Iraq agrees to allied cease-fire conditions

SAFWAN, Iraq (AP) — Allied and Iraqi military leaders agreed Sunday to a tentative cease-fire and a quick release of war prisoners in a dramatic meeting of commanders at a captured desert airstrip in southern Iraq.

"I am very happy to tell you we agreed on all matters," U.S. Army Gen. H Norman Schwarzkopf told a crowd of soldiers and journalists after the two-hour meeting in a tent inside the crushed-stone runway.

He announced that a "symbolic release" of POWs would be made immediately to show good faith, and that "all detainees," including several thousand Kuwaiti civilian hostages held by Iraq, would be treated as war prisoners.

Iraq's U.N. ambassador, Abdul Amir al-Nihari, said in New York that Iraq had released 10 POWs already, among them six Americans, "including one of them the young lady that was captured.

Schwarzkopf, the U.S. commander in the Persian Gulf, and other allied chiefs refused to say whether they had learned how many POWs are held by Iraq. The U.S. command knows of at least nine Americans. The only woman U.S. soldier listed as missing in the war is Army Spc. Melissa Rathbun-Neal, 20, of Grand Rapids, Mich.

He said U.S. troops would withdraw from occupied southern Iraq as soon as a permanent cease-fire was signed and Iraq has complied with U.N. resolutions. Those resolutions say Iraq must, among other things, rescind its annexation of Kuwait and accept liability for war damages in the emirate.

About 12 hours after the meeting in Safwan, Baghdad Radio announced that Iraq has accepted the tougher U.N. conditions. That acceptance could clear the way for a permanent cease-fire in the Persian Gulf War.

In other developments Sunday:

• Iran's official radio reported Wednesday that Iraq had sent a delegation to Baghdad for talks; and that U.S. authorities have appointed a "commission of inquiry" to investigate the fate of eight U.S. hostages.

• Saddam began the long process of rebuilding his war-torn nation and restoring his image as a regional leader to be reckoned with. Baghdad Radio reported Sunday that he led two meetings dealing with the restoration of Iraqi communications, and "the report of his activities since Tuesday.

In Safwan, two Iraqi army lieutenant generals, Sultan Mahdawi and Sabah Abdumahab, led the eight-member Iraqi delegation to the test rendezvous. U.S. sources identified Ahmad as Saddam's deputy chief of staff, or third-ranking man in the defense establishment. Mahdawi was the Iraqi 3rd Corps commander.

The U.N. Security Council, which set a 15-day deadline for Iraq to accept a cease-fire terms presented by the U.N. Five Notre Dame students were hospitalized, including one who was last seen injured, when they were attacked off-campus by a group of South Bend area residents, early Saturday morning, according to Chuck Hurley, assistant director of Security.

A group of five males from Notre Dame and four Saint Mary's University students were walking from a party they attended in a nearby neighborhood on the north-west side of South Bend when they decided to call a taxi, Hurley said.

While one of the members of the group was walking to a telephone booth at a service station near the intersection of Elwood and Portage streets, a group of five males drove by in a red and white Ford Bronco yelling derogatory comments to the students, one of the victims said.

According to this victim, some of the ND students yelled back. At the South Bend area residents causing the students to stop their car and first approached the individual in the phone booth, while the rest of the group remained at a distance of about 30 yards from the phone booth.

According to the victim, one of the suspects approached him and accused him of "talking trash." The student in the phone booth denied doing so and told him to go away, then returning to his conversation with the taxi company.

As a result, he was hit across his head with a baseball bat and knocked out. The suspect, of the group then went over to the rest of the group where the victim were yelling derogatory comments to the students, one of the victims said.

Raid on McCormick's brings 4 arrests

By MONICA YANT

Associate News Editor

A Thursday night raid at McCormick's Comedy Club in the St. Joseph County S.U.DS. Task Force netted four arrests for "minor in tavern." According to Sgt. James Moon of the South Bend Police Dept., three of the four cited were students at Notre Dame or Saint Mary's.

The raid on McCormick's, located on 125 N. Michigan, came less than a week after police arrested 92 minors at Club 23 and Bridget McGuire's Filling Station, all for 'minor in tavern.'

Police received complaints that there were underage patrons inside McCormick's, and a raid was conducted at 11:54 p.m. Of the four minors arrested, three were cited for false identification, according to Moon. Police did not test the minors for blood alcohol content.

After Thursday's raid, Moon said the S.U.D.S. Task Force is sending a message to minors that they are still alive and well in St. Joseph County, and we're out there.

"Our main purpose is not to go out and take everybody who violates the law to jail," he said. "It's to drastically reduce the amount of underage drinking that's going on."

The S.U.D.S. Task Force is comprised of members of the South Bend Police Dept., St. Joseph County Police, Indiana State Police and Indiana State Excise Police.

"Minor in tavern is a Class C misdemeanor. If found guilty, the minors are punishable under state law by up to 60 days in jail and a maximum fine of $500. False identification is also a Class C misdemeanor, he said. Both misdemeanors are decided by a judge at a determined court date.

McCormick's was also cited by state excise police and will go before the alcohol and beverage commission, which decides penalties for businesses' violations.

In related news, officials from Club 23 and Bridge's met with the St. Joseph County Alcoholic Beverage Board Wednesday to discuss last week's arrests. The owners of both clubs claimed the high number of underage drinkers in their establishments was due to excessive use of false identification.

Each bar was issued a warning, and license renewal for Club 23 and Bridge's will be decided in late July.
Seniors avoid reality and the 'g-word'

As of this column, there are a mere 85 days left for the seniors. That may seem like a lot, but in comparison to the 1,080 days (approximately) that made up our four years here, it is only a few minutes.

Within the same week I received in the mail a notice about what will appear on my diploma, the announcement for Senior Formal, and the latest issue of Notre Dame Magazine—the magazine for alumni.

They should have spread out all that reality over the course of two or three weeks. This means I have to start saying that evil 10-letter g-word graduation.

In the beginning of this school year I absolutely and utterly refused to admit I was even a senior.

"I'm a second-year junior. My friends don't make me of that. Plus, claiming seniordom gave me a good reason to go out instead of studying (sorry you had to read that, Mom!).

But I still refuse to admit with that one word that I will soon be leaving.

No one in my dorm section is allowed to say anything pertaining to next year. Jobs, visiting or even the month of May.

Notre Dame is strong tradition in my family. I remember going to football games when I was little and my Dad would get so excited when the golden dome came into sight from the tollway.

Back then I never really understood what the big deal was. For me, the sight of the dome meant the car ride was almost over, a football game was imminent, and I could finally leave the bathroom.

I went home a few weekends ago, and when I returned, it struck me that I would not behold the dome from the tollway anymore—spring break and Easter only.

I don't want to grow up and be in the real world. The security of college life is much more appealing.

Changes for two or three hours a day instead of an eight-hour-a-day job (at least eight hours). You never have to worry about getting fired. You also have not only a spring break, but a fall break. You have great tailgating for even greater football games.

Unless I decide to intentionally fail all my classes, though, I have only about nine weeks left.

It's hard to believe I will have to say goodbye to friends I've been with for four years. There are people that I've met just in the last year—just in the last semester—who I will never get a chance to know better.

So I intend to have a raging nine weeks. And, for those of you who have to put up with me, please try to understand why this is killing me, don't mention that g-word, and I'll be okay.

Jet with 25 aboard crashes

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — A United jetliner with 25 people on board crashed in Denver as it approaches the Colorado Springs airport Sunday morning, and there were apparently no survivors, authorities said.

"We can't even find a chafe," said El Paso County Sheriff Bernie Berry. "There's not a great deal of that airplane left." United Flight 383 en route from Denver crashed at 9:55 a.m. four to five miles south of the airport, the Federal Aviation Administration in Washington said.

There were 20 passengers on board and a crew of five. The FAA and the airline both said all aboard apparently were killed. The plane narrowly missed houses and apartment buildings, at least one person on the ground was injured.

Twelve arrested in campus riot over keg

HARTFORD, Conn. — About 1,000 students at the University of Hartford rioted early Sunday when police tried to break up an unauthorized keg party, authorities said. Students pelleted police with rocks and beer bottles after spilling out of an on-campus apartment to a nearby common. Seven police officers and nine students suffered cuts and bruises. Twelve students were arrested on charges of first-degree riot, which is a felony, breach of peace and interfering with police. Witnesses said officers clubbed bystanders who posed no threat. "They were met by a very large, angry crowd out there," said Hartford police Sgt. Gary Giberson. "It was definitely a riot."

Students from around the world gathered this weekend for the 1991 Law Review Symposium, "The Rights of Ethnic Minorities," to present an examination of the rights of ethnic minorities in the international legal system.

The two-day symposium, sponsored by the Center for Civil and Human Rights and the Notre Dame Law Review, incorporated self-determination as a common theme in a number of the lectures.

Henry Steiner, Professor of Law at Harvard University Law School, and Sharon O'Brien, an Associate Professor and Director of the Undergraduate Government program at Notre Dame, both emphasized that theme in their respective lectures.

"Self-determination is the right to take part in the government... and the right to practice culture in community with others," said Steiner.

O'Brien, who lectured primarily on the political relationship of the United States with American Indians, also emphasized the importance of self-determination.

"Currently, we are in a period of self-determination... It is the time to improve the status of tribes and protect their rights," she said.

Recently, the United States strengthened its political relationship with about 200 federally recognized groups, but the problem is that there are still over 200 Indian tribal groups that are not recognized.

Steiner focused on the ambivalence between individual and group rights and discussed various dilemmas of international regulation in regard to the demands of ethnic minorities for autonomy.

"There are remarkably few clear statements about group rights, although the stress is on the individual... there should be a recognition of the vital role played by groups," he said.

Presently, O'Brien said, the United States maintains a political relationship with about 200 federally recognized groups, but the problem is that there are still over 200 Indian tribal groups that are not recognized.

O'Brien emphasized the rights of American Indians as a group. Steiner discussed the rights of minority groups in general.

"It is obvious, Steiner said, that individuals frequently form groups, therefore have not been given the status of tribes, but the recognition of the vital role played by groups," he said.

Recently, the United States maintained a political relationship with about 200 American Indian tribal groups, but the problem is that there are still over 200 Indian tribal groups that are not recognized.

O'Brien supported this notion, saying "the importance of groups as the political relationship extends between tribes and the federal government, not between the government and individual Indians."

Hence, O'Brien said, increasing self-determination is the only hope for the Indians.

However, she said, "The government is providing more self-determination to the Indians, but they are doing so with such a heavy hand that it's causing tribes to integrate themselves into dominant society to exercise this right."

Being integrated into the dominant society, Steiner said, is not what the Indians want as they hope to preserve their group identity.

Father Oliver Williams visits South Africa

Special to The Observer

Father Oliver Williams, associate provost and associate professor of management at the University of Notre Dame, will visit the Republic of South Africa March 1-12 as a member of the National Advisory council to U.S. firms with operations in that country.

While in South Africa the council's members will meet with government and church officials as well as the leadership of the African national Congress and other black labor movement. The key issue the council is investigating is the role and future of economic sanctions in light of the changing situation in South Africa.

A wholly independent body, the council offers guidance, assistance and, when appropriate, criticism to companies with South African operations as they work toward the removal of the laws sustaining apartheid and toward black so­ cial and economic development.

Other members of the council are Martin Miller, partner in the law firm of Fitch, Miller and Tourse and a trustee of Boston University; Bishop Richard Laymon Fisher, presiding bishop of the Ninth Episcopal District of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, and Ned Munger, a professor at the California Institute of Technology and president of the Cape of Good Hope Foundation.
Veterans Affairs chief: Persian Gulf war cannot be compared with Vietnam War

By SARAH VOIGT
News Writer

Edward Derwinski, Secretary of Veterans Affairs, said in a lecture Friday that there is no comparison between the impending return of 150,000 service people from the Persian Gulf war and the return of American troops from the Vietnam War.

Derwinski, the first to hold the newly created cabinet position of Veterans Affairs, predicted that the Gulf service people should have no readjustment problems.

Unlike the drafted status of most soldiers in the Vietnam War, Derwinski said that the American forces in this most recent war are all careerists, guardsmen and reservists.

"There should be no impact on civilian society as a whole because most of the servicemen are careerists who will simply return to their home bases. Also, the jobs of guardsmen and reservists are protected by law," said Derwinski.

Derwinski contrasted the hostile public response that many Vietnam war veterans faced to the parades and festivities that he predicted the American public will stage to welcome home the reservists and guardsmen who served in the Persian Gulf war.

The Secretary of Veterans Affairs also claimed that the 150,000 returning American service people will be "easily absorbable" back into society. "Most are healthy and safe and will return to their previous jobs," he said.

With an average age of 27, those serving in the Persian Gulf are older than American veterans from any other war. Since only 200 American soldiers were injured in the conflict with about 43 missing in action, Derwinski said that he was grateful that his department would not have more importance.

However, Derwinski said, for the last seven months the Department of Veterans Affairs has been preparing for the worst. "Seven months of getting ready for what turned out not to be necessary still equipped us to do our job better," he said.

Derwinski said that his department has improved and expanded in intangible ways since last August. "We've perfected procedures for processing claims and have updated doctors and nurses with special training for victims of chemical and biological warfare," he stated.

Before accepting the position of head of this department, Derwinski represented the 4th district of Illinois as a 12-term member of the U.S. House of Representatives. He also served for many years as senior Republican member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Derwinski's lecture was sponsored by the College of Business Administration.

Baum lectures on problems faced by women, minorities in field of engineering

By MARK CAWLEY
News Writer

Engineers are "problem solvers that work on things that make society better," according to Eleanor Baum, a guest speaker from the Cooper Union for the Advancement of Science and the Arts. She went on to say that there are, however, distinct problems for women and minorities who plan to enter the field of engineering.

Baum’s lecture, titled "The Challenge of Engineering," concerned the difficulties facing women and minority engineers in the classroom and in the work force.

Baum, the only female dean of an engineering program in the country, began on a note of optimism as she described how society has changed since she began her studies in engineering. "It used to be that a woman went to school to become educated enough for some educated man to marry you," she said. Baum called the situation for women engineers at that time as "very limited."

Although societal perceptions of women and minority engineers have changed, it is still difficult for them to enter and succeed in the field of engineering. Baum believes that the root of this problem lies in the method of recruiting engineering students. Guidance materials developed by engineering schools are usually "horrifying and badly done," she said.

High schools are also hampering the recruitment of women and minority engineers, Baum said. "Surveys show that some high school guidance counselors actually discourage women from entering the field of engineering."

Urban high schools hinder prospective minority engineers because these schools "teach little math and physics courses," she said.

Baum complained that the media presents a negative image of the engineering profession to women and minorities. "We have a nerd image. Scientists are always little, nerdy people who are usually male," said Baum.

As students progress to undergraduate engineering programs, Baum noted, "the schools that are most successful in recruiting and keeping women are those that do things differently."

"Engineering schools must work at creating a supportive environment. The schools with the best retention rates are those where students have a one to one type relationship with the faculty," said Baum.

Baum also discussed the problems which women and minorities face in the work force. Baum thinks that problems such as isolation and self-consciousness must be corrected by American industry.

She encouraged industry to pair its young female and minority employees with more experienced engineers.

"Industry should think more carefully of recruiting new women and minority engineers," she said.

Prospects for minority engineers are also improving, according to Baum. Citing the falling number of engineers in the United States, Baum said "the only way around this problem is to increase the number of minority engineers."

Baum’s lecture was sponsored by the College of Engineering, the Freshman Year of Studies, and the Year of Women.

Countrystudents are ambiguous. We don't make public commitments to increase the status of the graduate school and the conditions of graduate students. Thus, the administration has not made a public commitment to increase the status of the graduate school and the conditions of graduate students. Thus, the administration has stated that it will institute a minimum level for all stipends. We will work to ensure that this level is adequate to meet the needs of graduate students.

Another issue which many graduate students are concerned about is summer funding. We feel that in order to be a competitive graduate institution as well as a discussion of giving graduate students more responsibility at the appropriate time.

This would benefit not only graduate students, but under-graduates as well who are taught by graduate students. Support for professional development would also include more university support for conference attendance and publication.

Three other issues specifically involve graduate students. First, the University is currently in the process of revising its job and a GSU committee, of which Kurt is a co-chair, has been preparing recommendations for the administration.

As we understand the matter, the University of Notre Dame still considers itself a Catholic institution, and presumably that means something. But now Notre Dame is at a crossroads; it wishes to be one of the elite research universities in...

Brooks/Meyer: faculty should be teachers first

Money. No longer is more popular than to advocate raising the stipends for graduate students. After all, who opposes getting more money?

But the issue is much more complicated than that. In the first place, finances are not a major concern of graduate students in several of our departments. Specifically, students in departments that are swimming in government grants are not feeling the pinch that those of us in less fortunate departments are feeling. As a result, these highly-favored graduates are not worried much about finances.

Second, each department is allotted a certain amount of money for students and each, as we understand it, is free to use that money as it thinks fit. Thus, policies vary from department to department; each must decide, based on its goals, whether it will offer fewer but more lucrative stipends. That seems, in the main, a matter for each department's students to fight out with their department chairman.

However, we do hope to be able to raise the general allotment to the departments, on the understanding that once the money is received the problem is ours only indirectly.

The social problem.

The position of graduate students is ambiguous. We don't really fit in with the rest of the student body, but often we aren't sure we want to anyway. Under the circumstances, knitting together the graduate students is a desideratum. But how to do this?

"More and better parties," is the general drift of feeling. But before we arrange for more parties, we should ensure how the parties to be good, students have to attend them. If they don't, they have no grounds for complaining.

Complaints can always be made about the lack of sufficient advertising, but at the base of the problem is that graduate students are simply not going in droves to the parties that GSU throws, for whatever reason. GSU provides opportunities for graduate students to meet; it is up to the students to take advantage of the opportunities.

Similarly, what makes a "good" party? "Good beer and good music" are the most common responses. But varying tastes in beer and music make no consensus. To make a small sample: Michael abhors all beer, while Chris adores Labatt's (we think that we can do a decent job at stressing this).

Teaching. This year GSU seems to have done a decent job at stressing the importance of teaching for graduate students. But are the various departments providing the opportunity for graduate students to practice—by actually teaching classes?

GSU can make recommendations about policies, and we plan to, but in the end the decisions about how to employ graduate students are left to the departments. Again, the concerned students willing to air their concerns will be able to effect much more than GSU can by its recommendations.

Faculty. Finally, and most importantly, often we graduate students consider the graduate program a vacuum, as if our aims are separate from those of the University as a whole. We think this is a mistake.

Kurdish leaders see State Department snub

WASHINGTON — Kurdish leaders complained Friday that State Department officials refused to see them to discuss their role in a postwar Iraq. "The Kurds will play an important role in Iraq," said Hoshyar Zebari, a spokesman for the Iraqi Kurdish Front, a coalition of Kurdish opposition groups, Zebari and others Kurds said at a news conference that they had sought unsuccessfully to arrange a meeting with State Department officials to discuss postwar Iraq. Peter Galbraith, an employee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said department officials said they were too busy to arrange a meeting. Galbraith said the Kurds had been welcomed on Capitol Hill, where Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., the committee chairman, hosted an all-day conference on Kurdish human rights. A State Department official, speaking on condition he not be identified, confirmed that officials would not see the Kurds to discuss their political aspirations.

Pizza party extraordinaire in Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss. — The governor ordered 2,000 pizzas and 600 gallons of soda for a victory party Saturday for the families of thousands of Mississippi National Guardsmen and reservists serving in Operation Desert Storm. "When we started planning this, it was going to be a support get-together. But I'm glad it's turned into a victory party," Gov. Ray Mabus told a street full of people who broke out into applause. Arrangements were made for the pizzas and soda to be served during two shifts. A street beside the Governor's Mansion was cordoned off and filled with tables dotted with U.S. flags. About 5,800 families and friends of the more than 3,000 Mississippi servicemen deployed since Oct. 28 were greeted at the mansion's entrance by the governor, his wife, Julie and their 7-month-old baby Elisabeth, and then escorted on a tour.

Street named Schwarzkopf runs into hitch

WASHINGTON (AP) — The mayor raised the idea as a way to thank the United States and President Bush for defeating Iraq — one of Israel's chief Arab foes — in the Gulf War. According to the Journal of the American Medical Association, it was going to be a support get-together. But I'm glad it's turned into a victory party," Gov. Baker sees new chances for peace

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State James Baker said Sunday that vanquishing Iraq's army has created new opportunities for peace in the Middle East, but the United States "cannot impose a solution" on Israel or the Arab states. Baker and other administra- tion officials signaled anew that the coalition will go easier on seeking reparations from Iraq if Saddam Hussein is removed from power. Baker said Saddam remains in control in Baghdad "as far as we know," despite unrest in Ba'ra and other Iraqi cities. President Bush, who spent the weekend at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., has said repeatedly that while Saddam's ouster was not a war aim, no tears would be shed if he were toppled from power.

Top White House officials, making the rounds of network television talk shows, held out an olive branch to Jordan's King Hussein, who sided with Saddam. And National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft said the Bush administration may have to rethink plans for a 25 percent cut in the defense budget over five years.

Scowcroft, on ABC-TV, said he did not think the United States could respond to another crisis in two years the way it did to the Gulf crisis if those cutsbacks take place. "We ought to take a new look" at defense spending, he said. Baker, who leaves Wednesday on a postwar diplomatic mission to the Middle East and the Soviet Union, said, "in the aftermath of this remarkable victory, there may be indeed some 'crossroads' to help solve the Arab-Israeli conflict. But the United States cannot impose a solution," Baker said on NBC-TV.

the base of their recommendations is the fact that graduate students have responsibility for the conduct of their lives and should be so treated by the University.

This revision process, will continue, and we will work to ensure that graduate students are represented in the process.

Another issue which is of great importance especially to married graduate students is the issue of day-care. We realize that this is a complicated issue, but we hope that some sort of day-care system can be creatively worked out, whether university sponsored or by a cooperative of students, and possibly faculty.

Finally, the issue of social space for graduate students is unclear. The GSU has facilitated a very successful series of gatherings at Senior/Alumni Club this past year and has sponsored a number of parties for graduate students, and will continue to do so.

However, the issue of a permanent social space for graduate students, and relativley, the disposition of Wilson Commons, has not been dealt with in any systematic manner.

We will work to rectify this lack of graduate student social space.

We find two other issues which affect the University as a whole. The first, while it may seem trivial, is nonetheless a serious problem. This is the fact that it is next to impossible to bring graduate student concerns to the administration and the University as a whole. Kant has been a departmental representative to the GSU, (Graduate Student Council), a representative to the Faculty Senate, a member of the GSU social committee, and, as mentioned above, is co-chairing the Student Code Reform Committee of the GSU.

We feel that the administrative process necessary to bring graduate student concerns to the administration and the University as a whole, and this is a system that is established by the faculty.

Karen is currently the Secretary of the GSU, and is, too, very involved in professional activities within her department.

Well, it is not inevitable. It is a course that is deliberately chosen, by those who think that it is the only, or perhaps the easiest, road to respectability. But it is true that this is the only reasonable path to our goal, and do the changes that we have been introduced at Notre Dame really signify progress?

A few results are already obvious: immense pressure is put on our faculty members, especially our junior faculty, to publish. Publishing loads have been reduced to encourage "scholarship." Fewer classes are being offered, and the class size is climbing at all levels, but most appallingly at the under-graduate level. Through these and other influences, the nature of Notre Dame education is subtly changing, we think, for the worse.

It is question time for Notre Dame. Do we simply want to be like the hundreds of secular institutions striving to enter the elite circle of prestigious universities, or are we distinctively Christian, distinctively Catholic university that is striving to enter the inner circle? Do we see ourselves as representing something different, something more than our competitors?

And if we do in fact see ourselves as a Catholic school, how is that unique character to show through? In no small part, we think by atmosphere established by the faculty.

With the members already here, we admitively have only the power of exhortation. But positions are continually opening up. When we interview a candidate for a position, we should concern ourselves not only with his or her teaching abilities and scholarship, but also the answer to this question: how can this candidate advance the mission of Notre Dame?

The fact that a candidate has a well-received book or two is neither an indication that he or she can teach, nor that he or she will dovetail with Notre Dame's Christian character.

Now, we are not so simple as to think that a candidate's merely checking off the little box beside "Roman Catholic" ensures his or her compatibility. However, it seems to us that the University as a whole needs to ask: what do we see as our Catholic character? In its attempt to break into the inner circle now inhabited by secular universities, is it jeopardizing its distinctive character, perhaps without even realizing the risk it's running?
DETROIT (AP) — The Big Three automakers, locked into hourly-employee labor expenses, are turning their cost-cutting plans to salaried employees.

Ford Motor Co. Chairman Harold Poling said Thursday the company wanted to pare $3 billion from its annual costs, about 96% of the total last year.

He said the company would begin an early retirement program, delay bonuses and merit increases for managers and suspend matching contributions to salaried workers' savings plans and stock options.

But he said normal attrition, which runs about 5 percent annually, and the early retirement program probably will not suf

Poling said it's becoming increasingly clear that some salaried layoffs are inevitable in the short term.

There are approximately 53,000 white-collar employees on Ford's payroll. Poling didn't set a target, but there was speculation that the cuts could wind up being close to 10,000 jobs.

Ford said employees eligible for the early retirement program would be able to sign up through this month. Their retirements must take effect by May. Officials will be able to see how many layoffs will be needed after the early-retirement program ends.

Earlier in February, General Motors Corp. Chairman Robert Stempel said the automaker would lay off about 100,000 salaried workers during the next two years.

A GM cost-cutting plan implemented in 1987 has knocked $13 billion from the automaker's annual costs, which amounted to about $114.2 billion last year.

Also last month, Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca boosted to $3 billion the automaker's cost-cutting objective. That program, begun in 1989, has resulted in the reduction of an estimated 3,000 jobs from Chrysler's 24,000 white-collar work force.

Last year, the Big Three signed three-year labor contracts with the United Auto Workers union in effect fixing previously variable costs associated with temporary layoffs. The companies set aside pools of money from which laid-off workers would be paid up to 95 percent of their regular pay.

GM's fund is approximately $4.1 billion. Ford's is about $1.6 billion and Chrysler's is about $660 million.

Since the contracts were signed, car and truck sales have taken a dive along with consumer confidence, resulting in a record $2.1 billion in losses during the fourth quarter of last year for the three companies.

NEW YORK (AP) — Trans World Airlines announced another round of drastic fare cuts Friday, slashing the price of first-class and business-class tickets between six major U.S. cities and London.

TWA said first-class tickets were being cut by 60 percent and business-class fares were being cut by 50 percent. The tickets must be purchased by March 15, for travel between March 3 and May 31.

The flights are good out of New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore, Chicago and Los Angeles.

As an example of the savings, TWA said a first-class one-way fare from New York to London was being reduced from $3,205 to $1,292.

TWA and numerous other airlines had recently offered cheap tickets in a promotion which was good through Friday.

Airlines generally move quickly to match cheap fares offered by their competitors, but Friday's cut was immediate.

“TWA has been following the latest ticket sale. We're trying to entice people to fly,” he said.

TWA, one of the nation's most troubled airlines, recently defaulted on a $75 million bond payment, saying it needed to hang onto the cash to stay alive.
Victory sends mistaken pro-war message

Dear Editor:

Let's start with righting the injustices of the South African government against the black people of its nation—oh no, we can't do that. If the South African government is only killing the white people in its country, it hasn't officially invaded anybody. How about taking a hard line on the Tianamen Square Massacre with the Chinese? No, there's too many 'em. About helping out the Soviets before they invade themselves? No, we'll get Gorbachev under and get some good hard line Communism in power—can't go losing our best enemy now. It's bad for defense contracts. So what exactly is this new world order our fearless leader envisions? I think it's all about the military and the use of force in resolving conflicts. In fact, I don't think this is a new world order we're headed for. There's nothing "new" about war. War is old, and in war is disorder. Peace is new. Peace brings order.

Don't get me wrong, I'm glad we are the victors in this war—better us than Saddam. But our victory in this war has a terrible consequence: It serves to support the mistaken belief that war is the way to solve international conflicts. We did no work hard to find a peaceful solution to this very month "trial run" for sanctions, a few hours in Geneva and a wholesale rejection of all peace proposals are not exhaustive attempts at peaceful resolution. If we hadn't responded to Saddam's violence with violence, Israel would not have been attacked, Kuwait would most likely still be standing and the atrocities against the people of Kuwait would not have escalated as they did before the ground war. If President Bush wants a "new world order," I've got a "new" suggestion for him: Give peace a chance.

War is no longer a rational option in this era of weapons that can destroy the world many times over. War no longer affects just the soldiers who fight, but all of humanity. The missiles are poised and ready to be fired. We're just asking for it by waging a war when the whole world is on a hair-trigger, ready to annihilate itself.

George Bush was lucky this was limited, but the fact that he was lucky doesn't make him right. Sure, war got the job done, but since when does the end justify the means? No matter how you put it, war doesn't bring a lasting peace. Is this "new world order" really about peace?

Hypnotist / magician goes ‘Beyond Imagination’

By MEREDITH MCCULLOUGH

Your eyes are growing heavy. Tick. Tock. Tick. Tock. You are feeling very sleepy. Tick. Tock. Tick. Tock. When I snap my fingers, you will be under my power! Snap!

He is a hypnotist. He is a magician. He is a comedian. He is Dr. Jim Wand, “Master of the Mind,” and he is performing “Beyond Imagination” at Notre Dame on Thursday, March 7.

With a background in psychology, sociology, and counseling and twenty years of experience, Wand has achieved national recognition in the field of hypnosis. His proficiency of the art of hypnosis has brought about a rush of praise for his excellence as an educator, therapist, self practitioner, and entertainer.

With keen wit, charisma, and expertise, Wand has performed publicly on over 2,500 occasions. His unique ability to captivate his audiences with hypnosis as a means of entertainment is what has set him apart from other members of his field.

Public figures such as Jay Leno, the Chicago Bears, Miami Sound Machine, George Strait, and the Judeo can attest to Wand’s mesmerizing skills. Including these celebrities, Wand has hypnotized over 150,000 people to this date.

Wand’s main office is located just outside of Chicago in East Dubuque, Illinois, but he spends most of his time taking his performances on the road.

In addition to his regular presentations, Wand tours college campuses across the country. According to the Student Activities board at South Dakota State University, “the audience was with Dr. Wand from the beginning; laughing, responding and encouraging him to continue. The subjects were responsive and treated with dignity.” Not only did Dr. Wand exceed our expectations as a performer, but he also off stage. “I have seen a number of hypnotists at work and would have to say that Dr. Wand is on the top of the list.”

Audience participation is crucial to Wand’s show. Although he invites only about thirty people on the stage to actually be hypnotized, he combines humor and self-help techniques to involve the entire crowd. Since each audience is different, Wand feels it is important to slightly alter each performance to cater to the individual needs of the group. For example, Notre Dame’s exhibition for two hundred people will differ from that of the college of Saint Benedict and Saint John’s University which was attended by 2,000 students.

The show on Thursday night will mark the first time that Dr. Jim Wand has visited the Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s community. Other universities, however, have witnessed Wand’s skill a number of times.

Orville Hiles, Director of Graceland College, remarked in a letter to Wand, “We are happy to report that we are still receiving accolades on your behalf for your fifth visit on campus... in my 15 year tenure we have never invited any entertainer more than three times.”

Jim Wand will be appearing in Theodore’s of Lafayette at 8:00 p.m. on Thursday, March 7. Tickets can be picked up at the Lafortune Information Desk and will be distributed on a first-come, first-serve basis. This event is sponsored by the Campus Entertainment department of the Student Union Board.

The Notre Dame wrestling team placed second at the NCAA Western Regional tournament this weekend. The Irish, with 65 team points, finished behind North- ern Illinois State (85.5), Eastern Illinois State (84), Mississippi State (83), and North Carolina State (86.5) and Valparaiso (1.5). Curt Engler of the Irish defeated Bob Jones of Illinois State to win the heavyweight title. With the win, Engler advanced to the NCAA championships.

Marcus Governs (126) lost to Northern Iowa’s Mark Postek 14-2 in the championship match, but, as the second-place finisher, will advance to the NCAA championships, repeating the trip he made last season.

Notre Dame’s Todd Layton (150) suffered a first-round 4-0 loss in his championship match against Gary Stettenhouse of Northern Iowa. Irish win 14-8 in season opener

BY MARK McGrath
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame lacrosse team successfully opened the season with a 14-8 win over Canisius Saturday.

"It was the first game of the season and everyone was really emotional," said Brian Mayglothing. "I know and we can do better than that." During the pre-season road trip next week when the Irish will begin a three-game road trip against Hofstra.

The coordination and execution as a team defensively was instrumental to Notre Dame's victory. She scored seven straight points—capped by a three-point basket from the right wing—at the end of the run and made two steals. "A big key was Coquese coming in for a three-minute stretch," McGrath said. "I thought that was when we broke the game open." After the Lady Muskateers scored four points in a row to cut the margin to 10 with 12:44 left, the Irish began pounding the ball inside effectively. Davis and Margaret Nowlin combined for 17 second-half points to enable Notre Dame to stretch its lead to an easy 18 before settling for the 16-point victory.

"It was the first game. However, its lead to as many as 18 before settling for the 16-point victory."

"It was the first game. However, its lead to as many as 18 before settling for the 16-point victory."

The Irish then erupted in the third quarter to take an 11-4 lead. This spurt was very impressive considering that the Irish were down one man for the first three minutes due to an illegal stick-penalty against Brian Schirf. Despite the penalty, Notre Dame scored two short-handed goals.

The Irish were paced by tri-captain Eamon Corrigan. "He's obviously their best player," said Irish coach Kevin Corrigan. "You don't stop a guy like that with one person, you do it with good team defense."

The Irish felt the team's performance was good considering it was the first game. However, the defense was the biggest problem. "We made a couple of mental errors," said Irish coach Kevin Corrigan. "We shot the ball poorly," said Ed Lamb. "We didn't play that poorly." "We shot the ball poorly," said Corrigan, "but we really didn't play that poorly."

"We played fairly well today," said Ed Lamb. "We have to get more shots on goal in order to win our future games."

The team will begin a three-game road trip next week when it travels to play nationally-ranked Hofstra.

Men's Tennis defeats Ohio State 8-1 in quickest match

By DAVE McMATHON
Sports Writer

The 13th-ranked Notre Dame men's tennis went into a brutal tennis environment Saturday night at the Columbus, Ohio, Racquet Club. In their shortest match of the season, the Irish came away with an impressive 8-1 win against Ohio State.

Notre Dame coach Bob Bayliss expected a vocal crowd, and the Buckeye fans put up a staunch effort in letting the Irish know how welcome (or unwelcome) they were in Columbus.

"They were the loudest, most embossive crowd we've ever played in front of," said Bayliss. Despite the vocal fans, the Irish (9-5) stayed focused and took care of the business at hand. At number-one singles, Notre Dame junior All-American Dave DiLucia recovered from a 4-2 first set deficit to beat fellow All-American Ty Tucker, 7-5, 6-1.

Buckeye fans have been notorious for their extreme support of Tucker. However, they turned their attention to DiLucia instead, harassing him from the opening point. After a shaky start, DiLucia let his play do the talking and kept the crowd's influence to a minimum.

"They were saying things about my mother that I didn't approve of," said DiLucia. "It was good that she didn't make the trip out to Columbus this weekend." Sophomore Chuck Coleman, suffering from a mid-season slump, suffered a 2-6, 3-6 loss to Gabor Koves at number-two singles.

"Chuck's struggling, there's no question about it," said Bayliss. "But everyone goes through a stage like this and I'm very confident that he'll come through for us." After the tough singles loss, Coleman paired with DiLucia at number-one doubles to take a 4-6, 6-2, 6-4 match from Koves-Enrico Sartori.

"Chuck was down from the singles match in the first set," said DiLucia. "He got pumped up in the second and played great in the second and third sets."

An Irish sweep of doubles matches was highlighted by a 3-6, 6-3, 7-6 (10-8) win from Ryan Wenger and Paul Anthony at the number-three spot.

"They've been playing a lot of close matches like that," said Bayliss. "They were down 4-2 in the tiebreaker, and then Wenger hit a great return to get back on serve." At number-three singles, junior Will Forsyth ousted Ohio State's Jason Kitzer, 6-2, 6-2. Sophomore Mark Schmidt easily defeated Sam Sebastian, a former Notre Dame recruit who entered Ohio University before transferring to Ohio State at number-four singles.

"I was worried about that match because I hadn't seen Sebastian play at the collegiate level," said Bayliss. "Mark kept him off-balance and frustrated him."

At number-two doubles, Forsyth and Zurcher stayed undefeated on the evening, beating Kitzer-Mazza, 6-4, 6-0.

With the upcoming team tournament at Corpus Christi, Texas, the Irish hopes to continue the success they had against the Buckeyes.

Irish capture Midwest Regional Fencing Competition

By ROLANDO DE AGUIAR
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame fencing teams completed a sweep of all events in team competition, and qualified 11 individual fencers for the NCAA tournament in dominating this weekend's Midwest Regional Fencing Championships.

Combined, the four Notre Dame teams lost only one match, while defeating their other 18 opponents. Each Irish team earned an invitation to the NCAA Tournament.

The Irish women's full team (19-0) was quite impressive in its performance, defeating Cleveland State, Northwestern, Ohio State, and Wisconsin. Notre Dame thoroughly dominated each of these matches. Its biggest test would have come from defending national champion Wayne State, but a committee decision was made to cancel the match, which would have started after all other fencing had ended.

"We fenced them once (earlier this season), and we beat them," said women's coach Yves Aurial. "We still finished first. There was no forfeit."

The Irish women were as impressive in their individual performances, as Heidi Piper and Ann Barreda qualified for the NCAA tournament. Piper missed the individual championship by the width of a blade, losing a 5-3, 2-5, 5-2 decision to Larissa Lehmkuhl of Wayne State.

In a setback for the Irish, Barreda pulled her quadriceps muscle while warming up Saturday, which kept her out of individual competition. Barreda, however, was able to come back Sunday and help the Irish to the team title. She should be completely recovered by tournament time.

The men's epee team made an impressive showing in team competition as well, with a 5-0 record, including a stunning come-from-behind win over Ohio State.

The epee squad (23-0) found themselves down, four bouts to one, to the Buckeyes when freshman Greg Wozniak faced the Buckeyes' James Wolan. Wozniak quickly put that bout away, with a quick 5-1 decision. David Calderhead then beat William White 5-2, and Jubbah Beshin continued the comeback with a 5-1 victory over Wolan. With the bout score tied at four, the deciding clash was fought between Wozniak and Ohio State's Igor Moreno.

The bout went into sudden death. After approximately two minutes, Wozniak scored on a well-executed passing move, giving the Irish the win.

The epee team sends Beshin, Calderhead, and Wozniak to the NCAA tournament. Calderhead, a junior, won the gold medal in individual epee competition, while Beshin and Wozniak finished ninth and third, respectively. Beshin, also a junior, won the NCAA epee title last year, while Calderhead earned the bronze medal.

Notre Dame sends a very strong men's foil team to the NCAA championships, as Noel Young, Jeff Piper and Phil Leary will be the starters on the squad. All three of these fencers will fence individually, as well.

In Saturday's individual competition, sophomore Young finished a strong second to Wayne State's Stephen Schroeder, while teammates Piper and Leary earned respective third- and fourth-place finishes.

Schroeder almost single-handedly defeated the Irish fencers in team competition. Schroeder defeated Leary and Alan Girard 3-5 and 5-6, respectively, and came up against Young for his final bout, in a rematch of Saturday's individual final. Schroeder gained a quick 3-0 advantage, and led still at 4-2. Young came back to tie him at 4-4 before Schroeder was able to win the bout.

By winning all three of his contests, Schroeder needed only two wins from his Wayne State teammates to earn the trip over the Irish. But Mike Cho and Eric King could only muster one victory in their first five bouts. With Piper out with a hamstring injury, aggregative earlier in the day, freshman Girard was called upon to fence the final bout for Notre Dame. Girard quickly proved his mettle with a 5-1 rout of King.

The foil squad (22-1) includes three very experienced, internationally sophisticated fencers which make it very strong.

The Notre Dame sabre squad enjoyed an undefeated season until a setback at the hands of mediocre Ohio State Sunday morning. The sabre team (22-1), without All-America Leszek Nowosielski, who was competing in Europe, performed disappointingly against the Buckeyes, who checked every touch as if it were their lost.

The sabre team sends Nowosielski, Ed Begger, and Chris Baggar to the NCAA tournament. James Tailfero, the Irish alternate, who placed seventh in the 1990 NCAA sabre tournament, did not receive a recommendation from the Midwest committee to compete at Penn State.

Irish men's track finishes eighth at IC4A Finals

Special to The Observer

The Notre Dame men's track team concluded its indoor season with an eighth-place finish at the IC4A championships this weekend.

The Irish were led by Raghib "Rocket" Ismail, who won the 400-meter dash with a time of 46.16 seconds.

Notre Dame captain Ryan Cahill finished second in the 5000-meter run in 14 minutes 22 seconds.

In the 200-meter dash, freshman Willie Clark turned in a time of 21.69 seconds to finish third.

George Mason University captured the team title for the second year in a row. More detailed coverage will appear in Tuesday's Observer.

Louisville also made good on 43.8 percent of its shots from three-point territory, including 7-of-14 shooting by guards LaBradford Smith and Eilmer Smith, who finished with 20 and 19 points respectively.

Smith, playing in his final home game at Louisville, scored seven of the Cardinals' final eight points to hold off a late Irish rally.

Notre Dame led for much of the first half, taking a 29-27 halftime lead into the locker room after guard Tim Singleton stole the ball from Smith in the Irish defensive zone and fed forward Daimon Sweet for a lay-up as time expired.

Louisville stormed back in the second half behind the three-point shooting of Smith and Sullivan and improved play on the boards by 6-7 strongman Cornelius Holden and Tremaine wingfield.

"The first half, I was pleased when we did very well at keeping Louisville off the boards," Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps said. "But then in the second half, they hit some three-pointers that put them in control."

The Cardinals took an early second-half lead when Sullivan's two free throws followed an intentional foul by Singleton put Louisville ahead 40-39, a lead which eventually grew to six with 8:18 left.

Singleton committed his fifth foul of the game only six seconds later, however, and LaBradford Smith, the Metro's leading free-throw shooter, made four straight free throws down the stretch to prevent a final Irish comeback.

Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps said. "We really didn't do what we wanted to do in the game and didn't," Phelps said. "We really didn't do what we wanted to do in terms of converting."

Sweet led all scorers with 22 points and 12 rebounds, and Notre Dame forward Daimon Sweet for an easy lay-up. Bennett missed an eight-footer from the baseline. Sweet was called for travelling and Keith Tower had his shot blocked by Holden.

"I think the game came down to the last two minutes, when we had the opportunities to win the game and didn't," Phelps said. "We really didn't do what we wanted to do in terms of converting."

Sweet led all scorers with 22 points. Ellery chipped in 18 points and 12 rebounds, and Tower pulled down 13 rebounds.

Irish Baseball Defeats #7 Texas

Special to The Observer

The eighteenth-ranked Notre Dame baseball team won a significant road victory as it upset the seventh-ranked Texas Longhorns 13-4 at Disch-Falk Field Friday in Austin, Texas.

Rightfielder Eric Danapilis led the Irish at the plate as he went 4-5, knocking in three RBI's with two doubles and a single. Danapilis also scored two runs, walked once and stole a base.

First baseman Frank Jacobs provided an offensive spark with his 2-3, four RBI performance. Jacobs blasted his second home run of the season, in addition to doubling and being walked once. Jacobs stole one base and was caught stealing once.

David Sinnes (1-0) was the pitcher of record for the Irish, scattering seven hits and two runs (both earned) over seven innings. Sinnes also scored two runs (both earned) over seven innings while walking six and striking out two.

Notre Dame put the Texas starter into trouble early, as Chris Cox (2-1) was rocked for six earned runs on six hits in five of its six games.

Notre Dame offensive has hit nine home runs this year, and has also scored at least eight runs in five of its six games.

Hall-Armetta bout provides fireworks at Bengal Bouts

BY ROLANDO DE AGUIAR

Like pit bulls, Jody Armetta and Lou Hall would not stop fighting in their 150-pound Bengal Bouts championship fight. Though both boxers were battered by incessant head blows for the full three rounds, neither fell, and neither boxer gave up, despite their weariness as the battle wore on.

"That was a tough fight," said Armetta, who won the unanimous decision. "There were a lot of short, hard punches. We threw so many for keeping Hall on his heels, punches at short range. But by the end, the referee ruled an intentional foul.

Also well-fought was Mike Trainor's unanimous decision over Scott Mulcahy in a non-title bout. Trainor won the third consecutive title, battering Tim Trainor high and low to earn an unanimous decision. Trainor asserted his skills throughout the fight, preventing Trainor from landing all but a few of his deadly jabs. In 1992, Wate won the championship to win four championships. In a rematch of last year's 127-pound championship fight, Brian Stokes won the 130-pound title by beating Tim Phelan on a unanimous decision.

Eveerrick Sullivan outshines LeBradford Smith in win

By RICH KURZ

LOUISVILLE—For the Louisville Cardinals, this was supposed to be LaBradford Smith's day. After all, the 6-3 senior point guard was playing his final game in Freedom Hall, on national television against Notre Dame, no less.

Instead, junior swingman Eveerrick Sullivan outshines Smith, picking up the Cardinals and propelling them to a 65-59 win over the Irish. Sullivan scored 19 points, to Smith's 20, but Sullivan hit the shots that broke Notre Dame's back.

With 11:14 left in the game, the Irish were clinging to a narrow 39-38 lead when Sullivan single-handedly turned a one-point deficit to a three-point advantage for U of L, a lead they would hold for the rest of the game.

Notre Dame's Keith Tower tried to make a cross-court pass to Tim Singleton, but Sullivan intercepted it to give the Cards a five-point cushion.

This game had to have been sweet for Sullivan, who had already lost the 160-pound fight.

Irish rally falters as Cards win

Irish women pull away to win over Xavier 69-53

By RENE FERRAN

CINCINNATI—The 22nd-ranked women's basketball team overcame a sluggish first-half effort to defeat the Muskateers 69-53 in the 1991 regular season finale Saturday afternoon.

The Irish (21-6, 15-1) finished the season as the top seed in next weekend's Midwestern Collegiate Conference tournament to be held in Dayton. Notre Dame will meet the winner of the Detroit-Dayton matchup Friday at 3 p.m.

But first, the Irish faced off against the Lady Muskateers (14-13, 7-9). Xavier needed a victory to qualify for the NCAA tournament, and in the early going, it looked promising.

Notre Dame did not score for almost three minutes to start the game as it fell behind by four, but senior Karen Robinson hit back-to-back baskets around the 10:30 mark to take a 13-10 lead.

The Lady Muskateers hung tough, however, and with 6:40 remaining in the first half, Xavier's Kim Blanton's three-pointer tied the game at 19 apiece. But the Irish outscored the Lady Muskateers 12-5 the rest of the half to take a 31-24 lead into the locker room.

Xavier was successful in keeping the Irish on the perimeter in the half, and they were stone-cold (35.3 percent) as lack of ball movement led to only three assists—Notre Dame averages almost 18 per game for the season—and a stalled Irish attack.

What kept Notre Dame in the game was its defense, holding Xavier to only nine field goals in the first half and forcing 12 turnovers.

"Xavier's game plan was to pack it in inside and make us shoot jumpers," Irish coach Muffet McGraw said. "After holding off Krisi (Davis) getting her second double-double, the Irish were able to pick up on the offensive boards, but shot only 34.4 percent for the game.

"Our defense was good too. It was a low-scoring game, and as defensive games tend to be, it was very ugly."

"I thought we played our hearts out in the first half. We really played great defense, " Xavier coach Mark Elfen said. "I didn't want us happy just to be down only seven points. I wanted to encourage them to stay with it."

It wasn't meant to be, however, as Notre Dame built on the momentum it gained just before halftime. The Irish went on a 13-2 run in a three-minute span to see W O M E N / page 14
