Report recommends changes in SYR policy

By KELLEY TUTHILL

A Student Government report suggests several changes in the all-hall semi-formal policy, including a recommendation that students be allowed to drink alcoholic beverages in the hallways, during the dances.

Recommendations from the report include the following:

- The University should revitalize its commitment to the Student Government Committee on all Hall Semi-Formals.
- The Committee should ensure that there is community for students to socialize.
- The students' response was the enthusiasm for students to socialize, thus we should support at least one semi-formal this year.
- A compromise between the students and the Administration should be worked out to allow students to have drinks in the halls on the night of semi-formals.

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Novelist Mario Vargas Llosa, once considered a sure bet to become Peru's next president, has found himself sidetracked by the Fujimori phenomenon.

Alberto Fujimori, the son of Japanese immigrants and a political unknown until a month ago, forced the country's most famous novelist into a runoff and is now favored to win the presidency.

Public opinion analysts say Fujimori's strong second-place finish in Sunday's election reflected Peruvians' alienation from the traditional political parties and their desire for "miraculous, painless" solutions to the country's ills.

"It was not a rational vote. It was a protest vote against the other candidates," said Alfredo Torres, media director for APPO, a market research firm.

Fujimori, a 51-year-old agronomist-cultural engineer, received 29 percent of the vote Sunday to 33.9 percent for the 54-year-old Vargas Llosa, according to unofficial returns.

The writer needed more than six weeks to carry a vote in this country because there's no candidate that can win without a runoff. Fujimori has awakened hopes for someone with "magical" solutions to the country's problems.

The spotlight fell on Fujimori, they say, after voters in recent weeks began to fear the economic chaos that has wracked the country of 22 million people, most of whom live on less than one dollar a day.

Vargas Llosa's campaign usually seemed like a crusade. Running on a free-market platform, he harshly attacked the "collectivist" programs of his opponent, President Alan Garcia, and the proposals of leftist candidates. Many Peruvians blame Garcia for Peru's worst economic crisis of the century and the growing political violence that is tearing apart this Andean country.

Inflation is running at more than 2,000 percent annually. More than 18,000 people, most of them civilians, have died violently in a decade-long struggle between Shining Path guerrillas and security forces.

Vargas Llosa was asking for a clear mandate from Peruvians to carry out radical reforms aimed at ending two decades of socialist policies he blames for Peru's stagnation.

"I have put aside my career because I think there is a real chance to change the history of Peru," Vargas Llosa said in the closing days of the campaign.

Analysts say Peruvians, disheartened by two decades of economic decline and falling living standards, were looking for someone with "magical" solutions to the country's problems.

"No one likes to go to the dentist even when his tooth hurts. And that's what Vargas Llosa offered," Manuel D'Ornellas, editor of El Peruano, wrote in a column Monday.

"To satisfy the government's disgraceful propaganda campaign against the so-called chek, many people have fled Vargas Llosa's proposed surgery to take shelter in Fujimori's 'medicinal nirvana,' " D'Ornellas said.

Fujimori is an agronomist and former university rector. His campaign has stressed "honor, technology and work," and a "surgical" approach to the country's problems.

Postal Service should Face the FAX

It's amazing what can be done with a little ingenuity. Today, they're in cars! They're in airplanes! And while I was in Washington D.C. last week, I saw a phone on a tour bus! Now there are video phones. With a new little gadget that is one row down, I can find out who is calling before you answer. Even phone sex, (I don't want to know). But what I find really interesting is the FAX machine.

Think about the way this is going to hurt the Postal Service. Remember the good old days when a local letter was delivered the next day? Now we have FAX's they have no incentive to deliver mail promptly. Their reasoning will probably be "If it was important, they would have said FAX it." With the drop in the amount of mail to deliver, our Postal Service will be forced to raise prices, not that they haven't already, to continue the present service. I wouldn't mind if they just kept the prices as long as service improved or at least stayed the same, but it doesn't.

And even worse, door to door delivery is being stopped. New neighborhoods are required to put in little postal centers where all the mail for the area is delivered to post office boxes. If I'm going to buy a new house and pay a hundred thousand dollars, I want my mail delivered to the door.

Notice if this is a wonderful invention, I won't even have to open the front door to get my mail. I'll just have a little box with a red flag sitting next to my telephone for the FAX's to fall into. How convenient! FAX's are everywhere! Even on the "Simpson's," they were FAXing photos of Homer Simpson and a bellydancer. I hadn't thought about pictures.

I did see something on my way back from Washington this weekend that I still haven't figured out. Somewhere in Northern Ohio (I don't remember the name of this mad as me) at a "Comfort Station" on the toll road, there was a Pay FAX Machine. Go figure! You can both send and receive. I can picture this, "Hey Billy Bob, I'm just up here on the toll road. FAX me the map!" "Sure Ted, just make sure you FAX it right back. I don't want to be lost myself."

Notice, if anyone would like to comment on this inside Column, Please FAX it to me at 55N-SIDE.

The Notre Dame Tax Assistance Program will finish their services Wednesday. Until then, program centers will be open at the regular times. The program, in which volunteers from the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's student bodies and area accounting firms assist low-income taxpayers with preparation of their state and federal tax returns, helped file 2,200 returns last year. Taxpayers with annual incomes at or below $20,000 are eligible for this free service.

In Downpatrick, Northern Ireland yesterday a powerful land mine exploded under a land rover killing four soldiers and throwing the military vehicle 30 feet in the air. Two motorists also were injured. The Irish Republican Army's South Down Brigade claimed responsibility for the attack. Police said the blast created a crater 40 feet wide and hurled the vehicle into a nearby field.

Grouping of students is inevitable
Academic tracking also involves race, class size

By KATE MANUEL
News Writer

Elementary school teachers will group students whether they are on different academic levels or not, according to Maureen Hallinan.

Hallinan also noted the effects of tracking and class size on academic tracking in a lecture which focused on the empirical ways in which schools differ in their tracking systems. In "School Differences in Tracking and Learning Opportunities," Hallinan, a professor of sociology, said, "The empirical research on tracking has almost ignored the organization of tracking itself, specifically as differing from others on the subject because it focuses on the structure of tracking itself, specifically on how tracking comes to be, how students are assigned to tracks, and the range of student achievement within tracking levels. "The school, because it is an organization, is faced with certain contingencies and constraints," said Hallinan, "yet, the most important compositional characteristic when creating a tracking system is the ability of the student body." From her own research on fourth to sixth grade math groupings, Hallinan noted that most elementary school teachers will create three in-class ability groups regardless of student abilities. She also observed, "the regular track in both English and math are the largest. This does not mean that these classes are the largest but that most students are in that track." Hallinan pointed out that racial composition has a direct and an indirect effect on tracking structure. Her research showed that classrooms with a larger number of minority students also had a larger number of higher ability groups. Hallinan concluded from this that teachers were creating a larger number of high ability groups to insure "racial heterogeneity" in the groups.

Hallinan is currently in the fourth year of a study following the progression and development of groups of students from fourth grade to the tenth grades. Her lecture was part of the Conference on School Characteristics and Student Outcomes.

Senate resolution favors SYNs with social emphasis

By SANDRA WIEGAND
Assistant News Editor

Over 86 percent of juniors and seniors in an extended survey said that policy changes had a negative effect on hull semi-formals, according to a report presented at the Student Senate meeting Monday. The senate unanimously passed a resolution encouraging a more widespread adoption of prior recommendations made by the Task Force on White Health and the Use and Abuse of Alcohol. Although some recommendations by the Task Force were enacted, the resolution says, "the more important and fundamental changes have been ignored."

The changes that were made were intended in part to reduce emphasis on drinking at semi-formals, said Mike Carrigan of the Student Government Committee, but 33 percent of students polled said they thought there had been more drinking since the policy changes, and only 12.3 percent said they thought there had been less.

"The emphasis should be taken off drinking and put back on social interaction," Carrigan said. Since only a portion of the Task Force's suggestions were implemented, he said, there has been more drinking behind closed doors. Further changes should include extended hours at the senior bar and Huddle, and accessible transportation, as advocated in the original report by the Task Force. The resolution favored a non-alcoholic semi-formal for freshmen during orientation, to show them that "they can have a good time at Notre Dame without drinking," and helping to avoid the "social rut" of drinking that often occurs.

The resolution also encourages that students who "cannot drink socially" be given special attention.

Carrigan said that unlike the limited set of changes that was adopted, a multi-faceted new policy should "treat the disease itself rather than the symptoms."

The changes proposed in the senate resolution will be addressed by the Campus Life Council. The resolution was submitted by District 2 Senator Lisa Bostwick, and utilized information compiled by the Student Government Committee on all-hall Semi-formals.

Exxon says spill an ‘accident’

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Exxon and its subsidiary, Exxon Shipping Co., pleaded innocent Monday to five count criminal indictments charging them with violating various federal laws in the nation’s worst oil spill a year ago.

Exxon and Exxon Shipping entered their pleas in a separate arraignment before U.S. District Judge John Roberts late Monday afternoon.

The two Feb. 27 indictments stem from the March 24, 1989, spill of nearly 11 million gallons of North Slope crude oil from the tanker Exxon Valdez, which ran aground and ripped its bottom open on acharted reef outside shipping lanes in Prince William Sound.

The oil fouled hundreds of miles of coastline and killed countless birds and other marine life.

Justice Department officials have said the indictments could result in penalties of $100 million or more. Exxon reportedly had been negotiating a plea agreement with the Justice Department which would have involved the payment of a $500 million environmental restoration fund.

Exxon said it would vigorously defend itself against the charges, which range from violating clean water and refuse acts to negligently discharging oil into a navigable waterway.

“The Exxon Valdez oil spill was tragic, but it was an accident,” the company said in a statement.

“We have said that from the beginning because nobody willfully grounded the ship or caused the spill. We believe the conclusion is thoroughly supported by the testimony and the verdict in the trial of Captain Hazelwood.”

Justice Harrison was skipper of the Exxon Valdez at the time of the accident.

On March 22, a jury found Hazelwood guilty on a charge of negligent discharge of oil into state water. But he was acquitted of three other charges, including a felony, that he was reckless and drunk during the disaster.

Had he been convicted on all counts, Hazelwood could have been sentenced to more than seven years in prison and fined $61,000.

Christian ideals clash with capitalist realism

By PETER AMEND

Christian ideals of love, human dignity, and justice are not coexisting with the reality of capitalism, said Harlan Beckley, professor of religion at Washington and Lee University.

In his Monday lecture, Beckley discussed the conflict between the ideals and reality by comparing the works of three twentieth century theologians: John Ryan, Walter Rauschenbusch and Reinhold Niebuhr.

Beckley said both Rauschenbusch and Niebuhr’s views are important to America because their works were influential to Martin Luther King’s ideology of love and justice.

As a seminarian in the late 1960s, Beckley said he believed Rauschenbusch’s hope to reform social institutions through the love Jesus taught was “naively optimistic about how to secure a just political economy.”

Niebuhr offered a balance of ideas for Beckley in his appreciation for the depths of sin which introduced a realism into Christian ethics. “Niebuhr was right in his view that Jesus’ love must be compromised in order to obtain relevant justice,” he said.

Besides the two protestant theologians, Beckley discussed the works of a Catholic theologian, Ryan. His work, “Protestant and Roman Catholic Ethics” shows how differently Protestants and Catholics address the issue of social justice.

According to Ryan, Catholics approach the problem in light of Catholic natural law. The Protestant writers centered their ideas on the Scriptures, said Beckley.

In regards to human dignity, Beckley said “justice requires institutions that afford individuals opportunities to develop their natural capacities for excellence in their character.”

Beckley said that the theological liberalism of the 1960s had failed to impress Christian ideals onto American industry. According to Niebuhr, “Democracy and a mixed Capitalist economic system held the best hope for a relatively just, balanced power.”

Beckley stressed human dignity as a final focal point in America rather than economic equality. Though Beckley discounted the pros and cons of Christian ideals applied to capitalism, he deferred from offering any concrete solutions.

The reasons for the cuts, according to Russo, involve the immense budget deficit where the federal government, in trying to reduce spending, has cut educational funding. Alternatives for students include loan programs, jobs on campus and work-study programs.

Aid will affect the Pell grant, which according to Russo, serves students with the most need. It will be less affected, “The reduced funding works on a linear reduction formula which is when federal spending is reduced, funding is cut but not across the board,” said Russo.

Promise of democracy sparks celebration in Nepal, but violence still plagues nation

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — People smeared their faces with ceremonial red dust and burst firecrackers Monday in nationwide jubilation over the king's promise to re-establish a multiparty system in Nepal.

A left-wing radical group said Sunday's agreement between King Birendra and the leaders of a seven-week campaign for democracy did not go far enough. It pledged to continue the movement until a new constitution is established.

Before a curfew was lifted Monday, reports said troops shot and killed at least two people.

After curfew, hundreds of thousands of people marched through Katmandu and a half-dozen other towns in the Himalayan kingdom to celebrate the movement, using violence if necessary.

"Democracy, democracy, we have now democracy!" a man shouted in English into a megaphone, "democracy, democracy, we have now democracy!" another man shouted. Several Western tourists, including several Western tourists, wore powder marks on their foreheads.

"Democracy didn't go far enough," the Nepali Congress party and the United Left Front said they were suspending their movement.

On Sunday, Birendra announced he was lifting a 29-year-old ban on political parties that has kept the Flashstart press out of business.

Talking, whistling, clapping and chanting "Victory! Victory!" people wound their way through the streets on foot, in cars, motor-powered Rickshaws and tractors.

"Democracy, democracy, we have now democracy!" a man shouted in English into a megaphone. Boys with handmade democracy posters pinned on their backs zipped around on bicycles.

"Today we will celebrate our freedom. We have no definite plan but only we want to express our joy," said Yagya Nath Dalal, his face smeared with red powder used by the Nepalese during celebrations.

Man and woman marchers, including several Western tourists, wore powder marks on their foreheads.

On Sunday, Birendra announced he was lifting a 29-year-old ban on political parties that has kept the Flashstart Press out of business.

Laughing, whistling, clapping and chanting "Victory! Victory!" people wound their way through the streets on foot, in cars, motor-powered Rickshaws and tractors.

"Democracy, democracy, we have now democracy!" a man shouted in English into a megaphone. Boys with handmade democracy posters pinned on their backs zipped around on bicycles.

"Today we will celebrate our freedom. We have no definite plan but only we want to express our joy," said Yagya Nath Dalal, his face smeared with red powder used by the Nepalese during celebrations.

Cultural assimilation

According to ancient Chinese legend, the dragon is not an evil creature, but a god and a legend, the dragon is not an evil housewives. We should be doing it, only my mother talking frenum. I don’t remember her pair of scissors and sliced the pushed my tongue up with a Chinese appeared. Thus, the hence the symbol of fecundity.

In the days before the dynasties, there was no scar in my mouth, perhaps I was born tongue tied. So that your Ma?" "Why did she do that to me, our great-grandfather. I remember that I was named after my great-grandfather, I remember the many times people would ask for my name and politely nod a "nice to meet you" when they couldn’t say it. At that moment, I had learned to be ashamed of my un-American name. "Couldn’t I change my name, Ma?” "Why would you want to change it like that? You know that you are named after your great-grandfather and that his spirit will lead and protect you. No, don’t change it!" Or it may well be that my great-grandfather is resting happily in China, his spirit dispersed among the real Chinese, and not watching out for me as he should. I know that you are named after my great-grandfather, and that his spirit will lead and protect you. No, don’t change it! I have some, Ma.” "Do as you wish, Little Dragon.

My first year in grade school was deeply ingrained in my mind. It was a routine that was to be followed for the rest of my childhood years. In the mornings, I would go to a regular school, where I read math and learned the alphabet, all the essentials of modern living. After school, I would pick up my lunch box and head to the Chinese school, where I would recite the lessons of the day in the Chinese language. We chanted together, voices loud and soft, high and low, until the sun went down.

My first difficulty with being Chinese occurred when I was in high school. I had always gotten ten away with not speaking in high school. I had always gotten ten away with not speaking in grade school, but in speech class we were to have introductions and talk about ourselves. One by one, each of us spoke. There were Davids

Siong Yang Reflections of Minorities

My freshman year was a si but once I spoke to a few people as I could, afraid that my difference would be intensified by the sound of my voice. I liked and gravitated towards the students who talked and laughed the loudest, because they talked to me as if I, too, were a bold speaker. "Do you have many friends in school?” "I have some, Ma.” "Are they Chinese?” Chinese have to stay together. We ARE different, you know. A tearing, hot anger flashed through me. "Ma, we are not different from other people. We think and feel and have biases just like other people do. We are all human beings, Ma. If you didn’t keep reminding me, maybe I wouldn’t have felt so much of an outsider here.” "Don’t talk back to me! Is this what you learned in school?” That night as I lay in bed, a sense of guilt enveloped me. Maybe Chinese people are different. Who else but the Chinese would bind their womenfolk’s feet in order to keep them home? Maybe I would sell their daughters, as slaves simply because they would never carry on the family name? I have no answer.

Over the years, I have slowly begun to find a resolution for myself. I can understand why Chinese people would appear to have idiosyncrasies, but I believe that we are fundamentally the same as any other races.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

"And what is as important as knowledge, asked the mind. Caring and seeing with the heart, answered the soul."
Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles’ Lean, green, and shouldn't be on the screen

Michael Muldoon

Accent

There are few things more cursed than watching a film with boards of chanting, freckle-faced children. I found out that Keith wants to become the King of Brooklyn and Mattea has a new Fester hair, but they all struggle against the wise, genuine ninjas. (Ninjas are the empty-handed heroes, the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles.) In contrast to popular belief, a live-action version picture. The main characters are played by puppets and men in green plastic costumes, designed and created by Jim Henson’s Creature Shop. This film hauled in $25.4 million in its first weekend, largely due to the immense popularity of these characters among children. The Turtles were born in 1983 out of the minds of two starving artists, Kevin Eastman and Peter Laird. These two men created a sensation in the comic book industry with their unorthodox characters and drawing style. After that, their empire grew through action figure sales, a television series, and now the big screen.

The film revolves around Donatello, Leonardo, Raphael, and Michaelangelo’s (the turtles, not artists) search for their kidnapped mentor, Splinter, a mutated rat vaguely reminiscent of Mr. Miyagi. He has been abducted by the evil Foot clan, a gang that collects children to do all the dirty work. The kids are whisked into crime by an underground Sedoom and Gannah which serves as the gang’s headquarters. The do-gooding turtles, on the other hand, live in the sewer tunnels beneath Manhattan and have Donatello’s man their beloved pizza through the steam grates.

Raphael, the early turtle with a Brooklyn attitude, feels that he is responsible for Splinter’s kidnapping. He inadvertently led the evil ninja strike troop to the turtles’ sewer tunnel, while even the film’s love interest, telejournalist April O’Neil, played by Judith Hoag. Raphael’s psychological struggle becomes a subplot, and he is seen as a symbol for all young criminals, and he is rehabilitated through the wisdom of Splinter. The movie is packed with violence, so much, in fact, that during the long struggles, the audience forgets why these last warriors were fighting in the first place. The children in the theater laugh at every punch, the lowest roar coming when a villain gets sent across the room after being clubbed on the chin with a 1-wood. If a viewer follows the story closely, he will understand why the turtles are so violent. It has something to do with regaining lost honor and avenging a death, strictly Karate Kid stuff. We actually don’t even notice that those who don’t get the spirit triumph over the strength of the body, especially children, will still win. The story is so convoluted that a college sophomore would have a hard time understanding it, is how it is a five-year-old going to get the message? Wouldn’t it be easier to have McGuff, the Crime Bug, tell kids not to steal and save everyone a lot of time and money?

This is not a message movie. It’s all for kids, as evidenced by the superficial and flighty acting, and the turtles’ meaningless wisecracks. It is hard to find in the movie. It’s hard to find anything, in fact, because the shots are so dark and Ramona’s costumes are so dull. Perhaps the single effort to maintain the mystical feel of the original comic book stories. As a matter of fact, Eastman and Laird list Batman artist Frank Miller as one of their influences. Many of the camera angles reflect that comic book feel, but it also gives the comics as the film gets. The turtles were originally not the “Laugh-in” of crime-fighting.

The turtles are hard to recognize, except for Donatello, whose voice is that of teen heart-throb Corey Feldman. Their only distinguishing feature is their different colored masks and their individual weapons. Viewers do, however, forget the fact that the turtles are puppets and costumes, because they exude personality. They exude that superficia, rat-like personality that makes you want to slug them after their seventeenth “Boo-doo!” But the kids love it. If you feel you must see this film, please reconsider. It is not intended for mature audiences. Yes, if I were a parent, my child would not be allowed to see “Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles” alone, lest he come back with the idea that it’s fine to throw someone off a building solely because he实践 a certain form of ninjitsu. It is a painful film to watch, but a head-scratcher trying to make out the action in all the dark fights and when viewers see the comic books, and pray that the next generation of kids doesn’t grow up to think that Michelangelo, Raphael, Donatello, and Leonardo are nothing more than names of Ninja Turtles.

Discussion Question: What does the author feel could “very well” cause World War III? Do you think he’s maybe just a little bit in the goody side? Explain.

A few weeks ago we had an assignment where we attempted to locate the sign stimulus which initiated the aggressive display of a male Betta splendens. (English translation; we made some drawings and showed them to a fighting fish in hopes of getting it mad.) I like true scientists, we tried everything. While the lab group on the other side of the table tried to get responses by holding up a drawing of a police car or a sign reading, “If you can understand this, swim around in a circle three times,” our group kept doggedly at its task, even accompanying the presentation of our drawings with some realistic fish noises. This consisted mainly of saying, in a quiet, fish-like tone, “I’m a fish, I’m a fish, I’m certainly not just a drawing.”

By the end of the experiment, frustrated by the lack of positive responses, our simulated model fish was saying more inflammatory things like “I got your woman. I make more money than you. I killed your family. Now I’m coming for you.” I’m not sure, but I think the fish began laughing at itself. The fish in the lab group next to us seemed to be reacting to a Rolling Stones song.

Discussion Question: Would the fish have reacted to country music? Why or why not?

Despite the fun I have in Biology lab and the continual reading adventure that is the textbook, I’m pretty sure I made the right move in not choosing to be a biology major. As far as I can tell, biology majors are the kind of people that talk about unappreciating subjects like the intestinal tract with the same sort of enthusiasm that young boys use to discuss fast cars.

Last week one of our TAs thrilled the class by informing us that some tapeworms grow to 22 feet long. We all got the message that not just tapeworms have that in worry about. Perhaps the single most important fact I’ve learned from Biology is that everything has the potential to get us. Threats to human life range from the Giant Squid (Squidly Real Biggic) to the friendly critters listed in “Table 22.2: Organisms Common in Humans.” In a newspaper distributed at lunchtime, it would probably be unfruitful of me to say anything more along these lines, but I’m sure you get the idea.
Canadiens, Whalers, Devils gain, all 2-1 in NHL playoffs

MONTREAL (AP)—Brian Skrudland scored at 12:53 of overtime Monday night to give the Montreal Canadiens a 2-1 victory over the Boston Bruins and a 2-1 lead in their Adams Division semifinal series. Skrudland makes a passout from Shayne Corson at the right corner of the net and jammed the puck past Daren Pappa for his second career overtime goal.

The best-of-seven series resumes Wednesday night at Montreal. The Canadiens tied the game midway through the second period on a brilliant individual effort by Stephane Richer.

Whalers, 5; Bruins, 3

HARTFORD, Conn.—Dave Babych scored the tie-breaking third goal and Pat Verbeek had two goals Monday night as the Hartford Whalers beat Boston 5-3 in Game 3 of their Adams Division semifinal series.

Brad Shaw added a goal and three assists as the Whalers took a 2-1 lead in the best-of-7 series, which resumes Wednesday night in Hartford. Babych snapped a 2-2 tie when he took a pass from Shanahan, chased the lone Daren Pappa goalie to the rink corner and beat Andy Moog to the upper right corner with a slap shot.

Verbeek made it 4-2 at 1:33 of overtime on a pass from Shanahan.

The Bruins narrowed the gap to 4-3 in 41 seconds when Peter Sidorkiewicz scored, but the Whalers held on. Dave Babych and Shanahan scored goals and Verbeek added his second of the game.

Babych stopped two top players, defenseman Ray Bourque, who did not dress due to a hip pointer sustained late in Game 2. Babych stopped two top players, defenseman Ray Bourque, who did not dress due to a hip pointer sustained late in Game 2.

Devils 2, Capitals 1

LANDOVER, Md.—Ken Daneyko scored the winning goal in Game 4 of the best-of-7 series, sending the New Jersey Devils to victory Monday night that gave the Devils a 2-1 lead in their Patrick Division semifinal series. Daneyko scored 4:51 into the game and the Devils spent the rest of the third trying to protect the lead, taking only 10 shots on goal. But they held the Capitals to four shots, which fell off seven of Washington’s eight power plays.

The Devils defeated a penalty for having too many men on the ice calling for a 5-on-4 man advantage in the final period by holding the Capitals without a shot. The Devils took a 2-1 lead at 8:22 of the first period when Daneyko put a shot past goalie Mike Liut until 35 seconds remained, but again was unable to get a shot on goal. Chris Terreri made 29 saves in the final period, to win his second game since replacing Sean Burke.

The Chicago White Sox opened the final season at 80-year-old Comiskey Park with a victory, beating the Minnesota Twins 2-1 on Monday on Scott Fletcher's sacrifice fly in the ninth inning.

The White Sox, who lost their first game at Comiskey 2-0 to the Tigers in 1931, will move across the street to a new ballpark sat through a 42-minute rain delay at the start of the season opener with the Chicago Cubs, who cruised to the victory.

Fletcher followed with his go-ahead sacrifice fly. Barry Jones, 1-0, pitched 1 2-3 innings, Bobby Thigpen, Chicago's fifth pitcher, got two outs for a save.

Red Sox 5, Detroit 2

BOSTON—Baseball came a week late, but everything else stayed the same at Fenway Park. Wade Boggs got three hits, Roger Clemens won and the Boston Red Sox beat Detroit 5-2.

Clemens held the Tigers hitless until Tony Phillips singled to start the sixth inning, and allowed three hits, struck out five and walked two. He retired the first two batters in the seventh and then left the game after throwing 101 pitches.

With all the opening day excitement, I got fired up the same as everyone else, Clemens said. "I threw the ball pretty well, but I overthrew a little at times."

Boggs got the first hit of the season and finished 3-for-4 with a walk. His leadoff single in the first inning helped set up Dwight Evans' three-run double off Jack Morris, and Boggs singled home a run in the second.

The Red Sox, who cruised to the victory, were never able to catch the Tigers last season in the NL East.

Dodgers 4, Padres 2

SAN DIEGO—Free-agent signing Steve Garvey tripled home a run in the second inning, and the Los Angeles Dodgers set up a chance to clinch the National League West.

Like the rest of the Dodgers, however, Gibson had little to show for it in the game.

Women's golf sluggish in starting
Irish victims of tough competition at Indiana Invitational

By JAMES NOLL
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's golf team struggled to a 15th place finish against fierce competition at the 24-hole Indiana University Women's Invitational last weekend.

In their first tournament of the season and competing mostly against Big Ten schools, the Irish had to contend with cold temperatures and strong winds as well as the talented 15-team field, most of which had played in several tournaments this spring. Host Indiana University won the team competition with 908 strokes, while the Irish finished with 1020.

"We played well at times, but we need to do it more consistently," said Head Coach Tom Hanlon. "I was encouraged by the play of Roberta Bryer and Cappy Mark. We'll get stronger, but it will take a while. We want to play the best in order to be the best."

Junior captain Roberta Bryer and freshman Cappy Mark, who played despite an eye injury, both fired scores of 256 for the three rounds. Indiana University's Jen Myers won the tournament with a score of 224.

"Considering it was our first tournament, we played all right," said captain Roberta Bryer, who improved her score by 27 strokes from last year's tournament. "It's hard to get back into the swing of things after not playing for a while."

The Irish will have two weeks to practice before they tee up again in their second tournament, the Lady Bollmersch Spring Classic in West Lafayette, Ind. on April 28-29. Coach Hanlon looks for improvement.

"We're capable of scoring down in the 80's," said Hanlon. "And we need to correct our mistakes this week in order to reach those goals."

Softball finishes 5-1 for weekend, wins St. Francis Inv.

By RICHARD MATHURIN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame softball team completed a very successful but grueling six games in a three-day schedule, compiling a 5-1 record.

On Friday, the team played a doubleheader on the road versus St. Louis. The Billikens took the controversial first game 3-2 in 10 innings. Megan Fay gave the Irish the early lead at 1-0 with her and the team’s first run of the season. Pitcher Missy Linn held the lead until the 10th when St. Louis scored two runs on a bases-loaded single to win the game. Controversy followed, though, because Irish catcher Amy Folson apparently tagged out the final runner on a close play at the plate, but the umpire ruled the runner safe. Linn went the entire 10 innings and suffered the loss to move her record to 0-5.

“It’s a shame to lose a game that way because we played so well,” said Head Coach Brian bottles.

In the second half of the doubleheader, the Irish came back to shut out St. Louis 2-0. Maci Alford pitched a three-hitter with nine strikeouts and no walks to improve her record to 6-5. Both Irish runs were unearned. Sommerlad led the offense with three of the team’s six hits.

Boulac described Alford’s pitching style as, “Deceptively fast, she forces people to hit the ball off the inside part of the plate when you're 14, you don't know any better. You just hit the ball as fast as you can.”

If it goes in, great. If it doesn’t, oh well, you’ve got 15 years ahead of you. So it’s not that big a deal when you miss.”

The 23-year-old Navratilova, beat Capriati 6-2, 6-4 Sunday to win the $500,000 Family Circle Magazine Cup championship. While it was Navratilova’s 150th singles title, it was only Capriati’s third tournament since turning pro last month.

After hearing Capriati refer to her as a legend, Navratilova called her young opponent a legend-in-the-making.

Navratilova said Capriati is “more polished” at this stage than Steffi Graf, ranked No. 1 or Tracy Austin, once seen as America’s next great tennis stars. “She’s also physically closer to her potential than Andrea or Tracy or Steffi were at that age,” Navratilova said. “She’s the ball harder on both sides. Steffi was hitting it hardest one way. But Jennifer hits it hard off both sides.”

“She’s pretty quick. I think Andrea was better at the net than Jennifer, but she’s got all the shots—and the potential to master all of them.”

Mattingly now highest paid

Mattingly, of Evansville, Ind., will make $2.5 million in 1990 during the final season of a three-year deal worth $6.7 million. He had threatened to become a free agent after the season unless he got an extension before opening day.

C.J.'s Bar advances in bookstore

By KEN TYSIAC

C.J.'s, one of the top four seeds in Bookstore Basketball, easily won its first game against the team in the number 32 seed in the tournament.

"They played really well together and made a couple of really good shots," said Pete Graham of C.J.'s. "We had a good time with it."

Graham claimed that his team has a lot of work to do before it will be ready to challenge for the championship. Teammate Ken Boerner, who led C.J.'s with eight points yesterday, agrees.

"We haven't played together very much," Boerner said. "I would say that we have the talent to contend for the championship, but we have a lot of work to do yet. We'll probably be out there practicing Tuesday."

One of the best games of the day pitted Top 32 seed Peach's of C.J.'s. "We had a really good shots," said Pete Peach of Peach's. "We came out and made a couple of points together and made a couple of shots."

Body Fat won the closest matchup of the day over The Priest and 4 Guys Permitted to Open on offense all the time.

"It was a pretty physical game, and there weren't a lot of fouls called at all. They (The Priest) had the big inside game, while most of our points came from the outside."

The game was a seesaw battle back and forth until the score was tied at 21-21 and Body Fat was able to deliver the knockout punch. Bonfiglio, who finished with seven points, knocked home a bucket to put his team ahead by a point to make it 21-22 with 14 seconds left on the clock. Body Fat's last-second shot was chopped away.

Down and Schonbergians was only able to round up two players to challenge 5-6 Craig Creamean, 4-4 Mark Walker and Thompson, who led, 3-3, to a 21-16 victory.

The winners this week will be a part of the final 256 teams.

Irish fall victim to letdown vs. OSU

By BARBARA MORAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's tennis team cruised, then lost to Ohio State. Unquestionably, the Irish had a letdown against the Buckeyes.

"We have four very important games coming up," said Notre Dame head coach Kevin Corrigan, "and we need to get back on track so that we can play our best lacrosse through the end of the season."

"Where Lake Forest is concerned, what is most important to us is that we can concentrate on ourselves and play at our best level, because then the rest of the ball will take care of itself. That is what we need to do to be successful for the rest of the year."

The Irish, now 6-4 on the season, continue to record sparkling defensive efforts. Yet it is the team's offense that must come together before the Irish can realize their tremendous potential down the stretch.

"Defensively, we have had a couple of very good performances back-to-back," said Notre Dame coach Kevin Corrigan. "Individually and in terms of executing our game plan, we have been playing great team defense. Certainly, it is important for us to have good defense tomorrow."

"It is also important that we have success offensively against Lake Forest. We did not play poorly against Denison—we just didn't make the plays that we needed to make. We didn't convert some plays for scores which we must do to win games. To put the ball in the cage we have got to have confidence, and right now we must work on building our confidence," Corrigan said.

"We have been playing great defense and we need to solidify our offense against Lake Forest. I think that we can do it."

On Opening Day next year, the Irish will play against the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame. Hurst became the first of many victims for the Irish.

Expect unexpected during Opening Day

Take me out to the ballgame. As Opening Day results come in, you can't help but wonder what the baseball season has in store for America besides watered-down beer and cool summer nights at the ballpark. The nightmare of an impending strike is behind us now. It's time to play ball, and you need only look at last year's Opening Day to realize that only the unexpected should be expected.

On Opening Day last year, 20,000 fans showed up for a 6-2, 6-3 victory over the Orioles. The Baltimore Orioles, who had been the laughingstock of the league the previous year, went up against fiery Roger Clemens and the Boston Red Sox. Clemens was expected to shut the Orioles down in their first outing of the year, but Frank Robinson's ballclub had other ideas.

The Orioles rallied to defeat the Sox 5-4 in 11 innings, making their first stride in a season which had them in a pennant race until their final series of the season. Baltimore's complete reversal from a 54-107 record the previous year was nothing short of incredible. As for Clemens, he had a subpar season, going 17-11 as Boston finished third in the American League East.

The following day, Bruce Hurst, who had been 18-6 for Boston in 1988, made his San Diego Padres debut against the San Francisco Giants. Hurst became the first of many victors of the one-two giant tandem of Will Clark and Kevin Mitchell. The San Francisco sluggers smashed consecutive home runs in a six-run third inning as the Giants cruised to an 8-3 victory.
