquished the lead. Senior co-captain Scott Higgs-Coulthard predicted the Irish take control early as he drilled four jumpers in the first ten minutes of the game. Notre Dame entered the locker room at the half with a 38-29 lead.

After the intermission, the Irish jumped to a comfortable 16-point lead. Gary Voece connected on a goal and converted the three-point play after being fouled. Stevenson scored on a rebound goal and Rivers popped from 17 feet to finish off the 7-0 run. The defense complimented the offense as the Irish blocked seven shots and had 11 steals, none of which resulted in fast breaks.

Kevin Stoutermire, a lesson. But even on autopilot, DeCicco’s undefeated Irish were so used to winning that his absence made little difference. Five otherencers besides Kovacs qualified for the NCAA’s this weekend and Higgs-Coulthard gained an automatic berth in the NCAA’s by his performance at the Great Lakes Championship as the foil at the Great Lakes Championships.

Kevin Stoutermire and Geoff Ross will represent the sabre team. Chris Nanni and Steve Megargee have gone through. After

The Notre Dame hockey team ended its regular season by taking second place in the first annual Alabama-Huntsville Invitational this weekend.

By splitting a pair of games over the weekend, the Irish finished the season with an overall record of 9-18-1 and are headed for the American Collegiate Hockey Association playoffs this weekend at the ACC.

The Irish trouced little-known Hawthorne College 7-1 on Friday night, but dropped the final to the host, Huntsville, by a score of 3-2 in overtime on the final to the host, Huntsville, on Friday night, but dropped

"I was pleased. We’ve got a young team. DePaul and Marquette have significantly more depth than we do. It’s difficult to compete with teams like that, but we may as well jump in the pool and get all the experience we can now."

DePaul won the meet, followed by Marquette, Detroit and Notre Dame.

For the second straight week, the Men’s Volleyball Club had problems with a nationally ranked varsity team. But like last week, the Irish were able to recover from that loss and the remainder of their schedule is excellent.

Notre Dame opened their weekend in Ohio by dropping a match to tenth-ranked Ohio State, 7-5, 3-1, 3-1. "We have a problem against varsity teams. We came out ahead, 7-5, and just fell apart," said Club President John Sullivan. "It’s kind of realized who we were playing and thought that we weren’t supposed to be ahead.

The Irish swept Ohio State-Marion Friday, 15-2, 15-5, 15-1, and DePaul Saturday, 15-9, 15-7, 15-2, 15-3, 15-7. These wins moved Notre Dame to 14-3 for the season. 14-1 against club teams and 0-5 against varsity teams.

"Although Notre Dame only had a ten to fifteen point lead for most of the game, they had a quiet, conservative way of winning. We were banking on a letdown, especially after their sluggish schedule of late."

Donald Royal led the Notre Dame scoring parade with 20 points. "The game was along with his 10 rebounds. Mark Stevenson added 12 points, and David Rivers and Scott Hicks each chipped in eleven. Junior Frank Gregov equaled Royal’s scoring production by pouring in 20 points for the Kingsmen.
