ND raises 2nd highest development amount ever

By KIMBERLY TRENNER
Senior Staff Reporter

Notre Dame's Department of Development raised $45.8 million dollars in fiscal 1987, the second highest amount of money in the institution's history.

The figure is only topped by the $48.2 million raised in fiscal 1986 and is almost double the $24.2 million received in fiscal 1984. All of the money included in these figures are cash contributions, not pledges.

"Notre Dame continues to rank high on the list of private universities in most fund-raising categories," Joseph Sandman, Director of Development for Notre Dame. Recent rankings place us first in support from parents, tenth in corporate matching gifts and seventeenth in total dollars raised, according to Sandman.

Sandman attributes the success of the fund-raising to new development programs. "In the last four years since Dr. Sexton, the Vice President of University Relations, has taken over, we have implemented a number of new development programs which for the first time have given Notre Dame a comprehensive development program," said Sandman.

"Some of the programs used for development are a strong annual fund program, a campaign once a decade and strong planned giving," added Sandman.

Notre Dame is currently raising money for its $300 million campaign, 'Notre Dame: A Strategic Moment,' which was announced in May. It is the largest fund-raising effort ever undertaken by a Catholic university. At the end of fiscal 1987, a total of $216 million, or 72 percent, had been given or committed to the five year campaign. The money raised in this campaign will go towards buildings, fellowships, scholarships and libraries.

Regarding this year's fundraising, Sandman said, "We expect to increase the amount of cash we are going to secure... We are shooting for a goal of $46 million."

"We are definitely ahead of last year's rate," he added.

Sandman cited several reasons for Notre Dame's tradition of generous support from alumnae, parents, corporations and friends. "Our constituency endorses the mission of the university," he said. "What we do is not being pursued by other universities. We have a very strong under-graduate program which we will not let suffer, unlike Harvard, Yale and other great research universities.

Sandman said that people also give to Notre Dame in order to help the University achieve its aim of being able to compete with other great universities in the area of research. "We are striving towards excellence in graduate education and research," he said. "We know how we have to improve."

"The university is committed to the preservation of its strong Catholic character," he said.

4th district council race to revive old rivalry

By ERIC M. BERGAMO
Senior Staff Reporter

The upcoming election for South Bend's 4th District City council seat will be round 2 in a political rivalry that began in 1983.

Democratic incumbent Ann Puzello seeks to return to the council for a second term, running in opposition to Republican nominee Richard Heyde, whom she defeated in the last race four years ago. Puzello won 62 percent of the vote in the 1983 election, surpassing Heyde by 1,400 votes. This year in the Democratic primary, Puzello won a close race against challenger Alfred Kirby by 86 votes.

The 4th district comprises most of the Northeast Neighborhood. The district is also home to Democratic mayoral nominee Joe Kerman.

Puzello, 46, is an elementary school teacher and a graduate of Illinois College. She obtained a master's degree in Environmental Science at South Bend and also has experience in managing a small business.

Puzello serves as chairman of the Public Safety Committee on the council. She is also chairman of the Committee of the Whole.

Heyde, 42, is employed as a regional marketing director. A graduate of Indiana University at South Bend, Heyde worked 10 years as a detective sergeant for the county police.

Puzello is stressing efforts to relieve traffic flow problems on major streets that cross the district in her campaign.

Puzello also lists efforts to alleviate crime and parties of Notre Dame students in the "Five Points" area.

Heyde is running on opposition to the Community Oriented Police (COP) Program and is seeking to abolish the program.

The COP program has established neighborhood police sections. Heyde says the program has been a failure in preventing an increase in criminal and drug activity and a waste of money.

Puzello has warned that the program would be costly to discontinue.
Many tourists seem to be blinded by cameraflashes

As another visitor wandered toward the memorial, he found that trees and ropes prevented him from approaching the wall head-on. If he’d had a camera, he couldn’t have taken a picture of the whole thing if he’d wanted to. He was forced to start at one end of the wall and walk close to it where he could read the names.

The wall started as a small triangle at his feet. But as he walked along the wall, the sidewalk sloped downward and the wall became taller as the triangle of black marble widened. The handful of names at his feet became an overwhelming wall of names, and soon he had descended so low that he could no longer see over it. As he quickened his pace, the growing wall peaked and began to get smaller again.

I watched him turn around as he reached the end of the wall. He gazed back in the direction of those thousands of names. And he saw dozens of nameless tourists, waiting film in the dark, taking pictures of things they had never really seen.

Radiation poisoning raises questions

Associated Press

ANGRA DOS REIS, Brazil - The radiation poisoning of more than 200 people has raised serious questions about the government's ability to control its ambitious nuclear program, which includes the technology for atomic weapons.

This vast nation of 138 million people has one atomic power plant on line - the quiet fishing community of Angra dos Reis - and two more planned. But it has no site for safely disposing of nuclear waste.

The navy minister has announced plans to make fuel for atomic submarines, even though Brazil doesn't have any nuclear-powered subs. Last month's poisoning of 243 people in the central city of Goiania occurred just one month after President Jose Sarney proudly announced that Brazil had mastered the technique of enriching uranium, a necessary step in building an atomic bomb.

A scavenger took a capsule of the isotope cesium-137 from a partly demolished cancer treatment clinic. A junk dealer broke open the 500-pound lead casing and found about 3 ounces of a phosphorescent powder which he and others confused with carnival glitter.

By late October, four people who had rubbed the cesium on their bodies, including a 6-year-old girl, were dead. Seven others remain hospitalized with little chance of survival.

It was considered the world's most serious nuclear radiation incident since the 1986 disaster at Chernobyl reactor in the Soviet Union that took more than 30 lives.

Rex Nazare, the president of the national Nuclear Energy Commission, said on national television the Goiania incident would not affect Brazil's nuclear program, which he declared safe.

"Our conscience is clear," he said.

But many people say Brazil's thrust into the atomic age is downright dangerous.

French 'irangate' reported

Associated Press

PARIS - A scandal that some reports are calling the French Iranagate is brewing over the sale of munitions to Iran by a French arms manufacturer with the alleged complicity of high Defense Ministry officials.

According to articles published over the weekend in the local press, an investigating magistrate in Paris is seeking to have a Defense Ministry report on the sales declassified so charges can be brought against several people.

What is known as the "Luc-Hair Affair" involves the clandestine delivery of 450,000 artillery shells to Iran between 1983 and 1986 under the Socialist government of Premier Laurent Fabius.

Reports in two weekly newsmagazines, Compagnie des Commerciants, implicated high-ranking officials in the office of former Defense Minister Charles Hernu and say that even President Francois Mit terrand knew about the sales, which contravened a government embargo on shipments to Iran.

In addition, a leftist newspaper reported Sunday in Beirut that the Paris government under Fabius tried unsuccessfully to negotiate with Iran for the release of French hostages in Lebanon in exchange for a $3 million ransom.

As-Salir quoted unidentified diplomatic sources as saying France also agreed to provide Iran with 500,000 heavy artillery shells, "but the deal collapsed at the last minute."

Six Frenchmen are among 22 foreigners missing in Lebanon and believed held hostage by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem extremists.

In addition, Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite of Britain vanished in January while seeking the release of American hostages.

A South Korean diplomat, Do Chae Sung, was released last week after 21 months in captivity, reportedly for a $1 million ransom. The Seoul government, however, has denied paying any money to win Do's release.

The French press articles were based on a report titled "Confidential Defense" by Jean-Francois Barba, comptroller-general of the armies. According to the report, cited by the weekly Le Point, "There is no doubt that members of the office of the minister of defense covered up this illegal export."

Hernu, in a television interview, denied having been involved in illegal arms sales and said the news articles were part of a smear campaign by the governing conservatives.

Ginsburg may have had conflict of interest in case

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - National security adviser Frank Carlucci said Sunday that a U.S.-Soviet accord on intermediate-range nuclear missiles is "98 percent of the way there" and predicted Senate ratification.

However, a leading Senate Democrat warned that the superpower pact could be doomed if conservative Republicans tamper with it by attaching amendments on issues like the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

"I do think that there could be problems," said Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., the Senate Democratic whip who is also a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the Select Committee on Intelligence.

"There are 15-20 very conservative Republican senators who I think are very likely to take on the treaty directly, and I think there are others who might take it on by indirection... They might well suggest various reservations or amendments that would, in effect, kill it," Cranston said on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley."

"I think there are a number of Republican senators and they'll be a few Democrats who are not in favor of any treaty with the Soviet Union, feel it's unverifiable, unenforceable," the Indiana Republican said on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley."

"It is a First Amendment rights case that had economic consequences to it..." said a former federal ethics official familiar with the cable case but not with Ginsburg's role in it.

"If I'm holding cable stock, that is a good thing for me." Ginsburg himself declined comment. But speaking on his behalf Sunday night, Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland said Ginsburg "considered at the time the possibility of staying out of the... case."

"Mr. Ginsburg decided that he could properly participate because the case before the court did not involve the company in which he invested was not a direct party to the case even though it could benefit from the ruling. But ethics experts said Ginsburg's actions could be viewed as skirting a presidential executive order forbidding actions that create an appearance of conflict or of favoritism. Violation of that order carries administrative penalties, such as a letter of reprimand or suspension."

Campaign launched against pornography

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - The opening shots in a war against hard-core pornography - a $300,000 campaign including billboards, a newspaper insert and a TV program - have been fired in Kansas City by activists who say their target is dehumanizing and dangerous.

Their critics, however, say the group is using scare tactics and exaggerating the problem to arouse the public, and they raise the specter of censorship down the road.

The anti-porn drive was a test, organizers said. A national group may take the campaign throughout the country, depending on its evaluation of the Kansas City effort.

The campaign launched over the past month by the National Coalition Against Pornography and its local affiliate urged people to Stand Together Opposing Pornography, or STOP.

It featured 80 billboards, a TV program - STOP:Pornography, or STOP.

It also circulated petitions at churches as one that Kansas City faces down the road.

The group is using scare tactics and exaggerating the problem to arouse the public, and they say their target is dehumanizing and dangerous.

The anti-porn drive was a test, organizers said. A national group may take the campaign throughout the country, depending on its evaluation of the Kansas City effort.

The campaign launched over the past month by the National Coalition Against Pornography and its local affiliate urged people to Stand Together Opposing Pornography, or STOP.

It featured 80 billboards, a two-hour television program, direct mail pleas, a 12-page newspaper insert and a phone bank to take calls from financial contributors.

"If enough of us stand together, we can provide the support our public officials need to take on the pornographers and prosecute them for selling illegal materials," said one advertiser.

The last Sunday in September, thousands of petitions were circulated at churches as a king public officials to enforce obscenity laws.

"It is designed to communicate to virtually every adult in the Kansas City area," said Chris Cooper, full-time director of the coalition's Kansas City branch.

He called the group's fund-raising efforts during the month-long campaign that ended Saturday "very successful."

Cooper said grass-roots support was one reason Kansas City was chosen for STOP's debut. He also said coalition officials believed a large amount of obscene material is distributed here, though he said the level may be typical for a city of a half-million people.

The leader of the national organization, Presbyterian minister Jerry Kirk of Cincinnati, said the Kansas City results will be evaluated before other cities attempt a similar effort to depict pornography as not just offensive, but dangerous.

But the campaign has drawn criticism for statements such as one that Kansas City faces an "epidemic" of pornography.

An editorial in The Kansas City Times suggested it was exploiting contributors by using scare tactics and advocating censorship.

"We were surprised, frankly, by the editorial because our position is clearly against censorship," Cooper said. "We are only against that material that is not protected by the First Amendment."
Open your eyes to the problem of poverty

A general assumption, held in both intellectual and non-intellectual circles, has gone something like this: "Well, Garry Trudeau's comic strip "Doonesbury" can be tough, even vicious. But, shocks, he salarizes people and businesses into thinking of psychological denial, whereby convincing themselves problems regarding the poor do not exist. In many instances, people's acknowledgement of poverty and welfare programs stops here at this psychological barrier. But for some, recognition of the problem goes a bit further where certain myths are encountered.

Wealth has had trouble succeeding because so many Americans are under the assumption that welfare recipients are too lazy to work or actually enjoy being on welfare. In reality, though, many of the recipients are unable to work for various reasons and do not like being on welfare. There is a definite need to educate these people as to how to succeed. The welfare program has encountered more difficulties over the past twenty-two years.

Within our government, where social programs are supposed to originate, there is an ideological conflict between Democrats and Republicans. Both the liberals and conservatives appear to show interest in welfare reform when the Democrats, long known for their social programs, look to redistribute our nation's income in an attempt to alleviate some of the problems faced by poverty stricken individuals and families. They are faced with a Reagan Administration full of nice sounding welfare-related rhetoric; but also unwilling to cut military spending and raise taxes. A possible answer to better solve the poverty and welfare problems may be an outgrowth of this conflict.

In order to open our eyes and see how this conflict can be resolved. A redistribution of governmental funds poses as a plausible start to a solution. More money needs to be spent on social programs, namely programs of welfare reform; less money need be appropriated to our military budget, specifically nuclear weapons and Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) research. The focal point of Congressional and the Administration's concentration should not be on a military buildup, one that is by many standards too big already. Rather, we should work to provide everyone with suitable living conditions.

The cold facts are apparent: One out of five children lives in poverty, two out of four black children and two out of five Hispanic children experience the harsh effects of poverty. As Rep. Thomas J. Downey, D.N.Y., noted, we can "end child poverty by ending parental poverty." There is more to poverty and welfare reform than just children. Single women and minorities constitute another large percentage of those living in poverty. This is one reason for a greater need for aid to families with dependent children (AFDC), which has been seriously affected by cuts in the budget made by the Reagan Administration. With the facts evident, we must open our eyes to the problems of poverty and welfare.

At the close of the 1987 Summer Conference on Peace and Justice Education, Fr. Edward Malloy, President of the University of Notre Dame, closed the conference by asking all Catholic colleges and universities to address the problems of justice and peace in society. This is exactly the type of awareness America's college and university students need. After becoming aware of these problems and proper education, these students can, in turn, help the poor with different aspects of life. With this newfound knowledge, it is time to take action.

Action can be taken locally to help welfare recipients, as well as those who lack certain educational skills. For instance, the Literary Council of St. Joseph County, Real Services, and Headstart are just a few of the many volunteer services in the South Bend area that aid many people who may either be receiving welfare or living in poverty. At the federal level, people can write letters to their Congressmen showing support for welfare reform bills currently in both the House and the Senate.

To suggest there is a solution to completely erase poverty would be incorrect. There is a way to lessen these hardships and help people lead lives with a respectable amount of dignity. A means exists for everyone to become involved in the helping process. The problems of poverty will not simply disappear by avoiding the realities of the situations. Let's open our eyes and take action.

from their experience.

The first Cross Associates arrived in 1978. The Program has grown and matured greatly since. Twenty-six Associates have completed their involvement in the Program. At present, six men and three women are ministering in Chile and three more are in the first stages of their service. Three Notre Dame graduates who returned from Chile earlier this year, Joanne, Lou, and Brigitte, along with Jennifer Lamont, all display different motivations, impressions, and effects from their experience.

Why did you choose to go to Chile?

Joan: My reasons for wanting to go to Latin America, and Calvin and Hobbes specifically Chile, date back to my high school years. In my Christian upbringing and my family's belief that faith and action are intricately linked, I was quite involved during high school in community service projects. As a Notre Dame student, I became increasingly aware of the disparity between the "haves" and the "have-nots." After spending my sophomore year in the Mexico foreign study program, I returned to the states deeply shaken and moved by the turmoil. In 80% of the "haves," the people are the "have-nots." Going to Chile was a natural step in terms of expanding my vision and experience with the poor.

Lou: I went to Chile as a Holy Cross Associate, first and foremost because of a desire for growth in my mission and service to others. I wanted to be more God-centered and "other-centered" in my life, and I feared the "I-centeredness" that I saw so much of in the United States. I guess you could say that I went to Chile not so much looking for status, but with a primary concern for my formation as a Christian person. I entered a niche of caring human beings.

Brigitte: I came to Chile to simply learn, learn a new language, a new culture, a new way of being and a new way of looking at the world. I went to serve and was actually served. I went looking for peace and encountered people living in turmoil. With poverty with no running water or electricity, sometimes with barely enough to survive. I found peace in nature. In the mountains, and in the faith of the Chilean peasant farmers. For the extreme harsh living conditions, their resilience to God and the church was endless.

What did you do in Chile?

Joan: I worked in a number of different activities. My first year was spent almost exclusively in our parish in Punta Arenas, a large shanty town area of 20,000 people located on the east side of Santiago. I organized a number of first aid classes in the chapels, cooked with 20 women who had formed an "olla commun" (a Chilean style soup kitchen) to feed their families, and helped to organize several groups concerned with basic home repair--the heavy winter rains destroy the pressed cardboard roofs used in the shanties. It rains inside the houses.

Lou: I spent my second and third years working in a tiny library of Colegio Andacollo, a large and very poor elementary and high school on a weekly basis. It was for me far more than an eye-opening experience. The children, hungry and cold, playing in mudied streets the tortured young woman, the frightened mother, the beaten, deserted, hungry, and cold, playing in mudied streets the tortured young woman, the frightened mother, the beaten, deserted, frightened children. Living in poverty, I was surprised by the hospitality--people opened their homes to us around lunchtime and often we were invited in to share the main meal with the peasant farmers. Although the diet was simple--beans, rice, bread, potatoes and onions--it was served with love. After lunch we got invited to take a stroll or to sit and to announce the plans for the evening: Blurges, confirmation preparation or a general village get-together. After the liturgies we usually shared a cup of tea and bread with the family who took us in.

More than doing this, we often were simply present to the people, and a way to share their burden which more often than not wasn't shared. The most important times were those home visits. We, the Chileans, and the missionaries, shared.

We gave them a time and a way to share their burden which more often than not they carried alone.

Lou: Returning to the United States after the Holy Cross Associates experience is not easy. It leaves one questioning money, the way our world community is ordered, and about one's responsibilities as a Christian and a member in that community. I have a stronger sense of values and faith than ever before, and I'm confident that it will lead me to other experiences of displacing guilt in faith and service to others.

Brigitte: The people of Chile and life experience of our master's program in Peace Studies has been a powerful learning experience in life and are those which are important--an afternoon tea, a chat, a walk, a shared meal, no overnight project. What are your plans for the future?

Joan: I am certain that I will return to Latin America and therefore have chosen to return to school to get joint degrees in nursing and mid-wifery. This will allow me to return to Latin America trained to help in a specific capacity. Health care is a need which I hope to meet, but the poor through-out the world are forced to live without it, grow sometimes, unfortunately, consider it to be a privilege of the rich.

Lou: This year I'm involved in a master's program in Peace Studies with eleven others from various parts of the world. It has been an excellent opportunity for me to learn about contemporary issues and to work together for justice and peace. At this moment I'm not sure what my next step will be. I do, however, have a stronger sense of values and faith than ever before, and I'm confident that it will lead me to other experiences of displacing guilt in faith and service to others.

Brigitte: I live in the Catholic Worker for homeless families in South Bend; I have always wanted to do this. While in Chile I learned the meaning of hospitality--people opened their doors to me and I in turn slowly learned to open my doors, both literally and figuratively.

Twins look forward to proving season was no fluke

Associated Press

San Antonio - Tom Watson, exhibiting the gritty determination that once made him the game's greatest player, ended a three-year victory famine Sunday in the richest tournament golf has seen. Watson, the leader all the way, scrambled to a final-round 2-under-par 68 and a two-stroke victory over Chip Beck in the Nabisco Championships of Golf, the final official event on the PGA tour schedule this year.

It was the 32nd victory of his PGA career not including his five British Open titles and his first since July 1984.

The tournament carried a $2 million purse, plus another $1 million for the Nabisco Grand Prix of Golf, which also ended in this tournament. Despite finishing dead last in a 30-man tournament that offered the most prize money in tour history, Curtis Strange took the season's money-winning title with a record $929,941.

But the honor he wanted - Player of the Year eluded him. That went to Paul Azinger, like Strange a three-time winner this season.

In a tournament that offered almost 10 percent of the total tour purse for 1987, the Player of the Year title turned on scoring average. Strange's 293 total for this event knocked him out of the Top 10 in scoring average and handed the title to Azinger.

No one handed the title to Watson, however. It was a grim, tight-lipped struggle with himself over the last few holes at the Oak Hills Country Club course.

Armed with a four-shot lead, Watson, fighting the pressure of that long non-winning string, began to struggle on the 16th hole.

He missed the green on the next four holes, bogeying the 16th. On the 14th, 15th and 17th he put his new-found confidence in his putter to the test. And it was not wanting.

At the same time, however, Beck began a run as he birdied the 16th as Watson bogeyed and moved within two shots of the lead.

He birdied No. 17 and moved within one.

"It's going to take consistency again. Togetherness and consistency," said Blyleven, who also pitched for the 1979 world champion Pittsburgh Pirates.

"When you win the big one you get one of two things," Pohlad said. "You get momentum or you get complacent."

To protect the momentum, it will be important for contract negotiations to go smoothly during the offseason, said pitcher Bert Blyleven and first baseman Kent Hrbek.

"We'll be the underdogs again next year," said relief ace Jeff Reardon. "I'm sure some people, which is a good goal. It would be nice to go out and win 100 games."

With NFL rushing champ Eric Dickerson making his debut in an Indianapolis uniform Sunday, the Colts weren't surprised at getting a 145-yard rushing day from his backfield spot.

The fact that incumbent running back Albert Bentley produced it hardly disturbed them or Dickerson.

Acquired on Saturday from the Los Angeles Rams in exchange for eight players, Dickerson rushed 10 times for 38 yards and caught one pass for 28 more in a 19-14 Colt victory.

"I was a little nervous but it went pretty good," Dickerson said. "I was surprised I got to play as much as I did. I felt like a rookie out there. I've got to learn a new system."

Dickerson entered the game on Indianapolis' second offensive series. He ran for five yards off the right side and then two yards over the left side on the next play.

Twice in the second quarter, Dickerson produced long gainers. He turned a pass in the flat from Jack Truhaut into a 28-yard gain.

Jim McMahon had to turn up the tempo Sunday to get his 29th consecutive victory as a starting quarterback for the Chicago Bears.

McMahon, with the Bears trailing 14-14, went to a hurry-up offense in the second half and threw two touchdown passes to Willie Gault in the fourth quarter, leading Chicago to a 31-28 victory over the Kansas City Chiefs.

"I went to the hurry-up because we know what we're doing and it keeps the other team off balance," McMahon said. "I was happy because I started throwing right away. They had stopped our running game, so I decided to throw."

49ers 31, Rams 10

Joe Montana completed 21 of 30 passes for 294 yards and three touchdowns in San Francisco's rout of Los Angeles.

Montana marched the 49ers first six passes in two first-quarter advantage and went on to post their first shutout since 1984 by allowing the Lions to cross midfield only four times.

Volleyball regains confidence in victory over Ill.-Chicago

The Notre Dame volleyball team notched its 26th victory of the season Friday night with a convincing victory over the University of Illinois-Chicago. Rebounding from a tough loss against Purdue, the Irish were clicking on all cylinders, winning the match 15-6, 15-9, 8-15 and notching victory number 20 against seven losses.

"What we lacked against Purdue was confidence," said Irish head coach Art Lambert. "We knew we could beat Purdue, but we didn’t know we could." The Irish played the game without sophomore setter Taryn Collins, who was dismissed from the team for disciplinary reasons. Senior Kathleen Taryn Collins, who was dismissed from the team for disciplinary reasons. Senior Kathleen Morin took over the Irish passing game.

In the first game, Kathy Baker and Janette Bennett led the Irish with a net game that was too much for the UIC blockers. Backcourt specialist Amy White served for eight consecutive points, and the Irish never looked back, taking the game 15-6.

In game two, the Flames put up a tough defensive battle, but Mary Kay Waller and Maureen Shea kept the Irish in the lead with their blocking game.

"This team doesn’t have the power that Purdue has," Lambert said. "Our blocking has improved, but it didn’t mean a whole lot against this team (UI-C)."

The Flames avoided an Irish sweep by taking the third game, 8-15, behind tough serves and improved net play. The Irish took an early lead, but the Flames put together some tough defense and improved communication.

In the fourth game, the Irish dominated at the net. The Flames had a difficult time hitting over the taller Irish blockers. Notre Dame rolled up 12 points before UI-C got on the board, and Morin serve put the game and the match away.

"The team played with confidence, and that was the difference," he said. "We finally got some defense in the back, that is important. Colleen Wagner played good defense for us. I was really pleased with that.

Morin had 38 assists in her starting role for the Irish.

"What I needed was confidence," Morin said. "I knew I was going to go out and do the job, so I got some confidence.

"We have to have the teamwork," she continued. "We weren’t communicating for a while, but it’s back and we’re putting it together."

"(Madsen) came up with some good saves," said Schafer. "He’s capable of making spectacular saves, but because he plays his position so well he doesn’t have to make spectacular saves."

But on the next day, inconsistency killed the Irish. After opening the scoring three minutes into the game on a power play goal by sophomore Kevin Markovitz, the Lancers answered with three goals of their own to take a 3-1 lead into the second period.

In the middle 30 minutes, the Lancers, who played physically throughout the weekend, seemed more interested in fighting than in playing hockey. The Irish responded by putting it together.

Defensively, the Irish made an adjustment at halftime to plug the middle of the line, and the Navy wishbone was considered less effective than it was in the first half, when Navy controlled the ball (but not the scoreboard) for nearly 19 minutes and gained 117 yards on the ground. The Midshipmen netted only 13 yards rushing in the second half, partly because they were just as air with more frequency.

"They were just running the ball up the middle," said Notre Dame inside linebacker Ned Bolcar, who made nine tackles. "In the second half Coach (Foge) Fazio adjusted the defense by having our linemen pinch to the middle—which stopped them completely."

The ninth-ranked Irish face Boston College and Alabama at home over the next two Saturdays, and then take to the road where they will face Penn State and third-ranked Miami, Fla.

"We’re fighting for the national championship," Brown said confidently. "And we think we can do it."

MIAMI — Bobby Rahal, the CART-PPG Indy-car driving champion for the second straight season, reaped a rich reward Sunday night at the annual awards banquet.

Rahal, of Dublin, Ohio, was presented a check for $300,000, the winner’s share from the $1.2 million point fund, as well as a new car, a watch and a diamond ring.

Michael Andretti, who finished second in the points standings for the second consecutive year, picked up a check for $200,000.

Irish quarterbacks passed 224 yards against the second-ranked passing defense in the nation.

Holtz employed the second quarterback to start against Georgia Tech, as he has in the past, but in this case Brown averaged 3.5, and scored on two second-quarter field goals.

After eight players helped the Notre Dame football team rush for over 450 yards against USC on Oct. 23, Irish coach Lou Holtz compared his multiple back system to the Pony Express.

Hockey team inconsistent in weekend split with Windsor

Under new coach Rick Schafer, Notre Dame hockey sported a new look last weekend.

The Irish skated in their new uniforms to the tune of an organist instead of the traditional canned music, and were treated on Saturday to one of the most unusual versions of the national anthem on record by Elvis Presley impersonator Dennis Wise.

But as for the hockey, while the Irish played a couple of exciting games for the crowds of over 1,500 each night, they also looked very inconsistent in winning 5-4 in overtime and losing 9-6 against Windsor.

"I don't want to go through a whole season like that, not when we're just horrible for one period and great for the next," said Schafer.

That's precisely how the Irish played. In Friday's game, Windsor dominated the first period, but eight saves by goalie Lance Madson and a goal by sophomore wing Tim Kuehl with 1:37 left gave Notre Dame a 1-0 lead.

In the second period, the Lancers took control. Windsor was able to get off 13 shots and took a 3-1 lead by the end of the period. Senior Roy Russell terminated the attack for Windsor, scoring the tying goal, and contributing as a 1-7 Midshipmen.

"That (the penalty) was the only time we established the tempo right away, everybody including Tim Brown's neighbor stepped into the backfield in the second half.

First came freshman standout Tony Brooks and Ricky Watters. The two classmates gave fans a sign of things to come as both scored touchdowns in the second half. Brooks gained 82 yards on nine carries, with one touchdown.

Watters carried the ball twice for 35 yards, caught three passes for 105 yards, dropped back and threw the ball deep into the corner for Heisman Trophy candidate Tim Brown with no time left in the second quarter. And efforts to prevent defense couldn't stop another Notre Dame touchdown in a 56-13 Irish rout of the Middles, the 24th consecutive Notre Dame win over Navy.

"I don't do anything on that play but run," said Brown, who left the game on Notre Dame's first play with torn fingernail on his left hand stitched.

They (Navy) had four deep guys, but they were all in the middle of the field. We had the pattern designed for the corner.

Irish head coach Lou Holtz, whose squad has won six of its first seven games, was as amazed as anyone.

"Everyone knew it was going to Timmy," Holtz noted. "I can't tell you (how he did it). He's Timmy Brown."

Brown carried the ball twice for 35 yards, caught three passes for 89 yards and a touchdown, and had a 50-yard, almost six-Middles-in-their-socks punt return called back on an illegally-Brown return.

Starting quarterback Tony Rice skippered the first three touchdown drives, which ended on six-and-nine-yard runs by sophomore Tony Brooks and a 21-yard scamper by Johnson and a 21-yarder of the 1-7 Midshipmen.

"I wasn't aware of how many yards I had till sometimes in the third quarter someone said I had 100 yards," Green said. "I felt really good going into this game. You could really tell by the first drive, and how we drove off the ball, we established the tempo right away, which made a big difference."

Green and Johnson helped the Irish score touchdowns the first five times they had the ball, and with a 35-6 halftime edge, everybody including Tim Brown's neighbor stepped into the backfield in the second half.

First came freshman standout Tony Brooks and Ricky Watters. The two classmates gave fans a sign of things to come as both scored touchdowns in the second half. Brooks gained 82 yards on nine carries, with one touchdown.

Everybody in Notre Dame Stadium, including 11 Navy defenders, knew what to expect on the last play of the first half.

But as was the case all afternoon Saturday, knowing what was coming and stopping it from happening were entirely different tasks for the 1-7 Midshipmen.

Irish quarterback Kent Graham dropped back and threw the ball deep into the corner for Heisman Trophy candidate Tim Brown with no time left in the second quarter. And efforts to prevent defense couldn't stop another Notre Dame touchdown in a 56-13 Irish rout of the Middles, the 24th consecutive Notre Dame win over Navy.
