Gearing up for the International Summer Special Olympic Games (ISSOG) Jim Troesh, alias "Scotty" on NBC's "Highway to Heaven," will speak at a reception today on campus introducing a film he is currently producing for the ISSOG volunteer orientation program.

Troesh, a quadruple, will address a group of more than 200 invited ISSOG staff members and volunteers at the Center for Continuing Education today at 5. According to Fat Foster, ISSOG marketing and public relations assistant, Troesh will be addressing the ISSOG Board of Directors, chairmen and members of steering committees which correspond to the six organizational divisions, and other active members and volunteers.

The volunteer orientation program for the summer games begins April 25 and will feature Troesh's movie, currently being filmed in the WNDU parking lot, Foster said.

Foster said of today's reception, "It will be a sharing of good feelings. It's one more step toward the games... It should be quite a party.

A pre-orientation reception precedes the Log Cabin Committee meeting at which the names of the five athletes from the St. Joseph's University track and field area participating in the Olympics program will be announced.

Arrest of espionage suspect triggers wide security probe

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The arrest of a second Marine suspected of espionage while working as an embassy guard in Moscow has triggered a wide-ranging security probe at the embassy, the State Department said Wednesday.

"We are treating this as a very serious breach of our security," said spokesman Charles Redman, referring to the arrest of Cpl. Arnold Bracy, 21, from the New York City borough of Queens.

"A full-scale counterintelligence investigation is being conducted in coordination with other appropriate federal and international agencies. We're looking at every aspect of security at the embassy in Moscow.

The corps said Bracy had been arrested because of evidence uncovered in the continuing probe of Sgt. Clayton Lonetree, 35, a former guard arrested in December on spying charges.

The corps said the two men worked together in Moscow from July 1985 to March 1986. Lonetree has been accused of passing to the Russians the names and photographs of American intelligence agents attached to the Moscow embassy's staff. He also has been accused of providing the Soviets with descriptions of floor plans and office assignments for the embassies in Moscow and Vienna, where he also worked as a guard.

Redman said the State Department had launched "a worst-case damage assessment so that every aspect of security at our embassy in Moscow will be investigated as a result of these two cases."

"We have no reason to believe that this is a worldwide problem," Redman added. "We have 1,400 Marines stationed at 134 posts throughout the world and this is the first incident of this type in our 40-year relationship with the security at the embassy in Moscow."

The chair was made possible by a donor who desires anonymity, according to Hesburgh.

"I'm very, very pleased," said Joyce. "I never expected or anticipated this honor. It is particularly gratifying that it happened my final year after 35 years as an executive vice president."

"I know it will please all who have known Father Joyce in his 35 years of service to the University to see his contribution recognized in an endowed professorship," said Hesburgh.

"It's a tribute commensurate with the stewardship he has added," he added.

Support of contras declining in Senate

WASHINGTON - Senate Democrats, after failing a third time to choke off a Republican-led filibuster, abandoned Wednesday their drive to force President Reagan to fully account for all assistance flowing to Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

The Senate vote of 54-46 in favor of cutting off the filibuster was six votes short of the total needed to end debate. However, it provided evidence that there may be a Senate majority ready to reject new aid installments.

"The vote bodes well for halting Contra aid next fall," said Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., the deputy Democratic leader.

"The $4 billion vote to stop the filibuster clearly reflects the erosion of support for the Contras," Cranston said. "It shows the growing concern over the cover-up of what happened in the money for the Contras, money that has either vanished or gone into illegal installments.

China must push ahead this year with economic reform in spending and productivity, while eliminating the “pernicious influence” of Western liberal thought Premier Zhao Ziyang told the opening session of the National People’s Congress on Wednesday. Zhao told the 2,718 delegates gathered for four weeks of an annual 16-day meeting the country “must unwaveringly push ahead round reform of the economic structure so as to maintain steady, sustained economic growth.” Zhao also said China has successfully curved “bourgeois liberalization,” which he said was the result of “weak and lax” leadership. - Associated Press

Drug tests: An infringement on rights of players, workers

Imagine the dilemma.

As time is running out, the university’s star point guard is dripping down the court. The score is tied. His basket would win the game for his team. He glances at the clock. He glances to the left and sees the NCAA drug marshals. Suddenly, sinking the basket and winning the game does not seem like as good of a deal. The winning team’s players must face the little bottles.

In this year’s NCAA basketball tournament, association officials have instituted a drug testing program which has caused perhaps the highest degree of personal embarrassment and the greatest amount of personal infringement on a citizen's rights that has of yet occurred in such a program. After each game, the winning team has about 10 minutes or so to celebrate and have their post-game talk. Then, as the players hit the showers, the NCAA “marshalls” begin to come into the lockerroom.

Each of the eight marshalls is assigned to a player - the five starters, the two substitutes with the most playing time, and a randomly-chosen player.

As the players come out of the showers, the marshalls check their clipboards and have the staff point out which player is which. And even as they dress, uncomfortable players must endure the glances of marshalls from across the room.

The staff and the other players board the bus and return to the hotel. The chosen eight are taken next door for “testing.”

College tests are new and some players have found drug tests to be no exception. Dehydration sometimes leads to an embarrassing situation which no person should ever have to face. The players are “detained” until they give a sample.

Of course, the marshalls provide distilled water and apple juice to hurry things along. But some players still have ended up staying at the test site for hours into the morning. There also has been controversy about the penalties involved. Currently, a player who tests positive is excluded from further playoff competition, but there is no penalty for the team as a whole. They don’t have to forfeit the game. The NCAA may institute team sanctions next year.

Besides just having their pride hurt, some players may be hurting themselves physically. Because coaches are unsure of the test’s sensitivity, some coaches have forbidden players who have the flu from taking even aspirin for fear they might cause a positive drug test reading.

In most cases, the main effect of the testing of basketball players has been public embarrassment. While no person should have to put up with this humiliation and violation of his rights, the facts that the tests are not as effective as they should be, and the tests are certainly of little value, it is a sad necessity.

WASHINGTON - Senate attorneys sought a court order Wednesday to force former Maj. Gen. Richard Secord to give them access to records of foreign bank accounts that investigators believe he controlled as part of the Iran-Contra connection.

In a U.S. District Court filing, the Senate said Secord should be held in contempt if he refuses to comply with a valid court order. The Senate authorized the step in a vote last week. Secord has cited his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination in refusing to comply with a request from the Senate investigating committee that he sign an order directing foreign banks to make available the information.

Investigators, including the presidentially appointed Tower commission, say the former Air Force officer helped orchestrate shipments of weapons to Iran and the Nicaraguan rebels, making use of Swiss bank accounts under his control.

Two members of the House committee, speaking on condition of anonymity, said there was no evidence to dispute President Reagan's statement that he did not know funds were apparently being diverted from Iran arms sales to the Contra rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government.

The two sessions took place amid unusual concern about secrecy.

Hundreds remember bishop's death

WASHINGTON - Democrats, working alone before President Reagan, blamed them for holding up the budget process, had stood chanting "Yankee assassin!" on embassy walls, burned a rag-and-paper effigy of Uncle Sam on the sidewalk and marched away, shouting other anti-U.S. slogans.

Romero was killed March 24, 1980, while saying Mass at a small hospital chapel in the capital. A lone gunman fired a single low-caliber bullet from a rifle into the Roman Catholic prelate's heart and head.

No one was ever arrested.

Committee approves 1988 budget

WASHINGTON - Democrats on the House Budget Committee, only hours after President Reagan blamed them for holding up the budget process, reached tentative agreement late Wednesday on a fiscal 1988 spending plan.

"We have reached a tentative agreement," committee Chairman William Gray III, D-Pa., announced after a meeting broke up after 11 p.m. EST. Gray declined to disclose details of the plan, but the committee was working from a framework designed to produce deficit reduction of at least $36 billion, half from tax increases. By congressional estimates, that deficit reduction would be the same or greater than Reagan's budget proposal.

Gray said the committee Democrats, working alone because Republicans were boycotting the process, had produced "a strong, credible package that moves in the right direction with cuts in spending that are real and fair."

Soviet media return Stalin to a place in Russian history

Associated Press

MOSCOW—From a poet's lament to articles on World War II, the Soviet press is now trying to deal with the legacy of dictator Josef Stalin.

Stalin, who ruled the Soviet Union from 1924 until his death in 1953, was exalted as a genius during his lifetime. He became a virtual non-person in the state-controlled Soviet press after Nikita Khrushchev denounced Stalin's "cult of personality" in 1956.

Since then, official mention of the former leader has been limited to his role as generalissimo in World War II. Of the millions of people vanished into labor camps during his rule, millions of people still evokes strong and conflicting emotions among his countrymen.

Stalin has been lauded as the "cultural hero" and "generalissimo" in 1956.

But Stalin's legacy is a more controversial subject than most because more than three decades after his death his name still evokes strong and conflicting emotions among his countrymen.

Falwell vows 'no funeral for PTL'

Associated Press

FORT MILL, S.C. - The Rev. Jerry Falwell said Wednesday it would be impossible for the Jim Bakker to return to his scandal-wrecked evangelical empire anytime soon, while threatened lawsuit over his sexual dalliance with a church secretary seven years ago. It remained unclear where most of the money ended up.

Also, a Tennessee minister said he plans to show leaders of Bakker's denomination, the Springfield Mo.-based Assemblies of God, evidence that PTL officials attempted to cover up reports of the sexual misconduct.

Falwell, who will preside here today at the first meeting of the new PTL board, formed since succeeding Bakker as chairmain last week, told a civic club luncheon Wednesday in Cocoa Beach, Fla., that he had heard rumors Bakker wants to return soon, said Falwell, who will preside over the board.

"I hear rumors that he wants to return soon," said Falwell, a fundamentalist Baptist minister who founded the Moral Majority. He told the Space Coast Tiger Bay Club that if Bakker were to return "there will be no funeral for PTL." Meanwhile, two California religious activists said a $115,000 payment made by Bakker to a new board member of the organization vowed: "there will be no funeral for PTL.

He added he didn't know how he and the new board could "deal with the credibility issue" if Bakker were to return right away.

"I'm not saying he could never return," he said. "That's up to God, not Jerry Falwell." He also said he had no desire to remain on the board of PTL beyond the time needed for "fence-mending."

THREE CHAINED WOMEN DISCOVERED IN BASEMENT

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA - Three nude women were found chained to a sewer pipe Wenes­day in the basement of a rowhouse and police said they found body parts elsewhere in the house that may represent two bodies.

A fourth woman escaped from the house during the night and summoned police, who said she was aged 18 to 24, may have been chained for up to three months.

Body parts were found in the refrigerator, in the oven and in a stewpot in the kitchen, police said. Homicide Sgt. Robert Snyder said officers also searched for Camoden, N.J., for a possible third body.

Neighbors said they had complained to police about noise and a smell of burning flesh, but police said they had no records of such complaints.

Gary Heidnik, 43, who lived in the rowhouse for about two years, was arrested and charged with rape, kidnapping and aggravated assault. No homicide charges were filed.

One of the women held in the basement said she believed two women she knew only by first names died there, one in a fall and the other from electrocution. The Philadelphia Daily News reported that the woman said Heidnik attached electrical wires to the chains of the electrocuted women.

Capt. Robert Grasso said police do not know how the people died: "The investigation is just commencing. There are many aspects about which we do not know enough."

One of the women held in the basement, Lisa Thomas, 19, said she lost 40 to 50 pounds through the ordeal.

"He was digging holes on the ceiling to hang us, for punishment," said Detective Edward Tenuto, of the department's public affairs office.

Catharine Wainwright, who lives with her daughter of the same name five doors away from the house, said the smell persisted for more than a week.

Of the four women held captive, Grasso said one was abducted in November.

Three of the women were taken to Episcopal Hospital where one was treated and released. The other two were in stable condition, suffering from malnutrition and dehydration, said Anthony Cirillo, hospital spokesman.

Snyder said Heidnik was stopped by police as he was driving away from the rowhouse.

Expert supports wider use of chemotherapy

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO - Wider use of chemotherapy could save the lives each year of an additional 11,000 victims of colon and rectal cancer, the nation's second-largest cancer killer, a federal cancer expert says.

Dr. Michael Friedman said information has emerged within the last year that settles the question of whether drug treatment is worthwhile after this cancer is surgically removed.

"Every operable patient with colon-rectal cancer should be considered for chemother­apy," he said.

President Reagan was operated on for colon cancer almost two years ago and did not receive chemotherapy.

"This information has taken a long time to evolve," Friedman said. "Were such a patient (as Reagan) ... present today, I think he should be considered for chemotherapy."

Friedman is chief of the Clinical Investigations Branch of the National Cancer In­stitute. He made his recom­mendation at a meeting of the American Cancer Society that concluded Wednesday.

U.S. refuses trade deal for release of hostages

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon - The wife of American hostage Alann Steen, whose captors say he is ill and may die soon, pleaded Wednesday for his release.

There was no word of a Frenchman whose captors withdrew a threat of death, then said they might kill him after all.

In the plea for her 47-year-old husband, Virginia Rose Steen said kidnappers "should release people that are sick so the person can get the best medical treatment possible...I hope he would be released very soon."

Steen is held by an organization calling itself Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, which said Monday he was very ill and "may die in 10 days."

It offered to trade him for 100 Arab prisoners held in Israel and demanded the United States intercede with Israel. The U.S. and Israeli governments refused the deal.

Another group, the Revolutionary Justice Organization, has renewed its threat to kill Jean-Louis Normandin, a 35-year-old French television lighting engineer kidnapped March 8, 1986.

"The organization announces that the execution of the spy, Normandin, was not postponed and was not canceled," the organization said in a statement issued Tuesday. The group is believed to consist of Shiite extremists loyal to Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

On Monday the kidnappers released a videotape in which Normandin said his abductors had decided to spare his life. They previously threatened to kill him Tuesday.

Al-Ittihad, a newspaper in the Persian Gulf emirate of Abu Dhabi, quoted "well-informed diplomatic sources" as saying Syrian troops deployed in West Beirut had located Steen and the three other men kidnapped with him in January.

Hickey is responsive to students' requests

On the Thursday before break, I met with William Hickey, director of University Food Service, to discuss proposals regarding weekend guest meal passes, the alleviation of the mass influx of students to North Dining Hall during finals, and extended breakfast times among other things. I also brought him suggestions on the renovation of North Dining Hall which is slated to take place the next two summers.

I want to take this opportunity to publicly thank Hickey for his receptiveness, concern and his quick action on the implementation of several of the proposals. For instance, before I even finished my arguments for weekend guest meal passes, Hickey was on the phone to his secretary asking her to call the printer and have 500 “Weekender Meal Passes” printed up which would encompass Friday dinner, Saturday brunch and dinner, and Sunday brunch for a 25 percent discount off the individual meal rate. These should now be available at the dining halls to purchase for a guest coming up for the weekend. Beside the discount, the “Weekender” also alleviates the hassle of paying for individual meals while in line. Hickey also extended weekday hot breakfasts by 15 minutes and told me if I could show him tangible support for some of the other proposals, he would not hesitate to implement them.

When we were discussing the North Dining Hall renovation, he pulled out all the blueprints and showed me exactly what was going to happen. I present some suggestions such as installing heater hot air blowers in the door ways, and he assured me he would talk to the architect about them. I can assure you that North Dining Hall is going to be a much better place.

Thank you William Hickey and also Debra Lemke, manager of North Dining Hall for listening and acting on many of the suggested improvements. We really appreciate it.

Students have chance to view Hesburgh finale

Dear Editor,

The mailing by the St. Joseph Valley Notre Dame Club of invitations to all local alumni to attend a Century Center downlinking of Father Hesburgh’s valedictory telecast May 1 has resulted in many calls to University Relations looking for information about campus downlink sites.

There will be two campus sites where faculty, students and staff can see the program “A Notre Dame Moment” without charge. As part of “Senior Week,” the sentinels will be sponsoring a downlink of the satellite-delivered telecast in the ACC, and all students are invited. Faculty and staff and their spouses are invited to a downlink in the Center for Continuing Education.

The program, which will also include a 16-minute videotape retrospective on Father Hesburgh’s career narrated by Walter Cronkite, will start at 8 p.m. (EST) and is expected to last about one hour.

Quote of the day

“If a man does not keep pace with his companions, perhaps it is because he hears a different drummer. Let him step to the music which he hears, however measured or far away.”

Associates, Inc., a local architect with a degree in architecture. Chris Nye, who has the distinction of being crew coach of the crew team and the university's AFROTC detachment, has created four years ago to recognize the nation's outstanding AFROTC detachments. Notre Dame detachment, under the leadership of Colonel David Woods, won the award for the 1985-86 school year. Notre Dame also won the award in 1982. The Right of Line Award was created four years ago to recognize the nation's outstanding AFROTC detachments. Detachments are evaluated in several areas of concern, including the quality of teaching, recruiting and the number of officers commissioned. Each unit is also judged on a quality index based on the SAT scores and class ranks of its cadets.

Col. Woods attributes his participation in the quality of the people in the unit. Notre Dame won the award because its unit is made up of "talented people who had a desire to excel and did their best here."

Although some people wonder whether ROTC contradicts the values supported by a Catholic university, AFROTC at Notre Dame is going strong. The Notre Dame detachment is the 13th largest of the 152 AFROTC units in the country, and Notre Dame had more students on AFROTC scholarships during the 1985-86 school year than any other university in the nation. The Notre Dame's award-winning AFROTC detachment stands at attention. Nye says that in approaching this project, he wanted to make LaFortune a quiet, comfortable building and not like a "supermarket." While preserving some of the old atmosphere of the building which was constructed in the 1900's, he was interested in making it different from anything else at Notre Dame. A renovation, according to Nye, is always more difficult than new construction, because it is hard to anticipate what will be found once work has begun. For example, a discrepancy between the reported depth of the sewer main and what was actually found made it necessary to completely change the building's plumbing system within the course of four days. Nye said this project presented a special problem in phasing because it was difficult to work around the weather and material shipments. However, he pointed out that parts of the building have been open for some time, including the basement lounge area.

A renovation, according to Nye, is always more difficult than new construction, because it is hard to anticipate what will be found once work has begun. For example, a discrepancy between the reported depth of the sewer main and what was actually found made it necessary to completely change the building's plumbing system within the course of four days. Nye said this project presented a special problem in phasing because it was difficult to work around the weather and material shipments. However, he pointed out that parts of the building have been open for some time, including the basement lounge area.

Clemens continues hold out

Associated Press

SPRING, Texas - Boston pitcher Roger Clemens said Wednesday he remained resolute in his 19-day contract holdout and accused Red Sox management of trying to use him as an example for the rest of the league.

"I want them to recognize what I did on the field last year and they are not doing that," Clemens said during a news conference at his agents' office.

Asked if he was prepared to sit out the season, Clemens' agent Randy Hendricks answered saying, "The question should be are the Red Sox ready to go through a full season without Roger Clemens."

The American League Cy Young Award winner earned $340,000 last year on a base salary of $200,000 and an added $120,000 in incentives.

He sought a new contract for $1 million over one year or $8.4 million over two years.

Clemens has since lowered his demand to $950,000 for one year but the Red Sox have offered him a $200,000 base salary and $350,000 in incentive clauses.

home runs and nine RBI's, but his 21 strikeouts have kept his batting average at only .244. But he didn't give in.

"This has been a special team from day one," Tarkanian told the boosters. He said he planned to turn the team loose for some practices starting Wednesday.

"The chemistry was there," Gilliam added. The 6-foot-9 Gilliam then stretched out in a first-class seat, pulled a jacket over his head and slept much of the trip.

"I don't know how to react at this point, but we'll probably begin to feel it when we get into the flow of things," Basingt said. He predicted Indiana would be "very tough," adding "we're going to have to be at the top of our game to beat them."

Coach Jerry Tarkanian, who preceded the team to New Orleans Tuesday night, told boosters earlier in the day he "never thought about the Final Four until last week. Then it dawned on me: 'we're only two games away.'"

Tarkanian last took a team to the Final Four in Atlanta 10 years ago, where it lost in the semifinals to North Carolina 84-83. "This has been a special team from day one," Tarkanian told the boosters. He said he planned to turn the team loose for some celebrating in the famed French Quarter Wednesday night.

"I told them they could stay out until 1 a.m., but they're negotiating for 2," Tarkanian laughed, "and they're such a great bunch of kids I'll probably give in."

No. 1-seeded UNLV arrives in New Orleans hoping to take it all

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS - Members of the No. 1-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas Runnin' Rebels flew to New Orleans Wednesday for an afternoon practice, a night on the town and Saturday's meeting with Indiana in the semifinals of the Final Four.

"For you Runnin' Rebels on board, I want you to give Bobby Knight something to white about," the captain of the American Airlines flight carrying the Rebels said as the plane landed in Dallas for a changeover.

The Rebels, 37-1, meet the third-ranked Hoosiers, 28-4, in the second game of Saturday's playoffs. Some 200 fans turned out at McCarran International Airport in Las Vegas to see the team leave on an early morning flight. Sleepy-eyed players gave television interviews before boarding the aircraft, then signed autographs as they walked down the plane's aisle. The flight left 30 minutes late as players and fans struggled on board.

"I'm going in with the attitude I want to win it all, not just be here," said senior forward Armon Gilliam. "It's a heck of an accomplishment to be here. We knew we had the potential to be here. We just didn't know if we'd reach that potential."

"The chemistry was there," Gilliam added. The 6-foot-9 Gilliam then stretched out in a first-class seat, pulled a jacket over his head and slept much of the trip. Shorter players, relegated to the back of the plane, did the same.

Jarvis Bangston, a junior forward from Detroit, said the Rebels had achieved a goal they set early in the year by getting to New Orleans.

"I don't know how to react at this point, but we'll probably begin to feel it when we get into the flow of things," Bangston said. He predicted Indiana would be "very tough," adding "we're going to have to be at the top of our game to beat them."

LAS VEGAS, Nev. - Las Vegas bookmakers have turned cheerleaders with their hometown team in the NCAA final Four, despite the possible loss of millions of dollars in bets on the championship game.

Bookmakers are unabashedly rooting for the Nevada-Las Vegas Runnin' Rebels, seemingly glad to swallow the lost bets in the name of community pride. UNLV plays Indiana University on Saturday.

"It would do more for the town for them to win than for us to take a few lousy bets on the game," said Keith Glantz, sports book manager at the Palace Station.

Nevada gaming regulations forbid betting on amateur teams located within the state, meaning UNLV's advancement to the Final Four will cost sports books bets on one of Saturday's two games and possibly the championship game itself.

That doesn't seem to bother most bookmakers, who say the lost bets will be more than made up for by increased national attention for the city.

"I'm tickled pink we've got a team that well represents our community," said Mel Exber, owner of the Las Vegas Club. "I've talked to a lot of customers around here. Nobody's complaining."

Betting on the NCAA championship game generally ranks in the top five major betting events of the year, trailing the World Series and Super Bowl in betting volume among continuing events.

But bookmakers say the mere fact a lot of money is bet on a game doesn't necessarily mean they will win much money.

"A lot of people think it's going to be extremely costly to sports books but I don't think so," said Sonny Reizner, who runs the Castaways sports book. "First of all, it's only one ballgame. And you can win or lose the game."

Reizner said bookmakers operate on a 4.5 percent profit margin if they pick the game correctly and adjust bets accordingly. If they don't, they can lose money on a game regardless of how much money is bet.

"We're not necessarily going to lose any revenue," agreed Glantz. "And, if they allowed betting on UNLV we could take a bath because the people in this town will bet the Rebels no matter what the point spread is."

Glantz said most bookmakers he has talked with around the city are rooting for UNLV. He said he was trying to get tickets for himself to go to the games in New Orleans.

"The town would rather see them win than take a bet on them," said Glantz. "It's our team. We don't have a pro team here and the town goes crazy over the Rebels."
Hoosier fans hold rally in Bloomington square

Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. - Indiana University basketball fans rallied in the courthouse square Wednesday evening, sending up 1,100 red and white balloons along with their hopes for a successful Hoosier trip to the NCAA final Four in New Orleans this weekend.

"I think everybody is pretty confident," said Mick Hayes as he held one of his four sons, all clad in IU sweatshirts, on a closed section of Kirkwood Avenue, a short distance from the campus.

"People think we can do it this time."

The crowd filled most of the closed block and part of the courthouse yard, yelling and waving red pom poms as the school's pep band and cheerleaders performed in the brisk, 45-degree wind.

An Indianapolis television station's news helicopter circled over the downtown as the rally got underway at dusk. Ken Dwiggins yelled himself almost hoarse trying to keep up with the megaphone-toting cheerleaders who shouted: "N-C-A Double A, Indiana all the way."

"This team's been down a lot during the year, but we've always been able to come back," said Dwiggins. "We're lucky to be in the Final Four."

The Hoosiers are scheduled to leave for New Orleans about noon on Friday, and another rally is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. at Assembly Hall on the campus to see the team off.

"The excitement is really just now starting," Ludwig said. "They (the fans) know Bobby's got the experience. UNLV has not played the type of physical ball they play in the Big Ten, but they're not to be taken lightly either."

Nine-year-old Mickey Hayes, who alternately cheered and shivered through Wednesday's rally with his parents and three brothers, who planned to attend the Bob Knight Basketball Camp this summer.

And between cheers from the crowd, he was also ready to recite a poem he'd written about the coach:

"There was a guy named Bobby Knight, who got into a fight; He got a tech foul, and went on the prowl; And now they know Bobby Knight was right."

IU bans airplay of Hoosier songs

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS - Indiana University fans rallied to roar their disapproval Wednesday of an NCAA rule that effectively banned from the radio the playing of two songs celebrating the Hoosier basketball team.

"Any song done by any station anywhere should be able to compliment a team going to the Final Four," disc jockey Gary Harper told a lunchtime crowd of about 200 at Monument Circle in downtown Indianapolis.

Harper's station, WEAG-FM, and two other Indiana stations pulsed the songs "Bobby Knight Bop" and "Stevie, Shoot A Three-Pointer" from the air at the request of IU officials.

The songs, written by staff members of the stations, mention the names of several members of the Indiana basketball team that will compete in the Final Four this weekend in New Orleans.

IU sports promotion director Chuck Crabb said the university asked that the songs be withdrawn because an NCAA rule forbids the use of a player's name in a commercial venture. Any player so named could be ruled ineligible for Final Four competition, Crabb said.

"I think it's ridiculous," said Marge Poore, 46, an Indianapolis postal worker who attended the rally. "They did not ask for their names to be used. They're not getting any money for it."

"What if another school wanted to sabotage our team?" asked John Golden, 38. "All they'd have to do is write up a silly song and get it played on the radio."

An NCAA official said that whether the players were paid for the use of their names is immaterial.

"The issue is not whether (a player) gets any benefit but whether his name is being used," Rick Evrard, director of NCAA legislative services, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Wednesday. "Student athletes cannot use their name, their picture or their reputation to promote a commercial product."

The issue of commercial exploitation, however, is a tougher issue for Hesburgh. He says that in the case of a private school, where students (in 1964) pay 65 percent of the cost of running the school, "any contribution looks good, even an athletic one."

But before you can even ask about the danger of making dollars out of student athletes, the president must first determine if the principle he brings to college athletics- the principle of the institution, football as a just game and education through athletics, then this principle can be followed, he says.

"But what about today? Money is definitely the issue in college athletics, and Notre Dame has changed its stance on bowl games."

are the same for both athletes and non-athletes.

Second, the athlete should have the same academic requirements as other students. At that time athletes had to carry a 77 percent average to be eligible for competition. Hesburgh gives several examples of this requirement, one in which two starters of the basketball team had fallen below the average. He called the coach the day before the big Kentucky basketball game to inform him of the situation. The coach asked for just one more day before declaring the players ineligible, but Hesburgh says, "You've got the word now."

Third, the athlete should lead the same lifestyle as other college students. Hesburgh uses this point to explain how under-the-table payments can hurt the entire process, saying, "They confront the boy with the word possible aspect of double-dealing and graft, giving him a disreputable standard of values-and from 42 educational institutions of all places," and, "if the boy wants to play for money, he would get much more from professional teams who are organized to do this."

Making these points clear to alumni and friends, he stresses, is very important.

The issue of commercial exploitation, however, is a tougher issue for Hesburgh. He says that in the case of a private school, where students (in 1964) pay 65 percent of the cost of running the school, "any contribution looks good, even an athletic one."

But before you can even ask about the danger of making dollars out of student athletes, the president must first determine if the principle he brings to college athletics—football as a just game and education through athletics, then this principle can be followed, he says.

"But what about today? Money is definitely the issue in college athletics, and Notre Dame has changed its stance on bowl games."

But aside from this and a few other anachronisms, Hesburgh gave his opinion a few weeks ago on his 35-year-old testament to college athletics. "I should still write the same thing today," he said.

Baltimore Orioles manager Cal Ripken Sr. (right) made the unkindest cut of all yesterday, sending his son Billy to the club's minor league team in Rochester.

Ripken sends son Billy to minors

Associated Press

MIA M - Cal Ripken Sr., the stoic manager of the Baltimore Orioles, does not let emotions interfere with his job. Just ask Billy Ripken, a son of the first-year skipper and one of 14 players sent back to the minor leagues.

"There was no father-son to it," the 22-year-old second baseman said. "He said five or six words to me: 'we are sending you out.'" The father-manager insisted that the individual meetings with all 14 players do not tug at his heartstrings.

"I told Billy the same thing when you get sent down from a major league club," he said. "But then you realize that it's best that you go out and play ... put on a uniform and go to work."

Asked how he handled a similar situation as a player, the senior Ripken, a former minor league catcher said: "I was never in a big league camp, so I was never sent out. I was released."

Manager Ripken, of course, still has one son on his roster, shortstop Cal Jr.

Billy Ripken, in his first full season at second base, was promoted to the Class AA southern League last season after hitting .388 at Charlotte. He was optioned Monday to Rochester of the Class AAA International League.

Ripken said all the players sent out in Baltimore's first roster trimming of the spring Monday had handled themselves well in camp.

"When you see that," he said, "it's difficult to send them out. But, by the same token, we want them out playing. They've got to get ready for their seasons. It isn't the end of the world."

In addition to Billy Ripken, who is considered perhaps a future star in the major leagues, several other highly-regarded prospects were among the first cuts.

They included second baseman Pete Staneick and third baseman Craig Worthington, who were sent to the minor league camp for reassignment, and pitcher Jeff Ballard, who was optioned to Rochester.

Icy weather, depleted numbers hinder spring football practices

By MARTY STRASEN
Assistant Sports Editor

The squad is depleted, Wednesday's weather was cold and rainy, and at times it seemed the game developed the theme ball would exceed the number of plays run. It was spring football, and Notre Dame head coach Lou Holtz is not about to let such minor problems impede his team's progress after only three practice sessions.

“Spring Football '87”

“We've only been practicing three days and so far I'm very pleased with the way it's gone, but I think the players have the right attitude and are ready to start working long and hard to make themselves a good football team,” Holtz said after yesterday's practice. “I'm not saying we're a good football team right now, but I'm basically just looking forward to right now. Sometimes the defense will come along faster and something will go right on the offense, or sometimes a good pass rush makes it tough for a quarterback to do anything. I'm not saying that's what's happening in general, but those are the type of things that make it difficult to evaluate the team in the spring.”

Some welcome signs on the field yesterday for Irish fans included the spring debut of senior Alfonzo Jefferson and sophomore D.J. Hamilton, tailbacks who were still nursing injuries last year. And as hard as it is to believe, the number of dropped passes and heavy injury slumps and heavy injury are down. But even though the Irish have plenty of athletes because of disciplinary reasons, Holtz and his staff are looking at a shortened group.

Holtz argues that this theme has three basic conditions, all of which as “the athlete is first a student.” In one of my favorite quotes, Holtz said the only thing even resembling an injury to this point was a minor injury in the ankle of sophomore nose tackle Marty Lipps.

With all the talk of players suspensions, Proposition 48 and heavy injury slumps and heavy injury are down. But even though the Irish have plenty of athletes because of disciplinary reasons, Holtz and the Irish have somehow managed to set their sights on sharpening fun- damentals in the spring drills.

“IT's tough to tell this early how the team is doing,” Holtz said. “But they're working really well with each other,” Holtz said, “so what I do is take a look at how certain individual players are doing.” So far I've seen some good things on an individual basis, and I think the offensive line is doing a good job.

“I've been working with the defense a little more than the offense so far, but I'm basically just looking forward to right now. Sometimes the defense will come along faster and something will go right on the offense, or sometimes a good pass rush makes it tough for a quarterback to do anything. I'm not saying that's what's happening in general, but those are the type of things that make it difficult to evaluate the team in the spring. “

Baseball season opener rained out

The Irish baseball squad will face Ball State and Indiana in doubleheader this weekend after their home season opener against Lewis was rained out yesterday.

“Not playing today definitely hurt us,” Head Coach Larry Gallo. “I don't think it will hurt our momentum, though.”

The Irish continued their surge, their weekend to their playoff weekend at Muncie, Ind., Saturday against Ball State and at home Sunday against Indiana. The Irish dropped their first three games of the season to the Hoosiers.

“Some people feel that Indiana has some of the best talent in the Big Ten,” said Gallo.

“Baseball always starts early,” said Gallo. “But I feel we are as good as they are. Our last five games against them, four have been lost in the ninth inning and the other we lost in extra innings.

“Ball State, 1-10, but they have played some excellent competition. Two of our opponents were in the College World Series last year.”

The Irish are 1-1-1 this season, as they start Kevin Chenail, Mike Passilla, Brian Piotrowicz, and Robert Pitts on the Irish this weekend. Chenail leads the starters with a 2.38 ERA, while Passilla is the only starter to have struck out more batters than he has walked, registering 10 K's and issuing nine free passes.

Piotrowicz and Chenail have each worked two complete game is slated for Saturday af- ternoon, April 25. With both a team total 366 for an average of .356 and an impressive RBI's under his belt. He also has a double, one triple and leads the team in stolen bases with four. Peatller has an average of .356 and, like Peatller, has an average of .356.

Through University President Father Theodore Hesburgh, usually refers all athletic matters to his partner, Executive Vice President Father Edmund Joyce, Hesburgh is still held in high regard when it comes to college athletics.

Despite traditional spring weather in South Bend and a depleted squad, Head Coach Lou Holtz is pleased with the team's intensity in early spring drills.

“IRISH ITEMS - Although no scrimmages have been sched- uled yet, the annual Blue-Gold game with some have allowed only 16 earned runs in six starts. Fritz allowed only one earned run in his only win against Schreiner at Kerrville, Texas. Shortstop Pat Pesavento and outfielder Dan Peltier have the hot bats right now for the Irish. Pesavento has a batting average of .356 and an impressive RBI's under his belt. He also has a double, one triple and leads the team in stolen bases with four. Peatller has an average of .356 and, like Peatller, has an average of .356.
