Three campus buildings slated to be built by 1991

Notre Dame plans to build three new buildings on campus within the next two years, according to University officials. In the works are a new ROTC building, a band practice facility, and a complex for the Hesburgh Institute for International Peace Studies.

The University presented the Casteel Construction Company of South Bend with the contract for the three new buildings. Casteel built Knott and Siegfried Halls and the Snite Museum of Art.

Casteel is currently laying the foundations for the new band building on University-owned land east of Juniper Road and west of the Loftus Sports Center.

The band practice facility, to be completed by March 1, 1990, will provide rehearsal space for not only the 236-member Notre Dame marching band but also for the 60-member concert band, the three smaller varsity bands, two jazz bands, and the woodwind, brass and other ensembles.

The total budget for the band building project will be approximately $3.5 million, according to Donald Dedrick, assistant vice president of University relations.

The single-story facility spanning 25,000 gross square feet will contain a main rehearsal room with a band shell shaped ceiling. This room and the two other rehearsal areas, for the ensembles and jazz ensembles, will have separate heating and cooling systems and sound proof walls for acoustical purposes.

Student musicians will have access to instrument lockers which will surround the practice rooms. A large storage room will house band uniforms and additional instruments.

The plans for the facility also include an outdoor patio and garden area as well as office space for band directors and officials.

Construction on the ROTC building will begin at the end of this month, Dedrick said. The site for this facility is west of the new band building.

The new building faced in limestone and Notre Dame brick will replace the 1943 pink building near St. Mary's Lake as the home of the Notre Dame Air Force, Army and Navy bands.

New 'Initiative' report will address problems of off-campus students

By SHANNON RYAN
News Staff

Student government will submit a report concerning the problems of off-campus living to the Board of Trustees in late April.

"The report is going to deal with the Notre Dame student in South Bend," said Mike Paese, student body vice president. "We will discuss the quality of housing and other issues relative to off campus student life." Such issues include crime, student-police relations, transportation and information dissemination.

"We expect this to be an all-encompassing, powerful report that will tackle the issue of crime especially hard. We are in search of recommendations for a better life. We want to find out what the administration can do to better support off-campus students and what the individual student's responsibilities are," said Paese.

An ad hoc committee consisting of ten to twelve students will be selected by committee Chairman Heather Breiter, a senior. The committee will solicit student input through a questionnaire before meeting with Student Affairs.

"The Board of Trustees is our most important vehicle of communication. If they agree that what we are saying is important, they will endorse our request and put pressure on the administration to act," Paese said.

Rise in dorm costs expected for '89

By DAN MURPHY

The cost of living on campus will probably rise by at least five or six percent next year, said James Lyphout, Assistant Vice President for Business Affairs.

The Notre Dame Board of Trustees will meet next week to discuss a proposed budget and address student housing costs for next year, according to Lyphout. He said he anticipates an increase and expects it won't be too much beyond the normal inflation increase.

The Department of Business Affairs considers $3,075 as the average cost of living on campus for the 1988-89 academic year, said Lyphout. This figure includes the price of meals and laundry. A 21 meal plan costs $595.50 per semester this year, and laundry service at St. Michael's Laundry costs $50.00 per semester.

Local apartment complexes and houses offer an alternative to living on campus and paying housing costs determined by the University. About 1141 undergraduate and 2427 graduate students live off-campus this year, according to Elizabeth Wlaszkoczki of the Notre Dame Department of Student Residence.

Top 40 proves we’re trapped in the ‘70s

It will take a minor miracle for anything to replace the 1970s as the worst decade in the history of popular culture. But the 1980s certainly seem to be making a late charge in hopes of overtaking the decade that brought us disco, the leisure suit and pet rocks.

How else can anyone explain what’s been going on in the Top 40 lately? Two of the most recent songs to hit the number-one spot are perfect examples of what’s wrong with the world today.

First, Will to Power reaches the top of the charts by using the strategy Starrs on 45 started years ago, recording a medley that remakes two old classics. This male-female duo had the audacity to remake Peter Frampton’s “I Belong to You” and Lroy Skynyrd’s “Freebird,” and call it the “Freebird Medley.” It’s bad enough for someone to make a medley of two songs that have nothing to do with each other except that they’re both thousands of times better than anything Will to Power could ever dream of recording.

But if the idea is bad, the record is worse. The female lead singer wails the lyrics away, with the guy banging out a Casio in the back­ ground. Of course, this song has done better on the charts than either the original “I Belong to You” or “Freebird.” So much for justice.

By contrast, the current number-one song is harmless. It’s an innocuous little ballad titled “When I’m With You,” by a band called Sheriff. Nothing wrong with liking this song, eh? Think again.

“When I’m With You” originally came out in 1977 and didn’t make much of a dent on the charts. It came out in 1986, and reaches number one. Before this song got re-released a couple of months ago, you probably could find Sheriff albums for $1.99 at your favorite local record store.

I used to love making fun of the records that came out around the late 1970’s. This Sheriff saga has given me a new outlook on things.

When the pop music competition included giants like Shaun Cassidy, the Baby’s, Dan “Something When We Touch” Hill, Player, the Bee Gees, Leil Garrett, the Village People and of course, the late great Andy Gibb, Sheriff never had a chance of receiving airplay.

But in the age of Will to Power, a disc jockey can dust off any song that wasn’t good enough for the ‘70s, put it on the turntable, and you’ve got a hit on your hands.

If this doesn’t scare you enough, the news gets worse. The Will to Power remake of ‘70s songs and the resurrection of “When I’m With You” may just be the start of things to come.

You’ve got it–a ‘70s nostalgia craze.

“I’m convinced the 1970s are going to be the next big thing,” San Diego disc jockey Jason Garret told the Chicago Tribune last month. “Discos on the comeback trail for sure.”

On the comeback trail? Anyone who’s had to listen to hit songs by such non-talents as Paula Abdul, Samantha Fox, Taylor Dayne and Pebbles can attest that disco’s been back for quite a while.

These singers even make one almost wistfully long for the days of KC and the Sunshine Band. Of course, maybe I’m giving that band an early eulogy.

“If KC and the Sunshine Band got back to­ gether, and put out another album, it would sell millions of copies,” Garret also said in the Tribune article.

Heck, why not? It sure worked well with Sheriff, didn’t it?

The Student Union Board has established a new Communication Council as an open forum for all campus groups, said SUB Board Manager Brian Reilly, who co-founded the council.

In a letter to all campus groups and organizations, Reilly said the council is an "effort to bring coherency and cooperation to campus events and activities."

He said the council has three main objectives:
- To coordinate a variety of frequent campus events.
- To promote events.
- To produce quality events.

"Let's talk about events before we do them so we can do the best that we can do," Reilly said of the councils philosophy.

By presenting ideas and future plans to the council, a group or organization may "spark interest in other groups," said Reilly, "so that everybody could do a little part in bringing it (an event) all together."

In the letter, Reilly added that "common interests can be found early, and co-production of an event can be successful."

Similar events sponsored by different organizations could also be coordinated in this fashion, he said.

Another benefit of the council, he said, is that "SUB can be a resource for the groups. We've got the people who are specialized (in programming events)."

He cited "umbrella weeks" - weeks sponsored by SUB which promote a common theme - as an example in which SUB and other campus groups could pool their efforts.

The Communication Council meets on the first Thursday of each month, with a special meeting this month on Feb. 23 at 5:30 p.m. in 222 Hayes-Healy.

Some of the groups that attended the council's first meeting two weeks ago included representatives from the Center for Social Concerns and the Law School, dorm presidents, rectors and SUB commissioners.

Peavey speaks on prayer and life in Medjugorje

A Holy Cross priest working in Medjugorje, Yugoslavia, a small village where six adolescents claim to have seen the Blessed Virgin Mary, visited Notre Dame Wednesday to relate his experiences.

Father Louis Rink, who has been working with thousands of pilgrims in Medjugorje for the last five months, said the main message of the alleged apparitions is prayer.

Rink told a group in the Engineering Auditorium he was deeply impressed by the villagers in Medjugorje who devote more than four hours a day to prayer and Holy Mass, in addition to working long hours.

Villagers and thousands of visitors pack Medjugorje's small St. James Church at 5 p.m. to hear Mass, Rink said. Visiting clergy have included priests, bishops and cardinals.

Millions of people from all over the world have visited Medjugorje since June 24, 1981, when six children reported seeing the Blessed Virgin. Four of them still report daily apparitions, though two no longer receive the visions.

The Roman Catholic Church is investigating the apparitions, but has not made any judgment on their authenticity.

The Church has not forbid Catholics from visiting the site, which has become popular for Marian pilgrimages.

"The greatest puzzle in the whole mystery of Medjugorje is the duration of Our Lady's visit," Rink said. "We can conclude that Our Lady's reason for staying there is to teach the children to follow the gospel and pray, serving as examples for us."

A group of young people in Medjugorje gather for several hours every Tuesday night to pray and reflect on Mary's messages to the visionaries, Rink said.

Two girls named Jelena and Marijana, who lead the group, receive locations or private revelations during prayer. Rink said. Neither girl receives apparitions, but the messages delivered in both the locations and apparitions relate to prayer, he added.

"It is significant that Our Lady (during Lent in 1984) invited all the parishioners through Jelena to read a passage from Scripture in which Jesus says to trust in God's loving Providence," Rink said.

"Mary told the children, 'Pray that the Holy Spirit may come into your hearts and give you the grace to pray more. Pray with peace in your heart.'"

Rink said he will return in a few weeks to Medjugorje, where he will help to bring the SEATING ARRANGEMENTS FOR JPW ARE FINALIZED

Seating has been finalized for Junior Parents Weekend, with "everyone who showed to sign up for tables being accommodated," said Chair-person Christine Boron.

"Juniors will find out the exact location of their seats at registration this Monday and Tuesday," said Boron. After problems with inconsistent forms at first, the Executive Committee changed arrangements for seating at the event.

According to the new plan, juniors planning to attend the event signed up at the Center for Continuing Education with a seating location on a personalized card.

"The biggest hassle," said Boron, "was to get the seating arrangements for JPW are finalized

The Executive Committee, composed of 15 seniors, has been planning the event for months. They are expecting 4,158 people for the Saturday night dinner and 3,699 are expected for the Sunday brunch.

Each year seating arrangements for JPW vary, with the committee having to find the perfect system," said Boron. "JPW is often likened to graduation and seating is often the biggest hassle."

The meetings discuss "primarily intellectual or leisure-related events" and social events, Reilly wrote.

Reilly said the SUB is interested in getting academic departments and faculty to participate. All campus groups are welcome to attend, he said.

Drug restores ability of stroke patients

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - A drug approved for some stroke patients may also rejuvenate sluggish, aging brains with the quick-witted learning ability of youth, a group of Chicago researchers reported Thursday.

In tests on groups of young and middle-aged rabbits at Northwestern University Medical School, researchers said that a drug called nimodipine was able to correct age-related mental slowness so that the older rabbits could learn as well as the younger ones.

"They (older rabbits receiving the drug) actually learned at the same rate, if not a slightly faster rate, than the young rabbits," said John Disterhoft, an associate professor of cell biology at Northwestern, who directed the study. "Two thirds of the control group (older rabbits not receiving the drug) never did learn the task."

He said that although the experiment used only a laboratory test of learning, there is "every reason to believe" that the results would also apply to human learning skills.

The Northwestern experiment, reported in Friday's edition of the journal Science, was conducted using four groups of rabbits. Two of the groups were about 30 months old, middle age for rabbits. The other two groups were young adult rabbits.

Nimodipine was administered to one of the older groups and to one of the younger groups. The others were kept free of the drug to provide control, or comparison, groups.

To test learning ability, all of the rabbits were exposed to the sound of a tone, immediately followed by a mild burst of air against the eye. The air burst causes the eye to blink.

This process was repeated 80 times a day. The researchers measured how soon and how often the rabbits learned to anticipate the burst of air by closing their eyes at the sound of the tone.

Each group received 15 training sessions. Disterhoft said that four of six older rabbits who did not receive nimodipine never did learn nimodipine never did learn to blink at the sound. The other two did learn, but at a slower rate than the older rabbits receiving the drug.

"All of the aging nimodipine animals learned the task in less than eight days of training," he said, and this was very slightly faster than the learning rate shown by both the groups of young rabbits.

Disterhoft said nimodipine, however, did not make the younger rabbits any smarter. The drug appears to help only the aged brain.

Disterhoft said the experiment was suggested after German doctors noticed that stroke patients seemed to recover some learning losses when they were treated with nimodipine.

ROTC programs. The completion date for facility is May 1, 1990. The classrooms for the ROTC programs will be located on the first floor. The upper floor will consist of administrative areas and faculty rooms.

Frank Pasquerilla of Johnston, Pa., is underwriting the $5.75 million project budget cost for the ROTC building. The U.S. Department of Defense will present Pasquerilla with a citation for his gift, Conklin said.

Pasquerilla previously donated the two female residence halls which bear his name.

The Hesburgh Institute for International Peace Studies, currently residing in the Notre Dame Law School, will have a home in the complex. Pasquerilla said the Helen Kellogg Institute for International Studies which now operates in Decio Faculty Hall, will occupy the second floor.

Joan Kroc, the widow of the founder of the McDonald's hamburger chain, is donating $6 million to cover the total cost of the complex.

The University plans to landscape and build roads around the new ROTC and band buildings, Dedrick said. Also, walkways will connect the two facilities with the Hesburgh Library and the Computing Center and Mathematics Building on the other side of Juniper Road.

In the future, the University may develop an academic mall or quad on the site of the Green Field near the peace studies complex, Dedrick said. "We are (currently) working on schematic designs for a new classroom building. We met with the designers every two or three weeks on it, but it is still in the planning stage."

There is a possibility that a performing arts center will be built at the south end of the proposed quad, Dedrick said, adding that the development of the quad is still several years away.

The report is only one part of an effort called the "Off-Campus Initiative." Recently, student government began publishing a bi-monthly newsletter for off-campus students. Officers are also hoping to meet with the South Bend mayor and police chief to explore other possible measures that could be taken to improve living conditions.

Whatever ails our century, the Church's mission is to preach the pure, undiluted Gospel of Christ, and not some version of it that we think pleasing to the court of Heaven. Whatever it meant if the pale moon danced at Medjogorje with the garish sun across the firmament like Astaire and Rogers, it couldn't mean we should preach any other gospel of salvation and love than the one that is preached.

Certainly we shouldn't spicte it up by adding to it an anti-gospel of fear.

I don't think God's going to let the world slip out His hands, for He loves it too much. Louis Armstrong sings, 'It's a wonderful world,' and he speaks for me. Maybe if the Church could serve it with more love, we could help diminish the agony of the century we live in.

Libya's weapons are 'beyond their needs'

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - CIA Director William Webster told Congress on Thursday that Libya has acquired chemical weapons production capabilities far in excess of its own military needs, posing the possibility such weapons could be transferred to Middle East nations with past links to terrorists.

Testifying before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, Webster also said that in recent years "the moral barrier to biological warfare has been breached," with at least 10 countries now working to produce both previously unknown and futuristic biological weapons.

Webster said Libya has experienced "at least one serious toxic chemical spill" at production facilities an isolated site near Rabta, some 60 miles southwest of Tripoli.

He said that while such production of chemical weapons "is likely to continue, the Libyan plant should be ready soon to enter large-scale production of mustard gas and nerve agents, potentially at a rate of 'tens of tons per day.'

Webster said the Libyan facility is the largest single factory complex in the Third World capable of producing chemical weapons, although he said Iraq's overall chemical weapons potential is thought to be larger still.

"We are concerned that the plant's production capabilities far, far exceed what Libya could use for its own military purposes," Webster said.

"Therefore it becomes a potential brokering agent for other countries," in the Middle East with links to groups which may have past terrorist intentions, he said.

Isolation is another problem facing some off-campus residents. "The main drag with Turtle Creek is that I don't know everyone," said Brown. Brown knows all the people in my own building. I don't feel like I'm part of the campus," he said.

There are many things on-campus students take for granted," said McKessy, "like three meals of good food each day and laundry service. If people had to go to the Laundermat every time they needed to wash their clothes," he said, "they would realize what a great deal St. Michael's laundry is.

Apartments are only available on a 13-month basis at Turtle Creek. As of today a studio unit costs $295 per month, a one-bedroom unit costs $389, and a two-bedroom unit costs $429. These prices do not include utilities such as electricity and water, and the apartments are unfurnished.

All apartments at Notre Dame Avenue are two-bedroom units. Prices depend upon the number of students living in each apartment. A nine-month lease for next year costs $240 for two people, $180 for three people and $115 for four people.

Several rooms and houses are available for rent throughout South Bend, said Whaszczuki. Rental prices for rooms range from $110 to $500 per month. She said rates for houses depend upon the size and location of the particular house, and range from $300 to $800 per month.

During the electoral campaign last year many of us were filled with a mixture of anger, shame, and frustration at the spectacle we saw before our eyes. It would be easy to forget—and much more desirable of course—but it may be helpful and instructive to reflect upon what we experienced then. I think that what we saw was not an isolated spe­ tied problem in our present society, one that touches the very fibre of this nation.

Victor J. Krebs
Metanoia

Quite independently of its outcome, the electoral campaign was, in the opinion of many Democrats and Republicans, a disgrace to the country and an insult to the people. The candi­dates were paraded in front of our television screens talking about the most inane subjects; the questions they had to answer were of the same level as those asked of the candidates in a Miss America contest. And the presidential debates were with good reason just as disagre­eable to many.

It is no secret that the presidential candidates were prostituting themselves to the media, sacrificing integrity for the immediate impression. Public opinion was measured on the tem­ terature of the nation. Ironically those same polls also defined the opinion of the majority. And that is no surprise, for where conformity is good and dis­agreement bad, where following the crowd is more valuable than making up one's own mind, where will people go who have no time or reason to think?

We are in an age when we are encouraged to make our decisions on the basis of images rather than on substance, and where we are growing more and more complacent with the way things are.

We thought that the public conscience had been awakened with Watergate, yet we saw a proliferation of political scandals during the Reagan era that hardly made the nation stir. These past eight years have been as if America were a normal society. It seemed to happen as if in a dream. There is no question that this general attitude served the Reagan years well. The teflon factor, that this general attitude served the unity of anger, shame, and frustration that we experienced then. I think that what we saw was not an isolated spe­ tied problem in our present society, one that touches the very fibre of this nation.

We are not expected to think. We are fed feeding us contentless rhetoric. We ought to act. Only thus can we eventually think and decide for ourselves. We need to start to move outside the cave towards the light. For our generation, people will be able to recognize the shadows cast before our eyes for what they are.

ND cultural diversity shines bright

Dear Editor:

I would like to thank all the people who took part in last week's Interna­tional Festival. Around 170 people from over 30 countries participated in it, making it the biggest and best one so far.

To every single performer and every single member of the crew, the ISO would like to express its gratitude for the countless hours and all the dedicated hard work that went into the making of the International Festival. The ISO would also like to thank The Observer and its staff for their coverage of the festival. Finally, thanks to our co-sponsors—the Minorities Con­cern Commission, student government, and the Multicultural Executive Council.

Starting from next year, we plan to present the International Festival on a regular basis. With the success and support we received last Saturday, that prospect seems very plausible. In the year labeled as the Year of Cultural Diversity, and at a time when awareness of different cultures is being increasingly emphasized, we at the ISO take pride in having presented what we consider to be the best and most genuine single-event multicultural show in town.

A short-story writer and poet, Dybek's artistic merit is napping comfortably in the upper tier of today's writers, despite having published less in the past five years than Tommy Lasorda. In fact, among serious followers of literature, Dybek would be a household name if not for the huge chunks of time between his works.

A highly revered and enigmatic presence in contemporary literature, the Lilliputian output of Dybek's work is matched only by the gargantuan volume of praise his work receives. While publishing only one or two stories a year, he always seems to capture one of the major literary prizes, such as the O. Henry Award or the Pushcart Prize of which he has received.

Information on Dybek is hard to come by, and despite his appearance at the festival, he often maintains a low profile in the literary community.

A native of Chicago, his collection of short stories, "Childhood and Other Neighborhoods," was greeted with unanimous praise. He kept the critics wide-eyed with his volume of collected poems, "Brass Knuckles." Dybek now teaches in the English department at Western Michigan University.

His next collection of short stories is highly anticipated and due soon. Despite the enticements from publishers for more of his work, Dybek operates under a code of artistic integrity where the flaws of his fiction remain safe from the snags of outside pressure. Tonight will be a highlight in the Festival's memory for years to come, and will provide an enriching chance to hear a very mysterious and private literary treasure.

I just heard the new New Order album, and I swear I heard an acoustic guitar in there somewhere. I SWEAR! I had given up any hope of ever hearing these guys use any organic sounds at all after hearing the opening track and first single "True Faith," which sounds like somebody programmed a synthesizer to sound like Purgatory. But it is definitely runner­up for Worst Song On The Album, right behind "Mr. De­j o n g e." I don't believe it or not, it is not its worst feature. I think New Order just decided to let a drummer sit as a drummer on this song. The rest of the album is miles bet­ter. "Love Less," "Dream Attack," and "Run" are clas­sic New Order: tuneful, catchy and danceable.

With the low, breathy vocals and brooding atmo­spheric tune, "Guilty Partner" could actually be a Joy Division song. On the other hand, "All The Way," as my next-door neighbor pointed out, lifts the bass-line straight from The Cure's "Just Like Heaven."

Overall, Technique is pretty much in the groove that New Order has worn for itself. Fans will be more than satisfied.

The Ice House was four years ago, when Emil Holman, dean of freshman year, offered us a bus ride there on Freshman Date Night. I finally made it there as a senior and found the Ice House worth the wait. The Ice House atmosphere is subdued and certainly not intrusive to a quiet dinner. Like most establishments in the 100 Center in Mishawaka, it is predominantly brickwork and wood furniture. The restaurant seats a hundred guests or so at open tables or side booths, arranged in two overlapping levels.

The menu features an assortment of appetizers, ranging from potato skins and fried zucchini to shrimp Dejonghe. The shrimp we ordered were fairly good-sized and swimming in a buttery clear sauce. We found it tasty, although a bit more seasoning would have helped.

We did not partake of the wine list, but there was a fairly wide selection of wines available, most of them in the $10-$15 a bottle range. A salad, bread, and choice of vegetable or several types of potato were included with all entrees, which ranged from $8.95 for teriyaki chicken to $15.95 for some of the more exotic seafood dishes. Entrees were primarily steaks and seafood items.

The salad was very disappointing. It made our beloved dining hall's salad bar look scrumptious. The "salad" was actually a pile of lettuce chunks with an onion or two, some soft croutons, and not enough of whatever dressing we ordered. The bread was mediocre, but was served piping hot. Our entrees were a substantial improvement, though. Portions were substantial without giving you the feeling you were wasting food. Just about everything we saw people eating looked good. I ordered the teriyaki chicken, which was served with a sweet orange sauce that was on the mild side but complemented the chicken well. The bed of rice under the chicken was superb, and the potato was large and garnished with real bacon bits and butter. My guest had the petit filet mignon, which was...
The new Violent Femmes record goes something like this: "It seems that the problem is very deep; cause every time I try to sleep I have nightmares thinking about getting together with you. I'm just like my father...I am much worse...I hope you got really fat...I've been following women around all afternoon...there's nothing worth living for tonight...!

Lenny Bruce once said, "There's nothing sadder than an aging hipster." In light of that, let's admit that there's something pathetic about a 40-year-old man singing about "little girls" and prancing around a stage. This is what The Replacements are trying to avoid on Don't Tell A Soul. The Replacements were arguably at one time considered the most promising and most immature band around. Their brilliant shows were interspersed with choppy, spotty drunkenness, where they'd fall all over the stage. Their albums were similarly inconsistent.

1986's Pleased To Meet Me was the first real evidence of their musical maturity, which is why it should come as no surprise that Don't Tell A Soul is not an album full of pop-trash and adolescent angst.

A change is evident from the first song, the acoustic-lighted "Talent Show:" a goofy look at the band's early daze. It's funny, catchy and almost wistful. Paul Westerberg's voice is still in top form and the band rolls along behind him with a surprising amount of control. This isn't meant to imply that Don't Tell A Soul is full of New Age Music. There are only two really slow numbers, including the Beach Boys-ish "They're Blind."

The album's single "I'll Be You" is fairly indicative of the album's temer. It wishes aloud to switch places with somebody else, anybody else, and includes the classic line "I'm a rebel without a clue." Lest anyone think that The Replacements have wimped out, "I Won't" is a rave-up-styled on an old rockabilly tune and kicks with anything they've ever recorded.

The Replacements are trying to avoid the trap of the aging hipster. Whether their fans will allow them will be interesting.
INGLEWOOD, Calif. It was vintage Magic Johnson, a weaving drive through traffic resulting in a layup and two points for the Los Angeles Lakers.

Johnson gave a painful grimace and grabbed his left leg after the play, which occurred with 1:57 remaining in the third quarter of a 121-118 loss to Golden State Wednesday night.

Johnson's injury was diagnosed as a partial tear of the left hamstring. Team physician Dr. Robert Kerlan estimated that Johnson will be sidelined from seven to 10 days.

"Missing the All-Star Game is a big disappointment, not just the game but all of the festivities that surround it," Johnson, 29, was the leading vote-getter in the Western Conference of the fans for Sunday's game at Houston.

IOWA CITY, Iowa—Loy Vaught scored the final six Michigan points, including a layup with two seconds left in the second overtime, to give No. 10 Michigan a 106-104 victory over No. 8 Iowa Thursday night.

Michigan, 18-4, blew an 18-point lead in the final 9 1/2 minutes of regulation, then rallied from deficits of six points in the first overtime and five in the second to remain tied for second place in the Big Ten with Illinois at 6-3, 7 1/2 games behind first-place Indiana.

Iowa, which was down by as many as 20 points in the first half, fell to 17-5 and 5-4 with its first home loss of the season.

Iowa, which was down by as many as 20 points in the first half, fell to 17-5 and 5-4 with its first home loss of the season.

The Wolfpack simply ran away from the Tar Heels, using an early spurt to take command and getting another run late in the first half to run up a big lead. North Carolina, with just five points in the closing five minutes of the first half, battled back to within nine before running out of steam and time.

Jeff Lebo had 22 points for North Carolina.

NC State 98, UNC 86

RALEIGH, N.C.—Chuck Brown scored a career-high 29 points to lead five North Carolina State players in double figures Thursday night as the seventh-ranked Wolfpack ran away from No. 6 North Carolina for a 98-88 victory.

The Wolfpack, 15-4, took over sole possession of first place in the Atlantic Coast Conference with a 6-2 mark. North Carolina, 18-5, dropped to 5-3 and Matt Bullard 15. Illini 62, OSU 60

CHAMPAIGN, Ill.—Nick Anderson scored 22 points for Illinois and Ohio State's Jay Burson was held to less than 10 for the first time in 34 games Thursday night as the seventh-ranked Fighting Illini defeated the 16th-ranked Buckeyes 62-60.

Ohio State had opportunities to tie the game in the final seconds, but Jerry Francis and Perry Carter each missed jump shots. Illinois finally controlled the ball with one second remaining to preserve the victory and claim sole possession of second place in the Big Ten.

The Fighting Illini improved to 19-3 overall and 6-3 in the conference, leaving them 2 1/2 games behind first-place Indiana. Ohio State fell to 16-6 and 5-4.

Illinois went ahead for good with 2:23 to play when Ken Battle's driving layup gave the Fighting Illini a 50-48 lead.

Burson, who was averaging 20 points per game, scored only five in the first half and nine in the game.

OU 112, Mizzou 105

NORMAN, Okla.—Stacey King scored 32 points and made a crucial three-point play in the final minute as No. 3 Oklahoma beat No. 3 Missouri 112-105 Thursday night as the losing Tigers were forced to play without head coach Norm Stewart.

Stewart was hospitalized Thursday afternoon for a bleeding ulcer, and school officials said he watched the game from his hospital bed as assistant Rich Daly ran the team.

The victory moved the Sooners, 20-3 overall, into a tie with Missouri for first place in the Big Eight at 6-1. The Tigers, 20-4, had an 11-game winning streak snapped.

Byron Irvin led Missouri with 23 points.

Arizona 78, Oregon 57

EUGENE, Ore.—Anthony Cook had 30 points and Matt Muehlebach scored Arizona's first eight points of the second half as the top-ranked Wildcats went on to their 10th straight victory, 78-57 over Oregon on Thursday night.

Arizona led 47-33 at halftime, then Muehlebach went on his scoring tear. The Wildcats were led by as much as 78-54 with 1:48 to play.

The Wildcats improved to 18-2 overall and 12-1 in the Pac-10, good for a two-game lead over Stanford.

Jude Buckler added 16 points for Arizona, while freshman guard Matt Othick had 15.

Frank Johnson, Richard Lucas and Keith Reynolds each had 12 for the Ducks, 8-13 and 1-10 to play.

ND tennis to host first Quadrangular meet

By BOB MITCHELL
Sports Writer

On Saturday, the Notre Dame men's tennis team will be in a very unusual position. They will be favored to win. With a schedule full of nationally ranked opponents, the Irish will take a breather and play three lesser regional opponents. The Irish squad will host Akron, Toledo, and Bowling Green in the first ever Notre Dame Quadrangular. Notre Dame has a combined 41-3 overall record against its three foes.

"We find ourselves in an unusual predicament on Saturday," said Irish coach Bob Bayliss, reflecting on the fact that his team has been a heavy underdog in three out of its four matches. "Having been underdogs most of the year, being favored is a refreshing change."

Realistically, Notre Dame should easily dispose of all three teams. In its first contest of the year, the sleeping Irish team will roll on the court to take on the Akron Zips. The Irish boast an unblemished 9-0 series record against the Zips, who have not played since 1981. Next on the agenda for the Irish is the University of Toledo. The Rockets, who fell to the Irish in 1987-88, will try to end a 19-year losing streak. Toledo’s No. 1 singles player, Ben Draxl, is one of the better players in the field. Draxl, who reached the 1988 Mid-American Indoor Finals, possesses an excellent background and aggressive style of play.

At 3:00, the Irish will continue their rivalry with Bowling Green. Notre Dame will look to extend a nine-year winning streak. Last year, the Irish soundly rolled over Bowling Green by a 9-0 margin.

Against such stiff competition, the Irish (2-2) must take advantage of their home court.

"We have to focus on winning the match at hand," said Bayliss, whose career record is 301-109. "You can't look ahead or back. There are two questions for the Irish as they prepare for play. One is the status of No. 2 player Brian Kalbas. Kalbas has been fighting a sore shoulder throughout the four game season, and is questionable for Saturday's action. The other question mark is the possibility of a letdown after a 5-4 upset of Ohio State on Feb. 4.

"I always worry about a letdown. I don't want to let Bowling Green slip away. But I hope not...

It is not often that a team can pick up three wins in one day. Therefore, Bayliss believes that Saturday presents a golden opportunity for his team.

"It is a chance to get some confidence," said Bayliss. "Saturday will be a chance for the players to record some of their own records. Winning is contagious and it builds on itself."

Fencing teams look to maintain perfect marks

By CHRIS FILLIO
Sports Writer

Something is happening to the Notre Dame fencing teams. What that something is, head coach Michael DeCicco wishes he knew.

In a year initially tagged as one of rebuilding, the Irish fencers are off to a flying start. But consider the odds: the men's teams lost six seniors from last year in addition to two more fencers this year as a result of academic ineligibility.

The women's team was hit hard by the loss of two seniors, including four-time All-Americans.

As if this weren't enough, Marx officiated for the foil competition while keeping an eye on the women's competition on the next strip. "I can't even begin to detail the influence that Mike Marx has had on the kids," stated DeCicco earlier this month. "He had raised the level of competition a full notch."

"It's two senior defensemen who haven't been replaced. Why don't we return with some answers to the questions that DeCicco has been putting to us?"

"They are going to bow our heads, and continue their winning ways."

By page 17

"We're going to give it our best effort," said Schafer. "The Wolverines are unbeaten in their last eight games (7-0-1), and have won their last seven road games.

"Fans will have a chance to see a team like we'd like to be in a few years," said Schafer. "They are fast skaters, they're strong, and this will be an example of the type of team that we eventually want to have."

"We're going to give it our best effort," said Schafer. "The Wolverines are led by center Todd Brost (15 goals, 24 assists, 39 points), and left wings Denny Felsner (23-15-38) and Don Stone (21-12-33). Goalie Warren Sharphres owns a .927 record, a 3.61 goals-against average and an 88 percent save percentage."

"We need someone with the confidence of a star, the dedication of a marathoner and the courage of an explorer."
Indoor track team ready for Central Collegiates

By SCOTT BRUTOCAO
Sports Writer

Knute Rockne's legend lives on in more than just football as a meet be founded as track coach in the 1960's enters into its 63rd year of existence, the Central Collegiate Conference Championships.

Some of the best track teams of the Midwest will be attending this extravaganza, including teams from the Big 10, Mid-American, Midwestern Collegiate and Mission Valley Conferences. Independent teams like Notre Dame, Loyola (Ill.) and Marquette will also be competing.

"It's kind of a super conference," said Assistant Coach Tim Connelly. "Because it consists of a few conferences put together. There is a team championship, and since it's the 63rd meeting there's a lot of prestige involved."

The meet will be held on Friday and Saturday on the Meyo track in the Loftus Center. Over 20 teams will vye for top performances, and in the process several athletes will qualify for post-season competition at the IC4A championships and the NCAA championships.

"Every race is going to have a potential NCAA qualifier," said Connelly.

"The goal for our team is to place as high as we can in the meet and get some qualifying times on the way to doing that," continued Connelly. "Both the IC4A's and the NCAA's are attainable, and we said from the beginning of the season that we'd like to win this meet."

Last week Notre Dame played host to the Meyo Invitational. In a meet where 17 events were contested, 11 established meet records and eight set Meyo track records. Though Notre Dame got several qualifying times, it did without co-captains Jan Searcy and Ron Markeszcz, both out due to injuries. Both will be running today.

Sprinter Searcy will compete in the 500-meter sprint, and senior distance runner Markeszcz will run the 5000.

"Basically all I expect to do is compete," said Searcy. "I've missed the previous two meets and I'm out of shape. I'd just like to see how my leg holds up, and see how I do against the competition."

Notre Dame still, however, will be without senior All-American Dan Garrett. He continues to be sidelined with an achilles heel injury. There will be many Notre Dame athletes expected to shine at the meet. Freshman phenom Raghib Ismail and football teammate Rusty Setzer are again expected to make the finals, and junior hurdler Glenn Wilson has been mentined by Connelly as a potential scorer.

Notre Dame will also be running a middle-distance relay, with Richard Culpe running the quarter mile, Brian Peppard running the 880, Mike Bogan running the three-quarter mile, and Ryan Cahill finishing off with a mile run.

Action kicks off at 3 p.m. today and is followed by a Saturday starting time of 9 a.m.

Wednesday night, 68-65, in the Joyce ACC. The Trojans carry an 11-game losing streak into this contest on the wake of a 77-58 loss to UCLA. Tim Singleton and the Notre Dame men’s basketball team face USC Saturday at 3 p.m. in the Joyce ACC. The Trojans carry an 11-game losing streak. That is the second-longest losing streak in USC history, bested only by a 16-game skid that stretched from the 1975-76 season into the 1976-77 campaign. The Trojans lost to UCLA Wednesday night, 68-65, in front of 10,000-plus at Pauley Pavilion. The Bruins had to fight to a 71-55 victory over Evansville Thursday night.

Basketball squad set for Trojan War

It isn’t number one against number two and it could never be billed as a game of the century. But it’s just as important to the Notre Dame and Southern Cal basketball teams to come out with a win.

On Saturday the 13-4 Irish host the Trojans of USC at the Joyce ACC in a game initially scheduled for a 1 p.m. tipoff but now slated to begin at 3 p.m.

Notre Dame will enter the contest on the wake of a 27-58 thumping of Fordham on Wednesday night. Head Coach Digger Phelps and the Irish return home for a four-game stand, which also includes Boston College, LaSalle and Houston.

The Irish are 8-2 at the Joyce ACC for the season, with losses coming to Syracuse and Duke. The Blue Devils’ 102 points last Sunday were the most given up by a Phelps-coached Notre Dame team.

Southern Cal is desparately seeking a win as it enters the contest riding an 11-game losing streak. That is the second-longest losing streak in USC history, bested only by a 16-game skid that stretched from the 1975-76 season into the 1976-77 campaign.

Here we go again.

Those problems just keep piling up for Holtz and the Irish, who signed what many consider the top recruiting class in the country Wednesday. Seventeen of the 25 incoming freshmen were SuperPrep All-America selections. The next best school signed seven.

Holtz’s quotes must be getting tougher to come up with as all this talent continues rolling in, but...
