Notre Dame Security arrested a 17-year-old Edwardsburg, Mich. resident Wednesday afternoon in connection with the Feb. 7 assault of a female Notre Dame student in the D-2 parking lot, said Rex Rakow, director of Security.

Security officers arrested the juvenile in Elkhart County. Rakow said the suspect lived near the Indiana-Michigan border.

"We had him under surveillance along with Michigan State Police for three days," Rakow said. "Security police notified at 6 a.m.

WASHINGTON - President Reagan said Wednesday night "we've never let up and we never will" in efforts to win freedom for American hostages in Lebanon, and said if Republican presidential contender Pat Robertson knew anything of their whereabouts, it was "very strange" that "he kept it to himself."

At a nationally televised news conference, Reagan also said he had "every confidence" in the national integrity of the U.S. battled Attorney General Edwin Meese III, but said he could not judge reports of the investigation of Meese's role in a proposed Middle East oil pipeline.

In a session with reporters that blessed international affairs with the domestic presidential campaign swirling around him, the president confirmed anew that Vice President George Bush expressed reservations during the inter-Campaign dinner. But he refused to say precisely what Bush had told him.

Reagan said he didn't want to become involved in the GOP nomination fight, but he showed plenty of zest when it came to bashing the Democrats trying to succeed them, he said: "we're in an economic slump" suffering from a variety of ills.

S. Africa bans groups' acts

Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa - The government on Wednesday banned political activity by 18 opposition groups, including the nation's largest anti-apartheid organization and its biggest union federation, in the most sweeping crackdown in a decade.

Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu said the move would be seen by many government opponents as a "declaration of war."

Law and Order Minister Adrian Vlok, however, said the regulations "will contribute to a climate of stability, peaceful coexistence, and good neighborhoodliness among all population groups."

Vlok's order prohibits the United Democratic Front, which represents more than 2 million members, from any activity except bookkeeping and court action. The same order was applied to 16 other groups, covering most of the large, militant black political groups in South Africa.

Vlok gave the power to prohibit any organization "from carrying on or perform-

Parrish, Buch to have run-off SMC elections Friday

By LISA MONTPETIT
News Staff

The tickets of Julie Parrish and Annie Buch will meet in a run-off election Friday after none of the three tickets won a majority of the votes in the Saint Mary's student body election, according to Frannie Thompson, elections commissioner.

Two of the three class elections also resulted in run-offs. Parrish, running with Lisa Hill, candidate for vice president for student affairs, and Christy Wolfe, candidate for vice president for academic affairs and college relations, received 37 percent of the votes.

The ticket of Buch, Kim Santer and Carol Mahony took 31 percent closely followed by Ann Reilly, Julie Marquez and Kelly Connery with 30 percent of the votes.

The results showed the largest voter turnout that Saint Mary's has ever had with 57 percent of the eligible student body participating, according to Thompson. "I think it's great because we've never had that many vote before and it shows that interest in student government is up," Thompson said.

"We're very excited about such a high voter turnout because it shows that students really do care about their elected government," Parrish said.

Buch added that their ticket "will continue to give 100 percent. We've had a great time and will keep up a positive atti­tude."

Reilly stated that their ticket was very disappointed.

"It's unfortunate that the student body did not recognize the strength of our ticket," Reilly said. "We are not anti-student government, but the eliteness of the student body did not recognize us."

"We're glad we had a good class turnout, and we're looking forward to continuing the traditions," Parrish added. "We want to work hard and we hope the student government will continue to be involved with the students."

Movies today lacking classic film qualities

Chris Bednarski
News Editor

When Humphrey Bogart spoke that line in the final moments of “Casablanca,” it became permanent in America’s hearts.

In Robin Hood’s final scene Prince John’s forces battle Robin Hood’s. Hundreds of war­riors are stabbed, beaten and clubbed—but none died. In the climax, Flynn thrusts his sword through Claude Rains’ heart. Raines quietly grits his teeth as he dies. That same year Dorothy threw a bucket of water at the Wicked Witch of the West who melted to death. Such violence is tame compared to today’s standards; that’s both generation wanted it.

In the 1985 movie “Scarface,” Al Pacino buries his face in a mountain of cocaine piled on his desk. His body is later riddled with hundreds of bullets, turning his white shirt red as blood is spewed into the camera’s lens. In “Pulp Fiction,” one of its five sequels, a psychopath wearing a hockey mask buries hatchets in victims’ skulls and lops off women’s arms. The audience doesn’t flinch, instead they shoot an arrow through a teenage girl’s eye. Audiences felt sick to their stomachs. They loved it.

A couple of years ago Tom Cruise, in “Risky Business,” ran a bordello from his parent’s home. Teenage girls swooned over him. Today’s teenagers fall in love with the latest blonde who takes off her shirt on the big screen.

Every generation has a different set of values, beliefs and priorities. Years ago, families ate dinner together and gathered around the radio to hear Edward R. Murrow report the war news from London. Later, after the kids said their prayers, Sinatra and Crosby sang them to sleep.

Today, as family members run in and out of the house, they catch a glimpse of the news.

California law mandates hazardous warnings

Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. - Signs warning of potentially harmful chemicals in everything from foods to workplaces will sprout across California this weekend under a law approved by voters in 1986.

"WARNING: this product contains a chemical known to the State of California to cause cancer." This sign could be seen on store shelves.

"WARNING: chemicals known to the State of California to cause cancer, or birth defects or other reproductive harm may be present in foods or beverages sold or served here." This sign could be printed on restaurant menus.

"WARNING: this area contains a chemical known to the State of California to cause cancer." This sign could be posted on a service station island, along a factory fence or on an assembly line.

In addition, there will be labels, newspaper advertisements, letters and telephones hot lines telling people about chemicals in the products they buy and the environment in which they work and live.

But there probably won't be any warning signs for the more than 15,000 grocery, drug and other products bought every day.

Hopefuls exchange sniping

Rep. Richard Gephardt echoed a George Wallace refrain on Wednesday, saying there is "hardly a dime's worth of difference" between his chief Democratic presidential rivals on economic issues. Republican Sen. Bob Dole sought to slice into Vice President George Bush's Southern support.

Gephardt blistered Gov. Michael Dukakis and Sen. Albert Gore Jr. while a fourth Democratic presidential candidate, Bob Dole, seeks to become the party's candidate.

Among the Republicans, former television evangelist Pat Robertson said his Christian Broadcasting Network once knew the whereabouts of the American hostages in Lebanon and that they could have been rescued.

The assertion drew a tart response from the White House, where spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "Why didn't he tell us where they were?"

It was the second startling comment in as many days from Robertson. He suggested on Tuesday that Bush's campaign aides were behind the recent public disclosure of television evangelist Jimmy Swaggert's sexual misconduct, and said they timed the disclosure to make life difficult for another television evangelist running for president.

Bush denied that charge anew, saying, "I'd like to see an apology or proof."

The vice president shrugged off Dole's solid victories Tuesday night in the South Dakota primary and Minnesota caucuses, saying, "You can't win them all." He made a flying tour through New England, where he expects to win the Maine caucuses over the weekend and the Vermont primary next Tuesday.

But those events - one in a state where the vice president owns a home and the other that has no bearing on the hunt for convention delegates - drew little attention from the rest of the field.

Instead, other eyes turned to Dixie, which is hosting most of the 20 Democratic and 17 Republican contests that will be held on a single day on March 15.

Dole campaigned in South Carolina with Sen. Strom Thurmond at his side, and said he supports legislation on textile imports that is popular in the state.

What is good, opposing... what is evil.

He gave human rights, abortion and the rights of women as examples of when laypeople should scrutinize and devote their energies towards in order to change the world for the better.

"A man is made by his choices," he said. "We will have to make a determination whether we stand in the faith given by Jesus Christ... or whether we stand outside it and march to the beat of this particular time," he added.

D'Arcy praised the work of Sir Thomas More, an English lawyer, statesman and author of the early and middle 1500's. He lauded More's quest for what is evil.

"It (the vocation) is connected with what they do every day, not just what they do on Sundays," he added.

D'Arcy urged students to "look at the signs of the times," and told them to "scrutinize and interpret, discern the signs of the times, strengthening what is good, opposing... what is evil."

The bishop also talked of the holics' "discernment (of good and evil)" as a layperson especially practices, requires a more mature readiness to be counter-cultural.

"Freedom to follow your Catholic faith does not automatically mean it will be easy to speak and act in the name of the Lord Jesus," said D'Arcy, still quoting the pope.

The Observer set to lead

The Observer Board is declaring war on trade unions trying to unite the people of South Africa, "Is this the way of reform? We dare say the government is declaring war on the people of South Africa," Mrs. Simulu told reporters. She said she wasn't sure if she was prohibited from speaking to the press.

The Congress of South African Trade Unions was ordered to stick to labor issues and barred from political activities, such as advocating holidays with special meaning to blacks and calling for the release of detained union members.

Prof. defends Palestinians

By LIZ PANZICA

The Palestinians are a very ancient and dignified people and they are appalled that Americans can be so blind to their cause," said Father James Burtchaell in a lecture Wednesday night. Speaking in St. Edward’s Hall, Burtchaell said, "The PLO is the only viable political representation of the Palestinian people." Burtchaell outlined the history of the Palestinians and their lands and focused on the Palestinian viewpoint in recent developments. He said he focused on the Palestinian’s view "because Americans have a fairly good access to the Israeli view."

"These people have trained the Palestinians for the first time since the 1930s, to have a hope that they might have their own land back," said Burtchaell of the PLO. "In their view they must free a portion of the land."

Previous Palestinians claims to want to drive the Israelis to the sea are only rhetoric now," said Burtchaell. "It has been widely understood that there is going to remain an Israel but also that there has got to be a Palestine," he said. "This acceptance on the part of the Palestinians has not yet been matched by any corresponding politically viable group on the part of the Israelis," according to Burtchaell.

"From the Palestinian point of view... their entire land has been occupied and there can not be a peace until the Palestinians, the people of the land, have some portion of that land themselves," he said.

Burtchaell said the West Bank and Gaza Strip do not represent a viable portion of the land. He said the Palestinians would need to be awarded a land suitable for farming and industry so that the they would be willing to emigrate. According to Burtchaell, the land awarded to the Palestinians must be good enough to draw them out of Israel.

The hostility between the Arab and the Jew is not an old rivalry. The Jews were not a factor in the Middle East until after World War I, he said.

By PATRICK O’CONNOR

Staff Reporter

"I’ve lived my life to come here," said Jim Cunnar, a sophomore with a strong grade point average in the pre-med program who won’t be returning to Notre Dame next year because of financial reasons.

Having exhausted years worth of savings, a $2,500 student loan and a $500 scholarship from a local Notre Dame Club, Cunnar said "It is impossible for me to return here next year," he said.

Cunnar is one of about ten students who are presently financially unable to return to Notre Dame next fall according to Joe Russo, director of Financial Aid.

Cunnar and other students applied for financial aid but were turned down this year and said that their chances are not good for next year either because the financial aid office "is out of money," Cunnar said.

Until students are guaranteed that they will receive aid they all must deal with the same grunting uncertainty. Frank Tarin, a freshman from El Paso, Texas, said he will "return next year but probably not after that." He said the money he’ll get through financial aid loans and scholarships should be enough for next year but at that rate he would be about $18,000 in debt by graduation. He has begun to apply to other schools to prepare for when he has to leave. Cunnar is less fortunate. He is uncertain about being able to attend school at all next year. "I’ve tried to apply to other schools," he said, but Notre Dame won’t send their transcript until I pay my debts. Russo said that the number of students in danger of not being able to return is about the same as in previous years. They “all will get special help," but the Financial Aid Office "can’t help all of them," he said.

He said the Financial Aid Office tries to help as many students as possible but does not grant any aid based solely on need. According to Russo, the decision to grant aid is based primarily on "need, academic performance and the financial assistance to date." Russo said he was "optimistic that things will be better this year" in reference to the number of students accommodated for next fall’s semester because of the University’s $12 million commitment to increase minority enrollment in the next four years and the ongoing $300 million loan fund raising program.

Angry parents protest demotion of elementary children

Associated Press

CHICAGO - Angry parents in a tough South Side neighbor­hood kept nearly half the pupils in their children's school out of classes Wednesday because of poor reading skills.

"I will never agree to demot my child," said Brenda Wemberly, whose 5-year-old son, Dontae, was demoted from third to second grade. "If his reading doesn't come up in April, then he can remain in the third grade for next year."

About half of Beethoven Elementary School's 830 stu­dents have been kept out of the school since Monday by angry parents.

Principal Grace Dawson said Wednesday she would try to make her decision stick.

"At the moment none of us have a clear thing to do," he said.

It was Reagan's first news conference in four months, and he ended it with a speech to a group of students.

"America is a great country," he said, "and it's not easy to be great."

Reagan said the nation was going through "a time of great stress" but that the United States was "not a battered giant."

Mom was surprised at me for cussing out the snow and the excess of my South Bend winter. She told me that it wasn’t like me to say I hated winter, especially since she had never heard me whine about the snow. In fact, she said that she thought I deserved to get a hard knock on the head for saying I hated it. Normally I would have rolled my eyes at her and said she was just plain simple logic but this time Mom really hit home hard.

Lou Sarabando

For the past few weeks Old Man Winter has over-stayed his welcome—concomitantly making many of us weary, sick and irritable. My own irritability had brought on a serious case of winter depression and post-holiday doldrums. I’m afraid that I was beginning to fail apart as a person. My attitude towards life in general was growing complacent, and I was beginning to just let life carry me along rather than be an active part of it. And I can blame it all on the snow.

Snow was such ecstasy in childhood! Schools closed, mom and dad stayed home from work. TV all day! I stayed warm and cozy indoors and watched the world outside the glass paned front door. It was a time when you looked forward to helping dad shovel the walk. Yet snow still is the greatest thing you could still stay home and drink cocoa with mom and dad; only dad made you shovel the walk now. But you didn’t really mind that much. It was the greatest feeling coming back indoors with your face all red. It was the greatest feeling that I should have been enjoying my time with God.

When I went for a long walk in the snow, I wore my favorite blue sweater that my dad bought almost 30 years ago when he still lived on a farm in Portugal, and a wonderfully fally wool scarf mom gave me for Christmas this year. The thick blue boot socks I “borrowed” from my brother a few years ago also helped to keep me warm. I walked slowly around the neighborhood, not sure where I was going. I just wanted to see the snow—really see it like I used to when I didn’t know so much. It was cold. But after a while it wasn’t bitter cold. I really felt what my mom had told me. I felt so warm in my heart that it was no longer cold.

When I got to my place I had added the following conclusion to my philosophy of life: if we look beyond what things appear to be, we not only see their true essence but also feel it ourselves. I know what it is to be snowed in, and it is a wonderful feeling.

When I entered my apartment I felt that same instantTESatisFACTION when warm air brushed against my face. I almost expected mom to be standing outside the door. But I didn’t really mind that much. It was the greatest feeling coming back indoors with your face all red and your cheeks feeling like they were burning up, slowly channeling the warmth to the rest of your icy body as you peeled off layer after layer of thick winter clothing. Just sitting in dad’s recliner reading a “fun” book for the rest of the day was great.

All of that God’s gift to me, and still is. I was getting so caught up in my secular life that I almost missed it this winter. I was writing papers, studying for exams, reading books I was supposed to be reading. Now, I was thinking about personal relationships, working, doing laundry, housecleaning, etc. Garry Trudeu

Involves you with PVO

Dear Editor:

Private voluntary organizations direct services internationally, free of influence from their own or host government, and their efforts have benefitted their host establishments in development and humanitarian assistance work; they act as relief agents, lobbying groups and international diplomats.

In recent years they have begun to work closely with both local PVOs and with academic institutions. For example, in 1987 the Ecumenical Working Group on Africa, which includes church organizations such as Catholic Relief Services, Lutheran World Relief, American Friends Service Committee and others, met at Notre Dame’s Kellogg Institute to discuss collaborative efforts.

PVOs are accessible. They are trying to get a familiar reputation, and they want to be used as access groups; for students they can be alternative job sources; for faculty they can supply “real world” (i.e. broad, international) information for teaching or research. So the “PVO initiative” in progress is an attempt to conciliate PVOs with other PVOs, with students and faculty and with universities as a whole. Kellogg Institute’s Mutumbo Mpanya is actively polling newcomers to make the PVO initiative successful.

His latest effort is a conference to take place Thursday, February 25, 1988, on AIDS in Africa.

If anyone is interested in getting more information about this conference, about working with a PVO or in getting research materials, contact either Mutumbo Mpanya, Kellogg Institute or Lara Naughton.

Rape message needs clarifying

Dear Editor:

I am very concerned that the message delivered Tuesday night by Dr. Mary Ross will deter rape victims, both men and women, from reporting their assaults. During her presentation the message was given that all crime victim’s names would be printed. The statement may be true in other communities but not in ours. I hope that you are willing to publish my comments and the correct information.

Thanks in advance for your willingness to help provide the accurate information.

Ad shows lack of concern

Dear Editor:

That Fidelity magazine would resort to a scurrilous and ad hominem attack on a member of the Notre Dame community is neither new nor surprising, although the vilification of a deceased member of that community does not fit something of a new standard in bad taste.

What is surprising is that the Observer would actively cooperate in such a gesture of contempt, by undertaking to publish Fidelity’s defamatory advertisement of Feb. 23, 1988. At the time of Father Rasmusson’s death last semester, you made a sensitive and commendable decision not to publicize the more sensational aspects of the story. By reversing that decision now, for reasons of commercial gain, you have degraded not only Father Rasmusson and the memory he left behind, but also yourselves. You owe an apology to all your readers, but especially to those of us who knew Father Rasmusson’s students, colleagues and friends.

The Observer welcomes your letters and columns. Please address them to The Observer, PO Box Q, Notre Dame, IN 46556.
I n the month of the year that everyone agrees is two weeks too cold as a Nor­wegian nun, and cursed with guest column ever last too long, are too cold, SYR phenomena. Not that SYRs ever last too long, are too cold, as acne medicine. That is why today I would like to propose, free-of-charge, a few new dance themes that I almost sure have never been done before.

The Petting Zoo SYR: Import some baby pigs and goats and ducks and let them wander through the dance. A feeding for your date is 50 cents extra. Fun for the whole family.

The Safe-Sex SYR: The opposite of the petting zoo motif and probably a fine example, as most SYRs arc, of what Woody Allen called "Oral Contracep­tion." In other words, just say no.

The Cross-Dressing SYR: Come dressed as your date. Simple, fun, and learn a little bit about societal gender roles in the process.

The Generic SYR: Ask the most squares labelled "decoration" in horror while all the prissy girls you ever met howl the off-color lyrics. You can run away. You can press your lips against your date's lips until they become numb as slugs, or you can laugh at everybody else doing it. You can fall asleep. You can run away. That's only the beginning! An SYR, if done properly, in a veritable carnival of possibilities, an entire world of excitement.

The problem is that of course most SYRs are not properly done. In fact, many I've gotten into. I also like to decide whether I'm going at least a week in advance, just so I've got enough time to work up a good cold sore on my lip.

INDIANAPOLIS — If your name is Mount and you live in Lebanon, Ind., you’re expected to play basketball. If your name is Rich Mount, you’re also fighting inevitable comparisons with a famous father who is still regarded as one of the best players to come out of this basketball-eray state.

The younger Mount, a 6-foot-3 junior at Lebanon High School, already gets about 10 letters a week from major colleges around the country. But with his 27-point scoring average, it’s more than just family history that’s drawing the attention.

“Being Rich Mount’s son has been a great deal of help, from the standpoint his father has taught him a lot about offensive basketball,” Lebanon Coach Dave Carney says of Rich, already seen as one of the top candidates for Indian Mr. Basketball next year. “But it’s been tough for him at times because people want to compare Rich with his father.”

Rich’s father, Pete Mount, led Lebanon to a runner-up finish in the 1949 state tournament and was considered the school’s greatest player of all time until Rich, Pete’s son and Rich’s father, came along.

Rich Mount, of course, became even more famous than Pete in 1966, the first high school athlete pictured on the cover of Sports Illustrated and an All-American at Purdue, where he led the Boilermakers to a runner-up finish in the 1969 NCAA tournament.

Pete Mount played professionally for five years and averaged 21.5 as a sophomore. Rich Mount has 1,353 points and a 21.8 career average (24.2 points a game for his career). At Purdue, naturally, has shown a lot of interest.

“He taught me to really work hard at everything,” Rich says of the help he got from his father. “He said stick with it, and I got a lot out of it. We’d play at the park every evening for two hours. In the afternoon, I’d shoot an hour and a half. I end up playing five or six hours a day since I was in seventh grade.”

It was when Rich was in the eighth grade that he first got statewide attention, although it wasn’t the kind of publicity he would have preferred.

His father got him “red-shirted,” held back a year so he could gain more maturity and experience. “I think it helped me,” Rich says. “I don’t talk about it much, it’s been forgotten about mostly, but it helped me a lot, mentally and physically. Mentally, mostly. It made me mentally tougher. I don’t know why, but I knew at that point I needed to be mentally tough.”

The Lebanon School Board voted to let Rich, an honor student, repeat the eighth grade. The Indiana High School Athletic Association, which has rigid eligibility regulations, has no jurisdiction at the junior high level, but the statewide publicity surrounding the Mount case later prompted the Lebanon board to ban the practice.

By that time, Rich was in high school, where he averaged 17.1 points a game as a freshman and 21.5 as a sophomore. This year, besides the 27.8 average, he’s rebounding about 3.5 per game and shooting better than 50 percent from the field and 90 percent from the foul line. He had a streak of 28 straight free throws, which was snapped last week.

I do become Mr. Basketball, he would be the first one whose father also was a Mr. Basketball.

“That’s a dream for every kid in high school basketball. I’m working on that,” the young Mount admits. “But what happens is you go out and work hard and make yourself a better player and that (reward) comes later. You don’t concentrate on Mr. Basketball. You do things that help the team win, and if those other things come along, that’s great.”

Going into the final game of the regular season Friday night, Lebanon has a 14-5 record.

NORMAN, Okla. - Stacey King scored 22 points Wednesday night, including six in a row during a crucial stage late in the game, as fourth-ranked Oklahoma held off Kansas, 95-87, in Big Eight Conference basketball.

The victory came despite a 30-point performance by Kansas forward Danny Manning, who became the Big Eight's career scoring leader. Manning, who now has 2,160 points, eclipsed the mark of 2,061 previously held by Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma. Oklahoma, winner of 11 straight, improved to 25-2 overall and 10-1 in the conference. Kansas dropped to 17-10 and 6-5 all and 10-1 in the conference.

It's time for the real thing. The 1988 postseason is finally upon the varally fencing team, and this weeked the Irish squad will set its sights on the Great Lakes region, to participate in a qualifying tournament for the NCAA Championships.

All postseason fencing is dedicated to qualifying for the NCAA Championships. The men's squad, coming off a 24-1 (.960) season with its only loss last weekend to Illinois, has won the Great Lakes Championships for the past four years. Its main competition is Wayne State, who the Irish again defeated twice this year.

Women's swim team heads to Mid. Ind.

By GREG GUFFEY
Sports Writer

After a season of peaks and valleys, the women's swimming team has picked the right time to be on an upswing.

The women put everything together last weekend in winning the Midwestern Collegiate Conference Championships in Evansville and hope that success and effort carries over to this weekend's Midwestern Independent Championships in Chicago. The Irish finished sixth in last year's meet.

The men's squad has the week off before playing host to the Midwestern Independent Championships next weekend at Rolfs Aquatic Center. The men also won the MCC meet, easily outdistancing Evansville.

"This is a much-needed week off from competition and this team requires more rest," Welsh said. "The men have been a spirited, very deep team." Welsh said. "The men have required more rest," Welsh said. "The men have been by 12 points or less, a very small margin in collegiate swimming."

"The women have gotten stronger as a unit," Welsh said. "Every time we came out of those close meets, their character developed and we said, 'one of these days' and here it is.'"

With the confidence gained late in the season and the talent Welsh has assembled, a better showing may be in the cards for the women in Chicago.

"This is a much better team than the record might lead one to believe," Welsh said. "We are ambitious and excited about this year's meet and we want to move up dramatically. I think we have momentum and confidence to do it."

Cubs move closer to night baseball

CHICAGO. For 72 seasons, day baseball and the Chicago Cubs have been synonymous at Wrigley Field. The Cubs are the last of the big league teams to end their day when the sun goes down. But if Thursday’s City Council vote goes as its supporters expect, one of baseball’s longest traditions will come to an end in six weeks when the 73rd season begins. "Yeah! all right! terrific!" said Joanne Budka, a light advocate who can hear the crack of the bat at her home in Wrigley Field’s shadow. "Night baseball is exciting. The Cubs need that."

But many residents complain that what’s good for the Cubs is not necessarily good for the neighborhood. They say night games in Wrigleyville, the neighborhood around the park, will mean rowdy fans pouring out of bars in the wee hours. Parking will be limited for residents returning home, and sidewalks and streets will be littered. "I’ll move out," Noreen Gleeson says she loves the Cubs, but her affection fades a bit when she’s asked about night games. "I’ll have drunks staggering in the fence."

The Cubs’ inability to stay in the 1988 season and 18 the following years until 2002. The City Council delayed a vote on the issue Wednesday, but a special meeting was scheduled for Thursday and supporters say they have the votes to see it through.

Some aldermen have accused Sawyer and his council allies of fashioning a plan that has few benefits for Wrigleyville residents. Alderman Bernard Hansen, whose ward includes the ballpark, says he may go to court to prevent lights. During a council committee vote this week, Paul Kendall, a fervent opponent of night games, issued this warning. "I think you will find some real problems when fans start coming in... especially if they are wearing Cubs hats. They will be marked."

Wrigley Field, named in honor of P. F. Wrigley, who was established in 1914, is the only major league ballpark without lights. It is bordered by small apartment houses behind the outfield. Building some buildings are so close that residents can open a lounge chair on roofs and watch the games for free.

During batting practice, youngsters dodge traffic on Waveland and Sheffield avenues to shag balls that clear the fence. The Cubs’ inability to play home games after dark put Wrigley Field in danger of losing National League playoff games and the World Series, if the Cubs ever got that far, because of baseball’s commitments to television networks.

Gleeson says she loves the Cubs, but her affection fades a bit when she’s asked about night games. "I’ll have drunks staggering in the fence."

The Cubs have threatened to move to the suburbs or outside Illinois if lights are not erected.

"You’re not going to get the same type of crowd that comes to Wrigley Field now. You’re not going to get the families," she said.

Durso, Geneser

Roommates share NCAA goal

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Sports Writer

At first glance, Jerry Durso and Chris Geneser have about as much in common as Mutt and Jeff. Geneser comes from Iowa, while Durso hails from New Jersey. Durso always has been outgoing, and Geneser was the quiet type upon entering college. Geneser is almost six feet tall, while Durso is a little more reserved when we first met and I was kind of loud, and we've both gotten more like each other.

Durso and Geneser also have both enjoyed an extraordinary amount of success. Durso had a 6-13 record in his first two years, and is ranked fourth in the country's 134-pound division. Geneser, with a combined record of 56-15 in his first two years, is ranked eighth among the country's 175-pounders.

But neither one of them has reached his goal of being an All-American. Durso was inducted at Regionals his freshman year and talked about it with a combined record of 56-20 and don't be surprised if (Pat) O'Brien and Peltier steal five at 10 bases.

"My goal was to do what they did before our freshman year and talked at a tournament," said the 177-pound Geneser. "When we got to school, we were both living in Fanner and we've been roommates the last two years. We just took out our frustrations on other roommates."

In fact, Notre Dame's signing of Geneser, a high school All-American, helped convert DePaul's Jerry Durso to follow suit.

"I first heard from Notre Dame, what I heard was just from coach (Fran) McCann," Durso said. "Then the 134-pound Durso. "By the time I came out on the trip, they'd already looking forward to it," said Durso, and that made me realize they were serious about

Trump to host fight

Associated Press

LAWRENCE TOWNSHIP, N.J. - The heavyweight title fight between undisputed champion Mike Tyson and challenger Spinks will be held in Atlantic City, N.J., on June 27, Donald Trump said Wednesday in announcing that he had won the bidding to host the bout.

"We had the best offer," Trump told one reporter that he would pay $11 million, which would be a record, surpassing the $7 million funciona. He said he paid for the middleweight title fight between Marvelous Marvin Hagler and Sugar Ray Leonard last April in Las Vegas.

"We have a commitment for the fight on June 27, I am looking forward to it," said Trump, a New York real estate magnate and hotel owner.

"The two football guys I really believe in for some reason," Murphy continued. "They're like an atomic bomb waiting to explode and come into their own.

"Pitching is the most glaring weakness of the team leaving into the season. Murphy is counting on production senior Mike Har- mon, juniors Erik Madsen and Mike Passilla and sophomore Brian Piotrowicz.

"Talk about question marks, pitching is going to be a real problem," said Murphy. "These kids have worked extremely hard. They may be short on experience, but I'll guarantee they'll fight to the end. We're just using the best available right now.

"The pitchers will be tested quickly in a week of reunions for the Notre Dame baseball team. Against Duke, Murphy will meet first-year Duke coach Steve Traway who coached under Taylors at Florida Atlantic, as the school reached the top five in the nation's Division II polls. At Wake Forest, the Irish meet their previous coach Larry Gallo, who now is an assistant coach at Wake Forest. "We start with seven very difficult games," said Murphy. "I'm just looking for the consistency and composure that is needed to have a winning program. We just can't worry about our record and just have another year. If we play good ball. The nature of baseball is not to have an undefeated season, but if we can approach a 65 percent winning clip, we'll be in the best possible shape. It may not happen this year, but in years to come."

By THERESA KELLY
Sports Writer

Valparaiso, In. Looking to run its winning streak to six games, the Notre Dame women's basketball team will travel west but not far tonight to take on the Valparaiso Crusaders at Valparaiso.

At 17-6 and sporting the best record after 23 games in their 10 year history, the Irish look to beat North Star Conference foe Valparaiso for the second time this season. On Dec. 19, the Irish clobbered the Crusaders 95-50, with Heidi Bunek pulling down analysis boards.

"They're playing better now then they were last time we played," says Irish head coach Muffet McGraw. "They are a very good perimeter team at right.

In the last game, the Irish defense held the Crusaders to 20 of 72 shooting (.278) while the Irish, who led the nation in field goal shooting at the time, shot 33 percent.

Notre Dame still leads the nation at 53 percent but Valparaiso will probably be better both offensively and defensively. The Crusaders look like a better team to McGraw despite their 5-11 record after Tuesday night's loss to DePaul.

"They don't have the size to match up with ours, so we'll try to go inside," says McGraw. "But they are a good perimeter shooting team. They are shooting a lot better than they did against us before. They are also playing really good defense." McGraw said. "I wouldn't mind if we take a few more than we are now, but I don't think they'll let us do that.
