ND to open new foreign study programs in Spain, Japan

By KELLEY TUTHILL

Notre Dame will offer two new foreign study programs in Nagoya, Japan and Toledo, Spain beginning in the fall semester of 1990.

According to Isabel Charles, associate provost and director of foreign study programs, both programs are a year long and designed for sophomores, although juniors may participate with permission. The Japan program, formerly located at Sophia University in Tokyo, moved to Nanzan University in Nagoya, Japan.

Prior to studying in Japan students must take one year of Japanese, said Charles. For Spain, students must demonstrate an intermediate level of proficiency in Spanish.

The Toledo program will be made possible by an affiliation between Notre Dame and the Ortega y Gasset Foundation's Program of Spanish Language, Latin American and European Studies, according to a press release. Toledo is located about 40 miles south of Madrid.

Once in Toledo students will be required to take 15 credits per semester, including at least one course in Spanish language or Spanish or Latin-American literature, according to the brochure. Students have the option of living in a residence hall or with a Spanish family.

The Japan program operates in conjunction with the Center for Japanese Studies, according to a press release. Toledo is located in the center of Honshu, Japan's main island, midway between Tokyo and Kyoto.

The corporate headquarters of Toyota is in Nagoya, Japan and Toledo, Spain, is located about 90 miles from Madrid.

The Freshmen Writing Program supported by endowment

By NATASHA WILSON

The Freshmen Writing Program is the recipient of an anonymous endowment, designed to support both the teaching and the administration of the program.

The gift memorializes Francis (Frank) O'Malley, who taught at Notre Dame from 1955 until 1988. O'Malley was a member of the Society of the Divine Word.

The endowment, which was also permitted the director to hire an additional full-time teaching device to review the program, was received by the College of Arts and Letters. "It was also the director to devote all of his time to the Freshmen Writing Program," Kline said. O'Malley was pleased that the endowed gift will benefit the Freshmen Writing Program. "When I first met (O'Malley) upon joining the faculty, he told me that the most important thing I'd ever do here in teach freshmen," the director recalls.

The endowment funds will be used to purchase additional resource materials for the program's written work, Kline said.

U.S. military aid starts arriving in Colombia

Associated Press

BOGOTA, Colombia — The United States on Sunday began shipping a $65 million package of military aircraft and weapons to help Colombia fight its war against powerful cocaine cartels.

Two U.S. C-130 transport planes arrived in the capital to-day, along with other equipment. The high-tailed C-130s can take off and land on 3,000-foot runways, even those with no paving, and presumably could be used in raids on remote coca-plantations and clandestine cocaine-refining laboratories. By contrast, passenger jets such as 747s and DC-10s need runways of 9,000-10,000 feet.

Also on their way to this South American country, according to the Pentagon, were five UH-1H transport helicopters and eight A-37D attack bombers. The A-37s can be outfitted with machine guns and rockets.

The United States also has promised Colombia rifles, pistols, machine guns, rockets and grenades — even bulletproof vests for Colombian officials and judges who prosecute drug traffickers.

The government gave no reason for removing police Col. Alfonso Amaya Maldonado, who the C-130s "will be used in the fight in which we are engaged ... to re-establish order."

"We are among the pioneers in the United States in using computer programs as a teaching device to review grammar, spelling and other writing skills," he said. "Now, we'll be able to purchase additional computer programs on writing the process to complement the material freshmen learn in the writing courses."

The endowment will also support the O'Malley Distinguished Lecturer Series and faculty development workshops on the teaching of writing, Kline said.

Every semester at least one expert on writing instruction will address the 98 faculty members of the Freshmen Writing Program. The first O'Malley lecture will feature Barbara Weaver, dean of University College at Ball State University on October 9.

Three of the four Roman Catholic cardinals who signed an agreement with Jewish leaders to move a convent away from the Auschwitz death camp said Sunday the pact must be carried out.

In a statement, the French and Belgian church leaders said Cardinal Josef Glemp, the primate of Poland, "could only have been speaking for himself" — not for the church — in suggesting a renegotiation of the accord.

I was getting carried away with this renewed interest in being chivalrous, you'd see how some women will respond to your actions.

A week had passed and I found myself walking back from dinner with the girl who had started this whole chivalry problem. As we entered our dorm I opened the first set of doors for her, and I just made it to the second set without looking rushed. Despite our conversation a week ago, she didn't seem to notice this act of chivalry. After we were inside she turned and said, "Well, let me tell you..."

British, French mark WWII anniversary

Associated Press

LONDON — Britons listened to declarations of war on the radio, swapped stories and went to church to forgive their former enemies on Sunday, the 50th anniversary of Britain’s entry into World War II.

France marked the anniversary of its declaration of war against Germany in a brief, subdued ceremony beneath the Arc de Triomphe in Paris. At 11:15 a.m. in Britain, the British Broadcasting Corp. replayed Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain’s radio announcement that Britain had declared war on Germany, exactly 50 years to the minute after it first aired.

“This morning the British ambassador in Berlin handed the German government the final note stating that unless we heard from them by 11 o’clock that they were prepared at once to withdraw their troops from Poland, a state of war will exist between us,” Chamberlain told the nation.

“I have to tell you now that no such undertaking has been received and that consequently, this country is at war with Germany.”

Also broadcast on radio and television was a speech by Adolf Hitler attempting to justify the war and remarks by 13-year-old Princess Elizabeth — now Britain’s queen — expressing sympathy with children evacuated from London for safety from the expected bombing raids. In Coventry, which endured the longest single bombing raid in Britain during the war, 500 people gathered in a new building next to the ruins of a 700-year-old cathedral to pray for their

Baby panda dies two days after birth

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The fifth cub born to giant panda Ling-Ling died Sunday after 39 hours of fighting an infection transmitted from its mother, but disappointed zoo officials said they haven’t given up hope for a successful birth.

As her human handlers recounted Ling-Ling’s latest travails at a news conference, the black-and-white animal sat in her nest cradling apples put there in place of her missing baby.

The never-named tiny cub, weighing only 1.1 ounces, was born prematurely Friday at the National Zoo and taken from its 250-pound mother six hours later because of concern of infection.

Zoo officials said the cub, a male, first began showing signs of strength, but then weakened despite around-the-clock efforts by zoo veterinarians as well as from pediatric experts enlisted from nearby Children’s Hospital.

The cub was placed in an incubator, fed a special formula through a tube into its stomach and given antibiotics to fight the infection, officials said.

“Every effort was made to pull this cub through its illness,” said zoo director Michael Robinson.

At one point, when zoo officials managed to successfully separate the cub from a sedated mother, Robinson recalled, “I thought we’d won.”

But Mitchell Bush, chief veterinarian at the zoo, said the cub’s survival was an uphill struggle because of the premature birth and the infection. During most of its 39 hours of life the care given the cub was similar to what a prematurely born child would receive.

Bush said there had been concern from the start that the cub might have caught an infection from its mother, which has had problems periodically with a kidney infection since 1983 and had a reoccurrence only a week ago. The tiny cub’s chances of survival were reduced further because it weighed only about three-fourths of what a normal panda cub would weigh, officials said.

Three of the four previous cubs born to Ling-Ling also died of infection shortly after birth with the longest-living cub surviving for four days in 1987.

Dear Editor:

Tuesday night is Activities Night for the fall semester at Notre Dame. One of the many worthwhile activities available is Big Brothers/Big Sisters, an organization which matches a Notre Dame student with a child in the South Bend area who comes from a single-parent family. The intent of Big Brothers/Big Sisters is to provide another source of adult influence in the child's life, thus helping to establish a certain balance of adult guidance normally present in a two-parent family, all while giving the child opportunities to learn and have fun.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters sponsors many activities for the children and their matches such as: annual trips to educational facilities like the planetarium and museums in Chicago, a picnic for the matches and their families, a Christmas party and magic show, pizza parties, and BOWLING FOR KIDS' SAKE. The South Bend Jaycees even provide some financially disadvantaged kids with gift certificates at the University Park Mall, so they can buy their families Christmas presents.

In addition to the sponsored activities, the matches spend time alone together as well, bowing around or just talking. The organization asks that the matches spend at least five hours together per week.

My little brother, Tabias, and I have been matched for over two years. Before he entered the program, Tabias had never eaten a banana split, never played pool, nor had he been to a bowling alley or movie theatre, much less a museum, aquarium, or zoo. Coming from a poor, single-parent family, it was just never possible. The program has not only given Tabias the chance to do all these things, but it has also given him a male influence in his life, something he has not had since his father left.

I am writing in reference to the Honor Code at the University of Notre Dame. There has been much criticism of the code as being implemented by the administration rather than by the students and therefore not wanted by the students. The major issue in student apathy toward turning in a fellow student who cheats is the fact that the students have to report any cheating. The goal is to make students responsible for their own actions. If all students maintain their own honor, the system works. When you cheat on your own honor, you cheat yourself.

My criticism of the Honor Code is that it does not depend on students' honor, as it should. Professors should not instruct students where to sit, print two or more different versions of the tests, or monitor the tests. The University should trust the students more, and put the responsibility on the students. Sure, some students may still cheat and get away with it. But what they get away with now will hurt them later in life. They may get a better grade and get into medical or law school because of it, but what they get out of it now will come back to haunt them. When a patient dies, or you can't answer your kid's calculus question, the A+ you got on the intro level class will mean nothing, and you will suffer a different kind of humiliation than a bad grade.

The Honor Code simply means study for tests, learn as much as you can to help yourself, and then take the grade you deserve. If you cheat and do better on tests that I, you may get a better job than I, but I'll go farther in life because I've learned, while you've just got an A. Some students will still say, "So what?" I say they've got a lot to learn about what is important in life.

Hollywood has a way of beating a topic to death. It's had enough when the subject matter is fictitious, but it's often revolting when the subject is a human tragedy such as Vietnam. ABC's "China Beach" is only another of Hollywood's attempts to "cash in" on the military incident. "China Beach" airs Wednesdays at 9 p.m. It presents a group of young men and women coping with life during the crisis. Dana Delaney stars as Lieutenant Delaney, a young Vietnamese girl who finally realized that she was about to lose her first child in a savage jungle without her protection and began to panic, grasping at her fleeting motherly authority. She made up for the four years of motherhood she would be deprived of by advising, tiding, and preserving me. At about 2:30, we ran into the typical Chicago gapers' block, a phenomenal traffic jam created by the state police were all in search of two teens with blond ponytails. About an hour and a half later, our van rolled to a stop in front of us. My mom, still crying, and my dad, still laughing, jumped out. What a first day at college we had had! When we finally arrived in the Saint Mary's parking lot, I reminded my dad that it would have been easier not to take me to college if I had been in the car.

New York — Chris Evert, playing nearly perfect tennis against a teenager who wasn’t quite ready for prime time, postponed retirement Sunday and kept her impossible dream of a final U.S. Open championship alive.

The two-time champion Boris Becker, though, struggled again in his bid for his first U.S. Open title, losing the first set before taking 27 of 30 points in a crucial stretch to beat Sweden’s Mikael Pernfors 7-5, 6-2, 6-7 (6-2).

Becker’s 3 1/2-hour victory put him into the quarterfinals against Yannick Noah, who upset 10th-seeded Albert Mancini 6-3, 6-7, 6-3, 6-3. Evert, 34, looked as youthful in pink and white, with a rose ribbon in her short ponytail, as her opponent, 12th-seeded, 15-year-old Monique Seles. But Evert showed greater patience at the net and reached the quarterfinals for the 19th straight year.

Evert’s fourth seed and sixth-time Open winner, moved Seles around the court like a puppet on a string, sending her chasing balls from corner to corner, in and out, to win 6-0, 6-2.

In rallies that sometimes lasted more than 50 shots, Evert matched the moonballs and power strokes of the grunting, yelling Seles, and wore her down with angled and deep shots that frequently kissed the lines.

"I don’t know where it came from," Evert said. "I haven’t seen that form all year."

The only trouble Evert encountered in the fifth game of the first set when Seles had six break points on Evert’s service. But Evert hung in, while Seles, wasted her opportunities with forehands in the net, and capitalized on her first advantage to put the game away.

"I felt if she had won that game, she would have gotten back in there," Evert said.

Evert said she felt like Margaret Court, the former Open and Wimbledon champion who was at the peak of her career when Evert first played and beat her age 15.

"Up until two days ago, I didn’t expect to win the match, the way I’ve been playing," she said.

"When I first saw that I would be playing her, she’s tired, it isn’t obvious. It would be my last big match, and I’d love to lose. Maybe that was fate...it entered my mind for one second. All those things made me more determined. I concentrated well, I moved well. I was pleased it happened today."

Evert, who had said she was worried about the match and might feel so if she were the other player in a major tournament, didn’t play close to her potential.

Seles, a left-hander with two-fisted shots on forehands and backhands, certainly was the player who beat Evert in the finals of a tournament in Houston this year. That match was on clay, this one on a faster hard court.

"I prepared to win, was prepared to lose," Seles said. "I was prepared going into the match, that everyone would be on her side. I’ve never been in that situation, so it was a little strange."

Seles said "e wasn’t missing any balls at all. She was hitting hard on every ball.

Kansas City punches out Texas in game marred by brawl

Associated Press

Monday, September 4, 1989 The Observer page 9

Yankees 5, Angels 2

Don Mattingly went 4-for-4, including a single that started a five-run rally in the sixth inning. The Angels' Albert Belle hit a three-run homer that carried into the seventh.

Athletics 5, Brewers 0

Carney Lansford doubled and singled and Walt Weiss drove in two runs with his first hit of the game. The Athletics had lost four in a row and 10 of 14.

White Sox 4, Orioles 2

Moldo Perez held Baltimore to six hits in 7 1-3 innings and Carlton Fisk hit a two-run single as the Orioles were prevented from clinching into a first-place tie in the AL East. The Royals won for the 16th time in 19 games and remained one game behind first-place tie in the AL East.

Zane, medical examiner for Barnstable County, said Giamatti, an overweight chain-smoker, might have suffered his first heart attack at some point several years ago without realizing it. His death was caused by a restrictive coronary heart disease, Zane said.

"The manner of death is natural," Zane said.

Giamatti, a former president of Yale University, died after being stricken at his summer residence in Edgartown, Mass., on the resort island of Martha's Vineyard.

Vincent, a former CEO of Columbia Pictures, and Giamatti were close friends.

Vincent had flown the commissioner to Martha's Vineyard only hours before Giamatti became ill.

"This is a terrifically tragic day for me," Vincent told NBC on Saturday. "I lost a great friend. I lost a partner, and it's difficult to talk about the future. I will be happy to serve as interim commissioner.

Coca-Cola bought Columbia in 1983 and Vincent continued as head of the company. He also was made an executive vice president of Coca-Cola, but resigned last July after he was assigned to non-entertainment areas.

"I know something about running things properly," Vincent said in a recent interview. "I have a background as a chief executive. I have experience dealing with the government." The executive council, authorized by baseball rules to assume responsibility for the commissioner's office when needed, delegated authority to Vincent following a conference call.

A search committee may be formed to consider candidates as the new commissioner. For election, a vote of three-quarters of the major-league clubs is required.

Irish soccer loses first two games of season

Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON — Freshman Ben Brutocao, a transfer from Florida State, saved a rebound into the upper left corner late in the first half Sunday to lead No. 2 Virginia to a 3-0 victory over Notre Dame in the Addaas-Metropolitan Life Soccer Classic.

Brutocao, who had two goals in the game, gave the Cavaliers a 1-0 lead in the first half. He also had an assist in the second half. He was chosen as the tournament's most valuable player.

Notre Dame, on the other hand, lost for the first time this season. The Irish had won their first two matches.

Against Virginia, the Irish were outshot 18-6 and had just one shot on goal. The Cavaliers took advantage of their opportunities, scoring three goals in the first half.

In the second half, Virginia continued to press and scored two more goals, giving Brutocao four goals for the tournament.

Notre Dame was led by sophomore goalkeeper Jonathan Kean, who made six saves to keep the Cavaliers from scoring more than three goals.

The Irish next play at 7 p.m. Monday against No. 12 Virginia at the Joyce ACC Football Stadium.

From Notre Dame to Montana, Peltier's still a hit

With thoughts of grandeur and the dream come true of a professional baseball career ahead of him, Dan Peltier, simply dressed in a short-sleeved shirt and slacks, stepped into the airplane at Albany under a sunny June sky.

When he was of Notre Dame baseball star stepped out of the plane at Butte, Mont., it had been snowing. In fact, the game he was supposed to play in that day had been snowed out.

"It was crazy," smiles Peltier. "I thought they had sent me to hell."

Though it was not quite like hell, he was not as lucky as many of his counterparts who had been assigned to more accommodating climates like Florida and South Carolina. Instead, Peltier found himself amid a frosty flurry for his first minor league game.

Peltier didn't expect that.

But for that matter, almost nothing that happened this summer could have been expected, except maybe that he would be playing baseball.

What could have stopped after a tremendous 1- for-19 start, Peltier would bounce back and hit .414 with five home runs and 19 RBIs in his first 19 games?

Who would have thought that he would be leading the entire rookie league with a .405 batting average?

Who would have thought he'd be assigned to Butte?

Who would have thought he would need a snow blower more than a bat when he arrived in Butte? That's right. A routine, practice fly ball did him in. And one can be fairly sure that the offer amounted to more than $24 and trinkets.

Next on Peltier's chain of good fortune was a veritable ransacking of the Pioneer Rookie League, sending the Rangers' front office into a frenzy. And just as he was leading the league in batting average, the Good Ranger of the Southwest came down upon Peltier and included him with a minor (although painful) injury that sent him home two weeks early to enjoy the company of his friends and family before going back to school.

With the imprint that the ball entrenched over Peltier's back, he was granted a guaranteed spot on the 1991 Ranger spring training roster as well as his tuition paid for at Notre Dame.

But not every situation was ideal for the Irish slugger. He did get stationed in Butte, which necessitated him to bring a parks instead of suntan lotion. But even in this, Peltier has found a trace of enthusiasm.

"It was alright," he says casually. "Pretty nice. Nice country, anyway."

That's the way, Dan.
