Two female students accosted on campus

Two Notre Dame students were accosted Friday by two large BMX-type small frame bicycles. According to Phillip Johnson, assistant director of Security, both incidents occurred just after 8:00 p.m. and neither woman was injured.

The first incident occurred on the Main Quad between Walsh Hall and LaFortune Center. The second incident occurred near the Center for Social Concerns and Hesburgh Library, said Johnson.

Johnson said that both females reported that the suspects approached her as she was walking alone, asked for her name, and proceeded to touch her inappropriately.

The victims went to their respective residence halls after the incidents and called security, Johnson said. Johnson said the suspects were last seen riding on these bicycles south near the Library. Suspicion one is described as a black male, 15 to 30 years old, muscular build, short hair, and wearing a white button down shirt and blue jeans. Suspect two is described as a black male, possibly 17 to 20 years old, muscular build, and possibly wearing a white tee shirt.

Johnson said no arrests have been made at this time. He added that anyone with information about this incident should contact Notre Dame Security at 283-4444 or 239-5555.

"For safety it is best not to walk alone after dark. Always walk on well lit, busy pathways or streets. If you cannot find someone to walk with you after dark, contact Security for an escort," said Johnson.

"If you are the victim of any crime, or if you see any suspicious activity, go to the nearest open building or residence hall and immediately contact Security/Policing. Additional information about safety and security is available at the Security Office," said Johnson in a press release.

Measles vaccine available at SMC

BY CHRISTINE GILL
Senior Staff Reporter

Saint Mary's students who received a measles vaccination prior to Jan. 1, 1980 can be immunized at Health Services today and Tuesday.

The vaccinations will be given from 9:30 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. on both days at Health Services, located in the basement of Holy Cross Hall, and are of no cost to students.

All students, on and off campus, who have not had the vaccine are required to be so. Faculty and staff are not required to be immunized.

The vaccinations are a result of the measles emergency declared on Thursday, Sep. 7, at Notre Dame, by the Indiana State Health Department. Although there has not been a confirmed case of measles on the Saint Mary's campus, the immunizations are for those students who did not update their vaccinations as advised by Health Services in a letter to all students at the end of classes last spring.

Immunizations continue at ND

No new cases of measles were reported at Notre Dame over the weekend, according to Carol Seager, director of University Health Services.

Vaccinations for all family, staff and students born after 1957 but not immunized against the disease since 1980 continue today at three campus sites:

- The free shots are available from noon until 9 p.m. in the concourse of the Hesburgh Library, the Health Center and the Dooley Room of the LaFortune Student Center.
- On Friday 2,300 people were inoculated, according to Seager. The most shots were given at the infirmary, followed by the library and LaFortune. Seager said, although waits at all three sites stretched to a half-hour in the middle of the afternoon.
- The students have been very good about going to get their shots, but we need everyone who did not go on Friday to be there Monday to help pull this off," Seager said.
- The mass immunization was sparked by a measles emergency declared by the Indiana State Health Department.

Government restrictions holding up Chinese ND students

BY KELLEY TUTHILL

This is the first of a three-part series.

Notre Dame was expecting 34 new students from China this year, but so far only 18 have arrived.

"Some are going to be late; they always are," said Arthur Grubert, director of the International Student Affairs Office. He said it will still be another month before an accurate number can be known.

Grubert said some students may be held up because undergraduates are facing the Chinese government's new military requirement or else they must work in the fields. The Chinese government also wants to train their own PHD's and only allows post-doctorates to do research in America, said Grubert. He said the Chinese government is exercising control over exchange programs by requiring additional exit visas.

Grubert said the new regulations require a statement by the student's local employer or local police that states that the student in question was not involved in the demonstrations in Beijing last spring.

"If a student was very involved or a leader he or she probably won't get a permit," said Grubert. He said the moderately involved students might get a permit, however.

Notre Dame is waiting for letters from some of the new students and some have already called to say they are not coming, according to Grubert.

"It's not easy to communicate," said Grubert. "There is not total access like in the U.S."

Notre Dame presently hosts 110 Chinese students, and most of them are studying at the graduate level, said Grubert. Prior to the military crackdown in Tiananmen Square the "exhilaration, excitement, and hope on campus among the Chinese students was unreal," said Grubert.

He said after the massacre, the students could not believe that the government would turn on the nonviolent students in China. At Notre Dame the Chinese students formed the Chinese Student Solidarity Association, said Grubert.

The students here collected information about the pro-democracy movement for those in China who were unable to get unbiased reports. According to Grubert, they communicated through the mail, telephones and facsimile machines.

All of the students were able to contact their families and the message they received from home was universal, said Grubert. "Stay with your academic programs and get your degrees." According to Grubert, families continually

The Kremlin's ambassador to Italy said Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has asked Pope John Paul II when he visits Italy in November. "Yes, why not," replied Ambassador Nikolai Lukov when reporters in Genoa asked him Saturday if Gorbachev would meet with the pope. Such a meeting has been considered likely but neither the Vatican nor the Kremlin has confirmed such an encounter.

Western theological tradition holds that one of the greatest gifts God has given us is the freedom to choose our own course. Why then does organized religion not allow man to make his own decision? Furthermore, differing religious entities claim to hold exclusive knowledge that leads to a certain destination. One method, one path is prescribed for reaching a specific spiritual location. The concept of an alternative route or destination is strictly forbidden. The idea is that one must make one's own choice in life, and must depend upon some external power, i.e. the church or religious group, for guidance. Man is said to remove the necessity of making a conscious rational choice by predetermining his own beliefs. The individual is predispersed one way or another regarding the religion of one's parents, and what he shall believe. In Second and perhaps more importantly, it makes the individual from the responsibility of making his own personal decision.

Major landscaping improvements planned for Mod Quad

BY SARAH VOIGT
Senior Staff Reporter

The beautification of the East Quad, begun on July 24 and slated to be completed October 31, is the first phase in a plan to upgrade and enhance the landscaping on the Notre Dame campus. The East Quad, formerly known as the Mod Quad, includes the area between the Pasquerillas, and Grace and Flanner Towers.

David Woods, director of support services at Notre Dame, said that the Maintenance Center began to investigate the possibility of a master landscape plan for campus one year ago.

Woods said that a study conducted last winter by Cole Associates, Inc., a South Bend architectural firm that designed the landscaping between Siegfried and Knott, targeted the East Quad as the best place to begin the renovations.

Woods explained, "The newly finished landscaping between the new dorms made the Pasquerilla's 12 to 20 year old landscaping look old in contrast. Also, some say that it [the East Quad] has been a neglected area of campus. Plus, roughly 25 percent of the student body live in the East Quad dorms."

According to Woods, two student hubs with six to eight benches will be placed at the intersections of the major walkways to encourage students to relax and congregate in the quad. The benches will be built on a raised mound of earth surrounded by new plantings of flowers and shrubs and a wide sidewalk for handicap access.

In addition, a new volleyball pit will be built between Grace and Pasquerilla East. Woods said that a petition signed by hundreds of students to keep the volleyball court set up in the same location last spring.

A Sneak Preview of the improved "Mod Quad"

The new pit will include a regulation size volleyball court with 10 additional feet of sand on all sides of the court. The court will be flanked by two mounds of grass for spectators to sit and will include a 18 foot by 12 foot grassy picnic area on the far end of the pit. "We construe this court as a model for the future development of coeducational recreational areas on other residential areas on this campus," said Woods.

In addition, six to eight circular bicycle racks will be scattered around dorms in the East Quad. According to Woods, 19 solid steel racks will be arranged in a circle on brick and concrete path around a planted tree. "We hope that this will become a standard for the rest of campus as more students feel secure parking their bikes on campus," said Woods.

Some of the improvements are as simple as paving walkways to accommodate existing traffic patterns. Woods said that new walkways will be laid on diagonals from Grace and Flanner toward the Hesburgh Library.

"The East Quad is just the first of many areas to be upgraded with landscaping on campus," said Woods.

A lawsuit against Kinko's Graphic Corporation by eight textbook publishers is still pending.

Kinko's makes multiple copies of copyrighted materials for classroom use, providing updates on recent discoveries in various fields. The textbook publishers claim that Kinko's has violated the 1976 Copyright Act. Section 107 of the copyright law states, "the fair use of a copyrighted work, including such use by reproduction in copies or substantial parts for purposes such as criticism, comment, news reporting, teaching (including multiple copies for classroom use), scholarship or research is not an infringement of copyright."

A recent press release from Kinko's states that the company has ten full-time co-workers at its national copyright center who contact publishers to obtain permission to copy their materials. According to the press release, if they process over 10,000 permission requests a month, and give compensation if it is requested by the copyright holder.

Scott Tagliarino, a public relations representative for Kinko's, said that neither verbal nor written permission is actually necessary under the present law.

Tagliarino said that Kinko will not settle out of court because, "they fully believe they are right." He said that the lawsuit has had no effect on business, and has not prompted any change in Kinko's policies.

The case against Kinko will go to court in about a year.

GUATEMALA CITY — The bodies of a university professor who led a teachers' strike and three kidnapped students were found Sunday in a canyon near San Carlos University, police reported.

They said an anonymous telephone caller told authorities where the bodies could be found. Notes attached to the bodies referred to the destruction of the leadership of the student organization to which the victims belonged.

The victims, all of whom had been kidnapped within the past three weeks, were identified as professor Carlos Humberto Cabrera Rivera, 48, who was abducted Saturday; Carlos Chuta Carney, a 35-year-old law student kidnapped Friday; and Victor Rodriguez Jaramilla, 38, a political science student, and his wife, 33-year-old psychology student Silvia Maria Azurdia de Rodriguez, abducted Aug. 23.

Police said all had been shot repeatedly.

No individual or group has asserted responsibility for the kidnappings and slayings, and police said they have no suspects.

South Africans protest violence during elections; 29 reported dead

Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Mourners on Sunday buried six victims of election violence near Cape Town, and activists prepared a mass march to protest alleged police shootings and reported deaths of 29 civilians.

Regional Police Commissioner Phillipus Fourie was quoted Sunday as saying he will lead his officers to stop the march planned for Sept. 17, and an anti-apartheid clergyman said he expects police will use violence to disperse demonstrators.

"It will be solid evidence of what they have done on (election) night. Because if they would do this in the light of day... then God knows how they behave in the dead of night in our townships when there is nobody to protect our people," said Rev. Allan Boesak, leader of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches.

Evette Otto, a teenager who was five months pregnant when she was killed Wednesday in Kalksteensoenfontein township, was buried Sunday in her hometown of West Biebeek, 180 miles northwest of Cape Town. Her mother told a news conference Friday that Evette, 16, was standing on the street talking to friends when a uniformed officer shot her in the chest.

Funerals of those killed in the violence, which began during general elections Wednesday, are scheduled throughout the week. Activists have asked the nation to wear black armbands and light candles for an hour a night.

Marchers want to protest the deaths of 29 people activists say were killed in election violence, mostly by police. Activists said 200 people were hurt when white riot squad officers marched through townships, shooting and whipping bystanders as well as stone throwers. Those throwing stones were protesting the elections, which exclude South Africa’s 28 million black majority.

Police say only 15 people were killed and have not acknowledged responsibility for any deaths.

Cape Town doctors on Friday reported treating children as young as 4 years old for gunshot wounds. Attorney General Essa Moosa on Friday said 29 people were killed, including a 12-year-old boy. An ambulance has reported taking a 6-year-old girl to a mortuary.

Police have reported using pistol fire, birdshot, buckshot, rubber bullets and tear gas. They reported a handful of injuries, none of them children.

Boesak said the issue of the killings unfortunately has turned into “a numbers game” since Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok called Boesak and Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu liars for their death toll reports. The clergymen have called for Vlok to be fired.

Republican charges CIA with botching Afghanistan

Associated Press

"The CIA has secretly pursued the rightwing Afghani policy for years," the chairman of the Republican Task Force on Terrorism and Unconventional Warfare, Rep. Bill McCollum of Florida, charged in a 2,600-word article in the editorial section of the Washington Post.

The most recent blunder, he wrote, was to shut off the supply of U.S. arms while pressuring Afghan guerrillas into launching an assault on the Afghan city of Jalalabad near the Pakistani border.

At the same time, the Soviet Union continued massive arms supplies to its client in Kabul, enabling that government to withstand the assault.

"The siege of Jalalabad has turned into a stalemate that threatens to stall the entire resistance movement. The key mistake by the Central Intelligence Agency and the State Department was to give control of U.S. arms shipments to the guerrillas to Pakistan's Inter-Services Intelligence, that nation's equivalent of the CIA, McCollum wrote.

"Why the CIA gave ISI its proxy was easier to understand in the beginning," as the United States began to arm the Moslem guerrillas, or mujaheddin, after the 1979 Soviet invasion, McCollum wrote.

"Our intelligence community had little faith in the mujaheddin's ability to drive out the Soviets; for a relatively small sum we could blacken Moscow's eye and get our own back for Vietnam," he wrote.

But the policy allowed generals around the late Pakistani strongman, Mohammad Zia ul-Haq, to bolster an Islamic fundamentalist whom McCollum compared to Libyan Leader Moammar Gadhafi. The policy slighed tribal leaders who had greater support in Afghanistan.

In 1976, ISI recruited Gulbadin Hekmatyar, who was then a "firebrand fundamentalist student leader at Kabul University" and who now heads Herbi-I-Isami, one of seven Afghan resistance parties based in Peshawar, Pakistan, the congressman wrote.

Hekmatyar was censured by the leaders of the six other parties this summer after guerrillas under his control ambushed and killed 32 lieutenants of the leading Afghan resistance fighter, Ahmed Shah Massoud, who belongs to another party.

The siege of Jalalabad has resulted in a stalemate, in large part because CIA "tacticians were so certain they were right that they turned off the arms supply.

BOGOTA, Colombia — The Colombian government will extradite three more reputed cocaine traffickers wanted in the United States on charges of money-laundering and drug smuggling, an official said Sunday.

The announcement came after a weekend of army raids on ranches believed owned by the country's top two drug barons. Soldiers seized property including cattle, tropical birds and swimming pools, the army and the El Espectador daily said.

In Medellin, the nation's second-largest city, a series of attacks linked to drug cartels continued. A bomb damaged a liquor factory, heralded as assailants set a city garbage truck on fire, and police defused a bomb at a branch of a government-run savings bank.

No injuries were reported.

In western Colombia, assailants killed a foreman and set fire to the ranch of a government official who wanted the confiscated rural property of drug traffickers distributed to peasants.

A National Drug Council official speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press the government has signed extradition orders for three imprisoned Colombians.

The three were identified as Ana Helena Rodriguez, 37, jailed in Bogota and accused of drug trafficking; Bernardo Londono Quintana, 47, jailed in Medellin, where their cartel is based; and Eduardo Martinez Romero, 47, charged with laundering millions of dollars of cocaine money for the Medellin Cartel, as extradited to the United States last week after losing his appeal.

By an army officer in Medellin, asking not to be identified for security reasons, said the properties seized over the weekend are believed to belong to two of the most wanted drug bosses, Pablo Escobar and Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha. They are believed to be the No. 1 and No. 2 men in the Medellin cocaine cartel.

"We are going to keep the seizures up," the army officer said.

Last month, after assassins working for the traffickers killed Sen. Luis Carlos Galan, the leading presidential candidate and an outspoken foe of the drug barons, all currently in hiding.

Since then, the army and police have made public numerous confiscated documents showing the purported multimillion-dollar multinational holdings of Colombia's most notorious drug barons, all currently in hiding.

Colombia supplies about 80 percent of the cocaine reaching the United States.

Casualties of war

The United States has offered a reward of $250,000 for information leading to the arrest of Escobar or Rodriguez Gacha, who also head the United States' list of Colombians wanted for extradition on drug-trafficking charges.

Soldiers also raided a ranch Saturday in Puerto Boyaca, 95 miles north of Bogota in the notorious Magdalena Medio coca-lab zone, found fence-marks GRG, presumably the Medellin cocaine cartel, also for alleged laundering.

The main ranch house contained walls of Italian marble, electric clocks and betting paraphernalia and a corral for raising the fighting birds.

The army also reportedly found a computer floppy disk showing Rodriguez Gacha owned 374 radio-equipped cars, trucks and vans worth millions of dollars.

The more than 2,100 members of a union exchanged their latest contracts at midnight. Workers struck Borg-Warner trucks. The company makes F-series and Bronco supply of transmissions. The strike had interrupted its production at the Ford plant in Wayne, Mich., truck plant for the week of Sept. 18 because the union a $14.9 million contract that would include modest wage increases and less insurance coverage in exchange for an employee stock ownership plan.

Jack Reising, vice president for human resources at Borg-Warner, said one provision would give most employees a 55-cent-per-hour raise in the next year and 40-cent raises in each of the following two years. For workers on an incentive plan, the increases would be 65 cents and 32 cents, respectively.

The many income funds that specialize in government securities, where the risk of default is considered negligible, could also lose a lot of their appeal if bond prices were depressed by a flairup of inflation and higher interest rates.

But most analysts agree that the 1980s mutual fund boom has gone too far too soon to be regarded as only some temporary growth spurt. Millions of American investors evidently have concluded over the past 10 years that they want or need professional help in managing their finances. And as demand for that kind of service increased, mutual fund managers were right there waiting, only too happy to meet it.

Market advances slightly, softening losing week

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 154.09 million shares, down from 160.16 million in the previous session. Nationwide consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks that are traded over the counter, topped 182.63 million shares.

Analysts said traders' spirits got a small lift from declines in interest rates and rising prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, rose about $5 for each $1,000 in face value.

But doubts persisted about the market's ability to mount any concerted move in the near future because the Federal Reserve to relax its credit policy further.

That view, in turn, has reinforced suspicions among many market participants that stocks might be due for a pullback and not ready to launch an advance through the first eight months of the year.

At the same time the market's rise to record highs in late August and early September was prompted by selling by investors who had been waiting "get out even" after suffering large paper losses in the crash of 1987.

F.W. Woolworth made the biggest contribution to the Dow's gain, climbing 3 to 71 3/4. The company declined comment on persistent speculation in the market about a possible takeover or restructuring move.

Among other actively traded blue chips, Eastman Kodak rose 3 3/4 to 49 7/8 and Exxon rose 3/8 to 56 1/2 and International Business Machines was down 1 1/8 at 116.

Airlines stocks continued their recent pullback after a dramatic runup this summer on holiday orders and profits. UAL lost 1 1/2 to 280 1/4; AMR 1 5/8 to 43 3/8 and Delta Air Lines 3/4 to 74 1/2.

About Laboratories added 1 1/8 to 62 7/8. The company repeated projections of record sales and earnings this year, and said directors authorized it to buy back as many as 10 million of its common shares.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $4.05 billion, or 0.12 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks closed up 17 to 493.92. Standard & Poor's industrial index rose 4.47 to 270.47 and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 41 at 348.76.

The Nasdaq composite index for the over-the-counter market gained 1.63 to 471.31. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 284.10, up 31.

Ford supplier strike interrupts truck plant production, but negotiations continue

Dramatic bull markets in both stocks and bonds made a comeback in 1980 to fuel a "go-go" funds growth. In July alone, for instance, rising stock prices swelled industry assets by about $14 billion.

In the financial boom also fueled a dramatic expansion in the number and types of funds available to investors.

At the beginning of the '80s, the industry consisted of 35 funds with slightly fewer than 10 million shareholder accounts.

By the end of 1988, there were 2,718 funds with close to 55 million accounts. This naturally poses some questions: How long will this kind of growth continue, and what is leading the nation's investors? The funds had a hot streak once before, though of lesser proportions, during the great bull market for stocks in the 1960s. The way to a period of contraction and disillusionment in the early 1970s when the "go-go" funds of that era turned cold.

In those days, however, mutual funds were considered almost exclusively a vehicle for investing in stocks. Notably, there were no money market mutual funds at all until the Reserve Fund made its debut in 1972.

Today, stock funds, with assets of about $237 billion, remain a significant part of the industry. But money market and short-term municipal bond funds, at about $460 billion, and bond and income funds, at about $300 billion, both outsize them in size.

That goes a long way toward explaining why the stock market crash of 1987 inflicted only minor damage on the industry. A lot of money that might have simply fled the business 20 years before was instead switched into other types of funds.

Still, with its new diversi­vity, many observers agree that the industry's growth will likely slow or stop should the nation run into a spell of economic trouble on the order of the one that occurred in the 1970s.

Stock funds, as ever, would be vulnerable to a bear market. Many bond funds, especially those that invest in so-called "junk" bonds, could fall into disfavor in a slump that caused increased defaults by business­ies.
NEW YORK — Maverick Soviet politician Boris Yeltsin said Sunday that his country faces continuing economic and social decline and can learn from American democracy while changing its political system.

"We are in an economic and financial and social crisis, as well as in respect to the Communist party," Yeltsin said on CBS News’ "Face the Nation."

Yeltsin arrived Saturday to begin his first visit to the United States, a two-week tour that includes stops throughout the country.

"We have to take what is positive from Soviet experience and what has been positive in the experience of the other socialist countries, positive from America's more than 200 years of democratic experience — and on some occasions that of creating a new model of socialism," Yeltsin said through a translator.

"We do need a new model of socialism," yes," he said. "We have to stop being so dogmatic as we were before.""The whole society is in a crisis and such extraordinary measures of an economic or financial nature are obviously necessary since the standard recently not only not risen but has actually fallen," he said.

Yeltsin, 58, lost his position as Moscow's Communist Party chief in 1987 after criticizing the slow pace of change under Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev. But this year he was overwhelmingly elected to the Soviet Congress, where he is an outspoken member of a radical bloc.

Gorbachev, he said, "missed some opportunities to accelerate perestroika," or political and economic restructuring.

"Naturally, there has started a movement from below in the form of strikes indicating dissatisfaction with the national leadership, including with Mr. Gorbachev," Yeltsin said.

"If the situation gets worse, and I think it is going to, its popularity and authority will scrupulously continue to decline."

However, Yeltsin said he believes Gorbachev "did a lot about the democratization of the country" and that he "will indeed retain his position as leader."

He added: "I would like him to remain the leader of the country and I think that's the way it's going to be for the time being."

The student leader was so exhausted from his hunger strike and travels he couldn't complete his speech, said Grubert. The Notre Dame students were touched by the fellow student's self-sacrifice, he added.

"Short-term the students are not optimistic about the prospects, said Grubert, but he said they are more positive about the long-term situation.

"The students miss their families and the International Student Affairs Office has helped to bring some families here, including some spouses, said Grubert.

"One male student left Notre Dame two days after the massacre to "share the love and solidarity of students in the United States with the families of those who were killed," said Grubert. The other returning student was female.

"The Hungarian government has chosen to illegally allow East German citizens to travel to West Germany in violation of international treaty," the state news agency ADN said.

LETTERS

Taxes, taxes, and more taxes

Philanthropy is no answer for Joseph Average

Dear Editor:

This letter is a response to Richard lachetta's letter of Sept. 7. He writes about the imaginary "Joseph Average" that pays all the taxes. His position is that "to ask for money and help for people in need is the proper, moral way." He then says that the government holds a "gun to our heads" and steals the money, he writes that the majority of the tax money does not benefit those who put up with being robbed. I take exception with all three conclusions.

Let me discuss his theses in the order they are laid out. First, one assumes that the best response to needy people is to let only willing philanthropists help them. Two consequences of this come to mind: Mr. lachetta seems to agree that there are some people in need; second, that the inherent goodness of human nature would make people help their unhappy fellow beings. If you believe that, then much do you think Leonia Helmsley would allocate in the name of philanthropy if she had her way?

Mr. lachetta says that it is unjust for those who make the most money to contribute the most to pay for all this, considering that they are most likely not to need it. I agree. Those who make the most money are not physical entities anyway, so indeed they have no use for the money. But this is a zero-sum game. So if they do not pay, who pays? Mr. lachetta objects that those like Mrs. Helmsley are punished for their competence. Please, put me in her predicament.

I wish to emphasize that I do believe in free enterprise. I want to succeed on my own, and I would hate to be dependent on anyone, least of all the government, for my well being. I just happen to think that the people in electing a particular government, decide on the priorities of their needs. They also give this government the mandate to master the means to satisfy those goals. I think that the purpose of the game is to optimize the situation for Joseph Average, and not for the best players. A system that does too many people is doomed itself.

Graduated taxing pays-off for needy

Dear Editor:

The views expressed by Richard lachetta in his Sept. 7 letter to the editor represent an unfair condemnation of the graduated tax and our tax system in general. A graduated tax does not "punish the productive for being productive"; rather, it recognizes that losing a given percentage of income is harder for lower income people than for higher income people. For example, a person earning $8,000 a year and spending virtually all of it on basic necessities could suffer serious hardship if deprived of $800, while a millionaire could bear a $100,000 loss with little or no change in his standard of living.

Student loan programs are one example of government social spending which both increases individuals' standards of living and benefits the national economy as a whole (by providing industry with skilled engineers, scientists, etc.). To dismiss all taxation as "stealing" and all social spending as wasteful is to reject the enormous benefits gained in the past through responsible use of government revenue.

Crime doesn't take a holiday

Dear Editor:

It seemed like any other night at the bars; they said their hellos, had a drink, said their goodbyes and carefully sauntered to their car. This familiar scenario, however, was tainted with a sinister twist - two young desperate boys, a smashed car window, and a cocked gun pointed at a beset friend's head.

While the importance of crime prevention in South Bend is certainly not a new idea, one may agree that the ever important idea of personal safety is often taken for granted by students. Of course, the above victims thought they were careful that night. The car was locked and parked on a busy, well-lit street, and they treveled in a group. Yet sometimes those seemingly effortless precautions are not enough.

Perhaps it would have been safer had they parked directly in front of the bar and not off the block. They could have asked a group of male students to escort them to the car. Furthermore, when parking in a seedy bar strip, it would have been wise to completely respect the car before unlocking the doors. If one discovers a shattered window, flat tire, or any other malicious act, walk away from the car and immediately call the police.

Had the three girls exercised these safety measures such an armed robbery might not have occurred. As a final note, remember, the bars are located in the "Not So Safe Neighborhood," a neighborhood which transforms into a crime-filled jungle at night, and whose natives are not the least bit friendly.

'Midnight Caller' full of intriguing drama

JOE BUCOLO

Airin at 9 p.m. Tuesdays, "Midnight Caller" presents Jack Killian (Gary Cole) behind his microphone at KRCM, 98.3 FM in San Francisco. With the help of his producer Billy Po (Dennis Dun), Jack hosts an evening radio talk show called "Midnight Caller."

Each week's episode places Jack in a situation that takes him away from his microphone to scenarios not often familiar to a talk show host. Lieutenant Carl Zymark's (Arthur Taxier) regular presence on the show alerts viewers to the fact that, somehow, police are involved in most plots. In one episode, Jack falls headoverheels in love with an attractive night club singer. After a few dates (and a few hundred trips to the bedroom), Jack finds himself to be the prime suspect for the murder of his lover's ex-husband. That particular plotline—much like most of the ones presented on "Caller"—is mysterious, intriguing, and steamy.

The "look" of "Midnight Caller" has more sparkle and jazzy music. Each week's episode places Jack in a situation that takes him away from his microphone to scenarios not often familiar to a talk show host. Lieutenant Carl Zymark's (Arthur Taxier) regular presence on the show alerts viewers to the fact that, somehow, police are involved in most plots. In one episode, Jack falls in love with an attractive night club singer. After a few dates (and a few hundred trips to the bedroom), Jack finds himself to be the prime suspect for the murder of his lover's ex-husband. That particular plotline—much like most of the ones presented on "Caller"—is mysterious, intriguing, and steamy.

Despite the show's intense entertainment, two aspects of the program may puzzle audience members. The first, which also plagues CBS' "Murder, She Wrote," lies in the truth behind a radio personality getting into situations so unrelated to his occupation. Angela Lansbury stars in "Murder" as a woman who solves murders. In the same way, it is queer that Jack would be catching killers and solving world crises.

The second problem arises from the flashing switchboard at the station. Jack's show airs at midnight, when most people are asleep; however, more people seem to call Jack in the middle of the night than tuned in to see the chairs fly on the famous episode of "Geraldo." Those who are awake at such an odd hour of the day are seldom in the mood—or condition—to discuss the socially-relevant issues Jack addresses. If one can overlook these two problems (and it's easy to do), he will surely enjoy what "Midnight" has to offer.

The cast on the show is wonderful. Cole portrays Jack as a caring, concerned, and educated man who enjoys a "tough guy" image. Taxier and Dun's supporting roles are equally convincing—as is the performance by Wendy Kilbourne, who plays station owner Devon King; however, the intense radio waves of this show come from writers and directors who carefully combine creative writing with images that effervesce with the flavor of urban life in the late 80s.

NBC's "Midnight Caller" is a dark, driven show, full of intense drama. It entertains—and often educates—its audience. Now if Jack could only coin a catchy opening phrase. "Good morning, San Francisco?" Noab.

Wallace, who began the day by putting himself in trouble with his drive on the first playoff hole, a 288-yard par-4. He pushed it to the right of the fairway and behind a stand of trees. He saved himself momentarily by hitting his second shot just beyond the back of the green into a little gully.

After taking a drop, Estes followed with a near-perfect chip shot that rolled past the hole. He missed the par putt just wide.

Hubert, who managed a final-round 6-under 68, flirted with disaster on his approach shot, which landed on the left edge of the green, just a few feet away from a moat. But he was able to two-putt for par.

Hubert trailed Estes by three strokes to start the final round and he started the day with a bogey on the first hole. He put together four consecutive birdies to pull into a tie with Estes. Steve Elkibbecher and Eichelberger. Estes parred the first four holes but failed to make the lead with consecutive birdies on Nos. 5 and 6. After a par 4, he went to 16 under with a birdie on the 11th hole, but that ended his scoring.

Eichelberger joined the group at 16 under but a bogey on 14 and a double bogey on 15 put him back into third at 271, 8 under par. Rose, however, cannot be submitted for a world record, because he was aided by a wind of 2.51 meters per second, well over the allowable 2.00.

Still, his time was faster than the world record of 12.92 he set Aug 16 at Zurich, Switzerland, and the wind-aided 12.91 in Montreal-Aug 10 in Champaign, Ill., on June 1, 1979.

The powerful Kingdom thought he had broken the world record for the second time this year. He did not learn that the aiding wind was too strong until he was about halfway around his victory lap. Colin Jackson of Britain in­formed him.

Jackson finished in 12.95, marking the first time two runners went under 13.00 in the same race.

"Before the start, we had a head wind," Kingdom said. "That's when we fin­ished and I said I had done better, I couldn't believe it.

Sullivan captures Havoline 200

Associated Press

ELKBART LAKE, Wis. — Danny Sullivan darted past an out-of-fuel Michael Andretti two turns from the end and went on to win the Texaco-Havoline 200 Indy-car race with a record speed Sunday at Road America.

Sullivan, who started from the pole, earned his second victory of the season and the 12th of his Indy-car career as he averaged 123.050 mph, breaking Emerson Fittipaldi’s year-old record of 122.215.

Andretti dominated the 200-mile, 200-lap race, leading twice for 31 laps and building margins of more than 34 seconds on the four-mile, 11-turn circuit.

Sullivan, the defending CART-PPG series champion, led three times during the race for 19 laps, but trailing by about eight seconds after stopping for a final splash of fuel two laps from the end.

Andretti still led by 7.79 seconds as he began the last lap. But, suddenly, he began to slow and Sullivan came charging into the picture.

As the cars approached turn 10, Andretti was side-by-side with the slower car of Didier Theys of Belgium ahead of Sullivan, who veered to the left and onto the grass alongside the racing surface to get by.

CART officials said unoffi- cially that Andretti ran out of fuel on or following the final lap, including second-place fin- isher Ten Foyt of Italy, who pulled off and stopped about 100 feet after crossing the fin- ish line 39.91 seconds behind Sullivan’s Chevrolet-powered Penske PC1.

Rick Mears, Sullivan’s Penske Racing teammate, finished third, followed by Arie Luyendyk of The Netherlands and Fittipaldi, the last driver on the lead lap. Andretti wound up sixth, a lap behind.

Fittipaldi, who came into the race leading Mears by 22 points in the battle for the season championship, now leads 165-147 with two races remaining. Fabi is third with 141 and Andretti fourth with 133.

Andretti started third and jumped to second at the start. He fell as far as 6.5 seconds behind Sullivan, on lap seven, then began to chop in the margins.

He trailed by just 1.22 seconds when the leaders made their first scheduled pit stops at the start of lap 16. He came out of the pits in the lead as Sullivan was black flag moment- arily by the car of A.J. Ruer Jr., pitting back in line.

Then Sullivan was slowed by a back-marker with mechanical problems.

Andretti’s Chevrolet-powered Lola then dashed off to leads of up to 22.7 seconds before he pitted again on lap 30, giving Foyt back in third.

When Sullivan drove onto pit road on lap 33, Andretti found himself back on top by a wide margin.

He was able to race off to a lead of 24.48 seconds, about one-third of a lap, before making his final fuel and tire stop on lap 38, coming back onto the track still in charge by 2.37 seconds and apparently certain he could make it to the finish.

Among the drivers having problems in the early going were two-time CART champion Bobby Rahal and four-time Indianapolis 500 winner A.J. Foyt, both going out with engine problems.

Becker won $330,000, while Lendl earned $150,000.

After the first set tiebreaker, Becker won 7-2 by Becker after moving ahead 5-0, Lendl easily took the second set. But Becker got a decisive break in the eighth game of the third set — just after Lendl had broken him.

Becker was up a break in the fourth set, but could not hold serve in the eighth game. They went to another tiebreaker, which Becker won 7-4 and 8-6 and a service winner after trailing 2-5.

"Tiebreakers are usually a shootout," Lendl said. "But with a serve like his, he got up court was much quicker than two weeks ago. I was able to play my game and he couldn’t find his game."

Lendl tied an Open record with his eighth consecutive final, something Bill Tilden did from 1918-25. The Czech, who now lives in Greenwich, Conn., less than an hour from the National Tennis Center, lost to Jimmy Connors twice, John McEnroe once and Wilander in previous Open finals.

Becker became the first German to win the American title, and the first of the many fans who rooted home Graf the previous day shouting, "BOBRIS, BOBRIS," Becker stood at the baseline with his hands raised high after winning the title. Then he threw his racket into the crowd as photographers stormed the court.

The West German nearly was ousted in the second round, when he was down two match points to Derrick Rostagno.

Miami begins post-Johnson era in big style with rout of Badgers

Associated Press

Craig Erickson, Walsh’s replacement at quarterback, threw four touchdown passes Saturday as the third-ranked Hurricanes routed Wisconsin 51-3 in their first game under coach Dennis Erickson. Quarterback Erickson started slowly, connecting on only one of his first 10 passes. But the junior eventually found his rhythm and finished 17-of-37 for 281 yards.

“I just wanted to get Wisconsin out of the way,” he said. “I struggled early on but then I did some things better. I didn’t have as many opportunities as I’d have liked in the first half.”

Coach Erickson, who took over for Johnson after he went to the Dallas Cowboys, was pleased with his Miami debut.

“We’re proud of the way we prepared and the way we played,” Erickson said. “We feel we’ve got a ton of players that can put the ball in the end zone when we need to.”

Columbus discovers America
Irish soccer drops two to Wisconsin squads

By THERESA KELLY

Monday, September 11, 1989

The Notre Dame women's soccer team couldn't escape Wisconsin over the weekend. Better make that couldn't escape the Wisconsin-Wisconsin-Milwaukee edged the Irish 2-1 on Friday, and third-ranked Wisconsin-Madison trounced them 6-0 on Saturday. Head Coach Dennis Grace, however, was upbeat about the trip.

"It was a fantastic trip in a lot of ways," Grace said. "We played two fantastic teams, we played hard, and I feel very good about how we came out of it all."

"I make the schedules, and we know exactly what we were getting into. I had no problem with the fact that we were playing one of the top teams in the country on the road, or that we put our backs against the wall."

Grace's very young team is still in the building stage, this being the team's second season with varsity status. Five freshmen and three sophomores started for the Irish in Wisconsin.

"We're not excited about losing 6-0, but I definitely think we came out very positive," Grace said. "We learned a lot. It's important to know that you can go to 0, and you can win with the score, or you can be a winner by developing and growing."

After three road games to start the season, the 1-2 Irish host Minnesota Wednesday. Will the team be glad to return to Moor Krause Stadium?

"Getting away brings a team together, gives them a sense of camaraderie," Grace said, "but it was a long bus ride home."

Freshman Alicia Turner continued to impress throughout the match. In her second conference match, which the Irish dropped 15-10, 7-15, 15-11, 15-17 to Portland, she smashed 16 kills.
