ND student, friend robbed off-campus

By ERIC M. BERGAMO
Senior Staff Reporter

A Notre Dame student and his girlfriend were robbed at knifepoint Thursday night while watching the home of a friend at 927 N. Notre Dame Ave.

Police reported the assailant took cash, a gold chain and a leather jacket. The stolen items were valued at $800.

The student said he was upstairs studying with his girlfriend, who was visiting for the weekend, at 11:30 p.m. when he heard something being kicked downstairs.

The student sought a weapon and grabbed a wine bottle before going downstairs to investigate.

The student said he found the front door had been forced open.

At the student entered the kitchen, a man leapt at him from around the corner and struck him in the throat with his fist. The man also clutched a nine-inch buck knife in the same hand, but he didn't injure the student with the knife, according to the student.

The student fell backwards from the blow and tripped over a stink. The man then leapt on top of the student and covered the student's face so he could not identify the attacker.

The man demanded the student tell him where valuables were kept in the house. The student told him to take the money in the house, but not to hurt his girlfriend, the student said.

According to the student, the man then forced him upstairs and made him and his girlfriend lie face down on a bed. The student said the assailant threatened him with the knife when he turned his head to get a look at the assailant.

The man also threatened the girl, waving the knife near her face and nicking her ear, the student said.

The assailant tied the two with phone cords and ran-sacked the room. The man held the two captive for 30 to 45 minutes, said the student.

The student said the man seemed to be on drugs and complained of racial oppression. He also said he had killed people before.

The assailant left the room and summoned the door shut. He also turned the television on, according to the student.

The two waited for 10 to 15 minutes, trying to listen for the assailant before leaving the room, the student said. Then the student broke the second floor window and jumped to the ground. He then caught his girlfriend when she jumped.

The two then drove the girl's car to the man gate at campus and reported the incident at 12:30 a.m. Friday, according to the student.

The student said the entire thing was brought about by a $1,400 damages that were needed to revitalize an ailing, debt-ridden student body.

The resolution, proposed by Brian Holst, student senator, passed by a vote of 10 to 2 with one abstention. The resolution said it would be unfair to other students.

The student body passed a resolution last week that would prevent the use of Student Activities fundraiser, recommending that the dining hall recover the money by withholding desserts for a weekend, or simply refusing to pay, in which case the Office of Student Affairs would take the money from some other student source, said Holst.

In other business, the senate unanimously passed a resolution that the 1987 Survey of the Student Body indicates that over 80 percent of the current Notre Dame students favor an improvement of the grading system to include plus grades.

The resolution, proposed by senators, Mike Carrigan, Mike Murdock and Steve Viz, stated that the undergraduate grading system puts Notre Dame graduates at a disadvantage because of its incomparability with systems at peer institutions.

Don't rag on South Bend; it's my home (and yours)

"South Bend is large enough to be impersonal, small enough to be boring," said a friend of mine.

Students returning from break, stuffed and satisfied, pick up their favorite sport, South Bend bashing. Thanks guys, it's my home town. Yes, I'll admit it, I'm a Bender.

Every student has something to say about the South Bend area and little of it is good. Despite their own origins of Prairie Village, Kansas or Brownstown, Indiana most students feel that South Bend is the most god-forsaken spot on earth.

Contrary to popular belief South Bend is not some little luck town. The South Bend metro area is around 240,000 people. The St. Joseph Valley area is about a half million people. New York it's not, but it sure isn't Brownstown.

It's not the numbers, however, that are impressive it's the people. What most students fail to recognize is that the Michiana area is full of domers. No, I don't mean large numbers of Notre Dame students living off-campus. There are 3,788 alumni in the St. Joseph Valley area. It works out roughly that one out of every 132 people in the area are Notre Dame alumni. So every time a current student insults the local community, he (or she) is insulting his former schoolmates.

The St. Joseph Valley Alumni Association is one of the largest Notre Dame clubs in the nation, second only to Chicago. Complaints about the area may be numerous, but there is something in the community that persuaded graduates to start operating a business. A large portion of the businessmen in the area are ND graduates. Professional fields in South Bend and the surrounding area are dominated by alumni. Most area architects, lawyers, bank- ers, and business owners arrived in the area as students and then decided to stay.

Admittedly, South Bend does not have the most active nightlife in the nation, nor the most impressive -it's the people. What most students fail to recognize is that the Michiana area is full of domers. No, I don't mean large numbers of Notre Dame students living off-campus. There are 3,788 alumni in the St. Joseph Valley area. It works out roughly that one out of every 132 people in the area are Notre Dame alumni. So every time a current student insults the local community, he (or she) is insulting his former schoolmates.

The South Bend community has always actively supported the University and often contributed to its greatness.

Now, the more criticism the area receives the more I recognize its merits. It might not be quite as exciting as Washington D.C., and the nightlife doesn't compare with New York's, but it is home.
Afghan leader says Soviet troops may pull out

Associated Press

MOSCOW Afghan leader Najib said Monday that Soviet troops could pull out of his country in a year or less and suggested a superpower conference on stabilizing the situation in and around his country.

Speaking to a National Council that, as expected, endorsed his election as president, Najib also said he was ready to meet leaders of the opposition to his Soviet-backed regime for direct peace talks. According to the official Soviet news agency Tass, the Afghan leader indicated he would extend a cease-fire for government troops until July 15. Leaders of the Moslem guerrillas battling Najib’s government have denounced the cease-fire, which officially took effect Jan. 15. The guerrilla leaders say the order was a propaganda move and suggest that fighting has increased since then.

Tass reported earlier Monday that a former Afghan rebel who joined government forces two years ago had led his bodyguards in an armed assault on the Polytechnical Institute in Kabul, near the building where the current National Council, or Loya Jirga, is meeting.

The Soviet Union maintains an estimated 115,000 soldiers in Afghanistan to back Najib’s government against the rebels. Kremlin troops first entered the country in December 1979.

Plant’s ethanol fumes continue to decrease

BY GREG LUCAS
Senior Staff Reporter

Notre Dame students and South Bend residents should be able to breathe a little easier now. The installation of odor abatement equipment at the local ethanol plant is significantly reducing the smell that has plagued the campus for years, said Nathan Kimpel, general manager of New Energy Company of Indiana.

The odor may still be strong on certain days depending on wind direction and other factors, Kimpel said. “We never said that the odor would be completely eliminated,” he said.

According to Kimpel, the $400,000 system was installed the third week of October. “It has been as successful as we thought it would from a quantitative standpoint,” said Kimpel, adding that the release of organic acids into the air has been reduced by up to 95 percent.

Kapel said these improvements do not necessarily correspond to an equal reduction in the intensity of the odor. He said the company is currently conducting tests to quantitatively determine how much of the odor has been eliminated.

There is absolutely no health risk from the odor, Kimpel said, adding that standards have been quantified by the U.S. Department of Energy.

The system was voluntarily installed by New Energy, said Kimpel. “We wanted to be good neighbors.”

Kapel said that he has received positive feedback on the effectiveness of the odor abatement equipment. “We have had a number of residents say that the situation has improved,” he said.

Quake rocks Alaska; thousands evacuate

Associated Press

PALMER, Alaska - A major offshore earthquake rocked south-central Alaska on Monday, prompting thousands of people to flee low-lying coastal areas for the second time in two weeks.

There were no immediate reports of major damage or injuries in the quake, which measured at least 7.4 on the Richter scale and was felt more than 300 miles away. The Alaska Tsunami Warning Center issued a warning of a tsunami, or giant sea wave, but cancelled it after 90 minutes.

The 10:23 a.m. (AST) earthquake was centered 300 miles southeast of Anchorage in the Gulf of Alaska, the center said. A quake measuring 6.9 on the scale shook the same area Nov. 16.

While the center reported the preliminary magnitude at 7.4, University of California seismographs measured the quake at 7.7 on the Richter scale.

The center issued a tsunami warning for Gulf of Alaska communities and British Columbia, and issued a tsunami watch for Washington, Oregon, California and Hawaii.

Emergency sirens and police loudspeakers roused residents from their homes and businesses and started heading them toward high ground.

In Yakutat, the community closest to the epicenter, 150 miles to the southwest, City Manager Jim Filip said about 100 people were evacuated. Power was knocked out, but Filip reported no major structural damage.

"It knocked books off shelves, and opened drawers," he said. "And of course, work stopped immediately. It was definitely something you couldn't escape noticing."

At Seward, Mayor Harry Gieseler said the city's emergency siren was used to warn people away from low-lying areas.

"At this point we don't think there was any damage. But it was felt pretty hard. It rattled pictures and shook things around a great deal."

accident, he said the car's speed was also not a factor. The speed limit is 20 miles per hour on the road, he added.

The eastbound Accord struck Mark in the eastbound lane, Johnson said.

Another car that had turned onto the road just prior to the accident may have obstructed the driver of the Accord's view of Mark, Security investigators said. Glare from the wet pavement may have also hindered the driver's view, they added.

34 killed in Haitian free-election riots

Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE

Haitians stayed home in fear Monday, deserting the deadly streets where men with machine guns and machetes killed at least 34 people in a weekend of terror that destroyed the first free election in 30 years.

Most presidential candidates could not be reached at their homes or offices. The independent Electoral Council's nine members were in hiding.

Most businesses were closed. Few cars or public minibuses could be seen in some neighborhoods. Scores of people were wounded Sunday by roving bands who attacked voting stations and people at random in the streets, while the army did nothing to stop it. Gunmen shot people at random in some neighborhoods.

A crowd gathers at the fortified French city of St. Malo in Brittany to watch a rockabilly band play Elvis tunes with a French twist. The northwestern city is surrounded by a 40-foot stone wall built to protect the city from attack.

Many of the wounded were people at polling places, shot election observers, diplomats and journalists while soldiers stood by, refusing to intervene.

A $4.6 billion subsidy was lost in nationwide elections.

Government spokesman Jerry Urban put a positive face on the outcome, noting that many more people voted in favor of the questions than against them. By law, a majority of eligible voters had to approve the questions to pass.

He said the voters' failure to approve the questions was an answer to all who maintained our democratic institutions are a facade, and that the democratic transformations are not true.

Gorbachev in NBC interview: Soviets not planning own SDI

Associated Press

MOSCOW - The Soviet Union "is doing all that the United States is doing" to defend against nuclear attack, but will not build a space-based system, Mikhail Gorbachev said in an interview broadcast Monday.

Acknowledging what the Reagan administration has long contended, the Soviet leader said: "I guess we are engaged in research, basic research, which related to those aspects which are covered by the SDI in the United States."

SDI means Strategic Defense Initiative, the formal name President Reagan has given the space-based defense project commonly called "Star Wars."

In response to a suggestion that the Soviets are trying to militarize space in the same way envisioned by Star Wars, however, Gorbachev said:

"We will not build an SDI. We will not deploy SDI, and we call upon the United States to act likewise. If the Americans fail to heed that call, we will find a response."

Gorbachev spoke in a one-hour question-and-answer session with Tom Brokaw broadcast by NBC news to American viewers a week before the Communist Party chief's trip to Washington for his third summit with Reagan.

He said he is ready to compromise to reach a deal for scrapping half the superpowers' long-range nuclear weapons. During the summit, they are expected to sign a treaty getting rid of all intermediate-range missiles.

"We have some steps that we could take to meet the American position halfway," Gorbachev said. He added, however, that he was not going to Washington for his third summit with Reagan.

"If the Americans fail to heed that call, we will find a response."

Holiday traffic deaths near 500, exceed estimate

Associated Press

CHICAGO - More than 490 people were reported killed in traffic accidents during the four-day Thanksgiving weekend, exceeding National Safety Council projections.

At least 494 people died on the nation's roadsways between 6 p.m. Wednesday and midnight Sunday local time, considered the peak holiday travel period. California reported the highest state toll with 61 deaths, followed by Florida with 57.

The safety council had said 450 travelers might die during the long Thanksgiving holiday. Council statisticians did not provide an estimate of how many deaths might be expected over a four-day weekend period at this time of the year, saying that methods for gathering and analyzing such data are not comparable.

The worst Thanksgiving weekend was in 1968 when 761 people died. Since the 55 mph limit was imposed in 1974, the worst year was 1978 when 396 deaths were reported.

The speed limit was increased to 65 mph this year on many interstate highways in rural areas.

Mistakes of Reagan amenable at polls

One of the hallmarks of our system of representative democracy is the ability to rectify previous mistakes at election time. If the electorate has committed an error in judgement, whether by misguided principles or as the result of deception, and placed in office a buffer or misleading decision can be made two or four years hence to not return that individual to a position of power. The ability to rectify mistakes in judgement can be repeated, and an official be returned to office to continue to be destructive to the betterment of society as a whole.

guest column

In recent history the voters of this country have transgressed the rules of reason and prudence to twice elect a man to the solemn office of the President of the United States primarily on the basis of his ability to tell the electorate exactly what it wanted to hear. In so doing we, as a group, chose to overlook the fact that this man had absolved himself in a commanding role of many of the resources of one of the most powerful nations in history. Many Americans have chosen to look on campus, through letters, is encouraged. Is available to all members of the school community, and the free expression of varying opinions is supported. Those with opposing views are encouraged to debate the issues and present their views in a respectful manner.

Doonesbury

In 1980, Ronald Reagan won the presidency by appealing to the emotions of “average” Americans. The appeal to patriotism, flag waving, and “bring America back” struck a tender spot in a lot of Americans who didn’t want to be beaten up by the rest of the world anymore. They had endured a decade of inflation and unemployment. People had a sour taste in their mouths, and yearned for voices of hope. Since the incumbent continued to be a realist, which was not something they wanted to hear, they turned to Reagan and his new morning in America.

We blew it again when we re-elected Reagan in 1984. Granted, Mandate was not the most charismatic individual to ever grace a soap box, nevertheless, he too was a realist. We had endured a terrible recession during the first term of Reagan’s Presidency, but that was unfortunately easily forgotten by those who voted in 1984. These were not those who were hurt, but hurt badly, by Reaganomics and the other bad ideas that went along with it. These were people who were actually marginally better off as a result of Reagan’s various policies. Being the choice politician that he may seem to be, he was able to capitalize on this with such queries as “are you better off now than you were four years ago?” Many of those who voted thought they were, so they voted for him. Since then we have had the Iran-Contra soap opera, various disastrous Supreme Court nominations, and a stock market collapse that threatens to plunge us into a recession. In addition, we have budget and trade deficits to which we can no longer take a cavalier attitude. We are in a severe mess.

But we do not have to blow it again. In case you do not know, there is another Presidential election next fall, and we have the opportunity to reverse the trend of stagnation and social decay. It is time to take a realistic approach to our problems. It is time to leave the fairy tale land of Reagan’s America and face the harsh realities of life. It is time to deny the Republicans another chance to continue to ruin this country.

The choice is yours. Vote wisely in 1988. Put a Democrat in office. It will help student unity

I would like to take this opportunity to voice my opinion on the highly controversial issue of co-ed dorms. After giving the idea much thought, I have come to the conclusion that co-ed dorms would play an essential role in the improvement of communication and understanding between the men and women attending Notre Dame. Voluntary placement of people of the opposite sex in close living quarters would also serve to unite the two separate groups into one student body—a dream all have been striving toward since the admission of women into the university six years ago. As the students living in co-ed dorms gradually became acquainted with each other, they would realize that members of the opposite sex often share similar ideas, opinions, and dreams, that they really aren’t so different from themselves. This understanding would serve to vastly improve student relations across the campus.

Whistle while you work

I’m tough being kind. What with ruling England; leading the knights of the round table and trying to convince himself his wife, Gwenivere is not having an affair with Lancelot, and Gweneviere breaks out in song: one of the simple folks’ tunes. With all of the stress we moderns weigh under, what better ways to lighten loads? For my part, I consider “whistling” a source of amusement to my room mate can, but I enjoy my ability to make supposed whistling sounds and I admitted my inability to do it on key. In the end, I paid for the pizza so I felt I had accomplished something. That was two years ago and I am not much further along today. I still whistle and, to this day, most of my friends wince when I do. I provide a constant source of amusement to my roommate when I whistle to the radio. I’ll be off in my own little world, chirping away, and I’ll hear this long, slane sound. If I throw something at her, she will stop, but not without us both cracking up. One day I was walking through O’Shag and an older gentleman walking in front of me began whistling. He carried the tune beautifully as he, and I, almost skipped down the hall. Unaware that I was so enjoying his music, he was simply enjoying the moment for himself. There is not enough singing, dancing or whistling in today’s world. With all of the stress we moderns weigh under, what better ways to lighten loads? Breaking out in song like Gweneviere and Arthur did or whistling away the day like some happy man here on campus does are wonderful ways to catch a fresh look on life. So maybe I can’t let out an ear-piercing, eye-catching “Hey Good-Looking” whistle like my roommate can, but I enjoy my attempts, feeble or painful as they may be. Whistling while I work lightens my heart and brings laughter bubbling forth from all those present. Some day I just know I’ll be able to whistle like Billy Joel does at the beginning of “The Stranger,” and then I won’t just be blowing around a lot of off-key air.

Mary Berger
Back in the High Life

One scene in the movie “CAMELOT” I watched over breakfast has a mentally-exhausted Arthur seeking respite in Gwenivere’s room. He asks me, “What do the simple folks do?” when they want to escape from the day’s woes. Suddenly trumpets sound and Gwenivere breaks out in song: one of the simple folks’ answers to “perking up the heart and getting through” is whistling. Just like the seven dwarfs, they whistle a happy tune.

I myself enjoy whistling. I must clarify, however, that what I consider “whistling” many others do not. To them, my music is an off-key piercing of the air.

Before I came to Notre Dame, I made a bet with a friend of mine that I would be able to whistle by the time I returned home for Christmas break or else I would treat him to pizza. Up until that time, whenever I puckered up, it was not for whistling; my attempts at making music had always been mute. So, first semester freshman year found me blowing a lot of air around as I tried to sing like a bird. My roommate was the one who showed me an answer to “perking up the heart” in one of the simple folks’ answers to “perking up the heart and getting through.” Whistling.

Saints’ win streak lifts New Orleans

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS—Along with the general feeling of well-being, there’s a cold-eyed economic benefit to finally having a winning football team in New Orleans. Mayor Sidney Barthelemy said Monday.

The Saints make themselves of the first winning season in their 21-year history Sunday with a 3-yard touchdown pass from James Lofton in the first quarter.

New Orleans had to surrender about $1.5 million in taxes as part of the package that enabled Tom Benson to buy the team three years ago. At the time, it was estimated that the Saints pump an average of $132 million per year into the economy by the collapse of the offshore oil industry.

“I think there’s no question that the benefits of keeping the Saints here far outweigh the cost,” Barthelemy said.

“We would have liked to have been able to keep the Saints without surrendering one of the original “Ain’t” bags from 1980. The Saints won’t fit into the heads of their fans if they leave,” Barthelemy said.

Barthelemy was a two-time New Orleans player and youth, and he has followed the Saints as a fan since they started play in 1967.

“The atmosphere in the city is good. You can feel the excitement and everybody who has supported them has been so long good feels about it,” he said.

About 2,500 fans awaited the team’s charter flight home from Pittsburgh on Monday night.

“I didn’t almost go up hope that I’d ever see this day,” said Cheryl Woods, among those who waited.

But feeling good is just a part of it, Barthelemy said.

“Last Sunday, when the Saints played here and won, there were several thousand people on Bourbon Street celebrating and spending money. That’s a benefit you can see,” he said.

Operators of French Quarter nightspots estimated business was up 25 percent after that victory.

Sunday, at bars and lounges throughout the French Quarter, hundreds fuddled before television sets at Singer Hall.

At one party, Charlie Kertz, 72, held a cigarette lighter to the screen and shouted, “The team is giving us the satisfaction of frustration—something of the original “Ain’t” bags from 1980. The Saints won’t fit into the heads of their fans if they leave,” Barthelemy said.

They slipped to No. 2 in the Associated Press Poll on Wednesday when Miami was ranked No. 1 with 803 points by defeating Alabama 10-6 while LSU, which ended its regular season a week ago, slipped from sixth to seventh with 765 points.

Florida State, Syracuse and Nebraska held onto the 3-4 spots. Florida State, 10-1, received 598 votes, following a 28-14 triumph over Florida; Syracuse, 11-0, completed its regular season a week earlier and received the remaining first-place vote and 914 points, while Nebraska, 10-1, a 247- winner over Colorado, received 904 points.

Miami defensive linemen like Greg Mark (94) harassed Notre Dame the 11.

The Canes looked as if they wanted to say something back to them. But it's always the second man who gets caught talking to someone, they would throw flags. That define catch wasn't the case. They were talking all day, and no flags were thrown. And just what was being said out there?

"Nothing you could print, I'll tell you that," Brown answered but did characterize it as the worst he'd heard in his life and worse than anything heard on a playground.

"Losing to Miami really makes you feel bad because of the type of guys they are on the field. When they talk to you like they do, you just want to beat them as bad as you can beat them."

Brown didn't have that good of a day aside from the abuse he took. Normally surehanded, Brown had three balls go off his hand, none more critical than with the Irish trailing, 17-6, early in the fourth quarter. The Irish had the ball with a second and eight at their own 48 when Irish quarterback Tony Rice found Brown over the middle, only to see the leading receiver on the squad let this one go.

"I just took my eyes off the ball, that's all you can say," Brown said afterward. "You've got to catch the ball before you can run. That's only the second pass I've dropped this season and it came at a critical time."

It wasn't a particularly stellar day for the Heisman candidate, as he finished with only 95 total yards. Someone asked if he was really feeling bad, which had harmed his chances. "I hope one game wouldn't decide it," Brown replied.

While Brown was on the field, Heisman Trophy rival and Ft. Lauderdale native Lorenzo White of Michigan State was on the Miami sidelines reportedly urging his friends on the Hurricane squad to stop Brown so that he could win the Heisman.

One of the biggest problems the Irish have had all year is the lack of a solid pass rush from the defensive line. To boost it, John Foley, who had been a backup at inside linebacker, was moved up to the line for the Miami game to take advantage of his aggressive style of play.

"I was kind of thinking of moving to line next year," Foley said of the switch. "The coaches told me it would be this week. I was really feeling nervous about it. I said, 'Coach, I'm 230 pounds.' They said, 'If you have the heart, you can play the position.'"

"I just went out and did best, tried my hardest. The coaches really helped me out. They went over everything a million times. I was excited because I was going to see more playing time."

The Hurricanes' skill players had scored 14 of Miami's 17 points. But the Heels had the ball nearly half of the second half and the Canes only had three receptions for 37 yards.

Irish face defending champ IU in season opener on the road

Assistant Sports Editor

BLOOMINGTON - For a head coach, it can be very difficult to figure out how good your team is by watching them practice.

Notre Dame head coach Digger Phelps will be able to get a better idea of where his team stands when he puts it up against the reigning NCAA champion Indiana Hoosiers tonight (8 p.m. EST, WNDU-TV).

The Hoosiers have lost a couple of mainstays from that 30-4 Big Ten co-champion squad. Steve Alford, Big Ten MVP and Indiana's all-time leading scorer, and his 22 points per game are gone, as is forward Daryl Thomas, who averaged 15.7 points.

But Hoosier head coach Bob Knight needs no sympathy.

Indiana, currently ranked fifth, has three starters returning in 6-6 forward Rick Calloway, 6-10 center Dean Garrett and 6-7 guard Keith Smart.

Calloway enters his junior season as a two-year starter. The inside-outside scoring threat has an 13.2 career scoring average.

Garrett and Smart are seniors who overcame early-season difficulties to make big contributions last season after transferring from junior colleges, a new phenomenon at Indiana.

Garrett filled the Hoosiers' hole in the middle by averaging 11.4 points per game. He also grabbed 288 rebounds and blocked 61 shots to earn honors as the Big Ten's top newcomer.

The talented Smart, meanwhile, overcame an inconsistent regular season (11.2 ppg.) when he exploded in the NCAA tournament. In the championship game against Syracuse, Smart canned 21 points, including 12 of IU's last 13 points and the game-winning jump shot with six seconds remaining.

The supporting cast is a solid one. Redshirt junior forward center Todd Jadlow, and senior swingmen Steve Ely and Kreigh Smith (coming off a broken foot) provide experienced depth. Senior guard Joe Hillman has a back injury and may not play.

Newcomers Lyndon Jones and Jay Edwards, both freshmen from Marion High School, are also very promising in the backcourt.

Indiana opened the season with a 96-65 win over Miami (Ohio). Garrett led the scoring with 25 points.

Knight, who has a 367-119 career record at Indiana, says that last year's championship has to be ignored if his team is to progress as he wants it to.

"The most important and the most difficult thing is to get them to forget that they were national champions, and that they aren't now," he says. "We just have a long way to go, and I think we've said that all along.

In last year's game at the ACC, Indiana took a 67-62 win. The Hoosiers held a 33-17 series edge, having won six of seven at Assembly Hall.

Phelps says he thinks the early challenge can do nothing but help his untested squad.

"I think this is what this team needs to do. I think we need to play someone that's very talented and it's obvious Indiana is," he says.

Indiana head basketball coach Bob Knight will lead the defending champion Hoosiers into Assembly Hall tonight to face the Notre Dame men's basketball team. Rick Rietbrock previews the contest at right.

Irish

I credit David and the way he had everybody in their roles. "But winning, how competitive he is, knowing he doesn't want to go out a loser, knowing he doesn't want to go out not being in the NCAA tournament that's the only challenge he wants just to get in. I think once we get in, anything can happen.

To make anything happen, however, the Irish have a few holes to plug. Donald Royal averaged 15.3 points and seven rebounds per game, and Scott Hicks scored 11 points and pulled down over four boards a contest.

Phelps has several people in mind to make up for the lost scoring.

"I think Sean Connor and Mark Stevenson, they've got to be scorers for us," Phelps says. "I think Sean can shoot the three-point shot. I think Mark is a very, very creative player."

Senior Gary Voece (4.7 ppg. 3.3 rpg.), who showed great improvement during last season, will look to continue his improvement on the front line.

Sophomores Scott Paddock and Jamere Jackson return and will play major roles and Joe Fredrick will also provide depth in the backcourt.

Forward Tony Jackson is academically ineligible for the semester and junior guard Michael Smith is out for eight weeks with a knee injury.

Phelps will also have to get solid performances from some of his newcomers if last year's path of development is to be followed.

Proposition 48 sophomore Keith Robinson will see a lot of duty on the front line. The Irish look for scoring and rebounding help from the 6-6 forward.

Forward Tim Singleton, along with Jackson, will be asked to do the bulk of the ball-handling, to free Rivers for more scoring opportunities.

Kevin Ellery also should provide some depth on the wing in both scoring and rebounding.

The ability of Robinson, Ellery and Singleton to contribute on the college level, the emergence of Connor and Stevenson as bigger scorers, the continued improvement of Voece inside and the development of the defense, without Hicks and Royal, all are questions that face Phelps' 1987-88 edition. But the Irish head coach has some confidence in his team to answer them.

"I think David's the guy who's got to make up for what we lack," Phelps says.

Skins Game wants Palmer to return

Associated Press

LA QUINTA, Calif.-The Skins Game will be back. Lee Trevino will be back. And it's up to Arnold Palmer as to whether he'll be back.

"He's had the greatest impact of any man who ever played the game. He's the most popular player who ever lived. He's magic," said Don Ohlmeyer, president of Ohlmeyer Communications and originator of the popular, two-day, 18-hole, made-for-television Skins Game.

"As long as I have anything to do with it, Arnold can play as long as he likes," Ohlmeyer said. Ohlmeyer and Barry Frank, of Trans World International, as the sponsors, have the option of picking one of the four participants. Palmer, 58, was their pick this year. He did not win a skin, did not win a dollar.

"It's entirely up to Arnold. If he wants to play, he'll get a spot," Ohlmeyer said.

"What we're trying to do is get the four players the public wants to see play. Not necessarily the guy who wins the most money. We want the players the public wants. "Now, we have gone into a senior Skins Game (the inaugural to be in Hawaii in January). Arnold's going to play in that.

"Maybe he'll decide he's a senior and wants to concentrate on senior play," Ohlmeyer said. The fifth Skins Game, played over the weekend, was highlighted on Sunday by Lee Trevino's hole-in-one on the 17th hole.

Men's cross country places 7th in nation

Special to the Observer

The Notre Dame men's cross country team completed a Cinderella finish to its season by placing seventh in the NCAA Championships at Charlottesville, Va., on Nov. 23.

Senior Dan Garrett led the Irish squad, recording a 20:36 time that was sixth in the country among individuals. The team's finish was Notre Dame's best in 23 years.

"Realistically, we wanted to finish in the top 10, but we knew it would take a tremendous effort, said Irish coach Joe Piane. "Dan Garrett ran a tremendous race. His time was great, but it was how intelligently he ran that was impressive. He must have had 50 runners in front of him after a mile, but he never panicked and just reeled in the pack. I'm really proud of him and the rest of our team. I think we surprised a lot of people today."

This seventh place finish followed a 1986 season in which the Irish placed only 15th in their district and a 1987 regular season in which Notre Dame failed to win an invitational.

ND basketball teams open their seasons

Men look to Rivers to answer questions

By RICK Rietbrock
Assistant Sports Editor

The 1987-88 Notre Dame basketball team enters the season in much the same situation it did last season. Untested. Full of questions. Full of potential.

The big difference from last season is that preseason first-team all American David Rivers is healthy from the very start. Rivers is healthy from the very start. Developed into an outstanding squad by losses to Western Kentucky and Indiana, but Rivers is healthy from the very start. Preseason first-team all American David Rivers has been our team for the last three years as the guy who can make people do things," Phelps says. "I thought last year, as we finished with 24 wins, and finished in the final 16 in the NCAA tournament, so he got stronger as the year went on, we got stronger.

Nobody expected us to do what we did, and see IRISH, page 12

Miami dominates ND from start to finish

By DENNIS CORRIGAN
Sports Editor

Miami - This time, there was no talk of running up the score. This time there was suffering of domination and frustration.

The Miami Hurricanes did it both to the Irish Saturday afternoon at the Orange Bowl, holding Notre Dame to 169 yards and a first down. Still, the Irish were stymied at every turn on offense. Of 11 possessions, eight ended in punts, two in turnovers and one in the final gun. All and all a day of frustration.

"What we couldn't do is get a continuity where we could stay with them in the first half," said Irish head coach Lou Holtz, "when the Irish couldn't get a continuity we could stay with them in the first half," and after suffering from domination and frustration.

The Miami Hurricanes defeated the Irish Saturday afternoon at the Orange Bowl, holding Notre Dame to 169 yards and a first down. Still, the Irish were stymied at every turn on offense. Of 11 possessions, eight ended in punts, two in turnovers and one in the final gun. All and all a day of frustration.

"What had to make the game more frustrating for the Irish was the fact that the Miami offense didn't play particularly well either. The Canes turned the ball over four times, including fumbles at the Irish one and 13 yardlines. Another drive fizzled at the Irish 13, resulting in a field goal after a scoreless first quarter. Miami opened the scoring on a two-yard run by Melvin Bratton. The Irish responded by marching to the Hurricane 28. But on second and 12, Miami free safety Bennie Blades picked off a Rice pass. The Irish appeared to have stopped the Hurricanes on their ensuing possession when Hurricane punter Jeff Peagles dropped back to punt on fourth down at the Irish 41. Instead, the Canes 'gave the fake and Leonard Conley picked up eight yards and a first down. Still, the Irish held the Canes 196 yards, a 30-yarder by Greg Cox, and trailed only 10-0 at the half.

Miami's offensive line left quarterback Steve Walsh with plenty of time to throw the ball, as the Irish never could amass a steady pass rush.

See the Irish. See them run. See them win. The Notre Dame women's basketball team literally ran away with a 69-49 win over Northwestern last night, using a Mary Gavin fast break and a tough zone defense to keep the Wildcats from developing any sort of momentum.

"We finally got the break going tonight," said first-year head coach Muffett McGraw, "I was really happy with that. It was not prompted by good defense, that was the key."

The guard trio of Gavin, junior Dondria Toney and freshman Karen Robinson came up with 11 steals and 13 assists between them, including eight for Gavin, who already is Notre Dame's career assists and steals leader with 335 and 188 respectively.

Both teams, however, were troubled by turnovers all night long, helping to create the fast break style of the game. The Irish gave the ball away 29 times while Northwestern committed 25 turnovers.

"We were forcing it a lot," said McGraw. "Actually the inside players were open but the passes just weren't that good. We made some adjustments at halftime to get it in a little easier by going through the wing and I thought that was effective."

Notre Dame, now 2-0 with a 67-61 win at Loyola on Saturday, jumped out to a quick 10-3 lead by running the break after forcing Wildcat mistakes.
