Report stresses need for greater faculty input at ND

By GREG LUCAS
Assistant News Editor

"Significant expansion of the collective faculty role in decision making at Notre Dame is both critical and necessary, if Notre Dame is to become the major university it proposes to become," said May O'Meara, University provost and professor of mathematics, responding to the report's charge that the faculty has been "adequately involved in the charges but not involved on the charge," as the Faculty Senate Ad-hoc Committee on University Governance in a preliminary report sent to all faculty members.

The preliminary report does not purport to represent conclusions or majority opinion among the faculty, but aims "to generate discussion, deliberation, and participation in both the Committee's and the Senate's subsequent activities."

According to Mohammed Gad-el-Hak, chair of the Ad hoc Committee and professor of aerospace and mechanical engineering, the report is primarily designed to rally attention for a comprehensive faculty survey which will attempt to interview representatives of the faculty as a whole regarding both its perceived and ideal role in University governance.

"Gad-el-Hak said that the survey will be sent in a matter of weeks: "Faculty involvement in the University does entail institutionalization of structures needed to ensure adequate, comprehensive, representative, and genuine faculty participation in administrative deliberations and decisions which affect the faculty's professional interests and the University's fundamental academic mission," according to the report.

"The faculty should have a definite role and the administration should consult with the faculty in a predictable way," said Gad-el-Hak, adding that the faculty is not "trying to take away the administration's authority to make decisions away from anybody."

"The result so far of interaction with the administration has been denial of the presence of a problem. If you don't acknowledge there is a problem, you don't seek a solution," Gad-el-Hak said.

"I think the faculty plays a very significant role," said Timothy O'Meara, University provost and professor of mathematics, in response to the committee's report. "I think that all of the layers (in the administrative decision-making hierarchy) work pretty harmoniously together," he said.

O'Meara said that this does not mean that problems do not exist or that modifications are not called for, but rather that the "mechanisms (for faculty input) are in place."

"O'Meara agreed with the report's claim that the nature of Notre Dame's faculty has changed in the past several decades and said that it is "very well be appropriate to reconsider the way we (the University) do business."

The report, which refers directly to the faculty Senate as a "neutered debating club," says that a representation problem exists in two dimensions.

First, the faculty is inadequately represented in the determination of its own corporate and economic interests. The report cites the administration's recent restructuring of faculty health benefits as a telling symptom of the disease.

According to the report, "A senate survey concerning the extent of (health benefits)" was ignored by the administration."

Democrats and Republicans pleased about summit plans

But a few red tape and rejuvenate governors alike hailed plans mapped out Thursday at the Democratic and Republican governors pleased about summit plans.

"It's perceived and ideal role in the education community resists change. They like the status quo. The difficulty is going to be that there is going to have to be some restructuring, some accountbility, some redirecting of funds, to meet the primary objectives."

Even with cooperation from educators, he predicted it would take 10 years to achieve the reform aims outlined at the summit.

"They were saying, 'Look, Mr. President, if this is so important, if education is such a national policy, at least don't reduce what the federal government's doing.'"

Marcos dies of cardiac arrest in Honolulu

Associated Press

HONOLULU — Ferdinand Marcos succumbed to cardiac arrest Thursday, but even in death he remained an unwanted exile, his remains barred from U.S. soil.

Marcos, who ruled the Philippines for more than 20 years before being ousted in February 1986, died at 12:40 a.m. Thursday at St. Francis Medical Center in Honolulu.

Doctors said kidney and lung failure and a widespread infection contributed to the cardiac arrest listed as the cause of death.

The canny, combative politician, who governed at times as a dictator, at times as a democrat, died without facing trial on the 10 year mark of his rule. He was 77.

U.S. criminal charges he plundered the Philippine treasury, while Marcos spent nearly 10 months in the hospital, his family begged Philippine President Corazon Aquino to let him come home to die, but she refused.

Aquino took office as a result of the popular revolt that drove Marcos into exile, and her government has survived several attempts to overthrow it. She said she refused again after his death to allow his burial in the Philippines for the sake of "the tranquility of the state and the order of society."

Philippine opposition leaders urged her to reconsider.

"It is just so wrong. It is his birthright. He is a Filipino," said Joe Lazo, president of the Honolulu group Friends of Marcos.

Last Thursday, the Federal Aviation Administration in Washington prohibited any aircraft from flying Marcos' remains out of the United States for the Philippines, saying it would take 10 years to achieve the reform aims outlined at the summit.

DeBarge was arrested Wednesday in Grand Rapids and Wyoming district courts in Michigan on separate court orders from Kent, Ottawa and Muskegon counties, and was booked at the Kent County Jail on a $5,000 bond. Police said DeBarge was one of the biggest drug dealers in the city.

The Senate, caught up in an agonizing debate about the future of President Bush's Star Wars program, reversed field Thursday and restored $600 million to the missile-defense shield. CAMPUS SAFETY DEMANDS A REALISTIC ATTITUDE

I went down in the elevator to the basement of LaFayette. It was about 2:15 a.m. There wasn't anyone around, but I was working late because it was my night as news editor, and I was always thinking about nothing else but sleeping and being my night off. I was terrified. I immediately went to call Security to have someone escort me home, but I couldn't find a phone. The doors leading to the 'God Quad' exit were locked, as were those to the stairs. I tried my key on the building door at the top of the stairs, but I was not there. No one was waiting. I screamed, seemingly right next to me. My immediate instinct was to jump back into the building and get out of sight. I was terrified. No one had ever been assaulted on campus. I was not going to be the first. But, I have a guardian angel, and of course, my roommate. She is a security guard at Security. There has never been a time when she thought the coast was clear. Fortunately, I got to Security, and I was safe. No one else has ever been assaulted on campus. There has never been a time when I was not safe. I know that. I know that I can count on my roommate. I know that I can count on my roommate to be there for me. I know that she will be there for me. I know that she will be there for me. I know that she will be there for me. I know that she will be there for me.

A holy hour is being held in preparation for the 19th annual "Day of Reflection and Celebration of Christ" tonight at 7 p.m. in the Keenan-Stanford Chapel. Sponsors for the event are the Knights of the Immaculata and Queen of Peace Ministries.

Sophomores: A memorial mass for classmate Steve Saunders will be held Saturday at 5 p.m. in the Grotto. Get yourself some blankets. In the event of rain, mass will be held in the Crypt.

Major signing ups are going on at the Center for Social Concerns until Oct. 9. This is a great opportunity to take a break and enjoy your fellow classmates. Call Mary Ann Roemer at 239-5299 if you have any questions.

Army officials investigate explosion that killed three

Associated Press

FORT SILL, Okla. — Artillery fire echoed in the distance Thursday while Army investigators inspected a crater where a stray round hit and exploded, killing three soldiers and injuring 23.

"They heard a whistle of incoming, a yellow blast and then they were blown off their feet," Col. William Gonzales, commander at Reynolds Army Hospital at Fort Sill, said some of the soldiers told him. "It's amazing what the power of a shell can do."

Elsewhere, two soldiers were killed Thursday at Fort Stewart, Ga., during firing exercises involving 4.2-inch mortars, the Army said.

The Fort Sill soldiers, in the seventh week of an eight-week training course at the sprawling Field Artillery Center in southwest Oklahoma, were lined up to leave a training site when the artillery round hit about 5 p.m. Wednesday.

"We know it happened. Now we're going to find out why it happened," said Gen. Lou Hennes, director of Army safety for the Army Safety Center at Fort Rucker, Ala. A four-man team from Fort Rucker will investigate the accident.

"It could be material or it could be human," Hennes said Thursday. "If it's human, it could be in standards or training, in leaders, in individuals or any combination thereof. Our purpose is to analyze these findings and come up with a preventive program.

"Blood-splattered camouflage fatigue, helmets, boots, jackets and other military wear was strewn across about a 25-yard area at the site of the accident. The crater measured about one yard across and about a foot deep.

Officials said the round from a howitzer, a type of big gun, overshot a target area by about one-half mile and fell 10 to 15 feet behind the soldiers, who were in formation.

Hennes said investigators hadn't determined which artillery was involved in the accident. Post spokesman said 105 mm, 155 mm and 8-inch howitzers were being fired Wednesday.

Jin Long, another post spokesman, said the accident site was about four miles from the populated area of the post, which has 21,000 soldiers.

of members who are appointed by the Dean of the College of Arts & Letters.

"Even allowing that everyone involved does his or her level 'best' to pick the 'best' people to run, faculty do wonder why Notre Dame's Academic Articles do not permit faculty vote to nominate and choose their own 'representatives' in a democratic, uncontested, and open process."

O'Meara responded that the codified election procedures to the Academic Council were originally formulated by the Academic Council itself, which was adequately represented by faculty, to remedy problems at the time. The Council is still fully empowered to change the Academic Articles in light of concerns that have now arisen, said O'Meara.
The Ad-hoc committee's report outlines four options that are available to the Faculty Senate regarding possible courses of action in this matter:

1. The situation may be left substantially as it is.
2. The Faculty Senate can adjourn and "quit bothering about governance."
3. The Faculty Senate can unionize.
4. The Faculty Senate can work with the administration to make even the most existing mechanisms for faculty participation in governance.

Paul Conway, chair of the Faculty Senate and associate professor of finance and business economics, said the decisions on unionization would be the most extreme and the least favorable because of the concentration that unions carry with them. People most often think of strikes when they hear about unionization.

"I could not even visualize this (a strike) happening," he said.

A unionized faculty would most likely employ other forms of collective bargaining in order to pursue its goals, Conway said.
The Senate's most beneficial option, according to Conway, is the one of working with the administration to legislative changes. Conway specifically mentioned giving the faculty as a whole more control in electing members to administrative committees.

Stepped-up federal funding for schools.

The president would have had to be better served if somebody had said, 'Look, Mr. President, we can do without these three stealth bombers, and we put them in your pocket, and you come in and at an appropriate moment you identify where you think in 1990 a new federal investment can galvanize this reform agenda."

Democratic Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas said, "I want to thank President Bush for giving us the chance for the governors after seven hard years of work on education reform, to have a real national partnership in education."

Gov. William O'Neill of Connecticut, also a Democrat, said, "It was first, it was important, the problem has been recognized."

Kean of New Jersey said, 'I'm reinvigorated. This is really exciting, this idea that the president of the United States is going to lead the way toward a reconstructing of the schools which is vital and very difficult to do.'

But he warned that fundamental change would be resisted by some educators.

"If the people involved in education oppose and stand in the way, it will be difficult and time consuming to get any of these things accomplished."

We've got to now bring along the people in the system. There is still a great body within the education profession who say, 'It's certainly fine in my school, it's certainly fine in my classroom.'

"For those of us who believe that everything is not fine, that's an attitude that's got to be changed," he said.

Jim Bakker shows the press a sign a supporter gave him as he leaves the Federal Courthouse in Charlotte, N.C. Wednesday afternoon.

Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Jim Bakker will take the stand today to defend himself against fraud and conspiracy charges, his lawyers said Thursday after presenting about 50 character witnesses on behalf of the PTL founder.

"When it's over I'll talk," Bakker said as he got into his car at the end of Thursday's testimony.

Bakker is expected to be the last defense witness.

"It could have been today, we're going tomorrow," said defense attorney George Davis, asked when asked by reporters if Bakker would take the stand Friday.

A federal judge refused Thursday to allow the jury to tour the Heritage USA retreat built by the disgraced television evangelist.

"It would be a waste of time and serve no purpose for the 18 people on the jury to see it," U.S. District Court Judge Robert Potter said.

Another Bakker lawyer, Harold Bender, contended that the jury and six alternates would benefit from seeing the Heritage park in nearby Fort Mill, S.C. It was closed this week by the卉retage USA trustees.

The judge clashed the day before with defense lawyers over the number of witnesses for Bakker. Potter said he generally allows only five character witnesses per side. Bender insisted his were not character witnesses, but satisfied Bakker backers important to his case.

The defense has presented at least 72 witnesses since it began its case Sept. 21. More than 50 of the witnesses testified to Bakker's character.

Jurors heard Thursday that they have on previous days from witnesses who were satisfied with their $1,000 "Lifetime Partnership" memberships that allowed them three nights a year at the hotel at Heritage USA.

Prosecutors contend the partnerships were oversold and that Bakker used more than $37.3 million of the proceeds to fund his lavish lifestyle.

Lola Penny testified she recently changed her will to leave her entire estate to the Bakkers without consulting her only child, Julie Wright, a real estate agent from Woodbridge Village, Mich., testified she and her husband bought 30 lifetime partnerships and were "very satisfied" with her $30,000 investment.

Sharon Creech, a school teacher from Rock Hill, S.C., described how she and her family received three years in prison in March 1987 after it was revealed that ministry funds were used to buy the silence of Jessica Hahn, with whom Bakker had a sexual tryst in 1985.

A group of women wearing red ribbons saying "Enough is enough" and representing the International Christian Women Fellowship handed out petitions at the courthouse seeking mercy for Bakker. Three dozens were addressed to the U.S. Attorney General.

would "create a danger to the safety of the aircraft and persons involved."
Lazo said family and friends would pay respects at Marcos’ hilltop home overlooking downtown Honolulu and the Pacific Ocean. Marcos’ remains, in a polished wooden casket, were taken by hearse to the mansion Thursday morning.
The house will be open to mourners 24 hours a day until Sunday, then his body will be taken to a local mortuary for viewing through Thursday, Lazo said.

Mrs. Marcos did not want reporters and photographers to view the body in a group Thursday, but said journalists could come in later without their cameras and notebooks, Lazo said.
A funeral Mass is planned for next Friday, but there are no definite plans for burial, Lazo said. He said Mrs. Marcos would keep trying to bring her husband back to his homeland.
"She knows that’s what he wants," Lazo said.

Marcos’ mother, who died in May 1988, has been embalmed several times and lies unburied because Marcos was not allowed into the Philippines for the funeral.

Tomas "Buddy" Gomez, Philippine consul general in Honolulu and an outspoken Marcos critic, said he would not attend the memorial service and urged Mrs. Marcos not to "exploit her husband’s death."

Marcos’ death was confirmed at about 1:15 a.m., when his son, Ferdinand Jr., emerged from the intensive care unit and said his father had been taken to “a higher place.”

"Hopefully friends and detractors alike will look beyond the man to see what he stood for — his vision, his compassion and his total love of country," said the composed younger Marcos.

"Father’s not here anymore. He’s gone," Marcos’ widow, Imelda, told about two dozen supporters outside the hospital room, said family spokesman Roger Peyuan. Somber but dry-eyed as she left the hospital dressed in black, Mrs. Marcos did not talk to reporters.

Marcos’ family had told doctors to do everything they could to save his life, and life-support equipment was not turned off until after Marcos died, Peyuan said.

Mandell said the Dean of the College of Arts and Letters and the Public Relations and Information have also received calls and he believes University Pres­ident Father Edward Malloy has as well.

He said articles in The South Bend Tribune, The Observer and The Wanderer, a conserva­tive Catholic newspaper, have called attention to the screen­ing.

"I am glad that people have such strong opinions about the film that they call us. One of the reasons we show the film is so people will discuss it," said Mandell.

"We do not require students to see the films if they object to them," Mandell said.

The department is sponsoring an open discussion of the film with several members of the Theology department on Wednesday Oct. 4 at 7 p.m. in the O’Shaughnessy Loft.

The planned showing of "The Last Temptation of Christ" at Notre Dame has become a rallying cry for Christian conservatives on campus. These people find the film offensive and blasphemous, and they believe Notre Dame is wrong for showing it. Their protests seem to indicate a desire to make a major statement of dissent against the film. While we do not agree with the film, we believe that Notre Dame has done the right thing. The film is not offensive or blasphemous, and it does not mean that Notre Dame supports or promotes it. The film is simply a piece of entertainment, and it is up to the individual to decide whether or not to watch it.

Many students and professors feel that the movie is offensive and blasphemous, and they believe that Notre Dame should not show it. They also believe that the film is a threat to the spiritual well-being of the students. Controversy over 'Last Temptation' continues
Film misrepresents the view, loving humanity of Jesus

Dear Editor:

I read "The Last Temptation of Christ" has come to Notre Dame. Unfortunately, this film is so offensive that it is not worth with Notre Dame show ing it. So, I just ask the readers to consider giving serious thought to decide they do not want to see it.

Religious diversity opens the mind

Religious diversity opens the mind

I see that "The Last Temptation of Christ" continues to be shown here at Notre Dame as a "Catholic University," the name is "University," and the film is advertised as an "interpretation of the university." As such, I believe that it is inappropriate for it not to be shown on campus. Not only that, but instead, quite reassuring.

True intellectual thought in inquiring, whether of how interpreted, "The Last Temptation of Christ" offers some important ideas on Jesus than those we're used to viewing. Therefore, it is wholly suitable to the huge lines that converge upon Dining Hall. I believe that she is right.

I also think that she is forgetting that most of the things she is complaining about having happened in old North too. Lines caused shortages on the food lines, and I am certain that the quality of the salad bar is just about the same. I don't think that most of that can also be attributed to the huge lines that converge upon Dining Hall for all reasons. I would just like to say that this letter is in response to some regrets on campus realize how the dining halls have changed, mostly for the better.

North Dining Hall is under served, serving more people than last year with less staff. Many people complain about the food. But I think everyone knows that if they could see all the food that is wasted coming out of the dining halls, so that it is kept on the front line to be immediately served and with a hundred or so passing through in less than a half hour it is impossible to keep food in constant availability.

If all the food were cooked ahead of time, it would not be fresh, and there would be even more complaints, this time about the food tasting old. Per sonally, I always try to tell people to try  to be a little nicer to the people and tip them as a reason for the lack of appr opriate for it not to be shown on campus. Not only that, but instead, quite reassuring.

So we have a problem: both sides claim to believe in the same God, and yet they do not. One side believes that Jesus is as human as I. And I find the movie to be an interpretation of the university. An acceptable one, in which the film is considered first and foremost an intellectual education. It is not just a trade school for Catholics, or of that kind, or Christian doctrine.

The Michigan game has come and gone. The next stop on the roadtripper agenda is Purdue, home of the Boilermakers, golden girls, silver twirls, and the World's Largest Drum. Purdue University is in West Lafayette, IN, approximately two and a half hour drive from South Bend. Roadtrippers can take US 31 south to State Road 25 and travel south until you see the signs for Purdue. Be sure to cross the Wabash River from Lafayette into West Lafayette.

West Lafayette is a big college town, and the campus is combined with the city. The combined population of Lafayette and West Lafayette exceeds 65,000. The student population is also large—approximately 35,000 students are enrolled at the West Lafayette campus. There is a considerably large Greek population at Purdue, with 20 sorority houses and 45 fraternity houses.

The residence halls are relatively spread out on campus, but they should be easily recognizable, most of the dorms are set up in quad formation. Cary quad, one of the largest complexes of dorms, is directly across from the stadium.

For those roadtrippers heading down to Purdue today, there will be a performance of the Black Watch and the Argyll & Sutherland Highlanders, internationally known Scottish dancers, bagpipe and drum musicians, at the Elliot Hall of Music at 8 p.m. Tickets range from $8 - $14.

Saturday afternoon, the place to be is Ross-Ade stadium, which seats 67,861 fans. The stadium is on the north end of campus, and most tailgaters are held in the parking lot directly adjacent to the stadium. Winnebagos with the ND flag can be found outside of Ross-Ade stadium, just as if it were a home football game.

Be sure to look for the Alumni Association van with a large awning and an ND banner. The van will be in the Media lot directly north of the stadium two and a half hours before the game and will remain there for about an hour after the game.

For people spending the night who don't happen to have a friend to stay with on campus, there are several hotels in the area. In West Lafayette: Family Inn, 1920 Northwestern Ave. (800)251-9752; Holiday Inn, Interstate 65 North and State road 43 North, (800)238-8000; Sheraton University Inn, US Highway 52 at Cy Umbarger Ave. (800)325-3535; Travelodge, North River Road. (800)222-8000.

The Purdue game is probably the last chance this season that roadtrippers will be able to journey a relatively short distance. Don't miss this opportunity to back the Irish and see the Purdue band's proudest possession—the World's Largest Drum.

Once upon a time there were two years ago, a group of ten freshman who wanted to go to the Purdue game... We decided that we would roadtrip to Purdue, party, watch the game, party, and go back home to celebrate some more—no problem. Well, one small problem. None of us had a car, and we had to be at least 21 to rent one. There was only one other option for an enterprising group of 18 year olds to rent transportation: a U-Haul moving van. It seemed like a good idea at the time.

IRISH EXTRA

Notre Dame vs. Purdue

BY KEN TYSIAC
Sports Writer

The most important weapon in Lou Holtz’s Notre Dame arsenal is a strong running game. Irish offensive guard Tim Grunhard realizes this all too well, since it is his responsibility to knock mammoth defensive tackles away from Notre Dame ballcarriers all game long.

“I realized when I came here that Notre Dame has always been a running team,” says Grunhard, “in every way has been a running team.”

Of course, the performance of the offensive line is crucial to the success of the running game. Without good holes to run through, even quality running backs like Anthony Johnson and Ricky Watters can be shut down.

Since opponents come into games knowing that Notre Dame’s primary objective is to run the ball, they are usually well prepared to dig in and battle the Irish in the trenches. This puts an added burden on the offensive line.

“There definitely is a lot of pressure on us, but the coaches do a very good job preparing us for it, as we work on the fundamentals of run-blocking every day in practice,” says Grunhard, who hails from Chicago.

“We must develop a continuity and be able to become a family inside. We must become so tight that we think to ourselves, ‘If I don’t perform my block, I will let the guy next to me down.’”

Culver stresses that the concept of the team is very dear to Grunhard. “Tim is not a ‘me’ oriented person,” says Culver, “He is concerned first and foremost with helping the team, and that makes us all perform better.”

Grunhard feels it is most important for the offensive line to be successful all by himself. On any play, four players can play well and open up holes, we should be successful,” he says.

“I realize when I came here that Notre Dame has all the tools to be successful, but if the fifth screws up, an opponent can do the damage,” Grunhard says.

“The offensive line must work on the fundamentals every day in practice to be successful.”

Grunhard learned from the top of the line

Tim Grunhard (75) chases down the Michigan defender. Grunhard made the block, allowing Ricky Watters (12) a big gain.

Spruell and Lanza left behind. His desire for perfection helps him advise younger players.

“If we don’t do the little things right, Tim points it out to us right away,” says sophomore running back Rodney Culver. “He is always trying to help us improve.”

But one good player cannot make an offensive line successful all by himself. On any play, four players can make great blocks, but if the fifth screws up, an opposing line-backer can bust into the backfield and cut down a running back for a loss. Grunhard feels it is most important for the offensive linemen to improve in their performance as a team rather than as individuals.

“We must develop a continuity and be able to become a family inside. We must become so tight that we think to ourselves, ‘If I don’t perform my block, I will let the guy next to me down.’”

If you can make the perfect snap and get down the field quickly, it gives you a great feeling,” he gushes. “I mean, I weigh 290 pounds, so I’m not hard to elude, but I may cause a fair catch, or cause the returner to cut back against the grain. If you do that, I feel I’ve done a good job.”

Grunhard thinks he and his teammates can do a good job against Purdue tomorrow. He says that Purdue has a typical Big Ten defense with regard to the fact that they line up head to head and drive straight at an offense, but he believes the Irish will be able to move the ball against them.

“If we perform up to our capabilities we should be able to handle Purdue’s defense. We’ll have to establish the run as well as a more effective passing game, but I firmly believe people will be surprised with our passing game,” says Grunhard, adding that he thinks quarter-back Tony Rice will soon show the world that he is one of the best passers in the country.

Rodney Culver agrees that the Irish should be successful against the Purdue defense. “If the line continues to play well and open up holes, we should be successful,” he says.

It wasn't too long ago that the mere mention of Purdue would strike fear into the hearts of any Notre Dame fan. After all, the Boilemakers have made a tradition out of upsetting Fighting Irish squads. If history is any indication, Notre Dame would appear to be in a particularly delicate situation when it heads to Ross-Ade Stadium this time around.

Purdue has a 4-2 record against Notre Dame teams entering a game ranked first in the nation. The Boilers have a 3-1 record against Notre Dame squads that were defending national titles.

"I have great respect for Purdue," said Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz. "Purdue's always given Notre Dame a tough time every place, but especially when we're at Ross-Ade Stadium."

But while Purdue fans are spending their week recalling past Purdue successes, the current events in this series clearly favor Notre Dame.

In Lou Holtz's three years in South Bend, the Irish have swept Purdue by respective scores of 41-9, 42-20 and 31-7. The Boilers, 1-1, have had two weeks to stew over their 38-9 loss to No. 21 Texas. But while Purdue is coming off a subpar performance against Michigan, Holtz is coming off a subpar performance against Michigan State.

"I feel awfully good about having Steve Jackson, who had the job of covering eventual Heisman Trophy winner Tim Brown during his freshman season, anchors the Purdue secondary," said Holtz.

"Steve has made a lot of progress," said Akers. "He's always been a guy who competes. I feel awfully good about having Steve Jackson in our secondary."

Jarrett Scales leads Purdue with 24 tackles after leading the Big Ten in tackles with 16 unassisted and eight assisted, two tackles for loss and one quarterback sack. Didn't realize he was such a good passer," said Holtz. "His arm is much stronger than I imagined."

A junior and first-year starter, Letnich has completed 36 of 76 passes for 452 yards this season with two interceptions and two touchdowns. Letnich's main target is senior flanker Calvin Williams, with 14 receptions for 198 yards. Tight end Dwayne ''Rocket'' Brown will start at quarterback than Tony Rice. Rice leads all Notre Dame rushers with 257 yards on 40 carries.

"I won't get overly alarmed," said Holtz. "How can a guy play 60-some games and be as good as he is? There's nobody I'd rather have at quarterback than Tony Rice."

"They have a run-and-shoot type of offense that presents you with a lot of problems," said Holtz. "Purdue's a talented football team. They have not been able to run the ball on a consistent basis, but they have a very good passing game."

Purdue is averaging only 56.5 rushing yards per game, including a feeble 1.6 yards per carry. Jerome Sparkman is the Boilers' leading rusher with just 88 yards on 31 carries. The Boilers will have a hard time changing their fortunes on the ground against Notre Dame. The Irish have allowed only 3.7 yards a carry so far this season, behind the defensive line of Jeff Alm, Bob Dahl and Chris Zurich and a good pass defense," said Holtz. "The arm is much stronger than I imagined."

Alm making the most of his starting job

Aim, recalls Holtz.

"The first thing Tim Brown said to me was that he couldn't believe the improvement of Jeff Alm," recalls Holtz. Alm, who has emerged as one of Notre Dame's potent defensive line, never anticipated being the subject of such conversations when he first arrived on campus.

"I started out just wanting to contribute and play," recalls Alm, the senior from Orlando, Fl. "That's not enough anymore.

Alm's change in attitude came about the same time John Faust arrived as Notre Dame's defensive line coach in the spring of 1988.

Having played a total of less than 55 minutes his freshman and sophomore seasons, Alm was impressive enough in Palermo's first spring session at Notre Dame to win the Herbie Award as the most improved defensive line.

A few months later, Alm was given an even greater award when he won a starting spot at defensive tackle.

"Palermo gave me the benefit of the doubt," said Alm, "He gave me a chance to see what I could do and a chance to play.

The coaches' faith in Alm paid off, as he played more minutes than any other Irish defensive lineman and was a key figure in Notre Dame's rejuvenated pass rush.

While many Notre Dame football observers were surprised at his rapid progress, Alm simply attributed it to one of his personal philosophies about the game.

"My theory is that someone who's on the second string is going to play like a second-stringer, but once you're put into a starting position, you're going to start playing like a starter," he said.

Nevertheless, Alm's improvement in a year certainly caught many people off guard. Holtz may have been the most surprised of all.

"You could not look at Jeff Alm and say he's a sophomore and revive the player he would become," said the Irish head coach.

It's not as though Alm was lacking in physical attributes. At 6-foot-7 and 270 pounds, he is one of the major forces in Notre Dame's potent defense that nipped the previously undefeated Los Angeles Raiders Steve Beuerlein and Tim Brown.

"The Irish offense was on the ropes all night," said Mike Nolan, head coach of the Los Angeles Raiders. "We knew going in that Notre Dame had a very, very successful against the run, but I need to make an impact. I want to be counted on.

And the small goals that Alm had set for himself earlier this year fell out.

"I don't think he's a rah-rah, 'Let's go!' type of player for me this year. I want to be a leader on the defense. I want to be [the best] Jeff Alm is does chase the football."

"Most of his plays come when people are running away from him, and he just chase the ball."

As a senior and second-year starter, Alm has continued to improve and is emerging as a leader on the defense.

"I've set a lot of higher goals for myself this year. I want to make an impact. I want to be counted on."

Boilers top Notre Dame in Indianapolis

Both Notre Dame and Purdue were out to prove something in the 1984 season opener. The Irish hoped to restore a dominant football reputation that had so quickly evaporated when they fell out of the Big Ten basement.

The Boilermakers looked to increase its lead with a second-and-goal at the line of scrimmage, then would somehow grab a hold of the ball and bring it down.

"Being able to catch the ball is more of a freakish matter, but (Alm) is around the football a lot," said Alm of the big tackle.

"The first thing Jeff Alm does is chase the ball."

Early in the fourth quarter, Everett took advantage of a porous defense with a long roll-out pass completion. The roll-out continued from 69-yard scoring drive with another touchdown lob to Price that gave Purdue a 23-14 advantage.

Two possessions later, Notre Dame took its final scoring drive. Buerlein, who finished with a modest 13-20 passing for 233 yards, used a barrage of plays to Brown and tight end Mark Bavaro for a 66-yard scoring drive. Pinkett, who could only muster 69 yards on carries against Purdue, streaked from in the six-yard line with 2:32 remaining. After the defense held strong, Buerlein’s troops got back on the field. Purdue’s Day 44 yard line with 2:32 remaining. All the Irish had to do was put the ball in (a) good field goal position to salvage the victory. But it was not to be.

There was a noise problem in calling a relay from the coaches above to the field, so Buerlein opened the drive with a double screen. He looked right to Pinkett but a Purdue defender wrapped up. He quickly turned and threw the ball to the left, directly into the hands of Purdue tackle Dan Baldwin. Ironically, the Boilers had 12 players on the field during the play but the officials didn’t catch it.

Even though he dropped the opener, Faint went on to enjoy his most productive season, finishing 7-4 and an Aloha Bowl victory over Southern California.

linebacking corps of Ned Bolcar and Dom Grimm.

Bolcar leads the Irish with 36 tackles, followed by Grimm with 24 tackles. The Irish are emerging as the best in the country at his position.

Notre Dame has balanced its offensive attack with 157 passing yards per game, and the pass defense has looked particularly vulnerable in its last two games.

“I’m concerned about our defense,” said Holtz. “We’re maybe putting too much pressure on our defensive backs.

“The one thing you don’t want to do is panic. It isn’t a loss you can write off as well. They (other teams) are just executing awfully well.”

Purdue kicker Larry Sullivan had 2-3 of 3 on field goals and extra points on exact performance so far this year. Notre Dame could have either Jim Sexton or Craig Henrich handling the punting chores Saturday.
ND roadtrippers head for Purdue

A guide to the best food and spirits in Boilermaker territory

Planning a trip to Purdue? A bit unsure what kind of dining and nightlife the town of West Lafayette, Ind., has to offer? This is where you may want to cut this out and take it with you.

What bars should you wait in line for? Where's a new and interesting restaurant? What kind of music can be found throughout the area? Read on.

Purdue's campus is located in West Lafayette, the county seat of Tippecanoe County. Purdue Lafayette sits to the east of the campus and is separated from West Lafayette by the Wabash River.

Both towns are two and a half hour drive. A tape or movie and two people in the cab and eight of our group who were up front played the driving away. Our friends had tried to push the U-Haul to a halting we stopped by and fixed our van.

It was night, and in order to divert suspicion we turned off the road and the two guys who were up front raised our hands. Then they told us to take out any alcohol that was in the van.

Two cops, two kids, several cases of beer, and a U-Haul van stopped at the curb. This was a bit out of the ordinary for the sleepy town of Logansport, Ind. The cops told us we would keep the beer until we returned with someone who was 21, and then it would be returned to us.

They let us off with a warning (and told us they hoped Notre Dame would kick Purdue's— the cops had stopped us because we were driving away. Our friends had tried to push the U-Haul to a "Oh yeah! I did time with someone from South Bend." When the van was fixed, we continued for a few more miles, and then I started to smell the alcohol from inside of the van and demanded that our two lookouts open so we wouldn't suffocate.

The owner was kind enough to fix our van and asked us where we were from. When we told him we were from South Bend, he replied, "Oh yeah! I did time with someone from South Bend." Luckily we came across a fellow Domer in the parking lot who offered to drive us to our friend's dorm. Almost six hours after we left South Bend, we finally reached Purdue. I had hoped to find a women's dorm to stay in, but not for the floor of my friend's room.

So ended the saga of our Purdue roadtrip. Incidentally, I was the only person who didn't take the U-Haul back to South Bend. After the game, I walked amongst the tailgaters and was offered a ride home by a very nice family with a Winnebago.

If you want seafood or steak, but your wallet says no, West Lafayette advertises a few restaurants with prices within the college budget. The list includes Ponderosa and Sizzler Steak Seafood Salad, both located on Sagamore Parkway South and Red Lobster, located on Sagamore Parkway North.

West Lafayette also offers some of your favorite pizza joints. Pizza Hut (132 Howard Ave.), Noble Roman's (Tippecanoe Mall, Sagamore Parkway South) and Little Caesar's (495 Sagamore Parkway West) are well-known haunts, can be found along with local hangouts, such as Ven's in the Purdue West Shopping Center. Snappy Tomato's (1225 West) and Garcia's Pan Pizza (in Chauncey Hill Mall) are well-liked by us.

Whatever you may desire, you should be able to find something to eat on the campus of Purdue. (And if you can't find it there, don't come back to Purdue to look for it!) So, when you go to support our team, eat, drink (especially pop, of course), and be merry.

Friday evening, 5 p.m. With two people in the cab and eight of us in the back (equipped with mattresses, a box full of tapes and beverages) the U-Haul rolled out of South Bend for what was supposed to be a two and a half hour drive.

A small bulb on the ceiling of the van was our only source of light. Those of us in the back had no idea where we were, except when the van stopped for pit stops.

Then we reached Logansport, Ind. The van suddenly stopped, and the two guys who were up front informed the officers that help was needed. Our friends had tried to push the U-Haul to a halting we stopped by and fixed our van. When we told him we were from South Bend, he replied, "Oh yeah! I did time with someone from South Bend." Have no fear, Griffin and O’Gill are here

My cocker spaniel, Darby O’Gill II, and I have been walking around this campus for years, often in the hours after midnight. Last week, at 1:30 a.m., I saw a lone woman running across the grass to B.F. I don’t know if she was a jogger, or just in a hurry. Since I wasn’t wearing my dog-collar, though Darby was wearing his, I wondered if she thought the pair of us looked dangerous, ready to attack her. I hope that she knew that I’m a kindly old priest, and that Darby is a gentle animal. As I was mulling this over, inspiration struck me like a bolt of lightning. Why shouldn’t O’Gill and I volunteer as a team, offering an escort service to Notre Dame women out after dark, afraid to walk by themselves? I don’t have a black belt in karate, or anything, and my dog isn’t trained to be vicious, but we could hold off an attacker; while the intended victim ran for help. Later, when the danger had passed, I could offer a little drink of something authoritative to the intended victim, to settle her nerves. Darby O’Gill could wear a cask strapped to his neck like a St. Bernard on television, as a joker would, I’m sure, if I told him to do it. I’m not making a joke, though. I’m some­thing, and my dog isn’t trained to follow regular safety procedures. As a generalist in min­istry, I’m always looking for ways to minister to the peripheral. That is, to make myself available, in helpful ways that no one else has thought of, to people with special needs, who might otherwise feel they were left out in the cold. Keeping the night watch regularly as a per­haps, instead of as a couch-potato hidden in the bowels of the student center, strikes Darby and me as an interesting, though chilly, new apostolate. Maybe, when the snow gets deep, some of the Stan­ford Fortdikes from the hardy breed when I live will volunteer to help us when the traffic is heavy. If you think, however, that I’m offering my body, and that I’m willing to die to do it, you’re wrong. I do not want to die; I have a job to do, which is to be a night watch, come hell or high water. I may not survive the winter. Then I look at Darby O’Gill, and he looks at me. Each of us knows that with the help of the other, we can try anything once, if it’s for God, country, or Notre Dame. A journey of a thousand miles be­gins with a single step. If we take this journey into darkness one day at a time, we’ll get through the bitter season as ef­fortlessly as though it were the Children’s Hour. Remember Longfellow’s poem with that name beginning, “Between the dark and the deep blue sea...” When the night is beginning to grow long, Darby O’Gill and I will stand guard and offer you an escort, let your fingers do the walking until you find the phone number of a padre and his wonder-pup, servants of the Lonely God, in charge. I will be able to go to bed at night with great peace of mind, like a sad old mister who tells his friends, “I’m going out rather far on the limb! Indeed I am, and the nervous butterflies fluttering in my stomach prove it. I realize that if I’m steadfast in keeping the nightwatch, come hell or high water, I may not survive the winter. Then I look at Darby O’Gill, and he looks at me. Each of us knows that with the help of the other, we can try anything once, if it’s for God, country, or Notre Dame...”

Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil...

Morris is averaging 133 yards per game — third best in the country — even though the Cowboys have lost their first three games.

Grace says that Wisconsin only has an average chance of winning.

But Scarry still has fond memories of the game against the Hoosiers.

"I've been in five Super Bowls," said Michael "Mo" Scarry, a young Montana native who became a professional football player in 1984. The real reason why the Badgers felt they should have won last year's contest. In that game, Grace was forced to hold the ball for several minutes in the red zone, which brought their series to 3-1-1.

"If we could play one more game, and if Indiana only has an average chance of winning, we will still be undefeated at home," Grace said.

"After all the excitement of the game against the Hoosiers, the Irish will have to focus on winning in their next game against the Huskies to keep their sights on a Wisconsin victory," said Michael "Mo" Scarry, a young Montana native who became a professional football player in 1984.

Just off a win in the Lady Greyhound Invitational, the Notre Dame women's golf team now is looking toward this weekend's Michigan State Invitational.

The Irish will travel this week to the home of the Spartans for the two-day Invitational, scheduled for Saturday and Sunday at East Lansing's Forest Acres Golf Course.

The MSU Invitational provides the Irish with some of their toughest competition of the year. Defending champion Ohio State will not be present, but such powerhouses as Illinois, Michigan and Michigan State will fill the gap, along with Iowa State, Nebraska and Northern Illinois.

Second-year Irish coach Tom Hanlon is cautious but optimistic about this weekend's meet.

"The competition will definitely be tough this year," Hanlon said. "Anytime you playing Big Ten teams, you know that things will be difficult."

Although Hanlon knows about the challenge of playing Big Ten, it will be the first time that he and his team have faced Nebraska and Penn State.

"We've played two teams that we know little about, but we need to watch out for them just the same," Hanlon said.

The MSU Invitational is a 54-hole golf tournament to be played in the span of two days (36 holes on Saturday and 18 holes on Sunday). The Irish never have played more than 18 holes in one day, and this concerns Hanlon.

"Conditioning will play an important role in this tournament," Hanlon said. "If the girls are able to maintain control throughout the competition, we will have a good performance.

Last weekend, the Irish roared through Indianapolis, capturing the Lady Greyhound Invitational crown. The victory was the first for Notre Dame in the young season.

Notre Dame also had claim to the medalist title, as freshman Kathy Phares earned this honor by shooting a 73. Other Irish participants included Allison Wojcik, who scored an 83; Roberta Bryer, 84; and Pandora Fecko and Cappy Mark, 87.

Kathy is a very low-key person but is able to be a leader by example," said Hanlon. "She is very consistent, and she has a good short game. We are encouraged by her play so far and are hopeful that she will continue to play as well as she can."

The Irish team total of 327 strokes broke the tournament record for a combined team score. Phares also earned a place in the record books for the lowest individual score in the Invitational's seven-year history.

"I was very pleased with the team's performance in winning the tournament," Hanlon says. "I felt going into this competition that we had a good chance of winning, and the team proved me right by bringing all the hardware back with them.

This win is very important to our girls. We had the opportunity to win before, but it always seemed to slip away. This time we captured the tournament and set two records in the process, which has boosted the team's confidence immensely. We are more confident in our capabilities, and are now in the position to make a better showing in the following weeks."

For Buddy Ryan hopping on NFL's scoring bandwagon

Associated Press

Everyone has a theory about why the Rams scored a 10 points in a game in the NFL this year, like that rules that allow linemen to use their hands and arms to create a bump and run.

But those have been around for a decade, so it's hard to see how anything has contributed to an increase from 38 points a game last year to 48 now.

Why not blame it on one of the game's brightest defensive minds, Buddy Ryan.

Ever since the 1985 Bears won 18-1 on the strength of Ryan's high-risk "46" defense, other teams have started to imitate the feeling that they'll get to the quarterback before he has a chance to throw.

Gambling creates turnovers and that creates scoring — there have been 21 defensive or special team touchdowns this year compared to 11 last year.

But few teams have the personnel of the '85 Bears, so the offense scores, too. In fact, Ryan himself has become a victim.

Last year, his Eagles won the NFC East despite a pass defense that was last in the NFL.

And last Sunday, his Eagles sacked Joe Montana eight times, but allowed Montana to pick apart his vulnerable secondary for four touchdowns in the fourth quarter an lead the 49ers to a 38-28 victory.

The Rams play a variation of the "46" — in fact, they call it the "Eagle." It utilizes two down linemen and five linebackers, at least two of whom usually blitz.

But it also leaves the secondary in single coverage and last Sunday it allowed Green Bay to come close to erasing a 38-7 deficit. The Rams won 41-38, and only because Brent Fullwood fumbled at the Los Angeles one in the fourth quarter.

Ironically, the Rams used to be among the conservative teams, using a 3-man rush with a zone defense — a classic "bend but don't break" philosophy.

"That's what was used by the Giants against the Cardinals last Sunday, a three (sometimes) four-man rush with a double zone defense. It got four interceptions and five sacks against Gary Hogeboom, who hadn't been sacked and had just two interceptions in his first two games.

Moreover, the Giants rank second in the league in defense, but have allowed fewer points (45) than any team in the league but Cincinnati.

On the other hand, no other team has Lawrence Taylor.

Without him, the defense might both bend and break.

Sometimes it pays to get cut.

That's what wide receiver Chris Burkett of Buffalo dis­covered when he was released by the Bills following his na­tionally televised argument with quarterback Jim Kelly.

Burkett, Buffalo's leading re­ceiver two years ago, was in the option year of his contract, making $236,000. He was im­mediately claimed on waivers by the Jets.

But as a vested veteran, he had the choice of turning down the waiver claim and opting for free agency, knowing that he was sought not only by the Jets, but also the Packers and Saints. Then he went back to the Jets and got a new 2-year deal for $700,000.

If the owners decide to compromise and pick a commis­sioner according to the NFL standings, Jim Finks would not get elected if the election were held now.

Going into Sunday's game, the 16 teams that supported Finks on July 6 have a com­bined record of 22-23. The 11 teams that abstained are 18-15, not counting 1-2 Houston, whose owner, Bud Adams, never made it to the meeting.

The New York Giants have probably had no more injuries than anyone else this season, but they seem to be getting them in the same place — in each of their last three home games, they've sustained a serious foot injury.

First it was Joe Morris, who broke a foot in the final exhibition game and is lost for the season.

Robert® Bryer and the Notre Dame women's golf team are eyeing a successful finish at this weekend's Michigan State Invitational. The Irish golfers won the Lady Greyhound Invitational last weekend.
Mariners 6, Indians 2
Pinch hitter Alvin Davis capped a fabulous comeback season with a seventh-hitter for his league-leading fifth shutout as California ended a six-game losing streak.

Blyleven, 17-5 after going 10-17 with Minnesota a year ago, walked a two-run first-inning out and struck out six in pitching his eighth complete game. It was the 60th shutout of his career, one behind Tom Seaver, who is eighth on the all-time list.

Penn National West with three games remaining.

Los Angeles Dodgers right-hander Tim Belcher, who pitched his major league-leading eighth shutout Wednesday night, underwent surgery Thursday to remove a bone spur and cartilage chips from his pitching hand.

Randy Milligan (left) and Cal Ripken (8) of the Baltimore Orioles look to do more celebrating this weekend with an American League West title. The Orioles trail the Blue Jays by one game heading into a season-ending three-game series at Toronto's SkyDome.

Patrick Roy of the Montreal Canadiens has been the best player in the National Hockey League’s all-time scoring list, which means he will break Howe’s record of 50. Imagine somebody breaking Hank Aaron’s home run record — at age 25.

Gretzky has played 10 NHL seasons. Gordie Howe played 25. Now, imagine somebody who might be better.

Mario Lemieux of the Pittsburgh Penguins, who will be 24 next year, has been the best player in hockey for the last two years. Just a few years after Gretzky set single-season records for goals (215 points) and points (215) that were almost beyond imagination, Lemieux is threatening to break them. Compare the salaries.

Gretzky is getting $20 million over six years, which means he will break Howe’s record of 50. Imagine somebody breaking Hank Aaron’s home run record — at age 25.

Now, imagine somebody who might be better.

Compare the superlatives.

Gretzky is America’s best hockey player. Lemieux is the best hockey player in the world. Who is the best hockey player in the world? This is the question.

If you ask a hockey historian, he is the best hockey player in the world, in every period of hockey history. Every hockey historian has the same answer, ‘Gretzky’.

If you ask a hockey statistician, he is the best hockey player in the world. Every hockey statistician has the same answer, ‘Gretzky’.

Cub playoff tickets go for black-market rates

Associated Press

CHICAGO — If you’re looking for tickets to the Cubs-Giants playoff series, forget it. If you’re lucky, that is.

In reality, there’s no problem getting tickets, although the going price might be 10 or 20 times face value.

We paid $450 for a block of four tickets that we just sold for $2,000. “It’s a good season that carries a face value of $30 each,”

The law forbids reselling tickets for more than the face value, and occasional scalpers will be arrested outside the ballpark. But scalpers who work over the telephone say they don’t have much to worry about.

In morning newspapers Thursday, there were nearly 100 classified ads for people wanting to buy or sell Cubs tickets among a few scattered ads for airline tickets and one for violinist Itzhak Perlman’s concert.

For scalpers, this year is particularly hot.

There are the professional scalpers and the people willing to pay hundreds of dollars are fans like Jim Beutjer, who has a plumbing business in suburban Wheaton and just wanted seven tickets so he could take his family to a game. His ad read:

“Need CUBS PLAYOFF & WORLD SERIES TICKETS DESPERATELY!”

“My phone has been ringing off the wall,” said Beutjer, estimating that he received 150 calls on the one day his ad ran. But he didn’t get a single ticket.

“These people are trying to gouge you,” he said. “The last guy who called wanted $1,250 for four tickets.”

But Beutjer, you see, wants his seven tickets at face value.

“I just want to take my family,” he said.

Meanwhile, three Cubs fans sued the team and TicketMaster, saying they were told only after buying more than four tickets that they would be limited to four seats.

In the meantime, there are goals, lots of them.

Get the fight out of the way without a defeat would produce a second consecutive 100-win season, last achieved by the Baltimore Orioles a decade ago.

Dave Parker, who homered Thursday, needs just four runs batted in for his first 100-RBI in the American League and fifth overall.

Mike Moore, 19-11 after pitching a one-hitter for seven innings in the 5-0 clincher over Texas, goes for the 20-victory plateau Sunday against Kansas City. And Carney Lansford, whose .336 batting average trails Minnesota’s Kirby Puckett by four percentage points, needs second AL batting crown.

“That hasn’t been on my mind at all,” Lansford said. “I’ve been from riches to riches to bottom.”

in his seven tickets at face value.

In the year by a back injury, we were dog-tired and banged up, because we had to play ... I think everybody realizes what we had to go through this year.”

Mark McGwire, disabled early in the year by a back injury, heard rumbles all season long about his low batting average, now .226. But he still managed to lead the club with 31 homers to become the second player in history to hit 30 in each of his first three full seasons; Canseco was the first.

This year’s a lot more meaningful,” McGwire said. “I can’t remember but a handful of blowout games this year. Last year, it seemed like we had a lot more.

“This year, there’s going to be three teams in our division with 90 or more wins, and only one team gets to go. That’s tough to take. If they were in the East, they’d be running away with it.”

Canseco isn’t leading any category this year following his MVP season. But he has hit 17 homers in less than half a season, and considers it an impressive achievement in light of his wrist injury and bad publicity that has dogged him since last winter. In the clincher, he gave the A’s the lead for good with a homer that he described on his 900 number as going “a mile high and a mile fast” — actually an estimated 456 feet.

“I’ve been at the bottom and been at the top,” Canseco said. “I’ve been from riches to rags and back to riches. I’ve been everywhere this year.”

Rickey Henderson, who arrived in a trade from the Yankees at midseason, is savoring his first true division title. He was in on a strike-year division crown with Oakland in 1981.

“I got the first real one,” he said. “This is a great feeling, much better than the half-year. In the playoffs last year I sat in the stands and wished I could play for the A’s. This is like a dream come true.”

General Manager Sandy Alderson was on hand for the celebration before heading to Arizona to scout Instructional League players. He said the A’s have carried the burden of high expectations for nearly two years.

“Let’s face it, since back in May of ’88, all we’ve done is put ourselves in a position to blow an opportunity,” Alderson said.

A’s have just enough bash, pitching to defend division title

OAKLAND, Calif. — The once-feared American League West likely will boast three teams with 90 or more wins by week's end. But it still takes about 100 to contend with the repeat champion Athletics.

Just like last year, Oakland gets to spend the final weekend padding its stats and mapping out its approach to the playoffs while the AL East leaders exhaust all resources just to survive.

“The loss we had in LA (in the 1988 World Series), we don’t forget,” reliever Dennis Eckersley said as the A’s savored its second straight divisional crown and clinched Wednesday night. “But we can enjoy this one for about four or five days.”

In the meantime, there are goals, lots of them.

Some of the top men's tennis players in the nation begin action today in the Tom Fallon Invitational, one of the premier tournaments in the Midwest.

Staring times at the Courtyard Courts are 5:30 p.m. on Friday and 9 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

The Irish enter the tournament fresh off a quality showing at last week's Navy All-Conference Tournament, which included five teams in the top 20.

Freshman Andy Zurcher opened his collegiate career by winning the fifth flight in singles action, while senior Mike Wallace took top honors in the eighth flight.

Dennis Grace record and are ranked sixth in the nation by Soccer America magazine. All-American Ken Snow, who has scored 16 points in eight games, leads the team in scoring, and goalkeeper Juergen Sommer anchors the defense with a goals-against-average of 0.71. "Kenny Snow is a brilliant player," said Grace. "He's very dangerous, probably one of the most dangerous players I've ever seen. He has not done much damage in the past to Notre Dame because of a de­ fender named LaVigne. I expect Paul to have a sensa­ tional game again and hope he will be able to neutralize Kenny Snow." Notre Dame is counting on the home-field advantage for the Hoosiers at a disadvantage. The Irish have never lost a game at Krause Stadium, where they boast a 20-0-1 at the facility since it opened in 1987.

The list goes on and on, with a bunch of guys nobody but their mothers had ever heard of suddenly producing regularly, or coming through in the clutch, or filling in for and outplaying a starter.

No one would dare pick the Cubs to win the division, this year or any year. They ain't that good. Oh sure, they've got Rick Sutcliffe on the pitching staff and Andre Dawson in right field, bad knees and all. ND cross country in underdog role

No. 2 Providence College favored at National Catholics

By MARY GARNO Sports Writer

This time last year, the Notre Dame men's cross country team was riding high after crushing a strong team from Georgetown in its opening meet of the season.

That team went on to win the National Catholic meet and eventually finished ninth in the NCAA's.

This fall, the Irish once again opened their season with a victory over the Hoyas, although the win was not as solid as in 1988. Notre Dame would like to continue following the same script as last year, but the next step will not be as easy one.

The test for the team will be the National Catholic Meet, held at 4 p.m. today at the Burke Memorial Golf Course. Notre Dame has won the meet three times and is the defending champion of the meet, which has been held here ever since its inception 11 years ago.

The Notre Dame cross country team, shown here en route to last year's National Catholic Invitational championship, will have to upset second-ranked Providence in order to defend its title.
