The eternal question: Is PLS for real?

There is a small group of students on the Notre Dame campus who are continuously abused, tormented and misunderstood by their peers. Even though outwardly they appear like anyone else, their lifestyle and beliefs constantly make them the target of ridicule and hate. I know. I am one of them. I am a PLS major.

"What is a PLS major?" you ask. No one is certain but there are many theories. The major itself is described in the student course guide as, "The Program of Liberal Studies: a multifaceted multidisciplinary multime dimensional mishmash which links, inter elates, meshes, fuses, and unites everything and nothing, being and non-being, form and matter, life and death, Jude
Jesus and feminista, oil and water, and spam and jello. Course content may or may not include metaph
ystics, the pill, vegetarianism, garpoyles, hubris and evolution.

Most students are more direct in their explanations of what the PLS in "PLS student" stands for. They affec tionately refer to us as: Pieces of lazy s-, Pseudo-Literary Snobs, People (who) Like Seem or Plato's little sop hists. They also claim that: our Per nectedness Lacks Substance, we Prefer hysics, we have Pathetically Loose Standards

You may have actually crossed paths with a PLS student. We are not hard to spot. Generally, we tend to amble without direction across the quad. We use words like "non sequitur" and "moder nity" in long, qualified statem ents ut ces of everything and nothing, being and non-
being, form and matter, life and death, Jude
Jesus and feminista, oil and water, and spam and jello. Course content may or may not include metaph
ystics, the pill, vegetarianism, garpoyles, hubris and evolution.

tionately refer to us as: Pieces of lazy s-, Pseudo-Literary Snobs, People (who) Like Seem or Plato's little sop contrary to popular belief, we of the PLS inclination do know how to relax and have a good time. In fact we work very hard at enjoying our leisure and take great pride (that is justifiable pride as opposed to the other, nasty, kind.) in our games and festivals. If the truth be known — and once again, for my peers, I should admit that the truth might not be known — if the truth be known, our picnic yesterday was just like any other picnic. We did not sit and brood together in the grass. No one brought a lyre. The poetry reading was kept to a minimum.

Instead, we played modern sports like football, softball and volleyball. We frolicked in the sun and enjoyed the day in a very simple and nonreflective way. I did not hear the "A word" (Aristotle) once.

I am making most of this up.

Some of you may have actually been at the picnic and do not have a recolction of the events which coincide with mine. In fact, you might say that I am making most of this up. That is your right. You perceive reality your way, I'll perceive it mine.
Robertson sweeps GOP straw poll

Associated Press

Ames, IOWA — Television evangelist Pat Robertson gave his backers an emotional charge with a call for "moral strength" and won an easy victory in a straw poll of activists who gathered to listen to seven GOP presidential hopefuls.

Robertson got a third of the votes in the straw poll Saturday at the state GOP’s "Cavalcade of Stars," outdistancing Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole and Vice President George Bush. Former Secretary of State Alexander Haig was the only candidate who did not attend the state GOP’s "Cavalcade of Stars."

"I was surprised and I was impressed," said Iowa Republican Chairman Michael Mahaffey. "They (Robertson backers) were able to marshal their forces."

"He is a serious candidate and this is another indication of the seriousness of his candidacy," said George Wittgraf, Bush’s Iowa campaign manager.

"He (Robertson) got a lot of respect tonight from the other candidates," said Dole spokesman Steve Roberts. "He’s a force to be reckoned with."

Most polls have shown Bush and Dole locked in a close race in Iowa, with the other candidates trailing far behind. While Bush leads in most national polls, Dole has built a strong organization in Iowa, which holds an important early test of the candidates’ ambitions with its Feb. 8 precinct caucuses.

Robertson got 35.6 percent of the votes, compared to Dole’s 24.9 percent and Bush’s 22.4 percent. Rep. Jack Kemp of New York was favored by 13.5 percent while former Delaware Gov. Pierre du Pont got support from 4.1 percent. Haig and little-known candidates Ben Fernandez and Kate Heslop were under 1 percent.

wouldn’t mind students throwing parties, as long as they were occasional and moderate.

In contrast to the image of off-campus students as incon siderate of their neighbors, se veral staff members of the Northeast Neighborhood Center, praised Notre Dame students for their service to the community.

Painting houses, visiting the elderly and helping with the Northeast Neighborhood party sponsored by the senior class, are the "kind of things which really make a difference and bridge the gap" between the students and permanent resi dents, said Quigley.

However, other residents did not seem as positive about their experiences with off-campus students. Melba Ross, 1148 East Corby Blvd., said that while she was collecting in the neighborhood for a charity, many students declined to contribute. They described themselves as only transient members and so did not contribute to the community, she said.

Many residents said the students often suffered as a result of their own irresponsibility when they became the victims of robberies.

"Crime is liable to occur in any place where people are careless," said Quigley.

Residents said they felt the robberies were committed by people from outside the immediate neighborhood who know that many students have valu ables which would be easy to sell.

"Crime disturbs me as a community member. I don’t care to hear about ND students or anybody being harmed," said Ross.

UN chief visits Iraq
Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq - U.S. Secretary of State James A. Baker III, who arrived here on Thursday, met with President Saddam Hussein and other Iraqi leaders on Friday. Baker was accompanied by an American security detail.

The meeting was conducted in a cordial atmosphere, with both sides expressing a desire for better relations.

Baker discussed with Hussein the need for a peaceful resolution of the ongoing conflict in the Gulf region. He also expressed concern about Iran's aggressive actions in the area.

Hussein, in turn, reiterated his country's commitment to the non-proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and to the implementation of U.N. resolutions.

The meeting lasted for several hours, and both sides agreed to continue their efforts to stabilize the situation in the region.

The talks were preceded by a visit to the site of the former U.S. Embassy in Baghdad, which was destroyed in the 1990 Persian Gulf War.

Baker was received by a large crowd of Iraqis, who expressed their appreciation for his visit and his efforts to promote peace in the region.

The meeting was held in a private setting, with a limited number of journalists present to record the proceedings.

During the meeting, both sides agreed to continue their efforts to resolve the conflict through diplomatic means and to work towards a lasting peace in the region.

The talks concluded with a joint press conference, where both sides stressed the importance of international cooperation and the need for a unified approach to address the challenges facing the region.

The meeting was the first high-level visit to Iraq by a U.S. Secretary of State in over 15 years, and it was seen as a significant step towards improving relations between the two countries.
Vietnam War movies overlook ideology

Last spring a movie appeared that, for many, seemed to heal a long-standing wound in the American psyche: “Platoon,” written and directed by Oliver Stone, displayed to many theatergoers the Vietnam war “as it really was,” or so the audiences believed. But was this film really the definitive story of Americans in Vietnam? Is there a crucial dimension of the war that is missing?

Kevin Smant

guest column

There is no question that Stone’s directing leaves us with an intense and vivid message: war is hell. The new recruit, Chris Taylor (Charlie Sheen), on his first patrol is lected by insects, mauled by a not-so-friendly snake, and tripped by exotic shrubbery roots. More importantly, he quickly learns the frustrations of being unable to decisively engage a largely unseen enemy. The film shows how this frustration could turn to rage, and then violence. Sergeant Barnes (Tom Berenger), half-crazed by the killing of a fellow soldier, leads some of his men in a rampage through a farming village; many innocent civilians are slaughtered. In addition to such atrocities, Stone shows festering slaughter caused by the Vietnamese Army or the Viet Cong. A survivor from the provincial capital of Hue. In the 1968 Tet offensive, the Viet Cong controlled Hue for over ten days. They executed over 1,000 people — “enemies of the people,” they said. Ask one of the boat people who have since left a country impermeated due to the imposition of a communist economy. Ask a man named Don Van Toai, who in 1967-68 led student demonstrations against the South Vietnamese government in Saigon. He welcomed the 1975 Communist victory as a “liberation.” But within a month he was arrested and spent five years in prison and “re-education” camps. His crime? He had never officially joined the Viet Cong in his student protest days. Was it still so wrong, then, to fight against such a system? And with Laos and Cambodia falling to the Communist insurgents as well, was the “domino theory” really so silly?

Of course not. Mistakes were made, as everyone knows. President Johnson never wanted to make the commitment needed to ensure South Vietnam’s independence. He continued to hope that only a few more troops, or a few more bombs, would finish the job. And therefore he never explained to the American people exactly what the U.S. presence in Vietnam meant. Nor did he explain how U.S. national security — albeit indirectly — was affected by the conflict. Does anyone wonder why Pidal Castro felt so confident in sending 30,000 Cuban troops to Angola in 1975? A generation’s guilt over the outcome of a past conflict, or its angst from the excesses that war often creates, must not create a historical blind spot, or ruin our will to resist Communism. Our film industry must not give the impression that Communism was not an issue in Vietnam — it was. And the failures of this ideology are oh, so evident today. “Platoon” thus joins “The Deer Hunter.” Now that films portraying one piece of the Vietnam puzzle. But the definitive film on this conflict has yet to be written.

Takeovers spreading

Corporate raider T. Boone Pickens and his Ivanhoe Partners announced that they will offer $86 a share for 28 million shares of Newmont Mining. Newmont Mining shareholders accept the offer, Pickens' group will be able to increase their current holding of 9.9% to 51%. In addition, the Ivanhoe group may change Newmont's board of directors.

Each of the parties have employed its strategy. Many analysts expect Newmont's leaders to look to Consolidated Gold Fields for help in fending off the Ivanhoie bid. CGF owns 26.2% of Newmont and may be willing to increase its stake. This could lead to a bidding war and increase Newmont's stock price from Friday's close of $93,875.

Newmont directors will decide this week whether to recommend that their stockholders accept or decline this offer which expires Oct. 5. Pickens and his Ivanhoe group may change their mind and increase their offer.

Many investors have sold Newmont as indicated by the large sales volume last week. Pickens may not succeed in his takeover bid, but stockholders will emerge as winners. T. Boone Pickens is known for acquiring companies.

Do you ever feel down and need to talk to someone? Do you want to feel a sense of family away from home? If you're one of those people who like to share yourself with others, one who enjoys learning about the experiences of a very special group of people, then the Adopt-A-Nun program at Saint Mary's is just what you have been looking for.

Until this year, the Adopt-A-Nun program was geared solely toward Saint Mary's students. "This is the first year we have had representatives at Notre Dame's activities night," said club vice president Cindy Bosk, a Saint Mary's senior. "It's great to see everyone interested in the program.

The purpose of the program is to recruit students to adopt one of Saint Mary's orifices. Many of them have lived very fruitful lives. They are proof of historical happenings and of the strong beliefs of yesteryear.

"It's good for the girls to know how us sisters live," said Sister Theodora Congrove. "Most people think they have a surprised look on their faces even when they're being visited by a nun, but would allow her to telephone to encourage him."

"It's great to see everyone interested in the program."

The purpose of the program is to recruit students to adopt one of Saint Mary's orifices. Many of them have lived very fruitful lives. They are proof of historical happenings and of the strong beliefs of yesteryear.

"It's good for the girls to know how us sisters live," said Sister Theodora Congrove. "Most people think they have a surprised look on their faces even when they're being visited by a nun, but would allow her to telephone to encourage him."

Coming: Ellen encourages Mark.

Bucs rip Atlanta in opener

Associated Press

Steve DeBerg, who threw seven interceptions in the first week of the 1986 season, when Tampa Bay was 2-14 for the second straight year, looked like an All-Pro on opening day in the NFL sunday, when Bucs, who beat out No. 1 draft pick Vinny Testaverde, passed for 333 yards and a touchdown, scored five touchdowns as the Buccaneers crushed the Atlanta Falcons 46-10 in Ray Perkins debut as Tampa Bay coach.

There were 12 other season openers Sunday.

Redskins 34, Eagles 24

Doug Williams, replacing the injured Jay Schroeder, threw two touchdown passes to Art Monk leading Washington over Philadelphia. Williams passed for 272 yards in his second NFL appearance since 1982.

Steelers 30, 49ers 17

Rookie cornerback Delton Lomax's scoring strikes to Kenny McKnight and Mark Malone overcame a nine-of-33 passing performance against turnover-prone San Francisco. The Steelers are coming off their first winless preseason in 22 years.

Cards 24, Cowboys 13

Neil Lomax hit Roy Green with touchdown passes and Earl Ferral ran 15 yards for St. Louis' third since the final 10-28 against Dallas. Lomax's scoring strikes to Green covered 16 and 22 yards in a span of 65 seconds, the second touchdown with only 53 seconds remaining.

Patriots 28, Dolphins 21

New England scored twice within 10 seconds of the third quarter on Tony Collins' 7-yard run and Ronnie Lippett's 20-yard interception return against Miami. With the score tied 21-21, Dan Marino threw a short pass to Bru Harris, who deflected it toward Lippett. The cornerback raced past the ball and touched to his first NFL touchdown with 7:32 left in the third period.

Oilers 20, Rams 16

Warren Moon threw fourth-quarter touchdown passes of 3 yards to Jamie Williams and 59 yards to Ernest Givins, rallying Houston over the Los Angeles Rams.

Guignon. "I just stroked it. Unbelievable!" Bruce Kilgough, the Indiana keeper, guessed right on the kick. Guignon sent a low shot to the left side to tie the score at three.

Indiana had several excellent chances to win the game in the closing minutes as Irish keeper Dan Lyons stopped Hoeiser forward Pete Stoyanovich on several occasions.

The ultimate chance for Indiana came on a penalty kick with four minutes remaining. But Lyons stopped Herb Helmer's drive to the right corner, preserving the tie and setting up the exciting overtime period.

"I kind of knew where he was going, but not really," said Lyons. "There's still a lot of luck involved."

The save also showed how the 1000-plus crowd played a role in the victory.

(Smagala broke up Taylor's first), and the Irish quickly added another touchdown to increase the lead to 26-7.

"We weren't trying to capitalize on the fact that he's a young quarterback," Wells said of the senior quarterback. "We were just trying to play solid football. This year we're playing better as a team. Everybody's doing their job instead of everyone else's job. That's the way big plays happen.

This cohesive was a big factor for everyone.

"The down linemen pressured a lot," said Soutallah, who was making his first start at free safety. "That just makes it so much easier on the secondary. We can jump some of their shorter routes and make things happen.

"I think on the first one, (Brown) may not have seen me. On the second one, he (Taylor) rushed because of the pass rush. Everyone did their job and made it easy for me."

Rain delays Open

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Rain replaced reign as the headline story at the U.S. Open Sunday.

Steady showers delayed Ivan Lendl's bid for a third straight Open title at the National Tennis Center and his singles finals against Mats Wilander was rescheduled for 3 p.m. EDT Monday.

Although it rained throughout the day, tournament officials waited until 4:20 p.m. to postpone the day's program which also was to include the finals of the women's doubles and mixed doubles.

On Saturday, defending champion Martina Navratilova stated her claim as the world's no. 1 female player by beating top-seeded Steffi Graf to win her fourth U.S. Open title.

Officials wanted to avoid extending the men's final to Monday when the national television audience would be much smaller and some ticket-holders might not be able to attend. Nevertheless, CBS will televise the Lendl-Wilander final on Monday.

Lendl has reached the Open final for the sixth straight year. He lost to Jimmy Connors in 1982 and 1983, and was beaten by John McEnroe in 1984. He beat McEnroe the following year to win his first Open title and defended the championship in 1986 with a victory over Miloslav Mecir.

Wilander owns two Australian Open and two French Open titles but has never won the U.S. Open or Wimbledon. The 23-year-old Swede has met Lendl three times in Grand Slam finals, winning the 1983 Australian Open and the 1985 French Open and losing the 1987 French Open.

Navratilova handed Graf her second defeat in 63 matches this year with a convincing 7-4 (7-4), 6-4 victory at the National Tennis Center.

Graf will retain her No. 1 status when the new computer rankings are released Monday. But Navratilova said before the Open that she would consider herself No. 1 if she added the Open championship to her 1987 French Open title.

Undefeated! Irish upset Wolverines, 26-7

By MARYT STRASSEN
Assistant Sports Editor

ANN ARBOR, Mich. - There's something magical about home openers at the University of Michigan. Until Saturday, the Wolverines were unbeaten in opening games at Michigan Stadium during Bo Schembechler's 18 years as head coach. You see, beating Bo's squad just didn't done there.

But in front of the Stadium's sixth-largest crowd of 106,098, there was nothing magical about the way Notre Dame ended that streak and handed Michigan a 26-7 defeat. The Irish scored after four of the Wolverine turnovers and played almost error-free offense behind senior quarterback Terry Andrisyak.

"I'm not surprised at how well we played," Irish head coach Lou Holtz said. "But this was a great one, the team's - making those turnovers. That just made a difference in the game.

"The Irish had quite a hand in those Wolverine mistakes. Notre Dame's defense consisted of 18 players and past assistants, has worked together some.

Soccer team nips Hoosiers in OT, 4-3

By PETE GEGEN
Assistant Sports Editor

The Irish soccer team beat the odds Sunday afternoon, twice coming from behind to force overtime and eventually upsetting the Indiana Hoosiers, 4-3.

The Irish victory was the first over the Hoosiers in 10 tries, giving Head Coach Dennis Grace a victory over his former mentor, Indiana head coach Jerry Yeagley.

"When you have a team down one goal and they only have 10 men and you have 11, and you lose the game, that's very disheartening," said Grace's former coach. "I credit Notre Dame. Dennis Grace who's one of my past players and past assistants, has worked hard with this program.

"If we were going to get beat in a situation that would be considered an upset, I guess I'm glad it was our past player who did the job.

"The South Bend Connection" was responsible for the winning goal 82 seconds into the overtime period as Irish forward Bruce 'Tiger' McCourt took the ball played over his head by midfielder Kurt Roemer and from 18 yards out footed it past the Indiana keeper into the far right corner.

But to get to the overtime, the Irish had to twice tie the game, play a man down the final 20 minutes and survive a dozen excellent scoring chances for the Hoosiers.

"It's something about that Indiana red and white," said Grace.

After an evenly played first 20 minutes, the Hoosiers began to put pressure on the Irish in their own end, resulting in two goals off restarts. Forward John Paul headed home the first goal off a corner by midfielder Jean Streeter, each turned in tight performances to limit Brown to four completions on 15 attempts (one of eight in the first half) before he was replaced by Taylor in the fourth quarter.

"We moved around, and made it hard for (Brown)," said Cedric Figaro of the Irish defensive scheme. "He was never in that situation where he had to come in, start a game and read coverages. If we stayed locked in, it would have been that much easier for him. We tried to move around and confuse him a little bit. We made him think more. We moved around and he didn't know where to check to off or stay with it.

Defensive wasn't the only area where the No Names stood out. While Wolverine tailback Jamie Morris ran for 128 yards, the Irish forced him to fumble twice. And the Irish made the most of their opportunities.

In the first quarter, Figaro picked off a Brown pass after Smagala leveled the junior quarterback. After a 12-play drive, Ted Gradel kicked a 44-yard field goal to open the scoring.

On Michigan's first play after the kickoff, Morris fumbled. Jeff Knaus recovered it. Terry Andrisyak hit Tim Brown three plays later to put the Irish up 10-0.

In the third quarter, Southall made his first interception, and the Irish found payoffl 10 plays later to lead 17-4.

In the fourth quarter, Southall picked off Taylor on his second attempt.

"I felt that drive was critical," said Holtz, whose Irish rounded out the see HOLTZ, page 14

"Bo's streak"

By DENNIS CORRIGAN
Sports Editor

ANN ARBOR, Mich. - They call themselves the "No Name Defense." Saturday at Michigan this group of no names turned in a performance that should get them some attention.

The Irish defense came up with seven turnovers, four of them later turned into Irish scores, and generally made life rough for Wolverine quarterback Demetrius Streeter, each turned in tight performances to limit Brown to four completions on 15 attempts (one of eight in the first half) before he was replaced by Taylor in Notre Dame's 26-7 win.

The Irish game up with four interceptions, two by Corny Southall and one each by Cedric Figaro and Wes Pritchett, and three fumble recoveries.

Southall's secondary partners, Brandy Wells, Stan Smagala (who had one of the fumble recoveries) and George Streeter, each turned in tight performances to limit Brown to four completions on 15 attempts (one of eight in the first half) before he was replaced by Taylor in the fourth quarter.

"We moved around, and made it hard for (Brown)," said Cedric Figaro of the Irish defensive scheme. "He was never in that situation where he had to come in, start a game and read coverages. If we stayed locked in, it would have been that much easier for him. We tried to move around and confuse him a little bit. We made him think more. We moved around and he didn't know where to check to off or stay with it.

Pass defense wasn't the only area where the No Names stood out. While Wolverine tailback Jamie Morris ran for 128 yards, the Irish forced him to fumble twice. And the Irish made the most of their opportunities.

In the first quarter, Figaro picked off a Brown pass after Smagala leveled the junior quarterback. After a 12-play drive, Ted Gradel kicked a 44-yard field goal to open the scoring.

In the third quarter, Southall made his first interception, and the Irish found payoffl 10 plays later to lead 17-4.

In the fourth quarter, Southall picked off Taylor on his second attempt.

"I felt that drive was critical," said Holtz, whose Irish rounded out the see HOLTZ, page 14

"that they really had a chance. And they did.

"Notre Dame took control of play the rest of the half, and midfielder Joe Sternberg began the first comeback with just three minutes left in the half. Senior captain Steve Lowery hit a long cross which was headed over the keeper out of position, headed it into the goal. The half ended with the Hoosiers up 2-1.

"Even when it was 2-0, you could tell that we were going to come back," said Sternberg. "And after that goal we just realized that we could take them." Indeed it appeared that the Irish would overtime the Hoosiers when freshman forward Danny Robbins, who had turned down a scholarship offer to Indiana to play for the Irish, knocked home a rebound to tie the game at two. Sternberg and forward Randy Morris had worked a beautiful pass play in the corner to set up the cross which McCourt hit off the Indiana keeper before Robbins finished it off.

But the first comeback was finished as Indiana responded with a goal 49 seconds later. Shapert hit the far corner on a 25 yard shot from the left side, giving the Hoosiers a 3-2 lead.

The situation then got worse as freshman stopper Paul LaVigne was whisked for his second yellow card, adding up to one red card, so the Irish were left one man on the field.

"There have been a lot of soccer games over the years. It's 10 down and play on. It's a little bit harder to hold on and work harder, and really work a little bit harder from the start," noted Grace.

The Irish did manage to pressure the Hoosiers on offense. Morris had a break on goal with 14 minutes remaining. He was tripped up from behind, but no foul was called.

But the Irish kept pressuring, and the Hoosiers were frustrated. Forward Notre Dame's Steve Lavigne in the penalty area. Junior captain Johnny.gson was called for a penalty from the penalty kick with 12 minutes remaining in the second half.

"I've always dreamed about taking a penalty shot in this situation," said
