Cause of laundry fire still unknown

By JOHN O'BRIEN
News Writer

University officials and fire department investigators spent much of Thursday assessing the damage and preparing a response to the fire which gutted St. Michael's Laundry early Thursday morning.

Vice President for Business Affairs Thomas Mason said that it would be some time until the cause of the fire could be determined.

"We have to get the roof out of there before the investigators can go in," Mason said. "While there is no damage estimate yet, Mason said that the middle portion of the building called the "1934 section," is "gone." The roof to this section collapsed in a rush of flames at 3 a.m. Thursday morning.

Mason said, however, that the end sections of the building, which contained the offices of the Laundry and the dry cleaning "escaped in relatively fair shape. All our records and our computer in the office appear to be, at this time, salvageable."

The laundry is one of the few buildings on the Notre Dame campus that did not have a fire alarm, said Rex Rakow, director of Security, in an interview with the South Bend Tribune. University President Father Edward Malloy, who cancelled a speaking engagement at the Air Force Academy, said "We are so happy that there was no injury or loss of life."

Malloy met on Thursday afternoon with the officers of the University and administration whose departments were involved in the fire. "All of the immediate steps have been laid out and responsibilities assigned," he said. The Earth Science portion of Brownmon Hall sustained minor damage, including broken windows and some "water damage to their computer room but as far as we know it was not extensive," Mason said.

"With the way the wind was blowing, we could have lost a number of buildings," Mason said. Malloy praised the work of firefighters who battled the blaze. "There was a time where we were at serious risk of losing a couple of other buildings. They did a great job of containing it and controlling it."

"The loss of the Laundry is a bad situation, but when you look at the potential of what could have happened, we have a lot to be thankful for," Mason said.

ND computing launches major networking program

By SARAH VOOGT
News Writer

The Office of University Computing has just launched some of its most exciting and innovative projects as the University progresses into a more advanced phase of its campaign to improve the computing system on campus.

For example, by the middle of next semester the Office of University Computing will have extended a fiber backbone network to link all the principal academic and administrative buildings on campus.

James Wruck, director of systems and networking services, coordinates the networking project. "About a year and a half to two years ago we were in a backbone network that linked the engineering, science and biology buildings and also the Administration Building, the Hesburgh Library and Nieuwland Science Hall, said Wruck.

Six Jesuit priests killed in San Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Armed men killed and mutilated six Jesuit priests, their housekeeper and her daughter Thursday after bursting into their house at a leading university. A priest quoted witnesses as saying government forces were involved.

The government denied responsibility, condemned the slayings as "savage and irrational" and said an investigation was under way.

The U.S. National Council of Churches also denounced the slayings, and the U.S. ambassador said the slayings would have a "negative impact" on President Alfredo Cristiani's rightist government.

Two witnesses said about 30 uniformed police or army soldiers entered the campus before dawn and killed the eight "with lavish barbarity," said the Rev. Jose Maria Tojeira, the Jesuit order leader for Central America. "For example, they (the troops) took out their brains.

Roman Catholic Archbishop Arturo Rivera Danas compared the killings to the slaying of his predecessor, Oscar Arnulfo Romero. That 1980 assassination marked the beginning of years of killings and kidnappings by right-wing death squads.

"If this spiral of violence continues, death and destruction will sweep away many, especially those who are of most use to our people," said Rivera Danas after leading a prayer over the mutilated bodies.

The slayings came on the sixth day of fierce combat around this capital following an attack by leftist Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN) guerrillas.

Don't abandon problems after the hype ends

I pass that table on the way out of the dining hall everyday. Often there are people there; they are selling things or trying to sign you up for something: T-shirts, blood drive, Chicago trip, “Fast for a World Harvest.”

I walk past with a glance and continue on the way. It is a minute. Fast — what is this? Actually, week.

Yesterday, the Saint Mary’s community participated in Oxfam’s “Fast for a World Harvest.” This is a nationwide fast of day, to show support and raise money and awareness for people who have little or no food. How did I walk past with hardly a glance all the hype?

I paid attention four years ago when Bob Geldof brought “Live-Aid” to the forefront of the hunger fighting campaign. I was one of the many people who gave up a day for “Hands Across America.”

What has happened to my humanitarian spirit?

Trying to figure out what happened, I came to the conclusion that the American public has been under a barrage of “cures” in the last few years. First, there was the famine in Ethiopia. Then, human rights and homelessness. Now, we have the Amazon rain forests and environmental destruction.

I do not mean to say that there is anything wrong with the efforts different organizations have made on behalf of various causes.

The American public has been made aware of atrocities that are occurring in the world and the time and money it has contributed has helped. But these efforts should not give Americans a “Cause-of-the-Month” attitude.

The issue of hunger — national and worldwide — seems to be at the back of the American public’s mind. It has almost five years ago that hunger gained worldwide media attention.

We have moved on to the equally devastating problems of “crack” and AIDS. But in moving on, we cannot abandon those causes of “crack” and AIDS. But in moving on we cannot abandon those causes of “crack” and AIDS. But in moving on we cannot abandon those causes of “crack” and AIDS.

Thousands of residents strolled along the newly intact San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge Thursday, saluting the workers who got it back in shape just a month after the earthquake. Repaired at a cost of about $2.5 million, the bridge’s reopening ceremony featured Tony Bennett singing his trademark “I Left My Heart In San Francisco.”

Some smokers threw away their cigarettes, but others kept nicotine flowing in their veins Thursday as organizers of the 13th annual Great American Smokeout pressed Americans to kick the habit. Newborns in New Jersey were given “I’m a born non-smoker” T-shirts; a national chain of restaurants offered “cold turkey” sandwiches for a half-pack of cigarettes; and a hospital in Maine gave out carrot sticks and gum to relieve the craving to light up.

The legal blood-alcohol level in Indiana would be reduced from .10 percent to .08 percent in an effort to crack down on drunken drivers if legislation supported by the Governor’s Task Force to Reduce Drunk Driving is passed in the 1990 General Assembly. “This isn’t necessarily going to reduce fatalities because there isn’t much difference between .10 percent and .08 percent, but it does send a message that alcohol and driving aren’t acceptable,” said Richard Wood, a task force member Thursday in Indianapolis.

A Siberian gas pipeline explosion caused a sharp drop in temperature destroyed 2 1/2 miles of pipe, the Tass news agency said Thursday. There were no injuries in the blast, which occurred Tuesday night near the Siberian city of Novosibirsk, 1,600 miles northeast of Moscow, Tass said. Repair teams have been flown to the blast site, but cold weather was hampering efforts to fix the pipeline, Tass said. In June, a gas pipeline leaked and exploded in the Urals Mountains as two passenger trains were passing. More than 600 people were killed.

Solidarity leader Walesa to visit Chicago today

CHICAGO (AP) — The city that boasts the world's largest only public appearance in Chicago, with private meetings occupying most of the rest of his one-day visit. When asked about Walesa, Wojciech Grzymkowski immediately pulled two invitations from his breast pocket — one to a Saturday breakfast and the second to a lunch honoring the labor leader.

"Absolutely. They are waiting for Walesa," said Conversi of Chicago Poles as he drank coffee and chain-smoked European cigarettes at the Orbit Restaurant, across the street from Khu I America. "Everybody wants to see him — but he spends minutes here," he said.

Walesa will be in Chicago slightly more than 24 hours after he arrives Friday, and the demands for his time have been monumental.

"They are calling Solidarity headquarters in Gdansk, asking him to attend weddings, birthday parties, anything you can imagine," said Conversi, who met with Walesa while in Poland earlier this month.

This panel discussion was the last event in the Family and Gender Issues week on campus.

The following opinions vary within the populations of the two factions.

Biddick also advised students to be very careful about putting a committed relationship into a commuting life.

"It is very difficult. Try to stay together, especially if you are married," said Biddick, whose marriage suffered as a result of years of commuting.

The panelists also talked about the struggles they had to go through between age 18 to 25 as they began careers and families. "I was taught that as a girl I was equal in the eyes of God," said Dr. Elynn Stecker, of the fourth chapter of National Organization of Women (NOW). She was sur­ pried that there were a lot of things she could not do.

"Always being looking into yourself and asking yourself why my dream is not dream, said panelist Suzanne Bullock, who has recently reentered the workforce after staying home with five children.

Other panelists were Jennifer Glenn, an associate professor of sociology, and her husband Bruce Juetten, a case manager for Cass County Mental Health; Peter Smith, professor of psychology at Saint Mary's College, who is married to Stecker and from Bullock, a graduate of St. Mary's College in Berkeley, Calif.

Cafeteria wall collapses during storm, 7 pupils dead

NEWBURGH, N.Y. (AP) — A school cafeteria wall collapsed during a severe thunderstorm Thursday, toppling concrete blocks onto lunching pupils and killing seven of them, authorities said. Eighteen others were injured, four critically.

It was a very quiet thing and there wasn't anything anybody could do about it because it happened all at once," said Donald Presutti, mayor of the city of Newburgh, about five miles east of the school and 60 miles north of New York City.

From 113 to 125 students in first, second and third grades were in the cafeteria when the storm struck East Coldenham Elementary School about 12:30 p.m., said Newburgh Police Chief John Kulisek.

"You are talking about huge concrete blocks that fell on top of the kids," state police Lt. Robert Hughes said.

The storm system was the same one that moved through the South on Wednesday, siphoning off tornadoes that killed 17 people in Alabama.

State Police and survivors said they believed the school was hit by a tornado, but the National Weather Service said it could not confirm that until investigators went to the scene.

At St. Luke's Hospital in Newburgh, two children were in critical condition, three were in guarded condition and four were listed as stable.

27 dead in violent two-day storm

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — National Guardsmen stood watch against looting Thursday while work crews dug at the debris of a 250 mph tornado that struck virtually without warning, leaving 17 people dead and about 1,000 homeless.

No bodies were believed left in the rubble, but portions of the city resembled a bombing target. A shopping center and clusters of apartment buildings were leveled. Cars were piled atop each other. Utility poles had been snapped like twigs.

The National Weather Service said the tornado path had covered 18 miles north of New York City and that its wind speeds were as high as 250 mph.

"It's like taking six to 10 city blocks and putting them in a blender and putting it on ice," said rescue worker Bob Caraway.

The storm system that struck Huntsville — a violent clash of unusually warm and cold air — continued its march north on Thursday leaving seven schoolchildren dead in Newburgh, N.Y., collapsing homes in New Jersey and shattering skyscraper windows in Philadelphia.

A truck driver died when his tractor-trailer overturned in high winds on Interstate 95 at West Virginia, high winds on bridge connecting Elizabeth, N.J., and New York City.

The number of dead in the storm system that struck Huntsville — a violent clash of unusually warm and cold air — continued its march north on Thursday leaving seven schoolchildren dead in Newburgh, N.Y., collapsing homes in New Jersey and shattering skyscraper windows in Philadelphia.

A truck driver died when his tractor-trailer overturned in high winds on Interstate 95 at West Virginia, high winds on bridge connecting Elizabeth, N.J., and New York City.

Determination of the cost of the damage is an ongoing process, according to Mason. "The insurance office here said the insured replacement value of the building is $5 million, but we don't have an estimate yet on the loss," said Mason.

"It's going to take a while to make every effort to ensure that they are employed in some other unit of the University unless we can make a final decision about what we're going to do in terms of laundry in the future," he said.

James Lyphout, assistant vice president for business affairs, said the University is trying to place the employees of the laundry into other jobs around campus.

We will be using some of the employees to operate the equipment at the St. Joe Medical Center, said Lyphout. "We're going to interview the rest and place them in Food Services, Building Services and Support Services according to their preferences and interest."

"I think we'll be able to place everyone," said Lyphout.

Malloy praised the cooperation of residents of Lewis and Brownwood Halls who were forced to evacuate their dorms at 3:10 a.m. "There were also a number of students who helped the firefighters with ladders and other equipment," he said. "That contributed to the fact that something more serious had been avoided."

Malloy, Mason, Lyphout and other university officials were on the scene early Thursday morning.

The lack of organization bothered Suzanne Brown. "She said, 'It was kind of ridiculous that we didn't know what we were doing and going on.'"
She said that although some people had time to change into warm clothes and gather possessions, others did not.

The evacuees were directed to other dorms due to the winds of the night. Some residents said the directions were confusing. "I got no idea where I was supposed to go. They (the resident's associates and hall staff) did not say 'go to a girl's dorm,' just to any dorm on North Quad," said Esterline undeniably.

Fairly, however, she said she was told specifically to go to a female dorm.

"People knew to seek out women’s dorms on North Quad," Mengucci said. Those dorms had blankets, pillows, and open rooms for Lewis residents.

sity to connect the three new significant buildings to the backbone network. "This networking will allow mal­ chines in the public computing clusters access into the main- frame computer," said Wruck. The mainframe computer can facilitate electronic mail and can store large amounts of in­ formation. It would also be used to advertise and faculty members such as the Hesburgh Library cata­ logue, he said.

The rewiring in the academic buildings for networking will make possible three new computer facilities to be located in Fitzpatrick Hall, Newell Science Hall, and the Computing Center/Math Building, Wruck said. Carolyn Goodnight, a com­ puter consultant/analyst, said these new centers will be geared to meet the needs of science and engineering stu­ dents. "They will feature Sun Sparc Stations, which have greater speed and memory than the basic Macintoshes," she said.

In addition, Assistant Provost for Computing and Informa­ tion Technology, John Haider, said Spencer coordinates a faculty work program. The goal of the three workshops is to furnish every faculty member on campus with a desk com­ puter and encourage interdisciplinary cooperation. "I have been restricted as I have been asked by Cynthia Scott, assistant director of public relations and informa­ tion services," said Spencer. "I have to continue to work with the administration on these goals." The faculty members make requests through the dean of their college. The Office of University Computing buys and installs the systems. The expanded educational possibilities would allow new networking and increased numbers of computers are vir­ tually unlimited, said Spencer. "Networking rates, like with the introduc­ tion of any enhancing technol­ ogy, you cannot predict its effect until you know just it will be sub­ stantial." "Networking is a lot like the phone system was to the state of broadcasting today," said Wruck. "When only a few people had it, it was a special­ ized device.

Once the new technology be­ comes widespread, it changes the way in which we conduct daily lives, according to Wruck. "Once the changes be­ come pervasive, we see a community expanding, with co­ laboration and communication paths and we discover people and ideas that we didn't know existed."

Students show lack of respect at game

Last Saturday afternoon Notre Dame Stadium was the scene of a battle—not on the field, but in the stands. The students of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's waged a war with marshmallows, oranges and plastic cups.

While the student section is known for school spirit, this incident had nothing to do with that spirit. Spirit involves cheering for the team and not bothering anyone but themselves.

The students' actions are not a matter of maturity or simply having fun, acting in an immature manner does not necessarily bother others. Rather, there is a question of respect involved.

Do students lack such respect for each other and the other patrons that they do not care what effect their actions have? Respect involves consideration for others, students who threw objects were not considering anyone but themselves.

Most people at the stadium were there for one reason—to watch the game. Ticketholders have the right to watch the game and not be interrupted by the irresponsible acts of others. What happened Saturday showed a lack of respect by students for each other, the team and the people unfortunate enough to be seated around the student section.

Why did the students feel that the football game gave them the right to throw things? Just because the students were together in a large group is not an excuse. Most people at the stadium were there for one reason: to watch the game. Did they really need to vent their frustrations with flying objects? People don't throw things at each other in lectures or class discussions, why did students feel that the football game gave them the right to throw things? Just because the students were together in a large group is not an excuse.

Disrespectful audience undermines speaker's right to free speech

Dear Editor:

Phyllis Schlafly's contribution to the lecture series in gender studies on "The Changing Roles of Men and Women" compelled me to comment on particular points stressed throughout her otherwise skillful oration on women's issues, and to examine what seemed to be indefensible responses to questions posed to her following the lecture.

It is important to note the dubious nature of the title given Schlafly's lecture; she spoke little of "changing roles," but rather advocated maintaining the status quo of the "nuclear family." While this is an insightful standpoint, she fails to recognize the family as an institution, which like all others, changes decade upon decade, through different political administrations, and most importantly, under different general generations, which with them bring changing values.

Schlafly, when propositioned with the possibility of role reversal within marriage, merely responded that it should be the woman's position, in such a case, to inform her potential husband what it is she "expects of him." While I find the traditional family nucleus admirable, in certain instances even preferable, I must disagree that men should be warned of the possibility of role reversal in the position of an alternative family lifestyle.

This implies that the role of the homemaker is one of considerable inferiority to the position of the provider, and therefore must be prepared to accept a role often devalued by society. It is clearly on this point that Schlafly's philosophy of women as powerful in relation to roles and in accordance with their biological tendencies, is anything but liberating.

In rather misconstrued arguments against feminism, Schlafly claimed that the women's liberation movement is "passe." Are societal values contingent upon national trends? The problem with this statement is that it is contradictory to her advocacy of the maintenance of the traditional family structure also often considered passe in light of modern concepts of alternative lifestyles.

In addition, it is ironic that Mrs. Schlafly would not be able to express her anti-feminist position if it were not for the existence of the women's movement which provided women a public forum formerly forbidden to them.

Regardless of our personal choices for or against the traditional family structure, we must recognize the women's movement as providing women protection under the Constitution, in areas such as voting rights and equal protection under the law.

Using Zionism to rectify Arab-Israeli relations

By Charlie Maher

Zionism. A political movement tied closely to the Jewish faith that inspires a promise of an eternal commonwealth and spiritual redemption. The realization in the form of the Zionist state of Israel is lauded as the just restitution for the thousands of years of persecution and slaughter, yet the Zionist state as an institution is condemned for the inhumane treatment it brings upon the Palestinians.

The imperative which is communal for all Jews is Zionism is the reconstituting of a Jewish society in the promised land, free to live a Jewish lifestyle. The establishment of Zionism is not intrinsic to the Zionist vision; it is not the version of Zionism tied closely to the Jewish faith. Zionism was necessary to the reconstruction of a Jewish society in the land which they must live in with each other. Buber finds implicit not only that the Jewish people must live in Palestine as a Jewish society, but that this is bound up with the land.

The geographical necessity with the other, the "Arab question," what is the most critical challenge to Zionism; all decisions must be made with respect to the Arab people of Palestine.

For others, it represents the persecution and slaughter, yet it is the version of Zionism tied closely to the Jewish faith that is a historic fact. Its realization in the form of the Zionist state was necessary to the founding leader of Israel, was intrinsic to the Zionist vision; it is the Zionist vision of a society must decry ignorance - berates us for doing so. Our tax base for our schools. We rate and lingering prejudices, whose plight he is particularly concerned with because the creation of an independent Jewish state, covered in human rights, was pursued. Such projects would probably not, but necessarily, fail under the category of the economic strength of development and agriculture.

George Bush and his administration by calling for a decrease in funding for a goal which each of the two nations must agree to work together on the achievement of a peace that is based on the mutual understanding, on the Jewish state, covered in the blood of Jew and Arab alike, was a clear rejection of the right of the Palestinian refugees from Europe and for carrying out the political salvation of a Jewish majority and thus Jewish sovereignty. A rejection with ramifications which are being felt ever more by those, the Palestinians and others, who are being pursued. Such projects would probably not, but necessarily, fail under the category of the economic strength of development and agriculture.

This policy proposes an effort to build up the land for the Arab people of Palestine. Efforts which can be shared by two peoples who both love the land. Through mutual investment in projects, such as the development of a bi-national region, both parties would be able to develop both peoples while at the same time building the brotherhood resulting from shared labor. Brotherhood of shared labor, is, in Buber's view, a necessary part of living in a society which is tied to the land. The Arab question, with its necessary consequences. According to Buber, the competitive nature of the Arab people of Palestine is necessary to sustain an independent Jewish state. Different factors are present in the two different civilizations. The pattern of creating a Jewish state, covered in human rights, was pursued. Such projects would probably not, but necessarily, fail under the category of the economic strength of development and agriculture.

This code would include free speech, fair elections, and protection of Palestinian companies to develop, to compete for the Israeli market, and to export and import directly without being required to use Israeli middlemen. This would lead to the growth of Palestinian agriculture and in particular due entirely to the capabilities given the high percentage of Palestinians with high marketable skills. Legislation for the protection of all workers, guaranteeing equal opportunity hiring, equal pay for equal work, freedom of speech, and protection of property rights will be enshrined in the constitution.

This society can no longer wish this role to be positive and productive. We are aware that our nation's future is closely tied to the answer to this question. Hispano-Americans are growing in numbers, their jobs are growing in the barrio as it does on the Sunset Strip. They are a generation of citizens of the greatest nation on earth.

Derek Brown has heard the question so many times this season that he has the routine down pat.

"I always get a lot of, 'How come you don't get the ball more,'" said the Notre Dame tight end. "It's not really any big deal. It just wasn't my number that time. I'm sure my day's going to come."

Brown ranks second on the team in receiving with 11 catches for 185 yards, including a 100-yard day in receptions against Purdue. Those statistics would appear impressive enough for the normal tight end.

But Brown, the 1987 Parade High School Player of the Year, is not exactly your normal tight end. Your normal tight end doesn't open up a Sports Illustrated in September and find himself listed on a projected 1992 All-Pro team.

Thus, Brown hears the questions from fans wondering why the ball is not thrown his way more often. For Brown, it's all a matter of having patience and keeping priorities in order.

"I have nothing to complain about. We're winning; we're 10-0," said Brown. "I just have to wait my turn. It's like the punt return and kickoff return team with (Raghib) Ismail and (Fleeks) Watters. They're not going to run back for a touchdown every time. People won't even kick it to them every time, but they just have to stay patient."

Brown knows all about patience. Coming from Merritt Island (Fla.) High School, he needed all kinds of strength to resist the temptations to stay instate for college football. Brown considered Miami and the University of Florida before deciding on Notre Dame.

"There was all kinds of pressure," said the sophomore. "I think some of the pressure is what kept me away. I was tired of hearing people say, 'Who are you kidding? You're going to be a Gator.'"

Brown patiently waits for his chance to shine. By STEVE MEGAREE, Associate Sports Editor. The Observer, Friday, November 17, 1989.

Brown's younger twin sisters, Renee and Jenae, read all the literature that colleges sent to the household and recommended Notre Dame to their brother. Choosing between Notre Dame and Miami, Brown made his final decision while watching television one day.

"I was sitting at home by myself and watching 'Wake Up the Echoes,'" said the 6-7, 235-pounder. "As weird as it may seem, I got a feeling about Notre Dame."

He had that same feeling about the 1988 national championship team. Brown says that it did not take long before he realized that group would be something special.

"I felt something was about to explode here, and I wanted to be a part of it," said Brown. "After the Michigan game, I felt we'd go all the way."

That 19-17 season-opening win over Michigan led to a year that included many potential spots for future releases of "Wake Up the Echoes."

Brown earned a starring role midway through that year and caught 12 passes for 150 yards and three touchdowns.

His top games came in the two biggest contests of the season, making two catches for 46 yards against Miami and two catches for 70 yards in the Fiesta Bowl win over West Virginia.

Brown is more satisfied with his play so far this season, and he is particularly happy with the strides he has made as a blocker.

"I feel very confident in my blocking," said Brown. "I'm much more aggressive, and very seldom do I make any mental errors."

He also feels he has adjusted to the cold weather of South Bend and the pressures of major college football.

"I considered 40 or 50 degrees cold back home," said Brown. "Last year (the cold) would affect me, and I'd be wearing a lot of thermals, but we've had cold games here."

"This is bigtime football," Brown continued, in reference to the Notre Dame program. "I was kind of used to this from high school, but at least there I had basketball and track also."

Of course, the more things change, the more they stay the same. Although Brown earned high school All-America honors at Merritt Island, he recalls only making about 35 catches his last two years there.

Brown had to share the wealth there, as he played with seven other Division I players (three at Auburn, two each at Miami and Florida) on a team that lost only three games in his four years of play.

Now Brown again has to wait his turn for the ball, but the Irish have posted a perfect 22-0 record with him on the roster.

It leaves Brown with no regrets about his college selection.

"I look back at my decision, and Florida has all the troubles going on there and at Miami. (Jimmy) Johnson's gone," said Brown. "Here, I'm undefeated going on two years."

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. — Every intangible you possibly could think of has come into discussion this week.

History: Notre Dame has beaten Penn State in four trips to Beaver Stadium. The Nittany Lions have won six of the last eight meetings between the two teams. The Irish have not won at Penn State since 1974.

Weather: When Notre Dame last traveled to Happy Valley, the Irish ran into a wind-chill factor that went as low as 20 degrees below zero. A Notre Dame team still holding out hopes of a national title lost 21-20 and went on to fall in its final three games.

The weather figures to be frigid again come Saturday. Blair Thomas factor: Penn State’s Heisman Trophy candidate enjoyed the best day of his career in the 1987 matchup, rushing for 218 yards and three touchdowns. After a knee injury forced him to sit out last season (as Notre Dame beat Penn State 21-3 and held the Lions to 105 rushing yards), Thomas is back this year and has rushed for more than 100 yards in each of his last four games.

“I’ve never seen a player dominate a game that I’ve been involved with like Blair Thomas did last year,” said Irish coach Lou Holtz.

Desilay: Playing an unusually difficult schedule for them, the Lions have posted a 6-2-1 record. But it could have been much better.

In a 17-16 loss to Alabama, Thomas appeared to score a game-winning last-minute touchdown but was ruled down just short of the end zone. Ray Tarasi had a 17-yard potential game-winning field goal blocked on the following play.

In a shocking 13-13 tie with Maryland last week, Penn State had the ball inside the Terrapins’ 20-yard line three times in the first half but only scored three points.

Penn Staters have to think it is about time for the breaks to be going their way.

With all the talk about the intangibles, not much has been said about the actual Penn State team looking to end the nation’s longest winning streak and crush Notre Dame’s hopes of defending a national title.

The 17th-ranked Nittany Lions have overcome quarterback problems to post victories over Texas, Syracuse and West Virginia. A win over Notre Dame or Pittsburgh (or both) will be the peak of the season for the Lions to end an overwhelming season.

“It’s been a very rewarding season for us,” said Penn State head coach Joe Paterno. “It’s been a very rewarding season for the students, the coaching staff and Bob and Mary D’Onofrio”.

Penn State has played a very intelligent season. The Nittany Lions offense and defense hasn’t gotten any breaks.

“These are two teams of very solid, intelligent people,” Paterno continued. “Both teams will play as hard as they know how, and we’ll go from there.”

Penn State offense

Notre Dame defense

As a team that has a 1,000-yard runner in its backfield, the Nittany Lion offense has an awful hard time putting points on the scoreboard.

Much of the blame for Penn State’s lack of offense has been placed on the shoulders of the two Nittany Lion quarterbacks

Tony Sacca and Tom Bill

Sacca, a heralded recruit from high school who has yet to deliver in two years as a collegiate starter, has been

Penn State’s regular quarterback for most of the year. Sacca has completed less than 40 percent of his passes, with five interceptions and five touchdowns, as a sophomore.

Bill, a fifth-year senior, replaced Sacca when Penn State’s offense struggled last week against Maryland. Playing the entire half, Bill was 8-of-16 passing for 119 yards.

Paterno has indicated that Sacca probably will start against Notre Dame.

Whoever gets the call will have split end Dave Daniels (15 catches, 282 yards), tight end Dave Jakob (13, 181) and flanker Terry Smith (12, 280) as their main targets.

“Penn State’s passing game is a little more sophisticated than our,” said Holtz. “They do some awfully good things, they just haven’t been really consistent. I think they could throw the ball better if they needed to throw the ball more.”

While Penn State’s passing game hasn’t exactly been overpowering, Thomas has proved to make a complete comeback since undergoing knee surgery a year ago.

Thomas has 1,077 rushing yards and is averaging 5.2 yards per carry this season. In Penn State’s near-upset of Alabama, the senior from Philadelphia gained a season-high 160 yards.

A tailback, Thomas has proved to be the workhorse in the backfield, with about 23 carries per game. No other Penn State back has as many as 60 carries all season, with Leroy Thompson and John Gerak sharing the fullback role.

“Tough to know how he’d come back after knee surgery, but he seems to have come back exceptionally well,” said Holtz.

Thomas probably will be the best running back that the Notre Dame defense faces all year. The Irish have shuffled every other team that has tried to run on them, allowing just 2.8 yards per rush and 93.5 rushing yards per game.

Worse yet for Penn State, Irish standout nose tackle Chris Zorich says he likes playing in cold weather.

“I hope it snows,” said Zorich. “It’s going to be cold, and I’m going to wear my new hardwood football. I had a hard time trying to play in California (against Stanford) because it was so hot.”

Zorich is flanked by the underrated Bob Dahl and the ball-hawking Jeff Alm on the defensive line from wich Kowalkowski and Andre Jones at outside linebacker.

Veterans Donn Grimm and Ned Bolcar play inside linebacker, while Todd Lyght, Stan Smagala, D’Juan Francisco and Pat Terrell comprise the Irish secondary. Lyght and Smagala are at corner back, with Francisco at strong safety and Terrell at free safety.

Alm and Zorich are outstanding,” said Paterno. “Grimm and Bolcar we both tried very hard to get. They’re very intelligent players. They’re all very strong, very big and disciplined. Their secondary is comparable to anybody’s.”

Although Tarasi is most remembered across the nation for his blocked field goal attempt against Alabama, the senior kicker has enjoyed an outstanding season, connecting on 15-of-19 attempts. Punt returner (J.J. McBride ranks fifth in the nation with more than 16.5 yards per return.

Notre Dame offense

Penn State defense

The Irish have rolled up a total of 100 points in the last two games. It does not figure to be so easy against Penn State, the top scoring defense in the nation.

In nine games, the Nittany Lions have allowed a grand total of 33 points (9.3 points per game). Alabama’s 17 points are the most anybody has scored against Penn State this year.

One of the main reasons behind those impressive totals is linebacker Andre Collins. The Butkus Award finalist has 12 sacks and a team-leading 99 tackles.

NITTANY LIONS TO WATCH

Joe Paterno
Coach

Paterno has coached Penn State to 218 victories and a 79.4 winning percentage in 24 years. He is 4-3 against Irish head coach Lou Holtz.

Blair Thomas
HB

Thomas is the key that the Nittany Lions offense and defense have proved themselves to be unstoppable against the Irish. He has 1077 yards on 208 carries this season.

Tony Sacca
QB

Sacca has seen the most time as signal caller for the Lions, but is being challenged by Tom Bill. Sacca is 47-of-121 for a 38.8 percentage for 592 yards.

Mark D’Onofrio

D’Onofrio has garnered 47 tackles on the season, third on the team, and leads the team with 11 sacks for a net loss of 78 yards. He also has one interception.

Sherrid Railing

Railing leads the team with five interceptions, and has contributed 38 tackles to the Nittany Lion cause.
Jones rallies both Irish fans and defenses

By KEN TYSIAC
Sports Writer

It is October 21, 1989. Notre Dame Stadium erupts as quarterback Tony Rice drags two University of Southern California tacklers into the end zone to give the Irish a 28-24 lead late in the fourth quarter. But there is still time for the Trojans to drive down the field and take the lead.

Enter the TV timeout man. As he stands on the twenty-yard line in front of the student section with his arms folded, the man in the red windbreaker seems to drain all of the life out of the stadium. At a time when the Notre Dame defense most needs fan support, CBS has preempted it for a commercial.

Enter Andre Jones. The junior defensive end from Hyattsville, Maryland, bounces onto the field, waving his arms in the air as he prepares to line up for the kickoff. The crowd instantly transforms into a sea of Irish good cheer as Jones gords them on. For Andre Jones, this mission is accomplished.

I think it's the crowd that makes or breaks a game. They make us want to perform, to do our best out there. I would say that fans are the greatest in college football.

After the ball is kicked, Jones tries not to disappoint those fans lining up just inside fellow junior Todd Lyght on the sideline and almost always beats his teammates down the field. Jones is blessed with outstanding athletic ability (6-4, 251 pounds), and he takes great pride in his ability to put a hit on any kid rushing the field. "I try to run as fast and hard as I can," says Jones, "But I don't mind giving off the Mike Tyson effect."

Jones also stands out on the field because of the black tape he wears for support around his ankles. From the stands, Jones looks just a little more menacing than his teammates, although his original intention in using the tape had nothing to do with appearances. "I like it because it holds better," says Jones. "But I wouldn't mind giving off the Mike Tyson effect."

Jones's first chance to give it a try was in the end zone. "I wasn't really concerned about anything but getting from point A to point B without getting caught from behind," says Jones of his first collegiate score. "And before I knew it, I was in the end zone."

Jones is a key player in the Irish defensive scheme, as he is one of three defensive ends who rotates in regularly to fill two positions on the field. Jones is considered to be a "drop end," which means his primary responsibility is to cover receivers coming out of the backfield on passing downs. Teammate Devon McDonald fills the "rush" end position, while junior Scott Kowalkowski can play both the "rush" and "drop" roles.

"Our rotation works pretty well when everybody's healthy," says first-year assistant coach Jay Hayes, who supervises the defensive ends. "We've had a lot of success with it. It keeps the guys fresh, and they all get to be in the game for a lot of downs."

Role reversal: Lions top Irish in title quest

By VIC LOMBARDI

Rewind back to the 1986 Notre Dame-Penn State matchup and you'll feel a touch of deja vu.

Time Capsule

An undefeated powerhouse travels to face a team with a struggling football program. One squad is playing for a shot at the national championship, the other just struggling for respect. Sound familiar?

A decade-old Irish squad fell six yards and five points short of upsetting number-one ranked Penn State in Lou Holtz's debut 5-6 season. The Nittany Lion's squared out a 24-19 victory that ended the way to a 1987 Fiesta Bowl victory over Miami and a second national championship for Joe Paterno.

With a little over a minute remaining in the game, the Irish looked to go ahead on a first-and-goal from the six-yard line. But just as the upset story seemed to be unfolding, the Lions mounted a thrilling defensive stand that stymied the Irish on four straight downs.

Hup one. A first-down option pitch to Tanker Tim Brown resulted in a three-yard loss, as Penn State safety Ray Beuerlein flew in unscathed. A second tight end was supposed to pick up Beuerlein, but the Irish never brought him in.

Hup two. A Penn State blitz on the next play pushed Notre Dame 18 yards away from the endzone, as linebacker Don Graham raced in to sack Beuerlein for a nine-yard loss.

Hup three. Down number-three drew a gasp from the Notre Dame fans. Beuerlein fired a pass toward tight end Joel Williams, who was open on a slant to the endzone. But Lions cornerback Gary Wilkinson landed a barreling hit from behind as the ball glanced off Williams' hands near the goaline.

Hup four. The Irish had one last try.

Beuerlein sat back in the pocket for what seemed an eternity as receivers struggled to shake loose from the Penn State defenders. But after nobody got open, Beuerlein helplessly lofted a flare pass to tailback Mark Green who was promptly knocked down on the 13-yard line. "I know I should have threw the ball," said Beuerlein, who amassed 311 yards on 24-of-39 passing. "I just could not find anybody open in the endzone."

Tomorrow's contest offers the same script, but reversed roles. This time Penn State wears the underdog dress and Notre Dame looks like the eventual number-one.

After the game, they would throw on their jackets, grab their football and take off for Dixon Field, the high school field adjacent to the stadium. They would proceed to block kicks into each other’s faces.

for us to have any chance,” said Paterno. Collins is far from the only top-notch player on the Penn State defense. Outside linebacker Mark D’Onofrio has recorded 11 quarterback sacks, forced eight fumbles and four fumbles and quarterback interceptions. Defensive tackle Rich Schwartz is well-respected for his steady play.

“They’re probably the best defense we’ve played against,” said Holtz. “They’re all very talented, they play as a team and are especially well-drilled in fundamentals. They also give you an awful lot of different looks. They’ll give you about 50 different looks, and that’s no exaggeration.”

Penn State State coach understands the difficulty of trying to get the ball away from some of the nation’s top offensive lines. "They’re probably the best defensive team we’ve played against," said Holtz. "They’ve all got a lot of experience and they’re very well-coached."

Paterno also is well aware that Notre Dame’s defense is one of the best in the country. "We’re well aware that Notre Dame defense will make it very difficult for us to move the ball," said Paterno. "They’ve got a good combination of size and speed and they’re very well-coached."

Holtz echoed those sentiments, saying, "You’ve got to try to kick it intelligently," said Paterno. "You have to be careful that you don’t get too cute by trying to kick the ball away from someone that you did not want to return it, that is giving them good field position. If you try to be too clever, they end up getting the ball on the 40 out of bounds."}

Chizmar grew up pining at his brother

Brian would center the ball as Erick moved back to punt. As soon as Erick kicked the ball, Brian jumped in front of it to block it.

"On this day I think my brother kept letting me block the punt, and I think he liked watching the ball hit off my face," Brian, Penn State’s special teams coordinator, said.

"I never purposely kicked it in his face, it’s a laugh. We were pretty goofy, though, especially when it came to football.

As a kid, Brian played with his brother’s friends, since there weren’t many fellow kids on the block. He even followed Erick when Erick wouldn’t take him, and usually ended up on the field with the bigger boys.

I never hang around with anyone my own age," Chizmar said. "I was much older than all of the other kids at the time, so I was around older people."

"I was always active, always out doing something. I was always around, getting stitches."

Brian said. "If Erick had actually gone on his own way, I’d see kids up at the field that were even younger than me too. So I’d go up and we’d play pass on one. I wasn’t allowed to run, I just had to walk 20 yards and do whatever the ball carried. My parents used to laugh, because I’d have six of these kids all draped over me and I’d be walking for a quarter." He isn’t one of the biggest players on the Penn State team, but the Nittany Lion triplet-covered the ball. And the Chizmar’s form of bread­

"He doesn’t have the strength of some of the other players, but he has a good combination of the two," said Bradley. "He has a good game awareness and experi­enced because he’s learned from past mistakes."
Squeeze sensational on stage

TIM O'KEEFE accent writer

Squeeze came out and enjoyed themselves at the JACC Thursday night, and so did the audience.

From the beginning, front man Glenn Tilbrook and the rest of Squeeze showed their enthusiasm, drawing the crowd into their performance. Squeeze played their hit "Black Coffee in Bed," and without any prompting, the crowd sang along. Squeeze kept up the momentum from then on.

Squeeze is best-known for their catchy, intelligent pop hits from the late '70s and early '80s. On album, their songs are highly polished, but they kept their songs full of energy and drive in concert.

Squeeze played a variety of songs, mixing in old hits among cuts from their new album. "Frank," "Pulling Muscles from a Shell," "Cool for Cats," and "Take Me I'm Yours" were all enthusiastically received, as might be expected. What's more surprising is that their new songs were just as popular. "Rose, I Said," was hook-filled and had a strong beat. "Dr. Jazz," a rockabilly-style number reminiscent of Jerry Lee Lewis, had the audience dancing, which they continued to do for most of the night.

Tilbrook did an excellent job involving the crowd in the show. For their new song, "If It's Love," Tilbrook got the women to sing together, while the men sang harmony. All night, Tilbrook looked like he was just having fun, running around the stage as fast as he could, swinging his microphone and acting goofy, and this helped make the concert fun for the audience.

The concert was lifted by some silliness. For the song "Cool for Cats," three cat puppets danced along. One of the songs off "Frank" they performed is called "She Doesn't Have to Shave." During Squeeze's second encore, the keyboard player came on stage with an accordion, and his solo was given rousing applause.

Katrina and the Waves opened for Squeeze and did a surprisingly good job. Although they're only known for their lightweight hit, "Walking on Sunshine," most of their show was fairly hard-rocking, including an energetic cover of "We Gotta Get Out of This Place." Katrina leskanich also gets the sympathy vote for the night, hobbling around the stage with a cast on her leg, trying to rev up the crowd.

The only disappointing thing about the concert was its length. Although Squeeze came out for two encores, their set lasted only about an hour and a half. For their first encore, Squeeze played their hits "Goodbye Girl" and "Another Get Your Gun." They closed with "Tempied." With such an enthusiastic, fun performance, they could have played for another hour and a half with no complaints.

Katrina & the Waves, best known for their hit "Walking on Sunshine," provided a rocking opening at the Squeeze concert.

'Crimes and Misdemeanors' a gem

STEPHANIE SNYDER accent writer

The jazz music, the shining cast of characters, the insightful views on real-life situation, and most importantly, the silly, yet wonderful humor could only be the ingredients of a Woody Allen classic.

The King of the screen returns this winter with the un-bearably funny and moving "Crimes and Misdemeanors." The film touches on love, loneliness, God, and evil all twisted and incorporated into scenes from people's lives, ranging from the rich, successful man to the hair working failure. Woody Allen, himself, caps off the well-known list of cast members including Mia Farrow, Alan Alda, Daryl Hannah and Angelica Huston among others.

The scene is set in New York. Allen plays Cliff Stern, a sensitive man with a passion for making film documentaries whose marriage is on the rocks. He is struggling to keep his head above water in a world where appearances and wealth establish one's position in society.

Cliff's wife Wendy, played by Joanna Gleason, pleads with her brother Lester (Alan Alda,) who is a big-shot public figure with an enormous ego, to let Cliff shoot a scheduled profile of Lester. Out of sympathy, Lester agrees and Wendy is happy that her quirky husband will finally be earning some money.

Allen proceeds to fall in love with the director of Lester's profile, Hailey Reed, played by Mia Farrow (Allen's real-life love.) At the same time, another dramatic story unfolds. Actor Martin Landau plays Judah Rosenthal, a prominent ophthalmologist who falls in love with a younger woman, Deborah Paley (Angelica Houston.)

The scene becomes sticky when Judah realizes, after two years of adultery, what he's been missing - life with his wife Miriam (Claire Bloom.) Of course, Deborah will do anything, including blackmail, to keep the only man she has ever loved.

 Needless to say, Landau's character name, Judah, comes into play as the movie progresses and the situation becomes more desperate. Humor connects the stories within the movie. However, despite the continual joking, sometimes sarcastic sometimes friendly - but always true to life - the dilemmas faced by each of the characters do have a very serious side to them.

Allen makes the audience think; every scene, title and name has a deeper meaning. Viewers would need to see the movie several more times to catch even half of the meaning that Allen is trying get across. Throughout the movie, the audience will find themselves questioning their own beliefs and/or relating to the confusion that abounds in the minds of the characters, coming from such sensitive issues as moral- ity, adultery, and faith in God. "Crimes and Misdemeanors" is a pleasant change from the chain of adventure-horror movies that have been so popular and overused this season. Woody Allen offers a refreshing look at how people choose to live their lives. This look is personal, touching and as with every Allen film it will make you laugh.

Letters to a Lonely God

Cardinal what he should be doing attached. His mother's milk concerned with helping AIDS patients dying in the streets of his city like pariahs. I'm sure he is concerned that his remarks as the keynote speaker at the Vatican conference on AIDS the other day probably did much more harm than they did good, since they were symptomatic of something that could be called, in Shakespeare's phrase, "the insolence of office?"

You don't have to be a Philadelphia lawyer to see that when he urged that AIDS victims not be treated as outcasts, perceived only as public health hazards and left to die, he was distancing himself from the unfortunate, though perhaps not deliberately, and he did so in a way that left him looking like a lightweight. I mean, he does show that he appreciates human kindness can become incandescent as a great act of love as soon as he realizes that the human beings whose welfare he has in mind are not only the down-and-out brothers of Christ, so that in helping them, he's doing his own very dear brothers in need.

Nothing can get me more passionately involved in a mission of caring than the realization that no man is an island and that all are interdependent. The bell tolls signify birth or death, it tolls for me, living and dying on my way to the new birth in heaven. Mother Teresa, serving the poor, becomes one of them. Father Damien, living in the leper colony at Molokai, finally contracted the disease. His flock must have realized how faithful he had been in his role as pastor on the Sunday morning when he began the sermon at Mass with the words, "We lepers.

As a priest, I don't advise handing out condoms as though they were candy, savers with a hole in the middle. The Church can get involved in the moral dimensions of sexual abstractions or drug abuse. The mention of "sexual aberrations" and "drug abuse" will not help the Cardinal win friends and influence AIDS patient, especially since he mentions them in the same breath.

What good can come out of a summit conference on AIDS held on holy ground under holy auspices, if the keynote speaker starts off by poisoning the well, at least for homosexuals who will cringe at the phrase, "The moral dimensions of sexual aberrations"? Will not the homosexuals be saying, "If this is what the Pope considers, what do I have to say?" "If the Church won't really have a ministry to AIDS patient, even if the Pope did go down to when prelates meet, the Church doesn't really need a ministry to AIDS patients, as the representative of a great-hearted Church. But while in San Francisco, John Paul also heard from sick gay who refused to receive the sacraments of the dying from a Church that they cannot forgive because they claim, Rome has repeatedly trashed the human rights of gay men and women. But who wants to help AIDS patients shouldn't anger them further. From listening to him, you could get the idea that a ten-foot pole is half long enough to measure the distance between the "insolence of office" and the human condition of Catholics with AIDS. I don't think that an increase in the embittered alienation of gay Catholics from the Church was what anyone had in mind when the conference at the Vatican was called. "Other sheep I have that are not of this flock," said the Lord. Could he have meant by this that He loves gays and straights equally well? Then why do gays ever feel straight-armed by "the insolence of office?"

The Cardinal attacks the health care professionals who, he says, believe that they have nothing but condoms and syringes to offer persons with AIDS or at risk. That encouraging new thing is he telling gays who have given up on the Church? Can't blame him for not offering false hopes. But, I wish he could have shown love instead of a cold, professional detachment from gay Catholics who belong to a religion which, though gay and straights equally well? Then why do gays often feel straight-armed by "the insolence of office?"

Cavs send Harper to Clippers

Associated Press

The Los Angeles Clippers traded the rights to Danny Ferry to the Cleveland Cavaliers on Thursday along with Reggie Williams for Ron Harper and three draft picks.

Ferry, the second pick in last summer’s NBA draft, decided on Thursday along with Reggie Williams to not to play for the Clippers this season with the Cavaliers and averaged 22 points in Cleveland’s three draft picks.

He averaged 18.6 points last season with the Cavaliers and played in all 82 games. He averaged 19.6 points in the play-offs.

Williams, a 6-foot-7 guard-forward, was the fourth pick in 1987 but has been a disappointment. He averaged 10.3 points in his first two seasons while making 46.4 percent of his shots from the field. He has averaged 12.0 points, three rebounds and two assists in the Clippers’ five games this season.

Ware is within reach of 10 other NCAA records.

The Minnesota Vikings, long a symbol of man's triumph over the elements, have been run out of town by a little snow.

The Vikings, who for years considered frigid weather and a frozen field the perfect combination to ice an NFL opponent on a given Sunday, went to Charlotte, N.C., on Thursday to prepare for the Philadelphia Eagles.

This, after an inch of snow — an inch! — fell Wednesday accompanied by a forecast for the Twin Cities of temperatures in the teens with wind-chill factors near zero for the next two days.

Where have you gone Bill Brown?

Nowhere. But the former Vikings fullback isn't about to call the current crop of purpled-vested warriors einsteins for fleeing.

"We went down to Tulsa Okla. a few times," he said by telephone from his suburban Minneapolis home. "You can't practice if you can't clear the snow off the field." But Brown added a word of caution, noting that Charlotte isn't all that far from Atlanta.

"It isn't supposed to be cold in Atlanta, Georgia, is it? It was 1973 and we were playing a Monday night game," he said when asked about the most chilling experience of his NFL seasons. "It was about 27 or 28 degrees and raining, it ruined two toes, maybe three. My feet had to turn a couple of shades to get back to normal."

Maybe the Vikings should have stayed at home to prepare for Philadelphia.

The forecast for Friday night in Charlotte is a chilly 40 degrees, more Viking-like than Carolina weather — perhaps an omen as Minnesota (7-3) tries to hold its straight loss.

The Giants entertain the Seattle Seahawks. Elsewhere, it will be Buffalo at New England, Detroit at Cincinnati, Kansas City at Cleveland, Miami at Dallas, New Orleans at Atlanta, San Diego at Pittsburgh, Tampa Bay at Chicago, Phoenix at the Los Angeles Rams, the Los Angeles Raiders at Houston, Atlanta at San Francisco and the New York Jets at Atlanta. Denver is at Washington on Monday night.

The Giants, whose loss Sunday to Los Angeles broke a four-game winning streak, may get tight end Mark Bavaro and linebacker Steve DeOssie back from injuries because of a hypereXtended right knee suffered in Sunday's loss to Detroit.

If Majkowski doesn't play, the Packers fullback isn't about to call the current crop of purpled-vested warriors einsteins for fleeing.

Pat LaFontaine had two goals and an assist as the New York Islanders broke a six-game losing streak with a 6-2 victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs Thursday night.

The Islanders won for the first time since a 3-2 win over Detroit on Nov. 4 and for only the second time in 13 games. Their record in that period is 2-9-2. The Maple Leafs were 4-1 in their previous five games.

The Islanders, 2-8-2 at home this season, took a 4-1 lead after one period against goaltender Peter Ing, making his first start in the NHL. They scored four times in only seven shifts against Ing, who was brought up from Newmarket of the AHL on Wednesday.

Mick Vukota beat Ing from the top of the right circle at 2:24. Gerald Diduck gave the Islanders a 2-0 lead when his shot went into the net off the stick of defenseman Tom Kurvers at 6:11 on a power play.

LaFontaine made it 3-0 when he deflected in a pass by Alan Kurvers at 8:09. It was his second of the game and seventh of the season.

Cullen started the outburst with a power-play goal at 8:09. It was his second of the game and seventh of the season.

But the Islanders wrapped things up on Brian Trottier’s 493rd career goal and LaFontaine’s second of the night and 15th of the season. Trottier put a backhander past Ing at 1:03 after skating in from center ice and LaFontaine added a short-handed goal at 4:26.

Ing finished with 19 saves for the Leafs, who had won three straight games at Nassau Coliseum before Thursday night.

Pens 8, Nordiques 2

John Cullen had two goals and two assists and Kevin Stevens added a goal and three assists, leading the Pittsburgh Penguins to an 8-2 victory over the Quebec Nordiques Thursday.

The Penguins matched their longest winning streak this season with their second consecutive victory. They’ve outscored opponents 14-2 in the two games. The Nordiques have an NHL-low 11 points through 20 games.

Pittsburgh scored four times in a seven-minute span of the second period. Cullen started the outburst with a power-play goal at 8:09. It was his second of the game and seventh of the season.

Blues 7, Red Wings 2

Paul MacLean and Paul Cavallini scored two goals each during a four-goal second period Thursday night, leading the St. Louis Blues to a 7-2 victory over Detroit, the Red Wings’ seventh straight loss.

The Blues capitalized on four of six power-play chances for their sixth victory against one defeat and three ties in 10 games. Detroit (4-13-3) has allowed 11 power-play goals in its last 23 short-handed situations.

Flyers 6, North Stars 3

Pelle Eklund scored twice and Mike Bullard had one goal and assisted on three others as the Philadelphia Flyers defeated Minnesota 6-3 Thursday night, ending the North Stars’ 11-game winning streak.

The victory gave the Flyers a 500 record for the first time this season (8-8-3).

Eklund put the Flyers in front 4-3 when he took a pass from Bullard and flipped a backhander over sprawled goalie Kari Takko at 10:43 of the second period.

Bruins 3, Canadiens 2

Ray Bourque, Cam Neely and Glen Wesley scored goals 57 seconds apart late in the third period Thursday night, rallying the Boston Bruins to a 3-2 victory over the Montreal Canadiens.

Patrick Roy appeared on his way to his 11th NHL shutout with 25 saves and a 2-0 lead when the Bruins erupted for their fourth victory in a row, extending their un unbeaten streak to six games (5-0-1).

Bourque took a pass from Ken Linseman and scored his second goal of the season on a slap shot from the left faceoff circle at 17:35. Linseman earned his 300th NHL assist on the play.

Fencers in Wisconsin for their first dual meet

By CHRIS FILIO
Sports Writer

Notre Dame's fencing teams will travel to Madison, Wisconsin this weekend to begin their official dual meet schedule for the Irish. Wisconsin as well as the University of Chicago, the University of Minnesota and the University of Lawrence.

The team suffered a major loss in the early morning fire Thursday at St. Michael's, with four laundry carts of uniforms, warm-ups, and travel equipment consumed by the blaze. Despite this major setback, Irish head coach Mike DeCicco feels confident that his squad will emerge on top of the competition, as Wisconsin is still a very young team. He feels that despite missed classes and defects, they will perform well in their season's first weekend.

Veteran foilists Joel Clark, Phil Leczyk, and Colin Gamba are scheduled to participate. In addition, David Garcia, Ed Rehove and Mike Trisko will see action this weekend. Notable absentees will be the freshmen duo of Noel Young and Jeff Piper. The women's foil team will be led by senior captain Anne Barreda, fresh off an excellent performance last weekend. Joining her will be freshmen Kristen Clark, Kathleen Vogt, and junior Margaret Connor. Added experience will come from Lynne Kadri and Tara Kelly. Senior Kristin Kralick and sophomore Heidi Piper will not travel to the match.

In men's saber, all hopes will rest on three men: senior Dan Yu, captain Chris Baguer, and top newcomer James Talaferrro. "We're looking for Dan Yu to make a big contribution this weekend," said DeCicco.

In a telephone hookup from the ASAP Family Treatment Center in Van Nuys, Calif., Dr. David Lewis told a news conference that Tarpley would be suspended without pay "until we can sort everything out."

Tarpley, who twice has been treated for drug and alcohol abuse, was arrested shortly before 11 p.m. Wednesday on a north Dallas freeway after officers spotted him driving his car too close to another vehicle. He also pulled away from a woman police officer who tried to arrest him, officer Frank Ruspoli said.

"It's very clear that alcohol was involved and that is in non-compliance with his after-care program," Lewis said. "Roy will be suspended until he is fully in compliance with his personal after-care program. He must understand the gravity of this kind of incident and how alcohol contributes to it."

Under NBA regulations, the counselors at an after-care program can order a player suspended if he violates the agreements of the program. Tarpley, who did not attend the afternoon news conference, has not commented on the Wednesday night incident. He practiced with the Mavericks Thursday morning, then talked with Lewis.

A positive test for alcohol would be a violation of Tarpley's after-care program but not necessarily the "third strike" that would result in a lifetime suspension from the NBA with an opportunity to apply for reinstatement after two years.

But Lewis said if a blood test taken after the arrest turns up cocaine, Tarpley would be suspended from life. Test results may not be available for up to two weeks, Dallas police said.

Alumni, Cavanaugh collide in finals of Interhall playoffs

BY DAVE DIETEMAN
Sports Writer

Eager Notre Dame football fans can whet their appetites this Sunday as Alumni and Cavanaugh face off in the championship game of the 1989 men's Interhall season. Alumni and Cavanaugh, rivals in the medium-dorm Leach League, are football programs at the peak of rebuilding. This year's edition of Cavanaugh football was the first to advance to the championship game since 1967. Alumni struggled through a winless season in 1986, just a year after being crowned champions in 1985. Both teams have steadily risen from the depths of their division to the upper crust, with a combined record of 9-3 thus far this season.

The two teams clashed earlier this season, with Cavanaugh prevailing 7-0 behind the 255-yard rushing performance of Dave Ludwig and Mark Rose. Both Ludwig and Rose have a habit of demolishing opposing defenses, and have demonstrated their ability to perform in key situations. Split end John Martin will also figure in the Dogs' offensive strategy. Finally, kicker John Carretta, with his quick release and accurate foot, presents a problem for any opposing team. The Dogs stack up just as well on defense, with nose tackle Justin Polit leading the way. However, as linebacker Paul Seymour stated, "Our defense has really been a collective effort." Defensive back Ryan Roberts, agreeing, says, "We're trying to cut the hype and play as a unit. We just want to play old-fashioned football, come together as a team and do our job."

Where Cavanaugh is concerned, offense and defense are well-balanced.

Quarterback Chris Fox will run the Crusader offense, utilizing rushing sensations Trent Boneau and Dave Short for big plays. Cornersham Jim Hawkins and Kyle Sullivan have also demonstrated impressive potential. But depth may be the most crucial element on this team.

"No single player is irreplaceable. We've got enough capable players on the sidelines to fill in for the starters, and one of the biggest reasons for our success this year has been that everyone practices hard, plays hard and is enthusiastic," said defensive end Phillip Molloy.

So win or lose, both teams admit the appeal of playing in storied Notre Dame Stadium.

"We're pretty excited to be in Notre Dame Stadium this year. Cavanaugh is excited, too," admitted Alumni defensive back Ryan Roberts. Cavanaugh all-purpose man Marty Kelly, agreeing, exclaimed, "I've been watching Notre Dame football since I was five, and I've always wanted to play in the Stadium. This is almost like reliving the Texas state championship from high school."

The game is tentatively scheduled for Sunday at 2 p.m. at Notre Dame Stadium. However, due to weather conditions, the game may be moved to the Loftus Sports Center.

Howard, Lewis will fight to decide Interhall crown

By THERESA KELLY

Two teams similar in style will face off Sunday for the women's Interhall football championship.

Defending champion Lewis will try to make it two in a row against upstart Howard at the Stadium at 1 p.m., unless the game is moved indoors in the Loftus Sports Center.

Lewis won at the Stadium last year in extremely wet and muddy conditions. Howard is appearing in the final for the first time. Both teams say they would rather play outside than move to the turf at Loftus.

"They'll go right at us and run a lot," said Howard coach Tom Zidar. "I think Lewis is the favorite going in. They were in the finals last year, and they have most of their team back. We don't think they're doing anything different, but you never know what to expect."

On the defensive side, both teams play tough, and the game is expected to go down to the wire. Lewis stacked up a ground game with an occasional pass thrown in.

"Their offense is similar to ours," said Lewis captain Jill Beth Hayes. "We both run multiple plays. We have more of a running game, and they run a lot of option. We're the all who wants to win it the most. Howard's in the position we were in last year, when we came from nowhere and nobody expected us to win a championship."

"We've had some intense practices this week and I know we're ready to win," said Howard's Adair Scott, who has kicked field goals and extra points in five games earlier this season so it would be especially nice to put that record up if we have to play them."

Indiana has the reciprocal record of the Aggies at 15-11 and are led by junior Diane Hoerrath's team-high 372 kills and sophomore Nancy Mason's 302 kills.

The Hoosiers' freshman setter has many of these kills, providing her teammates with 973 assists, while adding 225 digs, and senior middle blocker Julie Goold has established herself as a force at the net, recording 89 total blocks.

The host Broncos are 16-9 thus far primarily because of older state champion Joanne Bingham, who has 4.91 kills and 42 assists to her name. Bingham's partner in crime, sophomore Julie Molloy and Marty Kelly, has 1,054 assists.

Two young players—sophomore Julie Young and freshman Kim Lee—lead the Broncos with 228 digs and 71 total blocks, respectively.

"I think they're all beatable teams," senior captain Kathy Cunningham said of her last collegiate tournament. "It would be nice to win the whole tournament and maybe even turn the heads of the NIT judges if they see us making a late-season surge."

"We've had some intense practices this week and I know we're ready to win. We barely won our last two games earlier this season so it would be especially nice to put that record up if we have to play them."

"I think it'll all go right down to the wire," said Lewis's Susan Blattner, who would be surprised to see it end on an overtime play."

Collins, Irish volleyball prepare for IU, Texas A&M

BY MOLLY MAHONEY
Assistant Sports Editor

Senior setter Taryn Collins has stepped up and taken the lead on the Notre Dame volleyball team.

"The most consistent player," said Coach Ric Schafer. "Collins has the dedication and teamwork to step up when needed." Schafer hopes that Collins' consistent play will help the Irish in their game against Texas A&M.

"Collins has been a consistent performer and a leader for the team," said Coach Ric Schafer. "I believe she will continue to perform at a high level and help the team achieve their goals."
