One killed, 10 hurt in shooting spree

GREENWOOD, S.C. A teacher who was wounded, while trying to stop a gunman during a fatal shooting spree in an elementary school, and then held the man for police, "thinks about others before herself," colleagues said.

An 8-year-old was killed and two teachers and eight students were wounded in Monday's attack at Oakland Elementary School. A 7-year-old who was shot in the neck was returned to surgery Tuesday because of complications and was in critical condition.

"He seemed to be shooting people who were screaming," said School Superintendent Robert Watson. "The teacher said those who were screaming or making noise; he shot them."

Police Chief James Coursey said James Wilson walked through the school's front door Monday morning, went to the cafeteria and opened fire with a 22-caliber, nine-shot revolver, wounding one teacher and three students. He left the cafeteria and entered a girl's restroom to reload.

Shroud thought to be burial cloth of Christ could be a clever forgery

ROME-Laboratory tests show the Shroud of Turin was made in the 14th century and could not be the burial cloth of Christ, the scientific adviser to the archbishop of Turin said he learned on Tuesday.

Professor Luigi Gonella said he has not yet seen the official report from the three laboratories that conducted the carbon-14 dating tests, but that all the leaks to the press dated it to the 14th century and "somebody let me understand that the rumors were right."

"It is quite evident somebody sold out to the press," said Gonella in an interview from his home in Turin. He refused to identify who had told him about the results of the tests at Oxford University, the University of Arizona and the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology at the University of Zurich.

The shroud, 14 feet, 3 inches long and 3 feet, 7 inches wide, bears the faint, blood-stained image of a whipped and crucified man. Some have maintained the berringbone patterned linen is the burial cloth of Christ, while others have dismissed it as a clever forgery.

The shroud was removed April 21 from the silver chest where it is kept wrapped in red silk on an altar in the cathedral in Turin. A strip, four-tenths of an inch by 2.8 inches, was cut from the cloth and then divided into three smaller pieces for the laboratory "tories," each of which got one piece, in addition to another piece of cloth of a known age.
Teaching has few bucks but many great rewards

Room 110 was empty at 8 a.m. Monday morning, but by 8:10 the students began filing in, taking their respective seats. Strangely, the students were quiet and laughing, seemingly unaffected by the early hour.

This was definitely not freshmen calculus or physics, notorious for meeting at similarly obscene hours of the morning. The conversations in the room were not of the weekend tailgaiting or romance, but rather of Sunday's trip to grandma's house and the latest Saturday morning cartoons.

These are the students I encountered in a first grade class at a South Bend elementary school I visited as part of an education class which is taught at Saint Mary's.

Education 201F, Teaching As a Profession, the course I am taking as an elective this semester, is designed to give students first-hand, practical experience and knowledge of the field.

This first day brought back many memories of grade school. It is not the subjects we studied that I remember so well, but saying the Pledge of Allegiance, the ritualistic lunch count, smile faces on papers, words of praise, and the ever present threat of my name on the board for not following directions.

The three short hours of my visit to the class I encountered all these things and more.

The children took great interest in the topics they were discussing. Questions were met with enthusiastically raised hands reaching for the sky, and at times accompanied by appropriate sighs, groans, and exclamations.

When a child's mother surprised the class with a recently captured praying mantis, the students observed it with the fascination and curiosity unique to childhood. For these children their teacher helped them to meet new discoveries in a fearless and open-minded manner.

Teaching is not a highly esteemed profession in our society. Most view it as a career with few rewards. Yet, my visit to the first grade class reinforced my interest in the education of young children. The rewards are often overlooked because they are not of a monetary nature.

However, the satisfaction one receives in seeing a child grasp a new concept, cannot be measured. The open and trusting nature of children is a welcome change to adult world legacies for material or personal gain.

Those with an interest in teaching should not be put off by the prospect of a lower starting salary, for teaching can provide one of the highest degrees of job satisfaction. The future of our country is dependent on raising the quality of education. There is a need for creative and motivated people who will be dedicated to making the present system more successful and workable. Those entering the field today will most likely be involved in exciting reform movements of the educational process.

It is true that teachers are underpaid. Considering the responsibilities of the teacher to not only educate, but to instill values, supply guidance, and provide encouragement. Teachers play a large role in the development of a child as an individual who will become an asset to society. For these reasons teaching should be a more highly paid profession, if for no other reason than to attract the most qualified candidates.

Teachers deserve our utmost respect for their efforts. Most everyone has fond memories of a favorite teacher who has inspired them to demand more from themselves and to fulfill their potential. Each of us is in some way indebted to teachers in their past. After all, without them you would not be reading this column.

Lecture discusses move of Chile to democracy

By KELLEY TUTHILL
News Staff

Veronica Montecinos, a Faculty Fellow from the Kellogg Institute for International Studies, spoke yesterday about the transition to democracy in Chile.

The lecture began with Montecinos making the point that, "the opposition to the military government in Chile expects to defeat General Pinochet in the coming plebiscite of October 5." Montecinos said that this would be a vital event in the transition to democracy.

"In the last few years, many government and opposition leaders in Chile have suggested that the transition to democracy should result in the building of a 'modern and stable' democracy," said Montecinos.

Montecinos said that many of the parties' policies there is a consensus that democratic economic development should be "the importance of markets in the economy, the right of the state to adjust market signals to policy goals, the importance of integration in the international economy through the development of the export sector, and the importance of assuring the competitiveness of national production through efficient import substitution."

She also insisted that, "Production should be mainly in the hands of the private sector, although with active participation by the state, and that to overcome extreme income inequality and poverty, a more active social policy is necessary."

"I would like to argue, however, that the political role of economists has increased in the hands of private sector, political parties, and policy makers." Montecinos said that in the majority of the parties' policies there is a consensus that democracy should result in the building of a 'modern and stable' democracy," said Montecinos.

"Perhaps the process of transition to democracy will force a change in the way the government governs the relations between political leadership and those who understand the constraints of implementation," said Montecinos. "And this in turn will be reflected in the organizational context of policy making."

The transitional moment may be a privileged period to observe how a new regime is shaped and consolidated by an increased attention to the technical aspects of political decisions," said Montecinos.

"Production should be mainly in the hands of the private sector, although with active participation by the state, and that to overcome extreme income inequality and poverty, a more active social policy is necessary."

"Economists have played an active role in the political economy." Montecinos said that many of the institutional policies used by the authoritarian regime, such as changes in the labor code and government centralization, will become a legacy to the democratic government. "Depending on whether the new government is a center-left or a center-right coalition, it will attempt more or less drastic changes."

"The centricity of parties in the Chilean political system has inspired a lively debate on whether or not the party system should be preserved for the breakdown of democracy," said Montecinos.

Montecinos said that, "Parties as organizations react differently to changes in the political environment: from the collapse of democracy, then to authoritarian repression, exile democracy, and finally transition. Speaking about party professionalism, Montecinos said that, "increased professionalism of party structures could make it more difficult for bureaucratic teams in government to ignore party criticisms of policy options."

She said in conclusion, "It could also make it more difficult for opposition parties to concentrate on taking advantage of every setback in government policies."

Two seniors from Alumni on their way to becoming bridge masters

By Florentine Hoelker

Two Notre Dame students recently entered and won a regional bridge tournament. Yet, they say they have quite a distance to cover before they are really successful bridge players.

Matt Beuter and Fred Heidenreich, senior roommates in Alumni Hall, competed September 16-18 in Indianapolis.

As winners, they each received a plaque and both came closer to reaching the ultimate goal of bridge players: becoming "life masters."

Although Beuter and Heidenreich have been playing bridge as partners for well over a year, Beuter says "we're constantly learning new things. Tournament bridge is likely the most complicated card game there is, and can't honestly be compared to any other card game. It takes months just to play profitably."

Once proficiency is reached, the next step is to accumulate points by winning and, when ready, to join the American Contract Bridge League (ACBL).

There are degrees of points which depend on the size and prestige of each tournament: national tournament award gold points, regional tournament award red points, sectional award silver points, and ordinary club games award black points.

To achieve the status of life master, a total of 300 points is needed, but there are provisions. Of the 300 points, 25 must be gold, 25 must be red, and 50 must be silver. The remaining 100 may be a mixture of any of the others.

Two Notre Dame seniors play tournam ent bridge, or they would see them. I just wish more people played."

Weatherman just carrying on his ‘family tradition’

INDIANAPOLIS - A volunteer weather observer at Shadyside received national recognition for his efforts said Tuesday he is just carrying on a family tradition.

William Keller has been reading thermometers, gauging rainfall and watching the level of the White River for 32 years. The same amount of time he served as a rural mail carrier.

"My grandfather had the job and after he died, I took it over. It's been a couple of years, I had to report for the service, and my dad took it for a couple of years," Keller said.

Keller spent six years in the Army during World War II, including 18 months overseas, mostly in England and France.

"My dad had the job until 1961. Then I took it over. I've had it ever since." The National Weather Service honored him Monday with the John Dame Award for outstanding accomplishments in meteorological observation. It is the second-highest award a cooperative weather observer can receive.

Kat Finkbeiner followed and tried to prevent him from leaving the room, Coursey said, but when they scuffled Finkbeiner was shot in the hand and mouth.

Wilson got by Finkbeiner and opened fire in a classroom, wounding five students and killing Shequila Bradley, Coursey said.

After emptying his pistol Wilson dropped it, Finkbeiner told him to raise his hands and made him stay in place until a police officer arrived, the chief said.

Those who know Finkbeiner said her action came as no surprise, said Gay McHugh, principal at Lakeview Elementary School, where Finkbeiner also teaches.

When she heard a physical education teacher had helped stop the gunman, "I knew immediately it had to be her. She is always willing to go that extra mile," McHugh said.

Penny Dean, who used to teach at Oakland, said Finkbeiner "thinks about others before herself."

Dean said Finkbeiner "really cares about people. Everything she does she does with gusto."

Finkbeiner was in fair condition Tuesday at Self Memorial Hospital and has not yet talked with police, said spokesman Dan Branyon. A second teacher was in good condition.

City Recorder Ted Windham denied bond Tuesday for Wilson, and retired state Supreme Court Justice Bruce Littlejohn, acting as a special judge, ordered Wilson to undergo psychiatric examination.

Relatives said Wilson, 19, had been in and out of a hospital psychiatric ward.

Coursey said Tuesday that Wilson was charged with murder and other charges were being drawn up to be served after the psychological evaluation. Solicitor Townes Jones said his office will consider pursuing the death penalty.

Superintendent Watson said he knew of no connection between the gunman and the school.

"I don't know if we'll ever have a motive," Coursey said.

Wilson's father, James Wilson, said his son is a hyperactive recluse who had been admitted to Self Memorial's psychiatric ward three or four times in the past eight months.

Three graduates receive awards

The Notre Dame Alumni Association will present three of its nine annual awards to graduates of the University this fall, according to Charles Lennon, Jr., the Association's executive director.

John Gilligan, director of Notre Dame's Institute for International Peace Studies, will receive the John J. Cavanaugh Award September 26 during the Association's fall board meeting. Gilligan, former Governor of Ohio, will receive the Award for his work in neighborhood and urban renewal during his political career and for his current work for international peace. The Cavanaugh Award, named for the University's 14th president, is annually given to a Notre Dame graduate for distinguished community service.

Retired Marine Brig. Gen. Vincente ("Ben") Blaz will receive the Rev. William Corby Award during halftime ceremonies of the October 22 Notre Dame-Air Force football game. General Blaz, the first native of Guam to become a regular officer in the armed forces of the United States, has served on U.S. negotiating teams at Helsinki and Geneva. The Corby Award, named for the University president who distinguished himself during the battle of Gettysburg as chaplain to the Union Army's Irish Brigade, is given annually to a graduate who has done exemplary service in this country's armed forces.

Fundraising starts for United Way

By CHRIS MURPHY
Editor-in-Chief

Rev. E. William Beauchamp, executive assistant to the President and general campaign chairman of the St. Joseph County United Way, announced Tuesday that the St. Joseph County United Way's 1988 goal is a record-setting $3,805,000. Beauchamp's remarks were made at the United Way Kick-off Luncheon held in the Monogram Room at the Joyce Athletic and Convocation Center.

"We need to stress that it's our campaign. The United Way is so much a part of our lives and so much a part of the community. Notre Dame is a part of that community," said Beauchamp.

University President Edward A. Malloy added that Notre Dame's involvement with the United Way fundraising campaign reaffirms the sense of Notre Dame's commitment for the well being of the South Bend community.

"We have an awful lot to give and we are necessary to each other. The United Way is about helping people and there is no better way to describe a university's goal than to help people," said Malloy.

The campaign will directly involve the students, faculty, and administrators at the University. Dr. Emil T. Hofman heads the faculty staff fundraising committee and Melissa Smith will direct the efforts of students. Funds raised from the local United Way campaign will serve 36 local agencies and more than 2,000 volunteers.
Ind. man held for murder of woman

Associated Press

CARMEL, Ind. - A Carmel man was jailed on a charge of murder Tuesday after leading authorities to the nude and battered body of a woman who had been missing three days.

William Wallace, 26, was being held without bail Tuesday night in the Hamilton County Jail after being arraigned in the afternoon.

Dr. Michael Clark, pathologist for the Marion County coroner's office, said the victim, Carla Auda, 21, had been asphyxiated. She was last seen leaving a bowling alley Friday night.

The bowling alley, Woodland Bowl, is about 10 miles down 96th Street from body was found early Tuesday along the White River on the Hamilton-Marion county line.

Deputy Marion County Coroner Jack Lyday said the body was face-down under three logs and that grass had been pulled up and scattered on the logs to help conceal it. Wounds on the victim's face suggested she had been beaten, he said. The body could have been there since Friday night, he added.

The victim's clothing was found in a tree about 15 feet away, Lyday said.

Sgt. Mitch Russell of the Hamilton County sheriff's department said investigators recovered a Burger King uniform of the kind Auda was wearing when she disappeared Friday night.

Terrorist incidents on the uprise as well as cooperation against them

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Abu Nidal seems to be resuming his terrorist campaign with support from Libya, the top U.S. counterterrorism official said Tuesday.

L. Paul Bremer, ambassador-at-large for counterterrorism, also told reporters that the number of terrorist incidents appears to be headed for a record level of 1,000 this year, although the number of Americans killed in such attacks has fallen.

"Any effort to make an assessment of where we are in terrorism leads you to the inevitable good news and bad news," he said.

"The bad news is that terrorism is certainly continuing. According to the figures that we keep, ... 1987 was the worst year in history. We had 832 recorded incidents in international terrorism" up from 774 in 1986, he said.

The good news in the battle against terrorism is increased cooperation among the United States and its allies, said Bremer.

"We estimate at least several hundred incidents have been stopped by steps that we and our allies have taken over the last three years ... maybe as many as 300 ... some major and some not," he said. He declined to give specifics.

The number of Americans killed in terrorist incidents has fallen from 38 in 1986 to 12 in 1987 and three in the first half of 1988, he said.

ND becomes

pivotal voting block

Dear Editor:

Last Friday afternoon there was an interesting addition to the excitement that always blankets the Notre Dame campus during the autumn weekends.

The four hundred plus people who gathered on the Fieldhouse Mall were invited to a discussion. From Bruce Babbitt, the 1989 Notre dame graduate who is currently the governor of Arizona and formerly a Democratic presidential candidate. His presence at that gathering on the mall is significant, for it is one of the things that symbolize the beginning of students at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's taking an active role and exercising an effective voice in the upcoming November elections.

It had been our intention from the beginning to register and inform Notre Dame students for the November elections. However, our original goal has expanded to a greater and more excite­ ning reality. That is, one of the ways that Notre Dame will continue to be a part of the Notre Dame campus? As a Notre Dame graduate and former employee of the Computing
Office of University Computing.

As a last word to those who remain you the best of luck and leave you with this bit of advice from F. Atherly through

New musical organization sounds clear as a bell

accent writer

S tarting a new organization at Notre Dame is not an easy task to perform. Senior Paul Waguespack could attest to the validity of this statement. Waguespack tried to form a Notre Dame handbell choir two years ago, but he was unable to put it all together. It was not until this year that the handbell choir established itself as a permanent Notre Dame activity.

Handbell choirs originated in Europe, where they systematically rang large power bells. Instead of practicing and disturbing the entire town, they used handbells to practice without disturbing anyone. The bells ranged from the size of a basketball to the size of a tea cup.

Currently, the handbell choir has 25 bells giving it two octaves. When Waguespack began organizing the choir, the University had two octaves of Dutch bells, but these bells are not good for choir use. Last year, the choir had to borrow bells from a local church. Over this past summer, the choir managed to sell the old Dutch bells and to purchase two octaves of American Schulmerich bells. The choir is hoping to get a third octave next semester and to eventually have a total of five octaves. Unfortunately, the bells are very expensive. The two octaves the choir obtained cost $2,200.

The handbell choir performs at a variety of weekend Masses at Sacred Heart Church and at special Masses, such as this year's opening Mass. The choir will also be performing around the Notre Dame campus during the Christmas season. The choir is currently made up of ten members ranging from freshmen to seniors. Steve Warner, the Director of Liturgical Music, has been very supportive of the handbell choir from the start. Warner helps the choir with paperwork and booking their performances.

The choir usually holds two practices a week in which Waguespack leads the choir. Senior Claire Harbeck said, "Paul is very patient. He has an ear for music, and he is able to pick up the choir's mistakes and correct them."

Harbeck had never played handbells before joining the choir last year. She found it very easy to learn to play the handbells with her strong musical background. She feels rhythm and the ability to read music are essential in learning to play the handbells.

Primarily classical music is played during the day from 7 a.m. until 10 p.m. Three special shows add a little spice to the day programming. They are called Daybreak from 7 a.m. to 9 a.m., Meridian from 12 p.m. to 1 p.m., and Tafelmusik from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. A Jazz show is featured on every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 10 p.m. until midnight. This show varies from classic to contemporary jazz. The Monday show highlights audience requests which may be called in at 239-7342.

"Definitely one of our most innovative and exciting features is the Notre Dame Nightflight. We hope to bring in a lot of University listeners through this show," says Jim Mendenhall, a DJ and head of the WSND news staff. The Notre Dame Nightflight features a variety of music alternatives including progressive, reggae, classic rock, cutting edge and new age music depending on the DJ's preference.

WSND is another University sponsored facility which is not fully utilized by the student body. But with this year's attempts to make the students more aware of the station, that situation is subject to change.

SMC tennis wins, runs record to 7-0
By JANE SHEA
SMC Sports Editor

The Saint Mary's tennis team breezed by Tri State University Monday, continuing its undefeated season. The Belles' record now stands at 7-0.

"Tri-State has just returned to the district after a five-year absence," said Head Coach Deb Laverie. In singles, the Belles lost only two games. Charlene Stajko, a senior, led the team with her exceptional play. Stajko, who played in the number one position, easily won her match 6-1,6-0.

"We hope to dominate the Districts," said Laverie. "That is what is fueling us to keep concentrating and working."

Jennifer Block and Sarah Mayer have also been playing well and both won their singles matches 6-0,6-0.

"We should beat Taylor University," said Laverie. "Our team is looking very good and working hard."

The Belles play at Taylor Friday.

Taylor, others to return

Associated Press

NEW YORK - All-Pros Lawrence Taylor and Bruce Smith and three other players who were suspended for 30 days when they failed NFL drug tests during the preseason were reinstated by the league Tuesday.

NFL spokesman Joe Browne said that Taylor, the star linebacker of the New York Giants, and Buffalo Bills defensive end Smith were reinstated along with linebacker Emmanuel King and cornerback Daryl Smith of the Cincinnati Bengals and receiver John Taylor of the San Francisco 49ers.

All five players were on their teams' non-football illness list and missed the first four games this season. Taylor's suspension was due to end Tuesday, while the other four were allowed to return a few days early "as an accommodation to the players and their teams," Browne said. All of them were eligible to play this weekend once the suspensions were lifted.

The respective teams can ask the league for a one-game roster exemption for the reinstated players. The players will "continue to receive appropriate counseling and treatment, and reinstatement is on the condition of their totally refraining from further violations of the NFL substance abuse policy," Browne said.

Canadian Ben Johnson has cast a pall over the Olympic games with his recent disqualification from the 100 meter dash final in which he won Olympic gold in record time. Johnson's use of stanozolol symbolizes the universality of steroids in athletics. A related story is at right.

Associated Press

SEOUL - The U.S. basketball team lost the second game in its glorious Olympic history Tuesday, bowing to the Soviets 82-76 in a grudge match that has simmered for 16 years and three seconds.

The U.S. went into its semifinal game against the Soviets trying to avenge the only loss on its 46-1 Olympic record, but now the best the Americans can do is a bronze medal while the Soviets go for gold.

In 1972 at Munich, America met the Soviet Union for the gold medal, and, after the final three seconds were played twice because of refree error and a scoreboard malfunction, the Soviets won 51-50.

So angered was the U.S. team that it refused to accept the silver medal.

"Every day Russian people and Russian journalists and TV talk about historic three seconds in Munich," said Alexander Gomelsky, who is coaching his sixth Olympics for the Soviets. "This is a good story, and I like it to be same here."

Steve Lewis led a 1-2-3 sweep of the 400 meters, just one-hundredth of a second off the 1980-year-old Olympic record and three more boxers advanced to the semifinals, assured of at least a bronze medal.

Those advancing Wednesday morning were Kenneth McKinney of Killeen, Texas, and Kenneth Gould of Rockford, Ill., and Ray Mercer of Jacksonville, Fla.

McKinney scored a 5-0 victory over Stephen Mwema of Kenya in the 119-pound division, and Gould was a unanimous winner over Joni Nyman of Finland at 147 pounds. Mercer knocked down Italian Luigi Gaudiano and stopped him in the first round of their 201-pound fight.

Lewis won the 400-meter gold in 43.87 seconds, and favored teammate Butch Reynolds, who holds the world record of 43.29, was second in 43.50. Another American, Danny Everett, took the bronze in 44.69. Lewis' time was just .61 seconds off the Olympic mark by Lee Evans of the United States in Mexico City in 1968.

Three more U.S. boxers, meanwhile advanced into the semifinals, where they are assured of at least a bronze medal. The United States has eight of its 12 boxers still in action, including six in the semifinals.

And Danny Everett, a Canadian rowing coach, said: "So much sponsors' money is involved. So much depends on getting the highest performance, that a small percentage of people will always try and be kept away with it. Money always talks."

The Johnson revelation rocked the Games, which until then had been celebrating multimedals sweeps by athletes like swimmers Kristin Otto of East Germany and Matt Biondi of the United States.

Johnson's gold medal went, instead, to rival Carl Lewis, who finished second in the 100-meter race, and it belatedly awed Lewis' hopes of duplicating his 1984 four gold medal sweep. Lewis already has the long jump gold and was going for more in the 200 and the 400-meter relay.

Lewis appeared at a church service Tuesday morning and was upbeat, repeating a story about a dream his mother had the night before he lost to Johnson.

"My mother had a dream ... about my (late) father. He said everything would be all right. And today, it was."

Johnson's positive test remained on the minds of athletes long after the Canadian sprinter fled the Games in disgrace, flying first to New York then to his home in Toronto.

Roger Kingdom, the U.S. gold medalist in the 110-meter hurdles, did not see drugs as a widespread problem, but did question the testing procedure.

"The bottle only had a screw cap on," he said. "It was not sealed. In Los Angeles and at the trials, the bottle was sealed so there could be no tampering with it. Here, you could unscrew it yourself. The kind of bottle they had made it possible for tampering to take place.

It should also be made clear that the kinds of drugs people use in sports are performance-enhancing drugs, so it is different from cocaine or heroin."

Kingdom said it was frustrating for a "clean" athlete to compete against one on drugs.

"You work hard to get in shape and then someone goes and dis it the easy way," he said.

Wildcats fought off a hustling Northwestern team to sneak by with a 13-13 win.

The Irish maintained their composure in game four and won as much by strategy as by skill, jumping off to a 6-1 lead before Northwestern came back to tie the game way back to a 6-4 tie.

Notre Dame then traded points with Northwestern before pulling away to win the game 15-10 and ensure Lambert his birthday victory.

"We can feel ourselves coming together," said Irish assistant coach Patti Hagemeyer. "Our passes are improving and we're hoping we can really score big."

Future of ACHA cloudy as Kent State hockey cut

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Assistant Sports Editor

The future of the American Collegiate Hockey Association has yet to be determined following Kent State's one-year suspension, conference commissioner Brian Bouclac stated Monday.

Kent State's program was suspended for a year following an alleged hazing incident earlier this month. That leaves just three teams—Notre Dame, Michigan-Dearborn and Lake Forest—in the conference.

"I'm in the process of contacting Dearborn and Lake Forest, and we'll discuss with them the future of the conference," said Bouclac, who also serves as Notre Dame's assistant athletic director and women's softball coach. "As for the future of the conference, we have to take a look at what direction all three schools want to go with their hockey programs."

Kent State University president Michael Schwartz announced the suspension last Thursday after an investigation concerning an off-campus event on Sept. 16. The situation involved 12 members of Kent State's hockey team taking five freshmen players to the basement of an off-campus house, where the freshmen had their hair cut in a Mohawk style and were forced to drink a mixture of rum and beer.

One of the freshmen had an allergic reaction to the alcohol and eventually was taken to an area hospital, where he was submitted for observation before being released.

"The party was not an official university function. Not authorized by any university officials or hockey team staff members," reported university police chief John Peach.

Crimes charges have been filed by the city police department against the 12 team members. Five were charged with underage consumption, and two with furnishing an intoxicating liquor to minors (both first-degree misdemeanors). The other five were charged with hazing, a fourth-degree misdemeanor. The players will appear in court Thursday.

"Based on the information provided to me, I do not believe that this program is an acceptable representative of our university or of our athletic program in general," Schwartz said in his official statement.

"Consequently, I have suspended the program for a year and will review the future of it at a later date."

Kent State joined the ACHA with the league's inception two years ago. In the 1986-87 season, the Golden Flashes finished second in the conference with a 7-5 regular season ACHA record. Last season, however, Kent State failed to win a conference game and slumped to an 11-26-3 overall mark.

In the meantime, the ACHA, which thrived on its balanced competition two years ago, became essentially a two-team conference during the 1987-88 season. Michigan-Dearborn won the regular-season title, and Notre Dame won the post-season conference tournament.

All of Lake Forest's conference wins came against Kent State, as the Foresters posted an 0-8-1 record against Notre Dame and Dearborn.

The conference was established on June 4, 1986, under the notion that each of the member schools shared similar philosophies educationally, athletically and financially. At the time, Notre Dame was not offering hockey scholarships, but that position has since changed. Starting this season, Notre Dame is offering 10 hockey scholarships in the next four years.

Dearborn also has shown signs of wanting to upgrade its program, but as an NAIA school, that would involve a restructuring of its entire athletic department. Lake Forest currently competes at the Division III level.

Further complicating matters for the ACHA, the 1986-89 post-season tournament is scheduled to be held at Kent State on March 3-4.

"We've got three teams, and we need at least two strong teams. They are, or at least we think we know," said Notre Dame coach Ric Schafer, who guided his team to a best-ever 27-4-2 record last season. "The weekend of the tournament is the weekend of spring break. It wouldn't matter to me if it's carried off or not. I'd just as soon go recruiting."

Notre Dame has games scheduled against Kent State on Nov. 4-5 and Feb. 17-18. Schafer indicated that it would not be much of a problem adjusting his team's schedule.

ND volleyball gets back on track vs. Wildcats

By MOLLY MAHONEY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's volleyball team did its best to give Irish head coach Art Lambert a happy birthday last night and in the process, a heart attack as well.

Notre Dame and Northwestern had fans, and coaches, on edge as they engaged in a hard-fought see-saw battle last night, but it was the Irish who emerged victorious in four games, 12-15, 15-8, 15-13 and 15-10 to bring their record to 6-2.

"I always enjoy a win, whether it's on my birthday or not," said Lambert. "But this is a good win over a good Northwestern team that has not returned home until Oct. 8.

The victory marks the first time the Irish have bent, but not broken under the pressure of a talented opponent and kept their intensity constant.

"We played well in spots," said Lambert, "but the key to the win was committing less errors than they did. They folded their tent in the fourth (game)—something that has been our pattern in the past—and we took advantage of it."

The first game set the tone for the entire match, as the Irish and Wildcats scratched and clawed their way through long volleys and side outs to painstakingly score each point.

Neither team could maintain its momentum long enough to make a long scoring run, and errors crept into the game from getting any closer than a tie, which they did at 3-3, 7-7, 11-11 and 12-12 before succumbing to the Irish in the first game 15-12.

The Irish came out ready for game two behind the blocking of Waller and the powerful armwaving of Bennett and Wagner, who came into the match in the first game as a substitute for fellow sophomore Tracey Shelton.

Notre Dame led the entire game, steadily accumulating points behind a strong team effort that displayed the team's most fluid game of match en route to a 15-8 win.

Game three was not quite as easy. It was a game that seemed to have more side outs than actual winners. The Irish played never-say-die volleyball until the last point of the game.

A balanced attack that featured a flurry of kills from Bennett, Shea and Wagner and a strong blocking tandem of Mary Kay Waller and any number of players, including setter Julie Bremner (five blocks),

The Notre Dame men's soccer team continued its winning ways yesterday with a 2-1 victory over Bowling Green.

The Irish extended their season-long unbeaten string to 10 games (9-0-1) and crept into this week's national ISAA top twenty poll at number 20.

Against the Falcons (4-4-0), the Irish had a chance to get off to a quick start against the game on a penalty kick from John Guignon. The senior tri-captain wasn't stopped, but a minute later Notre Dame drew first blood by virtue of freshman Mitch Kern's unassisted goal.

Sophomore midfielder Steve LaVigne made it 2-0 off a feed from senior Randy Morris at 32:17.

The Irish defense made that lead stand although Bowling Green drew within one right before the end of the first half on a goal by Shawn Howe at 46:37. There was no scoring in a tightly-played second half.

Randy Morris spraints upfield earlier this year against Dayton. Morris picked up an assist in yesterday's tight, 2-1 Notre Dame victory over Bowling Green. Details are at left.

Although Notre Dame's win was not considered in this week's pollings, the Irish moved to number 13 in the Soccer America poll as well as cracking the ISAA national top twenty. The Irish are next in action Friday night at home against Detroit, a Midwestern Conference foe.

... Elsewhere, the Notre Dame women's soccer team recorded its fifth consecutive shutout last night, beating the University of Chicago, 2-0.

Goals by K. T. Sullivan and Mimi Suhba were the difference as keeper Kelly McCrystal was again sterling in the net. Notre Dame outshot Chicago 28-2 for the game.

The Irish, now 7-2, next face St. Mary's at Notre Dame on Friday afternoon, and will then not return home until Oct. 8.

Ho: a handy example of what's right in sports

One look at the Chicago Tribune headline told all that was wrong in sports.

The fastest man in the world used drugs.

One half-hour of conversation in Cavanaugh's parlor told all that was right in sports.

Here was a hard-working student and a hard-working placekicker who was polite, down-to-earth, intelligent and wanted to spend his life helping other people.

Oh yeah, and he was probably mentioned in every newspaper in the country on September 11 after kicking four field goals, the last of which put the Irish out of sight.

But for an average guy, he sure is stirring up a story on Ho in last week's issue. And appealing to Sports Illustrated which did a story on Ho in last week's issue. And appealing to the crowd.

And appealing to the crowd.

He didn't call the signals, snap the ball or try to make a long scoring run, and errors crept into the game from getting any closer than a tie, which they did at 3-3, 7-7, 11-11 and 12-12 before succumbing to the Irish in the first game 15-12.
