Notre Dame's investment policy will be the most important issue on the Board of Trustee's agenda when it meets this Friday, said Richard Conklin, director of public relations and information.

The University is currently following a policy of "selective divestment," said Father Oliver Williams, associate provost and member of the University's ad hoc committee on South African divestment.

"What that policy means is we'll not hold stocks in companies with operations in South Africa if they are not in some way trying to undermine apartheid," Williams explained.

The June announcement by Rev. Leon Sullivan that he was abandoning the Sullivan Principles, a set of fair employment principles calling for total divestment if apartheid is not dismantled, "will be a cause for a discussion," Williams noted.

The Principles have been widely followed by American businesses and universities, including Notre Dame, as guidelines for their policy towards investment in South Africa.

Sullivan also called for a total economic embargo of South Africa at that time.

Williams talked with Sullivan before he made the announcement and told him, "I just can't be as sure as he was that it would indeed help the see TRUSTEES, page 3

Filming is uncertain

Plans for a movie to be filmed in the South Bend area are tentative and depend on a number of conditions, a state official said last week.

"When it (a movie) is in the scouting phase, it's a big "if" if it ever gets into production," Karen Galvin, director of the Indiana Film Commission said.

Galvin noted that she has scouted South Bend for a project whose script is written for the city.

But Galvin discounted an article in the South Bend Tribune which cited a source close to the project that the filming was "definitely a go" if only looking at South Bend.

"Even though the script is written for South Bend," she added, "that doesn't mean it would be filmed in South Bend."

Galvin would not discuss details of the script or reveal who is producing the project. She also declined comment on speculation that one of the names to be setting the movie, as reported in the Tribune.

But, she explained, if the project involved filming on campus the University would have to approve the script before filming begins.

Galvin said the time it takes for a project to go from scouting locations to actual filming can vary.

"It (the filming) may be this year. It may be next year. It may be three years from now," she commented.

The Tribune article prompted Director of Public Information Richard Conklin to send a letter to the University expressing the University's reservations about filming at Notre Dame.

Galvin said she has received the letter but has not replied because she did not feel the letter needed an answer.

Senator warns about delay for nomination to Supreme Court

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - A key Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee warned Sunday that a delay in the selection of a new Supreme Court nominee might prevent President Reagan from placing a conservative choice on the high court.

"I think we ought to take the hearings on the same schedule, in early December," Specter said on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley."

"I think we can get along with the work, and I think we ought to take the time that is necessary, but I have grave doubts about the talk of putting off the hearings until after the first of the year," Specter said.

"I think we ought to take the time we need, and if we find, after we start, that we can't get it done as rapidly as we'd like, we take what time is necessary."

"But starting at a reasonably early date I think is important," he said.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., a Southerner conservative on the committee, said he prefers speedy action, but emphasized the need for a comprehensive background check to avoid the surprising revelations of the Ginsburg nomination.

"I think that it's wise to use perhaps the language of the Supreme Court 'deliberate speed' pertaining to the movement of the next nominee," Heflin said on the same program.

"I would rather be right about this one and do it with deliberation rather than make a mistake," he said.

Specter, however, strongly disagreed and warned against any delay.

"I think March or April may well be too late," he said. "I believe you're going to see a very different political tone on this issue, if we go until March or April... If President Reagan is going to make this nomination, it had better come to fruition before April."

Notre Dame students and faculty raised over $1,200 to benefit the needy worldwide and in the South Bend-Mishawaka community in the fifth annual CROP walk held in St. Joseph County on Oct. 23.

Gail Royer, co-ordinator for services to social action groups of the Center for Social Concerns.

Planner Hall placed first in the inter-dorm competition by raising $360, the greatest sum contributed by any one group, reported Royer. Sorin College placed second with $130 and Cavanaugh Hall finished third with $160. Furthermore, Royer said that the freshman class contributed a $100 donation.

Over a hundred Notre Dame students participated in the 10K walk, Royer said. She added that the Notre Dame faculty was also well represented and mentioned that Father Edward Malloy participated.

Each dorm on campus was given the goal of sending 10 students to participate in the walk, said Renee Gau, SUB service concerns commissioner. Every dorm sent representatives, stated Gau, who estimated that each dorm had sent an average of eight students.

Of all the money raised in St. Joseph County, Gau said, 30 percent will be split among two local charities, the Shelter for the Homeless and the Food Bank of Mishawaka. The remaining 70 percent will be contributed to the national fund to be distributed throughout the world in third world countries by the Church World Service in the coming year.

Royer said that she is satisfied with the St. Joseph County and Notre Dame turnout, but hopes to raise more money next year through increased awareness and participation.

Gau cites the timing of this year's walk as possibly contributing to the unspectacular participation of the the Notre Dame Community. She said that the walk which took place on the Sunday before what represented "midterm week" for many students, might receive increased participation if held on a less academically rigorous weekend in the future.

Loving relationships are difficult but worthwhile

Relationships seem to be on the way out. Newspaper columnists, talk shows hosts and sociologists all suggest that a loving relationship between a man and woman is nearly an impossibility. These supposed experts have blamed everything from female careerism to male wimpyness. The extreme conditions for being insensitive while women are accused of being difficult to please. What is most disturbing is that people are buying this claptrap. Thirty-year old women are worrying about never getting married, and men are spending enormous sums of money on skin conditioners and hair cream. Is this it? It is the very social fabric of our culture so ripe with the strains of social change that normal, healthy relationships are becoming extinct? Are intimate relationships worth entering?

Fortunately, yes. A sound, loving relationship is still possible today. In fact, life becoming more unpredictable and competitive, relationships are especially in demand as havens of refuge from the world. The world is capable of being cruel if you are alone. With the support and companionship of a partner life acquires meaning, and the sky adopts a particularly brighter shade of blue. Relationships also allow you to view the world through the eyes of another. Together you and your partner can experience life at a level of excitement and fulfillment unachieved by you before.

Springsteen put it best, “two hearts are better than one.”

Admittedly all is not perfect in the world of relationships. People are having a difficult time in beginning and maintaining relationships, but the reason for this does not lie in social change or shifts in demographics. The problem is that an artificial yet fashionable definition of what constitutes a relationship has been let loose in society. People are reaching for a nonexistent ideal and becoming frustrated when they fail short.

Somehow we have come to believe that being in a relationship is similar to experiencing a state of grace. Everything becomes infinitely easier, more meaningful, and life evaporates, and life turns into an unending tapestry of romance and bliss. The relationship is expected to carry the happy rug, washable through life. While these relationships are unquestionably worthwhile and definitely make life better, they also require hard work and dedication to keep them alive and growing.

The very fact that we are able to enter into relationships on a daily basis and also enter into a commitment to put all your effort into the relationship itself. Relationships require you to buckle and snap under the strain, but a relationship constitutes a relationship has been let loose. A Resume workshop will be offered today at 3 p.m. in the library lounge by Jeff Rice, Assistant Director of the Career and Placement Services office. Bomb kills 11 at memorial service for Britian’s war dead

Associated Press
ENNISKILLEN, Northern Ireland - A bomb killed 11 people and injured 61 Sunday at a Remembrance Day ceremony for Britain's war dead in the worst Irish terrorist attack in five years.

The huge explosion transformed the solemn pageant, which recalled the thousands of Northern Ireland's Protestants and Roman Catholics who perished for king and country in two world wars, into a horror scene of bloodshed and destruction.

No organization claimed responsibility but the province's top police official said he had no doubt the outlawed Irish Republican Army had planted the bomb, and that it was specifically aimed at civilians.

In the frantic digging for survivors, a soldier found the body of his mother.

The blast blew out one end of the building and the structure collapsed, trapping men, women and children against sidewalk railings.

Police said three married couples were among the six women and five men killed, and that many of the wounded were seriously injured in the 10:45 a.m. explosion.

A 14-year-old member of the Boy’s Brigade said he was standing near the war memorial ready to lay a wreath when the bomb went off.

“I dropped the wreath and screamed and we did all we could to pull them out. At 11 o'clock we should have been at the memorial ready to lay a wreath when the bomb went off,” he said.

The Rev. Michael Jackson, who had been waiting near the community center at the monument for the ceremony to begin, said, “People started to scream and people started to run away - those who could - but it was obvious that many would have been killed instantly.”

Chief Constable Sir John Hermanson said, “I am satisfied beyond doubt that this was the work of the IRA.”

The IRA views British security forces as its archenemies. However, the extent of civilian bloodshed brought expressions of regret from the local branch of Sinn Fein, the legal political wing of the outlawed IRA.

Paul Corrigan, chairman of Fermanagh District Council, said in a statement that the party was shocked at the loss of life and added that Sinn Fein members "do not expect to escape the consequences of this explosion - even if the IRA were not involved."

But he insisted the bombing should be seen in the context of the movement’s fight for Irish independence.

and he said he couldn't be absolutely sure but he would follow his conscious and he trusted that I would follow mine.

“I'm not certain that policy is going to yield the good that he hopes that it will," he added.

Williams commented that he has "wrestled with the question" of how divestment would affect blacks in South Africa “for a long time.”

Williams said he didn't know how the Board would decide on the issue.

“T’m not sure where the sentiment of the Board is,” he said, “but I am quite confident that it will be discussed.

In a Viewpoint column to The Observer, Peter Walsh, director of African Studies, wrote that he would be “surprised” if there were any change in the policy.

More likely the Trustees, he noted, will issue a statement that the investment in South Africa is consistent with the commitment to social justice. The Board has repeatedly ignored calls from faculty and students to divest and has refused to act even after Sullivan called for divestment, Walsh said.

The Trustees are searching for excuses to “continue business as usual,” Walsh said. One such argument is that divestment has been tried and failed.

Walsh discounted this, noting that most of the firms that “withdrew” sold their holdings to South African corporations that were created to avoid disruption of the economy.

The divestment movement, begun at Notre Dame, has achieved success through damaging the investment climate in South Africa.

Walsh said that there are opportunities on campus to resist apartheid.

The Notre Dame Anti-Apartheid Network is now working on a national lobbying effort for tighter legislative sanctions against South Africa.

Individual committees of the Board will meet on Thursday and the entire Board of Trustees is scheduled to meet on Friday.

In other items on the agenda, the Board of Trustees will "receive an update on the "Notre Dame: A Strategic Moment" capital campaign.
New York - Most parents of children aged 6 to 9 do not exercise with their youngsters and many fail to exercise at all, setting a poor example that might harm their children's long-term physical fitness, a new study suggests.

The study found that parents of leaner children tended to be more active and exercise more with their children than did parents of fatter children. And it confirmed previous findings that children generally are fatter than in the past.

"The message to parents is that they need to make this (exercise) more a priority in their lives, and they need to allow it to structure their behavior with their children," said James Ross, project director for the National Children and Youth Fitness Study II.

If parents show by example that exercise is important and make it part of a child's routine, it will "establish a pattern that will continue to guide the child on a lifelong basis," he said.

Ross is director for school health of Macro Systems Inc., of Silver Spring, Md., which researches health and education issues.

The study, financed by the U.S. Public Health Service, appears in the November-December issue of the Journal of Physical Education, Recreation and Dance.

Researchers studied 4,678 youngsters in 18 states from a sampling that reflected the nation's 6- to 9-year-olds, and 4,435 of their parents.

Leaders to discuss mission of laity

Special to the Observer

Several Catholic lay leaders will discuss the Vatican's Synod on the Laity during a symposium entitled "Synod on the Laity: A Continuing Dialogue" Tuesday, Nov. 10 at 7 p.m. in the Hesburgh Library Auditorium.

The symposium, sponsored by Notre Dame's Institute for Pastoral and Social Ministry (IPSM), will review the events preceding the Synod as well as its implications for the future of the Church. "We are anxious to explore the unfinished agenda and the laity's response following the Synod," said IPSM director Father Robert Pelton.

"Lay people from around the world were consulted prior to the Synod. We want to assure that their voices will be heard in reflection following the Synod," Pelton added.

A Synod is an international gathering of representative Catholic bishops advising the Pope on matters of importance for the whole Church. The theme of the Synod taking place this month is "The Vocation and Mission of the Laity in the Church and in the World 20 Years After the Second Vatican Council."

Report says helicopters may harm kids' fitness

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Crashes of the Army's most modern troop-carrying helicopters have been caused by ordinary radio waves from microwave towers, radio antennas and radar, a published report says, but a military spokesman Saturday vehemently denied the report.

Some army investigators believe that the radio waves have made five of the sophisticated UH-60 Black Hawk choppers nose dive to the ground since 1982, according to a Sunday report by Knight-Ridder newspapers. It cited Pentagon officials and documents. Twenty-two servicemen died in those crashes.

The report quoted one senior Black Hawk pilot and investigator as saying that the Army has come out with "bizarre, superfluous and illogical reasons" for Black Hawk crashes that he believes were caused by the radio waves known as electromagnetic interference, or EMI.

Army spokesman Maj. Phil Soucy heatedly denied the report. "We have been studying...this phenomena. We have not been able to tie a single crash to EMI," despite tests in which choppers were bombarded with radio waves, Soucy said.

Knight-Ridder said records show that Army tests after a 1986 Black Hawk crash found that 40 of the chopper's 42 systems were affected by high-level microwave towers. The article also cited 1987 tests in New Mexico that it said showed EMI could push the helicopter's rear-wing stabilator down, putting the helicopter into a dive.

Democratic candidates blast their opponents

Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa - Five Democratic presidential candidates took shots at each other at an environmental debate here Sunday, but saved their harshest words for their Republican rivals.

"We've been looking for the Republicans all day, and it just occurred to me where most of them probably are. They're at the courthouse taking depositions for polluting the government with sleaze and corruption for the last seven years," said the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

The debate culminated a busy weekend of campaigning by both Democrats and Republicans in the state, whose February caucuses are a key early test.

"I think we're ready to go one more round on where most of the candidates are. And we can even put a spin on it..." the Z-181 PC... a laptop with all the features of a desktop! So readable the characters jump off the screen. More from college to career!

"Dole has a marvelous sense of humor, but it's like a tweedged sword," said one campaign aide, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"His style is organizational, we've made dramatic strides," he said, referring to strong initial test.

"I think we're going to have a shot at the nomination," Kirk said. But he added that he was concerned about the demands being placed on candidates.

Democratic Sen. Albert Gore said he was the only Democratic candidate who had refused to enter a pact limiting such appearances.

"The question is not what's most convenient for us as can­dides. The question is what's in the public interest," he said after Sunday's debate, sponsored by the Iowa Wildlife Federation and the state chapter of the Sierra Club.

Dukakis, Gore and Jackson appeared at the debate with former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt and Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt, who groused after the event about the scope of subjects addressed and time limits on responses.

"I would like to just sit there and have a good give and take on the issues," said Gephardt, who was criticized by Babbitt for his support of a proposed oil import fee. The two started an impromptu exchange on the subject, but were interrupted by the debate moderator.

The sixth major Democratic candidate, Illinois Sen. Paul Simon, missed Sunday's debate because of other commitments, but he made other appearances in the state Saturday.

Meanwhile, there was debate among political observers over the significance of admissions by two of the candidates that they had smoked marijuana in the past.

‘Cut the defense budget’

Associated Press

WASHINGTON When Frank Carlucci takes over as secretary of defense, one of the first things he’s likely to find on his Pentagon desk is a letter seeking his advice on the best way to cut the defense budget.

It’s a question Carlucci will be asked often as the Reagan presidency moves into its final 14 months.

The letter is being written by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., who chair the Senate and House Armed Services Committees.

Those two panels are meeting behind closed doors now, trying to work out a compromise on a defense spending bill authorizing the Pentagon budget for the current fiscal year.

The Senate panel is expected to take time out from that chore to hold hearings on Carlucci’s nomination, but Nunn and other senators say the 36-year veteran of a variety of government jobs is expected to win Senate confirmation.

Carlucci is replacing Caspar Weinberger, a never-tiring and successful advocate of ever-rising defense budgets. The bigger budgets were needed, Weinberger repeatedly said, to meet the relentless Soviet drive to outstrip Western defenses.

During Weinberger’s seven-year tenure, the Reagan administration laid the groundwork for large increases in spending on personnel and a variety of weapons, and made downpayments on a number of new weapons that will force hard choices to be made in future years.

The defense budget has doubled under Weinberger, but much of that increase was achieved in Weinberger’s first term and Congress has granted only small raises — or voted actual cuts — in recent years.

The two Armed Services committees are now working on a bill that will likely reduce military spending to $389 billion, or less, in the current year, compared with Reagan’s original request of $312 billion.

While the missiles, fired less than an hour apart during the evening, hit Iraq’s state-run television and radio headquarters and the capital’s central communications center, said Iran’s official Islamic Republic News Agency.

Iraq’s official news agency, also monitored in Nicosia, said at least one missile exploded in a densely populated neighborhood, killing a large number of civilians.

The attack came as Arab leaders convened a summit in Amman, Jordan to seek a united stand behind Iraq in its 8-year-old war against Persian Iran.

Iran fired five missiles into Baghdad last month, saying the attacks were in retaliation for Iraqi air raids against what it called “non-military targets.”

Terrorists seize boat, hold 8 Israelis hostage

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon - The Abu Nidal terrorist group said Sunday that it has seized a French-registered boat off the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip and took the eight Israelis on board hostage.

Wafid Khalid, a senior lieutenant in the Palestinian group, told a news conference in Miskolc, Hungary, that the captives - three men, three women and two children - were unharmed.

But he said their “lives will be in danger” if Israel retaliated for the seizure.

The Israelis have carried out 22 air raids against Palestinian camps in Lebanon so far this year, killing at least 105 people and wounding 225.

Khaled said all eight captives are Israelis although some hold dual nationalities. He said five held Belgian passports and one woman holds a French passport.

He said the 17-ton boat was flying the Israeli and Belgian flags but was registered in France. He declined to say when the vessel was captured.

“We’re waiting for a contact from the International Committee of the Red Cross so that Red Cross representatives can see the hostages,” Khaled told The Associated Press in an interview later at a hideout in Beirut’s Mar Elias Palestinian refugee camp.

“The captives have been transferred to one of our military bases where they are being interrogated after being given the necessary medical and humanitarian aid,” he said, without elaboration.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli army said it had no knowledge of the vessel’s seizure.

Dear Notre Dame Students:

I fully support the efforts of the Senior Class of Notre Dame to highlight the dangers of drunk driving. Alcohol and responsible use of a motor vehicle do not mix. All of us need to become more fully aware of the dangers involved since self-deception and rationalization of behavior are constant temptations. Please take this matter seriously. Not only your life, but that of other innocent parties may depend upon it.

Dear Notre Dame Students:

I found Professor Storey's article on gay groups and "homophobia" interesting and quite commendable in its purpose to gain recognition for gays. Indeed he is content with his homosexuality - not only does he recognize this phenomenon within himself, but he can also give it a concrete definition. Unfortunately for Storey, the mere fact that he wrote this article defies his very purpose; he wishes the Notre Dame community to allow homosexuals to be able to blend in naturally with the environment, yet, by virtue of his article, he sets them apart even more. Certainly his article evokes great sympathy for homosexuals, but at the same time it turns them into tragic figures, struggling with every breath, with every heartbeat, to go on living in this cruel world...Well, it ain't easy for anyone.

If someone chooses to be homosexual, and I use "choose" in the full meaning of the word, that is his own prerogative. However! I am happy for him and hope he has a wonderful life. The same goes true for anyone who decides to be heterosexual. Yippee! Now that the choice has been made, let it be and don't make an issue over it. I honestly do not lie awake at night thinking up new and innovative "tag jokes" or plan mass burnings on homosexual parties. It seems as though those who do the most thinking about the homosexual "problem" on this campus are the homosexuals themselves. Perhaps they are trying to justify their own practices and to overcome their own "homophobia."

But can they be justified? I say no. Any anatomy book will tell you that homosexuality is absolutely unnatural. Every part of the body has a specific purpose and any deviation from the norm is artificial. Considering the practices of homosexuals, especially males, I am surprised that AIDS or something similar did not occur long ago. The body can't possibly function properly. Smoking you risk lung cancer, with drinking alcoholism, and with homosexuality AIDS and a plethora of other diseases. Call it God's revenge if you will, but any euphemisms you may apply will not change the fact that homosexual practices are a violation of human nature. And this is the real sin; it is not the feelings of love you may have for another of the same gender, but rather the active carrying out of those feelings.

Therefore, homosexuals will never be recognized at Notre Dame. A Catholic institution such as this cannot consciously condemn someone while the Magisterium opposes; if it does, it can't remain Catholic. And it should not have to condone it. There is no written law here at Notre Dame which says that homosexuality is illegal, but if there were to be a law saying that it is all right, Notre Dame would cease to remain Catholic.

In the future then, not only do heterosexuals need to be sensitive to homosexuals but homosexuals also must be sensitive to heterosexuals.

WHITESNAKE REIGNS

The lights went down, the lighting designer turned the thunder and lightning poured in. Though the storm could be seen, it could not, as yet, be felt. The crowd did not have to wait long. Gradually, the most recent line-up of David Coverdale's Whitesnake emerged from the shadows, with the blonde, black-robed Coverdale making his appearance before the others had taken their places, like a king before his court.

The band burst into "Bad Boys" and began the evening's roller coaster ride of Rock and pure metal heaven. Before the crowd could finish paying homage to its new found heroes for a show starter that at the very least should have been interceded, asking "How the devil are you?" He then introduced the title cut from 1984's Slip It In LP, surely, then, the reign came down—and hard.

Limiting themselves to songs from only the two most recent LP's, Whitesnake took an hour and a half to play eleven songs, including "Slow and Easy," "Still of the Night," and their U.S. chart topper, "Here I Go Again." The show continued with "Put Yourself in My Arms," a Gregorian chant featuring the work of his will. This was followed by a Gregorian chant melody back and forth between two of the Glee Club's tenor soloists. The first, "Behold Man," followed by a Gregorian chant, "An Ode for the Fourth of July concert," so they sang a humorous song about dealing with things other than music, "let them do the work that would be the sum of it." Coverdale was then swept away by his producer-manager toward a waiting Tanya Katin, the love of his life, Tanya Katin, the love of his life, Tanya Katin, the love of his life, Tanya Katin, the love of his life, Tanya Katin, the love of his life, Tanya Katin, the love of his life.

The Glee Club then sang "Halls of Ivy," a piece arranged by General Oliver de Lancey, a British military man in New York during colonization. Poor de Lancey ends up living in Boston—a poke at the Boston College fans in the audience. The Glee Club then sang 'The Minstrel Boy,' telling of not wasting time and life, and how the band of minstrels may never destroy them. The piece concludes with half of the Glee Club singing the words, "I'm a social wreck. The quartet may be embarrassing sometimes, she is still worth loving." The second half of the concert was comprised of Irish songs and school songs. The first Irish piece, "The Wearing of the Green," lamented the British law banning Irish nationalism—"They're hanging men and women for the wearing of the green." The second song, "The Minstrel Boy," told of a local boy who dies in war. The townfolk are happy for him, because now he will never have to be a slave. The final piece, "The Ash Grove," featured Ted Woodward with a tenor solo and Jayme Sayer on piano. Prior to singing, the Glee Club dedicated the piece to all their special loves. In the song, a man sorrowfully disarrays all of nature's beauty because his love is missing. She finally turns up asleep in the ash grove.

The final section of the concert featured the Glee Club singing the usual Notre Dame school songs. At this point, Stam invited all former Glee Club members to join the group on stage. At least 20 former Clubbers joined in the singing.

The Glee Club's next public performance is on December 4 at the Bendix Theatre in South Bend, and they also announced plans for a Student Union Board sponsored Christmas festival on Dec. 11 in the Stepan Center.

"OK, so what do we do now Mr. Stockbroker?"

The recent rollercoaster ride, known as the stock market, has enjoyed a slight upturn since the Dow Jones Industrial Average lost 508 points on October 19th.

Some analysts believe that this rebound is a technical rebound, has enjoyed a slight improvement. They think that the recent gains are only temporary and that the Dow could still fall substantially.

On the other hand, many believe that the Dow's decline has run its course and that the market will rise again in the midst of continued strong earnings reports by major corporations.

Before the bull market picks up steam, however, most agree that there will be an initial period of volatility—lots of ups and downs, but no momentum in either direction.

"So, why did it drop?" you may wonder.

This frequently asked question has more than one answer. The first of which relates to Wall Street believing that they see need to action taken on the lowering the trade deficit.

Realistically, it will take time before any positive action occurs. This may keep the Dow around the 1900-2100 level, but it should be noted that the increasing trade deficit did not stop the bull market in the mid-1980s.

Before the drop, it was thought that a declining dollar may boost the current economic situation. Now Wall Street believes a declining dollar could help in reducing the trade deficit.

Another factor in the market's explosive decline was computer trading. Taking prices triggered brokers to automatically put in orders to sell, further diminishing stock prices. This created more sellers than buyers which is equivalent to a lack of demand. The lack of demand caused lower prices thus touching off more sell signals.

Computer trading, however, was not the cause of the Dow drop.

The fear of a recession, in combination with the previously mentioned growing trade deficit, is the prime reason why the market went into a freefall.

Investor bearishness was also fueled by uncertainty about the future course of the economy.

Despite the US not looking at a full-scale recession, however, analysts suggest that there is a bit of slowdown may hinder the market. "So what do we do now?" you may wonder.

First, do not panic. Second, establish or reestablish one's investment objectives.

Not all growth stocks pay dividends because these companies reinvest their earnings and have strong potential, however, the price of the stock rises.

The question being raised now is whether or not new is the best time to invest. Due to the volatility of the market investing for the short-term is risky. The small investor has to think long-term.

What is needed are stocks in "recession proof" industries. There is nothing immune to a recession but some industries, such as utilities and food do well even when the economy is aimless.

During the month of October, the Dow Jones Average fell 23.2 percent.

The food industry, though, was up 17.2 percent, while electric companies lost only 3.5 percent.

Let's imagine we have $5,000 to create a small, diversified portfolio with established shares in "recession proof" industries.

The portfolio will be able to after a decent rate of return despite the volatile market. A utility choice for this portfolio is Pacific Telesis, (NYSE $29) will provide the over-consumption and the dividend dividend of $1.68 per share each year.

The drug-health care industry was down about only 16 percent last month. Baxter Travenol is an emerging leader in this industry, capable of providing 70 percent of a hospital's equipment needs. Baxter (NYSE $23) has created excellent long-term growth and with its acquisition of Caremark and its merger with the now profitable Parke Davis.

Coca Cola is a well-diversified leader in the beverage industry. The soft drink industry was off 16 percent last month. Coke (NYSE $40) enjoyed excellent growth in this period and pays a dividend of $1.12.

The familiar Wrangler Gum is a solid addition to this portfolio. This portfolio has enjoyed excellent growth with its acquisition of Caremark and its merger with the now profitable Parke Davis.

Swim teams tough in opener, claim top spots in ND Invite

By SCOTT BRUTOCAO
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men’s swim team finished in a dominating first place while the women’s team tied for the first place position in the Notre Dame Invitational Relays Friday.

“This is a great opening meet for us,” said Tim Welsh, Head Coach of both teams. Welsh is in his third year coaching for the Irish and said he is looking forward to a very strong season.

He has good reason to be, as the Irish men took first place in 10 of 16 relays, and the Irish women in eight of 13.

Competing against Notre Dame were schools such as Marquette, Valparaiso, Illinois-Chicago, Wayne State, North Central, Wabash, Butler, and Saint Mary’s.

The relays were definitely quality and low, low prices!

Soccer team waits for word on tournament bid

By PETE GEGEN

The Irish soccer team has done its job—now it is up to the NCAA tournament selection committee to decide which teams from the Great Lakes Region will get invitations.

Amanda Evansville and Notre Dame are the teams in contention.

... won already.
Chuck Hartlieb's emergence at quarterback, "Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said Sunday. "It's got to be one of the most fascinating stories I've ever been associated with in college football." The 96-yard catch helped Early set a Big Ten record of 256 yards on 16 receptions. He also tied the league mark with four touchdown receptions.

"He's that type of receiver who came here and always heard footsteps," Fry said, using the phrase to describe a receiver being intimidated by an approaching defensive back.

But he has worked hard and has developed into one of the big play makers in college football."

Hartlieb's other touchdown pass to Early covered 35, 9 and 44 yards. He also had scoring passes of 22 and 7 yards to Travis Watkins and 7 yards to David Hudson.

The game was only 50 miles from Hartlieb's hometown, but no family members saw his record-breaking performance because there were so many other Hartliebs in action Saturday, suddenly finds himself in the Big Ten Conference last year and started just two who threw only eight passes surprising everyone going to be the starter. Bears escape again, beat Pack

Associated Press

The Chicago Bears and Green Bay Packers have been playing football for 66 years, and the final seconds of Sunday's game seemed just that long for the Bears' Kevin Butler.

His 52-yard field goal on the last play of the game gave Chicago a 26-24 victory over the host Packers and improved the Bears' NFL record to 7-1. Chicago has led the Central Division every week since the start of the 1984 season.

"I don't know how long we can keep winning like this. I'm going to get gray hairs and I'm only 25," Butler said after his kick capped the Bears' third straight comeback victory behind quarterback Jim McMahon.

Chargers 16, Colts 13
Vince Abbott kicked three second-half field goals, including a 39-yarder with 12 seconds remaining, and San Diego improved to 7-3 with its victory over Indianapolis at the Hoosier Dome.

Dolphins 20, Bengals 14
Dan Marino's 30-yard touchdown pass and Fuad Reveiz kicked two field goals, including a 44-yarder with 10 points in the third quarter, and the Dolphins took over first place in the AFC East.

Giants 17, Patriots 10
Jeff Rutledge, making his first start in an NFL non-strike game since 1983, threw two second-quarter touchdown passes Sunday night as the New England Patriots 17-10.

Steelers 17, Chiefs 16
Gary Anderson, 90 seconds after missing a 41-yard field goal, hit a 45-yarder to give Pittsburgh a victory over Kansas City and hand the Chiefs a club record tying seventh consecutive loss.

Saints 31, Rams 14
Running back Dalton Hilliard caught one touchdown pass and threw for another score to lead New Orleans past the struggling Rams.

Eagles 31, Redskins 27
Randall Cunningham's 40-yard touchdown completion to Greg Garrett with 1:06 remaining rallied host Philadelphia over Washington.

The Eagles, who evened their record at 4-4, snapped a five-game Washington winning streak with a six-play, 77-yard drive in which Cunningham completed four passes for 75 yards.

Cards 31, Bucs 28
Neil Lomax threw a 47-yard touchdown pass to J.T. Smith with 2:01 remaining, climaxing a 28-point, fourth-quarter rally against Tampa Bay before only 22,449 at Busch Stadium.

It was the greatest fourth-quarter comeback in NFL history, according to league records, and the point total tied a team record for fourth-quarter scoring.

Browns 38, Falcons 3
Earnest Byner scored three third-quarter touchdowns as Cleveland defeated host Atlanta.

Atlanta, 24-6, has lost all three of its games since the end of the players' strike and has outscored 76-5 in its last two games. Cleveland, 5-3, has beaten the Falcons seven times in eight meetings.

Vikes 31, Raiders 20
Wade Wilson came off the bench in the second half to pass for two touchdowns and run for another, leading Minnesota past the Raiders at the Metrodome.

Bills 21, Broncos 14
Holli Reddick ran for a touchdown and blocked a Denver punt to set up one of two Buffalo safeties as the Bills beat visiting Denver.

49ers 27, Oilers 20
Joe Montana threw three touchdown passes, giving the San Francisco quarterback 13 in the last four games, and the 49ers beat visiting Houston for their seventh consecutive victory.

Irish storm back to down Eagles, 32-25

Two-man gang key to offense

By THERESA KELLY

Sports Writer

The grand totals:

Tim Brown - five receptions for 126 yards, three rushes for 15 yards and eight returns for 32 yards. Total all-purpose yardage: a career-high 294 on 16 attempts.

Mark Green - 23 rushes for 132 yards, including a 33-yard touchdown run, and two receptions for nine yards; 161 total yards.

That adds up to 455 yards for Brown and Green. Notre Dame's earth tones did not make a pretty picture for the Boston College Eagles.

Brown led the attack early in the first half. Early, in the first offensive play for the Irish. Quarterback Kent Graham hit Brown in traffic for a 6-yard completion, and it looked like the passing game could key an Irish victory.

But going through the air was not getting the ball into the end zone, and the Irish fell behind, 17-6 at the end of the first half and 25-12 at 10:02 in the third quarter.

By DENNIS CORRIGAN

Assistant Sports Editor

Notre Dame had the upper hand against Ohio State, but lackluster play at times cost the team a more convincing victory in the final score.

Danny Stebbins got the Irish on the scoreboard at the 35:38 mark on a disputed goal. Stebbins followed the keeper Norm Deisso on a cross, and when Deisso couldn't hold on to the ball, Stebbins knocked it home. The Ohio State bench argued that Stebbins fouled the keeper, but none was called and the goal stood.

There was no questioning Notre Dame's second goal at 60:40 mark when midfielder John Guignon headed home a Dave Augustyn throw-in cross. Sandwiched by two defenders, Guignon surprised the keeper with a sharp header to the near side.

ND tourney outlook, page 12

Not only did the Irish want to win by a few goals, but they also wanted a shut out to report to the selection committee. For the first 89 minutes they held the Buckeyes scoreless. But with 18 seconds left on the clock Ohio State's Dean Jack hit a direct kick around the wall and inside the left post for a goal.

"That was very frustrating," said Irish head coach Dennis Grace. "We needed a win and we needed to play shutdown ball as well as win. We're a much stronger team than Ohio State, but the tournament committee doesn't know that.

Grace was also referring to last Wednesday night's 2-1 win over Valparaiso, another team which the Irish failed to put away.

But the team did respond to the challenge Friday night against Marquette, keeping the ball in the Warriors' end most of the game. Less than four minutes into the contest midfielder Joe Sternberg started the scoring when he took a chip pass from wingback Bruce Lowrey and beat keeper David Wale.

Marquette's Scott Steinbauer tied the game 16 minutes later on an unassisted goal. But the team did respond to the challenge Friday night against Marquette, keeping the ball in the Warriors' end most of the game.

"If we win the first game," said Lambert, "historically this season we have done poorly in the second - for example against Western Michi­gan and Northwestern (both Top 20 teams). Tonight we tried to take that step forward and with the winning, the first side, let's set them away in the second.

Notre Dame put them away for good in the third game, but a key to offense was the colorful combination of Mark Green and Tim Brown at right.
