AIDS is topic of student conference

BY CAROL DOMINGUEZ
News writer

AIDS awareness and campus AIDS policies were the chief topics discussed at the recent conference of the National Association of Students at Catholic Colleges and Universities (NASCCU). The second annual nationwide conference was held last week at the University of Dayton, Ohio, attracting delegates from twenty Catholic colleges and universities, including students from Notre Dame, Saint Mary’s, and Holy Cross.

Organized in 1989 by Notre Dame Student Body Vice-President David Kinkoff, NASCCU held its first conference last year at Notre Dame. According to Jon Barger, a Notre Dame student who attended the conference, the "purpose of NASCCU is to unite students in an open and responsive forum and address issues relevant to each campus.” Each year the conference focuses on an issue relevant to college students, especially those attending Catholic institutions.

Barger said that representatives "come back to make changes and see what we can do on our respective campuses." The Association discussed means to improve awareness of the disease and ways to implement effective AIDS policies at their schools.

Convention speakers lectured on the scientific and educational aspects of the virus. A priest afflicted with AIDS spoke of the need to address the issue of the disease itself and not how one has acquired the illness. "The Catholic tradition tells us to take care of the sick, and not to make a judgment by asking questions," Barger said.

Joe Cataldo, a sophomore member of NASCCU, said that he hopes to incorporate ideas from the conference into student life. "More education is not going to hurt us, but only going to help," he said. Cataldo said that education in a mandatory freshman class, at Freshman orientation, or even in seminars outside of the classroom would assist in AIDS awareness. "We have to see which way works best for ND," he said.

Fred Tombar, current student body vice-president, was one of the three delegates who attended the meeting. He led a small group discussion on incorporating NASCCU into student government.

Tombar said that he and the other delegates will encourage other student leaders and the administration to "pro-actively look at the issue of AIDS and how it affects the community." "We need to be prepared to handle the issue of AIDS on this campus and in the community at large," he said.

According to Barger and Cataldo, Notre Dame has no set policy on AIDS. "The administration has a guideline to follow, but that hasn't been revised since 1986," Cataldo said. "It would be in the administration's and our best interest to revise it," he added.

Some advice on the JPW experience

Well, the weekend we have all been waiting for has arrived. Junior Parents Weekend! Every event has been built up as the epitome of the Notre Dame experience in our eyes. Doner minds since the day we arrived on campus as freshmen have come at last. So here are a few wise words for all classes on how to handle the JPW phenomenon as it once again prepares to emerge.

For all of you freshmen and sophomores, you are looking at a weekend that is far away from campus as you possibly can. Unless you are a junior, the scale-0-fun at Notre Dame dips into the very negative numbers. Chicago is, of course, a close and reliable option. Cuisine, food, and fun abound there, so hop on the bus and do not look back.

For all of the seniors out there, so hop on the bus and do not look back. We will be having regular rec in the dormitories this weekend. We will be having regular rec in the dormitories this weekend. We will be having regular rec in the dormitories this weekend.

"Government" by identifying problems and working to overcome them.

Allisa Murphy, candidate for student body president, Carla Prando, vice president of Academic Affairs; and Greer Gilliland, vice president of Student Affairs, will appear on the second ticket. It is Murphy's goal to "make known the rich tradition of Saint Mary's College by implementing a plan that includes Saint Mary's appreciation and its connection with intellectual life.

"The real barrier is a misconception of what diversity is," was Prando's response to the question of what can be done to make Saint Mary's diverse and what barriers there are. Prando said that there can be an increased awareness of people of color by working with faculty to bring in authors and economists to demonstrate this issue diversity.

According to Rhattigan, the lack of diversity can be attacked at "the high school level when recruiting begins." Saint Mary's needs to know "how to appeal to diverse students out there," with some of the ways being "to increase the number of minority professors and faculty and provide students with awareness of other cultures," Rhattigan added.

When asked how the increase in off-campus student life is affecting the Saint Mary's community, Lowry said she believed that the choice is "left up to the Individual but Saint Mary's should make living on campus as appealing as possible." According to Lowry, there is a current meal plan program problem because it consists of only one plan. However, she reported that a 21- or 19-meal per week plan will be in effect next year which will be available to off-campus students.

Prando claims that they have been "working with Marriott (food service) to improve the meal plans." She also suggested to move athletic equipment to the Regina Hall basement and McCandless Hall.

Off-campus security continues to be a concern from that Lowry is being addressed. "Security will order a cab, they pay for it, then you pay them back," she said. However, the system does not apply to getting picked up from parties. It is "for walking back from Notre Dame and the possibility of date or acquaintance rape."

Murphy maintained that "if a student chooses to move off campus, they're responsible to be aware of safety precautions."

Regarding the underground tunnels which link certain buildings on campus, Lowry acknowledged that "tunnels can be frightening" and would like to put mirrors in the corners so that students can see ahead in the tunnels.

Murphy said she wants to keep the focus on one campus security, beginning with seminars during orientation week. Prando expressed the necessity of working in conjunction with Notre Dame Security.

Prando promised to "work with the administration to improve the walk from McCandless to the library," which is hazardous when icy.

Both tickets plan to implement recycling programs for paper and glass.

Kathy Schmidt, current student body president, posed questions to the two tickets and served as an intermediary between The Observer and the audience when they were all allowed to question the candidates.

Since the structure of the student government had changed this year, Murphy said "the three of us will have to work closely to unify department." Lowry said that cohesive awareness will be created by a "plan/evaluation system so that we can react to planned programs from all (activities)."

One of the ideas presented by Gilliland is to "have different colors of paper (fliers) to better identify student government activities. Each group will have a different color, such as the Life of the Mind series and sports.

In the area of dorm reforms, Murphy said that some new ideas are already in the process. Next year it has been proposed that there be "three rooms to every two people in Regina." Quinns will be eliminated and replaced with quads, and south Regina will be made junior/senior sections with one resident assistant to encourage students to stay on campus.

Lowry said that segregated halls by class was considered but rejected. "Room pick is a hassle, (but) part of the educational experience is meeting both upperclassmen and underclassmen.

In dealing with tension between the Gay/Lesbian Group, the tickets were asked whether they support their cause or not. Murphy stated that they would "go into normal policy, bring (the issue) to the Board (of Trustees) to see if they recognize them and follow the resolution of a group vote."

Lowry said that if they were approached by the Gay/Lesbian Group, they would "promote discussion, not take a side on the issue, but point out the advantages of having one." She stated that students at Saint Mary's seek a well-rounded education and should be able to be exposed to what they have to offer. "They shouldn't be alienated," Lowry said.

If the candidates could accomplish only one of their goals, Lowry said she wishes to get involved with a nationwide network of '93 women's colleges called Student Alliance of Women's Colleges. She said that "women's colleges are not appealing now. We need to make the advantages known to women by promoting them." Murphy would "stress the tradition of Saint Mary's." That includes "an awareness of founding sisters and alumnae." There should be emphasis in Freshmen Orientation that distinction, which may result in greater appreciation, she said.

Iraqi mourners cry out for revenge of deaths

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraqi mourners marched alongside flag-covered coffins Thursday, firing automatic rifles into the air and crying out for revenge for the U.S. air strike that Iraq said killed hundreds in a shelter.

"By God we swear, we will make them pay their blood for this crime," members of the crowd of 5,000 yelled. "The death of our women and children will not go unanswered!"

Scores more bodies were pulled from the building that was blasted apart early Wednesday by U.S. warplanes, and a Cabinet minister depicted President Bush as a war criminal comparable to Hitler — a comparison Bush himself has used when speaking of Saddam Hussein.

The Iraqi military reported nearly 400 allied air raids late Wednesday and early Thursday, including 135 that "targeted targets" across the country and 251 sorties against military targets in the southern war zone.

It said one allied plane was shot down, but gave no details.

Iraq's official Islamic Republic News Agency said the southern Iraqi port city of Basra underwent intensive attacks, aimed primarily at an oil refinery and petrochemical complex.

The agency also reported numerous other raids, one of them targeting the southeastern town of Al-Gurna, the reputed location of the biblical Garden of Eden.

The manager of Baghdad's al-Rashid hotel, meanwhile, denied U.S. claims that his establishment housed a military communications center, and allowed foreign reporters to search the 14-story building.

The death toll from Wednesday's raid remained uncertain, in part because rescuers had not yet reached all areas of the shattered above-and-below-ground shelter.

Iraqi anti-American sentiment is high after U.S. bombs caused civilian deaths Wednesday in a Baghdad bunker that the allies claimed to have contained military personnel.

return to their w-unity, but insisted that they would have to be patient. He said the three months were needed to rehabilitate the country and in a purge of Kuwait of a fifth column," apparently referring to civilian supporters of Iraq.

Al-Sabah's remarks were carried by the official Kuwaiti news agency, monitored in Bahrain.

At the Riyadh briefing, El-Kandari said Kuwaitis in Saudi Arabia lost contact with the resistance inside Kuwait a week after the Iraqis apparently seized the satellite telephones the Kuwaiti resistance had been using.

He said before the links were cut, the Kuwaitis reported that 250 people had been killed in Kuwait since the allied bombing campaign began Jan. 17. There was no way to independently determine how many people have been killed in Kuwait by the occupying forces.

El-Kandari speculated that the Iraqis were "taking revenge for the air campaign against Iraq by killing civilians inside Kuwait."

Many of those killed had been held for months, El-Kandari said. He said 65 Kuwaitis were killed in the four days prior to the phone line being cut. Some had been beheaded, he said, and some of the corpses were left in front of their family homes for up to 36 hours.

He also said the Kuwaiti resistance had witnessed that Iraq is preparing for an allied amphibious landing, including breaking up the windows of houses at strategic positions along the shore, apparently to fortify Iraqi defensive positions.

Kuwaiti reports increase of Iraqi executions in Kuwait

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Iraq has stepped up executions inside occupied Kuwait, killing 200 people since the allied air campaign began, a Kuwaiti air force colonel said Thursday.

Col. Abdullah El-Kandari also accused Iraq of adopting a double standard when it came to Iraqi versus Kuwaiti civilian fatalities.

Iraq has strongly condemned the deaths of Iraqi civilians in allied air raids, but has remained silent regarding the deaths of scores of Kuwaitis reportedly killed by Iraqi forces since it seized the emirate.

"Saddam Hussein is allowing controlled reports to come out of Baghdad, but no photos or reports whatsoever have come out of Kuwait since the Aug. 2 invasion," El-Kandari said at briefing.

Also Thursday, Kuwait's interior minister, Sheik Salem al-Sabah, said most Kuwaitis will be unable to return home for about three months after Iraq forces are expelled from the country.

Al-Sabah said he understood the longing of his compatriots to return to their w-unity, but insisted that they would have to be patient. He said the three months were needed to rehabilitate the country and to "purge Kuwait of a fifth column," apparently referring to civilian supporters of Iraq.

Illinois Rep. insists on use of nukes as option

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) — The United States should use nuclear weapons on dug-in Iraqi soldiers rather than risk American lives to root them out, U.S. Rep. Phil Crane, R-Ill., said.

"If the Republican Guard is dug in and determined to fight, it is an option that has to remain open," Crane said in an interview before giving a Lincoln Day speech to Yakima-area Republicans Wednesday.

Crane also called Saddam Hussein's invasion of Kuwait a "blessing" because it gave the United States cause to destroy Hussein's military power.

In the interview, Crane said he would favor using neutron weapons against Iraq, because "they are highly effective, very deadly and produce more deadly radiation than older nuclear warheads, but than one-tenth as much explosive power, heat and fallout."

"They don't destroy buildings," Crane said. "They simply kill!"

U.S. Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., has said the deadly weapons should be used as a last resort before sending in American ground forces.

However, critics have said using nuclear weapons in the Persian Gulf War would further erode U.S. relations in the Arab world, jeopardize the United Nations' alliance against Iraq and undermine U.S. policy regarding nuclear proliferation.

Crane was elected to the House in 1969 and was a presidential candidate in 1980.

Awards to be presented for merits in Angers

Special to The Observer

Notre Dame's Office of International Studies Program has announced a special award for senior students returned from the Angers foreign study program.

The $200 award, named after Charles Parnell, professor emeritus of romance languages and literature at Notre Dame, and his wife, Simone, is to be given annually to a senior from Notre Dame or Saint Mary's College who attended the Angers program in the past. The Parnells have received previous honors both from the University and from the city of Angers. Also, in 1988, Charles Parnell was made an honorary citizen of Angers.

The award has been made possible by a gift from Charles Roedig, professor emeritus of romance languages and literature.

The following seniors are eligible for the award: Michelle Bolduc, Matthew Borkowski, Matthew Bridentin, Rachel Brocheri, Stephen Cannon, Siobhan Carroll, Shannon Casey, Christine Cletti, Kevin Degnan, Matthew Desmond, Wade Edwards, Jill Fogelster, Elizabeth Giocchi (SMC), Larissa Godish, Carrie Goodalls (SMC), Sinanne Goulet, Joan Kearns, Tracy Labin, Elizabeth Leonov, Matthew Morgen, Megan Noone, Gregory Olson, Kathleen Shinners (SMC), Edward Smith, Mary Ellen Townsend, Karen Walsh (SMC), Julie Yoon, Joseph...

Pain reliever reported to up risk of ulcers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The widely used pain reliever ibuprofen doubles the risk of ulcers, according to Vanderbilt University researchers, and some experts say people taking it may want to consider lower doses or alternatives.

But for those suffering chronic pain and inflammation, researchers said ibuprofen may be the best choice, as it has the lowest ulcer risk among the drugs studied. Those drugs belong to a prescription class called non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs or NSAIDs.

"Occasional low-dose users should not be concerned about the increased risk," said the study's lead author, Dr. Marie Griffin. "It is unlikely that taking one or 2 ibuprofen (pills) several times a month poses any significant risk."

The researchers did not study aspirin, which is also an NSAID, but say that aspirin is "at least" as risky as ibuprofen. Acetaminophen, used in the pain reliever Tylenol, is not an NSAID and is not associated with ulcers.

The Vanderbilt study confirms the increased risk of ulcers in people who used the prescription NSAIDs studied, and also found that the overall risk increased with higher doses and was greatest in the first month of use.

Ibuprofen, available without a prescription since 1985, is sold under such brand names as Advil, Medipren, Motrin and Nuprin. It has captured about 20 percent of the $2.5 billion non-prescription pain reliever market. As the prescription drug Motrin, it has annual sales of $46 million.

The disease, but as a Catholic university we should somehow address the issue of understanding and compassion in relating to a person with AIDS," she said.

In addition, business, Catholic University of Saint Mary's was elected a NASCU regional director.

Lowry ticket deserves your vote

No matter what the results of the Saint Mary's Student Body elections, Saint Mary's students cannot lose. Both the Maureen Lowry and Allisa Murphy tickets were quite impressive, and both serve Saint Mary's community well. However, the Lowry ticket stood out as being particularly articulate and informed. Lowry, and her running mate Colleen Rhattigian, for Vice-President of Academic Affairs, and Meg McGowan, for Vice-President of Student Activities, were well-versed in the recent extensive changes that have been made to the structure of Saint Mary's government.

Lowry was equally as impressive addressing the security concerns of Saint Mary's students. She proposed specific changes, such as placing emergency phones at security concerns of Saint Mary's students. She proposed specific changes, such as placing emergency phones at

ND lacks support for public interest law program

Saint Mary's students should be given the opportunity to practice what this University preaches. I came to Notre Dame because I want to go into public interest law, and Notre Dame has a reputation for supporting social concerns. My first week, an employee of the law school suggested that if I took a job in public interest right after graduation, the school's average for incomes upon graduation would go down. I was shocked. I am now in the second semester of my second year and am sad to say I'm becoming accustomed to hostile or apathetic attitudes towards public interest law.

Notre Dame Law School neglects the interests and needs of students who want to practice public interest law. The curriculum provides only limited offerings in this area, and some of the most vital courses (e.g. bankruptcy) are not offered. Organizations stimulating interest in public interest law are student organized and student run, with little involvement from the faculty or administration. It is difficult to obtain information about job opportunities in this area, and the placement efforts of the school do not emphasize programs for non-profit positions.

Even if a student is motivated enough to discover a public interest position, no money is available to allow her to accept the position unless she is independently funded. Notre Dame students are at a disadvantage in a field which is becoming increasingly competitive. Many organizations cannot pay interns, and funding is an essential criterion. I have been crossed off the list of more than one organization because the applicants from other schools came with funding. Especially considering Notre Dame's Fellowship Program is available to applicants selected by a committee from the law school. Students earning enough money pledge a percentage of their summer earnings toward students interested in public interest jobs. The program has provided summer opportunities to students who would otherwise be forced to reject a public interest offer. However, the program is grossly underfunded when compared to both the demand for funding and the amounts pledged by students at other universities. This program should be expanded, and the University should consider initiating separate funding or increasing its current support of "supporting the student pledge amount with tuition remission.

Secondly, the Center for Social Concerns and the Notre Dame Alumni Association coordinate a "Summer Service Project." Through this program, students can get a certain amount of tuition excused through money donated by alumni. This program sometimes provides room and board for students who are able to stay in the facility where they work or in some religious facilities (convents, etc.). Again, this is an important but limited program. Students who need money for rent and food during the summer cannot utilize this program unless a room and board facility is available.

Dear Editor:

As founder of Notre Dame's chapter of the United Hispanics for Racial Equality (UHRE), I amwriting in response to several recent letters to the editor urging support for the Student United for Racial Equality (SUFR) organization. As a Hispanic student, I believe that the demands set forth by SUFR are not in line with our shared goals and values. I am particularly concerned with SUFR's recent calls for a moratorium on all military action and a boycott of the Gulf War, which I believe are not in the best interests of the Hispanic and Latino communities.

The purported justification for SUFR's demands is the suffering of the Kuwaiti people and the belief that the Gulf War is unjust and unnecessary. However, the suffering of the Kuwaiti people is not unique to this conflict. Millions of people around the world have suffered due to various conflicts and wars. The Gulf War is no exception. It is important to recognize that the Gulf War is a complex issue with many factors at play. The United States and its allies, including the United Nations, have a responsibility to uphold international law and protect innocent civilians.

SUFR's demands also raise concerns about the potential for violent confrontation and civil unrest. While the goal of preventing violence is admirable, the methods proposed by SUFR are not effective and could lead to further chaos. A better approach would be to engage in peaceful protest and advocacy, such as those who have been involved in various peace movements around the world.

In conclusion, I believe that SUFR's demands are not in line with our shared goals and values as Hispanic and Latino students. It is important to seek peaceful solutions to complex issues, such as the Gulf War, through dialogue and peaceful protest. I urge SUFR to reconsider its demands and work towards a more constructive solution for the suffering of the Kuwaiti people.

Sincerely,

Festival concludes with acclaimed
Jaimy Gordon

By ELIZABETH VIDA

Just as another week of classes has flown by, so too has this year’s Sophomore Literary Festival. Tonight’s reading, at 8 at the Library Auditorium, is by Jaimy Gordon, the author of the critically acclaimed novel “She Drove Without Stopping.”

Published in 1996, “She Drove Without Stopping” is Gordon’s most recent novel. Her other works include “Circumspenations from an Equestrian Statue,” a novella, and “The Bend, The Lip, The Kid,” a narrative poem.

Gordon, who was born in Baltimore in 1944 and educated at Antioch College and Brown University, is now an associate professor of English at Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo, where she teaches fiction writing. She has received Creative Writing Grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and fellowships from other prestigious institutes and councils of art.

Gordon will draw almost all of her material for the reading from “She Drove Without Stopping,” of which writer Janet Kauffman says, “A spectacle of a novel! In a cultural landscape marked off by men and money, Jane figures out how to drive without stopping, and destination isn’t the point.”

Elizabeth Hand, reviewer for the Washington Post, wrote, “Gordon’s prose is witty and stylish, the kind of unblinking feminist writing that isn’t afraid to admit of a woman whooping it up all night, then waking next morning disgruntled, and not a little exalted, to discover just how close to the edge she’d crawled.”

Jane is the footloose and sexually free heroine of the novel who disposes her wealthy father and pays for his irrigation with her pocketbook. As the novel progresses she leaves home to journey towards the edge of the sexual revolution of the 1960s. On this quest, she finds a series of surrogate “fathers.” They all challenge her notion of the links between sex and money.

Gordon characterizes Jane as an adventuress. “I would never have wanted to write about her if I had not begun to know that she wasn’t one of a kind, that indeed the world was harboring plenty of women like her.” Gordon said in a recent interview about the the character she created. “I imagine a book of Janes as the natural audience for this book.”

As the University celebrates the Year of Women, Gordon will present a contemporary view of the world from a female perspective. It is quite different from the point of view offered by the female protagonists in many Victorian novels which present an anachronistic concept of women in society.

If you’ve missed the previous authors this week, tonight would be an excellent opportunity to hear a published and acclaimed writer read her own work and offer a little insight—not only into her novels, but also into what it takes to be a professional writer.

Did you know that Indiana has more miles of interstate highway than any other of comparable size?

If you are yearning for city life, Indianapolis will accommodate any taste. In just three short hours you could be in Indianapolis for their annual Boat Sport and Travel Show, located at 2311 E. 46th St.

The show is held at the Indiana State Fairgrounds, featuring consumer shows, physical fitness programs, dog seminars and regional turkey calling contests. Admission is charged for the show, which is open Saturday at 10 a.m.-11 p.m. and Sunday 10 a.m.-6 p.m.

If turkey's not your game, check out Car Quest, World of Wheels at the Convention Center across from 201 S. Capital St. If you work up an appetite while you are there, swing by Shaqaire's, a wonderful deli, south of the center at 808 S. Meridian.

College St., phone: (317) 355-4211). Also, the Indiana Comedy Connection (2474 S. Meridian St., phone: (317) 631-3536), is featuring Jack Thomas. Lastly, Crackers (4702 Keystone Crossing, phone: (317) 856-2500) has a variety of acts every weekend.

The resolution and hopeful ending of "Love's Recovery" set the stage for "Hammer and a Nail" an upbeat number full of promise and self-determination. Searching for the meaning of life that is "more than a vision," Ray and Sailors progress from "seeming the road to hell and just where it starts," to "seeing the whole as a sum of its parts." If the crowd was unaware of the deeper symbolism in their lyrics, it was because their masterful musicianship and vocal demands full attention. On "Hand Me Downs," and "Pushing the Needle Too Far," Ray's vocals ranged from anger to compassion, rage to sensitivly, both on lead acoustic guitar, they complemented, rather than competed, with each other. But Indigo Girls weren't all business. They joked about college sports and solicited support for Greenpeace. They even attempted to name a painted cow stationed at the edge of the stage, and the crowd willingly offered their suggestions. Favorites like "Land of Canaan," and " Tried to Be True," brought the crowd together in a harmony of its own.

And on "Closer to Fine," Ray and Sailors drew the most significant response from the college-inspired line, "I spent four years prosaic to the higher mind, got my paper, and I was free," which netted shrills of agreement. Opening for Indigo Girls was The Ellen James Society. Fronted by two females, The Ellen James Society bore remarkable similarities to Indigo Girls, from the 60s-inspired at-ture to the lyrical focus on love and relationships.

But the Ellen James Society sent a harsh message, one filled with much more disillusion and less than the headliners. When the two groups joined forces on "Tried To Be True," and "2-3-5," the true power of these female voices was un-concealed. Between the four women, every musical emotion was displayed, every feeling conveyed.

The female power did not end there, as if to show that this concert could have perhaps been in conjunction with the Year of Women. As the all-star ensemble wrapped up "Get Together," they replaced the word "brother" with "sister" in the chorus. Indigo Girls and The Ellen James Society showed Notre Dame an entertaining musical experience, concluding with a plea for "Peace" and a shower of autographed Valentine's for the stage-front audience.

To the junior parents from the last flower child

I wish there were this weekend to talk at length with the Junior Parents over this unfortunate war our country is waging in the Persian Gulf.

Most of the Junior Parents must have a near-perfect recall of the Vietnam War. Some of them may have fought in that war; others must have opposed it, or wished it would go away before they were dragged into it. Many of the war vets came home, feeling guilty as hell for fighting in Vietnam. The rest of the country felt guilty as hell for sending them there, and for not welcoming them home as heroes.

Vietnam left many of us wounded in one way or another. Since so many of us are haunted by unresolved guilt from the past, we’re sending kids to another war that could be just as tragic. The war hope in the country is at fever pitch. Even the school children have been enlisted to support the troops and keep their morale high, so they will not feel they are fighting with a hand tied behind them.

For me, as a priest at Notre Dame, who listened to, and was changed by, the generation which is now old enough to be sending children to Notre Dame as students. Vietnam was a turning point also. The refrain of those years was, “Give peace a chance,” so I supported the peace movement. When some of the students “made love, not war,” I defended the students in their parents.

I’ve dragged parents, kicking and screaming, to their children’s own. Some of those parents would have never met their own grandchildren, if they’d been allowed to prevent marriages that verged on insanity. I wonder if they feel now I did them a favor as an interfering priest who helped young lovers who wanted the chance to stay true to each other?

Some of the peaceniks, growing older, may have grown cynical about love as a force more powerful than missiles. If I shared their cynicism, I’d be left with egg on my face. As it happened, I have hung onto ideals I learned in the children’s crusade. I still have the banner a nun made for me: “Lovers alone wear sunlight.” Believing that now could make me the last of the flower children. I’m too old to believe, “My country, right or wrong,” just because there’s a war on. The country which has 25 million abortions notched on its belt can’t claim it’s in the state of grace from sea to shining sea.

Chereston wrote, “My country, right or wrong,” is a thing no patriot would think of saying except in a desperate case. It is like saying, “My mother, drunk or sober.” No doubt if a decent man’s mother took to drink he would share her troubles to the last: but to talk as if he would be in a state of gay indifference as to whether his mother took to drink or not is certainly not the language of men who know the great mystery.”

My country, right or wrong, dropped more bombs on Vietnam than were dropped on the continent of Europe during World War II. Now I’m told more bombs have been dropped on Iraq already than were dropped on Vietnam. Is this more moral than making them back to the Stone Age?

Being Holy Cross priest at Notre Dame has been a learning experience. I’ve learned so much in 20 years. I’m at odds with the young wolves who call me unpatriotic for being a dove. A generation ago, students opposed to the war in Vietnam used to explain Christian love to me, because they were the ones worried about me as a hawk.

The truth is, I’m not a pacifist, though I’m still wondering, “Where have all the flowers gone?” Like Mr. Chips, I remember the names of the dead, and that honor roll covers four different wars.

“Futility” is a poem written by Wilfred Owen, a soldier killed in action in 1918. “Move him into the sun—Gently its touch awake him once/ At home, whispering of fields unwon./ Always it woke him, even in France./ Until this morning and this snow/ If any thing might raise him now! The Kind Old Sun will know/ In the fitful darkness of June/ To wake, once, the clays of a cold star/ Are limbs, so dear achieved, are sides/ Full—sweat—still warm—too hard to stir?” Was it for this the clay grew tall? “—What made fatuous sunbeams toll/ To break earth’s sleep at all?”

“Was it for this that the clay grew tall?” must be a question the survivors of the fallen on either side of a war must ask in every generation. Now we’re in a new war that’s more popular than Jesus.

In 1972, anti-war activist Daniel Berrigan, a Jesuit priest, was elected Senior Class Fellow at Notre Dame. Should the present seniors bring him back as a stir up student unrest, or are the seniors proud to have the Gulf War as their stumbling block as they enter the real world?

By the time Vietnam was over, the Jesus whom the Church preached had a different image. He had become either the Vietnam Veteran brother to the flower children, or a counter-revolutionary looking like Che Guevara, or St. Francis of Assisi before the stigmata. Eventually, John Lennon died for our sins, as you could tell from the music played at the folk festival.

Young Catholics who now make Communism wearing earrings remind me of the Little Prince of Saint-Sauveur. That’s because I can’t keep up with the symbolism favored by the young.

Christ, in my book, is both gentle and tender. Pacifists should learn to know Him as a hawk. ROTC students should learn to know Him as a dove, gentle as they tend to be gentle themselves.

At Notre Dame, the child is so often father to the man, since there are no infallible sides to the generation gap. In 1965, coming back to Notre Dame after years of teaching and study in the East, I had less grace under pressure than the Cowardly Lion.

Faced with tensions from the war that divided the nation, I blessed the soldiers who left campus for Vietnam, and wrote letters from peaceniks trying to beat the draft. Pacifists, I hoped, were a separate breed who heard God’s voice calling them to be his witnesses in a special way, like cellists who take religious vows. Pacifism, however, is not every lad’s cup of tea, but neither is wearing a Green Beret.

Nobody suspects a 65-year old priest of suffering from a psychiatric wound inflicted on him as an armchair chaplain counseling soldiers in war and peace. Yellow ribbons make me sick as though I were a vampire sucked by a crucifix. Like the Ancient Mariner clinging to the Wedding Guest, I’d like to bend to the ear of Junior Class parents of the generation that set fire to Hanoi.

The Vietnam War Memorial is the Wailing Wall the Vietnicks visit when they want to cry or pray. Vietnicks and peaceknicks alike could serve me like a walling wall if they would listen to the last of the flower children, singing: "Blowin’ in the Wind," even though the wind has changed directions.

What are the Junior Parents teaching their kids but the desert storm that is replacing the jungles, wet with rain?

"This spring we've got three big tournaments, including Purdue and Indiana. We're spreading out. We're starting South Florida for a tournament, and the team's not new, so we're pretty consistent, then we'll have two seniors graduating, and we have pretty solid underclassmen on the team."

 Yet rosy futures aside, critics remain divided. It seems unfair to us, from unusual, when discussing college athletes, to hear state-and even the "athletic department unfairly draws funds from the academic department," "athletes aren't real students," and "the university only cares about you if you're an athlete."

Many from such discussions, however, are treatments of the role of women's athletics. Additionally, it should be noted that many of whom those who have publicly described such athletic department favorism either hold academic positions at universities with imbalances between sports and schoolwork, or are sensationalists and attention-seekers.

Nord Dame, however, has been observed to enjoy a fruitful relationship between academia and athletics. What has not often been observed, however, are the benefits which sports accrue for the university. Yet what has perhaps been most glaringly absent from such discussions at Notre Dame have been the benefits that a natalized treatment of the effects of sports has upon the university.

Women's sports at Notre Dame have historically been classified as "non-revenue sports," but are characterized in conscious efforts to support themselves financially — witness the recent firing of Sports Marketing Manager Bill Schill a year and a half ago.

Furthermore, the women's sports teams, like any athletic team, are in a financially precarious position, Aside from improving Notre Dame's ability to attract students, provide female students with a wider range of opportunities.

The responses of the coaches and athletes interviewed for the Sports in Series gave varied answers to the question of the purpose of women's athletics at a university, but were nearly unanimous in regards to the benefits. The "purpose of both men's and women's intercollegiate athletics is to give our students a chance to compete at a high level," remarked Notre Dame women's soccer coach Chris Wurts. "It is a way to get the whole collegiate experience.

"The purpose of women's athletics that is different from that which is given in the classroom. Our students learn the values of commitment, dedication and teamwork.

"The purpose is the same for men and women," explained Plano, who works at Notre Dame for 17 years. "Sports is an opportunity of what you enjoy. Track prepares you for work and life. The people who are hard workers in track and field cross country tend to be right in the classroom as well."

"I anticipated that my team last year, Just Chillin', would be much better this year. I can't play this year, but I wish that I could play," stated Griggs, another second-teammember.

The football team will be holding their own tournament in order to allow returning players a chance to play in some meaningful competition prior to the bookstore tournament.

Two options exist regarding the host level of competition of this year's tournament will be affected by the rule.

"The quality will go down a little, but as the teams near the finals, it will be just as competitive. However, some teams will be hurt by the loss of key players," said Commissioner Kevin McGee.

"The tournament will be weaker this year: Teams will be hurt if they depend on performances of football players. We will not be able to replace a player like that," said David Griggs, a teammate of Griggs in last year's tournament.

Special to the Observer

Two high school seniors have signed national letters of intent to enroll at the University of Notre Dame and participate in volleyball and basketball programs.

Nicole Coates is an outside hitter from Princeton High School in Princeton, Ill. Coates was a three-time all-state pick and was selected to the United States Volleyball Association Junior Elite camp in 1990.

A member of the Top Gun Club Team in 1991, Coates led Princeton to a state championship in 1991. Coates, who by graduation will have received 16 varsity letters in four different sports - four each in volleyball, track, tennis, and basketball - was invited to play for the USA Today's Illini Prep Athlete of the Year for 1991.

Chirsty Peters is an outside hitter from Solana Beach, California. Peters was named co-MVP of the Palomar League in 1990 and was selected to all-tournament teams at the Mt. Helleys and Santa Barbara tournaments.

Daly expected to be named Olympic coach

NEW YORK (AP) - Detroit Pistons coach Chuck Daly appeared as the likely choice to coach the 1992 U.S. Olympic basketball team when both USA Basketball and the Pistons called news conferences for Friday morning.

USA Basketball said its 10 a.m. EST news conference concerned the selection of the Olympic team's coach for 1992 Games in Barcelona, Spain. The Pistons did not announce the purpose of their news conference.

Daly, 66, has led the Pistons in consecutive NBA years. He has a 62-21 record in the NBA playoffs, the best among active coaches.

The 1992 Olympics will be the first in which NBA players will be allowed to participate. The U.S. team is expected to have nine NBA players and three college players.

Daly began his coaching career as a Duke, where he was an assistant coach from 1963-69. He was freshman coach the first three seasons and then was a varsity assistant coach.

He then became head coach at Boston College for the 1969-70 and 1970-71 seasons, leading the Eagles to a 26-26 record.

Daly moved on to the University of Pennsylvania, where he stayed from 1971-77. He led the Quakers to four Ivy League titles in seven seasons and a 125-38 record.

He left the college ranks to become an assistant to Billy Cunningham with the Philadelphia 76ers, where he stayed for four seasons. Daly was assistant coach at the Pistons on May 17, 1983.

Daly had a career record of 403-231 going into Wednesday night's game at Milwaukee.

While we agree that Israel must leave Kuwait, we feel that this enormously destructive war is an inappropriate and disproportionate means of achieving that objective.

We believe that this war does not serve the interests of the United States. Nor will it contribute to Middle East stability or global security.

We call for a cease-fire and a concerted international effort to resolve this crisis.
Irish hope to solidify poll position

By RICH SZABO

With a chance to strengthen its national ranking, the Notre Dame women's tennis team travels to Bloomington, Indiana this weekend to compete against some of the best teams in the country. The Irish, ranked 25th in the Velo College poll, will face South Carolina on Friday, William & Mary on Saturday, and Indiana on Sunday. The Hoosiers are the top-rated team in the region, with the Irish second.

Irish coach Jay Louderback is not overestimating the weekend matches, but feels that the team will respond to the challenge with strong performances. "Indiana is 16th and South Carolina 17th," said Louderback. "William & Mary did not make the poll, but Trinity's (Colleges) number one and two singles players transferred there and they may be the best team this weekend, even though they are not ranked. We could easily come out 0-3 or 3-0. We don't know, but I think we will hang in there in all three matches."

With such strong competition, the Irish will need solid performances from all players. Junior Tracy Barton will play number-one singles, but the rest of the singles lineup is subject to potential rearrangement.

Louderback said, "From two through six (singles) we are very equal in level. We will not do a lot of changing around, but it depends on who we're playing."

Melissa Harris, Lisa Tholen, Terri Vitale, Kim Farella, and Katie Clark will probably fill out the singles slate for the Irish. Christy Faustmann, normally in one of the top singles spots, is still out. She started light hitting this week, but, said Louderback. "It will be slow for a while, with nothing really physical."

Just what style of play does this team, now 5-0 and looking for a top four ranking. "I feel that I need to provide motivation for the other swimmers," she explained. "I am excited for my last meet, but I know that I will miss the closeness of our team."

Looking back on her experiences as a member of the Saint Mary's swim team, Olivieri finds it to be a positive one. "It was fun to swim on the collegiate level since I never swam competitively before," she said. Olivieri adjusted well to collegiate competition. At Saint Mary's, she qualified for the NAIA Nationals both her freshman and junior years and was selected as a Scholar-Athlete last year. She spent her sophomore year in Rome. As a team captain, Olivieri plays a role in building and maintaining team unity.

Men's tennis to face three tough opponents at Eck

The Notre Dame men's tennis team will have to get back to business this weekend when they host three matches in three days at the Eck Tennis Pavilion. Notre Dame will entertain Southern Illinois Friday at 3 p.m., Illinois Saturday at 11 a.m. and North Carolina Sunday at noon.

Although the 13th-ranked Irish aren't looking past the first two matches, the one they are gearing up for is the match versus No. 15 North Carolina. The Tar Heels, coached by former Wimbledon quarterfinalist Allen Morris, may be even better than their ranking indicates.

"They are very good," Irish coach Bob Bayliss says of the Tar Heels. "In my opinion, they are a top-10 team. They have_Tar Heels. "In my opinion, they

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Mattingly's salary arbitration record lasted four years. Wally Joyner lasted five days.

National League Cy Young Award winner Doug Drabek broke Joyner's mark on Thursday with the first $3 million award in arbitration history. Raymond Goetz, who heard the case on Wednesday in Chicago, picked the 28-year-old right-hander's request of $3,335,000 instead of the team's offer of $2.3 million.

"Salaries are going up a lot, but people don't complain about movies stars making (big) money; they still go to the movies," Drabek said. "We're in the entertainment business, just like movie stars and rock stars. You have to go where the market is and adjust yourself to the changes."

On another busy day in the baseball salary market, Fred McGriff and the San Diego Padres formally announced their $15.25 million, four-year deal, which gives him the fifth-best salary in baseball. If the Padres exercise their 1995 option, McGriff would get $19 million over five years.

Left-hander Chuck Finley, who had been scheduled for a hearing on Thursday, tripled his salary when the California Angels settled at $2.5 million, a $1.7 million raise.

In other settlements, right-hander Jeff Robinson and Baltimore agreed to $275,000, a $165,000 raise, while outfielder Kevin Romine and Boston agreed to $355,000, a $95,000 raise.

Right-hander Willie Fraser and Toronto settled at $750,000, a $340,000 raise, while right-hander Mark Portugal and Houston agreed to $705,000, a $485,000 raise. Los Angeles' John Candelaria, who is not yet eligible for arbitration, settled at $230,000 to $315,000, a $170,000 raise.

Players and owners have split the right side of the ledger by arbitrators, and 28 players remain scheduled for hearings. Drabek's record may not last long. Bobby Bonilla and Pittsburgh had their hearing Thursday and the outfielder is asking for $3,475,000. The team is offering $2.4 million.

Drabek, 28, became the fourth highest-paid pitcher in baseball behind Roger Clemens ($5,380,250), Dave Stewart ($3.5 million) and Bob Welch ($3.45 million). Drabek became the 38th player and first Pirate with a $3 million contract.

"We're delighted we thought we cleanly won," said Randy Hendricks, one of Drabek's agents. "The Pirates were respectful and cordial in negotiations, but they came in with a low-ball figure."

Women's hoops meets Miami of Ohio

RENE FERRAN

The Notre Dame women's basketball team (18-4) takes a break from ACC play this weekend as it hosts Miami of Ohio at 2 p.m. Sunday. The Redskins own a 2-1 advantage in the all-time series with the Irish, but the two teams have not met since the 1982-1983 season.

Miami (9-12), defending Mid-American Conference champions, are struggling this season, having won four straight before Wednesday night's game against Ball State. Irish coach Noreen McGraw characterized the Redskins as an "up-and-down team," which concerns her heading into Sunday's matchup.

"Because of the MAC's automatic bid, they could very well be an NCAA Tournament team," McGraw said. "It's important for us to win so that if they would make the tournament, it's another team in the tourney that we've beaten. That makes it a big game for us."

A non-conference game deep into the conference slate can cause problems for some teams, especially if they are fighting for league titles. With Notre Dame dominating the ACC this season, however, McGraw welcomes the change of pace.

"We get in a rut when we start playing just conference teams," she said. "We've already beat them once, and we come into the games a little complacent, knowing we can win. This is good to be playing a team you have not seen."

Irish assistant coach Kathleen Weber characterizes the Redskins as a "half-court-style team," one which runs sparingly and will try to slow the pace down against Notre Dame.

For the Irish to be successful, Weber believes two Miami players -- especially kept under control. The first is center Julie Howell (13.1 ppg, 4.9 rpg), the team's leading scorer and rebounder, while Kelley Berens (8.9 ppg, 4.5 rpg) is the Redskins' most active player on the boards.

"(Berens) is a very aggressive, hard-working, hard-nosed type of player. We're going to concentrate on keeping her off the boards," Weber said.

Unlike several of Notre Dame's latest opponents, Miami is not a good three-point shooting team, hitting only 25 percent of its three shots. Overall, the Redskins shot 44.8 percent from the field.

Miami sports a very balanced scoring attack. Howell is the only Redskin averaging in double figures, but five other players, including Berens, score at least 8.5 points per game.

The other Miami starters are forward D'Nella Seiple (6.4 ppg) and guards Adrienne Spatz (9.4 ppg) and Regina Smith (9.0 ppg, 4.5 apg).

HOLINESS IN THE NEW TESTAMENT

"Holiness" evokes ideas of "saintly virtue" or extraordinary acts of faith and love. Yet in the New Testament the whole community is called "the holy church," or "a holy priesthood." In the Bible "holiness" does not suggest primarily virtue or moral perfection, but a sense of wonder, reverence and even fear and trembling. By examining some of the uses of holiness in the New Testament, the lecture will attempt to explore manifestations of "holiness" in today's church and society.

Notre Dame tries to ground Owls’ drive to NCAA tourney

By MARK MCGRATH
Sports Writer

The 20th-ranked Notre Dame women's basketball team raced to an 87-62 victory over MCC rival Detroit last night. The Irish overcame a great discrepancy at the foul line to gain the victory. Notre Dame went to the charity stripe only four times the whole game as compared to Detroit's 20 free throws.

The Irish had six players in double figures, led by Karen Robinson's 20 points and eight assists. Co-queue Washington, Sara Liebacher and Megan Nowlin all chipped in 13.

The Lady Titans were led by Moody Chapman, who scored 16 points. Newlin did an excellent job containing Sharron Miller, holding her to only seven points, eight under her season average.

Notre Dame shot 56 percent from the field for the game while holding Detroit to only 43 percent. The Irish also enjoyed a 39-32 rebounding advantage over the Lady Titans.

NCAA rule affects Bookstore Tourney

By MARK MCGRATH
Sports Writer

The 20th year of the Bookstore Basketball tournament will provide a new look for all people involved.

No longer will it be possible for students, faculty, and staff to observe returning varsity football players playing against other members of the Notre Dame community. The great performances of people such as Dorsey Levens, Demetrius Donald and Brady Griggs will be missed by all.

The culprit of this misfortune is a new NCAA rule limiting spring football practice. This rule has been in effect for two years and was passed this winter at the NCAA convention.

In the past, the rule regarding spring practice allowed much more flexibility. The football team had 36 days in which they could practice on 20. This flexibility allowed the coaching staff to release players from practice if they had a Bookstore game.

However, the new rule only allows 21 days for a team to practice a total of 15 days. Because of the rule, the coaching staff will not be able to release any players prior to the Bookstore tournament.

The Irish have 68 scholarship players returning for next year. "It would be disastrous to the team to release any players to play Bookstore because spring practice is when the team for next year is formed," said George Kelly, former Irish football coach and presently the Assistant to the Athletic Director.

"Both the players and the coaches have an obligation to each other and neither will be involved this year," noted Kelly. Irish players have different views regarding the new rule.

"I like the new rule because spring practice started to drag on last year. The new rule will allow more free time and will allow the team to get together sooner," said Levens.

"The rule has both a positive and a negative side to it," DuBose said. "It is good to cut down on the time spent in practice. The resulting free time will allow us to get more of our strength and a chance to do what you are here for, which is to get an education. However, the rule prevents us from getting even better as a team and as an individual."

Despite their views on the new rule, all people affected will miss participating in the tournament.

"Bookstore Basketball is one of the greatest events that happens on this campus," said coach Lon Holz.

"It's a really exciting time for those involved with women's track because the team is really in its infancy. The men's team has been around for over 100 years, but it will be fun to watch the team grow," said Joe Thomas, the men's coach.

"We are able to bolster the cross-country team very quickly," continued Paine, who also coaches cross country. "The cross-country team can be national-class in a very short time."

In its brief history, the cross-country team has made significant advances. In 1988-89, the team's third season of varsity competition, Notre Dame seized the runner-up title of the MCG, a position it captured again last year.

This season, the team ran away with the MCC championship.

The women's golf team, meanwhile, has seen constant improvement since its creation.

Coached by Tom Harlon and Joe Thomas, the team has undergone a major change in competition but a major change in attitudes as well.

"I came in as a freshman when the team was just a club," said senior captain Roberta Breyer. "I was very pleasantly surprised when it went varsity. I think that the program is going really well—it's changed dramatically since our first year of varsity."

"We're better and more competitive. The first year was very different from being a club. We had only a few events, and that has boosted the confidence of the team. We've had a lot of hours practicing and our coaches have helped us to compete better."

Many of the improvements made was due to the move from club to varsity. "It made a great difference," said back. Now, we're well-feeding and practicing," Breyer said. "Our discipline and dedication really was the reason that most of us have improved so much."
