Mob storms U.S. embassy in Honduras

Associated Press

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras—More than 1,000 students marched on the U.S. Embassy in Tegucigalpa Thursday and burned 20 automobiles before being turned back by gunfire and tear gas. Police said at least one demonstrator was killed.

The crowd, which tried to set fire to the embassy, was prevented by police using a water cannon. Police sources contacted by the Associated Press identified the woman who was killed as Betty Molina, but gave no further details. Others were injured. Guards stationed at the embassy lobbed tear-gas grenades and fired at demonstrators who set fire to about 20 automobiles belonging to embassy personnel.

Police spokesman Miguel O'Brien declined to comment on the incident, saying only that "I know nothing about the situation."

On Tuesday, Honduran officials took Juan Ramon Mata Ballastres, from his Tegucigalpa home in a pregnant state and hustled him onto a plane to the Dominican Republic without a passport. Dominican Republic officials have been investigating a New York-bound flight and he was arrested aboard the jetliner by U.S. marshals, according to U.S. law enforcement officials.

McAuliffe lodged at the maximum-security federal prison in Marion, Ill., was wanted by U.S. officials for questioning in the 1985 slaying of a U.S. drug agent in Mexico.

The protesters also were demonstrating against the presence of U.S. troops in Honduras last month. President Reagan dispatched the troops at the request of President Jose Azcona Hoyo after a reported incursion into Honduras by Nicaraguan troops pursuing Contra rebels.

Afghanistan withdrawal promised by Gorbachev

Associated Press

MOSCOW—The Soviet Union and Afghanistan said Thursday agreement is at hand on ending the Afghan civil war and urged that a formal accord be signed in Geneva so the Kremlin can begin withdrawing its troops May 15.

The target date is two weeks before Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev and President Reagan begin their summit in the Soviet capital. Agreement on Afghanistan would resolve an issue that has troubled relations for nearly a decade, prompting a U.S. grain embargo and keeping Americans home from the 1980 Olympics in Moscow.

Gorbachev and Afghan leader Najib issued a joint statement after meeting in the Soviet Central Asian city of Tashkent.

"There is certain to be a signed agreement on something you really don't think about. I was always surprised when I learned I was counting from Westlake," said Teresa Marcy, Associate cumulative grade point average in the senior class, "Liking my major helped me do well. I think it's pretty smart too."

Gorbachev, from Mishawaka, Ind., a business major with a concentration in finance, said she was "very pleased and surprised to receive this honor. Both Joan and I believe that the fact that neither one of us has a 4.0 speaks for the competitiveness of Saint Mary's curriculum."

Gorbachev attributes her academic success to enjoying her major. "Liking my major helped me do well. I enjoyed all my accounting classes, so it wasn't that much of a major effort to do well."

Marcy said that the finance Club and administration vice president of one of Saint Mary's baseball teams, is the only other student named co-valedictorians for Saint Mary's College.

Tickets for the 1988 commencement ceremony will go on sale May 9 at the Registrar's Office. Assistant Registrar David Kil said the ceremony, which will begin at 2 p.m. in the Joyce ACC, "will definitely be held indoors," regardless of the weather.

"There will probably be extra tickets for the ceremony, but we still don't know exactly how many will be left over," said Kil.

Last year, a lottery was used to allot extra tickets to interested students. Kil said, "Right now, we're in the process of deciding whether or not we will have a raffle or lottery again."

According to Diane Fitzgibbon, senior class president, "Students indicated on a request form if they wanted two, three or four tickets."

Fitzgibbon said the number of tickets students indicated on the request form will be used to determine the number of seats already allocated at the ceremony. If a lottery is used this year, Kil says the name of each person who turned in a form will be placed in the lottery, and the winners' names will be drawn randomly. Each winner will receive one extra ticket.

Once again, extra seating for guests will be available in the Center for Continuing Education. Fitzgibbon said, "If the (CCE) has approximately 500 seats available. The CCE will basically be used for small children and the elderly, like little brothers and sisters and grandparents. The ceremony can get pretty long for them."

Guests seated in the CCE will "watch a televised version of what's going on at the commencement at the exact same time the actual ceremony is taking place," according to Fitzgibbon.

Fitzgibbon said extra tickets will be available "through the lottery and only through the lottery," but the possibility of students scalping tickets still remains an issue.

Kil said, "The University obviously doesn't condone this practice (scalping). As far as policing goes, however, we do not send personnel out to enforce the policy. It is our intention that students use their tickets for themselves. If they have extra tickets, we hope they use them for relatives or guests."

Although extra tickets are often difficult to obtain, Fitzgibbon said, "It's important for people to realize that, even if their relatives can't get tickets to the commencement, they'll still be able to participate in all of the other activities offered that weekend. They can still stay in the dorms and participate in the dinners."
New task forces are needed for problems

The release of the four task forces' reports this week has generated great interest in the University community. Rumors of a dry campus, coeducational housing, and the end of drunken tailgaters have filled the dining halls and dorms over the past couple of days.

Student interest seems to be at a premium. University President Father Edward Malloy has requested that students direct comments concerning the recommendations to the proper administrators.

It is impossible to underestimate the importance of these recommendations and the subsequent policies that affect the entire University.

Maybe, though, it's time to step back and take a different approach to the task forces in general.

It seems that there are a fair number of students who claim that additional task forces should have been established to face the more important issues in the community.

An informal survey taken Thursday in the dining hall led to findings that more task forces are necessary. Note that these findings are not recommendations, but merely creative and somewhat strange ideas that have been bounced off me.

The first, and most creative, of the task forces was one that formed on Drainage. This group could concentrate on why puddles all over campus never seem to dry up. Wednesday's rain was enough to call for this force's creation. The sidewalks and roads around campus were a total mess, giving everyone else something else to worry about.

This task force should begin by examining why large lakes form on the beautiful and supposedly flat lawns of North and South Quad.

Specific areas of concern should be the pond that Keenan Hall residents have been forced to deal with every spring. The Roto-Rooter man just can't fix the problem properly.

Next on this task force's priorities should be the lake that forms on the sidewalk between the back entrance of LaFortune and Nieuwland Science Hall. Since most everyone on the campus walks through this area sometimes during the day, this would seem to be an immediate priority.

The Task Force on Drainage would have to work in conjunction with a Task Force on Delayed Construction. Maybe it's just me, but doesn't it seem that the campus is always under construction? And what exactly is the road running next to Nieuwland that turns into a Moto-cross track every time it rains? The task force could look into the specifics of the road's purpose; then the Task Force on Drainage could work with them on an efficient draining system until the construction is done. The Task Force on Delayed Construction will have already researched that.

Another task force that has received some mention as a priority among students is the Task Force on the Search for the Indiana Excise Police. This task force would look into where the Excise Police have been this year. Usually, we hear of a major raid at one of the bars (take Lee's Rib's, for instance). It might be a good thing to have this task force find out when the next raid is coming and where it will be.

Along these lines, another possibility would be the creation of a Task Force on Social Life: Is There One? It has been offered that this task force would look into the formidable question of whether or not the term "social life" is even applicable at Notre Dame.

The creation of these four task forces would certainly benefit the students. It also might help to give a different perspective to some of the concerns that have been expressed. If nothing else, it gave me an opportunity to get some pressing concerns off my conscience.

Simon campaign on hold; Gore given warning

Associated Press

Albert Gore Jr. got a message from two Democratic Party heavyweights on Thursday to tone down his criticism of presidential front-runners Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson, while Sen. Paul Simon put his campaign on hold but kept his delegates in pocket.

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, one of the Gore critics, implied he might withdraw his sought-after endorsement and said, "Who cares what . . . Mario Cuomo says?"

Cuomo said he told Gore that his negative campaigning "wasn't helping him" in New York ahead of that state's April 19 primary.

Democratic National Chairman Paul Kirk endorsed Cuomo's appeal to the Tennessee senator. "The admonitions that have been addressed to Sen. Gore by Gov. Cuomo just help to make sure we can continue to talk about the issues in a positive way," Kirk said in Washington, D.C.

But Gore consultant David Garth, a sometime adviser to Cuomo, took exception to the governor's comments. "Big chief, big blanket, sends up big signal - like make nice and roll over," Garth said, adding that he assumed Cuomo was trying to help Dukakis win New York.

Simon, who managed only a primary victory in his home state of Illinois, said he would suspend campaigning, but refused to release his 170 delegates in hopes of influencing the national convention.

"I want to have an impact on who the party nominates," Simon told a Capitol Hill news conference. "I want to have an impact on the whole process there (at the Atlanta convention), and on where we go." Simon added that he had "no illusions that the nomination will come my way."

But Jackson didn't appreciate Simon's near-withdrawal. As the runnerup to Simon in Illinois, he stood to gain the lion's share of 47 at-large delegates if Simon quit completely.

"If one is not in the race one ought to indicate a form of honorable withdrawal at which time whoever got second place in that state will get those delegates," Jackson said, adding that the Illinois at-large delegates "in fact belong to me."

Gore, under attack for criticizing his rivals, charged the Dukakis campaign with fueling a "stop Jackson" movement.

"In South Carolina, Gore said a vote for anybody but him was a vote for Jackson," said Austin. "So if the shoe fits, wear it. He's worn the shoe before."

Professor talks on minority enrollment

By MAURA KRAUSE

News Staff

Professor Gary Orfield of the University of Chicago spoke last night on the "erosion of one of the basic dreams of American life - the dream of going to college."

Orfield cited statistics concerning minority access to higher education, noting the fluctuating enrollment of blacks and Hispanics.

Orfield mentioned three government policies enacted in the 1960s to help minority students. The "three basic policy thrusts were: a special recruitment and retention act, the civil rights act, and an extension of federal aid," said Orfield.

These three policies had minority enrollment during that time period on the rise.

However, under the current administration the three policies have been "put into reverse," and different, less beneficial policies have been put into effect.

"Today, "financial aid is the number one reason black students leave college,"" said Orfield. "Tuition rates are rising faster than the cost of living, and fewer and fewer jobs are available that do not require a college education."

Orfield said "the extremely negative policies seen in the past years will be modified under a new administration."

Orfield said that we are "going to have a great national debate over these policies soon."

Orfield's concluded his speech by saying that something must be done to create a "good healthy multiracial society," because, "there is hardly anyone in our society who is not a good thing that a college education is not available to everyone."

Orfield, a professor of political science, was one speaker in a series sponsored by the Hesburgh Program in Public Service. The Hesburgh Program is inviting several speakers to campus, the speakers being either prominent public officials or scholars in public policy, said Professor David Lege, director of the Hesburgh Program.

Orfield was asked to speak on campus because his work has great impact on public policy and the research he does on minority rights is taken seriously, much of it having bearing on court decisions, said Lege.

Emmerson Munangagwa, minister for justice, legal and parliamentary affairs, disclosed the theft in a speech at the closing session of a two-day conference on bribery, corruption, fraud and theft.

He told the 300 delegates, including jurists and police officers, that the automobile was stolen on Tuesday, the first day of the meeting.

The minister gave no further details, but he urged police to work harder to bring car thieves to justice.

Hijackers refuel, will depart soon

Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus--Airport workers in northeast Iran refused a Kuwaiti jetliner and its Arab hijackers said they would take off Friday morning with about 50 hostages held for three days, Iran's news agency reported.

The plane was refueled after the hijackers fired at security guards at the Masahad airport and threatened to force the pilot to fly with the little fuel left in the jet's tanks, said the official Islamic Republic News Agency.

It first quoted the hijackers as saying the plane would leave at midnight (4:30 p.m. EDT), in a dispatch filed only two minutes before that time, and said later the departure had been delayed until 6 a.m. (10:30 p.m. EDT). No destination was given.

According to IRNA, Iranian officials asked the hijackers for the extension to provide time for the Turkish and Pakistani Prime Ministers, Turgut Ozal and Mohammed Khan Jumelo, to talk to Kuwaiti officials in an effort to persuade them to accept the hijackers' demands.

The hijackers, said to number five to seven, want Kuwait to free 17 pro-Iran extremists convicted and imprisoned in the Persian Gulf sheikhdom for bombings at the U.S. and French embassies there in 1983.

RNA, monitored in Nicosia, said Ozal spoke by telephone with Prime Minister Hussein Musavi of Iran on Thursday.

It said Musavi told Ozal his government wanted to end the incident without "any unhappy event," but added: "Of course you should know that our possibilities are limited and therefore we hope the Kuwaiti government will understand the restrictions in the holy city of Mashhad and fulfill its humanitarian duty, in trying to bring the problem to a peaceful end."

Thirty-two people were released from the plane early Thursday and, along with 25 freed earlier, left Mashhad for Kuwait at 1:40 a.m. Friday (6:10 p.m. EDT Thursday), the agency reported.

When RNA reported the original departure time, it said "there are still obstacles on the runway," placed there earlier by airport officials to keep the jet from taking off.

Scholarship named after Hofman

By KATHY ANN JENSEN
News Staff

The officers of the Freshman Advisory Council are sponsoring a $1000 scholarship in honor of Dean of the Freshman Year of Studies Emil Hofman.

This award will be offered to the member of the class of 1992 who demonstrates the greatest amount of financial need and who makes the dean's list at the completion of the upcoming semester. The determination of the recipient's need will be decided solely by the Office of Financial Aid.

Freshman Advisory Council President Mike Locascio said, "Since Dean Hofman has given so much to the freshman class for the last thirty-five years, we thought his contribution should be recognized and honored in a manner which simultaneously benefits him and a needy freshman student."

In a letter announcing the scholarship, the Council said a problem exists when students of high academic ability want to attend the University, but cannot afford the high tuition and housing costs. Therefore, continued the letter, the members of the Council agreed to use their excess revenue acquired from class fundraisers to help an incoming freshman who might experience such problems.

The plans for the scholarship were revealed to Dean Hofman last week at the "changing of the guard," attended by this year's Freshman Advisory Council's officers and next year's Sophomore Class officers.

"I was overwhelmed and had no idea about the honorary scholarship," said Hofman.

"The award was more a tribute to the freshman class that to me, for offering that kind of assistance to next year's class." Hofman said that this is the first time a freshman class has performed this particular type of action. Hofman said, "I talked to the members of the F.A.C. in the beginning of the year concerning the establishment of a class character."

Although the scholarship is only for the class of 1992, Locascio said he hopes that the other classes of studies will also have excess funds and continue to use their money in such a beneficial manner.

Israelis bury girl killed in unrest, vow revenge

Associated Press
KARNEI SHOMRON, occupied West Bank--Armed Jewish settlers vowed revenge Thursday and shouted "Expel the Arabs!" as they buried an Israeli girl killed in a clash with Palestinians in the West Bank.

Troops killed an Arab in Beita, the town where 15-year-old Tirza Porat was slain the day before. The army said he disobeyed an order to halt.

Autopsy results released by the army showed that the girl, Tirza Porat, was shot in the head and also struck in the head by a stone or large object. An army official said the cause of death could not immediately be determined.

Shortly after Tirza died Wednesday, the army said she was killed by a bullet, but then said she was stoned to death by Arab villagers. An Israeli television report raised the possibility that Tirza was inadvertently shot by Jewish settlers during the clash.

Soldiers arrested hundreds of Arabs and blew up five homes Thursday in Beita, while armed Israeli civilians rampaged through two nearby villages, beating Arabs, breaking windows and firing shots in the air.

Amnesty International holds Apartheid protest

A demonstration on the Fieldhouse Mall Thursday highlighted a Human Rights Week sponsored by the Notre Dame Saint Mary's chapter of Amnesty International.

About 15 students staged the demonstration to raise awareness of Mutile Henri Fazzie, a South African union organizer imprisoned for his political beliefs, said David Baltierra, student coordinator of the campus Amnesty chapter.

A petition to obtain Fazzie's release garnered more than 100 names at the demonstration, Baltierra said, adding that a letter writing campaign Thursday was also held on Fazzie's behalf.

"We started the write-a-thon last year. We'd like to keep it a yearly event," said Baltierra, adding last year's event was held as a fund-raiser and tallied more than 400 letters to international prisoners of conscience.

Baltierra said the chapter's Human Rights Week was held to prepare for the Amnesty International's upcoming Human Rights Campaign. "It's the first time we've done it. On Tuesday, we held a vigil at the Grotto and lit the Amnesty candle, (the organization's) symbol of hope," he said. Other events included a film on capital punishment and an informal discussion with four international missionaries, he said.

The Notre Dame Saint Mary's chapter was one of the first groups in the United States to join Amnesty International, a non-profit organization with more than 500,000 members worldwide, Baltierra said.

Tashkent after the meeting, "I think both Pakistan and Afghanistan will come to agreement, and that we and the Americans will agree to be guarantors." The joint communiqué, distributed by the Tass news agency, published on the front page of the government newspaper Izvestia and read during the nightly news program "Vremya." It omitted the usual criticism of positions taken by Pakistan and the United States at the Geneva peace talks. This omission could mean some behind-the-scenes compromise has been forged.

President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq said the Geneva accord, signed Monday, April 11, is "the first step toward victory" and a "defeat for the Russians." He said the guerrillas "will try to intensify" the war.

Draft documents in Geneva call for an end to outside aid for the rebels and U.S. officials have pressed for "symmetry," a simultaneous end of Soviet military aid to Najib's government.

Moslem insurgents began fighting in Afghanistan after a Communist coup in April 1978. Soviet military forces entered the country in December 1979 and an estimated 115,000 soldiers now are there to help fight the guerrillas.

The girl, killed during the week-long Passover celebration, was the first Israeli civilian victim of the 4-month-old violence in the territories Israel captured in the 1967 war. At least 141 Arabs have died, according to U.N. figures, and an Israeli soldier was stabbed to death.

Space shuttle will have escape pole

Associated Press
WASHINGTON- A crew escape system using a 10-foot telescoping pole will be installed in the space shuttle Discovery in time for its scheduled Aug. 4 launching, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Thursday.

The pole was selected over another escape system that would use rockets to pull astronauts from the shuttle in case the ship was about to ditch in the ocean.

"The telescoping pole was selected as it has shown to be safer, simpler to operate, lighter weight and easier to support than the tractor rocket system," said Arnold Aldrich, a top shuttle program official.

In case of an emergency while the shuttle is in level, controlled flight, the astronauts would slide down the pole, which would carry them clear of the orbiter tail.

NASA said the pole, 126 inches long and made of lightweight aluminum and steel, is 70 pounds lighter at 241 pounds than the rocket system.

Top NASA officials have said either the pole or the rockets is able with storing the explosive rockets in the crew cabin.

An escape system using either the pole or the rockets is of limited use and would not have been effective in the explosion of the orbiter Challenger in 1986. It would be of help in the event the shuttle must be ditched in the ocean because it could not reach orbit or a landing field.

The Challenger astronauts died during ascent while the shuttle was in level, controlled flight, the astronauts said. It was in storage when it was noticed by a visiting paleontologist last year.

Top NASA officials have said all along they were uncomfortable with storing the explosive rockets in the crew cabin.

New species of dinosaur discovered

Associated Press
CLEVELAND- The skull of a prehistoric animal has been identified as part of a previously unknown species of compact, meat-eating dinosaur, scientists announced Thursday.

The skull was misidentified after its discovery in 1942 in eastern Montana by an expedition from the Cleveland Museum of Natural History, officials said. It was in storage in the museum's basement when it was noticed by a visiting paleontologist last year.

The museum said the skull is from a previously unknown member of the Tyrannosaurus Rex family of dinosaurs, a ferocious meat-eating animal that roamed the earth some 60 million years ago.

Because of its relatively small size, the new dinosaur has been named Nanotyrannus or "pygmy tyrant" by the scientists who identified it. The Cleveland skull is believed to be the only such specimen of the Nanotyrannus, although teeth have been found in Montana and South Dakota.

"This animal is so different from any other meat-eater that it merits its own branch of the tyrannosaur family tree," said Robert Bakker, adjunct curator of paleontology at the University of Colorado in Boulder.

Bakker grew suspicious of the skull's initial identification as a Gorgosaurus, a primitive and very common meat-eater, during a visit to the Cleveland museum last spring. He worked with two other scientists in determining its identity and their discovery was disclosed in a paleontology publication this month.

The Nanotyrannus resembled the giant Tyrannosaurus Rex but was only about one-third as large and one-tenth as heavy, the scientists said. Bakker said the Nanotyrannus probably weighed less than 1,000 pounds, stood about 10 feet tall, walked on its hind legs and measured about 17 feet from nose to tail.
Amnesty meeting tonight at CSC

Dear Editor:

Every year thousands of people are imprisoned, tortured and put to death unjustly. Every day human rights are trampled on in dozens of countries, inhumanely and without due process. Breathing human beings are all over the world. It is for these people that Amnesty International works. One of them is Leyla Pacheco, a 20 year old prisoner of conscience from a shanty town in Santiago, Chile. Her account, from a letter smuggled out of a Chilean prison, follows:

"My name is Leyla Pacheco. I was taken prisoner one year ago. I was a student in high school. On October 25, 1986, some men came to our house, jumping the gate and beating on the door. Once inside, they identified themselves as police and told me to get dressed because I would have to go to the Ministry of Justice. They handcuffed me, and with a gun in my back, forced me into a car. Inside the car they interrogated me using their fists to beat me up, warning me that I would be raped and killed, applied electricity to me and abuse me sexually without raping me. All this by a very grotesque man. We went back to my mother and they warned me that if anything happened they would be back to get me, leaving me feeling terrible and with a lot of fear.

Not one month passed, when they came back again. I was sleeping but they took me away, telling my mother they would be back within an hour, which did not happen. They took me to a secret building where they beat me up, warning me that I would like to extend a thank you to all those who helped me and others like me, who continues to work for the release while looking up a particular subject. I asked questions in the periodical section, the information desk, the main door and the reserve book room. In all these areas I received help from them courteously. I was very impressed, especially considering I often went back to the same individual more than once. My brother prides itself on being a warm and friendly person. I am pleased to say that the reputation is well deserved. Thank you again, library personnel."

Dear Editor:

I am very disappointed that you failed to mention in your first issue after Easter vacation anything about last Thursday’s Nike NABC Basketball All-Star game featuring none other than Notre Dame’s David Rivers. After years without musicals at Notre Dame, SUB is sponsoring a Broadway revue consisting of 21 musical numbers from a wide range of Broadway productions. Show tunes such as "Don’t Cry For Me, Argentina" (from "Evita"), "Summer Nights" (from "Grease"), and "Suddenly, Seymour" (from "Little Shop of Horrors") will be sung by a cast of more than 15 students.

The director, Tom Howley, claims that no central theme unifies the musical numbers. Instead, it was simply a matter of preference on the part of the producer, director and cast members. Under the direction of Howley and producer, Nick Rossi, this production is an attempt to bring back the musical to Washington Hall.

The idea for a revue was thought up by Rossi, who is trying to reorganize a former drama group here at Notre Dame known as the Student Players. Howley describes the production as "simple" in the sense that there are few costumes and little acting done outside of the musical numbers. Hopefully, "Broadway In Concert" is a success. It will lead to the emergence of larger musical productions in the future.

There are no tickets or admission required and seating is on a first come, first served basis.

Yes, it is true - Broadway musicals are finally making their appearance here at Notre Dame for the first time in almost five years. The Cultural Arts Commission of the Student Union Board is presenting "Broadway In Concert," a musical performance to be put on today at 8:00 p.m. in Washington Hall.

Festival features top jazz musicians

The judges this year include renowned jazz critic and author Dan Morgenstern, from the Institute of Jazz Studies at Rutgers University, as well as professional jazz artists Jimmy Owens, Eddie Harris, Mudgrew Miller, John Clayton and Danny Gottlieb. The highly anticipated Judges' Jam will close Friday night's session around 11:30 p.m.

In commemoration of the Festival's 30th anniversary, former Festival chairperson Joe Carey has dedicated a plaque to the cornerblock of the Fieldhouse Mall. Carey has published a book, "Big Noise from Notre Dame," which traces the history of the Festival and notes it as "a potent force in the Jazz education world... providing a spawning ground for countless musicians who have gone on to successful professional careers."

The Student Union Board's Cultural Arts Commission is sponsoring the Festival as it has in past years, when judges included future greats such as David Sanborn, Wynton Marsalis and Roberta Flack. Student discount tickets are available for each of the three sessions or for an All Session Pass ($10). Tonight's schedule of bands, starting at 7:30, includes the Notre Dame Jazz Band, MIT Jaz Octet, Michigan State Jazz Band I and University of Michigan Jazz Combo Inside Out (plus the Judges' Jam). Saturday afternoon's concert starts at 12:30 and includes the University of Michigan Big Band, Notre Dame Combo, Purdue Jazz Ensemble, Central Michigan Percussion Ensemble, Aquinas College Afternoon Jazz Ensemble and Western Michigan University Jazz Orchestra. Saturday night begins the wrap up of the festival at 7:30 with the Eastern Illinois University Jazz Ensemble, California Arts Institute Combo, Ohio State Jazz Ensemble, William Patterson College New Jazz Ensemble and Northern Illinois Jazz Ensemble, plus guest band, Airplay of Note.

I t's that time of year. Spring is in the air and a young student's fancy turns to bars. Unfortunately, many veterans of years of "American Pie," social Gumby's, cigarette smoke and popcorn are finding themselves tired of the same old night scene.

BAR BEAT

But now there is a new social alternative in South Bend: Tivoli's Videotheque. Located about one mile north of campus on US. 31 in the North Village Mall, Tivoli's is becoming the local hotspot for Notre Dame seniors who don't like to stay in on weeknights.

Actually the club is not really new, but most students have avoided it in the past because they thought of it as a local bar characterized by "hot rod" contests and expensive mixed drinks. But this semester more and more seniors are finding it to be a refreshing change from the usual night out.

The club's growing popularity is due in part to its fine beer specials on Tuesday and Sunday (yes, Sunday) nights. There is a cover charge (one dollar), but at ten pennies a beer, it's still a bargain for the student on a tight budget.

But Tivoli's popularity isn't due just to its cheap beer. The club itself has a lot going for it. It is huge; even on busy nights there is enough room to move around and getting tables is relatively easy (a welcome surprise for anyone who has fought the crowds at other popular student hangouts.)

The club also boasts a good light show, video monitors and special effects. A live DJ takes requests and provides an interesting mix by playing dance tunes that include techno, contemporary, and top 40.

When "Bright Lights, Big City" was published in 1984, it was seen as carrying on a long line of American literary tradition and the praise it received was well earned.

MOVIE REVIEW

Using a unique second-person present narrative ("You are a young student..."), the novel watches its main character's life hurtle out of control. It struggles successfully with the problems of living sensitively in a desensitizing world.

Author Jay McInerney's smooth internal monologues effectively maintained the novel's delicate balance between the main character's outer facade of control and his inner feelings of futility.

However, the movie version mainly stumbles in using the internal monologues and clever anecdotes of the book sparingly, instead employing dialogue.

Without the reassuring asides of the novel's narrator, the movie leaves too much to the audience and looks shallow.

The film also fails in its attempts to recreate some of the literary subtleties, like the series of resonating images, which in the screenplay, also written by McInerney, tend to blur the viewpoint of the viewer.

Despite these problems, the movie does show a spectacular job of depicting the devastation that drugs can wreak on a life, as well as the "shot of the gods" to which McInerney refers. If anything, the movie strikes this balance best of all.

The location shots of New York City and its glamorous nightclubs with their disorienting atmosphere transform the city into an exotic foreign land.

The film also employs well-crafted flashback sequences that develop the characters and enhance the plot. Those who expect Michael J. Fox, who plays the film's lead role, Jimmy Conway, to be Alex Keaton in this movie will be surprised and disappointed.

Also deserving mention is Kiefer Sutherland, who plays Jamie's friend Tad Allagash with such a charming sneer... Jason Robards, playing the drinking editor of the magazine Jamie works for, is another success as Jamie's dying mother, both contribute crafted cameo roles.

It hurts me to say this, but as a movie, "Bright Lights" fails. The story misses McInerney's sense of humor and light prose, even though Michael J. Fox maintains a sense of empathy with the main character. Take the money this review saved you and buy the book.

...if they call me 'Griff’ we'll be friends forever.”

Edna St. Vincent Milay, on the other hand, was a poet from Maine, still alive while I was a kid going to school in Maine. We referred to her then as Miss Milay, what else were we to say, since we'd never met her?

I loved her for the lines from "Figs from Thistles," as soon as old enough to understand them: "My candle burns at both ends/ It will not last the night/ But, ah, my foes, and oh, my friends -/ It gives a lovely light."

"What's in a name? That which we call a rose/ By any other name would smell as sweet." Titles, however, are expendable. I was embarrassed, after ordination, to be called "Father." Now, however, I've grown so old, I'm joined when a seminarian fresh from the novitiate, hails me as "Bob.”

I've never been "Boly" to my family, those who call me Bob are either priests or strangers who think without reason that they are endearing themselves. They're so far off-base that I fear we will never become close, but if they call me "Griff,’ we’ll be friends forever.

Would Father Malloy be happy if those encouraged to call him "Monk” should start addressing him as "Ed?”

My point here is a cautionary tale, heard long ago. A re­buke priest, entering the Corby rec room, greeted one of the mandarins of the Holy Cross Community, using his Christian name. The venerable cleric sprang to his feet and rebuff the cub he had known for years: "I'm sorry, Father, I didn't get your name." In the good - or bad - old days, the newly-ordained were not ex­pected to be democratic in ad­ressing their seniors.

"Now, however, all the rules have changed. I make mis­takes, because I don't know what the rules are, except that it's Dickinson, not Emily. Could it be Miss Dickinson, or Ms., or does she forfeit that courtesy by being deceased?

"Titles, however, are expendable."

What's in a name? Ask Doctor Ruth. She could defend the softer names, by which we call the terrible old saints, as a form of liberation permissible between consenting adults.

I enjoyed the "Emily" letter far too much to discuss it un­der the rubric "O Tempor O Mores!” I hope the good pro­fessors and their indignant wives will keep the cards and letters coming. As a former male chauvinist of the old school, I promise to "Be not the first by whom the new are tried. Nor yet the last to lay the old aside."

Freshmen Barnard, Campano make mark on lacrosse

By PETE LaFLEUR
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame lacrosse team embarks on the second half of its season Saturday night at Kenyon as they try to improve on its school record-7-1 start.

But to get past the Lords the team will need to rely on contributions from many players, including the surprisingly effective freshmen players who Irish coach Rich O’Leary says give Notre Dame a leg up on other teams.

“We've shown other teams that we have young people that are ready to play,” O’Leary said. “That helps because it pushes the upperclassmen who maybe felt too secure and it also makes practices more challenging every day so that the team plays at a higher level.”

Middle John Capano and defenseman Dave Barnard have particularly stood out among the freshmen players. They have both played in every game and Barnard is one of only six players to have seen time in every quarter this season.

Barnard, who scored a goal against Michigan, has played primarily on the defensive middle line, which consists of a defenseman and two middies who shuttle in as the opposition comes down on attack. Although Barnard has had little previous experience at d-middle, O’Leary said his consistently solid play is a reflection of the freshman’s maturity.

“In high school Dave had more experience at ‘close defense’ than at d-middle and, although he’s made some mistakes, that only makes him work harder,” O’Leary said. “Dave has a lot of maturity, which is important on defense, and I think he could fill-in for anyone without there being a lot of play.”

O’Leary said that Capano, who plays on the second middle line, has likewise made key contributions to the team. Most recently, Capano and junior Mark Rizzieri had to take over on face-offs against Lake Forest because of an injury to injured senior Jeff Shay, who is 70 percent of his attempts this season.

Irish take two in Annapolis
By ROB PIERCE

Two out of three ain't bad. The cliche is apropos for the Notre Dame men's track team after its performance this past Saturday in a meet at Annapolis against Syracuse, LaSalle, and the Naval Academy.

The Irish easily outran the Orangemen, 116-6, but could not match the Midshipmen, falling 4-5.

The Irish were paced by the performances of junior Dan Markenich and senior Dan Garrrett, who tied for first place in the mile, with times of 4:12:16.

The two teamed to outdistance a race, in which included Merrick Jones of Syracuse, a rival from their high school days and one of the top runners in the East, who finished third.

"We worried about Merrick," said Garrrett, "because we knew he'd be tough. But we were all along the line just finished together. There was no need to race ourselves."

The high jump was also a strong event for the Irish, as two freshmen made impressing showings. John Cole won the event with a leap of 6'10" and Merrick Jones tied for third with a 6'4" mark.

"We push each other in prac­tice and during meets," remarked Cole. "With both of us in the competition, we seem to jump better."

The Irish were victorious in two other events on the afternoon. Jeff Smith soared 23'2" to win the long jump, and Glenn Watkinson captured the 110 meter high hurdles race in 14.44.

A photo finish highlighted the 400 meter hurdles event on the afternoon, as 0.3 seconds separated the top two finishers. David Worth of Notre Dame won the event in 53.92, while teammate Paul Devarish finished third in 53.81.

The Irish came up just short again in the spring football game, as Mike O'Connor finished second in the 400 meter run.

It has been an up and down week for the Notre Dame men's tennis team. After upsetting then-No. 2 Hawaii last week, the Irish have lost two straight. The team is now 13-9.

Hawaii came into Notre Dame last Thursday as heavy favorites over Notre Dame. The highlight of the match came in the number one singles match, in which Notre Dame sparkplug Brian Kalbas came back after being down 4-1 in the third set to defeat Steve Casey 5-7, 7-6, 6-4.

The Irish clinched the victory in doubles action with a win again by Kalbas and his freshman partner Ryan Wenger. The final score was 5-4 in favor of the underdog Irish: Hawaii fell to 18-11.

On Saturday Notre Dame faced its toughest match of the year against Ball State. The match was scheduled to be played outdoors on the courthouse courts, but was moved inside the Eck Pavilion due to rain. The Irish came out short, losing 7-2. Irish coach Bob Bayliss feels there were some highlights despite the loss.

"Ball State is the best team on paper that we face all year. I was hoping we could pick up some momentum after the Hawaii victory, but Ball State is one of the best teams in the country and we played respect­fully. Mike Wallace played his best match of the year in beating Todd Hershey 6-4, 6-1. Paul Odland also played well."

Indeed, Odland has been on a tear since the spring break trip. The Irishman won a personal record of 7-2 and has moved up to the sixth spot on the team. Against Ball State, Odland crushed Mike Byrom in straight sets 6-3, 6-1.

On Wednesday the Irish took to the road, travelling to Michigan State where they dropped an extremely close match to the Spartans, 5-4. For Notre Dame, the highlight of the singles play came when Wenger edged the Spartan's Richard Neece 6-2, 6-7, 6-4. In the final doubles game, the Irish lost in a tiebreaker 7-5, despite another fine performance by Brian Kalbas. This tiebreaker loss cost the Irish the match, as Michigan State improved its record to 8-2.

Notre Dame next takes to the courts in an away match against Northwestern. The match is scheduled for Saturday at Carbondale. Southern Illinois We'll be located in revenge, after losing to the Irish earlier this year.

Bookstore bounces through first round

Bookstore Basketball XVII continued to ramble through the massive round of 32 yesterday as competition conditions made for quicker, more skillful games.

That's not only good for the players, but for the commissioners as well.

"When the weather's bad, we lose an assistant commissioner (Todd Wagengrass) because he can't get the cast on his broken arm wet," said Tournament Commissioner Mike Mals."We need all the help we can get out there, especially during the early rounds."

Yesterday's play marked the return of All the President's Men, temporarily without the services of University President Monk Malley. If his team continues on, Malley will miss the first few games because of prior commitments. But All the President's Men carried on quite well in their leader's absence yesterday, nearing Why You Walking Funny?, 21-9 Mike Bregenzer, and eight points for the winners.

In other action from Stepan courts yesterday, the Mules took on the Walla Walla Whirlwinds, and the results could be seen in the Bookstore results on page 12.
