Frosh football fans show true ND spirit

After a lot of complaint plaguing about who should go tickets and where students should sit at Notre Dame game, the first home game arrived.
One group of fans stood out from the rest. It wasn’t Notre students per so, but rather the freshmen classes of both schools.

As a senior, I finally had the chance to sit in the coveted senior section. I have never to a ND game didn’t like. I guess I couldn’t be the only one.
and I were in sections 28 and 29. I was one of the very few.
The senior section was not all I had dreamed it would be. Granted, there were times as many people as there should have been to due every girlfriend, boyfriend, brother, (or friend from home, and alum who takes a student into getting them into the student section; but that wasn’t the real problem. What bugged me most was the really bad attitude displayed by the students around me.

During the National Anthem fans were wearing at one another about being in the wrong seats. I could not believe how rude and rude everyone was. Friends and roommates turned on one another. I could not help but look over at the freshman section.
Even though they were basically in the end zones they were really having a good time. I think the freshmen had much more spirit and a much better attitude about the game.

An impressive percentage of them were wearing green shirts. I felt like I was root-swearing at one another about being in the cheerleaders job easy for them. Also,

 Richie Irish recently decided to expand its program to include the community surrounding Notre Dame. At a press conference last weekend, senior Paul Ruesch announced the opening of the University's first Recycling Drop-Off Center, which is located behind the Alumni Senior Club.

The Alumni Association provided space and publicity for the center. "Since it is a student-run activity, we would like to be involved," said Charlie Lennon, executive director of the Alumni Association.

"The success of this new program is due in a large part to the Alumni Association," Ruesch said.

The center is designed for use by the entire community. "Just because it is a student-run activity and because it is on the Notre Dame campus does not preclude the local community," Lennon said.

The large recycling “boat” in the rear parking lot of the club was provided by Superior Waste Systems. This company also collects the waste material and transports it to its recycling facility in Chicago. "We began this program with Notre Dame primarily due to the severe shortage of landfill space," said Linda Spear, a representative of Superior Waste Systems.

"The company hopes that this recycling program with Notre Dame will start a precedent in the surrounding community," she added.

Last fall the Environmental Action Club helped initiate the campus-wide recycling program. A new organization, Recyclin’ Irish, was created at that time expressly to support and expand the program.

A highly organized residence hall recycling system has been established under the leadership of Ruesch. Each dormitory has a representative who works closely with glass, newspaper, and aluminum “commissioners” to coordinate recycling within that hall. These individuals and a team of volunteers collect the waste and take it to a central location.

Ruesch has been pleased with Recyclin’ Irish’s participation. "We’ve had phenomenal participation," he said.

Ruesch, a self-proclaimed environmentalist, has future plans for Recyclin’ Irish. He hopes to provide receptacles in University offices for recycling office waste paper. He would also like to coordinate a program with Food Services to recycle old Observer’s left in the dining halls. "I am devoted to establishing a comprehensive recycling program," he said.
Gas tanker explodes in Michigan; 18 injured

BAY CITY, Mich. (AP) — A tanker carrying about 1 million gallons of gasoline exploded and burned Sunday on the Saginaw River, injuring most of the 18 people aboard and spilling fuel in the water.

The fire was too hot for firefighters to douse, police officials waited for it to burn itself out, said Coast Guard Lt. Tom Koontz.

One person from the ship was missing, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Gerald Backus. Gov. James Blanchard visited the site and declared the blaze an emergency, supplying state aid and assistance.

The fire was reported at 8:45 a.m., while the tanker was unloading at the Total Refinery Dock Facility, and was still burning Sunday evening.

Authorities warned spectators to clear the area in case of multiple explosions.

"A few people blew right off the boat and slammed against," said Bay City police Officer Kenneth Adcock. "The sky is covered with black smoke. If it blows again, it's going to be a big one."

Witnesses said the black smoke blotted out the sun throughout the afternoon.

The tanker, owned by Cleveland Tankers Inc. of Cleveland, was carrying about 20,000 barrels of gasoline or about 1 million gallons, said Koontz. It has a capacity of about 54,000 barrels.

"That's the estimate. That's a lot of gas," Koontz said.

The state Department of Natural Resources was conducting water and air pollution tests Sunday to check for environmental contamination, spokeswoman Susan Henry said.

A gasoline spill is less damaging than an oil spill because "it's volatile and it evaporates," she said, adding that two booms were strung downstream from the ship to contain any spilled fuel.

M. Stepansky had returned home 15 minutes before the blast from working at the Bay Chemicals Co. directly across the river from the tanker. He said he raced back to work after hearing the explosion.

"I thought the plant exploded and when I got out there I saw black smoke everywhere," he said. "I saw the employees on the ship go overboard."

"It was really hot. I could feel the heat from across the river."

His wife, Cheryl, said that their house was less than two blocks from the explosion and shaken by the blast.

"It was like a slow rumbling, it got louder and louder like thunder," she said.

Two Coast Guard helicopters sprayed fire-fighting foam while rescued crew members from the tanker, said Lt. Dennis Secor.

The vessel was unloading crude oil when an explosion occurred, said Cleveland Tankers spokesman Terry Miller. It has a capacity of about 54,000 barrels.

"It was a big one," Koontz said.

"We know we are up for a big one."

Bay City police Officer Kenneth Adcock. "The river is co vered with black smoke."

Graduate School.

Lawrence explained the vital retention phase of his plan.

"Since this campus is so predominantly white," said Lawrence, "we need to sensitize minority students before they can make the transition into this new environment. It is especially difficult for those students who say, come from predominantly black schools or communities."

The ND administration has cited the transformation of the Graduate School into a nationally acclaimed research institution as a high priority. Lawrence believes that it is essential to foster a multicultural, learning environment if Notre Dame hopes to achieve this goal.

"Since society is multicultural, it is important for Graduate students to interact with students of different backgrounds, races and cultures," Lawrence said. "If the students are not exposed to other cultures, they are not being challenged to break down stereotypes created by television," Lawrence said.

From 1984 to 1989 Lawrence worked as assistant dean of Rider College. At Rider he directed a State funded Educational Opportunity Program, where he gained experience in the access and retention of disadvantaged students.

Turpin expressed confidence in Lawrence's ability to implement his recruitment plan.

"We have great hopes for him," she said. "He is the type of individual who is easy for students to talk to. I think that he'll do a great job marketing the University."

CHEETA is working to eliminate such abuse. There are laws against cruel treatment of animals in countries such as Germany and France, but CHEETA wants laws against animal abuse in the United States.

In Indiana, where farming is prominent, many people don't want to discuss the subject and simply ignore it, according to Klinkhamer.

"We know we are up for a hard fight, but we keep on trying," said Klinkhamer. "Once people are aware, then they can change their habits and views."

On the Saint Mary's campus, CHEETA is sponsored by the Women for the Environment Club. Through this group, CHEETA will educate the Saint Mary's and Notre Dame community on future animal issues and protests.

CHEETA invites all interested students to come to meetings on the first Thursday of every month in the Francis Branch of the South Bend Library. Meeting times will be available through the South Bend Library.
South African black leaders make joint call for peace; 800 deaths reported

SOWETO, South Africa (AP) — The king of the Zulus urged thousands of armed supporters Sunday to curb the factional fighting that has caused almost 800 deaths in black townships around Johannesburg.

"Everybody must lay down their arms and take their brother's hand in friendship," Zulu King Goodwill Zwelithini told fellow tribesmen in Soweto and Tokoza, two townships that have been hard hit by the fighting which began in early August.

Zwelithini shared the stage at the peace rallies with President Tutor Ndamase of the Transkei, the tribal homeland of the Xhosas. The Xhosas have joined fellow African National Congress supporters in clashes against Zulus loyal to the conservative government.

But sides blame the other for the fighting.

But on Friday, ANC leader Nelson Mandela said South African President F. W. de Klerk knows some of the violence may be instigated by a "hidden hand," an apparent reference to right-wing whites and others opposed to de Klerk's efforts to attain power-sharing between blacks and whites.

"I have come to this place to put out the flames of violence," said Zwelithini at the two rallies attended by more than 30,000 Zulus, many wearing red headbands and brandishing axes and spears.

ND engineering to hold Industry Fair

By JOHANNA KELLY

In an effort to promote interaction between students and industry, Notre Dame's Joint Engineering Council (JEC) is holding its annual Industry Fair this Wednesday.

Thirty-eight companies plan on attending this year, which is the most ever throughout the fair's ten-year history, according to Katherine Pirrota, president of JEC. Some major participants are Andersen Consulting, Proctor & Gamble, Merck, IBM, Boeing, and Dow Chemical.

The career fair will be held from 11-4 in the Fitzpatrick Engineering Building. This will offer engineering majors an opportunity to speak with company representatives and distribute their resumes, said Pirrota.

"I would strongly encourage sophomores and juniors to attend," said Pirrota. "You can make some strong contacts." The president of Notre Dame's Society of Women Engineers, Colleen Tempel, added, "We really have a diverse group. There's virtually something for everyone."

An hors d'oeuvre hour will be held at the South Bend Marriott from 5:30 to 6:30. This will give students a chance to talk informally with company representatives, said Pirrota. This event is sponsored by the General Electric Aerospace Division.

A banquet will follow, where Meredith Ross, Senior Controls Engineer with Bechtel Corporation will speak. Ross's talk, entitled "What Do You Want to be When You Grow Up?" will deal with choosing career paths.

Ross, who recently returned from a two year assignment in London, is a life-time member of the Society of Women Engineers. She received the Outstanding New Engineer award from the Society in 1988.

"The reason we asked Meredith is because it's the Year of the Woman," said Tempel. "We were very interested in getting a woman professional to speak.

Both Tempel and Pirrota mentioned that transportation will be provided for all Notre Dame students interested in attending the banquet. Buses will leave the main circle starting at 5 p.m.

The event will be sponsored jointly by the Society of Women Engineers and the Joint Engineering Council.

Radical forces and depressed economy "force" Gorbachev into liberal decisions

Radical forces and depressed economy "force" Gorbachev into liberal decisions

Mikhail Gorbachev, driven by the gasping Soviet economy: republic, seems to have who won approval for the drastic reforms in the Russian Parliament this week and forced Gorbachev’s hand. Yeltsin threatened to pursue his economic revolution in Russia — which contains half the Soviet people and three-quarters of Soviet territory. With or without Gorbachev’s support, Gorbachev went along. The economic plan he submitted to the Russian Parliament on Friday "95 percent coincides" with the Russian plan, Russian Deputy Prime Minister Grigory Yavlinsky told his Parliament on Saturday.

That is an exaggeration. Gorbachev rejected some key points and a parliamentary battle remains to be fought. But the comment was a good indication that the Russian radicals feel they have already won. In the five years since he came to power proclaiming the need for reform, Gorbachev has tinkered with the Communist system, trying to fill the barren shelves of Soviet stores.

Now, he has thrown his support behind an economic reform plan full of ideas that warm the hearts of capitalists and horrified die-hard Communists: private land, home ownership, unemployment, factories, bankruptcy, and rising prices. In the first months of switching to a market economy, the Soviet Union is likely to feel the full pain of these shocks.

Gorbachev this week was defeated, dumpings his plan in Parliament as he told Soviet legislators such radical change would have been impossible earlier. "A year and a half ago, we were just discussing about pluralism," he said, referring to the Soviet Union’s dramatic switch to multipartisan elections.

If he had heeded calls to change from a centrally planned economy then, Gorbachev said, "Do you think anything would have come of it? That’s nonsense."

"We decided it was time to think about things. Otherwise, there would have been such a tragedy, such confusion in this country, that we never could have escaped it," he said.

Now, however, the changes must come quickly. Gorbachev admitted for the first time that reform and to insist on selling, regaining, 1991, the rigid system can not run the economy. In the face of the Russian republic’s plan, Rybkyzov predicted it would lead to a 30 percent drop in the country’s standard of living.

But all Dayton plans, which calls for dramatic price increases on Jan. 1, without fundamental structural changes, is so unpopular that legislators have called for his resignation. And about 50,000 Muscovites augmented near Red Square in a cold rain Sunday evening, calling for Rybkyzov to step down.

Still remaining, however, is the battle over sections of the Russian plan that would strip the central government of much of its power. By M. E. M. (AP) — Russian Deputy Prime Minister

Ivy Tech aids attempt to increase skilled workers

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — Indiana Vocational Technical College is going to take a new road in the state’s efforts to create more jobs and develop a more highly skilled work force. Sam Borden, Ivy Tech’s regional vice president in Terre Haute, has named a new, state-level position and will work closely with the state Department of Commerce, the governor, lieutenant governor and the General Assembly.

"I’m extremely enthusiastic," he said Friday. "It’s something new — a way to create and have an impact on the entire state system... It’s something the local board believes strongly in, and a natural fit for my personal interests."

On Tuesday, Ivy Tech President Gerald Lamkin told regional trustees that the need for a skilled work force is becoming a crisis in Indiana.

"More and more the state is perceived as the number one vehicle to assist" in developing programs to increase jobs and develop a more highly skilled work force, Borden said.

Borden said, "Ivy Tech is not doing a bad job, but the job is getting bigger and tougher.

Borden said Gov. Evan Bayh and Lt. Gov. Frank O’Bannon want to strengthen technical education in Indiana.

They also want economic-development packages to move job-creation incentives toward programs that prepare well-trained, skilled workforce.

Under Borden’s leadership, the Terre Haute region has become a leader in economic development initiatives with its industrial training program and its new plastics technology center.

Student lauded in PACRIM Forum

Student lauded in PACRIM Forum

Special to The Observer

Feng Jiang, a doctoral student in economics from Taiwan, was selected by his peers attending the PACRIM Forum in San Francisco last week to address the conference.

More than 800 students from 24 nations joined 500 invited guests and delegates to the PACRIM Forum, a biennial conference on investment and business opportunities throughout Asia and the Pacific.

Jiang’s 20-minute presentation to the forum was entitled "The Chinese economy: opportunities and challenges." Frank Potenziani, an Albu-querque, New Mexico businessman and investor, attended the conference and is a representative of the Notre Dame Business Advisory Council. Chris Chung, a Notre Dame under-graduate finance major, also participated in the forum, representing the Notre Dame Council on International Business Development.

"The PACRIM Forum is somewhat unusual," said Potenziani, "in that it involves students of business and finance with very high-ranking and powerful business leaders, heads of state and political figures from throughout the Pacific."

Potenziani cited Bob Hawke, prime minister of Australia; Carmen Lawrence, premier of Western Australia; Geo. Deukmejian of California; and Vladimir Klozunov of Eastern Siberia as typical of the sorts of officials involved in the conference.

"Among the business leaders present were Kenichi Ohmae, chair of McKinsey & Company; Charles Pink, editor-in-chief of Forbes magazine; Phillip Ruthven, executive chairman of the Hls Group, Australia, and others. The students, political figures, corporate leaders and investors gathered in San Francisco, Sept. 9-12, 1990, to discuss trade relations, government and corporate policies and prospects for the future.

Issues related to international trade, regional trading blocs and prospects for sustained long-term growth and investment opportunities were foremost among the agenda items.

"We were delighted," said Potenziani, "to have a Notre Dame student selected by such an honor, and we were very proud of the job he did. His presentation captured the views of tomorrow’s Pacific Rim leaders to the leaders of today and addressed the issues and concerns of students from throughout the Pacific.

Jiang, who will receive his doctorate in economics at the conclusion of this semester, teaches "Business Conditions Analysis" for the department of finance and business economics in the College of Business Administration.
Dear Editor:

What can a prestigious university, rich in tradition, do with 500 acres of woodlands?

The plans have been made by the Notre Dame administration to destroy and develop such an area. The plans for this "unknown wilderness" possibly consist in the building of a new football stadium replacing our famous one, thus ruining nature and ending part of the Notre Dame tradition. Student unity is needed against this misuse of funds which will destroy beautiful land and the caring, spirited tradition we attend this school for.

At a slide show at the Center for Social Concerns, I learned that the destruction of five acres has already been completed. This land contained free deer, birds, raccoons and many plush green trees and wildflowers, as do the over 500 acres remaining. These beautiful elements of nature cannot remain "unknown" and must not be destroyed as I have seen far too often.

I am from New Jersey where our motto, "The Garden State" is a distant memory. A new football stadium (or any development of the woods) would destroy Notre Dame's tradition just as chemical companies and shopping malls have torn down New Jersey's motto. The tradition of our stadium as we know it sitting with Touchdown Jesus shadowing the field, etc. would be forgotten. And our university's image as a place of social concern and Christian justice would be raped along with the thousands of trees.

We cannot want this to happen, and it does not need to be done. If we, the students, unite behind the life of the wilderness, the land and a great part of Notre Dame's tradition will be saved.

Relations committee makes headway

Dear Editor:

At the end of the '89 fall semester, the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's College Relations Committee was established. This joint university committee was formed to create an atmosphere in which a positive and open feeling exists between members of the two campuses. The committee plans to serve as the driving force behind improvements in Notre Dame/Saint Mary's relations.

To date, the committee consists of concerned students and faculty from both campuses.

On August 27, the committee sponsored its first event, the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Freshmen Women's picnic. The picnic was held at Saint Mary's Haggar College Center. The purpose of this was for the women to meet each other before stereotypical attitudes could be set. Being its first year, the picnic was a success. It was encouraging to see not only the number of women who participated, but also the interaction that took place.

Now it is time to explore further possibilities. The avenue is paved for improving relations.

Alumni avoid ticket frustrations by costly package purchase

Dear Editor:

Recent remarks in The Observer note the difficulties encountered in securing tickets for the Notre Dame football matches—in particular home games. Alumni, including members of the Monogram Club, are similarly frustrated.

Sorsum corda! The B/R Savings and Groan Society at the JACC provides relief. For a mere $419 per person, anyone on our planet can obtain a home game ticket. Via the B/R-Robustelli Marketing enterprise, anyone can buy a "Ticket to the Game" and two nights at an Elkhart hotel, bus trips between Elkhart and du Lac, an "Open Bar" Legends reception, a "Buffett Dinner with Beer, Wine" etc., the "Big Game Pep Rally" AND a "Legends Tailgate Party prior to the Game" at Krause Field—beer and wine are included at an otherwise dry du Lac. Think of that, citizens of du Lac! Think of that, citizens of our planet can obtain a $419 ticket, more than worth the price according to the known value of a ticket.

Given that the real cost of this novel B/R Savings and Groan Society package is an estimated $250, you can declare the near $200 difference as a tax deductible contribution to the CSC (Center of Social Concerns). The IRS will allow this since, de facto, the University is now a wholly owned subsidiary of its Athletic Department.

Hispanic heritage month recognized at ND with native music and cuisine

accent writer

South Bend mayor Joe Kernan proclaimed September 16-October 15 Hispanic Heritage Month. In addition, Notre Dame's Hispanic student organizations will be sponsoring several events to promote the rich culture of Hispanicamerica.

Also during this month, Mexico's Independence Day will be observed on September 16 (Día de la independencia). Various celebrations, festivals, masses, dance, music, and food characterize the celebration. Día de la independencia is tax atant to the United States' Fourth of July celebration.

On September 16, 1810, Father Miguel Hidalgo, a Jesuit priest of the Mexican town of Dolores, called and administered a midnight mass, urging his parishioners to unite themselves in a "cause" against the Spanish and to attack the major forts in Mexico for about 300 years. This mass has come to be known more famously as the "Grito de Dolores," translated to English literally means the "Scream of Pains." Hidalgo's followers grew from 600 to close to 100,000, most of whom were involved in the mining, agricultural, and manufacturing industries. Shortly thereafter, Hidalgo was excommunicated by the Bishop of Michoacán, thus allowing the Jesuit priest to mobilize further to the southward. Also, this gave the revolutionaries more time to organize, as more and more leaders emerged. Key among them was José María Morelos, who led the movement from the south.

On July 11, 1811, Father Hidalgo was killed, as his movement to Zaratecas proved unsuccessful and fatal. Though the "Father of the Mexican Independence Movement" died, his memory and martyrdom served as inspiration to the rest of the revolutionaries.

Having fought a long, drawn-out war, which lasted a little less than ten years, the Mexicans emerged victorious in securing their independence from the imperially Spanish rule.

To obtain the right to wave this flag Mexico had to obtain its independence from Spain which is celebrated annually on September 16.

Billy Bragg's EP 'the Internationale' promotes strong socialist themes

Fran Moyer
accent writer

Workers of the world unite! The vanguard of socialism, Billy Bragg, has released a seven song EP, The Internationale.

For those of you who worship the ground that Ronald Reagan walks upon, this album is not for you. In fact, you probably will be sickened by the "Pinko Commie" message this democratized Englishman spews. Billy Bragg has never been a man who is afraid to eschew his political views, as is obvious in listening to songs on his five previous albums, such as "There is Power in a Union," "It Says Here," "Help Save the Youth of America," and "Waiting for the Great Leap Forward."

The overt left-wing political message of Bragg is no less prevalent in The Internationale than in his other albums, but it takes on a different form.

In The Internationale, Bragg only wrote two of the seven songs, which is a major diversion for this Brit, who is as much a song writer as a performer. Instead of writing his own songs, Bragg relies on traditional folk songs that explore various economic and political topics.

The EP is excellent, except for the first song, "The Internationale." This song, originally adopted by the French Workers Party and later embraced by the Soviet Union as its national anthem until 1943, is very much like the boring and stuffy "Pomp and Circumstance."

By including this song, Bragg let his desire to be known as a socialist go too far, as he trades enjoyable music for purely ideological lyrics. After a struggle through this first cut, however, the rest of the EP is very enjoyable.

In addition, Bragg's songs are not devoid of humor, as is obvious in the upbeat "The Marching Song of the Covert Battalions," which pokes fun at the U.S. military, who Bragg believes are "here to defend wealth" and make "the world safe for capitalism."

The most captivating song on the EP is the stirring song "The Red Flag," originally written in 1849 by an Irishman and now used by the British Labour Party. This traditional tune contains inspirational lyrics and is set to the old Jacobite air of "The White Cockade," which compels one to tap one's foot to the moving music.

The final song on The Internationale, "My Youngest Son Came Home Today," has to be ranked as one of Bragg's best. Written by Eric Bogle, author of great anti-war ballads such as "The Band Played Waltzing Matilda" and "The Green Fields of France," this selection is dark and morbid.

The whining recorder creates an eerie atmosphere under which Bragg's voice moans "The life and drum beat out the time/While in his box of polished pine/Like dead meat on a butcher's tray/My young son came home today."

The Internationale is a great album. It does Bragg's previous album, Worker's Playtime, and is a positive indication that Bragg is back to the excellence of his earlier records.

Wilson Phillips creates harmonic trio with its debut album

MAUREEN GALLAGHER
accent writer

Wilson Phillips has released their self-titled debut album which for the most part is fresh and innovative. The group consists of sisters Carnie and Wendy Wilson and Chynna Phillips.

It is no coincidence that these names sound familiar, for these ladies spring from families with strong musical backgrounds. Carine and Wendy Wilson are the daughters of one of the Beach Boys, Brian Wilson, and Chynna Phillips' parents were members of the band that The Beach Boys.

This history, as well as the fact that the girls have grown up together, may explain how effortlessly their voices seem to meld, producing a pure, clean sound.

The songs have soft, soothing melodies which are pleasing to the ear, and words which are simple, but very appropriate. "Hold On," which was popular earlier this year, and "Impulsive" are two songs which seem to exemplify this basic form, which borders on soft pop. However, they still manage to be catchy and fitting in the emotions they evoke.

The group features three very distinct voices. Unfortunately, they do not always highlight them. Wilson Phillips does not hide behind heavy synthesized guitar. In fact, the background music is soft. However, it sometimes seems like they try to hide behind each other's voices, and no one really gets an opportunity to shine.

After a few songs it becomes difficult to distinguish where one song ends and another begins. Promising songs like "Release Me," "Over and Over," and "The Dream is Still Alive" get lost in the repetition of beat and melody. This repetition tends to get monotonous and makes these songs seem more trite than they actually are.

Two surprisingly strong songs, which show a depth not evident in many of the other songs, are "Next To You (Somebody I'll Be)" and "Eyes Like Twins." These two songs, but especially in "Eyes Like Twins," they seem to explore different qualities of their voices and experiment with harmony and different beats. These songs are refreshingly different from the other songs.

For a debut album Wilson Phillips has put forth a very strong effort. In this album they skillfully harmonize, and hopefully in their next album they can learn to combine this strength with a little experimentation and a little more depth.

Lead dwindles while Sox await return of Clemens

(AP)—While Roger Clemens waits to find out if he can pitch this week, the Boston Red Sox continued to stumble. The Chicago White Sox completed a four-game sweep of first-place Boston, beating the Red Sox 4-2 Sunday as Bobby Thigpen got his 51st save.

“This is the series I feared the most all month,” Boston manager Joe Morgan said. “We don’t play well here and we never get any breaks. I’ll be glad to get the hell out of here. Have you ever seen so many cheap hits in all your life?”

Boston, which leads Toronto by 1 1/2 games in the American League East, has lost six of its last seven games. The Blue Jays were scheduled to play Baltimore on Sunday night.

“To play as badly as we did and still be in first place is a plus,” Dwight Evans said. “It’s to play Baltimore on Sunday and if everything is all right, he will start against the New York Yankees on Friday.”

The Blue Jays have climbed to within 1 1/2 games in the AL East.

Steve Saxcy and Paul Gibson combined on a two-hitter and Alan Trammell hit three run-scoring singles.

Yankees starter Chuck Cary (5-10) left the game on a stretcher after he collided with first baseman Steve Balboni chasing a foul popup. Cary, who briefly was unconscious, was taken to a hospital for X-rays.

Royals 9, Indians 6

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Bo Jackson led off the seventh inning with a go-ahead home run off Dennis Lamp (6-13) as Kansas City ended the Indians’ four-game winning streak.

Bill Peasta hit an inside-the-park home run and Kevin Seitzer and George Brett each had solo homers for the Royals, who won for just the second time in 13 games.

Mariners 5, Angels 3

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Pinch-hitter Ken Griffrer Jr. hit a two-run homer off Bryan Harvey (3-4) in the ninth inning.

The Tigers will soon be trying to tackle Seminoles instead of Panthers.

Late BYU rally avoids upset

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Another surprise upset came when Gossen was sacked for a 5-yard run three plays later.

There are not many teams in the country that can score 43 points in a half,” Detmer, who completed 32-of-50 passes for 448 yards, said. "We got fired up and got hot. Our defense gave us the ball, our receivers came through over and over. I can’t say enough good about our defense line.”

Washington State coach Mike Price said he believed his team had a good chance to win the game.

“I thought we had a chance going in at halftime like we did against BYU last time,” he said. “I honestly believe (that) you put Ty Detmer and that offense on the field and they are going to score points. He stays on the field and they are going to score.”

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The Southeastern Conference’s search for a 12th member turns to Miami this week now that Florida’s other powerhouse football independent has spurned the league in favor of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Florida State coach Bobby Bowden, born and educated in the heart of SEC country, said he wanted Florida State to keep away from SEC membership despite his lifetime admiration for the league. He quoted that last week as the Seminoles became the ninth member of the SEC.

“We think we’ve earned our own identity,” said Bowden, a Birmingham, Ala. native who would like to coach 10 more years at Florida State.

“In regard to recruiting, we’re definitely better off not in the same conference with Florida,” he said. “From a football standpoint, we simply have more flexibility.”

Miami president Edward Foote said SEC officials will visit the university this week to discuss expansion. The move is significant because SEC commissioner Roy Kramer has visited only one other campus — Florida State.

But Foote said it was premature to assume the SEC would extend an invitation to the Seminoles.

“I think since FSU has made its decision, it will increase conversation,” Foote said. “But we don’t know what the SEC is going to say to us when they come down.”

Miami athletic director Sam Jankovich also acknowledged that Florida State’s decision likely would “escalate the process,” but said the Hurricanes will have to take the lead in deciding whether to join a conference remained the “latter part of September to the first of October.”

Kramer, who has never acknowledged that the SEC is interested in a football-only member, said he has been well-reasoned comment. He is expected to speak with Foote on Monday to determine what day he and other conference officials will visit.

The SEC added Arkansas as an 11th team earlier this summer and is actively seeking a 12th so it can break into two six-team divisions.

Ismail shined at crunch time

By GREG GUFFEY and FRANK PASTOR Sports Writers

Rocket Ismail might not have scored the winning touchdown Saturday night in Notre Dame's 28-24 come-from-behind victory over Michigan, but he did make the big play in the final drive.

Ismail, who missed half of the second quarter after he suffered a bruised sternum, caught two passes and carried once in Notre Dame's winning drive, a 9-yard effort that ended with a Rirk Mirer pass to Adrian Jarrell.

Ismail touched the ball three consecutive times in that drive — a run up the middle for four yards, a screen pass from Mirer for another four yards and an 11-yard pass from Mirer on the left sideline.

"We were on the sidelines and Rirk Watters said to me, 'This is the time when All-Americans become All-Americans,'" said Ismail, one of the favorites to win the Heisman Trophy.

"He couldn't have said it much better," Mirer added.

He also "touched" off the biggest play in Notre Dame's third-quarter scoring drive.

On third and 15 from the Irish 15, Mirer threw a pass to Ismail streaking up the right side of the field. Ismail tipped the ball and it ended up in the hands of Notre Dame split end Lake Dawson, who advanced it to the Michigan 40.

"I thought that certainly was a big swing in the momentum," Holtz said.

Culver capped the 13-play, 80-yard drive with a one-yard plunge up the middle, pulling the Irish to within three at 24-21.

Michigan drove to the Notre Dame 14 in its next possession, but Stonebreaker's interception gave the Irish what seemed to be their last chance for a comeback. However, Mirer returned the favor just five plays later when he overthrew Tony Smith over the middle and safety Vada Murray intercepted the ball, returning it to the Michigan 19.

The Wolverines picked up one first down before they were forced to punt from their own 30-yard line. Ismail fumbled the kickoff as he returned it to the Notre Dame 24 and the Irish began their final drive with 4:33 remaining on the game clock.

On the one-and-six from the Notre Dame 28, Mirer threw to Ismail for a 13-yard gain. Watters picked up 15 on the ground, and Mirer got going left and connected with Ismail on the left sideline for an 11-yard pickup. Mirer then rolled right, spotted Jarrell at the goal line, and hit him with the winning touchdown pass.

"It was a heck of a football game," said Holtz. "If we played another quarter, we might have been behind at the end of the fifth quarter. It's unfortunate when you have a game like that, you have to end it after four quarters."

Moeller might very well agree.

He cannot afford to enjoy the spotlight glory. One DRIVE does not make a quarterback, even if it is big enough to put in capital letters.

If this keeps up, they might have to give Mirer an entire rodeo of lockers to accommodate the boost of media that will follow him.

He can only hope they will come for the right reasons.

been Michigan's m ost powerful offensive lines in the country. Vaughn gained a career-high 201 yards. He gained 57 yards in all of 1989.

"It's been awhile since I've seen a team run the ball like this," said Irish coach Lou Holtz.

Indeed, it had been almost three years since Penn State's Blair Thomas broke the 200-yard barrier, gaining 214 yards against Michigan.

Miler, a lifelong Michigan fan who had sold former Wolverine head coach Bo Schemoehler pocket, he threw on the run and hit Smith for 13 yards and the first down. Later, Ismail later capped the drive with an 18-yard pass to Adrian Jarrell. In THE DRIVE, he completed five of six passes for 52 of their 133 total yards in this third of his 165 total passing yards.

"It's hard to put a lot of motion as a unit in the drive," Mirer said. "It tells us we can come back from a deficit. It gives us confidence that we can be down to a great football team and still come back and win."

Miler said he didn't even feel nervous when the Irish trailed 24-21. He knew there would be at least one more chance.

"He (Coach Lou Holtz) said, "We're right in this thing and there's no reason to feel we can't win."

Holtz also said. "He felt we didn't need to run the ball that much. We needed to throw the ball. He asked me what I felt comfortable with and those things - we attacked the corners and ran some plays and some safe patterns."

This is the kind of win Mirer can look back on with pleasure a few years down the road. But...

Taylor had eight catches for 146 yards and 39-yard TD pass from 74. Mike Cofer kicked four field goals for the 49ers (2-0).

The deadlock was short-lived as Matt Fitz to give the Billikens a lead. The score quieted the but, the Irish continued to play with intensity for the remainder of the game, missing several scoring opportunities. Irish gun down Michigan with fourth-quarter rally

ND scores 14 points in final stanza, holds on to defeat Wolverines and ruin Moeller's debut

By FRANK PASTOR
Associate Sports Editor

Rick Mirer saved his best for last.

Notre Dame's sophomore quarterback, who shuns comparison to Joe Montana, scored a striking resemblance to the 49ers star when he led the Irish on a nine-play, 76-yard scoring drive in the closing minutes of Saturday night's thrilling 28-24 victory over Michigan. It was not unlike the drive Montana sparked in San Francisco's Super Bowl XXIII win over Cincinnati.

Top-ranked Notre Dame rallied from a 10-point, fourth-quarter deficit to defeat fourth-ranked Michigan and become the first team in 24 years to beat the Wolverines four straight times.

Mirer completed five of six passes on the final scoring drive, including the game-winner—an 18-yard strike to flanker Adrian Jarrell between two defenders with 1:40 remaining—in his first collegiate start.

"We never gave up hope," Head Coach Lou Holtz said after the game. "We just kept our poise and moved the ball down the field. The thing I was scared of is that we scored too early." Holtz's fear was compounded when Desmond Howard returned a punt for the opening score.

Notre Dame-Michigan matchup is that no lead is insurmountable as long as there is time remaining on the clock.

Notre Dame jumped out to a 14-3 lead in the first half but was trailing 14-11 when Mirer completed a 43-yard pass to Joe Miller with 3:50 remaining in the game. "I made that call all on my own and we just didn't execute the play," said Mirer. "It was quite honestly a high-percentage pass, but nothing's a given in this game."

The only certainty in any Notre Dame-Michigan matchup is that no lead is insurmountable as long as there is time remaining on the clock.

"When we came in here," Moeller said, "we felt like we were going to win this football game, and this hurts. A couple of calls by me probably didn't prove out to be very good calls.

The most significant of those calls came with just over ten minutes remaining in the game and Michigan looking to build on its 24-21 lead, facing a first-and-ten situation at the Notre Dame 11. Although tailback Craig Hawthorne had already aliased through the Irish defense for 55 yards in three carries on the drive (22 carries for 201 yards overall), Moeller called for a pass that was picked off by inside linebacker Michael Stonebreaker in the end zone.

"We knew we had to do one thing to come in here and beat this team," Moeller said. "We had to set the tempo on both sides of the ball. It seemed to be effective for the most part."

The Irish offense seized the opportunity and drew first blood when Mirer opened the display drive with a three-yard option run for the opening score.

Miroir enjoys talking about THE DRIVE

Someone shouted a good warming in the Notre Dame locker room to sophomore quarterback Rick Mirer after he had rallied the Irish to a 28-24 victory over Michigan Saturday night.

"Get ready Rick," he said. "Here they come."

But Mirer didn't seem to mind because the reporters and TV cameras were there for the right reasons—to talk about THE DRIVE in which he led the Irish on a 14-point scoring binge in the closing minutes of Saturday's game.

"They weren't here to ask him why he hit Michigan free safety Vada Murray in the numbers with a pass deep in Wolverine territory earlier in the fourth quarter (He answered anyway: 'Tony Smith was wide open. I was excited and I wanted him to get the ball.'). Or how it felt to lose in his first career start at Notre Dame (He made sure he didn't have to answer that one).

Notre Dame-Michigan matchup is that no lead is insurmountable as long as there is time remaining on the clock.

"We knew we had to do one thing to come in here and beat this team," Moeller said. "We had to set the tempo on both sides of the ball. It seemed to be effective for the most part."

The Irish offense seized the opportunity and drew first blood when Mirer opened the display drive with a three-yard option run for the opening score.

This was a time when Mirer didn't care if they stayed all night, if they asked him to replay all four quarters and discuss everything he's done from birth to his first Irish victory. He knew that once he left that room there would be little time to savor the victory.

"I wasn't really nervous even though I had a lot on my mind," said Mirer, who wears the same number as former Notre Dame Wolverine backfield, an indirect result of Michigan's no-huddle offense.

"We knew we had to do one thing to come in here and beat this team," Moeller said. "We had to set the tempo on both sides of the ball. It seemed to be effective for the most part."
