ND alumns struck by car on Friday

A Notre Dame alumna who was hit by a car early Friday morning after getting out of a cab in Chicago is in a coma in a Chicago hospital, according to Director of Campus Ministry Father Andre Leveille.

Patrick McManus, who graduated from the University in 1988, was struck about 1:45 a.m. after exiting a cab on the street side in downtown Chicago. He lapsed into a coma.

NASA limits public viewing audience of shuttle landing

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. - Navy Comander Robert Gibson guided the 67-ton shuttle to a touchdown at 3:35 p.m. PST on a hard-packed clay runway after a flight of 4 days, 9 hours, 5 minutes.

“One tire on the shuttle’s left landing gear had a slow leak, but NASA said it was not a concern, and it did not seem to affect the smoothness of the touchdown. Mission Control in Houston had lifted its curtain of secrecy the spacetip’s 17,400-mph speed by 2,283 mph and drop it out of orbit onto an hour-long fiery descent through the atmosphere. NASA and the Air Force permitted live television coverage of the landing, as it did for Friday’s launch from Cape Canaveral, Fla. Everything in between was blacked out, including the reported deployment of the satellite. It was only the seventh afternoon shuttle landing, the time apparently dictated by the orbit Atlantis followed in its classified mission that reportedly deployed a radar satellite to spy on the Soviet Union. NASA prefers morning landings at Edwards because winds tend to gather force later in the day. Because of the military secrecy, Tuesday’s landing was closed to public viewing from the observation site on this military base 80 miles north of Los Angeles. Only a few hundred journalists, NASA employees and invited guests were witnesses.

The flight was the 27th shuttle mission and the second since the 1986 Challenger explosion. It was the seventh astronauts and halted launchings for 32 months. It was the second proposal would switch the opening hours on weekends. Krebs said, "The whole Notre Dame family has been absolutely in a deep coma since. IN BRIEF

Kids are being unjustly deprived of Heat Miser

Speaking for myself, my friends, and, I believe, the vast majority of college students across the land, our lives in the month of December revolve around Christmas specials. This is unfortunate, in the fact that December also is the month of exams. These tend to disrupt one's viewing schedule. This obviously creates a problem of priorities.

It is really not fair or prudent of our Administration to schedule exams during Christmas special time. As altering the date of Christmas would be a bit difficult (especially in light of the Catholic nature of Notre Dame), it might be prudent of the Administration to consider re-scheduling final exams. I would like to suggest the formation of an ad-hoc task force to study the effects of this scheduling conflict.

This year, the season began on November 28, with the Christmas special of Christmas specials, "How the Grinch Stole Christmas." This Doctor Seuss classic has reached cult status on campuses across this great land. Each year, academic life slams to a halt for one half-hour as students celebrate the great mystery of how that mean ole Grinch tried to steal Christmas, knowing full well that he would meet the irresistible force of Cindy Lou Who, "who was no more than two." Indeed, one can almost cut the feeling of joy with a knife as the tremendous events laid out in the program caused the Grinch's heart to "grow three sizes that day."

There are very few of us who could not relate that tale of course. Indeed, as we watched it that night at The Observer, several staff members were able to rhyme along with the narrator for the vast majority of the program; sadly, I am not in the same class as those particular ones.

This proves an important point: we truly are a television generation. There is not a time in memory that Christmas rolled around without the appearance of "The Grinch," "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer," "Frosty the Snowman," "The Night Before Christmas," and the many others. Indeed, these programs are a harbinger of Christmas: without them, my entire annual schedule would be torn asunder.

These specials are a symbol that the Christmas season has begun, more than sales or Christmas cards ever will be. Christmas programs are across the country, the United States have in common, regardless of where they are from. They are a vital part of our culture.

Sadly, the television network executives do not see eye to eye with me on this issue.

Some mean old Scrooge at ABC, CBS or NBC has decided that two important elements of our lives are simply not important enough to be worth the network's time: "The Year Without a Santa Claus" and "Santa Claus Is Coming to Town."

What happened? Where did these two celuloid classics disappear to? An entire generation of youth is being deprived of Mr. Heat Miser and Mr. Cold Miser, of the Buergermeister Meisterbuerger and the Winter Warlock.

Two of the few stable elements of my child hood have been yanked out from under my feet. It is just plain not fair.

The logic behind this move by the networks escapes me. If any two programs could approach a 100-share of the television audience, these would be they.

So please—write your Congressman, your other elected representatives and, most importantly, the presidents of the three major networks, demanding that they restore these programs to their proper place: on the small screen. Don't let them ruin the lives of the youth of America.

Well, at least we've got "A Very Brady Christmas."

WASHINGTON: Consumption of alcohol by young people remains widespread and the young "continue to drink and drive with alarming frequency" despite laws in every state against youthful drinking, the National Commission Against Drunk Driving said Tuesday.

The commission called on parents to assume a greater responsibility in keeping alcohol away from their children, but also concluded that the industry's current advertising policies contribute to the drinking problem among youths.

"In the absence of alcohol industry action, legislation should be enacted to regulate alcohol beverage advertising."

The commission urged in a report on teen drinking. It said repeated testimony from teenagers during a series of public hearings showed a link between advertisements and the widespread acceptance that alcohol is a normal part of a social event.

"With near unanimity, the youths themselves declared that advertising encourages adolescents to drink," the commission said.

V. Addison, commission chairman, said at a news conference that the panel did not mean to suggest that government should force advertising changes immediately, but that such action might be necessary if the industry does not take action over the next few years.

Comment was being sought from advertising industry officials.

The report summarized the findings of the commission after five public hearings on alcohol problems among youths, particularly as they relate to drunken driving.

It said that "one paramount conclusion" is that despite grass-roots efforts against drunken driving, laws in every state against people under 21 years of age purchasing alcoholic beverages and numerous anti-drunk driving programs, "young people continue to drink and drive with alarming frequency."

As a result, young people "continue to be involved in alcohol-related crashes at disproportionately high rates," the commission said. "A young person under the legal drinking age remains nearly twice as likely to die in an alcohol-related crash as an adult over 21."

The report noted that between 1982 and 1987 the number of alcohol-related fatalities among people under 21 has declined by 21.8 percent, a figure somewhat influenced by the decline in the number of young drivers.

But, it continued, "drinking and driving continues to be the number one killer of teenagers." Last year the alcohol-related highway fatality rate was 16 per 100,000 for those under 21 years of age, compared with 11 per 100,000 for those 21 years or older, the report said.

Hazardous South Bend landfill subject of suit

Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. - A judge hearing a case against four landfill operators in South Bend said Tuesday so that he could visit the hazardous waste site.

The visit was "solely for the purposes of orienting myself" to maps and diagrams being used in the trial, U.S. District Judge Robert Miller said.

Testimony is scheduled to resume Wednesday.

The Justice Department filed suit against the managers of the 61-acre landfill in Fulton County for allegedly failing to comply with regulations.

The suit, filed on behalf of the Environmental Protection Agency in 1987, seeks to close the landfill within 180 days.

The suit also seeks fines of $25,000 a day retroactive to Nov. 8, 1985, the date on which the government alleges the illegal dumping of hazardous wastes began.

George Pendygraft, the attorney representing the landfill managers, says the hazardous materials buried in the landfill do not represent a danger.

"There is no evidence of contaminants in the monitoring wells that would present a public health threat," he said.

Joseph Boyle, an EPA hydrogeologist, testified that hazardous chemicals were discovered in groundwater samples tested by the agency.

Boyle said groundwater monitoring wells installed at the landfill were inadequate.

The landfill opened in 1972 and accepted only conventional solid wastes until 1978, when it began accepting hazardous wastes.

Under the federal Resource Conservation and Recovery Act, the landfill was granted a temporary hazardous waste permit and given until November 1985 to comply with regulations.

The government says a permanent permit was denied because the regulations allegedly were not followed.

The lawsuit named as defendants Environmental Waste Control Inc. of Indianapolis, the company managing the landfill, and site manager Steve Shambaugh. Also named is James Wilkins, the landfill's manager from whom the site was leased.

Nearly 100 indicted for 105 tons of cocaine, marijuana

Associated Press

MIAMI—More than 90 top U.S. drug midlevel men were indicted Tuesday based on evidence from a sting operation in which an undercover FBI company sold traffickers radios, navigational beacons and other high-tech equipment. Tapes and other evidence from the operation led to drug indictments in Miami and Tampa against 93 people.

About five tons of marijuana and some heroin also were confiscated, FBI Director William Sessions announced in Washington.

“We believe that this case, because of the positions and large numbers of those charged and arrested, will have a significant impact on the ability of these cartels to continue to import drugs into the United States and abroad,” the FBI director said.

By Tuesday afternoon about half of those charged were in custody in various cities around the country, including Los Angeles, Boston, Houston, Tampa and Miami, the FBI said.

The 17-month operation, nicknamed “Cat-Com” for Catch Communications, was built around a Hialeah, Fla., company called RA Communications & Computers Inc. set up by the FBI.

The company sold all types of communications and computer equipment, including cellular telephone services to its trusting clients, said Miami U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen.

“The traffickers were hiring undercover agents... to sweep their premises, unknown to them that the feds were checking to see whether or not the feds were bugging them,” Lehtinen said.

William Perry, head of the Miami FBI office, said RA Communications sold state-of-the-art equipment to the traffickers and soon was arranging communications to allow the traffickers to talk directly by high-band radio to their smuggling ships and their bases in Colombia.

The traffickers, whom Perry called “top-of-the-line” U.S. contacts for drug lords Pablo Escobar Gaviria, Jorge Luis Ochoa Vasquez and Jose Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha, soon were bashing their smuggling operations out of the Hialeah company, unaware that cameras and tape machines were recording their conversations.

After latest crash, B-52 bombers are grounded

Associated Press

MARQUETTE, Mich.—A B-52 bomber crashed on a runway and burst into flames during a training flight early Tuesday, injuring all eight crewmen and prompting the Strategic Air Command to ground its fleet of the aging planes.

The grounding of about 290 B-52s was ordered as a precaution, said Maj. Suzanne Siegal, a spokeswoman for SAC headquarters at Offutt Air Force Base in Omaha, Neb.

She said she anticipates the fleet will be back in the air in 24 hours. “We don’t lose many B-52s. It has been a super plane,” she said.

The B-52 broke into three parts about 1:15 a.m. EST during practice “touch-and-go” landings at K.I. Sawyer Air Force Base, said Sgt. Naomi Stieg, a spokeswoman at the SAC installation here. In a touch-and-go, the plane immediately takes off again rather than slowing down.

The practice landings followed a seven-hour training flight, officials said.

No weapons were aboard the plane, which is equipped to carry nuclear bombs.

The crew members crawled or were helped out of the front section of the broken aircraft and none suffered burns, Senior Airman Tim Sanders said.

Lt. Col. George Peck, a spokesman for SAC headquarters, said weather did not appear to be a factor in the crash. The National Weather Service said a nearby municipal airport reported conditions at 1 a.m. as clear with a temperature of 39 degrees.

The eight-engine B-52, which was deployed in the early 1960s, is the military’s biggest bomber with a wingspan of 186 feet and a maximum takeoff weight of 488,000 pounds. The last B-52 was commissioned in 1962.

Coed dorm system deserves a chance

It is time for a change. It is time for the University of Notre Dame to treat its students with more respect and less paternalism. It is time for the men and women of Notre Dame to be exposed to realistic living conditions, conditions which resemble life after graduation. It is time for campus housing to be vibrant, enlightening and satisfying. It is time for coeducational residence halls.

Michael Schadek

For the past three months I have been fortunate enough to experience coeducational housing in the London Program, and I can honestly say it has been one of the best college experiences I have known. Although it is difficult to express in words, the women with whom I have lived have contributed to my education to a degree that no course could ever match.

At the risk of sounding corny, I've gained new insight into what it means to be a man and, for that matter, what it means to be a woman. I have had in-depth discussions which have significantly altered my perceptions about the opposite sex. The point is that it was precisely because of the coeduc living arrangement that my experiences here have been more exciting and fulfilling.

It concerns me that for some reason the students on-campus cannot share the same benefits I have known. It concerns me that the University administration has not made any significant steps to rectify the existing situation. It concerns me that an enlightened and open discussion concerning such a significant issue has not been put forth.

Furthermore, it concerns me that many students who do desire coeducational residence halls feel that it is an impossibility because the administration will never allow it. This is our University, and, until we students begin to realize that we must become active in bringing about our desired changes, absolutely nothing will change.

It is time to take a stand—a rational and yet committed stand for an issue which affects every one of us. Together we can speak as a united voice to which the University of Notre Dame administration cannot turn a deaf ear. It is time to abandon the stereotypical Domer apathy and take part in shaping the future policy of our University and the lives of her students.

Michael A. Schadek is a junior in the London Program.

Students thanked for flood relief

Dear Editor:
I would like to offer a word of gratitude to the students in the name of the Holy Cross Priests, Brothers and Sisters in Bangladesh who were assisted by the recent flood relief collections. Collections at Hall Masses have helped and continue to assist those active in many types of social work around the globe, and it is particularly satisfying to see Notre Dame students assist the alumni in Bangladesh.

The word that I am receiving from letters indicates the initial response of the aid agencies was quite good and saved many lives. Students from Notre Dame College and our high schools were particularly helpful. The problem now is that many refugees from the rural areas whose crops have been wiped out by the flood are now coming to the cities looking for help. That is where your contributions are being used, to provide food for the hungry people. What may have seemed like a small gift to you, adds up, especially when it saves lives.

So thanks again for helping the needy in Bangladesh, and I hope you continue to remember other hungry people, especially over Christmas.

Mixed reviews greet the "new" SYRs

SARAH VOIGT
accent writer

The Observer / Jennifer O'Donald

Grace Hall students remembered:

Each dorm must return a completed SYR application to the Office of Student Affairs five days before the dance. Although similar to last year's forms, some key restrictions have been added this year. For example, 70 percent of the student residents must purchase tickets, no University funds buy alcohol for dorm use, and a minimum of $2 per person must be spent on food and non-alcoholic beverages. Finally, the changes have limited each dorm to one SYR per semester.

How have SYRs adapted to their latest changes? How has the social life changed as a result? After a semester of SYRs, dorm social commissioners have given mixed reports that both prove and disprove initial fear and doubts concerning the new alcohol policy.

One positive result of the limit on the number of SYRs per semester has been an increase in creative themes. Christina Reinhard, Pasquerilla West's social commissioner explains, "We tried to publicize our murder mystery theme in order to generate enthusiasm for the dance. We concentrated on overcoming any negativeism toward SYRs caused by the new alcohol policy. The hope was that if we had a creative theme and good decorations, people would circulate around the dorm and socialize." Pasquerilla also experimented with an unusual theme to generate enthusiasm. Dan Woodmansee explains, "Regression to childhood - remember the good old days, was our theme. It worked out well. We had Sesame St. decorations, child-reviews. Some dorms reported that since it forced people to attend that would not otherwise go, it unified the dorm and made the dance more fun. The largest women's dorms seem to have the easiest time reaching the minimum. For example, Pasquerilla West reached 85 percent and Farley had 80 percent.

On the other hand, the majority of the dorms found it difficult to sell the minimum number of tickets. The social commissioners at Mor-what is the verdict?

The Observer / Jennifer O'Donald

Carol Mahoney and Jim Lynn at Planner's SYR. Taking tickets they drank quickly in their closed rooms and were not visible in the halls. The dance floor was fairly empty until a big surge at the end of the night."

Chris Haig, SYR commissioner in Howard Hall, agrees, "People hurry to finish their drinks before they go to the dance floor or to another room. I feel that with this policy the Administration has brought drinking to where they can't see it, but they know it still exists."

Emily Naughton saw a few positive trends at Farley's SYR. She said, "More people stayed in their rooms than last year. But the doors stayed open so everyone was welcome to step in different rooms."

Pangborn's SYR seems to be the only one on campus that has not been changed much by the new alcohol policy. Dan Woodmansee explains, "We didn't use dorm money to buy alcohol last year either. We tried to keep the ticket price down so that sections would just buy their own alcohol."

Despite disturbing new drinking trends, often frustrating barriers to socializing, and difficult minimum quotas for ticket sales, most students still attend SYRs. Yet most social commissioners expressed dissatisfaction and frustration with the new restrictions. What is the future of SYRs? That question remains to be answered. For the present time, however, most dorms have adapted with reluctant creativity to the new alcohol policy.

"The way it (SYRs) used to be," Chris says, and finger-painting.

Lyons and Morrissey encouraged originality with cash awards for the best decorated section. Chris Cooney describes some of the results of the brainstorming for the Lyons Christmas SYR. "We filled stockings to give as door prizes, scheduled a visit with Santa, and used the big block of money we had for food to buy fancy Christmas foods." Not all new ideas, however, have been approved by the Office of Student Affairs. John McNamara of Morrissey explains, "Last year we had section skits at our Christmas SYR and we wanted to try something different. We tried to organize horse and carriage rides down by the lakes that would leave from Morrissey about every 15 minutes. We thought that it would get people away from drinking in their rooms for a while. After submitting a report on liability insurance and other loose ends Student Affairs shot us down. They said that our idea was "inappropriate for a hall function."

Injury brings Bird back home

Associated Press

TERRE HAUTE—Larry Bird, a rare right in southern Indiana this time of year, was dressed a little better and driving a better car, but people still recognized him as one of the guys. So says Max Gibson, a Terre Haute businessman and a partner with Bird in the Boston Connection, a horse thatBird had been recuperating from foot surgery.

Bird, however, is no longer the typical Hoosier. The Boston Connection is a 109-room shire where every thing from matchbook covers to book-wrappers carries pictures of the NBA superstar. Hotel patrons can eat in The Boston Garden restaurant, surrounded by Bird’s trophies, magazine covers and family photographs of him growing up in French Lick, 60 miles south.

NBA championship banners for the Celtics hang from the ceiling of the restaurant. Diners can find a few hooks from the actual center jump section of Springsville High School, where Bird’s career began.

Place mats contain outlines of hands, urging people to “compare your hands to Larry’s.” The best in the NBA.

Nearby, guests can order drinks and watch Celtics games on one of the hotel’s many screens in the Bird’s Nest lounge, which contains more memorabilia.

For the Christmas season, a color poster with Larry Bird in a Class suit has been set up in the lobby.

Occasionally during the past year, the 6-foot-9 Bird wandered into the hotel dining room to chat with guests.

“I am healthy now and sold CHEAP! If interested please call JIM at 1-276-3361, or C.B. at 4364. He is healthy he says CHEAP!”

Rangers get Franco in trade

Associated Press

ATLANTA - The Texas Rangers kept trading faces at baseball's winter meetings, getting Julio Franco from Cleveland on Tuesday, while the California Angels raised the already high stakes for free agents Bruce Hurst and Nolan Ryan.

Philadelphia and Montreal did business, exchanging pitchers Kevin Gross and Floyd Youmans, and more teams courted Atlanta about Dale Murphy.

But the Rangers, who had not made a trade at the winter meetings since 1983, continued to be the main attraction. This time, they sent Pete O'Brien, Oddibe McDowell and Jerry Browne to the Indians for Franco, who led all major league second basemen with a .303 average.

Franco, 27, has batted over .300 for three straight seasons. He hit a career high 16 home runs, drove in 54 runs and stole 25 bases. The Rangers pounced at second base last season, and Franco, who had been a stopgap in his entire career, made the transition well this year.

The Indians had long been weak at first base and lost this year's starter when Willie Upshaw agreed to a two-year contract in Japan. O'Brien, 30, batted .272 with 18 homers and 71 RBI and has been one of the American League's most consistent first basemen.

McDowell will be the Indians' leadoff hitter. He batted .247 and stole 31 bases, but slumped in the power department. Cleveland hopes McDowell can rebound and that Browne, a .229 hitter, can handle second base.

The Phillies admitted they took a chance in sending Gross, an All-Star pitcher last season, to Montreal for Youmans and reliever Jeff Parrett. Youmans has been plagued by personal problems and was suspended for 60 days this year by Commissioner Peter Ueberroth.

"Everybody knows he has had substance abuse problems. As of right now, he's fine. We think we're making a gamble here, but we think it will work out," Phillies general manager Lee Thomas said.

Youmans, 24, was 3.6 with a 3.21 earned run average in only 14 games. He throws hard and is 29-29 lifetime.

Parrett, 27, was 12-4 with six saves and a 2.69 ERA in his first full major league season. He was 8-9 in extra-inning games.

Gross, 27, finished 15-14 with a 3.60 ERA after a second-half slump. He ended 1987 poorly, too, when he was suspended for scuffling baseballs.

Murphy attracted more attention, with the New York Mets and San Diego intensifying their efforts to work a deal with Atlanta. Among the Mets who interest the Braves are Len Dykstra, Howard Johnson, Keith Miller and rookie pitcher David West.

There was a rumor that Boston offered Wade Boggs and Spike Owen to Montreal for a package to include Tim Wallach and Hubie Brooks, but nothing happened.

The action around Hurst and Ryan, however, was quite lively. The Indians made a $1.9 million offer to Ryan, the highest yet, and said they would match any offer Hurst gets. Hurst's price may be more than $5 million for three years.

"We will not be outbid by anyone," California general manager Mike Port said about Hurst.

Hurst was said to be leaning toward San Diego.

Masters matures
Becker on, off the court

As of right now, he's fine. We think we're making a gamble here, but we think it will work out," Phillies general manager Lee Thomas said.

Franco fell to Boris Becker in the finals of the season-ending Masters tennis tournament.

Irish ready for home opener

BY SCOTT BRUOTCAO
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women’s basketball team will square off against Marquette tonight in its season home opener at 7:30 at the Joyce ACC Arena.

The Irish (2-1) are coming off a third place finish at the Inviters Classic at Virginia on Dec. 3-5, in which they lost to investors Classic at Virginia on Dec. 2-3, in which they lost to Point guard Karen Robinson, for her performances in the first week of the season, was named MCC Player of the Week on Monday. Robinson is averaging 21.7 points per game, hitting four free throws in the last 1:10 of regulation to overcome a 73-69 deficit, sending the game into overtime.

The Turnersville, N.J. native also put Notre Dame out of reach in overtime by converting both chances in a one-and-one situation with :34 left, making the final score 85-79.

I don’t think we expected Karen to score as much as she has,” said second-year Irish coach Muffet McGraw. “She’s almost been carrying us scoring and even rebounding.”

Due to the fact that teams have been keying on 6-4 senior Heidi Bunek in their defense schemes, Robinson has assumed more of a scoring role than anyone has anticipated. In so doing, she has also assumed a role of leadership.

“ariously has stepped in to fill the void,” said Heidi Bunek in their defense schemes, Robinson has assumed more of a scoring role than anyone has anticipated. In so doing, she has also assumed a role of leadership.

“I anticipated Karen to score 10-12 points a game, but since none of the players have picked up the scoring slack she’s stepped in to fill the void,” said McGraw. “Her overall performance has given her confidence and made other players look to her which establishes her as a leader on the floor.”

Robinson takes over at point guard after Mary Gavin, Notre Dame’s career assist leader, graduated in 1986. Robinson is already 56th on the career list with 113.

“I was a point guard in high school and I think it’s my true position,” said Robinson. “It’s a challenge since I had a year off last year and it’s a lot of responsibility to control the offense. I have a lot to improve on, though, especially in turnaround.”

Tonight, Robinson and the Irish will face Marquette in a game in which McGraw wants to see her team play better defensively. Over the last two days, the team has been practicing only defense and hopes to improve its recently disappointing performance.

“I’m hoping we’ll play good defense because we haven’t played well defensively in any game,” said McGraw. “I think this is the point in the season where we will decide to play good defense.”

Marquette, which is averaging 72.5 points a game, returns four starters from last year and is likely to mix up its defenses to try to confuse the Irish offense. Offensively, they will be a challenge for the recently sagging Irish defense.

“Marquette looks to push the ball up the court,” said graduate assistant Sandy Bottem. “It’s a really aggressive team offensively, but its inside game is not as strong as ours.”

Sophomore point guard Karen Robinson has been a catalyst for the Notre Dame women’s basketball team in its first three games.

Notre Dame will look to get the ball more than to Karen, but if Marquette keys on her, Robinson may be called on to maintain an aggressive scoring attack.

“We’re looking to find the other three starters to contribute as well,” said McGraw. “Also, we’ll try to run and press and establish a good transition game, something we’re looking to improve on.”

“Joe Fredrick took it over when it counted at the end,” Irish coach Digger Phelps said. Fredrick shrugged off the praise, saying it was just his turn to be in the spotlight at the end.

“We knew we have a lot of weapons,” he said. “In the first game, it was LaPhonso Ellis and against Kentucky, Kevin Ellery. It just happened to be my turn. I was getting into the groove, and whenever I shot, I was confident it was going to go in.”

While Edwards was struggling, Fredrick had 11 points in helping the Irish to a 34-30 halftime lead. He made his case early, shooting five-of-eight with one three-pointer in the half.

But it was Fredrick’s play in the second half that keyed Notre Dame’s first win over Indiana since 1984.

When the Irish went to their slow-down offense, Fredrick was on control. Although it was not the uptempo style the Irish have been playing it, it was the one in control. Fredrick knew who should have the ball and made sure they got it.

“We like to spread it out,” Fredrick said. “We’ve got such good players in Tim (Singleton), Jamere and myself. That’s the fun part of our offense.”

The new uptempo offense opened up new opportunities for Fredrick and the other Irish guards. At times, it looked like some shots were forced, but that’s due to the new offense.

With the Irish outrebounding Indiana 43-37, Fredrick can take some chances from the perimeter. Notre Dame had a total of 20 offensive boards to offset any poor shot selection.

“We know we take some bad shots,” Fredrick said, “but our offense is so much looser this year.”

And Fredrick was definitely loose and relaxed after getting his first win over Indiana.

“We wanted to show them that we’re more than one team in Indiana,” he said.

Everett thankful for big win

Associated Press

ANAHEIM—Rams quarterback Jim Everett is thankful December is here, and not necessarily just because Christmas is coming.

There wasn’t much for Everett and his Los Angeles teammates to like about the past month—the Rams were zero-for-November.

"Thank heaven December’s here," Everett said after the Rams snapped a four-game losing streak with a 23-3 victory over the Chicago Bears Monday night.

Take away November and the Bears look like one of the NFL’s top teams. They were 7-2 heading into that month and thus are 8-6 outside November.

Their good start and the win over the Bears has enabled them to remain in the playoff picture despite their four-game losing skid.

The Rams need to win their last two games to have a realistic shot at a playoff berth.

The Rams’ slump seem to consist of an avalanche of small details going wrong—dropped passes, untimely penalties, missed blocking assignments.

"I don’t know what was going on," said Everett, who completed 17 of 31 throws for 251 yards and one touchdown in the win over the wounded Bears.

"I guess it’s just human nature. Our backs were against the wall and we figured we’d better do something."

"We were in a huge slump. Now there may be some light at the end of the tunnel."

Some of the little things that hadn’t been going right for the Rams seemed to go in their favor in their Monday night matchup against the Bears.

The Rams, for instance, got a helping hand in a roundabout way from the Green Bay Packers. The Bears lost quarterback Mike Tomczak and defensive end Richard Dent to injury in their 16-0 victory over the Packers a week ago Sunday.

The Bears were forced to go with a couple of second-year, untested players, quarterback Jim Harbaugh and defensive end Sean Smith. Harbaugh completed just 13 of 30 for 188 yards against the Rams in his first NFL start, and was intercepted twice. Smith had four tackles, but no quarterback sacks.

However, a review of the game videotape Tuesday revealed that two running plays were incorrectly credited as pass receptions by Sanders, said Steve Boda, the NCAA’s associate director of statistics.

The revision gives Sanders 332 yards rushing on 44 carries, the junior tailback’s fourth 300-yard plus game of the season.

He now has 2,638 yards.

While the NCAA routinely makes small statistical adjustments several days after games end, Boda said, a change of such a magnitude is unprecedented.

SEVEN, E. ... BINGO!"
The Irish opened up several leads during the game, but the game could not pull ahead by more than ten until the last one minute of the game, when the Hoosiers playing catch-up.

The rally was sparked by the Hoosiers' Jay Edwards. Held at both halfway through the game, Edwards canned a straightaway three-pointer with three ticks of the clock left to waste. Edwards then answered with another 38 seconds later. A LaVangie three-pointer one minute later narrowed the score to 66-66, but that’s when poise and confidence kicked in. Two quick 10 foot jumpers in the lane and two free throws by Fredrick, who finished with 23 points on 9-for-13 shooting, and can a three-pointer from 22 feet to give the Irish a four-point halftime advantage. The play and absence of a foul called by the officials had Irish irate and yelling at the officials until the intermission.

The Hoosiers would close the gap throughout the second half and put the most serious challenge to Notre Dame’s all-night lead with 4:14 remaining when Phelps called Notre Dame’s only timeout of the night.

Up by two after Edwards and Jones canned trifectas, the Irish had the cheers of the numerous Hoosier faithful who trekked north and made a significant amount of noise and color (red, of course) contribution.

But the Irish managed to keep the game close to the deafening ‘Hey’ and ‘We Are ND’ cheers, and played the game of his career,” said Lamberti. “None of them came in with club volleyball experience. They had no time-as-in-a lot of court time in the Joyce ACC Pit-has healed those wounds.

‘The four of us came in with a lot of physical talent,” recalled Shewman. “We were all good athletes, but not good volleyball players. Coach Lamerti has really worked with us to use that physical ability to improve our volleyball talent.’

Bennett, Waller, Shea and Shewman all saw starting action in their rookie campaign. What transpired—loss after aggravating loss—made the Irish hungry for success. But it seemed like a ‘maybe someday’ dream.

Welcome to someday.

The Notre Dame volleyball program has arrived with a bang in the past three years, 33 in 1986, 39 in 1987. But no bid. Until now.

‘The four seniors have carried this program on their backs,” said Lamberti. “None of them came in with club volleyball experience. They had no one to pattern themselves after. Since they came in it has been so much easier for other freshmen who can look at these four and say ‘That’s how it’s done.’ A picture is worth a thousand words.”

Either Waller, Shea or Bennett sit atop every Notre Dame career list except assists. Waller, the most intimidating non-stop-simmer in college athletics, stands first in career blocks and service aces. Shea, the epitome of consistency, holds the record for career digs. Bennett, who inspired the ‘Z’ corner with her numerous booming spikes, has the most kills and best hitting percentage. And in most categories they are ranked one, two and three.

What those three have contributed in numbers, Shewman has contributed in spirit and hustle. Only 5’2”, Shewman has overcome the height disadvantage to earn a starting job as a freshman and senior and be a sparkplug off the bench in the middle设置了。
