Thousands of Rockne stamps have been shipped in for sale, Reagan protesters have made their plans and the Secret Service has secured the campus. Everything is set for today's unveiling of the Knute Rockne commemorative stamp at the Joyce ACC.

President Reagan will be the principal speaker at the midday ceremonies. Reagan portrayed George Gipp in the 1940 movie "Knute Rockne - All American," the character who inspired the movie's most famous line, "Win one for the Gipper." Originally scheduled for March 4 to coincide with Rockne's 100th birthday, the ceremony was delayed to accommodate Reagan's schedule. In addition to Reagan, the ceremony will include remarks from Postmaster General Anthony Frank, former Postmaster General Preston Tisch, Andrew McKenna, vice chairman of the Notre Dame Board of Trustees and Mrs. Anthony Kochenderfer, one of Rockne's daughters.

The stamp, available today only on the Notre Dame campus, can be bought at the Notre Dame post office until noon and from 1:30 to 5 p.m., said Paul Sniadecki, manager of retail sales and services of the South Bend post office. Stamps will also be sold until 2:30 p.m. from special booths outside the Alumni-Senior Club.

The stamp is the sixth issued for national ceremonies with President Reagan at the request of the White House and the University, said Mike Bobinski, who was in charge of ticket distribution for the event.

According to Bobinski, ticket manager and assistant business manager at the Notre Dame post office until noon and from 1:30 to 5 p.m., 10,000 first-day envelopes and message cards will be on sale today, said Charles Pasin, assistant business manager at the Notre Dame post office.

The time has come for Nice Guys' revenge

At long last, Nice Guys are about to get their revenge.

For a long time now, Nice Guys, and Nice Girls for that matter, have been getting sand kicked in their faces.

Nice, it seems, was not hip. Nice was out.

Mean was in.

"Listening to all you Judeo-Christian people out there," Ben Stein wrote in the October 1987 issue of Elle magazine, "we have a new commandment, passed down vaguely but unchallengeable to all Americans. It goes like this: 'Thou shall not be nice.' Or, in this case, 'thou shall not be too nice.'

The new meanness was everywhere: Pit bulls were replacing Cocker Spaniels. Joan Rivers had her own show. Spiked hair was in. The Beastie Boys were hot.

And Nice People were being hounded.

"When the question is asked, 'What's so nice about being a Nice Guy?' the answer is, 'Not much,'" Steve Levin wrote in a Sept. 4, 1987 Chicago Tribune article. "Today, being a Nice Guy brings one close to falling over the edge into wimpdom."

Even Notre Dame was not immune to the meanness trend.

Nice Guys sent flowers to their Dream Girls only to be called "Goozers." Nice Girls brought cookies to bedridden guys only to have them take out other girls when they got well.

Yes, Nice Guys were finishing last. And so were Nice Girls.

But there was hope.

The trend toward meanness could not last, Levin wrote. "There were just too many people out there who are nice, and want others to be nice. (After all, it's nice to be nice, and it's wonderful to be wonderful, even if those are subjective words today.) We nice people may be down today ... but tomorrow the worm may turn.

"Holding doors may be hip," he wrote. "Complimenting women instead of dumping them may be cool ... Don't give up, nice people. Our day will come."

Meaness is on its way out. Just ask Republican presidential candidate Bob Dole.

Dole, you'll remember, was doing pretty well not too long ago. He had won the Iowa caucuses, and Super Tuesday looked promising.

Then Bob got mean.

Shortly before the New Hampshire primaries Dole snarled to a reporter, "Get back in your cage." Then, after he lost the primary, Dole snapped at George Bush: "Stop lying about my record."

Super Tuesday: Bush wins, Dems mixed

Associated Press

George Bush won Super Tuesday primaries from one end of Dixie to the other, reaping a rich harvest of convention delegates to seize control of the Republican presidential race. Michael Dukakis captured Florida and Maryland in a demonstration of nationwide appeal, and Sen. Albert Gore Jr. emerged to split Dixie with Jesse Jackson in the splintered Democratic race.

Bush routed Sen. Bob Dole and his Republican rivals in the race for over 500 of the 713 Republican delegates at stake. Campaign manager Lee Atwater predicted the vice president's total for the night would exceed 600. Dole congratulated the vice president on an "extremely good day," adding, "He'll probably sleep better than I will." But the Kansas senator tried to turn the talk to next week's Illinois primary, saying, "Tomorrow we will be on the road to recovery." Bush romped to victory in Texas, Florida, Georgia, Virginia, Kentucky, Mississippi, and was failing to qualify for convention delegates in several states.

Former Fed fights for peace

Last September after twenty years of service to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, John Ryan was fired for refusing an order to investigate an antiwar organization.

In his lecture, "A Crisis in Conscience," at the Law School Tuesday, Ryan spoke of his firing that resulted from a conflict between "his personal and human beliefs" and the activities of the FBI.

Ryan was ordered to investigate the "glowsharers," an antiwar group which was believed responsible for tampering with locks at military recruiting offices in Chicago, as well as other acts in the Midwest. Ryan said he "decided to confront the agency on this issue." Ryan said he was impressed by the group's stance on nonviolence. He also said their actions "were not under the scope of the domestic security guidelines" that could require his actions. "The Dan cin' Irish" was inappropriate.

Ryan had done before," he said, adding, "We've cut out anything risque."

"We're not a group of airheads," Bolinger said. "We're a group of quality girls." She said.

"There are some members of the audience, predominantly females, who are not comfortable with the Dan cin' Irish," said Bink.

"Because of the female nature of the group, the connotations associated with the Dan cin' Irish are sexist," she said.

Bink said student surveys have shown sexism is a problem at Notre Dame, and the Dan cin' Irish isn't a positive step toward getting rid of the sexism here.

Bink said the board will discuss restructuring the group with the co-captains Thursday and that the restructuring may include the involvement of men in the group.

Bolinger disputed the contention that Notre Dame students don't like the Dan cin' Irish.

"All the comments we've received throughout the year have been positive," she said. Bolinger said there was a perception among board members that the image of the Dan cin' Irish was inappropriate. She said she objected to the idea that "the Dan cin' Irish doesn't conform to the image that a Notre Dame woman should portray.

"We are a group of quality girls," she added. "We've cut out anything that could be considered risque."

Ryan also said he is strongly opposed to U.S. policy in Central America. He sees the government's actions there as violent, illegal and immoral. "These patterns of violence will continue as long as such government action exists."

John Ryan said he was raised a staunch Roman Catholic. He entered the seminary, but left to join the police. After stints in the police force and in the army, he was hired by the FBI. During his career as a foreign intelligence operative, he was twice commended for his work, which included the investigation of organized crime figures and of fugitives such as Father Daniel Barrigan.

Ryan said he still feels the FBI is a "good agency." But he said he feels the "FBI has been used to quell dissent sometimes when dissent was warranted. The FBI was ill-advised to be involved in the case of the investigation of antiwar organizations." Ryan was sponsored by Notre Dame's Institute for International Peace Studies.

student body is comfortable with the group as it has existed.

The group was operating on a one-year trial basis after being disbanded briefly last year. The board, originally called the Ad Hoc Appeals Board, met Tuesday to re-evaluate the group, said co-captain Robin Bolinger.

Student Body Vice President Laurie Bink, who sat on the board, said the original reason for the trial period had to do with the quality of the group's performances. "With all the improvements, they are a good dancing troupe," Bink said. "But now that we know this, we see that the problems are deeply rooted.

"I don't think the students accept the group," Bink said. "There are some members of the audience, predominantly females, who are not comfortable with the Dan cin' Irish," said Bink.

Jaeger's comments spark HPC debate

By PATRICK HEALY

Anger over Student Government Chief of Staff Mike Jaeger's comments in last week's Scholastic disrupted the all-night's Hall Presidents Council meeting.

Jaeger said in Scholastic that the HPC was not concerned with many of the issues that are important to the Student Senate, and there was a serious lack of communication between the two bodies.

One example of this was a vote on establishing a new business committee, he said. The bill had been extensively expanded in the Senate and passed unanimously, while it barely passed HPC after almost no debate, Jaeger also alleged in the article that "whenever a senator shows up (at HPC meetings), to present (the HPC) with a proposal, it becomes a tense situation."

In other matters of business, Rich Daly and Mary Beth Fodor announced that the Alumni Association will have a "Hospitality Information Center" located in South Padre.

The HPC will be choosing a rector of the year by nominations filled in by committee members.

Hall events were announced at the meeting. The Mr. Oakford Contest will be held April 9, the Cavanaugh Hall play on Thursday of that week.

Wilson said 50 percent of the vote plus an additional vote is required to win a regular election. Tisa said he was pleased with his strategy, "just to go to the dorms we are happy with the results and there to vote. I think the problems. He also said that the HPC co-chairman, about any of his problems. He also said that it was "one-sided" of the HPC to see what their feelings were.

Many of the HPC members indicated that the tense situations senators find themselves in are the result of frivolous proposals. One HPC member, Jeff Dorashner of St. Edward's Hall, asked the senator to show the same recognition of the HPC as a political body that the HPC does for the senate.

People can stick their stamps on almost anything and get the postmark printed on it, including programs and "probably even football tickets," Schadecki said.

Not everyone, however, will be honoring Reagan at today's ceremony. Members of Pax Christi Notre Dame, a chapter of the international Catholic peace movement, will distribute flyers to people going into the JACC, said Tom Reich, a Pax Christi member.

A South Bend group calling itself the "Ad Hoc Committee to Greet Reagan" to 500 people to march from Leeper Park in downtown South Bend to the JACC. The group objects to Reagan's support of the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

Protesters, however, will not be allowed inside the JACC, said Rex Bakow, Notre Dame Security director.

Born in Voss, Norway, Rockne came to America with his parents at age five. After nine years in Chicago, he began a ten-year career as a mail dispatcher in Chicago for four years before enrolling at Notre Dame.

Following a successful playing career, Rockne began a 13-year run as coach. Rockne led Notre Dame to national championships and won unbeaten and untied seasons. Winning the last 19 games he coached, Rockne ended up with a winning percentage, ranking him first among college and professional football coaches.

Along with the stamp, Rockne is also being honored this week with an exhibit focusing on his personal life at the Northern Indiana Historical Museum. In addition, the Studebaker National Museum has loaned Notre Dame an exhibit covering the history of the Studebaker-owned Rockne Motors Co.

Studebaker named a car after Rockne in 1931 after employing the Notre Dame coach for four years to make motivational tapes for its salesmen.

Rockne died in an airplane crash in March 1931.

Travelers to and through the Windy City for spring break can expect long, trafficked delays on the Dan Ryan expressway due to a two-year construction project that began March 1, according to the AAA-Chicago Motor Club.

The project will continue through Nov. 1 of this year to repair the north-bound lanes and will resume from March 1 to Nov. 1 of next year to repair the south-bound lanes, according to an informational pamphlet from the Motor Club.

During the construction period, the 225,000 vehicles which normally use the four lanes in each direction will be squeezed down to two lanes in each direction, according to the pamphlet.

Traffic experts expect the construction project to affect all major routes in the Chicagoland area. The Motor Club has advised travelers to use alternate routes to alleviate the congestion on the Dan Ryan.

Students traveling to the Chicago area on United Limo Club has advised travelers to all major routes in the construction project to affect pam phlet, according to the correction, according to the down to two lanes in each direction will be squeezed normally use the four lanes in each direction.

Motorists are then advised to continue on 1-90 as it becomes the Chicago Skyway, which has a one-way toll of $1.50, and exit at Stony Island Avenue and continue north. Motorists are then advised to take Hayes Drive in Jackson Park to Lake Shore Drive, U.S. 41.

Travelers from Northwest Indiana to Wisconsin are advised take the Bowman Expressway (1-80) west to the Tri-State Tollway (1-294). According to the Motor Club, this route will circle the Chicago area and 1-294 will eventually become I-94, which goes to the Milwaukee area. Another option offered to Milwaukee-bound motorists is diverting to the Northeast Tollway (I-90) near O'Hare, which will take them to Rockford and points north.

In the likely event that the Tri-State area is badly congested, the Motor Club suggests motorists to continue on I-80 to Illinois Route 59 or Route 47. Although these routes are not expressways, they provide a clear route in 1-90 during "non-peak" travel periods.

The Motor Club advises travelers to keep gas tanks more than half full in case of local traffic delays, pay close attention to traffic reports on local Chicago radio stations and to allow extra time in getting to destinations.

A spokesperson from the Motor Club added that travelers at the normal rush hours of 9 a.m., 3 p.m. and 5 p.m. is not recommended during this construction period. She added that the pamphlet containing this and more information on other alternative routes is now available at the AAA Motor Club office in Mishawaka.

Bobinski said tickets were distributed, Bobinski said about 500 tickets were distributed, Bobinski said.

No preference was given to the Joyce ACC distributed, Bobinski said. About 500 tickets were distributed, Bobinski said.

"It will certainly look like a full house," he said, explaining that the organizers of the event "have the arena to look full." Lennon said student response is excellent. "The students are very excited. Everybody seems to be talking about it, and that's a good sign," he added. "I think it will be a fun day. I think the president will enjoy himself."

Of all the tickets distributed to faculty and staff, about 750 went to Saint Mary's College, according to Bobinski.

Pax Christi series misleading

Dear Editor:

During the week of Feb. 29-March 4, The Observer ran a series of articles under the title "Pax Christi in the Chronicle," which I believe was written by members of the local chapter of Pax Christi. In intent these articles were supposed to target political issues involving the local community, and I believe that the authors felt it was important to get their views across.

But the articles did, however, amount to a biased attack on the leadership of the administration of either institution. The News is reported as accurately and objectively as possible; it is the duty of the editor to do no more than report the facts of any case.

Furthermore, these articles neglected to present the full story, and oftentimes did not present the pertinent information. In writing this letter I hope to present that side of the story that Pax Christi missed.

In looking at the article dealing with the number of poor in America, the authors throw a bunch of more or less useless numbers at the audience. The numbers that they do not present, however, are those concerning percentage increase. The percentage in this case being (number of poor)/population. This number is what needs to be looked at, considering that along with an increase in the number of poor in America since 1980 there has also been an increase in population.

In the article targeted at the Contrax, the authors mention many times about peace initiatives of the Sandinista government. What they don't mention is that the US is fighting against an oppressive government that recognizes no human rights, and that the peace plans put forth by the Sandinistas are designed to undermine their method of government. This is why the Contrax are many times referred to as the Freedom Fighters. Remember that we too, at one time, had to fight for our freedom.

Finally, looking at the article targeted at the Iran-Contra scandal, the authors accuse Reagan of abandoning the Constitution of the United States and lying to the country. The simple fact remains, however, that if Reagan had done so he would have been impeached, as the Constitution does not authorize the president to go beyond the powers given to him in the Constitution. Furthermore, the Constitution was written to protect the citizens of the United States, and in the process of the Iran-Contra scandal we were trying to rescue U.S. citizens.

In conclusion, I wish to express that I do recognize that the members of Pax Christi have rights and opinions as a Christian group in trying to persuade others of these opinions they, as "good Christians," must present both sides of the story.

Rebuttal becomes personal attack

Dear Editor:

In a letter to the editor, Feb. 17, 1988, Ann Pettifer implied by association that Opus Dei is a fascist organization, and by extension that Mr. D'Andrea is a fascist. I am not now and never was a member of Opus Dei, and I have no desire to join or defend it. But I do know Mr. D'Andrea personally. I disagree with him on views of opinion, but I wish to state very firmly that he is not a fascist.

Ms. Pettifer's letter is just another example of her penchant for ad hominem arguments. The ad hominem argument is a well-known and particularly insidious fallacy. If you argue for some point, your opponent does not argue against that point. He calls you psychological or some other derogatory term. If you argue for another point, he does not argue against it. He calls you schizophrenic. In the past Ms. Pettifer has claimed that the pope suffered permanent psychological damage as a result of the death of his mother and the beatings he suffered at the hands of his authoritarian father. If I remember correctly she also suggested that Polish citizens are particularly prone to this latter type of behavior as well as authoritarianism. If my memory is correct, this is a blatantly racist claim. She made a similar diagnosis of Father Griffin. Where is the evidence supporting these claims? Are we to believe them on the basis of hearsay supported by unexhibited facts? Is there a self­ referred psychiatrist who would dare make a diagnosis of a man with whom she has not spoken extensively enough to know him? I am not simply dissatisfied in Ms. Pettifer's inability to argue rationally before the Notre Dame community, though I would take her much more seriously if she did. I am offended that a Christian would engage in such non­Christian personal attacks.

Am I now to be diagnosed as a paranoid schizophrenic for writing this letter? Perhaps my diagnosis is a result of the death of my mother and the beatings I suffered in my youth. I am a firm believer that he is not a fascist. Ann Pettifer implied by association that Opus Dei is a fascist organization, and by extension that Mr. D'Andrea is a fascist. I am not now and never was a member of Opus Dei, and I have no desire to join or defend it. But I do know Mr. D'Andrea personally. I disagree with him on views of opinion, but I wish to state very firmly that he is not a fascist.

Irrational fears terrify a unique obsessive-compulsive

The other day I was reading an article about these people who have what they call obsessive-compulsive ameryt. These are the people who feel like they have to have every minute of their life scheduled. Some would blame these fears on an overactive imagination or on too many World War II movies. Others would blame it on the military-industrial complex. I blame Spuds Mackenzie, the true anti-Christ.

Kevin Walsh

to the second or who wash their hands fifteen times a minute every day. Laura MacBeth was an obsessive-compulsive, among her other obsessions. Her freshman year was probably obsessive-compulsive. So was mine. In reaction to these poor, unfortunate souls was one of sympathy and warmth. I thought to myself as I couldn't think any other way. "Look, what a bunch of sickos, psycho, weirdos.

Then, reflecting on the man that I thought I knew, I realized that I too have a few compulsions. Mine are mainly in the form of completely and totally irrational fears. Not fears about things like getting bad grades, nuclear war, or cutting my tongue on an envelope as I try to break a window. No, no, no, I mean those fears to be pretty rational.

For instance, many of my fears are associated with the weather. Whenever I see a plane flying low over campus, I have a moment of fear that it will open up its guns on me in a strafing run. Waiting across an open field, I often wonder if it is missed. When I walk by a window at night, I always envision my head in the crosshairs of a high-powered rifle sight.

I have other weird, violent fears. I have an odd fear that someday I'll be walking along minding my own business, when out of the blue the top of my head will come off by a flying manhole cover. I can't explain that one, but I feel like it goes hand-in-hand with my irrational fear that when I drive under a highway overpass at night, there's some creep on top of it waiting to drop a bowling ball into my windshield. There are those of you who would call this ungrounded paranoia, but why? What is it you want from me anyway?

I want weird food fetishes, too. Often I envision a Big Mac made of worms, or spider eggs in my Bubble Yum, or toenails in my Corn Flakes. The only explanation I can give for these is that once in fifth grade, in what I took to be a kind and generous gesture, a kid gave me a large, homemade oatmeal cookie. I thanked him and, in the delicate manner of eating I had then, wolfed it down in five seconds. Everyone at the table burst into laughter. It turned out, of course, that everyone at the table had licked it. I remember thinking it was a little on the moonside.

"He was a devoted son and visited his parents a lot," Bainebridge said. The collection includes a krinkkra iron that his mother used to make his favorite dessert, a crisp Nor­wegian cookie that was filled with sour cream and fresh raspberries or preserves. A photograph of Rockne's parents on their wedding day and parts of his mother's wedding costume that she wore, were probably made by his mother as part of her dowry, Bainebridge said. These pieces are elaborately embroidered and in very good condition.

Several books about Rockne's life are also in the exhibit. The family has loaned a copy of Rockne's autobiography, which is edited by his wife and contains an introduction and postscript by Father John Cavanaugh. They have also loaned "The Four Winners: The Story of a Great Football Team," by Knute Rockne and several biographies for the ex­hibit.

"These items have never been on exhibit before, and who knows when they'll be again. That makes (the collection) that much more special," said Bainebridge.

The Northern Indiana Histori­cal Museum is located at 112 South Lafayette Blvd. in down town South Bend. The museum is open Tuesday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday, 1 to 4 p.m.

Exhibit: Rockne more than a sportsman

Most of the stamp dedication activities today focus on Knute Rockne, the sportsman. But an exhibit at the Northern Indiana Historical Museum entitled "Rockne Family: A Per­sonal History of the Rockne Family" is also on display.

With the exception of some of the photographs that have been reproduced elsewhere, the items in this small collection have never been on public display. The exhibit opened Sunday and will be on display at the museum until a point of March to mark the 100th anniversary of Rockne's birth on March 4.

The family changed the spell­ing of their name when they emigrated to America in 1893. "They added a K for easier pronunciation," said Bainebridge. "Actually, he did get off the train without any suitcases, but his things were sent later. His family was fairly well-off."

WESLEYFELT - Second-ranked Purdue, already assured of its first outright Big Ten basketball championship since 1969 and an automatic berth in the NCAA tournament, has compiled the best record in the conference over the past eight years since Gene Keady became coach.

Going into Wednesday night's game at Ohio State, the Boilermakers were 94-43 under Keady.

Purdue shared the Big Ten championship with Indiana last season and is playing in the second round of the NCAA tournament while the Hoosiers went on to their fifth NCAA title.

"I don't have any monkey on my back," says Keady, who has taken over the Boilermakers past the second round of the national tournament.

"I've had a lot of success but I understand what you consider success. I am success winning a national title or having a great season or having an awful lot at night. I am happy with the way we look and I am going to work very early, so I am not trying to get a monkey off my back."

"Sure we want to win the national championship, that's the bottom line. But if we don't win it, doesn't mean we're not successful."

Purdue finishes the regular season at home on Saturday against Minnesota. The NCAA Selection Committee will gather for its first-round pairings on Sunday. The Big Ten is expected to get at least four other bids to the tournament besides Purdue's automatic spot as conference champions.

In other Purdue news, Melvin McCants of Purdue has been selected to the Associated Press Big Ten Basketball Player of the Week.

McCants, a 6-9, 225 pound junior from Chicago's Mount Carmel, scored 24 points and had 19 rebounds in Purdue's 80-67 victory over Michigan, which clinched the Big Ten title for the Boilermakers.

Purdue players celebrate their recent Big Ten Championship win over Michigan. The Boilermakers are the most successful Big Ten team in the last eight seasons.
Botham will be missed

"She's really helped me. That help will pay off tonight as Botham and the Irish hit the road to take on Northern Illinois. "It will be an extremely physical game," McGraw says. "They (the Huskies) are really scoring a lot of points. It can be tough going out on the road, and we're really going to have to play well to beat them."

anyone. Those who are able to participate and try out, hopefully they'll let them do just that. It's always been a goal of mine, and it's coming to the forefront. I want to make as much of it as I can." Following the Olympics, Rivers is looking forward to an NBA career, something that has made this year a little different than his first three years. "It's been difficult, but I think it's been successful," Rivers says of his senior season. "I think this year people were more critical of me and my performance on the court simply because I not only have to, in a sense, please the coaches, but I also have to do the things that will make the NBA scouts see that I'm capable of being an effective NBA player and NBA point guard. And so I think this year the coaches have been more critical of me and my performance on the court than ever."

But while the coaches have been more critical, Rivers says that his relationship with Phelps has grown into one of mutual respect.

"It's changed in a sense that from day one it's gotten better and better, closer and closer," Rivers says. "Although there are times he doesn't agree with me, he's always got good advice. He's really helped me."

Rockne a permanent part of Irish football mystique

Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. - Knute Rockne, the legendary Notre Dame football coach who inspired the Fighting Irish to three national championships and its mystique, would have turned 88 this week.

Although he was a receiver for quarterback Gus Dorais. The pass first gained widespread notice in the 1918 Notre Dame-Army game at West Point, and the series became one of college football's greatest inter-sectional rivalries and the setting for many of Rockne's best-remembered stories.

Rockne became coach of the Fighting Irish in 1918. It was in 1924 that the most famous backfield in college football history - Elmer Layden, Don Miller, Harry Stuhldreher and Jim Crowley, better known as the Four Horsemen - gained recognition in a 13-7 victory over Army at the Polo Grounds in New York.

The 1928 meeting was the famous game won for the Irish by 6-0.

As the story goes, Notre Dame trailed 6-0 at halftime. Then, during intermission, Rockne inspired the Irish by recounting a deathbed scene eight years earlier in which George Gipp, stricken with strep throat, told his coach: "I've got to go, Rock. It's all right. I'm not afraid. Some of the boys is up against it, when things are wrong and the breaks are against the boys, but I'll be happy." He hit .183 after the All-Star break, his batting average could do almost nothing right.

He hit .183 after the All-Star break, his batting average sagged under .300 for four of the season's six months, and he hit in 15 double plays, third most in the National League. To make matters worse, his defensive suffered: he was a catcher in 15 double plays, third most in the National League.

Although he was a receiver for quarterback Gus Dorais. The pass first gained widespread notice in the 1918 Notre Dame-Army game at West Point, and the series became one of college football's greatest inter-sectional rivalries and the setting for many of Rockne's best-remembered stories.

Reagan first visited Notre Dame in the summer of 1940 for the making of "Knute Rockne - All-American," a movie that launched the future president's Hollywood career.

Reagan and the late Pat O'Brien, who played Rockne and recommended the then-unknown Reagan for the supporting role as the Gipper, received honorary degrees at Notre Dame in 1961.

As to whether the Gipper died or not, Krause says, "I wasn't there, but I talked to guys who were. They swear it happened just like in the movies." The year after the game was won for the Gipper, Notre Dame closed an undefeated season by beating Army 7-0 for the national championship.

In 1930, Rockne's last year as coach, the Irish edged the Cadets 7-6 before 120,000 fans at Chicago's Soldier Field. The 1930 season also was the first year in the present Notre Dame Stadium, and the Irish finished 9-0-1 for another national crown.

Four months later, the 43-year-old Rock was credited with making the forward pass a legitimate offensive weapon.
Irish prepare for grueling road trip over spring break

By GEORGE TRAVERS
Sports Writer

During spring break, while many Notre Dame students bask in golden rays of sunlight, the men’s tennis team heads to the northeast for a five-match road trip.

The Irish have yet to play away during this spring season. They are 9-5 at home and are coming off a tough loss to Ohio State.

Travelling east instead of taking the traditional warm-weather trip will allow the Irish to play schools they’ve never met before. The road trip begins at Perin State on Saturday. Notre Dame men’s tennis has not taken on the Nittany Lions since 1995.

On Tuesday the Irish move on to Cambridge, where they will play Massachusetts Institute of Technology for the first time. Irish coach Bob Bayliss came from M.I.T. where he coached for three seasons.

Bayliss is looking forward to returning to his old school. “I didn’t start at Notre Dame until August and was late in planning a spring trip.” Bayliss said. “Because the NCAA only allows a school to play 30 dates, the warmer colleges were booked. Playing in the East will be different. We’ll have a good scouting report on M.I.T.”

Notre Dame then goes to Boston College where it will also face the Eagles for the first time. The most difficult match of the trip will be on Thursday when the Irish battle Harvard. Harvard is regularly in the top 20. Despite a few injuries, Harvard will definitely be favored over Notre Dame.

West Point is the final stop on Notre Dame’s eastern trip. The Irish face the Cadets of West Point on Saturday at 1 p.m. before returning to South Bend.

For the seniors on the tennis team, this will be the last in a memorable line of spring-break trips. Senior Paul Daggs sees a major difference in this year’s trip.

“We’re used to heading south or to California,” Daggs said. “Playing in the cold will be a new experience. Harvard is really good. We’ll give it our best shot.”

Daggs is anxious to head east for the first time. “It should be fun,” Daggs said. “My only regret is that I won’t be coming back with a tan.”

PW wins hoops title over Breen-Phillips

Special to The Observer

Pasquerilla West finished its undefeated season in women’s Interhall basketball by downing Breen-Phillips 37-29 Monday night in the Joyce ACC to capture the 1988 title.

“`We didn’t do anything different,” said PW coach Gary Sasse. “It’s like I told them before the game. We have a lot of talent and it was just a matter of going out and getting the job done.’”

PW did the job with its diamond-and-one trap and an aggressive zone defense, weapons Sai’s squad have used effectively throughout the year. PW countered with a zone of its own, but PW freshman Jill Fecko, also a freshman, led PW and all scorers with 16 points, including 14 in the first half and a three-pointer.

Sophomores Cynthia Guckien had 13 points in the losing effort for BP.

“We didn’t utilize our height advantage,” said BP captain Carol Cavalieri. “They were pressing us, but I felt we handled it pretty well at first. They started forcing turnovers in the second quarter and pulled away.”

PW held a 21-11 halftime lead, and stretched it to 15 at one point in the second half. Sasse finished out the game with some of the PW substitutes.

“I was a great year,” said Sasse, who coached PW to the championship last year. “We knew we had the talent to have this kind of a season.”

Why doesn’t someone just give Valparaiso their old basketball uniforms so we never again have to see the ungodly creations they currently wear?

What would you rather see, a group playing hackey-sack or lacrosse on your quad?

When I came here four years ago, I always said, ‘Just get me to one major bowl while I’m here and I’ll be happy.’ Why do I feel differently now?

Do you think, while watching Notre Dame game films, some coach somewhere in the nation sometime this year tried to convince one of his players that was struggling at the line to shoot free throws like Steve Niegorski?

Why do cheerleaders see it necessary to do flips, handstands and other bodily gyrations (not to mention those continuous high-fives) instead of leading cheers?

Time is running out and the quest for knowledge continues.

Irish face the Cadets of West Point on Saturday at 1 p.m. before returning to South Bend.
Big Ten coaches urge consistency

Associated Press

CHICAGO—Teams heading into the NCAA basketball tournament should avoid making any major changes in their style of play and should contemplate only subtle adjustments, Big Ten coaches agreed Tuesday.

That consensus was clear in the weekly telephone news conference of Big Ten basketball coaches, at least five of whom are expected to land squads in the 64-team tournament.

Purdue, ranked No. 2 and having clinched a tournament bid by winning the Big Ten title, will lead the way. Others figure to be 10th-ranked Michigan, 13th-ranked Iowa, 19th-ranked Illinois and defending NCAA champion Indiana.

"Don't change what you've done," advised Jud Heathcote, whose Michigan State Spartans won the NCAA in 1979. "Play your game and make some subtle defensive adjustments for the team you're playing." Purdue Coach Gene Keady is pleased that his team didn't have to go down to the final game of the season to clinch the title. The Boilermakers did it last week with an 80-67 victory over Michigan and have games remaining at Ohio State and against Minnesota.

"We have decided to treat these last two games like a Big Ten tournament," said Keady. "This is an unusual opportunity for us. Hopefully, we'll be into the games and try to improve our half-court game.

For Knicks, no place like home

NEW YORK - The last time the New York Knicks won as many as 13 consecutive games at Madison Square Garden, they won the NBA championship.

That streak gets its toughest challenge Wednesday night when the Knicks play host to the Los Angeles Lakers, who have made a habit of getting lesser teams in their place this season.

The Knicks extended the streak to 13 longest since a 28-game run in the team's last championship season, 1972-73, when they beat the Chicago Bulls 110-98 Monday night in front of their fourth sellout crowd of the season. Another sellout is assured for the Lakers on Wednesday.

"Can I at least enjoy beating the Bulls before I have to start thinking about the Lakers?" Knicks Coach Rick Pitino said when asked about Wednesday's game. "We just got through dealing with Michael Jordan.

The Lakers, whose 40-10 record is the best in the NBA by eight games, are 9-0 this season against Dallas, Boston, Atlanta and Detroit, the four teams expected to give them the most serious challenge to their NBA title. To Los Angeles, the game against the Knicks is just another date in an 82-game schedule.

But to New York, even more important than the home winning streak is the four-team race with Cleveland, Washington and Philadelphia for the last two Eastern Conference playoff spots.

"I'm not worried about the Lakers as much as I'm worried about the Knicks making the playoffs," said center Patrick Ewing, the team's leading scorer and the NBA's No. 3 shotblocker. "The Lakers are a big game for us, but I think every game is a big game.

"Obviously, we're going against the best in the league," Pitino said. "But we have to treat them as we would treat any other game the rest of the season. To make the playoffs, you've got to beat everyone. And that's the case Wednesday.

While Ewing and guard Gerald Wilkins have stood out during the Knicks' successful home streak, the sparkplug has been rookie point guard Mark Jackson.

In their last three victories over Indiana, Philadelphia and the Bullets Jackson has been the key down the stretch.

David Rivers takes his trademark pull-up jumper in the lane against North Carolina last year, keying the Irish to one of the biggest wins of his career.

The never-ending quest for sports knowledge

In the course of acquiring knowledge, it is said that one must ask questions and through the answers, one becomes more knowledgeable.

I am starting to worry since I have quite a few questions that have yet to be answered and some other idle musing that may not have an answer.

For instance: Why do I have the sneaking suspicion that Barry Spencer still has a year of athletic eligibility left? Why is it that the only time I got to see the football team wear green was when Notre Dame was too far ahead for it to matter?

Whatever happened to Largest Agbejemisin?

Will anyone notice that Minnesota’s basketball program has been barred from postseason play for two seasons?

Is Sgt. Tim McCarthy really with the Indiana State Police or does he just deliver ‘Don’t drink and drive’ messages to football fans in the fourth quarter?

Has anyone ever seen Moose Krause without a cigar in his mouth?

Why couldn’t the media just let Tim Brown win the Heisman Trophy instead of making Tim Brown really with the Indiana defense as well as all the milestones he’s reached. Rivers says that he can't single out any one moment from his career that has been particularly satisfying, but there was one this past weekend that was very special.

As Rivers was warming up before facing Marquette, Irish assistant coach Matt Kilkullen motioned for Rivers to turn around. When he did, he saw something that he couldn’t believe. His younger brother, Jerome, who is recovering from a brain tumor, had flown out for the game—his first time he had seen his older brother play at Notre Dame.

After the game, Rivers stood arm-in-arm with his younger brother with a wide smile across his face. A big win over the Warriors took second place to that moment.

“Was that a great moment for me,” Rivers says of the weekend. “He’s battling an illness, and seeing him looking as well as he looked was great.

Having performed before him for the first time here at Notre Dame was another one of those life changing things. I’d have to say that this weekend was a great highlight of my time here at Notre Dame.”

Rivers comes from a family of 14 and this large connection to family has made Rivers particularly conscious of children.

“I have a lot of nieces and nephews,” Rivers says, “and I love spending time with them. But I want to keep in mind what it means because you can’t really influence kids easily. I try to be as positive as I can around the kids and to give them a sense, a model to shape their ideas by, not necessarily to try to alter their game plan. They are a very good in baseball and play night games at Wrigley Field.”

The men’s Interhall hockey season was scheduled to conclude on March 8. But the determination of Off-Campus Crime would extend the season to March 9. It took not one, but two, but three overtimes for O.C. to dethrone two-time defending champion Grace Hall by a score of 4-3.

The marathon was ended by a score of 4-3 at the same time to try to set the record books. The third overtime of the contest on the outstretched glove of Grace goaldenter Gary Davis.

“O.C. fell behind 2-0 in the early going of the contest on goals by Grace’s Steve Bishop and Eric Galis. Yet, the Crime did not allow the early deficit to alter their game plan. They quickly responded with a goal by Jim Fitzgerald, to cut the deficit in half. However, O.C. could not find themselves in a deep hole when Galis scored his second goal of the night, extending the lead to 3-1. At this point, O.C’s defense tightened up which enabled its offense to go to work. O.C. defense was led by the outstanding goal-tending of Pete McCormick. “Pete let up some early goals but he suck it up,” said forward Chris O’Grady. "He came up with big saves in the late part of the game and that was essential to our victory.”

With O.C’s defense intact, its offense was able to open up and pick away at the Grace defense. This freedom produced a goal by Mike Hart, closing the gap to 3-2. But the O.C. team was not finished in their comeback quest. With the clock showing under 30 seconds in regulation play, Johnson pulled the puck into the net forcing the first overtime.

The first and second overtimes were full of missed opportunities on the part of both teams and the factor of fatigue was effecting the play of both die-hard teams. The third overtime came to an end with a shot that deflected off a multitude of players and gave the O.C. team the automatic goal to win.

“The victory was a team effort,” said McCormick. “It feels great to bring the championship back to Off-Campus.”

Milwaukee is going to win the AL East three of the next six seasons.

Why can’t I look Loyola, Marymount, in the top 20 and not be shocked by the Marquette and Dayton in the MCC?

Why would curling get consideration as a possible Olympic sport any more than tiddlywinks?

Why is Digger Phelps considered a bad coach this year?

Why would disqualification from the Olympics in Seoul.

Why is it that the only time I got to see the football team wear green was when Notre Dame was too far ahead for it to matter?
