Soviets massacre Afghan civilians in 'major atrocity'

Associated Press

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan - Soviet guns wiped out Afghan villages and shelled a mountain tunnel, killing hundreds of civilians along the key highway carrying Red Army soldiers home from Afghanistan, Western diplomats said Thursday.

In Washington, meanwhile, Secretary of State James Baker ordered the closing of the U.S. Embassy in Kabul, the Afghan capital, because of turmoil from the Soviet troop withdrawal.

Western diplomats in Islamabad quoted Afghan sources and a witness as saying the Soviets and Afghan government troops committed a "major atrocity" on Monday in shelling both ends of the 16-mile Salang Tunnel. "The tunnel, part of the crucial Salang Highway that connects Kabul to the Soviet Union, cuts through the Hindu Kush mountains about 60 miles north of the capital."

The diplomats, who spoke on condition of anonymity, quoted a report from Kabul as saying: "After shelling the north and south ends of the Salang tunnel, Soviet and Afghan artillery obliterated all dwellings and villages south of the tunnel."

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles Redman said: "There are eyewitnesses who say no dwellings remain and hundreds of civilians were killed."

New bus will run directly from ND to University Park Mall

Transpo, the public bus service of South Bend, recently added a route that runs from the University of Notre Dame to University Park Mall.

The bus company initiated the new route Jan. 3 in response to numerous requests by Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students for convenient public transportation to the mall, according to Transpo officials.

The Route Seven Notre Dame/University Park Mall bus operates Monday through Friday on half hour intervals and also on an hourly basis every Saturday.

Stopping first at Notre Dame's Main Circle, the bus goes to the Hesburgh Library, stops at Ironwood and State Road 23 and arrives at the mall within fifteen minutes of its departures from the library. A one way fare costs 50 cents, and when Notre Dame is in session the inter-campus shuttle bus may be used to reach Saint Mary's College.

The new route is a combination of a downtown/mall route and one which went from campus to downtown, said Transpo marketing and planning manager Mary Beth McAdams.

Previously students had to take the bus to the downtown terminal and transfer to a bus going first to Miami Scottsdale Mall and then finally to University Park Mall.

The school bus which had transported students to the malls on weekends has not been in operation this school year and has been replaced by the Transpo route.

"By combining the routes we will cut operational costs while increasing our ridership," McAdams said.

Transpo hopes to attract Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students to the new route with its upcoming promotion, "Notre Dame Night at the Mall," she said.

On Feb. 9 Transpo will transport students to the mall, where some of the stores will give discounts to students, McAdams said.

Students will also be able to attend the theater at a special reduced price that night. "I'm hoping the students will try the bus and see how easy it is to get to the mall and will then continue to ride it," the manager said.

On weekdays the first mall bus leaves the library circle at 7:35 a.m. and the last one leaving the mall at 6:10 p.m.

On Saturdays the bus runs from 7:35 a.m. to 6:15 p.m. with the last one leaving the mall at 6:10 p.m.

Complete bus schedules can be found next to the Information Desk in the LaFortune Student Center.
IN BRIEF

Two Notre Dame students have been named the first Exxon Scholars in a new program by the Exxon Research and Engineering Co. to assist minority students in engineering. Cheryl Gomez, a mechanical engineering junior from Pueblo, Colo. and Bruce Savage, an aerospace engineering sophomore from Chicago, will each receive a $3,000 tuition award for the spring semester and will continue through graduation. Both students have been offered summer employment with Exxon, which has also given $5,000 to support the University's Minority Engineering Program. At Notre Dame, only one quarter of black Americans and half of Hispanics who enroll in engineering actually graduate in the field. The Minority Engineering Program is directed by Assistant Dean John Miles, provides individual counseling, tutoring, field trips, special workshops and visits by successful minority engineers. -The Observer

Andrew Hollander has been named assistant to Notre Dame's dean of administration. Hollander will maintain faculty data and supervise the microcomputer support of the office of the dean of administration and registrar. An entomologist, Hollander holds a doctorate from the University of Massachusetts, a master's degree from Oklahoma State University and a bachelor's degree from Iowa State University. He came to Notre Dame in 1983 as a post-doctoral fellow in the Department of Biological Sciences for research on the developing and reproductive physiology of mosquitoes. He maintained computer operations in the insect biochemistry lab. -The Observer

All-nighters: fantastic fun for everyone

All-nighters. They're an essential part of any college career. But, sad to say, some people have never experienced the fun of all-nighters, while others approach them with fear and loathing, wailing and gnashing their teeth at the thought of a dragged-up, sleepless night. This trepidation is totally unnecessary. With the proper information and tools, the all-nighter can be a fun, enlightening and enriching experience. To help the neophytes out there, I've prepared a little question-and-answer guide to the perfect all-nighter.

Which night should I pull an all-nighter?

Any night is a good night! Sleep is for the weak! Some of the best all-nighters are those that are totally unnecessary.

Besides, you might be surprised to discover that all-nighters actually relieve stress. Here's how. If you're planning on getting a few hours of sleep, you'll probably freak out because of the time pressure.

Once you decide to pull the all-nighter, however, vast vistas of time stretch out before you. If you're a professional procrastinator, it gives you a few more hours to blow off. Imagine the immense sense of satisfaction you get when you say, "Sure, it's 3 a.m. and I haven't started my paper on Existential Angst and the Possible Presidency of Dan Quayle, but that's OK! I still have plenty of time."

What tools do I need?

The main one is caffeine. By the way, it's about time to clear up some misconceptions about caffeine. Caffeine does not make you nervous or shaky. Caffeine turns you into an invisible studying Superman, a threatening juggler of your own worst enemy.

There are two favored methods of caffeine doping. Coffee and Mountain Dew. If you need a really quick jolt, try mixing four or five teaspoons of instant coffee grounds in a cup of boiling water instead of one. This tastes pretty vile, so add lots of sugar. If you can't drink it, pretend it's some new mixed drink at an OC party, and that people will really respect you. But, if you still don't take a nap.

How do you reach over 12,000 people daily?

We're a 5-page personal statement and resume are due in Chris Murphy's office by Friday, January 27 at 3 pm.
Washington - Senate committees, working Thursday to fill vacancies at President Bush's Cabinet table, examined one nominee's relationships to defense contractors, heard another defend Bush's "flexible freeze" budget plan and got suggestions from a third on how he will manage America's open spaces.

As the process unfolded, former Republican Sen. John Tower of Texas told the Senate Armed Services Committee that the $763,777 he made as a defense consultant over the past three years will not influence his actions if he is confirmed as Bush's secretary of defense.

Michael Boskin, selected to be Bush's chief economic adviser, told the Senate Banking Committee he believes spending cuts can be made in defense.

Tower, a former Armed Services Committee chairman, told that panel Congress should endorse the Lujan nomination and send it to the full Senate where a vote is expected next Wednesday.

Bush to travel to China soon

WASHINGTON - President Bush, who served as envoy to China during the rule of Mao Tse-Tung, will spend two days in Beijing next month after visiting Japan and may extend his travels to other countries, the White House said Thursday.

There was speculation South Korea also would be on his itinerary. "I don't have full dates of the trip yet in terms of starting and ending, but it's clearly in an expanding mode here," said White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

On his first overseas trip, Bush will travel to Japan for the Feb. 24 funeral of Emperor Hirohito. He will spend Feb. 25-26 in China on a working visit, which traditionally has less pomp and ceremony than a full-blown state visit.

Fitzwater left open the possibility Bush would confer in Tokyo with other foreign leaders. "Obviously when a president goes to these kinds of events there are opportunities for bilateral meetings and obviously there are a lot of countries who would like to have them, but we have to consider the time constraints involved in moving around - in this case moving on to China and protocol restraints associated with the funeral," Fitzwater said.

Borelli appointed to new post

By JIM LANG
News Staff

Mario Borelli, associate professor of mathematics at Notre Dame, was recently appointed to the newly created position of Director of Special Instructional Projects and Activities by Provost Timothy O'Meara. "The role," Borelli said, "entails seeking sources of outside funding for instructional activities which are aimed at improving the situation for groups which have previously been neglected," such as minorities, women, and the disabled.

The search for funding, however, will not just be limited to minority groups, Borelli said.

Others which will benefit from the new director's efforts are gifted and talented high school students, students working towards teacher certification, and teachers continuing their education, he said.

Borelli said that he would seek funding from federal and state agencies as well as private endowments and foundations, and even private firms.

Prior to this appointment, O'Meara said, individual teachers, groups, or students were forced to seek and apply for funding on their own.

Borelli was chosen for the role because of his "excellent track record" in seeking funding for the math department, said O'Meara.

Because of the broad and somewhat ambiguous duties of the new position, Borelli is officially on leave of absence from the university for a semester, and will teach only half of his regular load for the next three years.

"I hope to be able to do this work and still do at least a minimal amount of teaching," he said.
Ringo will become latest American children’s TV Starr

Associated Press

NEW YORK - The 8-year-old guitarist raises up a piece of paper and a pen and pleads, “Could you just write one more?”

“You just want to be a big cheese in school, don’t ya?” said Starr, cigarette dangling from his mouth, as he cheerfully signs another autobiography.

The girl, Nicole Leach, is no pint-size autograph hound, but one of Starr’s co-stars on “Shining Time Station,” a new PBS children’s series that premieres Saturday.

Starr, the rest of the cast and the producers had just completed a cross-country promotional tour for “Shining Time Station,” which has gotten more than the usual dollop of publicity due even the most charming of children’s programs — which “Shining Time Station” is — thanks to the presence of the former Beatle in the cast.

“We all know it’s the truth. It’s a lot easier if I’m on the tour, too, because people want to come and ask what you’ve been doing’ for the last 100 years. But somewhere in there they mention the show,” said Starr, chatting in a suite overlooking Central Park.

Starr is already a children’s star in England where he is heard but not seen as the narrator on the popular tot appeal “Thomas the Tank Engine and Friends,” a storybook segment included in “Shining Time Station.”

“I’m savaged by 5-year-old,” he says, laughing.

In the American show, Starr plays Mr. Conductor, a tiny special-effects figure who lives in the walls of the train station, popping up occasionally to entertain the children and help teach the simple lessons aimed at the program’s target audience, 4- to 7-year-olds.

“I’ve always enjoyed children,” Starr said. His own three children are grown and he has a 3-year-old granddaughter, Tatia.

“The songs in the old days, I sort of went to the kiddie crowd,” he said. “But to be magic and little, it was fabulous.”

Britt Allcroft, co-creator and producer of the show with Rick Siggelkow, said she talked Starr into narrating “Thomas the Tank Engine and Friends” in England after bearing him on the television in another room.

“I heard this voice being interviewed, and I thought, that’s the voice of Thomas’ storyteller,” she said.

She calls the show “storybook television — television programming that has sort of qualities more akin to those you’d find in children’s literature.”

Starr said he “can’t wait” to be as big a kiddie star in this country as he is in England. After all, his career has not exactly been booming.

Four injured in shooting at Washington school

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A gunman opened fire on a crowd of students outside a District of Columbia high school Thursday, wounding four, police said. The incident apparently erupted because of a dispute earlier in the day.

One woman said the man “knew where he wanted to shoot, and then he just started shooting at random.”

Police said the assailant seemed to have targeted the students involved.

There were no immediate arrests, but authorities were said to be searching for three men.

The shooting “seemed to be the result of an altercation that had taken place earlier in the day,” said Capt. Robert Gales of the District of Columbia police.

School system spokesman Charles Seigel said two “outsiders” entered the school about noon and were involved in a “verbal altercation” with students.

The students agreed to a fight after school, Seigel said, and were on their way to the site when the shootings occurred.

When asked who the vic tims knew the assailants, Gales said, “I think some of the victims know who was involved.”

The shootings at Wilson High School in affluent northwest Washington occurred about 2:30 p.m., moments after the students were dismissed for the day. None of the injuries was thought to be life-threatening, although police said at least one of the students was seriously injured.

A report on the study will be published Friday in the journal Science.

Both HTLV-I and the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) that causes AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, are retroviruses. Reddy said both of the viruses also appear to infect immune cells in the blood.

“Even though these two viruses are not causing the same disease, their basic mechanisms of infection are very, very similar. Something that works for HIV should also work for HTLV-I,” Reddy said.

Multiple sclerosis is a disease that attacks the brain and other parts of the central nervous system. It causes damage by destroying a tissue called myelin that covers the nerves.

There are about 250,000 MS patients in the United States.

Multiple sclerosis is a disease that attacks the brain and other parts of the central nervous system. It causes damage by destroying a tissue called myelin that covers the nerves.

The disease strikes most frequently between the ages of 20 and 40. In about a third of the patients, the disease is very mild, but for others, MS can cause great disability and crippling. Currently, there is no cure, though the disease frequently goes into remission.

Reddy and his associates at Wistar proved that there is HTLV-I in the blood cells of multiple sclerosis patients by performing extremely precise assays for the genetic pattern of the virus.

As a control, similar assays were performed on blood samples from 20 healthy persons, 10 from Sweden and 10 in Philadelphia.

Furry jury sniffs at Soviet sausage

Associated Press

MOSCOW - Angry meat-packers are suing a newspaper for an article that said their sausage was so bad even cats can't stomach it, but editors said they turned to a furry, four-legged jury that proved their point.

"Twenty-four sausage experts don't eat it all; five only eat high quality sausage or out of extreme hunger. Only one, the 2-month-old kitten Mura, you can say actually sits down to the sausage," the weekly Literaturnaya Gazeta said in announcing the feline findings.

Krokodil showed a line of shoppers standing outside a theater, not to buy tickets but to buy the sausage for sale in the theater's buffet.

The case also shows that the more aggressive style of reporting by the Soviet press under President Mikhail Gorbachev's encouragement of greater openness is likely to get it into occasional legal trouble. The Tass news agency said this week a court had dismissed a lawsuit against a film producer by a biochemical plant near Leningrad that objected to his documentary about pollution. Literaturnaya Gazeta reported about its dispute with the sausage manufacturers in an article in this week's edition titled, "May the Cats Judge Us." It gave no indication that the case had gone any further than the initial complaint.

It said that using the permission of state quality control officials to add protein additives, the factories were grinding up the skin and bones of cattle and throwing them into the sausage.

The dispute started with the literary weekly's story on June 15 titled "The Cat Doesn't Know ... " and was brought up recently in the Dzerzhinsky regional people's court.

In a complaint signed by Yuri Luzhkov, chairman of the Moscow agroindustrial complex, officials demanded a retraction of the newspaper's report that producers were breaking the law by putting protein additives in the sausage, known in Russian as "kolbasa."

Because of a shortage of meat in many Soviet stores, finding good quality sausage has become a fixation for many people. A cartoon in an October edition of the satire magazine Muraz, you can say actually sits down to the sausage, "Twenty-four sausage experts don't eat it all; five only eat high quality sausage or out of extreme hunger. Only one, the 2-month-old kitten Mura, you can say actually sits down to the sausage," the weekly Literaturnaya Gazeta said in announcing the feline findings.

Bundy gives bodies' locations on tape

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. - Serial killer Ted Bundy, in a tape recording made 45 minutes before his execution and released by Florida's governor on Thursday, disclosed where he left the bodies of two victims in Colorado and Utah.

Bundy's final confession came in a five-minute conversation with Florida State Prison Warden Thomas Barton at 6:15 a.m. Tuesday, Jon Peck, spokesman for Gov. Bob Martinez, said The Associated Press.

Although he didn't know the identity of his Utah victim, Bundy said he believed the Colorado victim was Denise Oliverson, 24, last seen riding her bicycle in April 1975 near her Grand Junction home.

Using a map, Bundy gave directions to the sites where he left his victims. His memory of the Utah victim was detailed, telling investigators to look for a dirt road between Price and Green River, Utah.

"About 200 yards in on the dirt road . . . and to the left, maybe 50 yards, there's the remains of a young woman who disappeared from Brigham Young University in June of 1975," Bundy said.

And that's as close as I can get it. . . with the map and with what we have here," said Bundy, who said he did not know the name of his victim.

Bundy had been suspected in the death of Susan Curtis, 15, who was attending a youth conference at Brigham Young University when she disappeared in June 1975, according to The Salt Lake Tribune.

Bundy, 42, also directed another confession to Colorado detectives about the killing of Oliverson.

"I believe the date was in April 1975," Bundy said. "The young woman's body would have been placed in the Colorado River five miles west of Grand Junction. It was not buried."

"That's all the ones that I can help you with," Bundy said. "The ones that I know about. No missing ones outstanding that we haven't talked about."

Barton then continued with more queries from investigators in several other areas where Bundy was suspected in killing young women.

"Ted, I have some inquiries from Illinois and New Jersey," said Barton.

A dispatch from Kabul received by one Western embassy quoted reports of witnesses seeing "Soviet tanks rolling over dead bodies of victims" along the highway, which runs for 250 miles between Kabul and the Soviet border.

It said the report of all houses being destroyed came from three separate sources, including a diplomat who defends the Afghan government.

Afghan media and military officers had reported 377 guerrillas were killed Tuesday along the Salang Highway, where the insurgents have attacked many food and fuel convoys trying to reach Kabul.

Heavy snows also have blocked parts of the road, and Kabul has suffered severe food and fuel shortages as the end of the Soviet military withdrawal approaches.

Curler craze

BISMARCK, N.D. - Women whose beauty salons have been barred from using traditional brush curlers are making a hair-raising noise in the state Legislature, which is considering a bill to lift the ban.

"This was the one thing we found during our campaign that people were really opposed to," said Rep. Wilbur Vander Vorst.

The state Board of Cosmetology issued its edict banning brush curlers last July. The board contended the curlers, which are rather like little round hairbrushes without handles, are unsanitary because hair tends to stick in the bristles.

But many women prefer them.

Rep. Kathi Gilmore said the board should have sanctioned beauty parlors whose brush rollers were found to have stray hairs on them, rather than banning a vital tool of the trade. Gilmore, who is sponsoring legislation to lift the prohibition, testified at a state House committee hearing Wednesday.
A Valuable Summer Experience

For most people, summer vacation brings to mind the beach, baseball games, and a boring job at the mall. Last summer, however, my mind was on soup kitchens, underprivileged preschoolers and migrant worker families. I had never even considered visiting Grand Rapids, Michigan, but a week after I returned home from school, I found myself doing off to this unknown city to spend two months of my break on a Summer Service Project.

Audrey George

My project turned out to be a little different from the norm. Most students remain at one site for the entire eight weeks. My project was more like the extended dance mix version of an Urban Plunge, however, since it involved a number of different sites. My project sites included a Head Start program, a soup kitchen, migrant worker camps, and a public elementary school and church which both worked to meet the needs of the Hispanic and migrant families living in Grand Rapids.

I spent two or three weeks at each of the sites, working either full or overlapping half days at each. My tasks were as varied as my project sites. I worked as a teacher aide at Head Start, helped older Hispanic children with their English at the elementary school, and taught a Bible School class for the kids. I also visited the different migrant grant camps surrounding the city and worked as a server and kitchen worker at the soup kitchen.

As one can probably imagine, I had a lot of different experiences and learned so many different things throughout the course of my eight week project. I was able to see how various service programs were run and learn what made them work. Further, by interacting with both the helpers and the helped in the different programs, I was able to learn about the various roles the workers were participating in these service programs and to see just what those being served got out of the programs as well.

The most important lesson that I learned, though, was taught to me by the children I worked with at Head Start. These were children who just wanted to know that they were loved. Many of them did not receive much individual attention at home, and it was amazing to see how much just a little extra outside interest in their lives really meant to them. Nathan, for example, usually just needed a hug and a smile to keep him going. Jermaine and Elaine, again, but this time to tell someone about the newest excitement in their lives, and Ryan just wanted to be doing a good job. These little perks may not seem as if they were all that important with anyone other than a small child, but as I was to find out, this is far from the truth.

I was going through one of those days. Disaster after disaster seemed to be occurring—everything from two of the boys getting into a fight to one of the girls wetting her pants in the middle of a large group. I was feeling incredibly overwhelmed and upset over all that was happening until I looked up and saw Christopher, a boy I had grown very close to, with a big, warm smile on his face. As simple and innocent as it may seem, that smile changed my entire attitude. It reminded me, first of all, that someone really cared about me and would be there for support, and, secondly, that the rest of these kids were counting on me to be there for them and to help perk up their day.

I cannot explain in words the effect that one little boy with a big heart had on me, but the thought of him still puts a huge smile on my face, and I know that I will never forget him or the lesson I learned from him. Though our society often times overemphasizes what is possible and underemphasizes what is impossible, Chris and the rest of the children taught me that I cannot let myself get discouraged because every little bit really does count.

If you are looking for a different way to spend part of your summer vacation, consider doing your own Summer Service Project. Applications are available at the Center for Social Concerns and are due Feb. 1. Feel free to call the Center if you have any questions.

Audrey George is a junior majoring in psychology.

Court to review abortion issue

Dear Editor:

America has the opportunity to take a big step toward affirming the belief that human life is sacred. The United States Supreme Court has agreed to hear Webster v. Reproductive Health Services. With this case the court can set aside Roe v. Abortion

Roe was decided in 1973, when abortion on demand was decriminalized in the United States. More than 23 million babies have been killed in hospitals and abortion clinics; that is, one abortion every 48 hours to cities across the country. Miami and New York were the sites we visited. Through the Urban Plunge we were brought face to face with the social conditions prevalent in metropolitan areas, from the refugees in one of the detention centers to the homeless in the Bowery of Manhattan. We have become more aware of poverty and injustice; just last week at Notre Dame, many questions arise. How can we coordinate our experiences with the life we lead at this University? What are our opportunities for action? As one way to further pursue these questions, we would like to recommend the workshop "Values in Action" being held at the Center for Social Concerns this weekend, sponsored by the Community for the Lay Apostolate (CILA). On Friday night from 6 to 8:30 p.m., the co-founder of Urban Plunge, Kathy Osberger, will be speaking. She will share her experiences working in Chile and Peru, and reflect with us on the importance of putting our values into action. On Sunday, Jan. 1, Father Michael Himes will be speaking at 10 a.m. on the importance of putting our values into action. senior Duane DiFranco certainly shone as an experienced and talented actor. Playing Sir Lawrence Wargraves in an air of dignity and conceit, DiFranco led the Players through the fun and frightening play. The most impressive aspect of "Ten Little Indians" was that it actually sustained an element of surprise at its conclusion. A close observer could not fully predict the lunatic at hand, and those who relied on Christie's original ending were equally as surprised due to a change in the script. As a storm raged outside and only three scared guests remained, the exciting climax unfolded. Scream, shots, and the timely ringing of the Sacred Heart bells all added to make an unexpected and twisted ending to a well-performed play.

Good fortune awaits you at Hunan

All right, so it's a converted McDonald's. The food here will make you wish that more McDonald's would close.

The place is the Hunan Restaurant, located at 2620 Lincoln Way West. It looks well, like a McDonald's with curtains. But the inside is in typical Chinese restaurant decor, with red curtains, paper lanterns, and a Chinese zodiacal calendar on the placemat. The seats are plastic-covered, for some obscure reason, but the atmosphere is otherwise not too obnoxious.

The menu items range from $10 for a Hong Kong steak to $4.55 for egg foo young, with egg rolls ($3.95) and other appetizers extra. Rice, tea, fortune cookies, and egg drop soup apparently come with the meal, since we got them without ordering them and weren't charged for them. Most of the dishes are in the $6 to $7 range.

The appetizer list had all the usual standbys, with egg rolls, fried shrimp, and the ever-popular combination platters. We tried the eggrolls and the pot stickers, and were pleasantly surprised. The potstickers were correctly prepared and the sauce was a good complement, although a sugary substance had crystallized in it by the time we were finished. The aforementioned free egg drop soup was a bit bland, but the biggest disappointment were the condiments, with a chunky and too-sour sweet and sour sauce and a spicy but tasteless mustard.

The main course menu is predominantly Hunan and Szechuan, although dishes from other regions occasionally make an appearance. We were tempted to try the dinner for two, with two main courses, pork fried rice, and many appetizers for $15.95. The Kun-Pao Shrimp we ordered instead, however, was no disappointment. The shrimp in the dish were large and tasty, spiced up by an assortment of vegetables and a peanut sauce that was mild for Szechwan but adequate for Midwest spice tastes. We also sampled the beef fried rice, and found it to be fairly flavorful even without soy sauce.

Service was courteous, our order was not mixed up, and courses were brought out in the correct order, which puts the Hunan above most other Chinese restaurants I've been to in the area. However, we had to wait a little for our water glasses to be refilled (a pet peeve of mine) and a lot for our check. Oh well, you can't have everything. They were nice about giving us more fortune cookies when my guest wolfed both of them down the first time. Why he did this, I don't know, since they were too thick and too well done.

We were at the Hunan for dinner but did notice their lunch special, which offered a choice of several dishes, soup and an egg roll for $3.50. Looked like a good deal to us. We would go back for dinner as well, simply because the food is the best of South Bend's admittedly limited Chinese food offerings.

To get there, just take Ironwood Drive south until you hit Lincolnway, then turn right and look on the right. They're open 7 days a week from 11:00 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Weekends tend to be crowded, but otherwise don't worry about getting a table. Trust me, it's worth the trip. It's not New York Chinatown, but it's the best you'll find around here.

Walsh resigns as 49er coach

Defensive coordinator Seifert gets nod from DeBartolo

Associated Press

MONTEREY, Calif. — Bill Walsh went out a winner after resigning as coach of the San Francisco 49ers and joined Vince Lombardi at the top of the front of the line. He later returned as head coach of the Washington Redskins.

In the first season of the 49ers, the stuffing 49ers and their most recent coaching title, Walsh led the 49ers to their third Super Bowl championship of the 1980s last Sunday, beating the Cincinnati Bengals 20-16.

Lombardi led Green Bay to victories in the last two Super Bowls (1966-1967) and then retired to become the front of the line. He later returned as head coach of the Washington Redskins.

Relations between Walsh and DeBartolo have frequently been frosty. Last year, when the 49ers lost to Minnesota in the first round of the playoffs after compiling the league's best regular-season record, Walsh was considered a candidate for team president title.

But DeBartolo denied that there was a serious rift between the two. Earlier this month, he told reporters, 'That's the furthest thing from the truth that I could imagine. Bill and I are friends, good friends.' Walsh, who held the 49ers' coaching position longer than anyone else and is only the fourth coach with a winning record, has strongly endorsed DeBartolo, a 49-year-old San Francisco native who has been a 49ers' defensive aide since 1986 and before that assisted Walsh at Stanford.

Walsh, who ended his career with an overall record of 102-63-1, including playoff games, joined the 49ers in 1979 after two years as head coach at Stanford, where he compiled a 17-3 record and won bowls at the end of both seasons.

Durso goes for record; Irish host Catholics

By DAVE McMATHON
Sports Writer

An influx of Catholic universities will invade the Joyce Athletic Center at 7 p.m. Sunday as the Irish wrestling team hosts the National Catholic Tournament.

"Our goal is to put ten wrestlers in the finals," said McCann. "We're better balanced than we were last year and I think we can do it." The field of teams, including Marquette, Dayton, John Carroll, Manhattan, Sienna Heights, and LaSalle, should provide the Irish with a break from a schedule that has been one of the strongest nationwide.

"The schedule has been intense throughout the season, so we're using this as a break," said McCann. "But each team has a few wrestlers who can get to the finals." John Carroll, highly ranked in Division III, will present the Irish with the most problems. Record breaking almost surely will occur when senior co-captain Jerry Durso takes the floor for his second match. Durso, a starter from beginning to end of his four years at Notre Dame, needs two more wins to break the record of most wins in a career, which now stands at 118.

"Numbers aren't really important to me," said Durso, ranked seventh in the nation. "I stayed healthy for four years and the wins just came along." Durso credits his success to both players and coaches of a program that has gained ground over the last few years.

"The new coaches were here during my freshman year and they started what has become a stable program. We also have some really good guys to work out with and that helps everyone," said Durso.

"My greatest goal is to become a National Champion or All-American. I'd like to peak by undefeated Morrissey. They will face their greatest challenge against the strong off campus Invincibles. Second place in the ACC league is held by Carroll. Tough play by Bob Kloska and Joe Meyer has gained a 3-1 record for Carroll, with its only loss being a five point defeat at the hands of the talented Morrissey squad.

Irish hockey battles Canisius in weekend series

By FRANK PASTOR
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame hockey team hopes to continue "doing the little things right" this weekend when it hosts Canisius in a two-game series at the Joyce ACC.

Starting times for the Friday and Saturday games will be 7:30 p.m.

The Irish (7-21-2) have won three of their last four games, including last Saturday's 4-2 victory over Lake Forest. According to Coach Ric Schafer, solid play away from the puck has been the key to Notre Dame's recent string of victories.

"We've been paying particular attention to the little things that make a difference," said Schafer. "Checking somebody away from the play, keeping them tied up so they can't break in or create an open shot."

"It's the plays away from the puck that win hockey games. We payed a little more attention to that last Saturday night, and it paid dividends for us," Schafer added.

Another factor that has contributed to Notre Dame's improved play is its increased productivity in the scoring department.

Right wing Tim Kuehl, who leads the Irish with 16 goals this season, has scored seven goals in his last four games. Left wing Matt Hanzal, Notre Dame's second-leading scorer with 15 goals, has netted eight goals in his last eight games.

"We scored more goals than we usually do," said Schafer.

"That helped the cause—to be up and playing with confidence. It would be nice to jump out to a lead in both games this weekend and then carry on from there.

Canisius (10-6-1) is led by left wing Mike Sisti, who paces the team with 16 goals and 32 points. Right wing Dave Yablecki (8-13-23) and defenceman Craig Jantz (6-13-19) also play prominent roles for the Ice Griffs. Goalie Scott Diebold has posted a 9-5-1 record in 15 games this season, while giving up an average of 3.5 goals per game.

"We had two good games with them last year," said Schafer, referring to Notre Dame's 5-4 and 7-4 victories at Canisius. "They're a Division I hockey team as we are, but I don't think they have many scholarships, as we don't."

"I think we've gonna have two good games this weekend. All we have to do is keep playing the way we did last Saturday night."

Notre Dame might have to play without the services of right-wing Mark McClew this weekend. McClew has spent most of the week in the infirmary and is listed as questionable for the weekend series.

Women's tennis battles Minnesota

By CHRIS COONEY
Sports Writer

Two of the best women's tennis teams in the region will face off this Saturday when No. 4 Notre Dame travels to Milwaukee, Wis. to confront No. 5 Minnesota. The Gophers are currently ranked fourth in the Big Ten.

"We're going to have to give it our best shot," said Irish head coach Michele Gelfman. "Our top players are just above theirs so the matches should be excellent."

One such battle will occur when Notre Dame's No. 1 player, CeCe Cahill, meets Minnesota's Annie Gordie. Cahill is ranked fifth in the region while Gordie occupies the eighth position.

The two have never played before and because they have such different styles, the outcome cannot be easily predicted.

"CeCe is a baseliner, consistent, with finesse and a great lob," said Gelfman. "Gordie, on the other hand, is a serve-and-volleyer. She's not afraid to approach the net and throw down a sound midcourt game. They're both very strong; they've got great opposing techniques, so it's going to be a match for sure."

In doubles, the top Irish combination of Cahill and Tracy Barton will take on Minnesota's Gordie and Natalie Illig.

Notre Dame will be without No.4 singles player Kristy David this weekend. The Irish will be without their best competitiors when they face the Gophers, who are ranked sixth in the region and have won four straight.

"I don't expect any problems with Kristy David," said Gelfman. "Their best competitor will play Cahill and CeCe's heaviest in doubles this weekend."

The weekend matches are Notre Dame's first of the regular season. The Irish hope to establish a winning pace right from the start. The team did not practice over winter vacation; however, the women did play on their own.

"Most of the girls played in tournaments and stuck to their lifting programs," said Gelfman. "Their break from school was not a break from tennis for them, so they are still on top of their games."

Saturday will definitely not be just another stroll in the park for the Notre Dame men's track team when it travels to Madison, Wis., to take on Big Ten powerhouse Wisconsin and Iowa State.

But the Irish have momentum after beating Loyola last week to claim the Midwestern Collegiate Conference title and are ready to take on Wisconsin—defending national cross country champion—and home turf, as well as Iowa State, which finished the cross country season ranked sixth.

Notre Dame too, has its share of polished distance runners, as it's runners finished ninth in the nation, so the distance races should be the highlight of the tri-meet.

"All three teams are strong in that area," said Irish assistant coach Tim Connelly. "We have (seniors) Dan Garrett and Ron Markelich, who both earned All-American honors during cross country, and guys like (sophomore) Ryan Cahill in the mile, so I think we'll run well." But with tight races expected in the distance races, the sprints and field events cannot be overlooked. "The distance races will be outstanding," continued Connelly, "but we have good sprinters, throwers and jumpers too, who are training very hard so we're confident, going into this weekend.

Junior co-captain Yan Seary, who shares his captain's duties with Markelich, will try to repeat his performance against Loyola in which he tallied two first place finishes with 48.03 in the 400-meter dash and a 23.37 in the 200-meter dash.

Seary, who qualified for the ICAs in both events, will be joined in the sprinting corps by sophomore Robert Harris and a freshman speedster better known for his rocket like speed on the football field than on the track-Raghih Taima.

The Irish will also be looking their field events to help rack up points tomorrow, especially sophomore John Cole who took first place and qualified for the ICAs in the high jump with a leap of 6-10.

"I'm really excited about ICAs," said Cole, "but I still want to jump 7-0 to make NCAAs. This weekend should help me do that too, because of the great competition, especially from guys like Bruce Reynolds from Wisconsin." Fellow sophomores Jeff Smith, who won the long jump with a leap of 23.9 1/2 and finished fourth in the triple jump and Jim Varga, who won the 55-meter high hurdles with a time of 7.81 will need to turn in another strong performance.

Junior Chris Bush and freshman Marc deManigold brought home wins against Loyola and will try tally another victory Saturday against Wisconsin and Iowa State.

"We're not looking past this weekend," said Cole, "but we consider it more important right now to use the meet as a preparation for the bigger meets down the road rather than for the sake of a victory. It will be a good chance to mark our progress and try to get as many people qualified for future meets."

SPORTS BRIEFS

The ND swim teams won dual meets Thursday at Cleveland State. The men's team (6-2) defeated the Vikings 156-85 to win its fourth consecutive dual meet. The women's team (4-5) snapped a three-meet losing streak with its 191-150 victory. Both teams face St. Bonaventure in an away meet Saturday. -The Observer

The South Bend Mini-Mites will be playing between periods of the Notre Dame hockey team's series with Canisius this Friday and Saturday. Both Irish games start at 7:30 p.m. at the Joyce ACC, and the Mini-Mites will take the ice during the first-period intermissions on both nights. -The Observer

For all you sports fans out there who hate pre-dawn jogging and 9-05 physical education classes, do not despair: the Late Night Olympics have finally arrived!

The third annual Late Night Olympics will be held tonight from 9 p.m. to 4 a.m. in the JACC.

All 26 Notre Dame and St. Mary's halls are entered in the Olympics and will participate in events ranging from inner-tube water polo to broomball to nert football.

Each dorm will be grouped with two or three other dorms to make up each team. Teams will score points not only for winning events, but also for the number of games they participate in, and for involvement in the Not-Quite-Olympic games, such as the celebrity dunking booth. The dunking booth will feature many Notre Dame celebrities, including football players Tony Rice, George Williams and Frank Stanis and the Notre Dame leprechaun.

All the events will be run simultaneously, and the game length and format for each tournament will be determined by the number of entries in each event.

Spectators are also welcome and the charge for admission will be $30 cents. The public will be allowed to take part in several events, such as the dunk tank, and there will be open skating on the ice risk after 10:30 P.M. A concession stand will also be open, and commemorative t-shirts will be sold.

The admission cost, together with the $100.00 entry fee donated by each team, will go toward the grand prize for the winning team and also to benefit the St. Joseph County Special Olympics.

does not mean less of a challenge for the Irish.

"Their record this year is no indication of how well they're able to play in a game," Phelps said. "Knowing how good a coach John Chaney is, and knowing how good Vreeswyk and Macon are as players, they'll shoot the ball as well as anybody we play.

"They'll play smart defense, that match-up zone which they've done for years. I think we'll have to play with a lot of concentration. We have to know where the shooters are as well as where the gaps are.

"Temple looks for the deep jump shot frequently, hitting 110 of 277 three point tries this season, led by Macon (26-of-68) and Vreeswyk (47-of-112). Other starters for the Owls are 6-6 forward Ernest Pollard, 6-7 freshman forward Milik Johnson, and 6-11 center Diane Causwell, who leads the team with 9.1 rebounds per game.

Notre Dame may be without the services of junior co-captain Jamere Jackson, who hyperextended his knee in a collision with teammate LaPhonso Ellis against Rutgers Tuesday night. Jackson did not practice Thursday and his status is day-to-day. Without him, the Irish will look to two freshman guards from Texas, Elmer Bennett and Daimon Sweet.

"If (Jackson) doesn't go, we've got to go with Elmer or Daimon," Phelps said. "We'll see what happens. The Texas Express is ready to go.

"We're getting our depth to play with confidence. I think that's starting to show. The other night when Jamere got hurt, Sweet came off the bench and scored 15. We want to get eight or nine guys playing in that rhythm we want to play," Sophomore forward Kevin Ellery, who has missed action because of an outstanding grade, was still in limbo Thursday, with no decision yet. Although over 1000 competitors participated last year, an even greater turnout is expected this year.

"Last year we had to compete with a lot of other teams and we're expecting a lot more people this year – it should be a great party," Assistant NVA director Sally Derengaski agreed.

"We're expecting a bigger turnout this year. Team entries for every sport but one have gone up – it's very encouraging. We're hoping for 1000 people to participate and to raise over $2000 for the St. Joseph's County Special Olympics."

clock buzzer. Further, the Irish inside strength took over, as Nowlin and sophomore Krissi Davis each scored nine in the half.

"We started out well," said McGraw. "But then we just seemed to get lethargic. That one spurt was impressive.

Simply, Xavier had trouble with the athleticism of the Irish team, and O’Connor’s quickness on the press, Nowlin’s strength and Nowlin’s strength and Davis’ quick hands (five steals) and Comalita Haysbert’s speed on the break combined to run the Lady Musketeers (6-11) back to Ohio.

Notre Dame, now 11-5 on the season and a perfect 5-0 in the MCC, will host Dayton in Saturday at 2:00 p.m. in another MCC contest.

Irish freshman responds with 15 points against Rutgers

Notre Dame basketball fans knew what they were losing when Jamere Jackson, one of their team’s most consistent players, hyperextended his knee Tuesday night against Rutgers.

But they probably had no idea what they were getting in return.

Daimon Sweet, a 6-5 freshman from Beaumont, Tex., who had scored a total of 22 points in Notre Dame’s first 11 games, replaced Jackson and scored 15 points in his 31 minutes on the floor. Sweet’s performance helped turn what had been a close game into an 85-63 Notre Dame runaway.

"Daimon Sweet played his best game as far as playing time and quality playing time," said Irish guard and co-captain Joe McCaffrey. "He did some good things that don’t show up in the box score. When Jamere got hurt, Sweet made a lot of things happen for us.

While Sweet’s performance surprised many observers who had not seen him on the court yet for an extended period of time, it did not catch any of his teammates off guard.

"He’s been playing like that all year in practice," said Irish guard and co-captain Joe Fredrick. "It’s just a matter of confidence. He played well, and we’ll need him for the big games down the stretch."

Sweet, who is seeing playing time at both guard and forward in Notre Dame’s starting five, is emerging as a major factor coming off the Irish bench at about the same time as classmate and fellow Texan Elmer Bennett.

"I think Sweet and Bennett are getting more confidence as the season goes on," said Phelps. "As freshmen, I think they’re doing an outstanding job to add to the backcourt."

The two teammates, who both come from the Houston area, are not exactly strangers before arriving at Notre Dame.

Bennett, who led the state of Texas in scoring during his junior and senior seasons at Houston Bellaire High, met Sweet at the BCI (Basketball Congress International) All-Star Camp after both players completed their junior years in high school. That started a friendship between the two players both on and off the court.

"We’d been playing together on national teams, traveling together and playing with the Greater Houston all-star team," said Sweet. "He (Bennett) was the main influence on my decision to come here."

Sweet almost went elsewhere for college basketball without giving Notre Dame a second look. He had verbally committed to Southern Methodist and was waiting for his SAT scores to arrive when he decided to start looking at some other schools.

About that time, the star of Beaumont Central High received a phone call from a friend in Houston.

"Notre Dame really wasn’t interested in me at first," said Sweet. "Elmer called me one night and said, ‘Guess what, Notre Dame’s interested in you.’ Coach (John) Shumate said he was going to give me a call this week.’"

"He (Shumate) called, and I was overwhelmed by the fact he did call," Sweet continued. "We arranged a visit to come to the Notre Dame campus I came up one weekend, and I had a pretty nice time. I believe Fr. Malloy was here. I met him, Prof. DeCicco and a couple of other influential people. When I returned home, I decided to attend Notre Dame.

Shumate, the Irish assistant coach last year who recruited Notre Dame’s talented five-player freshman class, now is the new head coach at Southern Methodist. Ironically, Sweet’s recent progress dates back to last week’s 67-45 win over the school he almost attended and the coach who lured him away.

"It was an emotional game, but I tried not to let it affect me," said Sweet. "I try to put those things aside when I’m playing. If you have a lot of things on your mind while you’re playing and worry about anything besides basketball, it tends to mess you up."

Since that time, Sweet has scored four points in 11 minutes against Syracuse, poured in 15 against Rutgers and even has earned one new nickname, Longtime Notre Dame public address announcer Jack Lloyd has started following Sweet baskets with the call “Nutra-Sweet.”

"People have given me a lot of nicknames, ‘Too Sweet,’ ‘Brown Sugar,’ all kinds of stuff," said Sweet, whose last name evidently is easy fodder for people who make up such things. "But I never heard this one before."

If Sweet continues to progress like he has in the last two weeks, Notre Dame fans could be hearing it an awful lot over the next few years.

Irish break up Musketeers
Freshman Nowlin keys victory with 17 points, 10 boards

By TIM SULLIVAN

The Notre Dame women's basketball team faces the Temple Owls Sunday afternoon, it will be another in a series of "big games" for the Irish.

"I think we're fortunate enough to be able to schedule power games," Irish head coach Digger Phelps said. "That gives us an opportunity to take this young team and let them play people, let them get used to what it's going to be like for this young team and let them gain a little experience before we play people in the Big East."

Playing teams like the Owls is like training camp for the young Irish, who probably will start two freshmen, one sophomore and two juniors when the game gets underway at 4 p.m. Sunday at Washington Hall.

The game nearly as green, starting one freshman, three sophomores and one senior. One of the sophomores is Mark Macon, who helped lead the Owls to a 23-4 record, a No. 1 ranking and a Final Eight appearance last season. But three key players from that team are gone, so Macon and senior Mike Vreeswyk have had to pick up the slack.

Macon, a 6-5, 185-pound guard, is averaging 20.3 points per game, shooting 42 percent from the field and shooting 26 of 80 from behind the three-point line. As a freshman, he was named second team All-America by the Associated Press and was the Atlantic 10 Freshman of the Year.

Macon is feeling the pressure this year as opposing defenses are keying on him, but he still worries the Irish.

"I think we'll have to rotate people on Macon," Phelps said. "I don't think one guy can play him. I think he's proven already that he's one of the premier guards in the country.

"I thought (Syracuse star) Sherman Douglass was an example of a guard just dominating a game (in Notre Dame's 99-87 loss to the Orange). That's what Macon did last year and that's what he does in big games this year." Vreeswyk, the only senior in the starting lineup for John Chaney's Owls, is second on the team with an 18.1 scoring average.

"Let's win another for the Irish, boys!" Irish freshman Elmer Bennett will play a big role in Sunday's game against the Temple Owls as he and fellow freshman Daikon Sweet help the Irish through an injury to Jamie Jackson. Notre Dame plays Temple at 4 p.m. Sunday.
