Disgruntled employee kills 7, injures 13 in KY

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE—A man with an assault rifle mowed down co-workers as he went from floor to floor “looking for bosses” at a printing plant Thursday, killing seven people and wounding 13 before taking his own life.

Police said Joseph Wesbecker, 47, had been on permanent disability, was being treated for mental disorders, and reportedly threatened the company. He carried several semi-automatic weapons and thousands of rounds of ammunition.

“I told them I’d be back. Get out of my way, John. I told them I’d be back,” the gunman told fellow Standard-Gravure Co. employee John Tingle, who approached him before the 30-minute shooting rampage began.

Police searched every floor of the three-story Standard-Gravure building for victims.

Activist voices global concerns

Vivienne Verdon-Roe demonstrated her faith in democracy when she said Thursday, “True patriotism, it seems to me, is that you see that your country is off course. That is the only way that democracy can work.”

Verdon-Roe, a peace activist and award-winning film maker, expressed her concern for ending global poverty, the threat of nuclear war, and environmental destruction in a lecture supported by Notre Dame’s Institute for International Peace Studies.

After the lecture, Verdon-Roe showed her documentary “Woman—For America. For the World,” which features the opinions of many women peace activists on the nuclear arms race. This film won an Academy Award for the best short documentary in 1987.

“This film features women speaking with common sense and compassion about the nuclear threat,” said Verdon-Roe. “They show that you don’t have to be an expert to have an informed and reasonable opinion. Women who understand that if we have the courage to speak with our hearts, we can make the difference.”

In 1983, Verdon-Roe and her associate Ian Thiermann founded Educational Film and Video Productions, a non-profit center which supports the production of films and videos on the nuclear arms race, and other social issues.

Verdon-Roe hopes that the videos will inform the public of the nuclear threat and other pressing global problems such as poverty and violence. She said, “Not knowing doesn’t solve our problems. Our problems are now crises. President Bush, in spite of improved relations, is still planning new strategies to fight nuclear war with the Soviet Union.”

Verdon-Roe said that such plans would increase the likelihood of nuclear war show, “a consistent lack of respect for life. It seems that people today are learning to respect the inanimate things such as money, possessions, and symbols more than respect for the living.”

She cited the controversy over the flag burning as an example of how far the United States has deviated from its ideals. Verdon-Roe asked, “Are we forgetting our reverence for the values that the American flag represents?”

“The man who burned our flag is concerned about our country’s support for the killing in South America,” said Verdon-Roe. “It seems to me that democracy can work.”

Many students have questioned the number of University of Michigan tickets allotted to the student body.

According to Jim Bell, associate ticket manager, the University is given 5,000 tickets for any away game against University of Michigan, Michigan State, or Purdue. As students have ticket preference for home games, “first priority is given to alumni for away games,” Bell said.

Two hundred tickets are held aside for students for these games. “Students are not guaranteed tickets,” said Bell.

Of the 200 tickets allotted to the students, 50 tickets were made available to those who purchased the roadtrip package through SUB, said Kara Lenahan, services commissioner for SUB.

The hotel reservations for the roadtrip were cancelled due to reasons not disclosed at this time, but those students who had purchased the package were still given their tickets and offered the bus ride and a $20 refund, said Lenahan.

So, in effect, only 150 tickets were put into the lottery, said Lenahan. The 75 winners were announced Monday, and each winner was given the opportunity to purchase two tickets, said Lenahan.

The only exceptions to the 5,000 tickets given to Notre Dame for away games are those held at either the Orange Bowl or the Meadowlands, said Bell.

Car thefts threaten safety of cars at ND

By KELLEY TUTHILL

Notre Dame has had several stolen car incidents on campus in the past week.

According to Phil Johnson, assistant director of security, Security officers were investigating a car in the D-Z parking lot when they discovered wires hanging from the broken steering column.

Upon an initial check of the plate the car did not register as stolen, said Johnson. “However, the officers were confident the vehicle was stolen as it looked stolen,” said Johnson.

Notre Dame Security worked with the Michigan and Niles Police as the owner resides in Niles. The owner was contacted and stated that the car was indeed stolen, said Johnson. The car is being held by Security until the South Bend Police Department takes custody of the vehicle for evidence.

Between September 1 at 6 p.m. and September 2 at 2:15 p.m. a 1987 silver Pontiac 6000 LE was stolen from campus, said Johnson. He said the vehicle was recovered later on September 2 by the South Bend Police Department.

On September 7, a 1989 silver Chevrolet Celebrity was stolen from Corby Hall and has yet to be recovered, said Johnson.

Between September 7 at 6:15 p.m. and September 10 at 6 p.m. a 1987 Pontiac SE was stolen from the D2 lot. The car was recovered when the South Bend Fire Department found the car engulfed in flames at 500 N. Cleveland. The police had no stolen car report as the Answers to most commonly asked Observer questions

After three-plus years at Notre Dame and an equal amount of writing for The Observer I have encountered a number of questions, comments, and complaints concerning this newspaper. In an attempt to answer some of the more common questions, I have decided to dedicate this inside column to that cause. I have chosen the five most commons questions I hear, and I have tried to give a brief answer to each. Hopefully some of the following will answer your questions.

Why did you run that cartoon? Upon receiving the cartoon, The Observer ran a rather controversial political cartoon on the viewpoint page of the paper concerning working mothers and their children. Many of our readers were outraged and asked how we could publish such a piece. The answer is simply that The Observer respects the right of everyone to have an opinion. Steve Beison, the nationally syndicated cartoonist who drew the cartoon, is entitled to make such a comment about society whether you believe him in or not.

At an educational institution like Notre Dame we should all be open to various viewpoints on any issue. The Viewpoint page of The Observer is set as a forum for the exchange of ideas. The mere fact that a cartoon, letter, or column appears on the Viewpoint page does not necessarily mean that that is the belief of The Observer's staff. It is an expression of opinion, and if one disagrees with it are encouraged to respond via a letter to the editor.

What is an editorial? An editorial is The Observer's opinion on an issue of campus, national, or international importance. The editorial represents the opinion of the majority of the editorial board of the paper, and it appears clearly labeled on the Viewpoint page. Although the editorial is written by a rotating member of the editorial board it is the result of a lengthy discussion among the editorial board members.

Answer: How do you reach over 12,000 people daily?

Question: What in an inside column? Yeas from a column is the daily column that appears on the second page of The Observer. The column is written by an Observer staff member and represents only the opinion of that staff member not that of The Observer. The inside column, like any column, may be humorous, critical, or political. The subject matter of the column is the responsibility of the author.

Why didn't they cover that? Well, maybe we didn't know about it. As large as The Observer is our staff cannot possibly be everywhere at once. Therefore it is possible that they will miss stories. If you feel that there is a story worth covering please do not hesitate to call The Observer's news staff and inform them. We are more than happy to hear your ideas in order to better improve our coverage.

Why aren't there more investigative pieces? If you think there should be, please let us know. Such pieces you probably have some ideas on what should be investigated. If there is something you think is corrupt or needs to be uncovered please give a call. If these types of stories were easy to find they wouldn't need uncovering.

I hope I have answered some of the more common question asked about The Observer. However, I realize that this short column could not possibly answer everyone's questions, comments, and criticisms. So if I have not answered your questions please feel free to write me a letter or call me at The Observer office (239-7471).

Salvagers find sunken treasure

Associated Press

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Salvagers working off South Carolina have begun recovering a golden bounty of bars and coins, valued at about $1 billion from a shipwreck that sank in a hurricane 132 years ago, a spokeswman said Thursday.

"It’s certainly the largest American treasure prove of all time," said Barry Schatz, a director of the Columbus America Discovery Group, which located the wreck of the SS Central America three years ago.

The gold bars and coins aboard the SS Central America include fortunes made during the California Gold Rush, said historian Judy Cooper of the Columbus America Discovery Group.

"I never dreamed it would be like this," Thomas Thompson, a director of the group, told The Washington Post in a story published Thursday.

The paddle-wheel steamer was traveling from Panama to New York on Sept. 12, 1857, when it hit a 200-mile storm in the Atlantic Ocean. More than 1,500 people survived.

The Central America was carrying a monthly shipment of gold from the San Francisco Mint to New York banks via the Isthmus of Panama.

The estimate of the cargo is about $1 billion, Thompson told the Post.

In addition, riches belonging to passengers returning East after making their fortunes in California appear to have been aboard the ship, Schatz told The Associated Press during a ship-to-shore interview from aboard the recovery ship Arctic Discoverer, which has been at the salvage site since July.

Historians originally believed the ship sank off North Carolina, but research led the Columbus America Group south. The Central America was located in 1986 and identified last year when the ship’s bell was raised.

The salvagers began bringing up the first artifacts last month, recovering about 400 pounds of gold so far, Schatz said.

In recent weeks, gold bars, including one weighing 62 pounds, rare “double eagle” coins valued at up to $20,000 each, and gold coins made by private California mints and valued at up to $15,000 have been recovered, said Pamela Adkins, a spokeswoman for the expedition.

Thompson, a specialist in underwater mining and robotics, was on the expedition ship Arctic Discoverer on Thursday and could not be reached for comment.

Schatz said much depends on how much personal gold from the passengers is recovered.

"We don’t know the extent of the cargo of valuables," he said, adding it could be sizeable because on the steamer the cost of the gold was about $360 a troy ounce — its highest price since 1876. At today’s prices — about 90 cents an ounce — the gold could be worth $1 billion, Thompson told the Post.

Thompson, who put up no money, said he expected to receive 40 percent of any proceeds from sale of the recovered treasure, the newspaper said.

The salvagers found the wreckage with the assistance of a computer program that analyzed data gleaned from hundreds of newspaper articles about the Central America’s sinking, Ms. Conrad said. The expedition paid close attention to references to tides, currents and wind directions.

that we should defend this man’s right to shock us. If we don’t support the actual living process of democracy, our flag will cease to be a symbol of democracy.

Verdon-Roe said. "I’m worried that we’re losing touch with our very basic values. Our loss of understanding is forcing us to destroy the very things that give us life: the air, the land, the water.

Yet, Verdon-Roe believes that, "We can solve these problems, if we face them. The Chinese word for crisis is made up of two words meaning danger and opportunity. This is a time of great opportunity."

Tank barge runs aground in NY

NEW YORK — A tank barge carrying 3.8 million gallons of gasoline ran aground in the East River Wednesday night, causing what the U.S. Coast Guard termed a "major gasoline spill."

Authorities closed parts of the East River and the Triborough Bridge as a precaution.

The barge, the Marania 440, was being towed by the tugboat East Coast when the barge struck bottom and ran aground just north of the Triborough Bridge at about 9:45 p.m., said Petty Officer Jeff Crawley, of the Coast Guard public affairs at Governor's Island.

An undetermined amount of gasoline was leaking into the river, Crawley said.

"We're talking like a major gasoline spill, but I don't know any amount at this time," Crawley said.

Crawley said Coast Guard pollution personnel were on the scene, working with the fire and police departments, the city Office of Emergency Management and Department of Environmental Protection and the state Department of Environmental Conservation.

Steampipe explodes on Philadelphia street

PHILADELPHIA — A steampipe explosion Thursday sprayed dirt and gravel on more than 100 parked cars and a restaurant, officials said.

A 12-inch split in the pipe, buried about 8 feet underground at a construction site, caused escaping steam to blow out gravel and dirt, said Steve Smith, vice president and general manager of Philadelphia Thermal Energy Corp., which placed the pipe.

No one was injured in the 4 a.m. incident.

Several cars had smashed windows. Most were covered with dust and mud. Rocks and dirt punched holes in the third- and first-floor roofs of Westy's Tavern and Restaurant located across from the site.

Crews worked through the morning to replace the pipe, which the company plans to test to find out what caused the split, Smith said.

Company officials already have contacted most of the car owners, Smith said.

Wesbecker told Dotson the man out," Green said.

"I hadn't been shot, but he was in shock.

Five of the wounded were in critical condition with multiple gunshot wounds and one was in serious condition. One person who was not wounded suffered a heart attack while in the hospital. A police official said:

"It looks like a battle zone ... with the blood and the people involved.

"There were bodies lying across staircases. It was just frightening."

Wesbecker entered the building at 8 a.m. with a duffel bag, an AK-47 semiautomatic rifle, two MAC-11 semi-automatic machine pistols, a .38-caliber handgun, a 9mm automatic and a bayonet. Police Chief Richard Dotson said:

"He was loaded for bear," Dotson said. It was under investigation how many shots he fired from the AK-47 semiautomatic rifle, two MAC-11 semiautomatic machine pistols, a .38-caliber handgun, a 9mm automatic and a bayonet. Police Chief Richard Dotson said:

"We're just in shock like everybody else. We had to find everybody to get out of there."

"I heard at least 20 shots. "I seen plant's etching room, said he was, I turned around and told everybody to get out of there."

"We're just in shock like everybody else. We had to find everybody to get out of there."

Wesbecker took an elevator to the third floor of a pressroom. The pistol was discovered under his body and the rifle was a few feet away. Dotson said his officers had come "close, but not that close" to apprehending Wesbecker.

A woman who answered the door in a room where Wesbecker's mother was staying said the family did not want any comment.

"We're just in shock like everybody else. We had to find out over the television. No one called us," said the woman, who did not identify herself. "I guess he was just a sick person."

"It's not a loss to speculate on anything," Noha said. "What's going through my mind right now is sympathy and curing for the people who are involved."

The gun was found face-down in a pool of blood on the floor of a pressroom. The pistol was discovered under his body and the rifle was a few feet away. Dotson said his officers had come "close, but not that close" to apprehending Wesbecker.

Wesbecker worked his way downstairs, shooting people along the way.

"He didn't fire randomly. He was perfectly targeting some damage," Mag. Ed Merro said.

Wesbecker eventually ended up in an area where he killed himself with a shot under his chin, Dotson said.

"I thought it was firecrackers going off," said Bud Graser, a police witness. "When I saw what it was, I turned around and told everybody to get out of there."

Ed Green, a supervisor in the plant's etching room, said he heard at least 20 shots. "I seen two victims and then I got out and I was shot."

A police officer who knew Wesbecker told Dotson the man had been "arguementive and confrontational for a number of years."

"This guy's been talking about this for a year," said Joe White, a Standard-Gravure employee. "He's been talking about guns and Soldier of Fortune magazine. He's paranoid and he thought everyone was after him."

"Wesbecker had been on permanent disability. Dotson said.

"I'm at a loss to speculate on anything," Noha said. "What's going through my mind right now is sympathy and curing for the people who are involved."

Exxon effort may not have helped

Associated Press

VALDEZ, Alaska— Exxon's infusion of thousands of oil-spill cleanup workers and millions of dollars into Prince William Sound did as much harm as good, fishermen charged Thursday as the six-month cleanup ground to a halt.

"It's time that everyone realizes that no amount of money in the world is going to restore Prince William Sound to a pristine condition," said Riki Ott of Cordova District Fishermen United.

While about a third of the sound's fishing fleet worked for Exxon this summer, and in some cases profited handsomely, fishermen who opted to fish suffered from a restricted salmon season and a poor catch.

With most of the sound closed for fishing, fishermen were forced to compete in a small area for a few fish. "This year we were like rats penned inside a cage," said Dave Clarke of the Prince William Sound Seiners Association.

In addition, businesses that depend on fishermen suffered because much of Exxon's cash was not spent on fishing supplies and gear, Clarke said.

"The money spill has probably been as devastating as the oil spill," Clarke said.

The fishermen's observations came at a news conference as Exxon continued to return the last of the cleanup workers from oil-tainted shorelines in the sound. Exxon officials said they expect to declare the summer cleanup over Friday, 25 weeks after the tanker Exxon Valdez cracked open on a reef and spilled nearly 11 million gallons of crude oil.

While the fishermen did not criticize their colleagues for accepting Exxon's cash, they said the money has caused an emotional division between those who accepted and those who did not. Fishermen scraping by this season fear they may be at a competitive disadvantage next year because they can't afford better boats and gear.

The money has become "just another stress factor" from the spill, Clarke said.

Ott said the cleanup effort stemmed more from public relations needs than environmental concerns. Once the Friday cleanup deadline was set, Exxon began using warmer water and higher pressure to hose down the oiled shorelines faster, doing more harm than good, she said.

"The beach cleanup should not be evaluated on the amount spent, the amount of equipment and people working on it. It should be evaluated on its effectiveness," Ott said.

Ott said her group favors a "permanent scaleback" of the cleanup, with smaller "strike forces" set up to respond to sensitive areas threatened by oil washing off the shorelines. "We don't want thousands of people on the beaches again," she said. "It was about as bad as the oil spill itself."

At the height of the cleanup, Exxon had about 12,000 people working on the effort, about 3,000 of them on the shorelines.
Caribbean to get rain from Hurricane Hugo

Associated Press

MIAMI— Steadily growing Hurricane Hugo slowed its march Thursday to the Caribbean, but hurricane forecasters said islanders should get ready for wind and heavy rain.

"They could start feeling the effects in 48 hours," said Jim Gross at the National Hurricane Center in suburban Coral Gables.

Hugo was moving slowly, an indication of a potential change in direction, Gross said. For now, people on the northern and central Leeward Islands should watch Hugo carefully, he said.

"It's a storm that's been steadily increasing every day," Gross said, adding that conditions are favorable for more strengthening.

At noon EDT, Hugo's center was located near 13.3 north latitude and 48.7 west longitude, or about 815 miles east of the Lesser Antilles. The storm was moving west at 15 mph, down from 20 mph Wednesday night.

Its highest sustained winds were 85 mph, up 10 mph from the center's advisory six hours earlier.

Kroger Co. sells nine food plants

Associated Press

CINCINNATI—Grocery store chain Kroger Co. said Thursday it has agreed in principle to sell nine of its food manufacturing plants, including an Indiana operation, as part of a $4.6 billion corporate restructuring begun last fall.

The nine plants are among 11 Kroger is selling as part of the restructuring, which was launched in part to stave off two unsuccessful takeover bids for the company.

Negotiations are under way to sell the remaining two plants, the company said. The grocery chain said it expects to reap after-tax proceeds of $260 million from the sale of all 11 units.

Cincinnati-based Kroger owns and operates supermarkets, convenience stores and food processing plants in 32 states.

Company officials said Thursday they had signed a letter of intent to sell eight food manufacturing plants to a corporation to be formed by New York City businessman Eli Jacobs of New York and Engles Capital Corp., of Dallas, Texas.

The eight plants are North Coast Bakery, of Cleveland; Delight Products, of Springfield, Tenn.; Kenlake Foods, Murray, Ky.; Pontiac Foods, Pontiac, S.C.; State Avenue plant, Cincinnati; Tara Foods, Albany, Ga.; and K.B. Specialty Foods, Greensburg, Ind., and Pace Dairy, Rochester, Minn.

The eight plants' new owner will offer jobs to the plants' current employees and also may employ some manufacturing personnel now working in Kroger's Cincinnati headquarters offices, Kroger said.

The transaction includes an agreement to continue offering Kroger's private-label products, company officials said. Kroger said the deal should be concluded by mid-November.

In a separate transaction, Kroger said it has agreed to sell its Meadowland Creamery in Conroe, Texas, to Horden Inc.

The remaining two plants, Kroger's Gateway Bakery and Heartland Farms Dairy, both in St. Louis, are under consideration by separate buyers, Kroger said.

Negotiations are under way for the bakery with Alpha Baking Co. of Chicago, while an unnamed party is bargaining for the dairy, Kroger said.
Drug plight must be fought on all fronts

Last Tuesday, President George Bush publicly announced the strategy for the war on drugs that both he and drug czar William Bennett devised.

The growing problem of drugs must be attacked from both the supply and demand-sides. President Bush has not only allocated significant funds to combat drug importers but he has also earmarked billions for education and treatment.

It is crucial, however, that the war on drugs be waged not only in the streets and in the classrooms but also in the homes and churches. Communities must be outraged at the problem of drugs in order for the President's agenda to be effective. The government can do only so much to help motivate communities, but by making the war a community effort, President Bush has shown his administration's outrage and hopefully the local communities will follow his lead.

According to Mr. Bruner, President Bush has also allocated a substantial sum of money to law enforcement, nearly doubling the amount currently given to state and local enforcement agencies. If members of the community are to become outraged they must be protected from the drug dealers they are fighting.

Mr. Bruner wants to target the casual user who is engaged in drug activity; the possessors of society. It is not the anyйдет which he and his number one priority President Bush has shown his administration's outrage and hopefully the local communities will follow his lead. The Notre Dame and Saint Mary's communities must be outraged at the problem of drugs in order for the President's emphasis on enforcement will help.

The Notre Dame and Saint Mary's communities must also be outraged at the problem of drugs. More importantly they must begin to do something about it. Students must begin to educate and fight against drugs in their home communities as well as at school.

Although there are probably no crack dealers in your dorm there are still ways you should help. Students must no longer turn their backs on people they know who have a drug problem, they should confront them and get them help. In addition, those who live off campus should help lead the fight to get drug dealers out of their communities.

The dark specter of drugs will not be eliminated overnight. However, with the help of communities (ours included), the government, and the church the problem can be eliminated with time and persistence.

University to aid in ensuring off-campus security

Dear Editor:

I am writing regarding a matter of concern to all of us in the University community. In recent months, there has been an increase in violent crime in the neighborhood directly adjacent to the university. Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students have been included among the victims. These crimes have included assault, armed robbery, and in one case, a shooting.

My purpose in writing is to alert all students, as well as staff and faculty, to the potential danger of the area, especially after dark. University Security advises us that caution is necessary when walking through the neighborhood. Safety information is available to all faculty, staff, and students through the Security Department.

The University will continue to participate with the student government, neighborhood organizations, city government, and local law enforcement agencies to ensure the safety of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students. Meanwhile, I urge you to exercise caution and good judgment should you live in, or plan to walk through, this area.

'Casual user' should not be the prime target in drug war

Dear Dave Bruner,

Your recent spewing forth on the subject of drugs (The Observer, Sept. 13) leads me to make two comments. First, it always amazes me when people go on and on about the evils of drugs while not realizing that alcohol is the dominant drug in our society. We regard it as a part of our life and an especially significant part of college life. This is as true at Notre Dame as it is elsewhere.

My second point is that the casual user. However, it is not the casual user who is committing criminal acts in order to finance their habit. In fact, more people have died from the abuse of alcohol—from physical effects such as liver or heart disease which can be caused by social drinking, as well as from drunk driving accidents—than from an occasional take on a joint.

Yet, these latter miscreants are the ones who either he or his ilk see as the cause of the breakdown of the fabric of society. It is not the casual user who is engaged in violent drug activity; the possessor is the true criminal. Second, Mr. Bruner seems to have no notion of the right of privacy or the concept of being innocent until proven guilty.

According to his logic, people should be tested, whether or not there is any suspicion of drug use, in order to prove to the powers that be that they are not guilty of the perceived heinous act. Laying aside whether casual drug use is such a major crime against society, it seems to me that violating a person's constitutional as well as innate right to privacy except, possibly, in the most extreme of circumstances, is a great blow to a truly democratic society.

Perhaps Mr. Bruner should reexamine his support of some of the most fundamental tenets of our society.

Child care must not be solely a woman's responsibility

Dear Editor,

The editorial cartoon depicting a successful career woman with a neglected, delightfully carefree child in The Observer (Sept. 14) was overwhelmingly in poor taste.

As a graduate student in developmental psychology, both my academic and emotional sensibilities were offended by the sexist nature of the drawing. Mothers are not solely responsible for the upbringing of children. There is much empirical evidence to substantiate the importance of fathers in child care. Additionally, there is no clear support for the contention that children of working mothers suffer any detrimental effects related to their mother's employment.

Anyone who considers this cartoon entertaining perpetuates attitudes which keep women in narrowly-defined roles and scoffs at all women who attempt to better themselves by fulfilling interests outside the domestic realm.

The pre-game party will include entertainment, food and a cash bar in addition to appearances by the Notre Dame cheerleaders and the Pep Band.

No matter which route you take, be sure to allow yourself plenty of time to reach the stadium. The stadium is a good hike from the campus, and since the stadium can hold over 100,000 people, it is safe to assume that the nearest parking spaces will be already occupied by the time you arrive on Michigan's campus.

The city of Ann Arbor has a population of more than 105,000 people and the University of Michigan itself has about 40,000. Ann Arbor is a truly a college town, and the university is almost fully integrated into the city so there is shopping and parks and non-campus life nearby. The diversity of the town allows roadtrippers who don't have tickets to the game to enjoy it even if they don't make it to the stadium.

There are several popular establishments where football fans can go for food and drinks. A particular favorite amongst Irish fans is Dooley's. If you didn't get a ticket for the game (or didn't have enough cash to buy tickets from scalpers) Dooley's is the best place to watch the game.

Dooley's boasts a large screen TV and nine monitors—you might even get a better view of the game inside of Dooley's than inside of the stadium.

You'll probably find a lot of Michigan fans here. Dooley's is definitely the best place to be since most of Ann Arbor's hotels and motels will be booked solid, the best place to spend the night would be in the dorm of a friend who goes to the University of Michigan. Unfortunately not every roadtripper is going to town. For those students who will be sponsoring a pep rally start the festivities a day early.

For those students who will be rather be at the Notre Dame-Michigan game than watch it on TV, a trip to Ann Arbor, Michigan is great way to kick off the official 1989 roadtripping season.

Ann Arbor is approximately 130 miles from South Bend and the drive (if one obeys the legal speed limit) would take close to three hours. Depending on the traffic, the roadtripper can chose which route to take. One way is to go up US 31 north to US 12 east in Niles, Michigan. Go east on US 12 to US 23 north. Go north on US 23 through Ypsilanti into Ann Arbor until there are signs for the University. Another option would be to take US 31 to US 12 to US 131 north to 1-94 into Ann Arbor. Besides tailgaters, there are other pre-game activities for the roadtripping Irish. The Notre Dame Club of Ann Arbor will be sponsoring a pep rally and pre-game party tonight at 5 p.m. - 12 a.m. at the Ann Arbor Inn at the corner of 4th and Huron in downtown Ann Arbor for those who wish to start the festivities a day early.

An Irish victory always makes a roadtrip worthwhile, but the game is only part of the overall roadtrip experience. Before and after the game, fans will be all over Ann Arbor checking out the bars and restaurants. According to the Michigan Daily, the following establishments are a few of the hottest spots in town.

But first, some basic things you need to know: Even though the drinking age is 21, many bars legally admit people over 18, but trying to use a fake ID is usually not a good idea; in some places this applies more than others. Also, Michigan laws provide that liquor cannot be served in old mason jars, but many bars use these containers for serving inspired drinks. "Proper attire is required" for all of those over 18 who want to let it all out on the spaucious dance floor. There is a cover charge and drinks are expensive.

RICK'S, 614 Church St.—Rick's features live entertainment nearly every night. You must be 19 to enter, and pay a $2-$5 cover charge. Rick's has a small dance floor, pool tables, and a games center that turns up as the available space.

DOMINICK'S, 812 Monroe St.—Dominick's is one of the more popular bars in Ann Arbor. The atmosphere and beer is served in old mason jars, but using a fake ID to buy it is the wrong idea. If you don't know anyone to buy a drink, you'll be asked to prove you are 21 and often the manager asks around and confuses drinks from underage drinkers. Dominick's closes at 10 p.m., but there is more than enough time to partake in the full menu of food.

NECTARINE BALLROOM, 510 E. Liberty—The campus dance-bar, it sounds Top 40 like the plaque. "Proper attire is required." for all of those over 18 who want to let it all out on the spaucious dance floor. There is a cover charge and drinks are expensive.

Food

In case you're hungry for a more substantial meal, Ann Arbor offers many different types of dining experiences. You can eat at the following restaurants before hitting the bars, and you can save yourself some money by eating at the bars, which usually charges less than on-campus restaurants.

Watters returns home to tailback spot

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Associate Sports Editor

As far as he's concerned, Ricky Watters is back where he belongs.

"I loved playing flanker because of the experience I got, but there's no place like home," said Watters, after moving back to his original position of tailback. "That's where I've played all my life. Even when I watch football games, I always look at the tailbacks."

Watters rushed for 80 yards on 12 carries against Virginia, in his first game back at tailback. The junior from Harrisburg, Pa., also caught two passes for 42 yards and had 67 yards on punt returns.

That game marked a successful recovery from the adversity that hit Watters his sophomore season.

Near the end of spring drills his freshman year, Irish coach Lou Holtz announced that Watters would move from tailback to Tim Brown's vacated position of flanker.

During his sophomore season, Watters was feeling the pressure of replacing a Heisman Trophy winner and studying in a demanding architecture program. Though he had some impressive outings, catching four passes for 108 yards and two touchdowns against Air Force, many thought Watters was never really happy at flanker.

"The only reason I moved to flanker is because I needed to move there; it was necessary for us to become a great team," said Watters. "I'm much more at peace now. I always wanted to be starting tailback at a major college."

Watters switched his major later in the season, but the worst news was yet to come. That happened during the team's trip to California.

The day before the top-ranked Irish were preparing to face second-ranked Southern Cal, Watters and fellow tailback Tony Brooks arrived 40 minutes late for a team dinner meeting. The two players were suspended for the game and sent back to Notre Dame because of "repeated irresponsible tardiness for team meetings and functions."

"It was terrible, the lowest point of my life," said Watters. "We went out and got lost, and Coach Holtz did what he had to do. I guess all things happen for a reason."

Watters returned in the Sunkist Fiesta Bowl and set up a touchdown with a 57-yard pass play, as Notre Dame wrapped up the national title over West Virginia 34-21.

"It was given me an edge," said Watters, who has two touchdown punt returns at Notre Dame. "It's made me think nobody can stop me. I can run through some people instead of making 30,000 fakes to try to run around them."

That's just what the coaches want to see from Watters.

Not even the Irish can catch Watters during spring scrimmage.
The Game...

By GREG GUFFREY
Assistant Sports Editor

This year, the battle for No. 1 will be played in September.

With the hype for Saturday's Michigan-Notre Dame game, one might think it was last December with a national title hanging in the balance. Reality shows that it is mid-September, the first game for the booth and the second contest for the Irish.

But even in this early season, no one can deny the importance that this game carries. A win would be just a small step in a long road to a national title for either team, but a loss could, for all practical purposes, end a team's shot at either title.

"It has seemed to be a turning point in the season for Notre Dame," said Pat Dierking, the Irish fullback. "The biggest thing you have to use is your quickness and not get tied up with them. You have to be big, but I think speed, quickness, knowing your assignment and technique help you more."

The lines hopes to give quarterback Michael Taylor plenty of protection. In 1988, Tony Rice threw 12 passes for 957 yards and rushed 80 times for 116 yards. Taylor is the lone experienced quarterback for Michigan after senior Demetrius Brown was declared academically ineligible. The performance of Taylor, an explosive quarterback, compared by many to Major Harris of West Virginia and Shawn Moore of Virginia, could determine Michigan's fortunes in the game.

"He's a very competitive and elusive quarterback," Notre Dame nose guard Chris Zorich said. "We'll treat him exactly the same way we treated Major Harris in the Fiesta Bowl. We're going to try to force him to pass, control the ball with a lot of running and a short passing game."

Michigan will try to force Taylor into third and long situations where he doesn't like to force the ball. He likes to control the ball with a lot of running and a short passing game."

Michigan will rely on its line to control the line of scrimmage. The Michigan defensive line is expected to be one of the country's best. They have some good linemen there," Notre Dame left tackle observed by many to Major Harris in the Fiesta Bowl. Michigan's offensive line could average up to 393 pounds according to the latest depth chart.

When return was not as impressive as he had hoped, White worked harder. Run. Lift weights. Practice pass-rushing moves: swim technique, rip technique. Get to the quarterback. Grit the teeth."

calls. "Our high school uniforms were the same colors (scarlet and gray), and my coach had some good connections over there. I knew all of the assistant coaches there, the trainers, everybody." But White also expressed interest in Michigan and Michigan State. In any case, it looked as though the big Ten was a sure bet.

Throughout the recruiting process, White had agreed to participate in the NCAA's "Big Brother" program. An NCAA representative would make regular telephone calls to his home, monitoring the recruiting process for any suspected violations by the schools.

"He would call every couple of weeks and ask if anything unusual was opening on any of these visits," White explains. "It was no big deal, there really wasn't anything to tell."

That is, until White himself threw the NCAA's curve. Pittsburgh, specifically then-Coach Fazio Fazik, made an impression on White as signing day approached. So much so, in fact, that White returned from a visit there with his mind set on rushing off to Pitt in favor of the Panthers.

"Coach Fazio really hit it off perfectly," White says. "I had such a rush from that. I came back and decided to go to Pitt. When the NCAA found out about that, they thought something peculiar was going on. All that time I had three Big Ten schools in mind, and now I was talking about Pitt."

"No need to worry, however."

Medjugorje apparitions versus Mater dolorosa

This is the feast of Our Lady of Seven Sorrows. The Congregation of Holy Cross (C.S.C.) throughout the world is celebrating its devotion to the Mother of Sorrows, chosen under that title by our founder.

Father Robert Griffin
Letters to a Lonely God

Father Moreau, to one of the principle patrons of our religious community. Remembering "Stabat Mater dolorosa/Textria crucem lactantia/Hum perdutat Filius" ("There was standing the sorrowing Mother, beside the cross weeping while Her Son hung upon it"). I'm reminded why I have such deep doubts about the alleged apparitions at Medjugorje.

Picture: a simple country woman who has lost a young child. She complains of the agony imposed on her by the belief that whatever happens is the direct will of God. It is intolerable for her to see that perfect little body deprived of life; it is doubly tormenting for her to think God has played this dirty trick on her. She is tempted to deny God, rather than believe heavens can be so unkind.

A wise, wonderful Anglican priest points out that this unhappy mother has stood religion on its head. If she doesn't begin, he says, with the assurance that everything is under the hand of almighty Providence, Religion begins from a wrong place. The world of creatures colliding with each other, will provide us with temptations enough. We cry to the God of Salvation to rescue us from mischief.

As far as I can see, the children of Medjugorje, bringing us warnings of God's impending anger and the punishment of the world that lies ahead, are contradicting the hope offered by the Gospel. The helpful things that they may have to say about the spiritual life are thrown into limbo by the big mistake they are making. God is not the enemy from whom we need to be saved—for He is not acting like our enemy if He is waiting to zap the human race with positive horrors. Satan is the enemy; we need to be saved from the devil and all his works; we need to be freed from our wayward selves if we have become tripped up by the devilish pomp and snare. Would we need to be saved from the God of Salvation? Medjugorje has Him confused with the God of wrath whom we meet early in the Bible. By the time Isaiah wrote. He had decided to lay aside His anger, and He had made up His mind that He would die for us as the Suffering Servant. The God whom Christians worship is a forgiving God Who wills not the death of a sinner, for it is His will for the sinner to be converted and live.

How complicated the problem of suffering would become if Christians were back on square one, trying to please the angry God, in contradiction to the revelation we have from Jesus, Who showed us the love in His Father's face. Then the Christians of the first century, on the one hand, from the fallen angels, on the other hand, God, in their scenario, would be standing in the wings, waiting to be deceived through some world-wide calamity that would, without doubt, bring undeserved punishment on the four-fifths of mankind to whom the Church has never been preached. If famines, earthquakes, and genocidal wars that could end in a nuclear holocaust are the Lord's doing, and not those of mankind's ancient enemy—or if He is going to allow these terrible things to happen, because life is dispensed with us, maybe we should all become atheists. Then we'd only have half as much to worry about, because we'd only have one cruel enemy we'd need to be afraid of.

It does Mary no honor to say that it's up to her to save us from the bad temper of the God of Salvation. If that's the way Medjugorje and the other private revelations picture her, then Catholics should distrust her as much as the fundamentalists distrusts, because, as they say, she gets in the way of Christ. I'm not out to rain on anyone's parade. Medjugorje may be beautiful; and that's not surprising, because millions of beautiful people go there. Supernatural things happen to the Pentecostalists every time Jimmy Swaggart preaches to them. The lightning from on high strikes repeatedly wherever the ever-flaming climate is right; even non-Christians have miracles to boast of.

The world is in terrible shape: I'm too blind to see that. People need to be saved from the sequence of events that take place among the supernatural things that they are making. Some of the mistakes could leave losers deprived of grace—inequitable of loving and being loved, possibly forever, and we should be the hell they have created for them selves. Yet God is on their side, today, yesterday, and forever. If He isn't, the New Testament is gone by fire and what the Medjugorje message could be right, but it is, the rest of the Christian religion loses its meaning, because Christ, loving His own, cannot save them, by His love, from hell and high water; out of deference to the anger of His Father, He has to allow them to be crashed, though, like His enemies at the cross, they don't know what they're doing, either.

I prefer to trust in Mary, as the maid-servant of the Lord of Salvation. He's not running neck in neck with Satan, to give us the back of His hand. Our Lady knows how dangerous life is, but she knows we are not in danger from God. If we were in danger from Him, as well as from the world, the flesh, and the devil, the Christian life would be too confusing; and the justice of God, if it has the last word over love, would be altogether unfair.

I don't know why I should keep the peace about Medjugorje—as I try to do, on camels and quails keep going, tempts the stones to cry out about the way Catholic Christianity is being turned on its head. Catholics have turned their backs to a hillside in Yugoslavia where a cross has been planted, for a warming of the terror to come, should glance back at that other hillside outside the Jerusalem wall. Calvary's cross, like the appearance of the rainbow in Noah's sky, initiated a covenant of peace; and as a sign of grace and reconciliation, it has no rivals. This is the cross the mother of Sorrows stood by, weeping. What else could have brought her from the hillside of Medjugorje except the imagination of children?

Bo Schembechler made his intentions clear when he arrived on the Michigan campus in 1969—he wanted a trip to the Rose Bowl in his first season. Bo inherited a Michigan team coming off of an 8-5 season, 6-1 in the Big Ten, but the Wolverines had posted losing seasons in two of the previous three years.

Michigan met Ohio State and Woody Hayes on the last Saturday of the season for the Big Ten championship. Hayes came into Ann Arbor with one of the best teams in his coaching history, but Bo and the Wolverines pulled the upset, 24-13, to take the trip to Pasadena. Ohio State won 14-11 in 1972 and 12-10 in 1973, and a vote by the conference athletic directors sent the Buckeyes to the Rose Bowl.

After Hayes lost his job for the first game to go ahead and finish the game off on our ass here and put ourselves on the back—like they’re doing at Notre Dame. And the answer is, ‘Now, we’re not going to do that.’” Bo in September 1989 issue of Sport Detroit Magazine.

If there is any blemish on Bo’s resume, it is the absence of what he terms “the mythical national championship.”

Bo knows the game with the Irish cannot win him the title, but a loss might end Michigan’s chances for another year.

"We will be at a disadvantage against Notre Dame. Schembechler said. "Notre Dame played their first game two days after we practiced in pads for the first time. Your greatest improvement through-out a season is between your first and second games, and they have two weeks after their first game to go ahead and work toward us."

When Saturday comes, you can bet Bo will have his team ready. No team has ever beaten Bo three consecutive years, and he doesn’t want the Irish—the team he wanted to play for in high school—to be the first. The first he could rather see is an unbeaten season and that mythical championship.
Clemson's future bright after beating Florida St.

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Associated Sports Editor

It happens every autumn. An upset team takes advantage of a lightweight schedule to put together an undefeated regular season. It happened in 1987; West Virginia followed suit last year. An early contender this season: Clemson of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Following a 34-23 thumping of Florida State last weekend, Clemson's only remaining non-ACC opponents are Virginia Tech on Saturday and arch-rival South Carolina on Nov. 18. Clemson, the 1981 national champion, consistently dominates the ACC, nicknamed the "Always Clemson Conference".

North Carolina State has been Clemson's main nemesis, upsetting the Tigers each of the last three seasons. The Wolfpack must play at Clemson's Memorial Stadium next month.

Clemson's other main competitor in the ACC—Virginia—never in its history has defeated the Tigers.

Pre-season prognosticators had Clemson going through a rebuilding season. With star running back Terry Allen, who never lost a fumble during the '88 season, and navy for their next four games. With that schedule, Air Force could be undefeated when top-ranked Notre Dame arrives on campus Oct. 14.

The Air Force press guide calls Dowis the best option quarterback in the country. Against Tony Rice, he'd have a chance to prove it.

Aside from Notre Dame, the hottest team in the nation just might be Tennessee.

The Volunteers, who lost their first six games in 1988, came back to win their final five contests. They're now 2-0 without bouncing UCLA 24-6. Tennessee's defense had no turnovers and no penalties against UCLA, as the Volunteers had three touchdown drives of over 50 yards. But it's the defense that has changed the Volunteers' fortunes. Tennessee coach Johnny Majors makes no secret of his displeasure with that unit's performance in the first half of the '88 season.

"That was the worst unit I've had in my coaching career, on either side of the ball," Majors says of that defense.

If you've ever dreamed of being behind the controls of an airplane, this is your chance to find out what it's really like.

Marine Corps pilot is coming to campus who can give you up for flight training.

"We're looking for a few college students who have the brains and skill—as well as the desire—to become Marine pilots.

"If you're cut out for it, we'll give you free civilian flight training, maybe $100 a month cash while you're in school. And someday you could be flying a Harrier, Cobra or FA-18.

Get a taste of what life is like at the top. The flight's on us.

Get a taste of life at the top.

If Tennessee's defense isn't sharp against Duke on Saturday, the Volunteers might be in for a long day.

Duke's passing combination of quarterback Billy Ray and all-America receiver Clarkson Hines combine with running back Roger Buone to form one of the most explosive offenses in the nation.

"Duke will be by far the biggest test we've had in our secondary," said Majors.

White's volleyball abilities have Michiana alive with pride

Today, things are different. The only thing that has remained the same is her work ethic and her adaptability. When White takes the court for one of the products of the burgeoning metropolitan of South Bend—junior setter Amy White, the South Bend native strolled onto the Notre Dame volleyball team as a walk-on her freshman year, taking the court as a righthanded left side hitter.

Amy White said, "She's a diligent, hard worker who can do what Julie did for us. I have some mighty big shoes to fill, and I don't expect to be able to reach that level of play immediately. But I try to keep things in perspective and keep working until I'm the best setter I can be.”

White has used her versatility, smarts—and I'm delighted with her handiness, savvy. It's good to have somebody there to make me work hard to keep my spot in the lineup." White said. "We make each other better, and Taryn Turner exhibited some of the skills that made her a first-team All-America selection by Volleyball Monthly and Reebok team with 49 digs, will need to compensate for an inexperienced setter. Cunningham, who leads the Irish, whether passing, setting, serving or blocking, has been assuaged. "It's good to have somebody there to make me work hard to keep my spot in the lineup." White said. "We make each other better, and Taryn Collins and Jennifer Slosar—will be the key to a strong Irish performance this weekend.

Sophomore outside hitter Tracey Shelton, who tallied 22 kills while adding 36 digs defensively, should make her presence felt in the lineup. Senior captain Kathy Cunningham, who leads the team with 49 digs, will need to exert herself defensively to compensate for an inexperienced front line.

And fellow freshman Alicia Turner exhibited some of the skills that made her a first-team All-America selection by Volleyball Monthly and Reebok at the high school level, as she recorded 35 kills and eight service aces in her first four collegiate matches. Two tandems—senior setter Taryn Collins and sophomore setter Amy White, and sophomore middle hitters Christine Choquette and Jennifer Slosar—will be the key to a strong Irish performance this weekend.

The Irish improved considerably from last year's performance, shaving 25 points off last year's total and turning in a score of 672.

"I was hopeful of finishing where we did," said Hanlon. "I think that we could've done better, but overall, it wasn't too bad of a performance."

Hanlon cited freshman Kathy Phares, who finished with a score of 165, for her outstanding performance.

"She's shown that she's a good golfer, as we thought she would be when we recruited her," Hanlon said of the East Moline, Ill., resident. "We hope that she provides this kind of spark in the rest of the season."}

The Notre Dame women's golf team is looking to make an impact this weekend as it travels to the Illinois State Women's Golf Invitational last year, the Irish finished ninth in the competition.

"I'm looking for improvement for the top 10," said Irish coach Tom Hanlon.

two years in a row, so I can guarantee that they will be prepared," Piane said. "We can't take them lightly." O'Connor agrees that the Irish will have a much tougher fight this year than in the two previous seasons.

"Their coach thinks he has one of the best teams ever at Georgetown, possibly national qualifiers," said O'Connor. "We're a pretty young team, and this will be an early test for us.

Piane noted that five of the top six runners in last year's meet against Georgetown were from Notre Dame, but he admits that this is unlikely to happen again.

"We've beaten Georgetown three consecutive years, but he still is worried that his runners might be a bit too confident.

Volleyball team looking to rebound at ND Invitational

By MOLLY MAHONEY
Assistant Sports Editor

Sophomore Rusty Setzer (24) turns upheld for some of Notre Dame's 300 rushing yards in the 36-13 Kickoff Classic win over Virginia. Saturday's contest between the top-ranked Irish and number-two Michigan could come down to the rushing game, as both squads boast solid offensive lines and backs.

Art Lambert season against the Broncos. The Notre Dame contest will be the Pittsburgh-Pacific match. Western Michigan has been a nemesis to the Irish since 1985, when it started a string of four-straight wins over the Irish.

Notre Dame men's cross country coach Joe Piane would like his team to have a case of amnesia before Saturday's season-opening meet against Georgetown in Washington, D.C. "Because we've won the last two years, I hope the guys won't get overconfident," Piane said. "If you talk to Lou Holtz, he would tell you that last year is history. It's the same with us.

Looking back at Notre Dame's performance last year, it seems as though the Irish would have a right to be confident. Notre Dame finished in the top 10 at the NCAA's for the second year in a row.

Among the team's victories was a 16-44 thrashing of Georgetown at the Burke Memorial Golf Course.

But the 1989 team has a different look. All-Americans Dan Garrett and Ron Mackenzie have graduated, leaving a young squad behind. Piane has a good idea who his top runners will be, but the rest of the team is uncertain.

Senior captain Mike O'Connor should fill Garrett's sneakers as the leader of the pack, followed by Tom O'Bourke and Ryan Cahill. Pat Kearns, a junior who was injured much of last season, is also expected to contribute. "Those are probably the top four," Piane said.

The Notre Dame women's cross country team will attempt to avenge last year's loss to Georgetown when it travels to Washington, D.C. Saturday for its season-opening meet.

Notre Dame coach Tim Connelly predicts a challenging meet for the Irish. "Georgetown is one of the top programs in the country," said Connelly. "They have 14 girls on full-scholarship, as opposed to our zero, and they've got one of last year's top three high school runners in the country. We're on two totally different levels." Despite Georgetown's power, Connelly was optimistic about the meet, praising the efforts of his team.

"We're looking to improve from last year, and we'll try to improve with every meet we run," said Connelly. "We have a team that'll do a heck of a job -- we'll give a real good effort." Connelly said that he expects strong performances from all his runners, particularly sophomore Lucy Musralla and junior Terese Dansk.

"Lucy is definitely our top runner," Connelly said. "She can run with anyone in the country. Terese has been running very well also. She trained her butt off over the summer and is in really good shape."

Irish face many tests in quest to defend title

ABC Television is promoting Saturday's Notre Dame-Michigan game as having major bearing on the national championship hunt. Well, anytime the top two teams in the country meet, anytime during the season, the game has some significant ramifications.

Theresa Kelly
Sports Editor

Nonetheless, the rest of the experts say that this game doesn't really matter. The bigger picture suggests that whichever team loses isn't out of the hunt. If you have to lose, lose early. For Notre Dame, if you have to lose, don't lose to Miami. It is a scary thing to be ranked No. 1 this early in the season.

But Miami and Michigan aren't all that stand in the way of Notre Dame. The Tigers racked up an impressive 22-13 overall record last year, despite playing in one challenging meet for the Irish.

Notre Dame coach Tim Connelly predicts a challenging meet for the Irish. "Georgetown is one of the top programs in the country," said Connelly. "They have 14 girls on full-scholarship, as opposed to our zero, and they've got one of last year's top three high school runners in the country. We're on two totally different levels." Despite Georgetown's power, Connelly was optimistic about the meet, praising the efforts of his team.

"We're looking to improve from last year, and we'll try to improve with every meet we run," said Connelly. "We have a team that'll do a heck of a job -- we'll give a real good effort." Connelly said that he expects strong performances from all his runners, particularly sophomore Lucy Musralla and junior Terese Dansk.

"Lucy is definitely our top runner," Connelly said. "She can run with anyone in the country. Terese has been running very well also. She trained her butt off over the summer and is in really good shape."
