Mugging hits bar-hoppers

"Susan" and her friends.

Bridget's and Club 23 was always a normal activity for

It wasn't safe August 26, when Susan, an ND student, and three of her friends were attacked on Francis and South Bend Avenues at 2:30 a.m. by a man she described as black with a large build, and who "flushed something silver that looked like a gun."

Susan and five of her friends were walking between the two bars when the man appeared from behind some trees. Since two of the girls had raced ahead of the group, only four were left to face the attacker, she said.

"I saw him from the corner of my eye," she said. "He grabbed my friend, pointed what looked like a gun at her, and said, 'What do you think of this?'"

The attacker took the wallet from the first victim, Susan said. He then approached Susan. "He ripped off my necklace and grabbed my wallet," she said.

"I am positive that the man had a gun," she said. "If there had been other guys with him, we would have been in a whole lot of trouble."

According to Susan, the attacker fled on foot with about $35 in cash, miscellaneous identification cards, keys, and a bank card, according to Lt. Norval Williams of the South Bend Police Depart­

Although Susan wasn't positive that the man had a gun, she said that even the threat of a weapon should have made her more cautious. She added, "If there had been other guys with him, we would have been in a whole lot of trouble."

Meanwhile, the White House announced that President Bush would address a joint session of Congress next Tuesday night after returning from his weekend summit with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbatchev. Bush's topics, aides said, would include the summit and the gulf crisis.

According to a White House statement, Bush had brought up the idea of the joint session appearance earlier in the day in conversations with House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., and Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine.

"Speaker Foley extended an invitation to the president on behalf of both chambers," the statement said.

White House aides said that the speech would deal primarily with the Persian Gulf crisis but that Bush would also give law­makers a rundown on his ses­sion in Helsinki with Gorbatchev. In pre-summit comments, White House officials seemed to be going out of their way to praise the Soviets.

Fitzwater said he was certain the issue of Western economic aid to Moscow would come up at Sunday's summit. The ad­ministration opposed direct economic aid as recently as last July at the economic summit of seven industrial nations in Houston.

But, Fitzwater said of the So­­ viets, "They have sent ships to the gulf. They have been sup­­portive. President Gorbatchev has made some strong public statements" of support for the U.N.-backed trade embargo against Iraq.

He said Gorbachev's words "have a political impact in the world of countries that have formally been aligned with the Soviet Union that is very hard to measure, but one which we know is real and has been very helpful."

Furthermore, Fitzwater said, the United States is "willing to talk" with the Soviet Union about a longstanding Soviet proposal -- revised on Tuesday by Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze -- for a Middle East peace conference.

The conference, which the United States long has opposed, would seek to resolve all conflicts in the region, including the Arab-Israeli dispute.

Cityline information network

By SIOBHAN MCCARTHY

Cityline, a local 24-hour tele­phone service, recently an­nounced the addition of new Notre Dame recordings which provide information about up­coming campus events.

Sponsored by the South Bend Tribune and WSBT radio sta­tions, this service provides stu­dents and community members with information on more than 9,000 different topics.

These subjects include special events such as movie listings, concerts, and football game times. Students can also gain access to doctor or dentist listings, local and national weather forecasts, and stock quotes, which are updated ap­proximately every half an hour.

Interested students simply have to dial the number 674-0900 to get into the system.

Then a computer operator will provide a menu, and the stu­dents can dial directly into the category of his choice by a 4­digit touchtone system. These topics each contain up to three minutes of data on the subject of his choice.

Joe Cassidy, director of Stu­dent Activities, said, "It will make it easier for students to access information about social events."

In the past, students needing specific information were forced to listen to answering machines and wait for "five or ten minutes before they found out the information they'd initially called for," he said.

Cityline Manager Anita Glenn anticipates "probably three to four thousand calls a month," in the future. She believes it will be beneficial to Notre Dame students because it will save time and "eliminate a lot of un­necessary calls to LaForte Student Center. We have 20 lines open, while they (Student Activities) only have one."

This idea was initially brought to Cassidy by Glenn, who suggested the program in an effort to expand on a pilot program used last year at Saint Mary's College. Glenn offered to expand on the Saint Mary's service, which handled approx­imately five to seven hundred calls a month, and Cassidy agreed to lend his support, be­cause it "looked like a great service."

On August 28, Glenn "upgraded our system and added new topics, such as what's hot and what's not, horoscopes, joke of the day, and trivia lines. We revamped in advance on tape and the transitions went very smoothly."

Glenn welcomes all sugges­tions for the improvement of this new system. She can be reached in her Chicago Tribune Office at 233-6161, extension 228.

The Year of Women needs broader focus

Once again this University has decided to broaden the perspectives of its students by dedicating the whole of its attention to a particular issue and this year it's Women. As a woman, and especially as a gender studies concentrator, I ought to be thrilled that the university is so minded enough to spend an entire year dealing with issues that are particularly close to my heart, but I'm not. I think that The Year of Women is an all time low in the history of "The Year of..." context is not the proper place to do this.

The objection I have to the whole idea is that this year is just a superficial and temporary remedy to problems that run very deep. Women's issues are not going to be broad enough to be interesting to all the Year of International Relations would ample, the Year of Political Awareness or by dedicating the time low in the history of "The Year of..."

Cultural diversity was broad enough to encompass all types of people, as was the Year of the Family. Although the last two years have not been as enlightened as this Year of the Family, it should be a focal point, not a quick fix remedy. The university ought to make male-female relations on this campus a permanent process, not a quick fix remedy. For example, the Year of Political Awareness or the Year of International Relations would be broad enough to be interesting to all students.

I applaud the university's attempts to focus on women's issues, it is going to have to be a long term process, not a quick fix remedy. The administration ought to make male-female relations on this campus a permanent focus for the next few years. I propose, instead of the Year of Women, the Decade of Gender Studies.

If the consciousness of the student body is really going to be changed in respect to women's issues, it is going to have to be a long term process, not a quick fix remedy. I think that the university ought to strive to focus on issues that are relevant to more than half of the Notre Dame student body. If awareness is the goal of the university, it should choose a topic that every person on this campus can relate to directly. Women's issues are really only relevant to women. Let's face it, no manner how liberated and understanding a guy may be, the Year of Women really doesn't apply to him.

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists report they have cloned a gene that helps brain cells communicate, a step that may lead to improved schizophrenia drugs and earlier diagnosis of some brain diseases.

The finding may someday let doctors diagnose schizophrenia and Parkinson's disease before symptoms appear, said researcher Allen Deary.

That could allow earlier treatment with greater chance of success, he said.

The gene tells brain cells how to make a protein structure called a dopamine receptor. The receptor sits on the surface of brain cells and receives a chemical messenger called dopamine that brain cells send one another.

The newly cloned gene is for the so-called D1 dopamine receptor. The gene for the other kind of dopamine receptor, called D2, was cloned in 1988.

The new work is reported in the British journal Nature by three teams of scientists.

Deary, of the Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N.C., said the discovery may lead to a test to detect very early cases of schizophrenia or Parkinson's disease by revealing receptor abnormalities.

Parkinson's is a potentially disabling condition that can include a tremor, rigidity and gradual loss of spontaneous movement. Further work also may pave the way for better drugs to treat psychosis, the loss of touch with reality seen in schizophrenia, Deary said.

Scientists may be able to distinguish different variants of the receptor, and design drugs to act only on those variants that affect psychosis while avoiding variants that produce side effects, he said.

The new work is an important step that allows new studies of receptor abnormalities.

Deary said. He also stressed that students should always remain in well-lit areas.

"You've got to become somewhat street-smart," Hurley said. He also stressed that students should always remain in well-lit areas.

Hussein urges Arabs to fight West in 'holy war'

(API) -

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, on Wednesday urged Arabs to rise up in a holy war against the West and former allies who turned against him, and said world trade sanctions are imperiling the lives of Iraqi children.

An American citizen, meanwhile, was reported shot in Iraqi-occupied Kuwait but details were sketchy.

The State Department said Wednesday night in Washington that it received a report an Iraqi soldier fired on an American who was trying to avoid capture, adding, "We have no information on how serious his injuries might be."

Iraqi troops have been rounding up Westerners in Kuwait since Iraq invaded and seized the small oil state on Aug. 2. Embassies in Kuwait have been ordered closed and diplomats transferred to Baghdad.

Western women and children detained in Kuwait and Iraq trickled out in small groups Wednesday, leaving behind hundreds who lack permission to depart. Iraq, criticized for blocking releases with red tape, said it was doing everything it could to expedite departures.

President Bush indicated Wednesday the United States has not ruled out an offensive role, telling lawmakers back from the gulf that if sanctions do not succeed, "we will review our options."

Secretary of State James Baker was headed for the Middle East, where he said he planned to discuss with U.S. allies a proposed new regional security structure for the Persian Gulf.

The American women had Arabic names, indicating they had married Arabs.

Japan and the Soviet Union asked Iraq on Wednesday to withdraw as soon as from Kuwait and free all foreigners held in Iraq and Kuwait. A joint statement issued in Tokyo by Foreign Minister Taro Nakayama and visiting Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze was the first ever by the two nations on an international issue, Foreign Ministry officials there said.

As a multinational armada grew in the Persian Gulf, U.S. military officials in Saudi Arabia said the military was using night convoys to move heavy firepower — including ground-to-air missiles and rocket launchers — into the northern Saudi desert.

Although Washington says its troops are deployed to defend the Saudis, the recent moves increase the offensive capabilities of U.S. forces.

BCAC to be more active

By DANNIKA SIMPSON

The Black Cultural Arts Council (BCAC) announced plans to become more active in the Notre Dame and South Bend Community at its meeting Wednesday evening.

One of the goals Co-President Tony Smith announced is to work more one on one with students who are interested in going to college. The tutors will be matched with students who are interested in going to college. The tutors will work more one on one with students who are interested in going to college.

In addition, the program will be started to provide positive role models for high school students. College students will be matched with high school students who are in need of positive role models. The college students will be available to listen to the students needs and will try to help them with problems they may encounter.

The BCAC also voted to change the name of the organization. Members feel that a new name will make the organization more visible in the Notre Dame community. They will work with the Student Senate in hopes to address areas of minority student concerns. They will work with the Student Senate in hope to address areas of minority student concerns.

LONDON (AP) — Death squads are shooting children dead in Brazilian cities at a rate estimated at least one a day, Amnesty International says.

The proliferation of homeless children, many of whom turn to crime to survive, has led to an increase in murders by death squads, the worldwide human rights organization said in a report to be published Thursday.

It spoke of hundreds of such killings, cited Brazilian rights groups for the estimate of a death a day and said there were also many cases of children being beaten, tortured and mutilated by policemen on duty.

The organization reminded president Fernando Collor de Mello of his pledge June 22 to stamp out the abuses, in which he said: "We cannot be and will not again be a country cited as violent in reports by Amnesty International."

It said an Amnesty delegation met Collor last month and asked for "immediate, concrete action" to stop the killings.

The report cited the case of three boys picked up in Rio de Janeiro by military police last month on suspicion of trying to break into a store. It said they were made to play Russian roulette, and a 13-year-old, Leandro Cardoso da Silva, was shot "in the head and dumped outside a hotel, by police. He later died in hospital." "Poor children in Brazil are treated with contempt by the authorities, risking their lives simply by being on the street," the report said. "Their most basic rights are trampled on by the very people who should safeguard them."

Non-smokers still face risk

BOSTON (AP) — Non-smokers who grew up with smoking parents face double the usual risk of lung cancer, according to a study that provides new evidence of the dangers of secondhand smoke.

The report estimates that 17 percent of all lung cancer in the United States among people who never smoked cigarettes results from their exposure to smokers during childhood and adolescence.

"Here is another piece of evidence that smoke from other people's cigarettes is harmful to your health. This is the first finding that indicates that exposure early in life may be particularly important," said Dr. Dwight Janerich of Yale School of Medicine, who directed the study.

The Environmental Protection Agency estimates that about 25,000 of the more than 150,000 new cases of lung cancer annually occur among non-smokers, and 40 percent of them, or 10,000 people, never smoked. If the latest estimate is correct, this means that about 1,700 cases each year are caused by childhood exposure to other people's cigarette smoke.

"It makes a strong case that exposure to secondhand smoke as a child increases your risk as an adult. This is quite convincing," commented Dr. Stanton Glantz of the University of California, San Francisco.

The study, published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine, was based on a survey of 191 non-smokers in New York state who were diagnosed with lung cancer during the early 1980s. Researchers calculated their lifetime exposure to cigarette smoke and compared it with that of healthy non-smokers.

The researchers added up each person's "smoker-years." This is the years they lived in a house multiplied by the number of smokers there. For instance, someone who lived at home for 18 years with two smoking parents had exposure of 36 smoker-years.

Hoosiers pay lowest auto insurance rates in nation

N.J. drivers pay the highest premiums, with Washington, D.C. not far behind

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indiana motorists pay the nation's 13th lowest rate for auto insurance, averaging about $454 a year, the Alliance of American Insurers reported Wednesday.

A major reason for the moderate rate is that Hoosiers have 69 percent fewer auto-related lawsuits and 39 percent fewer car thefts than drivers in most states, said company President Franklin Nutter. "The system in Indiana seems to be working well," said Nutter, speaking at the annual meeting of the Insurance Institute of Indiana. "The cost of auto insurance may be a major issue in some states, but it shouldn't be in Indiana."

Nutter said there is a misconception that people pay a large chunk of their household income on car insurance. However, Hoosier car owners pay just 1.9 percent of their budgets on auto premiums while spending 11.1 percent on life insurance and 1.6 percent on health insurance, Nutter said.

By comparison, Indiana residents spend 29.6 percent of their annual budget on housing, 16.7 percent on transportation and 11.1 percent on food, he said.

New Jersey has the nation's highest auto premiums, a steep $1,100 on average, primarily because it has the nation's highest number of cars per square mile, Nutter said.

Washington, D.C., ranked second with an average annual premium of $1,076.

Sparsely populated Nebraska has the nation's cheapest auto premiums, with an average of $336 a year.

To lower Indiana auto premiums even more, Nutter suggested being careful when buying a car because newer, more expensive automobiles or ones with fewer safety features are more expensive to insure. He also suggested raising deductible, insuring all household cars under the same policy and keeping a clean driving record.

Steve Williams, president of the insurance institute, said Nutter's figures agree with a finding by the State Motor Vehicle Issues Committee, which reviewed Hoosier auto premiums this summer and found last month that no changes were necessary.

Nutter heads a national trade association representing 170 property and casualty insurance companies.

Subaru executives resign four days after merger

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (AP) — Harvey Lamm resigned as chairman and chief executive officer of Subaru of America, which merged last week with Fuji Heavy Industries Ltd., the companies announced Tuesday.

The joint announcement came four days after the merger that made Subaru of America a wholly owned subsidiary of Fuji Heavy Industries, the Japanese manufacturer that builds Subaru cars.

Lamm, one of the founders of Subaru of America who became its chairman in 1986, resigned effective Friday.

Lamm has been succeeded by Takeshi Hirugushi, Fuji's managing director in charge of Subaru's overseas business. Masaharu Masumitsu, appointed in July as vice chairman of the Board, was named chief executive officer Tuesday.

Masumitsu was formerly executive vice president of the Subaru-Isuzu Automotive plant near Lafayette, Ind.

Subaru also announced the early retirement Oct. 31 of Marvin S. Riesenbach as executive vice president and chief financial officer.

Students must seize chance to participate

In their campaign last spring, Student Body President Rob Pasin and Vice-President Fred Tombar said the students were their top priority for the coming year. This fall, Pasin and Tombar have made a concerted effort to maintain their top priority and listen to the opinions of their constituents.

The first Student Body Address tonight in the Center for Continuing Education, will give students a long-awaited opportunity to voice their opinions to their leaders. Students are strongly encouraged to attend the address—as contributors, as well as listeners.

Pasin and Tombar are hosting the event, which will be open to all students. The address will feature questions and answers with the students, and discussion and debate. Passive complaining will accomplish nothing.

By Enrique Dussel

Iraq's invasion of Kuwait cannot be legitimated by any means ... as no military intervention can. Latin Americans, especially, can understand the feeling of the Kuwaiti people after so many U.S. interventions in the last centuries.

In my opinion, the present situation in the "Gulf crisis" and the massive deployment of U.S. troops in the region point to several remarkable situations in the U.S. (and also at the University of Notre Dame).

1) It appears that, in the 1980s, U.S. society has been very susceptible to a special mixture of nationalist-populist-religious-military-white male discourse of the White House and most of the national mass media. In these days, some even try to make obvious comparisons between the U.S. invasion in Panama and the one in Kuwait. The former is justified by the version that it was a "legitimate national security problem" and resulted in U.S. troops "placing" a new (U.S. friendly) government, while the "terrorist aggression" in Iraq of a crazy man similar to Hitler, has to be condemned strongly.

The innocent help of the U.S. in Panama killed around 4,000 Panamanians. The quick and massive military reaction of the U.S. in the Gulf, once one considers the one hundred-thousand direct U.S. military interventions in Latin America alone in this century and the recent recurrence of an emphasis on the "autonomy of the nations" and the "sovereignty of states," cannot have any credibility at all and seems to be nothing more than an open hypocrisy.

2) Far more important, and sadly for all "Bambos," the U.S. is no longer economically able to lead a massive intervention or war, as it did in Vietnam. The U.S. hegemony seems to have accepted a new international labour division: it intervenes militarily, and the affected nations pay the costs (as some European nations and Japan have already accepted). The U.S. military might become no longer in the Gulf region and in Asia. This movement will be radically hostile to U.S. interests and "superbly" armed by the U.S. itself (as Noriega, an expatriate of Bush, was). See, for instance, the cases of Iraq, Iran, Pakistan, Afghanistan, and North Africa.

In this context, the U.S. war machine is working full time at high speed in all possible media, searching for all kinds of arguments to justify an unjustified military intervention in Iraq. After reading the newspaper or watching TV, one may experience this new "feeling." But let us face it: Believing in the "sovereignty of states" argument in the U.S. version is nothing more than naive innocence, which, while having devastating effects in other countries, is especially difficult to accept for an important part of the U.S. population—primarily the military forces themselves.

U.S. seeks out uses for military might

Iraq's invasion of Kuwait cannot be legitimated by any means ... as no military intervention can. Latin Americans, especially, can understand the feeling of the Kuwaiti people after so many U.S. interventions in the last centuries.

In my opinion, the present situation in the "Gulf crisis" and the massive deployment of U.S. troops in the region point to several remarkable situations in the U.S. (and also at the University of Notre Dame).

1) It appears that, in the 1980s, U.S. society has been very susceptible to a special mixture of nationalist-populist-religious-military-white male discourse of the White House and most of the national mass media. In these days, some even try to make obvious comparisons between the U.S. invasion in Panama and the one in Kuwait. The former is justified by the version that it was a "legitimate national security problem" and resulted in U.S. troops "placing" a new (U.S. friendly) government, while the "terrorist aggression" in Iraq of a crazy man similar to Hitler, has to be condemned strongly.

The innocent help of the U.S. in Panama killed around 4,000 Panamanians. The quick and massive military reaction of the U.S. in the Gulf, once one considers the one hundred-thousand direct U.S. military interventions in Latin America alone in this century and the recent recurrence of an emphasis on the "autonomy of the nations" and the "sovereignty of states," cannot have any credibility at all and seems to be nothing more than an open hypocrisy.

2) Far more important, and sadly for all "Bambos," the U.S. is no longer economically able to lead a massive intervention or war, as it did in Vietnam. The U.S. hegemony seems to have accepted a new international labour division: it intervenes militarily, and the affected nations pay the costs (as some European nations and Japan have already accepted). The U.S. military might become no longer in the Gulf region and in Asia. This movement will be radically hostile to U.S. interests and "superbly" armed by the U.S. itself (as Noriega, an expatriate of Bush, was). See, for instance, the cases of Iraq, Iran, Pakistan, Afghanistan, and North Africa.

In this context, the U.S. war machine is working full time at high speed in all possible media, searching for all kinds of arguments to justify an unjustified military intervention in Iraq. After reading the newspaper or watching TV, one may experience this new "feeling." But let us face it: Believing in the "sovereignty of states" argument in the U.S. version is nothing more than naive innocence, which, while having devastating effects in other countries, is especially difficult to accept for an important part of the U.S. population—primarily the military forces themselves.

Saint Mary's to finish Fall Foray with luau

BETH KESSLER

To complete a week of activities labeled the Fall Foray, Saint Mary's has planned a joint ND-SMC luau. The event will take place on Friday, September 7, from 8:30 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. on the steps of Haggar Hall at Saint Mary's.

In the Hawaiian spirit lets will be given away, and food with a Hawaiian flare will be served. The area will be lit by torches, which will not only provide an appropriate setting, but should help deter the mosquitoes.

The main emphasis of the evening will be on dancing to the music of the Generics. Included in the activities will be a limbo contest. Organized by Amy Halstead and Wendy Kemp, heads of Special Cultural Activities for the Student Activities Board of SMC, the idea for this event came to them last spring. Halstead said they felt there was a lack of non-date dances on the ND and SMC campuses. She and Kemp wanted to provide a fun way for people to get together, dance and socialize, without the necessity of having a date.

The theme of a Hawaiian luau added an interesting twist. By having it early in the year it will allow freshmen to get involved, transfers to meet people, and upperclassmen to reacquaint themselves with fellow students.

Halstead described the luau as a "pre-party," suggesting that it would be a good place to start Friday evening before moving on to a more private party.

'The area will be lit by torches, which will not only provide an appropriate setting, but should help deter the mosquitoes.'

The luau is sponsored by the Student Activities Board of Saint Mary's and is open to all Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students. Halstead is optimistic about a good turnout and a date.

It's a spark—afire!—passed on and on by Notre Dame men, by father and son.

Oh, it's wondrous and awesome, this fire and this force:
'This Spirit that inspires us, this eternal resource. To cherish it dearly, more precious than gold, more precious than gold. And when dark hours gather, we'll turn up the flame of the glorious Spirit of Notre Dame!'

Special to the Observer

The Entertainer of the Year is on his way to Notre Dame?

No, this is not a joke. Tim Settimi will appear on Friday, September 7, at 8:00 p.m. in Theodore's. Settimi, voted 1989 Performing Artist of the Year by the National Association for Campus Activities, has performed his former, appearing in such cities as Boston, Toronto, New York, Chicago, and his native Chicago.

Settimi's talents have translated well to television and movies, with appearances on "Comedy Tonight," Showtime's "Atlanta Laff Off" and in the feature film "The Prize Fighter" with Tim Conway.

Settimi's current show combines mime, comedy, original music, memorable characters and athletic pratfall roller skating that delights all.

New work in progress for the most honored artist in the National Association for Campus Activities is a collection of theoretical interpretations of original music. The show, tentatively titled "Behind Bars," is a live music video, weaving a narrative through eight songs.

To see more of this talented performer, be sure to catch his act at Theodore's Friday at 8:00 p.m.

ABC, when it realized Notre Dame would not be a part of the CFA package, devalued its entire five-year deal by an estimated $50 million, with the CFA teams losing $30 million. The remaining $20 million would have gone directly to Notre Dame.

So, essentially, ABC's $50 million cutback translates into how the network believes in Notre Dame's worth to college football. That's some $12 million more than what NBC says Notre Dame football is worth. Hmm. Just imagine if ABC and CBS joined NBC in the bagging talks last week and were asked to start the bidding on Irish football. There's not an auctioneer in the country who would have kept his baton. A bidding war could have shut the reported $38 million offer down.

The obvious question arises: Why didn't Notre Dame go for the whole enchilada by selling itself to the entire market?

"That's not the way we function," says Bequaugh, who was fairly cast as the guy in this entire soap opera. "We came to us and asked to broadcast these games for this many years and this much money. Now CBS came to approach us. We are not interested in getting into a bidding war. We felt it presented ethical problems.

So ABC and CBS still cry foul. Members of CFA are agast at the unbelievable wealth that the contract will generate for one school. And the University of Kansas announcement won't play a two-game basketball series with the Irish. (Hey, there goes our winter weekends.)

But these people haven't considered how much Notre Dame could have made if it didn't go along with a silent, one-to-one agreement with NBC. And they also fail to recognize that Notre Dame could have made similar contracts in the past.

 Says Don Criqui, an Irish alum who ironically may call the games for NBC, "Notre Dame's contract similar to this 25 years ago and could've accrued up to $250 million by now. But the university went along as a team and stuck by the CFA and NBC."

Forget what could have been. Imagine what it would have been after the NBC contract expires.

Let the bidding begin.

McEnroe, Sampras win open matches

NEW YORK (AP) — John McEnroe, leaning improbably into the U.S. Open semifinals, toyed with the American minds behind the new breed of power hitters, and Ivan Lendl faded against a teen he taught to play tennis.

McEnroe, 31, played like the master of old, 6-4, 6-1, 6-4 over victory Wednesday night over David Wheaton, a 21-year-old giant with a signature serve that McEnroe said was nothing else that could match the talent of the four-time champion.

McEnroe treated Wheaton as if he were a 16-year-old teener with him and dropped shots, passing him, returning thundering serves with a flick of the wrist.

The顺德 McEnroe, who hadn't reached the semifinals here since he was runnerup in 1985, will next take on Pete Sampras, a 19-year-old who serves as hard as Wheaton but also has many of the touch shots and ground strokes that have been McEnroe's trade-mark.

McEnroe's sweeping serve kept Wheaton off balance, sometimes reaching for a ball out to court, most of the night, and his brilliant passing shots and volleying help to keep him from the foot-4-Foot Wall.

"He hit some pretty good shots at the beginning and scared me away from the net," Wheaton said.

Sampras, touted as one of the best young American power hitters in tennis, blasted 24 aces and 37 service winners at 100 mph and broke through to the top rank with a 6-7, 7-6 (7-4), 6-4, 6-2 victory over Lendl, a three-time champion.

Sampras, battered so badly in the third and fourth sets that pigeons seemed to circle over him like buzzards, refused to give up in the final set. He charged back with all the youthful fire he had to reach the semifinals of a Grand Slam tournament for the first time in 11 years.

The slim, slope-shouldered 19-year-old from Northridge, Calif., stopped making the backhand errors that plagued him in the sets Lendl won, and poured on the heat on his man, forcing Lendl's streak of eight straight appearances in the finals. Lendl was tied for the record of 10 consecutive times he reached the finals every year from 1981-1992.

Lendl, a physical fitness buff who is a five-set player in tennis, could take some pride in helping Sampras rise to the top echelon of the game. They practiced together for 10 days at Lendl's house in Greenwich, Conn., a couple of years ago and Lendl gave the younger one more than a few pointers.

"He had me biking 15 or 20 miles a day," said Sampras, who was a "big believer" on diet and match preparation. We talked a lot and he told me how he would approach a match. It's a true professional in every sense of the word.

I was thinking about it during the match because he told me you have to train so hard that you can't walk home. I felt just as fit as he did when he won his first title.

"I don't believe what's happening now. It's a dream come true. I've never been in a 4-hour, 5-minute match. This is what I've been working for my whole life. This is the reward right now."

Like someone's going to go out there and go for the Butkus award. You just go out and win games. If the defense plays well, these things are going to come.

The frontrunner in the pre-season Butkus picks, however, is not Stonebreaker. That honor goes to Alfred Williams, a 6-6, 239-pound outside linebacker from Colorado. Williams was named Big Eight Defensive Player of the Year by the Associated Press, United Press International, The Sporting News and Big Eight Coaches based on his overwhelming ability to penetrate the offensive line and sack the quarterback (22.5 sacks in three years). Williams also earned All-America honors from AP, UPI, Kodak Coaches, Walter Camp and Football Writers, and besides naming him to their All-America Team, The Sporting News said he "will vie for the top pick in the '91 draft."

Another highly esteemed pre-season candidate is teammate Kanavis McGhee, a 6-5, 250-pound outside linebacker for the Buffaloes. McGhee, who came back from an ankle injury last season to be a high-impact player for Colorado, was called the "best big-play artist in the land" by The Sporting News. Besides Williams, Stonebreaker and McGhee, other strong picks for the award are Miami's Maurice Crum (6-0, 222), who has led the Hurricanes in tackles in each of the past two seasons; Georgia's Morris Lewis (6-4, 227), who had 10 sacks last season; and Clemson's Leon Kirklund (6-2, 230), on one of the country's deepest linebackers corps in the country.

Notre Dame women's tennis coach Jay Louderback will face competition at that is just as formidable at 6 p.m. at the Eck. The Cardinal women have won NCAA team titles in each of the past five years, and seven of the past nine.

"Stanford's" top two returning players have won the past two individual NCAA titles," Louderback said. "Debbie Graham won the NCAA's last year and beat her teammate Sandra Birch in the finals. Sandra had won it (the NCAA title) the year before. I'm sure they'll play at number one and two (singles) for them."

The Irish soccer squad will face Ohio State at 8 p.m. on October 5 and Creighton at 3 p.m. on October 7 at Krause Stadium. Coach Mike Berticelli said he does not really know what to expect from his own team, but offered some insight on his opponents.

"Ohio State is one of the most formidable teams in the tournament, and Creighton is a program which has recently made a major commitment financially. They had a tremendous recruiting year, they will be a young team, but they will be very, very talented."

Western Michigan will meet Creighton at 5 p.m. on October 5 and Ohio State at 12:30 p.m. on October 7 to round out the Irish Soccer Classic.

The Golden Dome Volleyball Classic will begin on October 5, with LSU facing Hofstra at 6 p.m. and the Irish hosting Oklahoma at 8 p.m. at the Joyce ACC. The Classic will continue on October 6.

Meanwhile, his star quarter-back, Charles Thompson, is putting the finishing touches on a book of his own. Thompson, who is currently serving a two-year prison term on a conviction to distribute cocaine, documents the widespread presence of illegal drugs and firearms in players' dormitories in the forthcoming "Down and Dirty: The Life and Crimes of Oklahoma Football."

Switzer has repeatedly said that he puts no stock in anything Thompson has to say about his stay at Oklahoma, calling him "a sociopath, a criminal". Furthermore, Switzer claims Thompson's book was written simply to make money.

At least he's not going on a promotional tour.

ND welcomes Weekend of Champions

BY KEN TYSIAE Associate Sports Editor

Yesterday Notre Dame officials announced the completion of a schedule for the October 4-7 Weekend of Champions, which will feature many of the country's top sports teams an opportunity to showcase their skills at over top competition.

Highlights of the weekend will include appearances by the Olympic gold medalist Janet Elkins in women's tennis, 1989 Heisman Trophy winner Anthony Davis and women's swim teams, the Wichita State baseball team which won the College World Series in 1989 and the Stanford men's and women's tennis teams, which have won nine out of a possible ten NCAA titles in the past five years.

Also scheduled for the weekend are the Irish Soccer Classic and the Golden Dome Volleyball Classic. Ohio State, Creighton and Western Michigan will participate in the soccer tournament and both men's and women's teams will compete in the volleyball tournament. And, lest we forget, this is a weekend of Champions.

It has been more than 19 months since linebacker Michael Stonebreaker has played in a collegiate football game, but that hasn't stopped the former Little Rock backer from contributing on this weekend's program. The Irish football season opens against the world record holder, will lead the Stanford men's and women's swimming teams against the Irish at 4 p.m. on Friday, October 5 at the South Aquatic Center. The Stanford men's team finished second in the NCAA's in 1990 and won three national championships in the 1980s.

Irish baseball coach Pat Murphy will try to find a way to defeat Wichita State in games on October 4 and 5 at Clevenger Stadium. The Shockers have a pitcher named Tyler Green who is one of the most-sought-after prospects in the country. Murphy's squad also has a pretty talented pitcher in sophomore David Sinnes, who led Division 1 hurlers with a 1.05 ERA. A match-up between Green and Sinnes could turn out to be one of the best cases of college pitching.

Foreign captives warned not to try escaping Iraq

(AP) - Iraq tightened the screws on Thursday, warning that anyone trying to leave without permission could face life in prison. The Soviet Union raised the possibility of Kremlin support for sending a U.N. military force to the Persian Gulf.

Iraq, Twilight of the Emirate

Saudia Arabia committed several billion dollars toward defraying the enormous cost of the U.S. forces protecting the kingdom's oil fields from possible Iraqi aggression. U.S. and Saudia officials announced.

U.S. officials said that the Saudis would, at a minimum, pick up all fuel, water and transportation costs for the 60-000 American troops now in Saudia Arabia. Earlier this week, Baker told Congress the U.S. presence would cost about $6 billion by year's end.

Both U.S. and Saudia officials declined to provide a specific price tag for the commitment.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher pledged more forces to bolster the U.S. contingent in the gulf. She did not elaborate on the deployment plans.

Egypt, too, said it was beefing up its small gulf contingent. At the United Nations, diplomats said U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar planned to send an envoy to occupied Kuwait to meet with diplomats whose embassies are surrounded by Iraqi troops, and with trapped foreigners. Baghdad would have to give its consent for the visit.

The State Department again blasted Iraq for its treatment of foreign nationals, including the shooting of an American in Kuwait who was trying to avoid capture. The diplomat spoke on condition that his name be withheld. Washington and Moscow, meanwhile, scrambled to prepare for the weekend superpower summit they hope will bring a break in the nearly 5-week-old crisis.

President Bush said the United States was determined to force Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to withdraw from Kuwait, which Iraqi troops overran Aug. 2 in a direct attack on the gulf contingent. The White House said the president would tape a statement for broadcast to the Iraqi people, saying he saw "a real opportunity" to explain the U.S. view. Baghdad had offered to broadcast an interview with Bush, but the White House said the president would tape a statement instead.

Statements by the Iraqi president -- which White House officials called "Saddamathons" -- have received ample air time in the United States, and the Bush administration was reportedly irritated about this.

Word that Moscow might support a U.N. military force in the gulf came from Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov. He indicated Mikhail Gorbachev may discuss the idea with Bush at their summit Sunday in Lafortune Student Center.

Stud Gov't opens year with address

By BETHY PUNSLAN

The creation of a 24-hour space in the basement of LaFortune is expected to materialize soon, according to Student Body President Rob Pasin and Vice President Fred Tombar in their first Student Body Address last night.

"We worked on it this summer for a while," said Tombar of the 24-hour space. "We hope this will become a reality sometime this semester, but at least by next semester."

Student Government also worked this summer on the development of a lecture series, according to Pasin, who was aided by Dr. William Sexton, vice president of University Relations. Fifty invitations were sent to various speakers and, thus far, Student Government has confirmed engagements with such notable figures as CBS White House Correspondent Leslie Stahl, former Arizona governor Bruce Babbitt and HUD Secretary Jack Kemp.

Pasin and Tombar want to improve communication between the student body and Student Government. Student Government newsletters will be distributed in the dorms in the hopes of creating a government "more receptive to the needs and concerns of the student body," according to Tombar. Pasin is also currently working on an Observer column in an effort to maintain close ties with the student body, and he hopes to utilize other forms of campus media for this purpose as well.

Student Government has instituted a suggestion line, nicknamed "the FREED-line," as a way to improve communication with the student body, according to Tombar, who has been receiving about 20 calls a day.

Pasin noted the need for a complaint procedure that would bring individual student complaints directly to Student Government. The procedure would allow students to file complaints in the dorms, which would then be brought by the dorm president to the Student Government Legal Department for review.

As promised in their campaign last year, Tombar said emergency phones and added lighting in the parking lots are under consideration, as is a shuttle service to off-campus locations around campus, as well as extending the Weekend Wheels shuttle service to off-campus locations.

In response to a question regarding Notre Dame's gay and lesbian community, Pasin responded, "Notre Dame is a Christian community and ideally should be loving and accepting of all its members. If Fred and I would support recognition of the (Gay and Lesbian) Club."

Last night's address was the first to use the extended format to encourage student participation so that Student Government can be held "more accountable to students."

Mail bombs exploded Thursday at the Madison Stock Exchange, the Economy Ministry and the Constitutional Court, and six people suffered minor injuries. Scientists in Boston have discovered two defective genes that cause dangerous thickening of the heart, the leading medical cause of sudden death among young athletes. Glioblasts in these genes result in an inherited disorder known as familial hypertrophic cardiomyopathy. Victims are prone to suffer heart rhythm problems and heart failure or to die suddenly from cardiac arrest. Among the most notable victims of cardiomyopathy was basketball star Hank Gathers of Loyola Marymount, who collapsed during a game in March. Experts are uncertain, however, whether he had the inherited form of the disease.

Drug lord can be extradited despite new policy

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Despite the government's offer to stop extraditing drug kingpins, Colombia's senior cocaine kingpin still would be sent to the United States for trial, a top government official said Thursday.

Pablo Escobar, head of the Medellin cocaine cartel, would be sent to the United States unless he turns himself in and confesses all his crimes, said the official, who is involved in policy and decision-making. He spoke to reporters on condition of anonymity.

The Bush administration cautiously endorsed the new policy.

"If the government and people of Colombia are now able to enforce their own laws against drug trafficking — prosecuting, convicting, and incarcerating these thugs — so much the better," Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said in a statement from Washington.

But he warned that "if the so-called extraditables fail to take advantage of this opportunity to surrender ... we will continue to support Colombia's effort to arrest and extradite them to the United States for trial."

President Cesar Gaviria modified a year-old policy by announcing Wednesday that cocaine traffickers who surrender to Colombian authorities will not be extradited to the United States.

Gaviria said the decision, which came in the form of an official decree, applies to those who surrender, not those captured by police.

"If Escobar were captured today, he would be extradited," said the official who spoke Thursday.

He said Colombia would not allow the new measure to become a "joke" in which major drug criminals confess only minor crimes to avoid extradition.

"If Pablo Escobar surrendered but failed to confess all of his crimes, he would run the risk of being extradited," he added.

The government hopes to convince medium- and lower-level drug smugglers to surrender and cooperate with authorities, he said.

Officials blame the Medellin cartel, which Escobar leads, for killing about 500 Colombians in the past year, including three presidential candidates. Thousands of others have died in fighting between rival drug gangs and violence by right-wing death squads financed by drug traffickers.

During the past year, the Medellin cartel has been demanding an end to extraditions, the fate it fears most.

In repeated statements, drug traffickers have offered to turn themselves in to Colombian judges, in an apparent attempt to persuade the government to end extraditions.

The Medellin cartel in July declared a unilateral cease-fire in its terrorist attacks, apparently hoping the new administration would end extraditions. Gaviria was inaugurated Aug. 7.

The official said it was necessary to show the Colombian people that the president is seeking solutions based on the country's own justice system.

Total reliance on foreign courts saps people's confidence in Colombia's institutions, he added.

Gaviria's predecessor, Virgilio Barco, undertook extraditions to the United States a year ago, after drug traffickers declared war on the state.

Extraditions are controversial in Colombia because many people believe sending citizens to face trial abroad is an insult to national pride.

However, Colombia's justice system has so far failed to keep any major trafficker in jail.

Drug lords often bribe or threaten officials into letting them go free.

Bush will appear on Iraqi TV, but on own terms, spokesman says

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — President Bush will accept Saddam Hussein’s offer to broadcast a message to Iraq, but only on his own terms. Bush’s spokesman said Thursday. The president will make a tape in lieu of an interview with an Iraqi TV crew.

"It’s a real opportunity," Bush said of Saddam’s offer to televise the U.S. leader’s comments. Bush’s spokesman said the president had "a very distinct message" to give the Iraqi people about American reasons for the massive military buildup in the Persian Gulf.

Iraqi Ambassador Mohammed al-Mashat said in Washington that "of course" Iraqi TV would air Bush’s message "in its entirety without editing. Here you edit, in Iraq we do not edit.

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Bush’s address would be eight to 10 minutes long. "We will have a whole package for broadcast on Iraqi television, and then we’ll have a State Department interpreter who will provide the interpretation some way” into Arabic, Fitzwater said, adding that the tape will be released generally.

On another topic, looking ahead to this weekend’s superpower summit, Bush said he will use the meeting not only to discuss the Persian Gulf with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev but to press for a quick resolution to strategic arms talks.

Before embarking on a one-day political trip to Kansas and Florida on Thursday, Bush spoke by telephone with a number of world leaders on the gulf situation and his upcoming meeting with Gorbachev. They included Syrian President Hafez al-Assad, Turkish President Turgut Ozal, French President Francois Mitterrand and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, the White House said.

He also called United Nations Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to thank him for his unsuccessful try at resolving the gulf crisis in talks last week in Iraq.

Bush also met Thursday with Israel’s visiting foreign minister, David Levy, in Washington. Naj Al-Halabi, director general of Iraq’s Information Ministry, said in Baghdad that an Iraqi television crew was ready to go to Washington to interview Bush for a broadcast on state-run television.

Fitzwater said that wouldn’t be necessary — "’we’ll produce it ourselves.’"

"Although we have not heard from Iraq directly, we accept their offer of a broadcast to the Iraqi people. The president will tape a message to the Iraqi people in the next few days which will be provided to the Iraqi information ministry." Fitzwater told reporters accompanying Bush on Air Force One.

Bush has said he wished he could have the media access in Iraq that Saddam has had on U.S. television. The Iraq president’s statements and appearances have been broadcast widely, many of them on live and unedited CNN reports.

"The president has a very distinct message that he wants to give to the people of Iraq about our purpose for being in the gulf. He thinks this is a good opportunity," Fitzwater said.

On a separate matter, Fitzwater said that there is no new economic package for the Soviet Union in the offering, although the Sunday summit meeting in Helsinki will offer a chance to talk about "technical assistance."
Judge keeps bond for suspect in UF murders

A judge Thursday cited bizarre behavior as a reason to uphold a $1 million bond on an assault charge for a young man suspected in the slayings of five college students in Gainesville.

Homicide task force investigators were searching the 18-year-old's Gainesville apartment and car for clues to the slayings. But police cautioned he is only one of eight leading suspects, and his brother said he's been made a scapegoat.

Because of the unusually high bond, Edward Humphrey has been in the Brevard County jail since Aug. 30 on a charge of murdering his grandmother.

"I see before me a very disturbed individual," Circuit Judge Martin Budnick said at the bail-reduction hearing at the jail. "I see a great deal of acting out ... neurotic or psychotic behavior."

Jail officer Emily Glaab testified Humphrey described himself as dangerous and "a savage," threatened a female inmate, and called himself "John" and warned "John doesn't take no prisoners."

Brevard State Attorney Norm Wolffinger, arguing for the high bond, said: "The fact remains he is a suspect in the Gainesville murders and he knows that."

Public Defender J.R. Russo objected, and the judge agreed he couldn't set a bond based on a case Humphrey hasn't been charged in. However, the judge said he would be doing "a disservice to the community" if he allowed Humphrey to go free.

Budnick ruled that Humphrey is a danger to the community. But he indicated he would consider another request for bond reduction and wanted to hear medical testimony about Humphrey's mental condition.

Russo did not comment afterward on whether he would seek another hearing. He said he was preparing for the trial on the aggravated assault charge, tentatively scheduled for October.

Humphrey's grandmother testified she didn't want to press charges and would welcome Humphrey back into her home, where Humphrey's mother also lives, in Indiana, 180 miles from Gainesville.

"I want it dropped ... definitely," Elna Hlavaty, her right cheek and right eye badly bruised, said as Humphrey watched.

She said she didn't fear her grandson, although she had called police repeatedly.

She said she couldn't remember anything about the night of the incident other than that she hurt her right side when she fell on a concrete floor. The 79-year-old Hlavaty protested she was old and ill and couldn't answer any more questions from prosecutors.

Sheriff's Deputy Douglas Hammack testified she told him the night of the arrest that she feared Humphrey would beat her again. Humphrey started banging his head against his patrol car when Hammack put him inside, the deputy testified.

Hammack said he had gone to the grandmother's home five or six times on disturbance complaints and was told Humphrey was refusing to take medicine to control mood swings.

He testified on one visit he had Humphrey remove a knife from the front seat of his car and lock it in the trunk.

Besides Humphrey's apartment, detectives searched his grandmother's home and his black Cadillac. Authorities said the grandmother's home was unoccupied during the search because the family was at the hearing.

George Humphrey, a University of Florida senior, charged that his younger brother is being made a scapegoat and that the press is sensationalizing the killings.

"Ed didn't do it, Ed didn't do it. He's not capable of it," Humphrey told reporters in Sharpses.

Hymns composed by Warner published in Canadian book

Special to the Observer

"Psalmtry," a collection of liturgical music by Steven Warner, associate director of the University of Notre Dame's Office of Campus Ministry, has been recently published by GIA Publications of Chicago.

The collection includes ten re-sponsorial psalm settings for keyboard, guitar, harp, vocal soloist and four-part choir. The music was written by Warner for Sunday Masses at Notre Dame.

A combination of two genres of sacred music designed for use by liturgical assemblies with either organ or guitar as the leading instrument. "Psalmtry," according to Warner, "seeks to bring together contemporary liturgical music, by way of its lyricism and expressiveness on the guitar, with traditional chant styles, with its free-flowing sense of rhythm and modal progressions."

Some of the material in the collection have been approved for inclusion in the "Canadian Book of Worship," the hymnal used by most Catholics in Canada.

Warner has worked in the University's Campus Ministry office since 1979, when he began work on a master of arts degree in liturgical studies at the University of Notre Dame. Among the musical instruments with which he is proficient are the guitar and the Irish harp.

Warner is director of the Notre Dame Folk Choir, which he co-founded, and the music he leads the music at 11:45 a.m. Sunday Mass at Sacred Heart Church. He has taken the choir on two international tours, both to the Republic of Ireland, in 1988 and 1990.

For the last two years, he has managed Campus Ministry's liturgical celebration of the Feast of Saint Patrick, using music written in collaboration with parishes and liturgical centers in Ireland and directing the Folk Choir in a recording of the Mass.

Dukakis allies put end to rebellion

BOSTON (AP) - After being held a political hostage by a mutinous lieutenant governor, Gov. Michael Dukakis, departed on a European trade mission Thursday as his allies moved to quash the rebellion.

Dukakis had delayed his travel plans Tuesday after Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy threatened to seize control of Massachusetts' state finances once he left.

"I think the episode of the past 24 hours is really kind of pathetic," Dukakis said at a brief airport news conference before boarding his plane for Germany.

While Dukakis allies move to quash the rebellion Thursday, with references to a new form of "Murphy's Law" and an "attempted bloodless coup," Murphy said her boss was acting "weird" by not letting her assert herself.

"There's no good will here and certainly no mutual respect," Murphy said.

Dukakis said he did not speak to Murphy on Thursday, but he said be believed her assurances that she would act responsibly in his absence. Murphy said he could cut his trip short if anything occurs that affected the government's stability.

Murphy spokeswoman Jody D'Urso said the lieutenant governor, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for governor, would not take any action Thursday night. D'Urso did not rule out Murphy acting later.

Murphy, who is lagging in her Democratic primary race to succeed Dukakis, had been a strong supporter of the governor in his 1988 bid for the presidency. But with the state in a fiscal disaster and Dukakis not seeking re-election, politicians have treated him as a liability.

Dukakis decided to postpone his travel plans, prompting some observers to say he was being held hostage by his own lieutenant governor.

Dukakis bitterly denounced the tactic as a maneuver designed to gain favor with voters in the gubernatorial race on Thursday, aides to Dukakis echoed that charge.

"Here's a lady who isn't going to get elected governor no matter what she does, and she is dangerously flirting with the economic health of the commonwealth of Massachusetts. That's irresponsible," said L. Edward Lashman, state secretary of Administration and Finance. Lashman said Murphy isn't publicly supporting any candidate in the Sept. 18 primary.

According to recent public opinion polls, Murphy is well behind her two Democratic opponents.

Judge: Mapplethorpe case must go to trial

CINCINNATI (AP) — A jury must decide whether an art gallery and its director broke obscenity laws by exhibiting five sexually graphic Robert Mapplethorpe photographs, a judge ruled Thursday.

Hamilton County Municipal Judge David Albanese ordered trial Sept. 24 on one contemporary art center to Denison Barrie and the gallery and its director broke obscenity laws by exhibiting Mapplethorpe photographs, a judge ruled Thursday.

Barrie and the gallery already were scheduled to go on trial that day on one charge each of using children in material involving nudity. Albanese said involving nudity. Albanese said

The charges were filed April 7, the day the exhibition opened to the public. The exhibition closed May 26, after 81,000 people had visited the gallery. One-man quilt and painting show opens at Snite Museum Sept. 9th

Special to the Observer

"Bruce Bobick: Beans, Quilts, Chance and Determinism," a one-man show featuring quilts and quilt paintings, will open at the Snite Museum of Art Sept. 9(Sunday) and will continue through October 21.

Bobick received his master of fine arts degree from Notre Dame in 1958. He is professor and chairman of the department of art at West Georgia College, Carrollton, Ga.

The quilt series grew out of Bobick's interest in the workings of the subconscious and Louis Pasteur's words, "Chance favors the prepared mind." The exhibit explores the opposing concepts of determinism and free will," Bobick said.

"In studying history, one becomes aware of the supposedly random flukes of luck that have resulted in famous discoveries or inventions, and by knowing that the subconscious mind is active during sleep," he said, "I thought it appropriate to do a series of quilts made by grandmothers of famous individuals." The images on the quilts permeated the subconscious of the sleeping children night after night and led directly to the famous discovery, invention, or work of art."

Bobick will be present at the opening of his exhibition and will speak about his "one of beans as a metaphor for the human condition."

Bridge blocked in Mohawk dispute reopens after 2 months

MONTREAL (AP) — The arid Bridge linking Montreal to its south-shore suburbs opened Thursday for the first time following an eight-week standoff between armed Mohawks and police.

As army pipers played, hundreds of cars and trucks drove onto the bridge from suburban Chateauguay, through the Kahnawake Mohawk reserve and past armored personnel carriers in the early morning mist.

Commuters had started lining up their cars an hour earlier, horns honking impatiently as they waited for the army to wave them through.

"It's about time," one man on his way to work at a Montreal refrigerated warehouse told a radio station. "The government should never have let this happen in the first place."

The bridge normally handles about 70,000 vehicles during the daily rush hour. It was barred by natives from the Kahnawake reserve after provincial police staged an abortive attack on a Mohawk barricade at Kanesatake near Oka, Quebec on July 11 in which an officer died.

The bridge closure led to violent demonstrations by south-shore commuters, including an incident last week in which a white mob hurled stones at a convoy of Mohawk women, children and invalids escaping the reserve.

The stage was set for the reopening when barricades at Kahnawake came down last week after an agreement was reached between the army and Mohawks.

But in Kanesatake — where the Mohawk deadlock began over a land dispute — soldiers spent Wednesday firming up their positions around the last warrior stronghold.

The deadlock at Oka began when provincial police stormed a barricade the Mohawks erected to stop the town’s plans to expand the local golf course, saying the property in question was part of their ancestral land.

A Group for Gay, Lesbian, and Bisexual Students, Faculty, and Staff

First Monthly General Meeting

Sunday, 9 September 1990

First Student Discussion Group

Tuesday, 11 September 1990

Our monthly General Meetings are a chance for everyone in our group to get together and discuss upcoming projects, lectures, and events in a friendly and unthreatening forum. Along with providing an opportunity to plan and announce group activities, the General Meetings are also a time to meet other people like yourself.

Our Discussion Groups provide a group of peers to talk with about the issues of being gay, lesbian, or bisexual in a world that often misunderstands homosexual people. The Discussion Groups sometimes have a topic or theme, but people are always free to talk about whatever they are feeling.

The Student Discussion Group will be meeting weekly, starting this Tuesday night. A Faculty/Staff Discussion Group is now forming.

For more information on any of these meetings, or what our group is all about, please call one of the numbers listed below.
Environment center opens in Budapest

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Hungary's President Arpad Goenetz planted a tree Thursday to mark the opening of an international environmental center to help Eastern Europe cope with its widespread pollution problems.

Proposed by President Bush when he visited Hungary in July, the Regional Environmental Center is an independent organization for training and information on energy efficiency, public health and regional cooperation on pressing environmental problems.

It is designed to provide data on environmental issues, but not to get involved in political decisions in Eastern European countries, said Lee Pasarew, director of his project's development team. Peter Hardi is the executive director.

"The opening of this center today is only the latest in a remarkable series of events that history will record as the revolution of 1989," William Reilly, former administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, said in an opening speech.

Eastern European countries are struggling with the results of a chronic disregard for the environment that characterized the Communist regimes overwhelmingly.

Antiquated factories central to their economies still spew tons of waste into the air and water. Many forests are damaged, if not decimated, by acid rain.

Reilly said Wednesday that the center was a "way of providing legitimacy, involvement" for Western European environmentalists who had been previously suppressed.

Half of the $10 million needed to start the center was donated by the United States. The European Community gave $12.5 million; Hungary $800,000, and the Netherlands, Austria and Canada $1.5 million total.

NASA will make next try at launch mid-Sept

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA said Thursday it will replace the fuel pump that likely caused its latest failure to get astronauts back in space and try again in mid-September to launch Columbia.

NASA Administrator Richard Truly said a new pump will be installed this weekend. If that seems to correct the problem, a fourth launch attempt will be made to launch the shuttle with an astronomical observatory early in the week of Sept. 17.

"It's not a 100 percent guarantee. But it's the one shot we have to get the Astro mission airborne" before Discovery's scheduled flight with the Ulysses satellite in October, Truly said.

The unit is bolted in and can be replaced easily, said launch director Bob Sieck. Crews cannot enter the compartment until Friday because propellants remain aboard, preventing a new pump from being installed until Saturday.

On Wednesday, NASA called off its third attempt to send Columbia on a mission to study some of the hottest objects in the universe with the $150 million Astro observatory.

Thursday's early morning launch was scrubbed after hydrogen flooded into the rear compartment.

Officials continued filling Columbia's massive external tank to pinpoint the source and narrowed their search to the shuttle's three recirculation pumps.

Each of the shuttle's three main engines has a pump. Officials were uncertain which one might be leaking or whether there were other holes.

The pumps are part of the plumbing in the rear of the shuttle, where pipes range in diameter up to 17 inches. They are directly in front of the huge engines and are accessible through side doors.

"We're not talking about a large leak. We're talking about an extremely small leak," said Forrest McCartney, director of Kennedy Space Center. "It's very elusive and very frustrating."

"It is a real hogger to try to find and isolate," shuttle boss Robert Crippen said.

If a new pump does not correct Columbia's leaks or the launch is delayed too long, the mission will wait until after Discovery's flight with Ulysses, a satellite being sent on a five-year journey to explore the sun's polar regions. Discovery must lift off between Oct. 5 to Oct. 23 to take advantage of the proper planet alignment.

"Ulysses is our first priority and we will not compromise that," said William Lenoir, head of NASA's space flight program.

Columbia's seven astronauts left for their training base in Houston at dawn.

The mood at the space center was one of disappointment mixed with relief.

"My first reaction was frustration," said program scientist Ed Weiler. "But my next thought was, 'My God, I'm glad they stopped, some of my friends are aboard.'"
By Cecelia Burger

Mary is a friend of mine. There are many things I can tell you about her. For instance, she is a black female in her early thirties. She lives and works in the community. She likes movies and music. She likes to get books to read from the library. And she especially fond of Pizza Hut pizza, Kentucky Fried Chicken and strawberry ice cream. Mary is friendly but quiet when you first meet her. She stays in the background and does not stand out in a crowd. After getting to know her, it was quite disabling. After getting to know her, it was quite difficult to get to know her. I found that her normal pattern of behavior was difficult to form an impression of. Obviously, Mary is a very special person to those who know her. But there is something about Mary which a description of her would be incomplete without; Mary is severely retarded and handicapped.

Mary and I were paired together through Best Buddies, a program sponsored by the Kennedy Foundation which was started at The University of Notre Dame. Upon seeing her for the first time, it was apparent that she is disabled. After getting to know her, it was quite enlightening to realize that she is also very able. This occurred the moment I stopped looking at the handicapped and began to look at the person behind the handicap. Some would say that Mary is special, and I agree wholeheartedly. But Mary is not special in my eyes because she mentally retarded or handicapped, but because of the feeling of friendship and caring which I share with her, and which I share with us.

Our friendship has been one of fairly rapid development. In the beginning when I would go to see Mary, I would have to initiate all of the conversation. Sometimes it was like a police interview. I had trouble getting responses, and I didn’t know if I was talking “above her level of understanding,” or perhaps she just found me boring. I feared that a normal pattern of behavior would be difficult to form an impression of. I decided to stop asking so many questions.

When Mary and I would go to the movies or some other place we would ride in the car, listen to music and just enjoy one another. I asked one or two questions and then paused for a time, waiting for a response. Little by little, Mary became more comfortable with me and I with her. She stopped being so uncomfortable about asking me for help or telling me she didn’t do some things because of her handicap. I, in turn, felt more at ease with her handicap and asking about her abilities like the distance she could walk, if she could go up stairs, or if she took the bus to work by herself. I had been telling her about some things myself. One day, on the fifth visit, Mary got to the library and, to my astonishment, began the conversation. Not only did she begin, she talked a good five minutes straight! She answered all the questions that I had asked her consistently on our other visits. Obviously, she was getting to know me pretty well.

After that, I wanted to get around the problem of her viewing all my actions as favors to her (she thanked me for everything, not realizing that I wanted to see her and do things with her). I also wanted her to start calling me if she wanted to see me. I found that the best way to let her know these things was just to come out and say them. It was amazing how well that worked. I was extremely aware of the rare honesty and openness that was so prominent in our developing relationship.

After that “stage,” Mary became even more interactive, asking me things, remembering things we had conversed about on previous visits and asking me about them (i.e. “How was your test?”), asking what I wanted to do, wanting to share with me (secrets as well as food), and calling me if I didn’t call when I said I would. Mary’s presence in my life has had an immense impact on my views of mental retardation, the handicapped, and even the basic meaning of the word “friendship.” At first, I did not know what to expect, and I was a little apprehensive about working with Mary. I had never had much contact with the mentally retarded. However, my relationship with Mary has dissolved many of the fears I had.

My views of challenges, and of people in general, have also been influenced. Mary faces challenges and difficulties in daily life and survival. So much of what is automatic for me is a serious problem for her. She has really accomplished a tremendous amount. She has worked hard and deserves dignity and respect like anyone else. Instead, she lives in a world where many look down on her and patronize her, focusing on what she can’t do rather than what she can.

I have also learned about the value of people. So many things about Mary are innate in the human condition. She feeds both pain and pleasure, satisfaction and dissatisfaction, approval and disgust. She has ideas and opinions. She laughs and cries and worries and worries. She has her own little successes just like everyone else. Most importantly, she loves and accepts, and desires love and acceptance.

Mary is mentally retarded. She is also handicapped. She doesn’t fit into what most of society may classify as normal. She has limits. But beyond all the labels and stereotypes is a learning, loving, breathing individual who has much human value as anyone does, and she wants very much what other non-handicapped people want out of their lives. Her intelligence and abilities are limited in some respects, but that is part of Mary; they are only two factors that shape her as an individual.

Part of friendship is accepting the limits of your friends and cherishing the parts which are truly beautiful and valuable. Yes, Mary is my friend, she is special, and she has taught me the true meaning of friendship. I think the Friendship Program is an excellent idea which benefits both participants. The mentally retarded person gets a chance to be socialized, integrated, and experience some normalization of activities with non-handicapped people. The non-handicapped person gets the chance to work with a mentally retarded person and develop a relationship, realizing that such people are not really different in the aspects of human value which really matter.

Cecelia Burger is a senior psychology and anthropology major and the project coordinator of the Best Buddies Program.

South Bend’s Radio Stations

ELIZABETH VIDA

Although South Bend has two top 40 radio stations and one hard rock station, sometimes the need for a variety of music—something you can listen to while working or relaxing—without getting sick of repetition—exists. Sunny 101.5 fulfills that need by providing a mixture of songs. In the words of Doug Hawkes, program director for Sunny 101.5, “the music is a golden mixture of both the best of the old and the new.” In more technical radio lingo, it’s programming is adult contemporary, with a large bulk of the audience between the ages of 25 and 39. Yet this is no Barry Manilow or Neil Diamond marathon station, nor is it a Top 40 station. Sunny 101.5 fullfills that need by providing a mixture of songs.

Sunny 101.5 also showcases four special programs. Every weekday there’s the popular “Lunchtime Gold” with Jack Reicht. From 12-1 p.m. classic rock and great oldies are sent out over the airwaves. For five minutes during that hour, usually 12:30-12:35, Reicht outlines his audience’s knowledge of rock trivia. In “Name That Lunchtime Gold,” he plays the first few seconds or notes of an oldies song and the right caller (#12, for example) with the correct answer wins a prize. “The show is a lot of fun,” Jack is a hometown boy, so he has a great knowledge of the city,” commented Hawkes. “The show has a lot of audience participation, and Jack loves requests. He really tries to thoroughly research all his rare requests.”

On Saturday evening from 7 to 11 p.m. there’s “Super Gold” with Mike Tanner. Broadcast live from the West Coast, it presents a national phone-in request program. Sunday evening there are a couple of programs to listen to while studying at the brace. From 6-9 p.m., it’s “Crusin’ America” with Cometa Brucle, and at 9 until 12 a.m., “Live from the Sixties” with the Real Don Steele. “Live from the Sixties” usually highlights one particular year in the decade and then plays all the great songs of that year—anything from the major hits. He doesn’t play “Born to Be Wild” and “Light My Fire” every hour like other stations. Rock programs tend to do. Obsolete songs and novelty songs are also given their fair share of the program. Don Steele also tries to make the listener feel as if they’re back in time, with facts and trivia from the particular year. “We try to have a whole bunch of little things going on at the same time, instead of one big promotion,” Hawkes commented. “Actually,” he continued, “our ratings have been pretty good of late. We like having a lot of audience participation and we’re glad that we’ve developed a good audience. And we’re, of course, very happy to be in the hometown of University of Notre Dame.”

U

93 is no longer a Top 40 station. Before the fans of Mark Durocher, Nicky Hawkes, program director for 93, and the like rush to change their dials to another station that plays the hot hits of today, it must be made clear that U93 has not changed its format, simply the title of the format. “Top 40” has become passe in radio circles; the correct name is contemporary hit radio, or CHR, according to Jack Swart, the Radio Manager of WNDU 93.

The station is currently enjoying a run as the top-rated radio station in the overall area. As well as in several key demographic groups. Arbitron, the ratings system U93 subscribes to, rates them number one in the 18-49 age group, with a 17.7% share of the audience, and also number one in the 18-34 group with a 19.5% share.

These numbers are based on the average percentage of listeners tuned in to U93 during the hours of 6 a.m. to midnight, seven days a week. Swart says there are a number of reasons the station is so successful.

First among these is the type of music the station plays. The playlist is selected by the program and music directors, who are influenced by requests from listeners and from sales in local record stores. The biggest hits are placed on the playlist in heavy rotation for a period of 12 to 13 weeks, at which time their rotation is diminished. A song is taken off the playlist anytime from one to one and a half years after its first appearance.

Because of the various tastes of its listeners, the station plays various styles of pop, including soul, hard rock, and rap. If it has crossover appeal. The popularity of certain disc jockeys also contributes to the station’s success. According to U93’s overall strategy, the more high profile, energetic DJs are featured during the morning and afternoon driving time. The morning show, headed by Durocher, also boasts a stable of popular characters in a comic format.

Special programming on weekends includes Rick Dees’ Weekly Top 40 on Saturday mornings, and America’s Top 40 on Sunday mornings, as well as Sunday evening’s hit parade, a syndicated call-in show featuring various artists.

Perhaps the main factor that leaves U93 fans glued to their stereo, however, is the extensive call-in giveaway program the station utilizes. Both independently and in conjunction with sponsors, U93 gives away South Bend Sox tickets, concert tickets, and restaurant gift certificates, as well as larger prizes such as trips, stereo systems, and merchants’ giveaway packages. Recent promotions included the $10,000 Key Song and the Endless Summer features.

WNDU is affiliated with the University and expresses this by following university policy on such things as the advertising it accepts for airplay. Swart says the station wishes to “reflect the same basic message as that of the University.” The station promotes itself mostly through advertising on TV’s Channel 16, and through billboards in the area.

As to the competition provided by similar stations such as ZIP 104, Swart replies that U93 was the first station of its format in this area, and that gives it an advantage over the others. He states that U93’s flow of air talent is stronger and that they are in touch with the community better than any of their competition.

With the air of one in command of the situation, he says simply, “We just keep beating them.”

THE RUSSELL ATHLETIC "EARN FROM HISTORY" SWEEPSTAKES

Russell Athletic Cardigans always translate into a great fashion statement. And if you identify this famous face and the two others from our newspaper campaign, that could translate into a $1,000 scholarship for next semester from Russell Athletic.® Visit JACC Ice Arena for details and entry forms.

*If you are a graduating senior and win the sweepstakes, you will receive $1000 credit on your tuition.

C'EST Bon.
Shortly before being killed in action in 1918, the English war hero Wilfred Owen finished an anti-war poem which was as truthful as a poem can be: "If you could hear, at every jolt, the blood-dimmed tents, the troubled drums, the easy way was in the old Lie that it is sweet and fitting to die for one's country. But in modern war is hell without replacing it with another myth. Eliot's Becket told us that the last temptation is the greatest treason: "to do the right deed for the wrong reason." We shouldn't be tempted to think that Notre Dame owes the ladies the "Year of Women", because "every year so far has been the year of men". Even in the real world, it isn't true to say that white males always have their back-sides in a tub of butter. The real truth is that in this generation of emerging minorities, men are taking turns with the women in being the underdogs.

How could it be otherwise? If the President decides that the politics of liberation mandate him to appoint a woman to the Supreme Court, Sandra Day O'Connor's stand-in will be nominated to fill the vacancy, even if Thomas Jefferson is waiting in the wings. Sandra Day O'Connor's stand-in may be an inspired choice, gifted in her job well, and everyone will applaud the President's choice. Jefferson may be serving of President Kennedy's high praise at a dinner for the American Nobel Prizes winner: "I think this is the most extraordinary collection of talent, of human knowledge, that has ever been gathered together at the White House—with the possible exception of when Thomas Jefferson dined alone."

Nevertheless, O'Connor becomes the Supreme Court justice because that's the way the cookie must crumble in this age of women's lib. Jefferson, the genius, is left to meditate on Ecclesiastes: "The race is not to the swift, nor yet to the strong, neither yet to the wise, nor yet to the rich men of understanding, nor yet to the men of skill, but time and chance happeneth to them all."

A university committed to coeducation has to put its money where its mouth is in making the appointments that give minorities their place in the sun. Frankly, the appointments tend to be a breath of fresh air. It would be churlish for the goats in the talent pool to be a jealous of the sheep gathered at the right hand of the Father Almighty. The Miltons, bucking for promotion, have no choice but to remain mute, glorious, and unremunerated; and the Copleys, hoping to make heads roll as academic deans, stay guiltless of their colleagues' blood. Are there jobs in the groves of academe that is life’s feast? Is it sexist of me to say this? I’m ready and willing to be sensitive to any issue the women want me to be sensitive to, as long as it’s “dame de decorum est”, and not a lie. It’s not only cowgirls who get the blues; when the bell tolls, it tolls for all of us.

Has Hemingway replaced one "old Lie" with another lie when he says, "You will die like a dog for no good reason."

doesn’t mean they have a right to abort babies taking up space in their wombs like a house guest, for those innocents didn’t have a right to walk in their wombs like a house guest. Are there jobs in the groves of academe that is life’s feast? Is it sexist of me to say this? I’m ready and willing to be sensitive to any issue the women want me to be sensitive to, as long as it’s “dame de decorum est”, and not a lie. It’s not only cowgirls who get the blues; when the bell tolls, it tolls for all of us.

Has Hemingway replaced one "old Lie" with another lie when he says, "You will die like a dog for no good reason."

If the scenario in the Middle-East is being written for Armageddon, should labs "ardent for some desperate glory" retire to a neutral corner, while the battles are being fought for the soul of mankind? Maybe there’s a middle ground between the "old Lie" that says it’s sweet and proper to die for the fatherland, and Hemingway’s cynicism, "You will die like a dog for no reason." Christianity tells us that the greatest love one can possess is the act of laying down one’s life for his friends. Arlington Cemetery would be a national embarrassment if we concluded that all the great sacrificial deeds of the war dead were made "for no good reason." We should be able to agree among ourselves that war is hell without replacing the "old Lie" with Hemingway’s half-truth.

At Notre Dame, celebrating "Year of Women," we should be able to spend time dispelling the myth that men are superior without replacing it with another myth. Eliot’s Becket told us that the last temptation is the greatest treason: "to do the right deed for the wrong reason." We shouldn’t be tempted to think that Notre Dame owes the ladies the "Year of Women", because "every year so far has been the year of men". Even in the real world, it isn’t true to say that white males always have their back-sides in a tub of butter. As a Marine Officer, you could be in charge of a Mach 2+ F/A-18A, a vertical take-off Harrier or one of our other jets or helicopters. And you could do it by the time you’re 23. But it takes a special commitment on your part. We demand leaders at all levels. We teach you to be one. If you’re a freshman or sophomore, ask about our undergraduate officer commissioning programs. If you’re a junior, check out our graduate programs. Starting salaries are from $20,000 to $24,000. And you can count on going farther... faster. We’re looking for a few good men.

performance in the Buffaloes’ 31-31 tie with Tennessee couldn’t have helped his chances. Hagan is an option quarterback to the mold of Tony Rice and, for that reason, he won’t be able to impress the Heisman voters with his passing marks.

Junior Ty Detmer of Brigham Young, USC sophomore Todd Marinovich and Miami senior Craig Erickson are the best of a strong contingent of quarterback candidates for the award. Detmer is the finest passer in the land, but Marinovich and Erickson both play for high-profile programs which could harm their cause.

The 1990 Heisman field lacks a solid running back candidate of the Barry Sanders variety, but Houston senior Chuck Wear (formerly of Pittsburgh junior Curvin Richards and Fresno State senior Aaron Craver and Alabama senior Siran Stacy) will make strong bids for the award.

Tennessee sophomore Chuck Webb, a top preseason candidate, is out for the season after tearing the anterior cruciate ligament in his right knee.

Red Sox in flux over Clemens’s shoulder injury

BOSTON (AP) — Roger Clemens of the Boston Red Sox was reported "much more comfortable" Thursday as he underwent hospital tests for a painful right shoulder.

Dr. Arthur Pappas, the Red Sox team physician, said pain and swelling had "subsided significantly."

"There are encouraging signs and he’s more comfortable, but that doesn’t necessarily correlate with what’s happening inside his shoulder," Pappas said.

Pappas, an orthopedic specialist, said that while there are "optimistic signs" he had to wait until the results of tests become known, probably on Friday.

Clemens, who has a 20-6 record and leads the major leagues with a 1.98 earned run average and 204 strikeouts, underwent extensive tests at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center.

Clemens took had X-rays and a Magnetic Resonance Imaging procedure done.

Pappas virtually ruled out any rotator cuff trouble and said Clemens promised to "more limited to tendons in the front of the shoulder."

Holtz continued from page 24

People said we lacked discipline and that we were a bunch of thugs," Holtz said. "You look at it and you say, I can't change what they said. You look at it and see if there is any truth to it. There was no truth that we had thugs on our team.

And sometimes, they make bad decisions, but they're great people.

The tunnel incidents were just a small part of the off-field problems Holtz has faced in the past two years. There have been suspensions of key players, allegations of widespread steroid use among Irish players, accusations of recruiting violations and even charges of telephone misuse.

At times, it seems like Holtz wants to lash out at the critics. At other times, it seems like he realizes the problems come with the territory.

"We were 5-6 and we had no problems," Holtz said. "When we were 8-4, we had a few problems. In today's age, whatever can be done on Notre Dame. Oh, I don't know. You'd just have to ask those people. I have no idea what things happen, how they happen.

The only thing I can honestly say in my heart is that we've always had the right intentions and done the right things. I can honestly say that if Notre Dame fired me tomorrow or if somebody shot me tomorrow with all these situations and in all my years I would try to uphold the mandate that was given to me when they hired me.

Early Thursday morning many members of the sophomore class had walked dazedly in line for football tickets. Holtz showed up with doughnuts and coffee and a parting shot at the crowd.

"I tell you when you graduate whether you like it or not," he said.

Holtz's future at Notre Dame has been the subject of great debate since the Irish won the national championship in 1988. The National recently reported that Holtz had expressed interest in the vacant Atlanta Falcons coaching job, a position eventually filled by Jerry Glanville. The reports linking Holtz to other jobs are about as common as the problems Holtz has faced in the last two years. In all my years I would try to uphold the mandate that was given to me when they hired me.

"I'll be here when you graduate," the coach said. "People today realize that the greatest job in the world, the greatest place in the world, the greatest people in the world. I just can't believe a guy who is as good as Holtz can have the ability to be classified anywhere else or going anywhere else, Holtz said.

Holtz said that coaching has changed him over the years, that he is not the same coach who took over at William & Mary in 1969.

"Coaching when you first start is the big games, the excitement, the TV shows, the book," he said. "You're younger and you think, 'It would be great to someday have somebody express my name in the same sentence with Bear Bryant and Woody Hayes.'

But then, it's really the association with people. It's not being their friend or their buddy. It's setting the standard and then showing them how you can reach it. Yet, if you don't make a firm commitment to being the best you can be, you're doing them a disservice.

If we're going to play football, let's play it to the best of our abilities.

Lou speaks out on football: "Football is an extension of life. Everything that you're going to face in life in the years to come is involved in football. You have some goals, you have some direction. You've got to develop your skills, your talent, your abilities. You've got to work exceptionally hard. It's a game that teaches people to work with other people. You fail in your success depends on others. You can be a great receiver but if the quarterback doesn't get you the ball, you can't display your talents or abilities. And if you do all this, you still may not get the recognition you think you deserve. You win and they give it to somebody else. You don't get the promotion to the final team."

On winning and losing: "You have heartaches and you have disappointments. Things don't go well and you lose. You don't necessarily have a lot of friends. You have to hire pallbearers for your own funeral. And when you win, you have all kinds of people rejoicing and all of a sudden you find that's not really what's important in the game or in football."

On the volume of mail he receives: "We spend half of our time opening mail about speaking requests. I am not a speaker. I'm a coach. I can't imagine going anywhere that the volume of mail I get would diminish. If I became a mailman, I wouldn't handle as much mail as I do now."

On pressure: "I do not feel pressure to win - none. There's never been anyone from the administration who has said that we have to win this game. I like to win and I'm sure they're disappointed when we don't win. Pressure is going to take a big exam when you haven't studied. You feel pressure to run the program and have our players reflect the standards that Notre Dame values and characters. We just do the best we can and set things right of our own."

On criticism and accusations: "It seems that the more successful you have the more situations like that arise. It hurts you with some of the things you can't control. You have to look at yourself and say, Did I do the right thing? If the answer is yes, you just have to go on. If the answer is yes, you have to see what you could do to improve the situation."

On real pressure: "When you're 35 and the bank turns your request to re-mortgage the farm, you've got a crop in the field, you've got six hungry youngsters and your wife is off with the dummie, you understand that there's got to be a resilience to you, some determination, something to get you through tough times."

On like: "I believe in the people. Do not be a spectator. You do something to experience what it's like. You can do a lot and experience it thousands of times. Instead of sitting on the sofa watching TV, go do something.

Coast Conference finals, defeating NCAA co-champion Virginia along the way. Junior forward Clint Carnell and junior George Dunn are the cornerstones of Duke. Berticelli's positive frame of mind has already worn off onto this Notre Dame team. "It's a test," said junior goalkeeper Peter Gulli. "We played well (in an exhibition) against Indiana, and that gave us confidence we could play with Top 20 teams."

Senior co-captain Paul LaVigne thinks the Irish have become tough this year. "The intensity level is key," he said. "What you do in practice is what you do in games, and we've had good intensity levels in practice."

The road doesn't get any easier for the Irish after Friday's game with the Blue Devils, as Notre Dame will face another strong ACC team in North Carolina State on Sunday. The Wolfpack, ranked 17th in the nation by Soccer America, have two wins so far in the campaign, against the Gamecocks and UNC-Greensboro. The Irish, beaten by Duke N.C. State's attack has proved dangerous this season, propelling the Pack to a combined 11-1 score in their two victories.

N.C. State was 8-8-1 last season, respectable considering the strength of the ACC, and returns eight starters off that team. Stars for the Wolfpack include All-ACC midfielder Dario Brose, as well as forward Henry Gutierrez, and keeper Dale Allred, who played in every minute of competition last season.

The Irish aren't looking past the Blue Devils at the Wolfpack, though.

"N.C. State is equal, if not tougher than Duke, but we want to take one game at a time," Gulli said. "We'll think about State after Duke."

Berticelli is confident but cautious about his team's chances. "We can be competitive," he said, "but they're experienced teams, and we're less experienced. It's very, very important for us to play well as a unit. If we do, then we can give them a tough match."

Road trips such as these are a key component in taking a team to the championship-caliber level, and if the enthusiasm the players show and the overtime period against Dayton are any indicators, the Irish could upset a ranked team in the very near future.
NEW YORK (AP) — Sassy and flashy and psyched to the max, Andre Agassi put on a show this Friday night to blast away tennis to set up a fiery match against Boris Becker in the U.S. Open semifinals.

Agassi, hungry for his first Grand Slam, chewed up Soviet Andrei Cherkasov 6-2, 6-2, 6-3 Thursday night and gave further proof that he isn’t just the tennis world’s loudest dresser. America’s top player and the leader of the pack of young sluggers on the tour, Agassi, 20, wallowed deep shots relentlessly with his oversized, neon green, power racket and kept Cherkasov on the defensive in every set.

Cherkasov, who beat baseline Michael Chang in the third round, found that there’s more to Agassi than his funky green and black clothes, and more to his game than big ground-strokes. Agassi took every opportunity to charge the net and kill the ball on the run. He didn’t show much finesse, but after a year of pumping iron, his power is undeniable.

It was never more so than at the end of the first set and throughout the second. Agassi took a 4-2 lead in the first set with a forehand deep in the corner on game point that whizzed by Cherkasov as if it were a rocket. Agassi took particular pleasure in that shot, gazing at it in admiration before strutting back to the baseline. Agassi then broke Cherkasov with an assault that had the Soviet sprinting frantically from side to side, desperately chasing balls and finally hitting them wide or into the net.

Agassi finished the set with a service winner to take the game at love.

It was more of the same in the second set and third. Cherkasov breaking Agassi a few times but Agassi coming right back with his relentless assault.

He has powerful ground-strokes. I think the best in the world, " said Cherkasov, a 20-year-old born on the Fourth of July.

Slosar, teamwork and mentally focusing on the game. It’s not high school where you can rely on talent alone.

"Everybody has the talent (or college)," said Slosar. "You really have to focus on the mental part of the game. It’s not high school where you can rely on talent alone. Being smart and understanding your mind is what puts you above the rest."

Jennifer Slosar certainly knows what it takes to become the best. She won four letters in volleyball and was a second team all-state selection her senior year at Mercy High School in Birmingham, Michigan. She also excelled in basketball and track and field, respectively.

"I just have a love for athletics," said Slosar. "I’ve played basketball all my life. Volleyball is still a new sport to me and I’m still learning. It’s something different. It’s a lot of fun, but a lot of work, too. I’ve got a lot different from basketball, especially the conditioning."

"Jennifer’s talent certainly runs in the family. Her father John Slosar played basketball at John Carroll University."

"My Dad’s been my biggest inspiration," Slosar said. "He doesn’t really know volleyball, but he’s always been my mental coach. He really understands."

Slosar basically had her pick of the crop coming out of high school. She had scholarship offers for basketball but none of the schools appealed to her.

Her decision came down to the University of Michigan (which also offered her a golf scholarship) and Notre Dame.

"Michigan had a really good engineering program too, but nothing beats the tradition of Notre Dame. The community spirit is great here. My recruiting visit told me where I wanted to be."

"Bill yet, another loss for Michigan at the hands of the Irish."

Slosar is making a good adjustment to the college game.

"The game moves much quicker at this level. Teams like Stanford and Texas are strong. It’s all about the conditioning."

"It’s mostly a matter of being consistent. I love to hit, but even that needs work."

Fortunately, Slosar won’t be in action for the Irish this weekend. She has been plagued by shin splints in the last few years, but after an unusual amount of pain, a bone scan yesterday revealed a stress fracture in her right ankle.

"That’s not what she needed right now," Lambert said. "We don’t know when she’ll be back."

Slosar on the other hand, has different ideas.

"I’m really excited about this year," Slosar said. "We have a tough schedule, but in order to be the best you have to play the best. Everyone on the team feels that way."

Women's soccer squad flies south for weekend matches against Top 20 teams

By DAVE DIELTEMAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's soccer team flies south this weekend as it flies south for matchups against Top 20 opponents Duke and UNC-Greensboro.

The Irish set off for sunny North Carolina at 8 a.m. Friday morning, in order that they may make the most of their time to gear up for a Saturday showdown with Duke at 2 p.m. and a Sunday meeting with Greensboro at 1 p.m.

Does this sound simple? Fly down, win, fly home. Not quite. The Irish are in for two hard-fought games this weekend. Duke, which was ranked 20th in Division I in the most recent NCAA poll, recently trounced fifth-ranked William and Mary (at William and Mary), raising Duke's record on the young season to 2-0. In their first game, the Blue Devils handily dispatched Mercer 6-0 at Duke.

"Duke is scary," noted Irish head coach Chris Petrucelli. "They have lots of firepower up front, and they are solid at every position. Mary Pat Rosenthal, the daughter of Notre Dame Athletic Director Dick Rosenthal, is a tough full-back for Duke. We definitely have to be aware of her when we're taking corner kicks.

"But of course, she is only one of many talented players. It's a difficult situation to go to their place, both because they are playing well now and we have a young team."

Similarly, UNC-Greensboro, Petrucelli's alma mater, has been in the Top 20 of Division II each of the past three years. "Greensboro is a young and talented program," explained Petrucelli. "They are at a point where they have lots of runners playing, while we have lots of freshmen playing. Again, they will be difficult to beat. The hardest part is that we have to play them the day after we play Duke."

Yet the Irish, who tied Wisconsin 1-1 at Wisconsin (an easy feat) in an exhibition game, are 1-0 on the regular season this year. "The injuries are starting to stack up for us," lamented Notre Dame coach Petrucelli. "We've got several players out with minor injuries. Also, having Molly Lennon injured creates a situation where we will be young in our experience as well as our age. Now, we have almost no experience. This is a tough situation for the other players. But I certainly think that we have people who can fill in and that they are all capable of playing. Still, we can't afford to have too many injuries."

"As far as the season is concerned, we need to be encouraged with the way we are playing now. Things are starting to come together, especially where the attack is concerned. Our defense is solid the whole way, but a defense does not take as much time to develop as an attack. These are the type of games you must play to develop national competitiveness. Playing ranked..."

Thus, despite the injuries, youth and inexperience, the Irish remain confident as they tour down with destiny draws near.

Holz finds happiness at ND
Irish coach enjoys having 'the worst job in the country'

By GREG GUFFEY
Sports Editor

A few days after the Sports Illustrated article appeared accruing Notre Dame of widespread steroid use in its football program head coach Lou Holtz received a phone call from one of his fraternity brothers at Kent State.

"He said 'You've got the worst job in the country.'" Holtz explained. "He said 'you're in the worst profession you could be in.'" He said. We were right in college. You sure aren't very smart when you're buying into that stuff.

"Now I don't know whether he was trying to be funny or what. One thing was obvious - he was glad he had his job and I had mine. But I told him, I'm in the greatest profession in the world and I'm at the greatest place in the world.

As he enters his fifth season at Notre Dame, one gets the feeling that Holtz has genuinely found happiness in the most pressures job in the nation.

While dealing with steroids, suspensions and pre-game fights, Holtz has managed a 37-11 record in four seasons at the helm of the Irish program.

He is 24-1 in the past two seasons, including a national championship in 1988.

"Every other place there was something missing," Holtz said. "You think it's special here but you don't really understand what it's all about. It happens when you're part of the family. I don't want to be a well-known person. I might be because there's no way you can't be at Notre Dame. I just want to coach here. Live here and identify with Notre Dame.

In the early 1980s Holtz was one of those final 26 tells a lot about his character and also a lot about what he expects from those people around him.

"Our high school coach was very tough, very demanding," Holtz said. "The only reason I didn't quit was that I couldn't figure out how I could tell my dad who was in the Pacific (in World War II) or my uncle in the battle of the Bulge that it was too tough. You just don't tell people who went through the Battle of the Bulge that it was too tough."

Even though he stuck with it, Holtz said he never had a great amount of pressure. He was good enough to earn a scholarship to Notre Dame but he was never a truly great athlete. He played two seasons at Notre Dame and then went off to injury and ended his career.

"I used to pray that God would make me a good athlete," Holtz said. "He never did. I've been involved in the big games, the excitement, the pressure, the stress and allows me to be involved in the big-time games. It's really amazing."

Before coming to Notre Dame in 1986, Holtz had head coaching stops at William & Mary, North Carolina State, Arkansas and Minnesota. He played in 12 bowl games at those schools and boasted a combined record of 116-65-5.

"If you look at Notre Dame called. Holtz answered on the first ring. It was the ultimate challenge. It's the only big-time program that had fallen on its back. It was too tough. You just don't tell people who went through that to the court.

"We practiced really well this week," agreed junior outside hitter Jennifer Slosar, one of last weekend's bright spots who will be sidelined this week end by a stress fracture in her right ankle.

"We were pretty upset after last weekend. We know there's no easy way to rebound. We could have won them all. We can really be an excellent team. It's just that so far our work in practice and the game has been low."

"We can make the NCAA's if we pull together. Everybody has to do their part. We have to focus and put our minds to it."

"There are two things that are firm beliefs of Jennifer," Holz see Holtz / page 19

Irish to play two in Carolina

By RICH KURZ
Sports Writer

New head soccer coach Mike Berticelli is about to experience two more firsts at Notre Dame - his first regular-season road trip and his first match with a Top 20 opponent as the coach of ND. The Irish travel to Durham, N.C., to participate in the Metropolitan Life Classic, where they will face 10th-ranked Duke tonight and 17th-ranked N.C. State on Sunday.

Notre Dame soccer fans had some cause for concern throughout much of last Saturday's opener versus Dayton, as the Irish were something less than sharp. Much of that concern evaporated after a Notre Dame scoring blitz that ultimately gave them a 3-1 overtime victory. At least it did in the mind of Coach Berticelli.

"Hopefully playing better at the end has given us some momentum," Berticelli said, "but the level of competition will be far higher than against Dayton."

Tonight the Irish will face a team that has already notched two wins against quality opponents, as Duke downed Jacksonville and the University of North Carolina-Greensboro earlier this season.

Irish leading candidate for Heisman

By FRANK PASTOR
Associate Sports Editor

There used to be an unwritten rule in college football that the Heisman Trophy would not be awarded to underclassmen. But with the recent exodus of juniors into the NFL, the senior Heisman Trophy candidate is quickly becoming an endangered species.

This year, for the first time, there was no exception as six underclassmen, including two Notre Dame freshmen Ismail Millender and Terrell Davis, made strong favorites to win college football's most prestigious award. The Heisman Committee, which will choose from all five invitations to February's trophy presentation at New York's plush Downtown Athletic Club could go to underclassmen.

Leading the pack is Notre Dame's running back, Ismail Millender, widely considered the most exciting player in the country. Ismail knows no bounds as he has been utilized in exactly the same way as former Irish standout and Heisman Trophy winner Tim Brown.

"I never really came here with any big expectations," Holtz see Holtz / page 19
