Duarte, Reagan speak of peace

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Reagan welcomed Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte to the White House on Wednesday and they agreed there can be no lasting peace in Central America without democratic rule throughout the region.

Duarte, a University of Notre Dame graduate in 1969, was offered an enthusiastic official reception as he began a state visit and he showed his appreciation for U.S. support by kissing an American flag displayed on the White House South Lawn.

After a ceremony that featured full military honors, Reagan said peace prospects for Central America have been enhanced because of the agreement Duarte and four other area presidents signed two months ago.

"If peace is to prevail, so must democracy," Reagan said, adding that a successful outcome of the Aug. 7 accord remains "far from certain."

Duarte, in a similar vein, said Central Americans "still have a long way to go" in implementing the peace plan.

He added, "I am convinced that there cannot be peace in Central America without freedom and democracy."

Some administration officials have been privately criti cal of Duarte for signing the peace agreement, confiding that it does not address key questions, such as Soviet Cuban military ties with Nicaragua's leftist govern

The carnival worker accused of strangling the parents of Notre Dame Executive Vice President Father Edward Beauchamp pleaded not guilty Wednesday to murder and sexual assault charges in a Michigan District Court.

Michael Root, 39, was formally arraigned on two counts of murder and one count of sexual assault, prosecutors said.

No trial date was set.

Root may have been under the influence of drugs at the time of the murder, prosecutors said.

Edward Beauchamp, 75, and Marion Beauchamp, 74, were found strangled in the bedroom of their Ferndale, Mich. home Sept. 8.

The elderly couple's car had been stolen and the house had been broken into through a window.

Personal Ads, Hite report have no 'relation' to truth

“PERSONALS are people’s sexual frustrations in print," a friend said the other day. She’s right, you know. But only partly so.

The Observer’s personals section has increasingly become a place for readers to vent their frustrations about male-female relationships. The personals started last month with "The He-Man Woman Haters Club," which gave Observer readers the top 10 reasons for joining their "organization," the top reason being "You are allowed to say, ‘Get out of my way before I dominate you.’

Then came the ads from the ‘Females Against Guys’ and the ‘She-Ra Man Haters Club.’ Reasons to join those groups included "(Guys) bottom half is their only redeeming quality," and "(Men’s) tolerance for alcohol is inferior like cliche everything else."

Now, all these ads were innocent enough. There was some hostility (and perhaps a truth) and they showed a few people’s frustration about relationships.

But it was all in good fun.

Hite came this week’s “Sue vs. Mike” ads. "To my Alumnae S.Y.R date, Mike, who brought me to his room & indirectly told me to put out or get out, I’m glad I got out! ... I may have been the first but definitely not the last to turn you down. - Your thoroughly disgusted date"

"To which came the reply in today’s personals, "he-men from Regina. I should have brought a bucket of snot to the room instead of champagne. - I’ll worry about being wet as soon as you lose a few, honey - Mike.

Things are really deteriorating.

To make matters worse, these personals coincide with Time magazine’s cover story about Shere Hite’s new book, "Women and Love, a Cultural Revolution in Progress" (Knopf; $24.95). The latest Hite report concerns American women and their love relationships. According to Time, "Hite concluded that women are fed up with men.

Her book, for example, found that 95 percent of men want "emotional and psychological harassment" from the women they love. 96 percent said that they want "to make them cry in basic charges" in their love relationships; and only 18 percent said their relationship comes first in their lives.

Hite’s book also found that 70 percent of the women married five years or more said they are having extramarital affairs; and 45 percent of the married women said they have their "deepest emotional relationship" with a female friend.

Shooting leaves five dead in body shop massacre

Associated Press

PASCO, Wash. - The lone survivor of an auto-body shop massacre that left five men dead rested under guard Wednesday, while police searched for two gunmen who had traded "dirty looks" with their victims in the past.

Police speculated that drug dealing may have sparked the shootings, but stressed they had no firm motive. Drugs, especially cocaine, have long been a problem in this south-central Washington town of 19,000 residents, police Sgt. Andy Anderson said.

The survivor, Jesse Rocio of Pasco, was kept under guard at a hospital while being treated for a minor wound, then was transferred to jail pending a court hearing Thursday on whether he will be held as a material witness, Anderson said.

Anderson said police are concerned about possible retribution by suspects.

Rocio will be held "basically to cover us, to give us time to determine if there is a possibility we're gonna leave and to determine if there's a risk to his safety," said Anderson.

Rocio said in a telephone interview from his hospital bed that he could think of no motive for the shootings Tuesday evening in Medina's Body Shop on Pasco's industrial east side, where four of the victims were employed.

"I've seen them (the gunmen) before on the street," Rocio said. "One time we had a general argument, but we didn't have a real problem with them.

He said he and the other victims, all Hispanics, had exchanged "dirty looks" with the gunmen in the past, but would not elaborate.

No roadblocks were set up Wednesday, but a bulletin was issued to law-enforcement agencies throughout the region, and police said informants were helping in the search.

Early Wednesday, officers fired tear gas into a Pasco apartment where a brother of one suspect lives, after a vehicle believed to be the getaway car was found parked outside, Police Chief Don Francis said. No one was inside the apartment, however.

Rocio said the gunmen entered the shop, looked around, then returned with the weapons and started shooting.

"We weren't expecting that at all," Rocio said. Police said the assailants entered the front door which leads into a small office, and then through another door into the body shop.

Rocio, 30, of Pasco, said he was wounded in the side by a ricocheting bullet when he dove under a car for cover.

"When they started shooting, I just jumped underneath the car and I stay still," Rocio said, adding that the gunmen left without checking to see if anyone was still alive.

Rocio then drove to the police station for help. He was listed in stable condition at Our Lady of Lourdes Hospital.

Francis said there were no signs of a struggle and the bodies were sprawled on the floor on the side of a car away from the doorway.

> EVANSVILLE, Ind. - Those pesky creatures from outer space, if they're not attacking Earth directly, they're infiltrating the populace to put covers on all the world's toasters.

As editor of the science fiction magazine Amazing Stories, Patrick Price said he has seen about every weird story idea imaginable. "I think the most bizarre idea that was generated was one about the toaster cover conspiracy," said Price, a guest at this weekend's convention of the Evansville Science Fiction Association.

"Apparently there was a group of aliens that had come to Earth and assumed human form," he said, outlining a short story the magazine rejected. "But for some reason they had this fetish to cover toasters, and that's why toaster covers were invented.

"As it turns out, the toasters resembled the aliens' genitals, and the premise of the writer was that people who had toaster covers were aliens." - The Observer

Trends have come and gone in science fiction as far back as Jules Verne and his tales of submarines and space ships. "I think the most talked-about trend, and I think it's on the way out, is the cyberpunk movement," said Price. "The cyber being the computerized generation and the punk part referring to adolescent rebellion."

Such stories typically feature younger characters in a post-nuclear age war. A good writer realizes that a story is one-third factual, one-third from the experience of the storyteller and one-third fiction," Price said.

"Unfortunately, people think that anybody can write," he said. "We all have to learn it, so anybody can put the words on paper. But that's the farthest thing from the truth. I don't care how innovative your characters are, how good your grammar, if you can't tell a story, you can't tell a story."

Columbia scraps $100,000 corporate raider prize

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Business school officials nationwide praised Columbia University Wednesday for voiding a $100,000 student prize offered by a corporate raider,.Strategy and Management, a part-time teacher, Asher Edelman.

The decision made Tuesday by Columbia Business School Dean David Stockman to scrap the prize, offered to anyone in Edelman's class who could find a corporation to buy the university, was sharply disputed by Edelman and some members of the class, titled "Corporate Raiding: the Art of War."

The conflict raised questions about what subjects should be taught in U.S. business schools and whether students who enter the highly competitive institutions have become in-fattuated with greed at the expense of other values.

"Bravo for Dean Burton, that's all I can say," said Richard West, dean of New York University's graduate business school. "That offer violates all of the normal canons of the academy. It's simply inconsistent with all the things that academics should hold sacred about the classroom."

West also said he was appalled at what he called the apparent inability of Edelman and some of the students to understand why the $100,000 prize was improper. He and other students said they would have allowed it either.

"It's crucial that schools do their best to teach students not to think about just making money," West said. "It may be that some students in our schools may want to sell their souls to the devil. But we should not have the devil standing at the front of the classroom."

Many business schools, including Columbia and NYU, offer students competitive grants of up to $5,000 for devising business start-up plans that become successful. It is usually understood, however, that the winners will repay the money into a school fund that can be used to award others.

Edelman was not in his office Wednesday to answer questions about the Columbia class. But in an interview with Cable News Network, Edelman said the prize would ensure a student was compensated if he used one of their ideas.

"I offered it because I think it's extremely important for these kids to be entrepreneurs and think of themselves as owners of companies, and this was a step, almost a shocking step, toward bringing them into the real business world as opposed to strictly the academic side of the business world," Edelman said.

"I think Edelman made a category mistake. He was introducing into the academic setting a commercial transaction," said Lawrence Lavengood.

Toddler tumbles 20 feet down well, rescue begun

Associated Press

MIDLAND, Texas - A toddler tumbled by accident Wednesday into an abandoned well, and rescue workers frantically started digging a second shaft to reach the crying child.

Workers estimated it would be late Wednesday night before they could reach 18-month-old Jessica McClure.

At 7:30 p.m., about 10 hours after she fell in the well, workers said about two feet of solid rock still separated them from the child. They estimated it would take three more hours of digging with a small jackhammer to reach her.

Rescuers said they could still hear the girl crying. Floodlights were set up and a light was dropped into the well to warm it up.

"It is solid rock right now. It is pretty slow going," paramedic Dave Felice told the Midland Reporter-Telegram. The girl was getting adequate oxygen and was believed to be lying on her back with her knees drawn up in a relatively comfortable position, he said.

The well, in the back yard of a private day-care center operated by Aimee's mother, is only inches wide in the spot where the child fell in. It widens farther down, and then narrows to a 6-inch opening below the spot where the child came to rest.

Rescue workers dropped a special microphone into the shaft to communicate with the girl. At one time, the child's mother, Reba McClure, talked to her daughter on the microphone.

A camera belonging to the city water department was lowered into the well and the child's face was visible on the screen for a short time.

Workmen drilled 28 feet deep with the parallel shaft and then began working upward toward the child, who was believed to be about 22 feet down. They took it as a sign that if there were a cave in, debris would fall toward the rescuers in stead of toward the child.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden - Two American chemists won the Nobel Prize in chemistry with a French researcher Wednesday for discoveries that could lead to faster computers and speedier trains.

The discoveries that led to the Nobel prizes, made by a French scientist, a Nobel laureate in physics for a breakthrough in superconductors that could produce endless supply of energy by extracting hydrogen from water, and a scientist that can link up with particular ceramic material that can act as a superconductor at a higher temperature than before.

"It's crucial that schools do their best to teach students not to think about just making money," West said. "It may be that some students in our schools may want to sell their souls to the devil. But we should not have the devil standing at the front of the classroom."

"I think Edelman made a category mistake. He was introducing into the academic setting a commercial transaction," said Lawrence Lavengood.
Sheltered program can be a detriment

Robert Hennig

This kind of gets you wondering about the way the various other programs are structured. Very few schools have the resources and financial support to offer such a comprehensive program.

In the Notre Dame London Program, housing and classrooms are provided as are many group tours and social opportunities. But is this the way it really should be?

True, her college is only about half British with other Americans filling the rest of the space. And her college has other students going to Oxford as well. But bear in mind that Notre Dame students do go to Notre Dame; she's totally on her own.

You can say the experience of just being in London is enough for you to get a feel for it. And the majority of the professors in the Notre Dame program are British. But it's just not the same. London Program students are really isolated from the mainstream British university experience. As a result, Notre Dame students become closer friends with the other Notre Dame students, but rarely meet any British students, or even too many other American students.

Alas, if you truly desire to meet some British students you can go to the University of London and just sort of introduce yourself. But it all does seem sort of a waste. You can spend a semester in London and really not know any Londoners, nor anything about the British method of education.

Such a sheltered educational environment is supportive, but misses the entire British educational experience. In a way, we are doing it the easy way and I feel strangely cheated.

For better or worse, Notre Dame will probably never move toward a more open program. That would require loosening the reins. Losing some control.

Notre Dame just doesn't do that. It's in Du Lac, something about in 1500 years.

This is not to say that I am not appreciating the time I am spending in London with the program. On the contrary, I am really enjoying it. I'm just wondering whether it couldn't be something more.

A party for the beautiful and the damned

My candle burns at both ends;
I shall not look behind me upon that part which is finished...

But, ah, my foes, and, oh, my own life!

It gives a lovely light.

Ours may be the first of the "lost generations" to dress up as decadents and thieve- itself an orgy which defines itself as a liberation movement. You could, if you wished, freely your- self of self-love and adopt a lifestyle that would leave you dead at an early age, scorched out of your mind on drugs. In your moments of lucidity, you might feel punished by the realization that you've turned yourself into a jungle slave.

Father Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

You could, like a child of the Jazz Age in Paris—that city of the imagination; a lifetime, according to a story by Scott Fitzgerald—keep yourself sedated by wine, meat, and cocaine, and repeat like a cuel the bitter-sweet epiphany in which Edna St. Vincent Millay describes herself as a candle consumed by extravagance long before dawn. Here was a crowd that figured either God is dead, or he doesn't care what damn about human beings who wish to forget their pain.

It will not last the night; it will be ended by morning. There are three ways to settle the problem of the morning. I would suggest that one of them is as follows: a) the Church and the alehouse; b) the State and the alehouse; c) the Church and the State. If the Church and the State are both determined to do the same thing, then what is the Church doing for the beautiful and the damned?

"It all seems worthless...

In the Village Voice, you can read the brave, sad stories of patients at Half-Life—

"For I give you this sign..."

The Catholic Church didn't make a sign of liberation. If God is dead, maybe the available sign is "For I give you this sign..."

The Church and the State are both determined to do the same thing, then what is the Church doing for the beautiful and the damned?

"The priests I know best are in their old-fashioned Church. "Why does the Church show more sympathy for the downtrodden homosexuals?" I'm running scared, now that Winston Churchill defined a fanatic as one who can't change his mind. I'm not a closet Catholic or a closet gay, but I'm running scared, now that I've been looking for happiness in the wrong places. In wanting to be liberated, you've become a slave of your own worst weak- nesses.

The new No. is for a sign that the Church is more ready with an offer for sinners. America is living through the silly season. In a country which is more than halfway to abolishing sin, though it was an enemy of the war, in the revolution, revolutions feed on slogans of liberation as though those slogans were sacraments. A man who at one point in his life seems deceived, and Cat- stronomists ask their Church to change the slogans, as though none of us were in danger of dying in was- ter from our own self-delusion. If you don't believe in God, abortion on demand may be a need be, and the cause of the God in him. In the Roman Catholic Church, it is the ordinary way in which he relieved his con- science. In the Roman Catholic Church, it is the ordinary way in which he relieved his con- science.

Talks progress as NFL lines crossed

Associated Press

NEW YORK - The 23-day-old NFL strike seemed near an end Wednesday night, with the players one point away from going back to work without a new contract. The union vowed to work through the night in search of agreement, but it was unclear whether normal football could yet be played this weekend.

The new discussions came on a day when some of the biggest names in the game broke ranks with their teammates and led 89 players back to work.

Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL players' association, said the "key sticking point" was how long to extend the 1982 Collective Bargaining Agreement, which expired Aug. 31. The players want a Feb. 1 extension, the owners Feb. 16, Upshaw said.

"We would be willing to return to work. We would be willing to play under the 1982 agreement," Upshaw said. "But everything must expire Feb. 1."

Earlier, Minnesota Vikings General Manager Mike Lynn said progress had been made and "if you can resolve an issue, it can be resolved at any time."

"But time is running out to play this Sunday," he said. "I would say if there wasn't anything done tonight, it would be difficult to get the players ready for Sunday."

Upshaw talked twice by telephone Wednesday with Jack Donlan, executive director of the owners' NFL management Council. And while both union and management spokesmen said nothing was resolved to end the walkout immediately, sources on both sides indicated that more discussions might be imminent as the union faced the fallout from the worst day of defections since the strike began on Sept. 22.

Rice

It hurt. But after awhile, after I got a lot of people and got comfortable with what was happening, it was OK."

Rice became almost legendary on campus in a hurry. When the Irish began losing the close games and starting quarterback Steve Beuerlein got under fire from the student body, Rice's name came up more and more.

"He's an option quarterback. That's what Holtz needs out there."

"He could be another Jamelle Holieway."

Those are some of the more modest things people were saying around here.

"Nobody had even seen me play," Rice said.

In fact, Holtz never saw Rice throw a football until the first day of practice this fall. He saw films, but said it was tough to tell from those how well Rice could throw the ball.

"Everybody was saying, 'You'll be like another Jamelle Holieway,' " Rice said. "I'm not. I'm Tony Rice. That's it."

Considering what Rice has done in the past, that should be enough.

The Woodruff, S.C., High School star led his school to two consecutive Class AA state titles and was a three-time all-conference and two-time all-state selection. Rice picked up more than 7,000 career yards in total offense as a four-year starter, and was understood by many to be the most highly-touted players in the nation.

And for a sophomore with little game experience, Rice seems to like being under the pressure of a game situation. Especially when you compare the games with the practices.

"It's harder in practices for me, because Coach Holtz is right there," Rice said. "The games are easier, when he's on the sidelines and not bothering you."

"At first I thought he (Holtz) didn't like me," Rice laughed. "When I made a bad play, he'd say stuff like, 'I'm never recruiting from South Carolina again.'"

But if prospects like Rice keep coming along, don't count on Holtz living up to that statement.
Irish travel to Midwest, Far West over break

By PETE SKIKO
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame soccer team, nursing a 13-0-1 unbeaten string and gaining more national attention with each game, fights to remain among the ranks of the unbeaten as it goes on the road for two games over break.

The Irish will travel to DePaul on Saturday for an afternoon game with the Blue Demons, and will then catch a flight west for a game next Wednesday with Portland.

"DePaul has only won two games, but those were their last two," said Head Coach Dennis Grace, in his fourth year as the coach of the Irish.

"They have absolutely nothing to lose by playing us. They're going to go all out to try to knock off a team in the Top 20," said Grace. "They're going to do their best to lose by playing us. They're not thinking that the rankings have affected anyone on the squad, least of all him."

"The kids just want to play," said Grace. "They're going to want to travel after midterm exams and play some good soccer. I figure we shouldn't get too excited until we have good reason to celebrate hopefully, that will be at the end of the year. But the boys had two days off before (yesterday's) practice and they looked real fresh. I'm happy with their attitude going in.

Portland may prove to be more of a challenge to the Irish, and Grace is wary of the squad, which is similar to the Irish in several ways. "They have a very good unit, there's no doubt about that," said Grace. "Their coach is in his fourth year there, as am I. Their team is loaded with juniors who have experience and talent, something similar to ours. And the last time I talked to their coach, he was talking about challenging for a national championship within a few years. I don't know if they have that potential, but we certainly will not overlook them.

"Also, they play on AstroTurf out there, and the last time we played on turf (against Western Michigan) we didn't have one of our better performances. If we maintain the intensity that we've showed for a lot of this season, we should be all right."
Cross country squads to run at Indiana Intercollegiates

By GREG GUFEY

The women's cross country team will be trying to establish itself as a state powerhouse Friday at the Indiana Intercollegiates at Purdue.

The Irish finished first in the little state division last year and fifth overall. Once again, the teams to beat will be the host Boilermakers, Indiana, Indiana State and Ball State.

"We can do at least as well as last year," coach Dan Ryan said. "I'd like to finish in the top four. It will depend on the strength of the girls and how well they pack.

The tactics and strategy of the team the Irish will have to down to put into the top four, Ball State, will be no surprise to the Irish. The Cardinals finished one spot ahead of them at the Notre Dame Invitational and then downed the Irish 15-48 in a meet last weekend. Ryan, though, rested his top five in the dual meet and says that will give his team an advantage over the Cardinals.

"I think it will be a significant factor," Ryan said. "Our top five will be a little fresher.

Ball State had to run one more race than us. With a few more teams and some more individuals spread in there, I think we can take them."

The Ball State meet did decide the remainder of the Irish lineup for this week's meet. Freshman Ruth Platz and sophomore Linda Filar will join regulars Theresa Rice, Jenny Ledrick, Julia Mertel, Kathleen Lehman and Wendy Murray as the Irish hopefuls.

The Cardinals finished with their third World Series trip, third in the last six years, by winning the final two games at home before raucous crowds of 55,231. St. Louis and the Minnesota Twins, making the first World Series appearance since 1965, play Game 1 Saturday night at the Metrodome.

Volleyball team looks strong at midway point

By BRIAN O'GARA

They're 16-4, and off to the best start ever for a Notre Dame volleyball team. But three of those losses have come to Top 20 teams, and two Irish sophomores next week are, you guessed it, in the Top 20.

Notre Dame will face seventh-ranked Texas this Saturday, and eighth-ranked Nebraska next Thursday. In between these two tough matches the Irish will meet the seventh-ranked Nebraska on October 15th. All these contests will be away.

"Texas is far and away the best team we have played thus far," said Notre Dame head coach Art Lambert. "Both Texas and Nebraska are the types of teams that will not beat themselves. They don't give away side-outs that will not beat themselves."

"What I want first and foremost," said Lambert, "is to have our players enjoy the game and take our game to a higher level. I'm very satisfied with our post-season play. We have a season or five days. For the season, we have played very good but it has not been as fast as I thought it would be."

The Irish have won 13 of their last 15 matches, losing only to No. 16 Northwestern and No. 10 Kentucky since September. Of their 16 wins, 10 have come in a row and three are ranked teams.

Leading the way for Notre Dame has been Rachel Hall, who has been improving more and more confidence. "I have no doubt that Colleen Wagner will make her presence known, it's just a matter of when." said Lambert.

Holtz insists. "It's a case where whoever's the quarterback, everybody's got to pull for him who ever's the quarterback," Holtz described the frustration of trying to pick the bone. "They run the same thing play after play, down after down," he said. "They know it very well and there's no way you stop that on the blackboard. The blackboard will not be able to defend the wishbone. What you have to do is play excellent technique and hope that somewhere along the line you can execute."

That challenge is in the hands of Notre Dame's defensive unit which also lost a quarterback, free safety Cory Southall, to injury (knee). Freshman Todd Lyght will call the signals from the secondary in place of Southall.

Defensive tackle Jeff Kanz may also miss the game with an ankle injury that has been plaguing him much of the year. If he is unable to play, Bryan Flannery will get the start. Ned Bilec had 17 tackles last week, Darrell Gordon had 15 and Cedric Figaro 15 to lead the defense, but the squad suffered its worst outing of the season. Pitt was able to pile up 204 rushing yards, the most against Notre Dame this season.

The run defense will have plenty of chances to redeem itself against the wishbone.

COLORADO SPRINGS - The Notre Dame football team finds itself in a rather unfamiliar situation going into its game against Air Force - they are coming off a loss.

The game will be televised by WGN and WNDU at 1 p.m., South Bend time.

How well the Irish (ranked 11th in AP, 13th in UPI) respond to last week's loss to Pittsburgh, and injuries to quarterback Terry Andrysiak and Corry Southall, is something Lou Holtz is as anxious as anyone to find out.

"I wish I could tell you exactly where we're going to go and what our reaction is going to be, but in all honesty I really don't know," said the Irish head coach.

This is a very important game for Notre Dame. I think how we react is going to be very important to our football team.

Notre Dame running back coach Jim Strong praised Johnson's ample athletic abilities as well as his team-oriented play.

"Anthony Johnson has tremendous running skills," Strong says, "and his unselfish play in the backfield, despite a nagging ankle injury, has helped make us a good football team.

Johnson came into Notre Dame and immediately made an impact at tailback, a position which he was somewhat unfamiliar with.

"I didn't expect to play so much right away," Johnson adds, "but I was ready to help the team in any way that I could. I had hoped to play on the special teams, but when the opportunity came, I was ready to go and I wasn't going to let it slip by.

That opportunity led him to play sufficiently against Air Force, to earn the starting tailback job in the direction of Panther cornerback Gary Richard.

And once he was named the starter, which it was a fourth-down play.

But being the starting quarterback for 11th ranked Notre Dame doesn't erase the bad memories.

As a freshman, Rice never felt farther away from being a member of the team. In fact, he had trouble sticking around for a pep rally on at least one occasion.

"I remember my first pep rally when we played Michigan," Rice said. "I walked in there and everyone is asking, 'What's your name?' I told them and they would say, 'Oh, you're under Proposition 48.'

"I just left. I didn't even stay for the pep rally.
