Reagan calls Casey book just fiction
Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Reagan, after telephoning the widow of CIA director William J. Casey to offer his support on Wednesday denounced as "an awful lot of fiction" a book that says Casey arranged for a Middle Eastern assassination attempt.

The president, in an exchange with reporters, also said he did not and would not authorize any assassination attempts and does not believe Casey undertook any covert operations without his knowledge as related in the book by Bob Woodward.

Woodward, an assistant managing editor of The Washington Post, said in an interview published Wednesday by the Los Angeles Times that his hospital meeting with Casey, in which he described Casey as indicating he had known about the diversion of Iranian arms sales profits to Nicaraguan rebels, was "not 100 percent conclusive."

AIDS patients speak out on disease, protection

By SANDY CERIMELE
Saint Mary’s Editor

Members of the Michiana AIDS Coalition and two patients with AIDS told Saint Mary's students Wednesday that education about the devastating disease and responsible "safe sex" are necessary to stop the social stigma surrounding the disease and to prevent the spread of AIDS.

Mike Wallace, director of MAC, said as of last week, only 17 of the 700 people tested by the Saint Joseph Health Department tested positive of having the HIV virus that causes AIDS.

"That's a relatively low percentage and we'd like to keep it that way. It's why education is so important and practicing safe sex can save your life," Wallace said.

The facts, according to MAC representatives, are that the AIDS virus is transmitted through an exchange of body fluids, which includes sexual contacts, blood transfusions and shared needles. Also, children are susceptible to contracting the virus from their mothers at birth and through breastfeeding. The virus cannot be contracted through casual contact such as a handshake.

The treasurer of MAC, John Roxy, said he is organizing a support group in the South Bend area because nothing has been done about the people that need serious physical and emotional help. He also stressed the danger of not being aware of the social permeability of the disease.

"The danger of AIDS is that any of you in this room and on this campus could be exposed to the virus and not know it," said Roxy. He also said the safest relationship is a monogamous relationship that encourages responsible use of the right condoms.

Wallace said natural condoms do not prevent the virus from permeating the membrane. He later said condoms effectively stop the virus from infecting a sexual partner.

Wallace and Roxy conducted a test for the virus for 40 patrons at the Sea Horse Lounge in South Bend. Alan, a victim of AIDS, spoke to the students about the progression of the disease in his life. He was tested HIV positive in 1986, contracting it from his companion who died of AIDS later that year.

"I developed the symptoms of night sweats, terrible headaches, and constant fatigue almost right away," he said. "I had to give up my business, and couldn't come from Houston to live with my parents so they could take care of me."

"The really scary and frustrating thing about this disease is that I never know from day to day what symptoms I may have," Alan said. "I had

Peace groups protest CIA

By ERIC M. BERGAMO
Senior Staff Reporter

Two Notre Dame peace groups hope to inform students about Central Intelligence Agency abuses by protesting CIA interviews on campus, said Joe Ross, head of the Notre Dame chapter of Pax Christi, Women United for Justice and Peace.

The two groups will continue their efforts today from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., although the demonstration will not disrupt the interviews, Ross said.

"We're not here to stop anyone from interviewing," he said.

Ross said CIA activities are "consistently contradictory" to teachings of the church.

"The overall methods and goals of the CIA are destabilizing governments through disinformation and assassination," he said. "The teaching of the Church states that conflict between nations needs to be solved by discussions and dialogue."

The reality is that the CIA is involved in the murders and deaths of civilians," he said. CIA support of the "contra" rebels has been condemned by U.S. bishops, he added.

"The CIA, through its efforts to destabilize, creates an atmosphere of fear and mistrust," he said. "So it works against a dialogue."

This is the third year that the groups have protested CIA interviews at Notre Dame, Ross said.

"Other protests against the CIA will also take place at most Catholic universities in the nation, he added.

A protest at Fordham University in 1985 was so great that the CIA was asked to stop holding interviews off-campus by university officials, Ross said.

The protest at Notre Dame is intended to force the CIA off campus, Ross added.

"We would like to see Notre Dame and other Catholic universities say no to groups like the CIA," he said, "but for now we want to raise the question."

Akbar: Blacks remain victims of mental servitude

By MICHELLE DALL
News Staff

"The legal barriers which defined blacks as less than American citizens in the past have been removed, but, mentally, many people have stayed on the plantations," said Na'im Akbar, an expert on the psychology of African-Americans, during a lecture at the Hesburgh Library Auditorium Wednesday evening.

Akbar, a member of the Black Cultural Arts Society, in conjunction with the Office of Minority Student Affairs, sponsored the lecture in an effort to unite the black community of South Bend with that of Notre Dame.

Akbar is a clinical psychologist from Florida State University and an expert on the psychology of African-Americans. In 1987, he was the recipient of the Martin Luther King, Jr. Distinguished Scholar Award. He has also earned the National Association of Black Social Workers Community Service Award and is currently a columnist for the "Muslim Journal."

In his speech, Akbar spoke primarily about the current condition of blacks in a predominantly white society. Although slavery was legally banned a century ago, Akbar said he believes that blacks remain victims of "mental servitude" in modern society.

Even today, Akbar claims that black students simply attend school to become "good slaves for a good market and, thus, perpetuate their plantation existence."

"As blacks, we can be instructed by the liberalization for our people," he said. "We aren't doing this, however, because our minds belong to someone else."

Akbar emphasized that the key to freedom from mental servitude is self-knowledge, stating, "Self-knowledge is the gateway to all the power we need. People enter the human experience by way of their own experiences, and truth is reached through different doorways."

He continued, "You can come through someone else's door, but then you belong to that person."

He encouraged the audience to "find their own door" and search for wisdom within themselves.

Akbar also stressed that blacks have the ability to see both sides of world issues and, thus, "emminently qualified for world leadership."
The University: Coming together or growing apart

Every long time reader of the Observer is familiar with the perennial editorial of the disgraceful forbiddance or substance of the views that no diversity exists at this University and wishes to publish this finding in repudiation of all this supposed conformity. It is only through the hard sciences, they maintain, that real discoveries are made. On the other hand, if visions fostered by the humanities and social sciences is in some degree verifiable - there is no other, form of education. The university is a forum for the pursuit of knowledge through empirical responses in some way to the actual world.

The question, I believe, is an important one. The way in which a university defines itself establishes the direction in which it will grow. It might be that a diversity of opinion on this question generates new ideas and is healthy for all. On the other hand, if visions fostered by the different disciplines should prove incompatible, the university splits and grows apart. A choice of one program excludes all others.

Galbraith to address N.D. students October 13

Special to the Observer
John Kenneth Galbraith, economist, author and former government personality, will lecture at Notre Dame on Oct. 13. Galbraith, professor emeritus of economics at Harvard, has played an active role through public office in the formation of economic policies of the American government.

As a deputy administrator of the Office of Price Administration in the early 1940's, Galbraith principally organized the war-time system of price control, which he headed until 1943. He was awarded the Medal of Freedom by President Harry S. Truman.

An early supporter of John F. Kennedy, Galbraith also served on the campaign staff of Adlai Stevenson in 1952 and 1956. He was the chairman of the Economic Advisory Committee of the Democratic Advisory Council from 1956 to 1960 and served on Kennedy's 1960 convention staff. Galbraith was the U.S. ambassador to India from 1961 to 1963.

Galbraith is a former editor of Fortune magazine and the author of many books. The most recent in his memoirs, "A Life in Our Times." Other well-known titles include "The Affluent Society," "The New Industrial State" and "The Age of Uncertainty." His books are used in economics, business and American politics courses in colleges and universities throughout the country and around the world.

Mine warning causes scare

Associated Press

MANAMA, Bahrain - A new mine scare Wednesday sent commercial shipping on a circuitous route through the northern Persian Gulf as two U.S.-escorted convoys steamed north and south through the waterway.

The latest reported danger zones were near Farri Island, a stronghold of Iran's Revolutionary Guards. Gulf based shipping executed several possible sightings had been reported by ships sailing to and from Kuwait.

British Royal Navy mine sweepers spent a second day searching waters off the southern coast where possible sightings of mines were reported, but they apparently found nothing.

The 46,723-ton Gas Prince, one of nine refueled Kuwaiti tankers sailing under the Stars and Stripes, steamed south through the gulf on its second outbound voyage since the convoy operation began in mid-July.

Pentagon spokesman Maj. Markic said another convoy moving north consisted of two U.S. military Seafair Command ships carrying supplies, apparently to Bahrain for the U.S. Navy's Middle East Force.

The convoy's appearance created a stir among maritime observers, who speculated that the absence of refueled Kuwaiti tankers indicated an expansion of the U.S. escort operation.

"This is a routine resupply operation. There is nothing new about this," Icenogle said. He identified the ships as the 39,600-ton transport oiler Gas Darnell and the motor vessel Patriot.

The United States began to escort 11 U.S. registered Kuwaiti tankers in July to protect them from possible attack by Iran, which considers Kuwait an ally of Iraq in the seven year Iran-Iraq war.

Witnesses said several non-U.S. vessels were in the group. Icenogle said he couldn't confirm that but noted it isn't unusual for foreign-flag ships to tag along on the convoys.

The cargo ships were being escorted by the missile frigates Rentz, Ford and Thach, and the Raleigh, an amphibious landing ship.

The Pentagon said the Ford and Thach would relieve the cruiser Reeves and frigate Jarrett, which were returning home.

"I can't go to the hospital once because I couldn't breathe recently and last Christmas, my parents had to carry me into the hospital because my legs felt like they were asleep." Alan said he suffered from ARC, AIDS Related Complex, before he developed the full-blown AIDS.

A "person must have full-blown AIDS before they will receive financial support from the government," he said.

"ARC victims are not eligible and the expenses are quite costly.

"The cost of the drug AZT, which only provides comfort to the patients as it retards the present growth of the virus, according to Alan, is $280 to $324 per week.

"The reason behind the high cost is that the researchers say they have to cover the cost of their research before somebody else comes up with a better drug. So the people who are really suffering cannot participate because they can not afford it and they also may not qualify for medical financial assistance," he said.

"I was diagnosed as having been exposed to AIDS last October and was told that I would probably never suffer from the virus. But I was hospitalized shortly afterward for an ulcer and stomach stones," he said.

"I lost 37 pounds by June of this year and I have pneumocysts. I have between six months and two years to live," he said.

All four men urged the students to be tested for AIDS if they had any inclination that they may have been exposed to the virus.

Wallace and MAC are working toward establishing a testing session for the virus on the Saint Mary's and Notre Dame campuses in the future.

Wallace said AIDS studies on college campuses are not reliable and that MAC feels an obligation to make this portion of the population aware of the devastation of the virus.

Synod to discuss role of women

Associated Press

VATICAN CITY - Roman Catholic officials from around the world will discuss giving women a greater role in church affairs - but not as priests - when a monthlong bishops' synod opens Thursday.

Pope John Paul II called the synod, a consultative body that advises the pope on various issues, to examine the role of the laity in church and society.

The synod president, Monsignor Jan Schotte of Belgium, told a news conference Tuesday that 232 cardinals, bishops and church officials from more than 100 countries will attend the assembly. Also involved are 60 observers, including 26 women.

The synod will begin Thursday with a Mass at St. Peter's Basilica. The synod will conclude Oct. 30 after four weeks of closed-door sessions.

Lay observers will participate in some of the discussions, but will not be involved in the decision-making process, Schotte said.

The Pope said last month that the synod should concentrate on ways of giving women a larger role in the Catholic Church, which has 806 million followers.

Many Catholic women's organizations, especially in the United States and other Western countries, have complained that the church is "patriarchal" and male-dominated.

In a Sunday blessing Aug. 16, John Paul noted that the history of the church "is rich with the presence of women" and said the contribution of women had increased in recent years in the fields of evangelization, catechism, liturgy and theology.

"This therefore seems an opportune time to examine more deeply the ways in which the wider participation of women in the various sectors of the church's apostolate can be assured," he said.

Dukakis admits to Biden tape

Associated Press

BOSTON - Two days after issuing a denial, Gov. Michael Dukakis said Wednesday he had learned that his campaign was the source of a videotape that showed Sen. Joseph Biden lifting part of a speech from a British politician.

Dukakis, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, at first refused to accept the resignation of campaign manager James Sasso, who distributed the tape, but later accepted the resignation.

"I would not describe Casey as completely lucid," Woodward said. "I would not describe Casey as capable of making a very, very serious error on judgment, but he is capable of making a very, very serious error in judgment," a grim Woodward said at a morning news conference.

"That is untrue. It's a lie. He could have been in the hospital interview with Casey, who distributed the tape, but was not involved in the decision-making process, Schotte said.

The Pope said last month that the synod should concentrate on ways of giving women a larger role in the Catholic Church, which has 806 million followers.

"My support," Fitzwater said. "Although I had no knowledge of this, as a candidate in this campaign I accept full responsibility for it." a grim Woodward said at a morning news conference.

Dukakis called Sasso's action "a very, very serious error in judgment," but added, "I think his contributions as a public servant outweigh the mistake."

Volunteer work a viable option

Michael DiPaolo is a 1987 Psychology/Alpa graduate and is now a member of the Center for House Community.

Editor's Note: Today, the Center for Social Concerns is hosting its representative of 36 volunteer Post Grad programs between noon and 4 p.m.

I just returned home from my 19 shift which somehow usually lasts about 10 hours. I feel great having worked all day with a group of 25 street kids. It was challenging to say the least, but I can't imagine myself doing anything else. Then I think back to a year ago, and what it was like for myself and 1700 other Notre Dame seniors...

Michael DiPaolo

By May becomes the focus of the question, "What am I going to do next of it before we condemn it. A job or graduate school. It is because of such myths that the University. It is respect than Rodney Dangerfield. Over like a lead balloon, getting less. I feel great having a wholesome fulfillment to this lifestyle. It allows a person to peel away the superficiality and relationships, focusing on the fundamental core of being. It is challenging, exciting, eye-opening, but most of all, it is giving of the self. And, as in all giving, a multitude of things is received. How many psychology majors do actual casework their first year out of school? My basic needs of food are the same. On top of all this, I even receive 12 dollars a day, nursery school, and an occasional beer and peanuts.

From my brief personal experiences, I've learned what the nature of volunteer work is, and what it isn't. Volunteer work isn't just for people who don't know what they want to do, "says one volunteer. "I don't want to be a priest (or nun)," defends another. What myths such statements imply. Nevertheless, it is because of such myths that the thought of volunteer work is ruled out. It is rejected without a second thought. But what about volunteer work? Let's look at a different, more positive view of it before we condemn it.

A year of volunteer work is a year of service - to God, to the poor, etc. It is a year of giving in return for all the gifts with which a Notre Dame student. Mary's student has been blessed. Now I know how you're all sick of hearing this, but I don't think that type of work is challenging, exciting, eye-opening, but most of all, it is giving of the self. And, as in all giving, a multitude of things is received. How many psychology majors do actual casework their first year out of school? My basic needs of food and shelter are provided. On top of all this, I even receive 12 dollars a day, nursery school, and an occasional beer and peanuts.

From my brief personal experiences, I've learned what the nature of volunteer work is, and what it isn't. Volunteer work isn't just for people who don't know what they want to do. Often, students defer acceptances to graduate schools or simply wish to postpone those fun job interviews for awhile. As stated earlier, volunteer work is serving, and in the case of many organizations, it is serving God. But this does not imply that it is a stepping-stone to a religious vocation (as even my own girlfried wondered). The lay community of the Church is a growing force and individuals should not feel hesitant about taking an active part in it.

What I'm trying to say is to be open to the more than valid option of a year of volunteer work after graduation. It's a great way to reflect upon the past, grow and serve in the present, and prepare for the future. I wholeheartedly recommend it, especially for the NDSDM student because of the special character of the Notre Dame community. Remember, law school, there in two years, and so will the business world, but the rich experiences that you could bring to them will be worth much more than one year of your life.

CIA contradicting Church beliefs

Dear Editor:

Women United for Justice and Peace and Pax Christi-Notre Dame will distribute leaflets outside the Hesburgh Library Wednesday, Sept. 30 and Thursday, Oct. I in protest of the Central Intelligence Agency's interview. If viewing on campus those same days. We believe that the activities of the C.I.A. stand in consistent contradiction to what the Church, in its social teaching, bishops' statements, and synods has taught regarding the legitimate rights of governments. The C.I.A. has been and continues to use assassination and disinformation that are geared toward the destabilization of various governments. We believe that these kinds of activities work against the efforts of governments to bring about the peace and justice of the Gospel through...

NFL strike wears on as 15 rejoin teams

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Another 15 players, including quarterback Dan Fouts of San Diego and Pro Bowl center Mike Webster, crossed picket lines Wednesday as union chief Gene Upshaw criss-crossed the country trying to prevent more defections.

That made it 39 players on 15 teams who have returned to practice camps since the NFL strike started nine days ago, according to an Associated Press count. The union has 1,385 players under its jurisdiction, not including first-year players on injured reserve.

Joining White and Webster were wide receiver Roy Green and defensive end Currie Greer of the St. Louis Cardinals, Pittsburgh running back Earnest Jackson, and New Orleans Saints, including two starting defensive linemen, Bruce Clark and Tony Elliott.

Upshaw, meanwhile, met for two-and-a-half hours with the Steelers then returned to his offices in Washington, bringing to nearly 8,000 miles the air time he has logged since Sunday.

Despite the new defections, Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association, continued to maintain that players were solidly behind the strike.

Sports Briefs

The St. Louis Cardinals, despite losing, reduced their magic number to one when Luis Ayala's tenth inning home run lifted the Philadelphia Phillies over the New York Mets, 4-3. The Montreal Expos beat the Cardinals, 6-1, to remain mathematically alive, four games back.

Associated Press

Both contenders for the American League East title were beaten last night. The Toronto Blue Jays lost to Baltimore, 5-2, while the Detroit Tigers were handled by Milwaukee, 7-3. Toronto maintained its one-and-a-half game lead over Detroit.

They're people that past, present, and, future Notre Dame people are going to be very proud of in the future. They make their contributions to the whole community and everything that is in Notre Dame, and the University make unique contributions to the totality of life at the University. It's been a very, very enjoyable and positive experience.

Q: What was it about the job that periodically leadership ought to change in major institutions. I started discussing that with our board at the bank five years before I retired. The bank was in marvelous shape, doing very well. It was a good time to step down. My only difficulty was that I took the job as chief executive when I was 28, and 28 years later I probably ought to do something.

My plan was to spend 90 days doing nothing, and then my wife and I were going to sit down and talk and think about women's soccer. The first part is the continued rapid swing on the Notre Dame campus. The second is the demotion of one of the current women's varsity programs to club level, and the third is soccer. I'm very happy with the individual who had the opportunity.

I was going to do for the rest of my life. It was a good opportunity. I was very happy with and one that you certainly have to recognize the past accomplishments of Notre Dame athletics. It's a fairly significant responsibility to try to carry on and improve upon that tradition in the future.

The University is a very unique place. More women are coming on board. It seems that the opportunities for women to participate in athletics are going to be reviewed. There are just a whole host of significant choices that I think are in front of us in terms of where this program is going. If we can always keep that theme in mind of what's best for the individual student, we'll make some good choices.
Senior defensive back

Streeter takes no prisoners

This is George Streeter, Notre Dame's starting strong safety, and the leader of the defensive secondary.

"My job back there is to be consistent," says Streeter. "Right now I'm the one with the most experience, so I have to keep my poise and lead by example."

Streeter has been setting a tremendous example so far, near the top of the Irish leaders in tackles with 16, and passes broken up, with three.

"George has extremely sound fundamentals," notes Irish Secondary Coach Terry Forbes. "He's just a natural athlete, and right now, George Streeter is playing the best football of his career."

One might expect a leader of a 3-0 football team, ranked fifth in the nation, to be a little cocky. Not Streeter.

"We're pleased with the way we have played so far this year," Streeter says, "but we know that we have to get better. If we don't get better, we get worse - and that is not going to happen."

Like many athletes, Streeter chose to attend Notre Dame because of its unique mix of academics and major college football.

"I've learned to give 100% in whatever I do," he says. "If something is worth doing, then it's worth my best effort. I know how to fight for what I want."

Streeter came to Notre Dame from Julian High School, one of only four players in his class against Air Force in his sophomore year, and he has been a starter ever since.

"George has improved with every game, with every practice," notes Forbes. "He has the ability to be a dominant football player."

Coach Lou Holtz has had a very strong effect on Streeter. He believes in Holtz and the other coaches, and in what they can accomplish together.

"We know that we can beat anybody if we do what we are supposed to do," Streeter says. "It's not a matter of if we are going to win, but whether we will play well or not while doing it."

A graduate of Julian High School in Chicago, Streeter, not surprisingly, is an ardent fan of the Chicago Bears.

"The thing I like most about the Bears is the way they win," said Streeter. "They know no doubt as to who the best team is. They physically beat the other team. Their pride won't let them do anything different."

Coming into the 1987 season, the Notre Dame defense did not have a name for itself. Now, it has a name, of sorts.

"The 'No Name Defense' fits us," notes Streeter. "We just go out and do our job. That's our team, not names."

Forbes likes Streeter's attitude, as well as what he sees from him on the field.

"George's confidence is infectious, it affects the entire team," Forbes says. "We're looking for him to reach a new plateau, an even higher level of play."

players will set the tone for the team at the tournament. According to Gelfman, Cahill has responded well to her number-one position on the team.

"It’s just another day at the office," said Gelfman. "She has confidence and intensity which are the most important things to possess."

On the overall team level Gelfman sees the tournament as a good indicator of the depth of the team. "No one is expecting anything from us," said Gelfman. "However it is time that we expect things from ourselves."

"The next two weeks are critical with regard to the team's handling of pressure," said Gelfman.

The women's tennis team will engage this weekend in a tournament in Evanston, Illinois. The Irish will face the toughest competition of the season for Notre Dame. The team is mired in the consolation bracket for the losers of the first round. It is essential for the Irish to get off to a good start and not become solated. The tournament consists of one draw each for singles and for doubles, as well as a consolation bracket for the losers of the first round. It is essential for the Irish to get off to a good start and not become solated.

Heading into this weekend's play with high hopes, Gelfman feels that it is realistically possible for her players to reach the finals. The key Irish players are Cahill and Dasso, as these two A: It's been fabulous, it really has. I guess the most important impression is the professionalism of the whole Athletic Department, and that not only includes personnel but organization. It's a very professionally run organization. It's organized well. It's defined well. People have their jobs properly described. They understand their assignments and execute them well. It's as professionally done as anything I've ever been associated with.

Having said all that and the structure I guess is there and maybe the first impression is the product of the people. The people are as good at doing their jobs as anyone I've ever been associated with.

To describe these people you've got to quote Ghandi, just more intelligent, and it's always better to know something about the sport.

A perfect test case for this is Notre Dame. Soccer is the fastest growing sport in America, despite its previous lethargic existence in this country for several decades. In the past 10 years, soccer has gone from an anomaly to a high participation sport. This growth is not only visible in the pro ranks, youth leagues have been expanding as kids choose soccer over football in the fall and over baseball in the spring. As a result of all this rapid growth comes to a close, the kids are moving into the college ranks and soccer is now becoming popular on the college campuses.

A perfect test case for this is Notre Dame. Notre Dame's women's soccer program did not gain varsity status until 1977. Led by the flamboyant Rich Hunter through 1983 and guided now by Head Coach, the Irish are ranked 11th in a national poll and catching the attention of the campus and the local South Bend community. In just five years games averaged over 1,000 per game.

"I think our popularity has increased interest, but it's not only because of our success," says Grace. "The students and the fans know the nuances of soccer and they know what to look for. They're Irish face challenge at four-day tournament.

Rosenthal impressed with his new surroundings

BY DENNIS CORRIGAN
Sports Editor

Editors Note - This is the first of a two-part interview with Notre Dame Athletic Director Dick Rosenthal. Rosenthal took the post on August 4 after Gene Corrigan resigned to become the commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference. Rosenthal previously served as the president and chief executive officer of the St. Joseph Bancorporation for 25 years and had recently resigned that post. Rosenthal is a former Irish all-America basketball player and this first impression is Rosenthal talks about taking the athletic director's post.

Q: What are your first impressions?
