Late hours in Oak Room in jeopardy, says Hickey

By RON SEVERINO

News Staff

Unless late-night use of the new 24-hour Oak Room increases within the next few weeks, the all-night aspect of the lounge may be in jeopardy, said University Food Services Director William Hickey, Jr.

There's been a serious decline in attendance," said Hickey. "This program must be measured in numbers. If it doesn't produce, it won't survive."

The number Hickey referred to was the amount of money taken in each night. Hickey said that it was necessary to take in enough to cover the costs of keeping the Oak Room open at night. At the present pace, the money brought in is not sufficient.

Hickey made an agreement with Student Government President Tom Doyle and Vice President Mike Paese that the 24-hour lounge would stay open only if no money is lost. Student Government would be responsible for recompensing University Food Services for any money lost because of the program.

Attendance at the Oak Room during the night has continually fluctuated since its opening on September 6. At times during the middle of the week, there are no more than five students occupying the lounge, yet on a football weekend it can become quite busy with many patrons.

"We were short of help the night of the Michigan game," said Virginia Cleary, a Mishawaka resident hired to work the night shift.

Usually there are two employees working the 11:00 p.m. - 7:30 a.m. shift during the week (except on football weekends, when more help is required). Both workers are responsible for running the cash register, cleaning and cooking to order. Cleary said that everything seems to be going smoothly at night but admits that the all-night lounge is "still highly experimental."

Gunman kills police officer, three others near Chicago school

Associated Press

CHICAGO - A gunman killed two people yesterday in an auto parts store, then fatally wounded a police officer and a custodian at a nearby school before police shot the man dead, authorities said.

A city garbage man also was wounded, as was a second police officer at the Montefiore School on the city's West Side, and it was the injured officer who gunned down the man, said Chicago Police Superintendent LeRoy Martin.

The police officer was Irma Ruiz, 46, a mother of four who had been on the force 12 years, Martin said.

The gunman, described by a friend as full of anger since his combat service on the force 12 years, Martin said.

Ruiz, 40, a mother of four who had been on the force 12 years, Martin said.

Police Superintendent LeRoy Martin gave the following account:

The gunman, Clemie Henderson, 46, walked into the Comet Auto Parts store about 10 a.m. and shot and killed two clerks behind the counter - John Van Dyke, 41, and Robert Quinn, 26. Henderson missed a third clerk, who pretended to be hit and fell to the ground.

Quinn died with a pencil in one hand and a telephone in another.

Henderson then walked out a side entrance and encountered city garbage man Laplose Chestnut, Jr., 34, fired his gun.

"I'm assuming he may have had some type of grievance, but I don't know."

"All the witnesses state that this individual never said a word" in the store before opening fire, Martin added.

Mike Royko, syndicated columnist, whose acerbic putdown of Indiana angrier Hoosiers in a 1982 column, has made The Indianapolis News to drop his column. In a letter published in Wednesday’s edition of The News, the Chicago Tribune columnist said he receives letters from Hoosiers who describe him as “a boob, a hack or a communist.” Royko said the letters do not offend him as much as opening and reading them wastes his time. He pointed out that because Tribune Media Services Inc. does not permit him to choose the newspapers that carry his column, as a personal favor, he wants The News to drop his column. “If you grant me this favor, I will be forever grateful and will never again say anything bad about Hoosiers,” Royko wrote. He concluded, “Except for those who run for vice president,” newspaper said. He called Indianapolis “probably the dullest large city in the U.S.” and made fun of the Indianapolis 500. “That big, stupid race and Indiana deserve each other,” Royko wrote. - Associated Press

Quayle Shatters Myths About College and Life

Myths die hard. Ask Joseph Campbell or Edith Hamilton. Yet, whatever the outcome of this year’s presidential election, this crassly bipartisan column urges students all across the country to be grateful to Senator Dan Quayle for dispelling some myths about education that we suspected all along were unverifiable.

He set the record straight about four things:

Myth #1: Grades matter. The sheltering of other myths aside, it’s so important to get this clear. No matter what your parents or professors say, no matter what you heard from the time you entered Miss Potter’s Nursery School, grades will not stand in the way of employment opportunities.

Take the most unlikely possibility: You, like Mr. Quayle, are a political science major in which you get Cs and even a D. To top things off, you are required to take a comprehensive exam in your field in order to graduate. According to the Wall Street Journal (9/19), this is not a difficult exam at DePauw—hardly anyone fails—But Dan Quayle failed. Not to worry. Read my lips: Grades do not matter. You’ll have an even chance to get whatever job you want.

Myth #2: Transcripts will be evaluated; the higher the GPA, the better your chances.

You’ve probably been programmed to believe this one, too, but forget it. It was probably made up by ladies in registrars’ offices all across the country who want to make a bundle by charging you $2 a shot for a copy.

Dan Quayle has asked DePauw University and the University of Indiana Law School not to release his academic records. Again, according to the Wall Street Journal, Senator Quayle’s grades were not good enough for admission to either institution. Yet, the Cleveland Plain Dealer found that he was admitted under an “equal opportunity program” designed in part to assist poor and minority students.

Personally, I like these comments from Mr. Quayle on defense best of all: “Why wouldn’t an enhanced deterrent, a more stable peace, a better prospect to denying the ones who enter conflict in the first place to have a reduction of offensive systems and an introduction to defensive capability. I believe that is the route this country can eventually go.” (The New York Times, 9/10/88).

Apparently, Mr. Bush knew a good thing when he saw it. Mr. Quayle told David Broder of The Washington Post that George Bush “has leaned on me on national security matters.”

Or was he, in Mr. Babbitt’s opinion: “Well, I think Mr. Quayle’s grades were not good enough for a degree from DePauw University?”

Will people wonder how?

Don’t get nervous.

Millions of Americans are evaluating Quayle for the second highest job in the country and they don’t seem to care. You, too, may be just as lucky. But be firm: For reasons of privacy, tell your prospective employer or graduate school, you do not want your transcript released.

Myth #3: Teachers’ evaluations count. As a DePauw alum who was a senator in the “home” state, Dan Quayle was proposed for an honorary degree from his alma mater. Many faculty protested, signed petitions, and argued that he was “vapid,” a poor student, a lightweight. Most professors remembered him as totally undistinguished; some as a good off. A fellow student recalled him as interested in “girls, golf and a good time.”

The president override the veto and confirmed an honorary degree to a student who failed his exams.

Dan’s story is here to remind us that there is no reason to be kind to faculty. They would like you to think that the recommendations they write on your behalf can influence your future, but the truth is nobody cares what they say about you.

Myth #4: Be articulate. Have facts on your fingertips at a job interview.

Don’t believe it for a second.

The casual unrehearsed style is to be preferred. When Senator Quayle cites the plot of a Tom Clancy novel to argue for the Reagan defense program or is surprised to learn that Vice President Bush had a major role in the Beagam campaign against drugs, these utterances have a certain charm to them.

People who have facts and know things tend to appear arrogant to some and threatening to others.

Mix up the facts. Say things like: “The Holocaust is one of the greatest tragedies in our nation’s history” and “I was not born in this century.” These slips will make you seem human. Nobody wants to have anyone perfect working for them.

Speaker Wright denies charges

WASHINGTON- House Speaker Jim Wright denied yesterday that he revealed anything classified when he criticized a covert CIA operation in Nicaragua, while Republicans pressed for formal ethics and intelligence investigations of the speaker’s remarks.

Wright, who has become a lightning rod for Democrats on Central America policy, found himself again embroiled in controversy for his revelation two days earlier that the Central Intelligence Agency had instigated demonstrations aimed at provoking the leftist Managua government and sabotaging peace talks with the Contra rebels.

The speaker repeated that assertion to reporters, but contended such CIA activity was already well known through news reports.

"I didn’t say anything that was revealed to me as classified information," said Wright, D-Texas.

While he denied breaking rules against disclosing secrets, Wright did not specify how he had learned of the covert operation in Nicaragua. He and other Democrats sought to focus attention on the administration’s action rather than the propriety of Wright’s disclosure.

“In late August of last year, I became aware that elements of the U.S. government were seeking to disturb the domestic tranquility in Central America, to foment disturbances with a view to seeing if they could provoke the Sandinistas into a crackdown that would derail peace talks,” Wright said.

“That seems to me just intolerable two-faced,” he said.

Wright added that he had been given “indirect assurance” that the practice has now been halted.

House Republican Leader Robert Michel of Illinois and Rep. Dick Cheney, R-Wyo., chairman of the House Republican Conference, formally requested investigations in both the Intelligence Committee and the Ethics Committee, which has responsibility for enforcing non-disclosure rules.

The Ethics Panel, formally known as the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, already is investigating Wright on unrelated allegations.

And a primary sponsor of legislation to tighten Congress’ control over covert CIA activities, Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, said the speaker’s comments had apparently violated non-disclosure rules and jeopardized the bill.

“The clear implication ... is that the speaker’s statement could only have been derived from classified information in the possession of the House Intelligence Committee,” Cohen said. “The speaker owes his colleagues and the American people an explanation.”

 Authorities imposed a 9 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew in Stepanakert, the main city of the Nagorno-Karabakh region, center of the dispute between Armenians and Azerbaijanis that’s been going on since February. Violence in the region this week killed one person and hurt 46.

Protesters, who want the area to be taken from Azerbaijan and made part of Armenia, attacked the city’s prosecutor’s office in Stepanakert yesterday.

“There are soldiers on every street, at every crossroad, checking passports and personal cars,” said a man who answered the telephone at the state radio and television office.

Army general named to head Lebanon's Parliament

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon—Lebanon's army commander will be the prime minister of a six-man military government, President Amin Gemayel said in a decree issued in the last minutes of his presidency yesterday.

Gemayel's stunning choice of a military Cabinet, led by army commander Gen. Michel Aoun, came after civilian Moslem figures refused to take part in an interim Cabinet headed by a Maronite Catholic premier.

Gemayel had to name a transition government because the deeply divided Parliament failed to choose a new president yesterday. The constitution bars Gemayel from seeking a new presidential term.

Earlier Gemayel was trying to form a civilian government under business tycoon Pierre Helou, a Maronite Catholic who is a Parliament deputy.

The shift to a military Cabinet appeared aimed at heading off the formation of two governments, one Christian and one Moslem, that would have further cemented the sectarian cantons that have formed during a 13-year civil war that has left more than 150,000 dead.

The decrees appointing the Cabinet members, who represent the six main sects in Lebanon, came five minutes before Gemayel's presidency expired at midnight (5 p.m. EDT).

Also yesterday, Moslems and Christians clashed around the dividing Green Line, and three top commanders of Amal, the main Shiite Moslem militia, were assassinated.

Aoun, the Maronite army commander, and his five ministers will continue serving as the army's Supreme Defense Council, which controls Lebanon's military. The decrees, effective immediately, also named Aoun as defense and information minister. He remains the army commander.

"I leave the presidency today worried and filled with anxiety," Gemayel told the nation in a five-minute farewell address televised nationwide before issuing the decrees.

"Today should have been a festival in which we rejoice over the election of a new president that would take the helm and the oath of office as I and my predecessors did," Gemayel said. "But the people of war were stronger than peace."

Moslems and Christians fought after Parliament speaker Hussein Husseini postponed a Parliament session to elect a president.

A police spokesman said Amal militants were killed and two soldiers of the predominantly Shiite 6th Brigade were wounded in a two-hour duel around the Green Line, which divides Beirut into Christian and Moslem sectors.

Several mortar rounds crashed around the Parliament building in Moslem west Beirut's Nejmiah Square, protected by 1,000 6th Brigade troops and Moslem policemen, police said.

A police spokesman said Amal leaders Daoud Daoud, Mahmoud Fakih and Hassan Sheiti died instantly after gunmen raked their car with machine gun fire and rocket-propelled grenades in south Beirut's seaside Ouzai district.

She reports that she usually sees about five to ten students studying for tests during the weekend hours of 2:00 - 5:00 a.m.

Two of these students, sophomore Pre-meds Steve Hedinger and Kevin Noffa, made use of the 24-hour lounge most of this week, as they had to prepare for both Biology and Organic Chemistry tests.

"The atmosphere keeps you awake— it's too easy to roll into bed when you're studying in your dorm," said Hedinger, who planned to stay in the lounge until four or five in the morning for an eight o'clock test.

The Oak Room offers plenty of coffee for the late-nighters, along with a small variety of hot foods, sandwichs, drinks and other snacks. A big-screen television is kept on until about 2:00 a.m. and then a stereo is played the rest of the night.

The 24-hour lounge was the keystone of Doyle's and Paese's student services planks in last year's campaign for Student Government's top offices. Both have stressed that they did their part in opening the all-night Oak Room, but now it's up to the students to keep it alive.

The decline in usage over the past week has spurred Student Government to resume intensive advertising for the Oak Room to remind students that the opportunity does exist, said Hickey.
WASHINGTON—With the Reagan administration’s time running out, Secretary of State George Shultz said yesterday that he “is of the view” that a federal offense, eight hours’ duty on a space-based shield against Soviet ballistic missiles, would be reached on verifying compliance with a 1969 treaty to limit underground nuclear tests for so-called peaceful purposes in 150 kilotons.

The idea is to close the way for Reagan to submit the treaty to the Senate for ratification before he leaves office in January.

Wrapping up a treaty to reduce long-range nuclear missiles is a much tougher and more important task, Reagan had hoped to complete the accord during his second term, and evidence that he is committed to rolling back the nuclear arms race where we are, he said. “We are going to return to the Geneva talks in the fall,” he said.

Last year, Reagan and Gorbatchev signed another treaty to abolish all U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range nuclear weapons.

BEHIND THE LODGE DOOR: CHURCH, STATE AND FREEMASONRY IN AMERICA

by Paul A. Fisher

Former Bureau Chief for The Wanderer

Veteran Journalist of the Catholic Press

Behind The Lodge Door lifts the veil on the subterranean war waged against Church and State by the Masonic-Freemasonry for over 200 years—ever increasing U.S. Supreme Court decisions.

An amazing and well documented expose of a mysterious international organization whose impact on history has been so studiously (and consciously) ignored by historians.

Fisher, a graduate of the University of Notre Dame, served with OSS in Washington, North Africa and Italy during World War II, and with Army Counterintelligence in the U.S. and Korea. Prior to his journalistic career, which began in 1973, he was Legislative Assistant and Press Officer for the late Congressman James O. Delaney (D., N.Y.).

"A brilliant expose of the hidden power that Freemasonry has in the past and is still exerting so successfully to de-Christianize American culture. This is MUST reading..." (Fr. Vincent Miceli, Ph.D., Christendom College).

"Fisher knows how to research and how to weigh facts, and those skills give his work a sense of balance and sobriety that make it as persuasive as it is alarming. . . . (He) shows conclusively that [Justice Hugo L.] Black's Exorsum opinion is unhistorical, unconstitutional, and deliberately concocted out of Masonic dogma, . . . " (Michael Schwartz, The Wanderer).

WASHINGTON-The nation’s savings institutions lost $7.5 billion in the first half of this year, the government reported yes- terday, as a Senate leader called for the biggest federal bailout in history.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board said S&Ls lost $3.4 billion in the April-June quarter, a modest improvement over the $3.9 billion loss of the first quarter.

Nevertheless, the industry in only the first half of the year is already approaching the post-Depression record loss of $7.8 billion for all of 1987.

Senate Banking Committee Chairman William Proxmire, D-Wis., who is retiring after building a reputation as a penny pinching legislator during 31 years in office, said yesterday that the next Congress will have to appropri- ate at least $50 billion-about $10 billion for every man, woman and child in the country-to bail out the industry.

And healthy S&Ls, which have been paying to close or merge failed institutions so far, will have to contribute an ad- ditional $30 billion, he said.

“The bailout-to-come will be the largest ever in the history of the U.S. It will be far bigger than the combined cost of the assistance... to Chrysler (Corp.), Lockheed (Corp.) and New York City,” he said.

The bank board report and Proxmire’s statement came within a week of several new and larger and previous estimates of the cost of clean- ing up the thrift industry.

The General Accounting Of- fice, Congress’ auditing arm, says it will cost $45 billion to $50 billion. The American Bankers Association, the trade group for commercial banks, says $74 billion, and some private analysts put the cost as high as $100 billion. The bank board says it intends in October to raise its $31 billion projec- tion.

Meanwhile, Treasury Secre- tary Nicholas Brady on Wed- nesday directed a top deputy, Undersecretary George Gould, to independently assess the conflicting estimates.

That would be the first step in a possible re-evaluation of the administration’s stance, which has been that the Federal Savings and Loan In- surance Corp. has as much money as it can efficiently spend well into next year.

At a time when the adminis- tration is struggling to reduce the federal budget deficit, the question of how much must be spent on S&Ls is becoming in- creasingly critical.

Since mid-August alone, the bank board has pledged nearly $13 billion in assistance to resolve the cases of more than 50 institutions. Because FSLIC lacks the cash to complete res- cue packages, its aid is coming in the form of promissory notes and guarantees against certain kinds of future loss.

According to figures released last week at a House Banking Committee hearing, FSLIC has more than $19 bil- lion in outstanding commit- ments.

Burnley blames deregulation for high airfares, local domination

WASHINGTON-Members of a Senate committee faulted air- line deregulation yesterday for raising airfares for many Americans and leaving some cities dominated by carriers that control local air service.

But Transportation Secre- tary Jim Burnley told the Sen- ate Commerce Committee that even though “the airline indus- try has its flaws,” nearly 10 years of deregulation has benefited most travelers.

“Overall the airline industry has become much more com- petitive as to price and service as a result of economic deregulation,” Burnley told the legislators.

Burnley cited statistics showing that since 1978, domes- tic air traffic has grown more than 275 million passengers to more than 56 million, while average fares have declined 13 percent, adjusted for inflation.

The secretary said that if most Americans are asked if deregulation has been helpful, “you’ll find an overwhelming perception that the country has benefited enormously.”

Burnley’s defense, however, did little to ease the concerns of members of the committee, many of whom come from sparsely populated states.

“My fares have zoomed up, up and away, and my service has gone down,” said Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., chair- man of the panel.

Hollings said it now costs him $310 to fly from Charleston, S.C., to Washington, compared with $120 in 1977, before deregulation, which marks its 10th anniversary next month.

Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., said it costs $380 to fly from Aberdeen, S.D., to Rapid City, S.D., while a Washington to Los Angeles Ticket can cost $229.

“That is a very bizarre result,” he said. “Our small cities and towns are really suf- fering from this thing.”

Sen. John Danforth of Mis- souri, ranking Republican on the committee, also com- plained that some airlines have been able to dominate air traf- fic so thoroughly in individual cities that “competition doesn’t really exist.”

He said Congress must deter- mine “whether deregulation is truly working and it’s not working, what are we supposed to do about it.”

With the 1986 merger be- tween Trans World Airlines and Ozark Air Lines, TWA con- trols 82 percent of traffic at Lambert-St. Louis Interna- tional Airport. A report released Tuesday by the Gen- eral Accounting Office, an in- vestigating arm of Congress, found that after the merger, the number of St. Louis routes served by six or more carriers fell from 64 to 36, while TWA fares from the city grew by 13 percent to 18 percent.

Alfred Kahn, who was chief of the now-defunct Civil Aeronautics Board in 1978 when deregulation was created, told the senators that “the airline industry is today far less competitive than it was under regulation.”

To deal with problems faced by cities dominated by individ- ual airlines, he suggested tough enforcement of antitrust laws when airline mergers are being considered, allowing foreign airlines to purchase American carriers, and taxing frequent flyer tickets to dis- courage repeated use of the same airline.

Calm prevails in Shreveport following racial riots, arson

Associated Press

SHREVEPORT, La.—A civil rights leader says decades of racism and black unemployment made it inevitable that Shreveport would see an outbreak of violence like this week’s rock-throwing and arson following the killing of a black man.

“Shreveport’s been dodging the bullet for 25 years,” said Larry English of the local NAACP chapter.

The violence Tuesday and Wednesday nights, set off when a white woman shot a black man, was confined to a few blocks in Cedar Grove, a mostly residential neighborhood of modest houses and small businesses about six miles from downtown.

Police spokeswoman Cindy Chadwick said no problems were reported in Cedar Grove after dozens of heavily armed Special Response Team officers left the area early yester­

Police took down roadblocks that sealed off the area for about four hours Wednesday night, but Chadwick said beefed-up patrols were ready to seal off the area again if violence resumed.

The riot was set off by the killing Tuesday night of William David McKinney, 22.

A 17-year-old white girl was arrested and officials said the shooting followed a drug deal that went bad, with the victim an innocent bystander.

Black leaders said another factor was anger over the killing of a black teen-ager by a white teen-ager at a restaurant last month.

And, they said, there was lingering frustration over the recent acquittal in west Texas of three law officers accused in the beating death of a Florien, La., black man arrested last Christmas Day on suspicion of drunk driving.

But those three incidents were only catalysts, black leaders said.

The Rev. E. Edward Jones, president of the National Baptist Convention and a long-time Shreveport civil rights leader, blamed long-standing “institutional racism” for the trouble.

But he warned blacks against violence.

“Destruction is not the way. We need reasoning and logic,” said Jones.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson blamed the unrest on poverty and illiteracy.

“They’ve had too much access to guns and drugs and too little access to jobs, to scholarships,” Jackson said in Baton Rouge.

Senate Democrats fail to defeat fillibuster on minimum wage bill

Associated Press

WASHINGTON Senate Democrats failed yesterday to break a Republican filibuster of a bill to raise the $3.35-an-hour minimum wage for the first time since 1981.

On a 53-45 vote six short of the 60 needed—the Senate refused to limit to 30 more hours debate on legislation by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., to raise the wage floor to $3.75 in January, $4.15 in 1990 and $4.55 in 1991.

“IT’s only clear that there is a deliberate attempt to stall action on this bill,” said Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., who called the Republican tactics a fillibuster.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, the leader of the Republican opposition to any increase in the minimum wage that does not include a subminimum wage for new hires, said the issue needs extended debate.

“I know a little bit about fillibustering and I’ve certainly led my share around here,” Hatch said. “But I only lead them on very, very important issues where we really have to have extended debate or what. I would call extended educa­tional dialogue. This particular bill needs a lot of that.”

A week ago, Hatch introduced the first Republican amendment in the debate—a 90-day, 80 percent subminimum wage applicable to all new hires.

As a parliamentary tactic, Kennedy immediately offered a substitute amendment slightly expanding a currently allowed, but little used, 60 per­cent subminimum wage for full-time students who work no more than 20 hours a week.

Since then, there have been no votes in five days of debate. Under the Senate’s rules, approval of Kennedy’s substitute would effectively kill what Republicans call a sub­minimum training wage that President Reagan and Vice President George Bush have coupled to their approval of any increase in the $3.5 wage floor.

“We’re not going to get a fair hearing on the training wage because the labor leaders don’t want it,” said Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas. “It’s not the Republicans versus the Democrats; it’s the Republicans versus the labor leaders. They’re telling us we can take this or leave it; we’re not going to play that game.”

Quayle cautions against giving in to Soviet demands

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES: Republican Vice President candidate Dan Quayle said yesterday that perestroika in the Soviet Union has yet to live up to its promise, and he cautioned against making unconditional concessions to the Soviets at the arms table.

The Indiana senator wrapped up a four-day swing across the West with what aides billed as a major foreign policy speech, and he used a Teleprompter for the first time since a convention acceptance speech.

In a foreign policy speech earlier this month in Chicago, Quayle discarded his text and gave a rambling, discursive address. Addressing 1,300 people at a Los Angeles World Affairs Council event, he made no mention of Michael Dukakis, the Democratic presidential candidate. But he criticized several Dukakis foreign policy and defense statements.

Quayle said Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev recognizes that "without major changes, the Soviet Union could well enter the next century ... (like) a Third World nation." Of perestroika, or "restructuring," he said, "Like the book of the same name, actual content has so far not lived up to the advance press notices.

Americans should judge the Soviet actions by whether they pull back from "global pot stirring" in Afghanistan, Angola, Nicaragua and other places, he said.

He called the Soviet radar station at Krasnogorsk a blatant violation of the ABM treaty and it should be dismantled immediately, not turned into an international space tracking station as Gorbachev recently suggested.

He also urged the Soviets to demonstrate their seriousness on arms control by reducing their long-range SS-18 missiles and their new, mobile SS-24s and SS-25.

And Gorbachev should "show his good faith by renouncing the Brezhnev Doctrine unequivocally" and agreeing to a pullback of Soviet troops from Eastern Europe, he said. Because of the current imbalance of Soviet and NATO forces, the Soviets must pull back more troops, Quayle said.

He also called for the Soviets to allow freedom to emigrate "for Jews and refuseniks and anyone else." He noted that "while millions of Jews can emigrate, Jews have not been allowed to emigrate from Cuba.

One does not deal with the Soviet Union by unilaterally removing negotiating leverage before the negotiations even begin," he said, in what appeared to be a reference to Dukakis' opposition to the mobile MX and Midgetman missiles.

Turning to Star Wars, he said the proposed space-based missile defense system "is not a 'business as usual' or a 'fraud' or a 'gimmee' as some have called it.

It is the margin of survival for American citizens if a nuclear missile, whether by design or accident, is ever launched against our land," he said.

WASHINGTON: The USS Vincennes, the Navy cruiser that shot down an Iranian airliner over the Persian Gulf, rescued 26 Vietnamese refugees from a sinking fishing junk early yesterday in the South China Sea, officials said.

Dan Howard, the Defense Department spokesman, said the guided-missile cruiser was steaming in heavy seas when a lookout spotted a dhow afloat. After changing course, the Vincennes "found a small, double-ended junk carrying 26 Vietnamese refugees," the spokesman said.

"The commanding officer determined the vessel to be unseaworthy and took all 26 people aboard," Howard said. Shortly after the 26 were rescued, "the boat broke apart and sank" in heavy seas, he said.

"They were literally spotted in the nick of time," added Lt. Cmdr. Craig Quigley, a Navy spokesman.

"They had been adrift for 15 days and were out of food, out of water and subsisting on rain water. And as soon as they got on board the Vincennes, their boat sank.

The Vincennes was transporting the refugees to its next port of call, the Subic Bay Naval Base and then on to the Philippines.

According to Quigley, one of the refugees spoke some English and told his rescuers the group had begun its voyage from the city of Tra Vinh in the southern section of what used to be South Vietnam.

The rescue was the second for the Vincennes in two months. Early in August, the cruiser rescued five Iranian fishermen who had been adrift in a small dinghy for more than a week after their boat sank.

The Vincennes was operating at the time in the Gulf of Oman. A month before, on July 3, the cruiser accidentally shot down an Iranian Air Bus, killing all 296 aboard, while steaming in the nearby Persian Gulf.

For Reggie Ho, six out of six is nothing.
Notre Dame's miniature walk-on field goal kicker is used to scoring 100 out of 100.
That's how he earned nearly a 3.8 grade-point average as a pre-med major over his first three years at Notre Dame.
But now the 5-5, 135-pounder is kicking field goals and pul-ing out last-minute victories for the Fighting Irish.
And when you're doing that, six out of six adds up just fine.
Ho tied the Notre Dame single-game record by making four field goals, including a single-game record by making six of six adds up just fine.

By DOUG GRIFFITHS
Purdue Exponent

In 1985, Purdue had the second-best pass defense in the country, but how times change.
Now the Boilermakers have the nation's No. 1 pass defense.
Although the Boilers have played just two games, their statistics are impressive. Purdue opponents have compiled only 6-of-34 passes (17.6 percent) for 118 yards (3.4 per-game), with six interceptions and two touchdowns.

Much of the team's early success defending the pass is due to the play of senior safeties Frankie Foster and B.J. Beeks (12 tackles). Both have picked off three passes, tying them for the national lead in that category.
"I've said all along that Marc Foster is one of the top safeties in this country," Purdue Coach Fred Akers said at his weekly teleconference Tuesday. "He is deserving of All-American mention."

Considering the fact that Beeks was sidelined last season because of academic ineligibility, his play has been an added bonus for the Boilers.
"What he (Beeks) has been doing has really been a pleasant surprise for us," Akers said. "He gives us some strength not only in the pass defense, but in defending against the run. His impact on our football team can be felt more against the run than anything else."

Purdue scored defensive honors in the Big Ten as well. It leads the conference in total defense (242.5 yards) and ranks second in the league in scoring defense (12 points).

The defensive secondary isn't the only thing making noise these days in West Lafayette. The Boiler rushing attack has accounted for over 50 percent of their touchdown total so far this season.

Three of Purdue's five touchdowns have come by the way of the ground attack. The Boilers have rushed for 349 yards this season (174.5 yards per game) with a 4.2 yards per carry average.

Akers credits the success of the rushing attack to two areas: the interior of the offensive line and the backfield.
"Bruce Crites has played very well at center," Akers
By GREG GUFFEY

Notre Dame already has played two of the present Big Ten powers in this young season. This Saturday, the Irish will see the future of the latter kept behind.

Purdue, once a perennial threat and most recently one of the doormats in the Big Ten, will bring a stable of young talent into Notre Dame Stadium (12:10 p.m. WGN, WNDU).

"They're a much improved football team," said Irish coach Lou Holtz. "I know Purdue plays us exceptionally well and they're a very talented football team. There's no doubt that they're getting better.

It is the rebuilding era of Fred Akers in West Lafayette, and until track records are any indication, this team may be only a few years away from playing with the elite again.

In two years at Wyoming, Akers went from 2-9 in 1975 to 8-4 in 1976 and a Fiesta Bowl appearance against Oklahoma. At Texas, he was 86-31-2 during his 10-year tenure. Akers sported a 3-7-1 mark in his first season at Purdue. The Boilers are currently 1-1 after a 20-6 loss to Washington and a 33-10 victory over Ohio State last Saturday.

"It will be quite an uphill battle for us in South Bend," Akers said. "This is a big traditional game and Purdue has played Notre Dame tough for many years. This will be a big challenge for us and an opportunity for us to improve.

The Irish, still ranked No. 8 in the country, will be going for a sweep of its 1988 Big Ten opponents. Purdue defeated Michigan 19-17 in the season opener and Michigan State 20-3 last Saturday in East Lansing.

Even with the Irish apparent favorites on paper, the Boilers have a history of pulling the big upset in the battle for the Shillelagh. Since 1950, Purdue has defeated Notre Dame in 15 of its last 23 meetings.

Notre Dame offense vs. Purdue defense

The passing game is still the big question surrounding the Notre Dame offense. In two games, Irish quarterback Tony Rice is only 5-of-21 through the air for 90 yards. Add to those statistics the fact Purdue has the nation's top defense in the country, and Notre Dame's passing woes could continue this week. Purdue's opponents have completed only 5-of-36 passes for 118 yards and two touchdowns.

"We have to be able to throw the football," Holtz said. "Whatever frustrates a coach is the lack of consistency. We do it enough times well (in practice) and occasionally in the game, but we do not do it on a consistent basis. The one thing you cannot tolerate as a coach is inconsistency. If you're going to throw the sucker in the eighth row of the stands, then do it every single time."

The Boilers boast one of the best secondaries in the country. Safety Marce-Foster and Ronnie Beeks each have three interceptions, tying them for the national lead. Foster needs only three more to become the all-time Purdue leader in that category.

With the status of the passing situation, Notre Dame will resort once again to the running game. A questionable defensive line has matured quickly for the Irish in the first two games, becoming one of the team's dominating forces.

Paced by senior tri-captain Andy Heck and junior Tim Grunnard, the line at times has allowed the backs to run at will in wins over Michigan and Michigan State.

The backs have gained 524 yards on 97 attempts for an impressive average of 4.9 yards per carry. Tailback and tri-captain Mark Green is the Irish rushing leader with 202 yards. Tony Brooks will be forced into the fullback spot against Purdue because of injuries to Anthony Johnson and Braxton Banks.

Banks is out indefinitely with a knee injury, while Johnson is doubtful for Saturday's game with a sprained ankle. Brooks, who took over at Michigan State after the injuries, is playing in a padded shoe because of a fractured foot that will require surgery at the end of the season.

"Tony Brooks stepping in at fullback was a very, very positive sign," Holtz said. "We had him fox-rayed and there's no change on it. I would like to think he's going to be able to go the rest of the year that way."

Sophomore Darrin Trieb leads the Boiler defense with 25 total tackles, 20 unassisted. Senior outside linebacker Jerrol Williams boasts 20 tackles, 15 unassisted. Even with the nation's best pass defense, the Boilers have not recorded a quarterback sack.

Purdue offense vs. Notre Dame defense

Notre Dame's defense continues to be one of its strongest advantages. The Irish have allowed only 20 points in two victories, holding the Michigan State defense silent in the second half last Saturday. That defense will get a test this week, though, as Purdue boasts a strong, two-dimensional attack. The Boilers average 179 yards per game through the air and 174.5 on the ground. Something will have to give, with Notre Dame allowing only 114 yards per game against the run.

Junior Shawn McCarthy anchors the defense at the quarterback spot. McCarthy, who also handles the punting duties, has already attempted 69 passes, completing 33 for 341 yards and two touchdowns. On the down side, opposing players have intercepted five of McCarthy's passes.

Junior Calvin Williams is the leading receiver with nine catches for 121 yards and eight career touchdown receptions.

Senior Scott Nelson is the leading rusher for the Boilers with 134 yards on 25 carries, while sophomore Jarrett Scales has gained 107 yards. Darrin Myles has scored three touchdowns while rushing for 52 yards.

"They have a very balanced offense," Holtz said. "Anytime you play a balanced offense, it scares you. The jury's still out on our ability to play against a team that can both run and pass.

"Michael Stonebreaker continues to be the spark for the Notre Dame defense. He was named the Sporting News defensive player of the week after the Michigan game and the AP Midwest defensive player of the week following last Saturday's contest. Stonebreaker has recorded 33 tackles and returned an interception 35 yards for a touchdown to seal the win over the Spartans."

George Williams, Chris Zorich and Jeff Alm will be the tackles for the Irish, while the ends are Frank Stulba and hard-hitting Andre Jones. Zorich has 19 tackles, Williams 17 and Alm 15. Notre Dame's rotating linebackers remain among the best in the nation with Wes Pettis, Neil Bolar and Stonebreaker.

Marc Foster (FB)

The All-America and Jim Thorpe Award candidate is tied for the national lead in interceptions with three. Foster was All-Big Ten last year.

Jerrol Williams (OLB)

A 1987 honorable mention All-Big Ten defender, Williams made 102 tackles last year and is second on the team with 20 tackles.

Bruce Crites (C)

The 6-3, 248-pound senior is the most experienced Boiler lineman, starting all 11 games at center last year. He started 11 games at guard in 1986.

Shawn McCarthy (QB)

The 6-6 McCarthy throws well from the pocket and is 33-of-69 for 341 yards in two games this year. He is also Purdue's top punter.

Wide receiver Calvin Williams leads the Boilermakers in receptions with nine for 121 yards, including one for a touchdown.

Sophomore quarterback Mark Maschech will miss the rest of the season after breaking his right leg just above the ankle in last weekend's contest. Freshman Brian Fox replaces Maschech as the No. 2 quarterback.

Although Fox is young and lacks experience, Akers has confidence in his future. "Brian is a good young quarterback prospect," Akers said. "The two key words there are 'young' and 'prospect.' He's got the size (6-5, 285 pounds). He's strong and he can pick things up well, but he's just totally without experience.

Montana ‘miraculous’ in 1977
Irish slip past Purdue 31-24 en route to national title
By VIC LOMBARDI
Sports Writer

They called it the "Miracle of Montana." It was the 1977 National Championship season when the Comback Kid; Joe Montana, administered an Irish come-from-behind victory over Purdue, 31-24. He did it by putting 17 points on the scoreboard in only 17 minutes of action. After having to sit out the previous season because of a shoulder separation, Montana was relegated to third-string signal-caller, behind quarterback Busy Lisch and Gary Forsytek. But Notre Dame coach Dan Devine sought the arm of Montana to help rally his team.

Purdue opened a 10 point lead on a 32 yard field goal by Scott Soverean and an eight-yard touchdown pass from freshman Mark Her mann to Reggie Arnold. It was more nerves when he kicked in front of Coach Holtz than from the Michigan game," he says. He came through on both occasions.

Late night motorists thought Reggie Ho was crazy one evening in 1986. While still playing Interhall football and dreaming of the day he would wear a varsity uniform, Ho worked obsessively to turn his dream into a reality. Late one night, he and a friend walked to the Athletic and Convocation Center to kick football, but found the building locked up for the night.

On their way back, the two spotted lights in one of the parking lots on Juniper Road and decided to turn the lot into a football field. "It was the only place with lights," Ho explains. "People thought we were nuts."

That was in the fall, almost two full years before Ho kicked under the lights of Notre Dame Stadium against Michigan.

Ho also has been known to kick in the snow, but now the Loftus Indoor Athletic Facility gives him a warmer climate in the winter months and he no longer has to worry about bad snaps and holds (figure that one out), call reporters 'Sir,' and sacrifice your body, no matter how small, for the good of the team.

In the lockerroom after the Michigan game, Ho spotted Greg Busignani, a student Sports Information Department worker who is in one of those classes and was gathering quotes from Ho. Reggie greeted him with: "Hi Greg. Have you studied your Musculoskeletal Anatomy yet?"

Senior Reflection deserves a chance

Dear Editor:

A few years ago I was in the same position you’re in now. I was a senior, saw those signs about the Senior Reflection Group, and decided that I probably wouldn’t enjoy it. So I didn’t sign up. A friend of mine did. Luckily, her group needed another male. There were seven women and only six men they wanted an even balance. At first I told her I didn’t have the time. But after she told me about the great food (if for no other reason, go for the meal!), I decided to give it a try. All it took was that one bite. Looking back, I can honestly say that it was one of the most memorable experiences of my undergraduate career.

For those of you unfamiliar with the Senior Reflection Group, it provides an arena for senior men and women to meet and discuss some common concerns and reflections. Don’t be fooled by group members who think they hear the end of their four years at Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s. The group offers them the opportunity both to look back on their college experience and to articulate their hopes for the future, and provides a forum in which to discuss what social concern is and will be integrated into their lives.

Once a month you will go to a faculty or staff member and share a great meal facilitated by group members with a coffee and opinions. Sometimes, people will be afraid to begin the opportunity both to look back on their college experience and to articulate their hopes for the future, and provides a forum in which to discuss what social concern is and will be integrated into their lives.

One day we went to a faculty or staff person and share a great meal facilitated by group members with a coffee and opinions. Sometimes, people will be afraid to begin. After all, this is a great way to get started.

Dear Editor:

Without a doubt, the movie did not threaten my belief in God or Christ. The movie and the controversy have prompted me to really think about my personal beliefs and to decide what just means to me. A belief in God and Christ is a very personal issue, no two people feel the same, neither belief is right or wrong, just different, and what is right is different for each individual.

This controversy will continue long after we are all gone. So instead of trying to ram our personal opinions down each other’s throats, why don’t we all sit back, give the issue a rest, and be glad we made the right decision for ourselves?

Seeing "Temptation" a personal choice

Dear Editor:

Enough already. I don’t know about anyone else but I am tired of hearing up the Observer and reading about the philosophical and theological pros and cons of why a person should or should not see "The Last Temptation of Christ." The only person’s opinion who should count is your own. Only you can decide for yourself if you want to see it or not.

Personally decided to see the movie, but that was my choice. I won’t second-guess you or try to sway you either way. For me the movie did not threaten my belief in God or Christ. This controversy has continued long after we are all gone. So instead of trying to ram our personal opinions down each other’s throats, why don’t we all sit back, give the issue a rest, and be glad we made the right decision for ourselves?

Teresa A. Westfall

Quote of the Day

"Running a football team is no different from running any other kind of organization—an army, a political party, a business. The problems are the same. The objective is to win. To beat the other guy. Maybe that sounds harsh or cruel. I don’t think it is.”

Vince Lombardi
Papa Joe's

This is an Italian salad with peppers, pepperoni, little hot green peppers, Parmesan cheese and delicious Italian dressing in addition to the usual salad ingredients. You don't have to wait to order to start eating, but it's very hard to put down the fork to pick up the menu and choose an entree. Then once you do pick up the menu, it's even harder to choose an entree from the 31 chicken, veal, eggplant, pasta and seafood dishes that all sound equally enticing.

A good choice is the Eggplant Joseph ($8.75), sauteed eggplant in olive oil and garlic, served over pasta and smothered with fresh mush-rooms and cheese. The pasta and sauce, both "casa-made," were especially good. Another delectable dish is the Chicken Papino ($9.25): eggplant in olive oil and garlic, served over pasta and mozzarella cheese. Other entrees include Chicken Marsala ($8.50), Shrimp Scampi ($11.25), Veal Parmigiana ($11.95) and Baked Manicotti ($7.95). The Prices are reasonable, especially for the amount of food served. The portions are so huge that apparently it's typical for patrons to take part of their dinners home in doggie bags.

These prices also include dessert—a plate of various brownies, cookies and pastries brought right to the table, again without you having to order it.

One thing that is not included in the price of the entree is the wine, but it's worth the extra money. The wine list is fairly extensive, but the Sauvignon Blanc (Gallo, $8.95) complements most of the dishes.

Almost surpassing the meal in authentic Italian flavor is the atmosphere of Papa Joe's. The tablecloths are red-and-white checked, as may be expected in an Italian restaurant. Small iron chandeliers, resembling candle-holders more than light fixtures, dimly light the interior. The large plants that are everywhere—surrounding the entrance, next to tables, hanging from ceilings—make Papa Joe's seem more like a warm Venetian garden than a Mishawaka restaurant.

The best thing about Papa Joe's is that it gives you a chance to relax and enjoy a meal from the moment you sit down at the table through dessert, without having to scrutinize the menu and choose between different appetizers, side dishes and desserts in addition to the entrees. It's the perfect place to go when you want to enjoy good food and good company in a relaxed atmosphere.

Papa Joe's Casa de Pasta is que bueno.

Frank's Red Hots measure up

Are you looking for six inches of pure ecstasy in South Bend? Try Frank's Red Hots, on State Road 23 just east of campus. Frank's is nothing fancy. One wouldn't take a friend here to impress them with the atmosphere, but rather with the food. That explains the relatively modest prices. A visit to Frank's is not one to a typical hot dog stand. Rather, the interior reminds one more of a tidy, modern fast food restaurant. Frank's, as the name implies, specializes in hot dogs. The menu also offers hamburgers, cold cut sand-wiches, ice cream and ribs, but we chose to stick with the main fare.

Frank's hot dogs come in many varieties. Their specialty is the Chicago Dog, which includes relish, onions, tomatoes, pickles, celery salt, hot peppers and mustard ($1.45). One of us did not care for the color of the relish, which appeared neon green. However, this did not affect the taste.

The cheese, basically your plain melted, sticky-gooey cheddar, smothered the generous helping of thin, delicate fries. Frank's "homemade" chili was delectable, a definite improvement over the basic cheese fries if your tastes run in that direction. Frank's also offers a myriad of other hot dog possibilities, which unfortunately we were not able to sample.

Vegetables, please!

Robert Cray brings the blues to all

SCOTT KAHNEY

The blues? Isn’t that what you’re supposed to listen to when your baby’s got you down?

Not according to Robert Cray. Cray and his band use a sharp, flashy style in an attempt to bring the blues to the people. Don’t Be Afraid of the Dark, Cray’s fifth album, succeeds in letting people know that the blues are not just for drunk, depressed old men.

Notre Dame had a firsthand experience with Cray two years ago when he opened for Huey Lewis and the News. Cray’s short but inspired opener had to play second fiddle to the fluffy pop of Huey Lewis, but his electric blues stole the show. Unfortunately, most of the ND crowd was at the concert to hear Lewis and never really noticed what Cray had to offer.

Cray’s newest album has a nice mix of sharp upbeat numbers and slower traditional blues numbers. Songs like “Your Secret’s Safe with Me” and the title track testify to Cray’s talent in producing riveting popular songs with not losing his blues backbone.

“I Can’t Go Home” is the highlight of the album’s slower numbers.

In “Night Patrol,” the album’s best track, Cray successfully combines his soothing voice and guitar into an inspirational look at the down and out. Cray’s guitar seems to wander the lonely streets alongside the hero of this song, a policeman on the night patrol.

Another highlight, “Across the Line,” makes me feel almost like I’m sitting in a dark Chicago blues club. The interplay between the sax and guitar solos lacks only a cold beer and some cigarette smoke. Add those ingredients and I’d swear I’m listening to a live show.

Cray’s horn section, the Memphis Horns, continues to provide a lively backdrop for his vocals and guitar. The horns also receive the added bonus of David Sanborn’s saxophone on “Acting this Way.” Sanborn’s earing guest solos provide an added touch of finesse to Cray’s already solid album.

Although Don’t Be Afraid of the Dark continues Cray’s tradition of pure blues, it may not be as successful as his 1986 album Strong Persuader. Those familiar with Cray’s work will realize that Don’t Be Afraid of the Dark lacks the riveting focus Cray produced two years ago.

Even taking a step down from Strong Persuader, Cray is still able to produce a successful album. Don’t Be Afraid of the Dark has assured us that the next time Cray and his band come to South Bend, they won’t be opening the show for some teeny pop star like Huey Lewis.

For those of you who have never listened to the blues or are maybe just a little bit afraid of embarking on a new road, I challenge you to give Robert Cray a try. As far as the blues go, Cray’s music provides a good starting point to begin your journey into the world of the blues. His music succeeds in bridging the gap between the rock n roll of today and the blues of Chicago in the 50s and 60s.

Don’t be mistaken: Robert Cray plays nothing but the blues. His music, however, is not for the lonely, depressed wino but for all of us. So sit back, take a long draw from whatever you’re drinking and give Robert Cray and his blues a chance. Cmon, Don’t Be Afraid of the Dark!

The Skillet is not a place where you would expect to run into a lot of alumni in plaid pants. Something of a cross between a Denny’s, a truck stop, and your Aunt Ida’s kitchen, the Skillet has a distinctively small-town, Midwestern flavor that is amusing and utterly unpretentious.

On entering the Skillet, one’s attention is first drawn to the generous assortment of crayola artwork hanging above the front counter. If you have to wait for a table (which you might, as The Skillet seems to have a fairly devoted clientele) you should examine the bowl of ceramic fruit, the large wooden chicken, and the various two year old issues of magazines like Family Circle and Wo men’s Day that are provided for your amusement.

Beyond these initial treasures, however, The Skillet is also liberally strewn with antiques and knick-knacks, and some rather interesting ones, at that. My companions and I had to enquire to find out exactly what the harness clamp was and, this was enthusiastically explained to us by our waitress.

The catch-words at The Skillet are “hospitality” and “browned chicken.” The kinds of steak and seafood including farm raised catfish ($6.25). (Sorry kids, no alcholic beverages—this is a family establishment.) For dessert, what else but apple pie ($1.00)?

Definitely down to earth, The Skillet is one of those home town kind of places where the waitress calls you “honey” and “kids” (she even chastised one of my companions for not eating her veggie). It also must be one of the last places on this earth where Wetnaps (those little lemon-scented towelettes in the pouch—remember those from family trips as a kid?) are distributed with your meal.

Some might find The Skillet tacky, but, I thought it was a lot of fun. The food was good—everything from the cranberry juice served to the onion rings—and the experience was a definite change of pace.

The Skillet offers what every student on a budget needs—a fast, filling meal at relatively inexpensive prices. It is well worth the trip, a short drive or even a long walk from campus.

The counter service was quick, efficient and friendly. The dogs and fries are made fresh, while you wait, and after you place your order they are happy to bring the steaming fries out to your table.

be the site of both games, tonight’s contest with undefeated Western Michigan at 7:30 and Sunday’s 1 P.M. matinee with NAIA power Birmingham Southern.
Both visiting teams can boast of impressive records and statistics. Western Michigan brings a 3-0-1 mark to the Stadium, while Birmingham Southern is 3-2 with one shutout and a 24-4 scoring ratio. They will be working towards their NCAA goals.
Grace is optimistic about Sunday’s game, the Irish having already beaten St. Joseph’s on the road earlier this season. Although they did not have much trouble in the teams’ first meeting, Grace says they will still have to “play really hard.” He is very pleased with the team’s recent progress, and he is impressed with the work ethic of the practices. “I am amazed with how far we have come in just the past month,” Grace said. “The team looks better and better at each practice.”
The players themselves are looking forward to the next two games. “We’re really psyched,” said freshman Deborah Skahan. “Wednesday night’s win over Wheaton helped lift the team, and we’re really up for these next games. We’re hoping to see a lot of support out at the field.”
Both of the games are to be played on Notre Dame’s Krause field.
UNDDEFEATED
undecided, said Grace, “that’ll set us up for our big Bowling Green trip (Tuesday afternoon) and the middle of our schedule, which is very tough.”
Mitch Kern simply hopes that he can continue his success and create a long, successful Notre Dame career.

The Saint Mary’s tennis team topped two more victors to its season record, raising it’s mark 6-6.
On Tuesday, the Belles traveled to Indianapolis. They went out on the courts and proved they are serious competitors, winning at every flight and shutting out Anderson 9-0.

“Really feels as though we are in a tennis groove after winning the Invitational,” said Belles’ co-captain Jennifer Black of last weekend’s Saint Mary’s Invitational. “All the hard work and sweat is paying off.”
On Wednesday, the Belles traveled to University of Illinois, capturing another win, 7-2. The Illini were one of the tougher teams on the Belles’ schedule.

The Belles have proved themselves as a strong, dominant team, definitely a team to look out for. If the Belles can keep their dynamic record, they could be on their way to a state title. On Monday, the Belles will compete against Tri-State, on the Saint Mary’s tennis courts.

I said: “What does it mean: the last temptation of the Church?”
He answered: “On the eve of Armageddon, hardships of every variety will be insisting that salvation depends on believers having the right kinds of thoughts—the same limited thoughts they have in their heads. Orthodoxy is important: that’s why the Holy Spirit is its Guardian. But the splendid ambiguities and contradictions that the Holy Spirit left in Scripture are important, too; otherwise there wouldn’t be so many of them.”
The lights were turned down to signal that the movie was beginning. “Is this film, then, offensive?”
He answered: “In comparison with other things, it’s as blameless as the catechism. It could remind unimagistic teachers of how incom­ prehensible it was for the Word to become flesh. But have you heard Jimmy Swaggart preaching on hellfire?”
All at once, I felt that the darkness around me was holy, but the seat beside me was empty. He left me His popcorn. On top was a Bible tract, the stamp on it said: “Support Grace Rescue Mission.”
I was not asleep; this was not a dream. It’s not hard to recognize Jesus; you can tell it’s Him by the scars on His hands, like a signature.

Sooners take a pass on Southern Cal

Jameolie Hudley, the consummate wishbone quarterback, says Oklahoma may take to the air Saturday when the third-ranked Sooners face No. 5 Southern California in the Los Angeles Coliseum.

"We have to put points on the board, and the only way to do that is to throw the ball," he said. "I believe it’s going to be a high-scoring game."

The Sooners, 2-0, have lost their past two meetings with the Trojans, 2-0, and have scored only seven points in the last six quarters against USC.

Hudley has attempted 10 passes this year in victories over North Carolina and Arizona, completing five for 134 yards and one touchdown.

The Sooners rank fifth in the nation in rushing with 238 yards a game while the Trojan defense is 12th best against the run.

USC coach Larry Smith realizes the game will loom large in the national rankings. He is also aware that a West Coast team hasn’t captured the national championship since USC won in 1972.

"This is a big game for national prestige," he said.

In other games involving Top 20 teams, Wisconsin visits No. 1 Miami, Fla.; Tennessee is at No. 4 Auburn; No. 6 Georgia travels to No. 14 South Carolina; No. 7 LSU plays at Ohio State; No. 8 Notre Dame hosts Purdue; Michigan State faces No. 9 Florida State; and Arizona State meets No. 16 Nebraska.

Also, No. 11 West Virginia is at No. 16 Pitt; No. 12 Clemson travels to Georgia Tech; Vanderbilt visits No. 13 Alabama; No. 15 Penn State hosts Rutgers; San Jose State is at No. 17 Washington; Texas A&M faces No. 18 Oklahoma State; Wake Forest travels to No. 19 Michigan; and Mississippi State plays at No. 20 Florida.

Columbia, losers of 42 games in a row, plays Lafayette, 2-0, in New York. The Lions bowed to Harvard, 41-7, in their first game and have not won since a 21-18 victory over Yale on Oct. 15, 1983.

On the other hand, the top-rated Hurricanes, 2-0, have won 34 consecutive regular-season games, including a thrilling 31-30 come-from-behind victory last week over Michigan.

Miami coach Jimmy Johnson is grateful for the chance to play the winless Badgers —42-point underdogs —after two games against nationally-ranked opponents.

"I think it’s a little bit of a relief not going into another week of hype and emotion," he said, hoping to move his team closer to the record of 45 straight victories, set by Oklahoma from 1953-57.

Williams makes big hits for Irish

By FRANK PASTOR
Sports Writer

To add a slight twist to former President Theodore Roosevelt's famous line, Notre Dame's George Williams speaks softly but delivers some big hits.

The sophomore defensive tackle from Willingboro, NJ has earned a reputation this season. He is punishing ballcarriers and quarterbacks while maintaining an always pleasant demeanor. Even amid a series of position changes.

Originally a defensive tackle, Williams was moved to nose guard last year where he played behind senior starter Mike Griffin. Following an impressive showing in spring practice, Williams won the starting spot and was slated to start ahead of Chris Zurich and Steve Roddy in the September 16th opener against Michigan. However, a sudden wave of injuries soon mandated a change of plans.

"Comeout of spring prac­tice, I was number one at nose guard," said Williams. "Then starting left tackle Tom Gor­man got hurt and I had to move over to tackle because I had played that position before. I feel that it's really my best po­si­tion."

Defensive tackles coach John Palermo couldn't agree more.

The first-year coach believes that Williams' attributes are tailor made for his new (old) position.

"He's got good quickness, pretty good football sense, and he's really made some prog­ress this season," stated Palermo. "Palermo said of Williams. "He's also done a good job of keeping his weight down, which helps him perform better."

"I guess I'm quicker than I look," quipped the 6-3,283­ pound Williams.

Because of his history of po­si­tion changes, one is hesitant to call Williams' most recent move permanent. But if his early-season performance is any indication, Williams might finally have found a home at defensive tackle.

The front line of Williams, Zurich, and Jeff Alm combined to shut down Michigan's potent running attack in the opening game. A team each girl has got to reach down inside and help her or his mate.

"Everybody realizes what has to be done," said Lambert. "so now we just have to go out there and do it. I think we're really going to play well against Rice, and if we get a win now we'll be just fine."

Yanks battle Boston, but don't forget Brewers

NEW YORK - The second act of the Yankees-Red Sox drama, opening in the Bronx Friday night, will determine whether New York is ready for the bright lights or the small time.

Boston holds a 4 1/2 game lead over the third-place Yankees entering the three-game series.

"We still control our own destiny boys," Manager Joe Moran told his players after the Red Sox lost 1-0 Wednesday night in Toronto. "It's been that way since April 1 or whatever. We're still out in front and they've got to catch us."

A week ago, the charging Yankees swept into Fenway Park, hoping to cut into a 4 1/2 game deficit. New York won the first game against Roger Clemens but the Red Sox swept the next three and seemingly exiled the Yankees from the American League East title chase.

"We're where we were before," Yankee relief pitcher Dave Righetti said. "But this time, I think it would be a good chance to win all of them."

"They made it like this," said catcher Don Slaught, whose 12th-inning homer Wednesday night gave the Bronx Bombers a 3-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles. "We've done our job this week and so far they haven't done theirs."

Red Sox lost two of three games in Toronto this week and have dropped eight of 10 to the Blue Jays this season.

Boston plays Toronto in a three-game series beginning Monday in Fenway Park before ending the year with four games in Cleveland.

"We're still first place and the other clubs have to catch us," Red Sox reliever Bob Stanley said. "You can be sure we're happier where we are than the other teams are."

The Yankees close with seven road games in Baltimore and Detroit. If they are still in contention when the regular season ends Oct. 2, they will host the Texas Rangers in a make-up game Oct. 3.

The East Germans took the bronze medal by less than a half point, and the Americans were outraged.

Faehn obviously was not coaching her teammate or doing anything to help the American cause. In fact, three of the six judges did not even notice her. But the East German judge apparently was watching Faehn instead of the American cause. In fact, three of the six judges did not even notice her. But the East German judge apparently was watching Faehn instead of the routine, and then watched her own country's team move ahead of the Americans for the bronze.

What's next? Certainly not homework during Olympic hours.

Mayhem reigns at the Olympic boxing competition in Seoul. Above, Korean officials and spectators voice their opinions of a judges ruling. Hyung-choon takes a seat during the melee.

Chaos in the ring spoils Olympics

Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea—Byun Jong-il sat 47 minutes in a boxing ring Thursday, trying to understand the nine minutes of fighting that went before and the 41 decision that followed, the two penalty points that went against him and what they may have cost him.

But no matter how hard or how many times Byun tried, whether he sat in the glaring lights or the glowing dark, the numbers just wouldn't add up. Which explains, perhaps, how he could have begun Thursday full of fancy and just 16, and ended it feeling all of 90 and looking for a place to bury those dreams.

"He is sleeping, it is better that he sleeps," a member of the Korean Olympic delegation who identified himself only as Mr. Chun, said in a telephone interview from the athletes village early Friday.

"He felt that he won the game and so he sits in protest. Now, it is better that he sleeps for a while," he continued. "His problem has ended."

Actually, it may just be beginning. And the problem is no longer just his.

Byun, a bantamweight, was suspended indefinitely from competition by the International Amateur Boxing Association (AIBA), and may not box again for years.

Five South Korean officials one an assistant coach and another a trainer—who took part in the punch-kick-and ear-pulling attack on referee Keith Walkin following the decision were thrown out of their own Olympics by the AIBA.

And Walker, who assessed the penalty points against Byun for fouling in his morning bout against Bulgarian Alexander Hristov, is heading home to New Zealand and early retirement.

"Walker had said this (Olympics) would probably be his last anyway," said Paul Thompson, a member of Australia's National Olympic Committee. "For his own benefit, he did the right thing. Why stay here and get crucified?"

"But," Thompson added, "this is a sad way to end a career."

A.A. Thompson spoke to reporters at the close of the evening session. Australian boxer Darrell Hills stood nearby, nodding and dabbing a towel on the nasty gash Korean boxer Lee Jae-hyuk had opened moments earlier—also by butting. Lee won 5-4.

"I think (what happened) this morning affected Darrell's mind," said teammate Darren Ohah, unsolicited. "We noticed it in the first round. It was kind of scary out there."

"You could feel it in your bones," Ohah said. "It gave me the shivers."

Indeed, AIBA officials had expressed doubts earlier in the day about whether there would even be a night session, but removed them after assurances from the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee that additional security measures would be in place at ringside.

"For months of the afternoon, the New Zealand Embassy in Seoul was deluged with calls protesting the split decision. Several callers cursed, one man identified himself as a businessman and said he had canceled a contract, another demanded severing diplomatic ties.

And even before the Byun-Jong-il fight, Korean newspapers had stoked the local and national fire of accounts of how U.S. officials were lobbying against Korean boxers.

According to the stories, the Americans were still upset over the elimination earlier this week of middleweight Anthony Hembry, who missed the bus, and was out of the ring for butting in his morning bout against Bulgarian Alexander Hristov, is heading home to New Zealand and early retirement.

Olympic weekend preview

Lewis hunts for more gold

Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea - The 100-meter dash offers Carl Lewis a double chance at Olympic distinction.

The headline event on Day 7 of the Seoul Games will also be the first step for Lewis in his quest to repeat his four gold medal performance of 1984 -- a feat duplicating the efforts of Jesse Owens in the 1936 Olympics.

"I just want to run each step as well as I can," Lewis said. "The 100 meters is a big event for me. I'll put 110 percent into that. Then comes the 200, the long jump and the relay. That's the way I'm going to go into this. I'm not going to anticipate." The triple jump will also be contested.

"It's good for track and field just like Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier were good for boxing," Lewis said. "I feel what we're doing is focusing at what we're doing is focusing at what we're doing. And American Willie Banks, who won the event four years ago, is again the favorite. The women's heptathlon moves into its second day. American Jackie Joyner Kresse, the only heptathlete to surpass 7,000 points -- she has done it four times -- has said she will aiming to break her world record.

Mary T. Meagher, an Olympic triple gold medallist in 1984, will begin her attempt to duplicate that feat in the women's 100-meter butterfly -- Friday night in Seoul, Friday in the United States -- a day of five swimming finals; the first three track and field medal events, and the first appearance of Lewis and Edwin Moses.

Meagher, who will turn 24 next month, is the oldest member of the U.S. women's swim team. She has held world records in the women's 100 and 200-meter butterfly for more than seven years.

Irish soccer plays two at Krause

By TIM SULLIVAN

Sports Writer

Just six games into the 1988 season, Notre Dame men’s soccer coach Dennis Grace made a decision which has turned some heads.

Facing a testing, two-game home-stand, weekend, Grace has inserted a freshman into his starting line-up, but the coach isn’t complaining of injury problems or lack of depth.

Instead, he is touting talent, like that of his gifted freshman mid-fielder, Mitch Kern.

Kern impressed in early season practices, saw key playing time in the Irish’s first six (5-0-1) games, and finally playing time in the Irish’s first mid-fielder, Mitch Kern.

Kern is wary of the situation.

Dick Darrell pitched a six-hitter and beat the Philadelphia Phillies 3-1.

Ron Darling pitched a six-hitter and beat the Philadelphia Phillies 3-1.

The Mets won the lead 2-1 in the sixth with a big assist from starter Don Carman, 10-13.

Darryl Strawberry led off with a walk and moved to third on Kevin McReynolds’ single to left-center field. With Gary Carter batting, Carman threw a wild pitch high and outside and Strawberry trotted home with the go-ahead run.

The Mets added a run in the seventh when Mookie Wilson scored from second on McReynolds’ RBI infield single.

By MOLLY MAHONEY

Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women’s volleyball team dropped its record to 14-15-1, 11-13 and 7-15, to Purdue.

The Boilermakers, now 5-5, have a .940 record against the Irish and continued to dominate in the series with the help of junior middle blocker Debbie McDonald who recorded a match high 23 digs and 20 kills for an impressive .381 hitting percentage.

The Irish tried to counter with an attack of their own, but a breakdown in the team’s blocking allowed the Boilermakers to win despite their own sporadic play.

Our blocking stats went way down,” said Irish head coach Art Lambert. “We were not playing aggressively and we were not getting the blocks over the net, so it came down to our team making more errors than they did. The team beat itself more than (Purdue) did.”

But senior right side hitter Maureen Shea played well, tallying 14 kills and 13 digs for the Irish and junior outside hitter Kathy Cunnin-gham followed close behind statistically with 13 kills and 10 digs.

Boycott sanity at these Olympic Games

A major scheduling error has college students all over the country going to school while the greatest sporting event in the world is taking place.

Notre Dame students should step forward and be leaders in a national boycott of homework during the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul, South Korea. So what if it’s not summer anymore, and so what if the United States is trailing in the medal count.

You’ve got to check out some of the wacky things going on over there.

It doesn’t matter if you’re not a sports fan.

The only prerequisite is a strong sense of humor, because the Olympics are turning into a comedy better than any Thursday night sit-com.

What’s funny, in a slightly warped sense of the word, is the chaos in South Korea these days. Some of the results aren’t funny at all.

First, an American boxer claimed he could not find a seat on the bus, and showed up late for his opening match. Even when the driver shut the door on him, U.S. medal hopeful Anthony Hembrick thought he had plenty of time to get to the gymnasium for his bout. As it turns out, Hembrick and the American boxing coaches mis-read the schedule, thinking the fight was much later.

Marty Strassen

Sports Editor

Hembrick showed up four minutes late, and was counted out of the Olympics before he even opened into the ring.

But just when you thought the Olympic officials had everything straightened out and a few days passed without a major controversy, along came Wednesday night. Not counting snipers in previous games, what took place Wednesday night at the gymnastics and boxing venues has to rank among the zaniest happenings in Olympic his-tory.

A Korean boxer lost his bout on points, thanks in part to two points he lost for head-butting, an offense he was warned about four times. When the decision was announced, his coaches and a group of Korean boxing officials stormed the ring and punched the New Zealand referee.

It took more than a minute for security guards to enter the ring, while people were hurling chairs and water bottles at the referee. It took 20 guards to get the injured official to the dressing room.

Irish try to halt three-match skid

Freshman Mitch Kern takes a shot on goalie (or is it a shot on goalie) in an Irish victory over Dayton this season. Kern has wasted time in earning a spot in a talented Notre Dame soccer lineup.
