The Faculty Senate requests better representation

A call by the Faculty Senate for better representation on the Academic Council received mixed reviews from the area's administrative faculty and student representatives.

The resolution also requested that University President Father Edward Malloy, who presides over the Academic Council, be stripped of the privilege of appointing three faculty members on the executive committee of the Council.

The new Academic Council would also be able to establish standing subcommittees to address issues in the same manner the Faculty Senate does now. In fact, some Senate members suggested, the Senate could be setting up its own dissolution.

But Frank Connolly, associate professor of Mathematics, said it might be five years or more before the Senate would have to come obsolete if the recommendations were adopted.

Administrators' objections to the resolution ranged from calling it "radical" and "populist" to saying that 10 more members would make the Council "unworkable." Senate members said, but Malloy promised to bring his own recommendations to the next meeting of the Academic Council which will take place December 3.

In other business, the Faculty Senate approved a resolution stating that department chairs are permitted to inform candidates for tenures, renewals or promotions of their recommendations to the dean, after both the department chair and departmental committee on appointments and promotions have sent the dean their recommendations.

The resolution was a watered-down version of a resolution passed by the Senate last year, which Malloy said he would veto, according to David O'Connor of Academic Affairs.

The new proposal must be passed by the Academic Council to be effective.

Women's resources and smoking on campus were among the various issues discussed at the Graduate Student Council meeting last night. Upcoming activities planned for grad students include a Halloween costume party and a resolution of a Wilson Commons Committee.

The Graduate Student Council recently mailed out a directory on women's resources available on campus to all female students at SMC and ND.

"Female students don't realize how many women's resources there are on campus," said Patricia Quattrini, a graduate student representative for the Faculty and Student Committee of Women, which put together the booklet. "I was even surprised at how many existed."

A finalized smoking policy limiting smoking to specific areas on campus is scheduled to come out on Nov. 31, according to Joel Barstad, the GSU representative on the Smoking Task Force. This new policy is a consensus effort by the task force to encourage smokers to quit and protect non-smokers from secondhand smoke.

All grad students are invited to a Halloween costume party on Oct. 31. Students are asked to bring canned goods for charity.

The first deadline for applications for the Travel Grant Fund is NoVember 15, according to GSU President Kurt Mill.

Grad students are needed to volunteer to help the GSU executive committee evaluate and recommend improvements for the Wilson Commons.

For more information about GSU's plans and activities or any concerns, feel free to stop by the GSU office, located in room 52 of LaFonorte, or call 239-6963.

Grace Hall raises money for a neighborhood center

By BILL ALBERTINI
News Writer

In a 24-hour period last weekend, residents of Grace Hall solicited over $1,300 to benefit the Northeast Neighborhood Center.

According to Rich Goode, Grace's assistant rector. Donations came from generous students, alumni, and even members of the University of Pittsburgh Golden Girls, said Karl Nass, social concerns commissioner.

"The enthusiasm was unbelievable," said Nass. "It was incredible the way we came together."

Grace's Social Concerns Commission and dorm residents volunteered for the annual event. There was "massive participation from the whole dorm," Goode added.

The amount raised compared fairly well to the average from other years, which is around $1,000, according to Goode. Last year over $2,000 was raised during the Miami football game weekend.

Grace has donated money to the center for many years. The donations help pay the rent and other expenses of the center, Nass said.

The center provides many services to the citizens of the low-income area, such as basic food commodities, as well as to shut-ins and senior citizens, a neighborhood watch program, trash cleanup and help for families in low-income housing, according to Goode.

Does it pay for women to speak up?

Hill case exposes risks in alleging sexual harassment

(AP) Does it pay to speak up? It is a question that Anita Hill says yes, but she is back in Oklahoma with her credibility in question. And Clarence Thomas, the man she accused of sexual harassment, has been confirmed to the Supreme Court.

In the outcome, beyond public education and high-minded debate, lies a troublesome reality that has been victims of sexual harassment from coming forward.

"Anita Hill came forward and she was shot down," said Sharon Ambrose, a youth advocate at the Cleveland Mediation Center. "It's very hard to listen because you can't help but wonder: What would happen to me?"

The risks have always been daunting which is why so few victims file sexual harassment complaints. But Hill's was perhaps the ultimate nightmare scenario. It was her word against his and everyone was listening as she was accused publicly.

Anita Hill's story is that of a majority of Americans — men and women alike — rallied around her and apparently were skeptical about Hill's credibility, according to several recent nationwide polls.

"There's a lot of backlash," said Lynn Hecht Schafran, an attorney with the NOW Legal Defense and Education Fund in New York. "I doubt that gives courage to women to come forward. There are policies, but how many believe they're sincerely enforced?"

Many employees double look into the male faces of the Senate Judiciary Committee to see the gap in perception and experience broken wide open. Proving charges of sexual harassment is as easy as a gamble.

Hill's motives were assessed repeatedly in the hearing room and in headlines. Her testimony was followed by speculation that alternately labeled her a scorned woman, vengeful ex-employee, sociopath.

"That panel did a very good job of haulin' out every kind of attack that women face," Lady said. "It would make anyone think twice."

And yet, for those unwise, the threat of backlash was real. And, through the months, many women have experienced sexual harassment and, if so, how to file a complaint. Employees are interested in improving grievance procedures and providing sensitivity workshops to prevent such situations.

"There is so much to explore here," said Lynn Hecht Schafran, an attorney with the NOW Legal Defense and Education Fund in New York. "Women need to look at their own employment situations and realize that disclosure is risky. The risks are compounded by delay."

The panel, and public, were perhaps most troubled by Hill's 10-year delay in reporting her molestations. Though psychologists have documented the reasons for such a deterrent, people remained puzzled. "Why did she continue playing the game?"

"I spoke up immediately and it didn't help me at all," said Lynn Martin, who followed the recommended procedures after her supervisor at the Small Business Administration in Atlanta allegedly harassed her.

She confronted him informally, then formally with a grievance, and ultimately in the courts, where a judge ruled against her last winter. "It was a question of credibility," she said finally.

"I am ruling against her, a federal judge found no credible evidence in the Martin's complaint."

"I hope my experience — Anita Hill's experience — won't stop women from coming forward. But really, I'm afraid I will. People can see the system does not work," Marlin said.

The message is, you come forward, you get subjected to this. I think this is a setback." A setback, perhaps, but at the same time a pervasive workplace problem has been brought to center stage.

Texan murders 22, then kills himself

KILLEEN, Texas (AP) — A man smashed a truck through a restaurant window Wednesday and sprayed semiautomatic gunfire at people in line for lunch, killing 22 and wounding 20 more before turning suicide, authorities said. It was the deadliest mass shooting in U.S. history.

"The guy jumped out of the truck and said, "This is what Bell County has been doing to me,"" said Sheldon Smith, a porter at the Kuby's Cafeteria. "As he opened fire, the guy that he ran over with the truck was trying to get up and he shot him in the head." Then he pointed toward the line where the service was and he started shooting down the line.

Twenty-three people were dead, including the gunman, Bell County Peace Justice Robert Stubblefield said. At least 20 people were wounded, hospitals reported.

Killeen Police Chief F.L. Giacomozzi said he had no idea of the motive for the shooting, and there was no immediate explanation of the gunman's comments.

The gunman "entered the business at 12:41 and began firing rounds from a semiautomatic weapon," said police Captain Berkeley Jones. "Shoots were fired for approximately 15 minutes. At 12:51 we subdued the guy that he had, but that wasn't out of bullets when the officers got there."

Wink escaped through a window at the back of the restaurant, he said. Giacomozzi said someone had broken the window previously when people tried to escape. Wink was wounded and was taken to three hospitals.

Seven people were in stable condition at the Killeen Veterans Hospital, said police chief Wink. Wink's name was not released. Another 12 people were injured and taken to four hospitals.

Once the shooting started, the gunner "was firing at anything he could shoot," Wink said, adding that the man had "no compassion for anyone." "He looked at me and pointed the pistol," Wink said. "I thought I bought the farm." But the gunman turned instead and fired at a woman trying to run.

The police chief said he didn't know how much ammunition the man had, but that "he wasn't out of bullets when the officers got there."

The death toll surpassed the July 18, 1984, slayings in San Ysidro, Calif., when James Oliver Huberty opened fire at a McDonald's restaurant, killing 21 before he was fatally shot.

Robert Holland, 26, a clerk at an auto parts store next to the Kuby's, said he heard the truck crash through the restaurant window and then "people were running everywhere."

Wink told CNN he was at lunch with his boss for "busines..." day.

A survey says best and brightest students tend to be unmotivated

WASHINGTON (AP) — High-achieving students work very little for their grades and are generally not encouraged by teachers and parents to expend much effort on school work, a study said Wednesday.

The annual survey of America's best and brightest, conducted by Who's Who Among American High School Students, found that 36 percent of the students study one hour or less a day, and only 21 percent study 11 hours or more per week.

Attesting to this fact, was Karri Swenson, a senior at Lake Braddock High School, Springfield, Va., who ranked fifth in this year's "Who's Who." She said she seldom receives homework and studies only when she expects to be tested the next day.

Fewer than one in three said they had higher academic standards, stricter discipline or a longer school year would improve the quality of education at their school, a great concern of many educators.

"What is wrong with our education system that our best and brightest students are so unmotivated?" asked Paul Krouse, publisher of "Who's Who.

Krouse said the survey showed "a wide gap between reality and perception."

Despite the students' apparent lack of motivation to work, Krouse noted 81 percent of the teens expect to do better than their parents financially, in their careers and their styles of living. Seventy-one percent expect to earn $30,000 to more than $75,000 within 10 years after completing their education, the survey found.

Krouse said there are many reasons for this.

"Students are not being challenged and motivated enough," he said. "Schools are telling us that this curriculum is way too soft. I think the expectations from schools, teachers, curriculum directors, are too low."

"And there's probably insufficient involvement of their parents, in terms of expectations of their children, as well as their schools. I think everybody needs to raise their expectations and standards for these students to perform better."

On other matters, the poll showed

• 68 percent said teachers required too much subject matter, but only 36 percent said most of their teachers knew how to teach.

• 26 percent said they had engaged in sexual intercourse

• Nearly half of those before age 16.

• 84 percent said they were more concerned about AIDS than any other year, and only 62 percent of those who are sexually active said they rely on condoms regularly.

• 23 percent of the young men said they or a close friend have had an abortion.

• 46 percent said they knew a young person who had tried to commit or had committed suicide. 27 percent have considered it; 4 percent have tried.

Some 5,000 students were chosen for the survey from among the 700,000 students who completed the "Who's Who" questionnaire. The survey appeared in the Sep. 27 edition of "Who's Who." Nationally, 1,879 students completed and returned the questionnaire.

Three-fourths of those receiving surveys maintain "A" averages, the rest "B" averages. One in five plan on medical careers, 10 percent, engineering.

Pope warns Brazil to preserve their land

"For Brazil, environmental protection is first and foremost the right (to) and protection of life," the pope said in a speech before an esplanade carved out of a gold-prospecting area.

An hour-long burst of rain Wednesday over Seattle broke a 45-year spell, but meteorologist Dana Felton said much more was needed to end the dry conditions.

"It might be temporary help, but it's not going to solve the problem," he said.

The National Weather Service said the wind was blowing steadily up to 40 mph and gusting to 60 mph.

Wildfires destroy at least 20 homes

Residents of several suburbs around Spokane were evacuated as wildfires tried to save other homes from the rapidly advancing flames.

No injuries were reported.

Fires destroyed at least 16 homes in suburbs south of Spokane. At least two homes in rural areas north of Spokane also burned, officials said.

Firefighters were unable to pump water to some areas due to scattered power outages.

Thousands of homes in eastern Washington remained without power.

The House supports restrictions on NEA

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted Wednesday in favor of imposing specific prohibitions against subsidizing "patently offensive" sexual exhibits and performances.

On a 286-135 vote, the House expressed its support for a Senate-passed provision imposing the restrictions on the National Endowment for the Arts.

House and Senate negotiators are working out a compromise bill for funding, and must decide whether to include the restrictions first proposed by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Last month, Helms won a 68-28 vote in the Senate to add the provision to a bill providing the NEA with $178.2 million in federal funds for the 1992 fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

The endowment's chairman, John Frohnmayer, said Wednesday he had "grave doubts about the constitutionality of the proposed restrictions. However, he said he would reserve judgment "until the final legislation has passed and we have had time to study it."

NEA supporters succeeded last year in getting similar Senate-passed language thrown out of a bill when negotiators crafted a compromise between House and Senate versions. Those same negotiators, members of the Interior subcommittees of the House and Senate Appropriations committees, were meeting in a room one floor below in the Capitol during Wednesday's debate over the measure.

Because the motion was non-binding, the restrictions on arts funding can again be rejected by the negotiators, most of whom are strong defenders of the endowment.

But favorable votes by better than 2-1 margins in both the House and Senate make it more difficult politically for the negotiators to discard Helms' plan.

Congress earlier tightened restrictions on the endowment's grants after an outcry over federal funds going to exhibits depicting homosexual themes. However, it left it to the courts to decide what is obscene and determine what grants applicants would be disqualified.

Helms' measure effectively defines obscenity, prohibiting the endowment from using tax dollars "to promote, disseminate or produce materials that depict or describe, in a patently offensive way, sexual or excessive activity or orgies.

It's Chief House supporter, Rep. William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., said the language is needed because the agency is still awarding grants to theaters groups whose performances depict homosexual acts.

Rep. Randy Cunningham, R-Calif., who drafted the Senate version, said Helms' measure would be disqualified.

Nobel prizes awarded to foreign scientists

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Nobel prizes were awarded Wednesday to a Swiss chemist who improved the tool that measures molecules and a French physicist who discovered patterns in molecular behavior.

The Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences said Richard Ernst won the chemistry prize for speeding development of new medicines and facilitating chemical research through his improvements in nuclear magnetic resonance spectroscopy.

With classical methods it could take years to determine molecular structures. Now it can take hours or days," said Salo Gronowitz, chairman of the awards committee.

Frenchman Pierre-Gilles de Gennes, who has been called the "Isaac Newton of our time," won the physics prize for defining obscenity, prohibiting the endowment from using tax dollars "to promote, disseminate or produce materials that depict or describe, in a patently offensive way, sexual or excessive activity or orgies.

Radar gun ban requested by police

MERIDEN, Conn. (AP) — The Connecticut State Police has banned the use of hand-held radar guns. But police troopers could develop cancer from long-term exposure to the radio waves emitted by the devices.

The move, believed to be the first of its kind by a state police agency, came after three municipal police officers filed workers' compensation claims that developed cancer from using hand-held radar guns.

The ban was ordered Tuesday as a precaution while studies are underway to see if possible links between cancer and use of the devices, said Adam Berluiti, a state police spokesman.

"The feeling here is to err on the side of caution until more is known about the issue," Berluiti said. "The whole situation is still very vague. We want to be cautious because if it turns out they are no more dangerous than a microwave."

Nuclear waste truck continues despite resistance by Indians

FORT HALL, Idaho (AP) — American Indian tribes turned back a truckload of high-level nuclear waste Wednesday, but hours later a judge ordered the shipment to continue on its way to a federal research installation.

The tribes said they were enforcing what they consider treaty rights giving them jurisdiction over shipments across reservation land.

The truck carrying the nuclear waste from Colorado to the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory returned to the Idaho state line after police from the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes turned the shipment back at the edge of the Fort Hall Indian Reservation.

Officer Issa Waterhouse Jr. also gave the driver a ticket for violating a tribal resolution banning nuclear waste shipments until the Department of Energy reaches an agreement with the tribes on how the shipments will be handled.

"They sort of made us mad and a little upset for ignoring us. They thought they could push us around," said Tribal Council member Marvin Osborne. "We turned them around. We wanted to cite them and stop them, let them know we're dead serious."

The 550,000- acre Indian reservation in eastern Idaho is about 80 miles southeast of the engineering laboratory, a federal research installation.

The shipment was the third this month from the decommisioned Fort St. Vrain nuclear power plant at Plattville, Colo., operated by Public Service Co. of Colorado. Shipments of the radioactive waste resumed Oct. 5, three years after Gov. Cecill Andrus declared he wouldn't allow his state to become a dumping ground and less than a month after the state lost its second court challenge.

In a telephone court hearing, Public Service won a ruling from U.S. District Judge Ed Ward in Boise to allow the shipment to continue on its way to the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Court officials said Public Service agreed to voluntarily suspend nuclear waste shipments to Idaho until an Oct. 25 hearing before Judge Loder.

"They crossed into Idaho through a special road used by the (Syrian) military personnel who are exempt from routine identification checks at the border posts," one source said.

The sources refused to identify the man Picco met with in Nabi Sheet.

It is the hometown of two senior officials of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, which is believed to be the umbrella group for the kidnappers: Abbas Musawi, his deputy, and Hussein Musawi, his district commander.

Abbas Musawi now resides in Baalbek and Hussein Musawi in Baalbek, but neither man could be located at the time of the talks.

Picco was accompanied by several plainclothes Syrian security officers, who waited outside as he entered the house in Nabi Sheet where the talks were held, the sources said.

"Definitely more than one team (of kidnappers) was involved in the talks," another source said.

Four groups have claimed the abduction of most of the nine missing Westerners — five Americans, two Germans, a Briton and an Italian. Hezbollah is believed to be the umbrella group for fundamentalist Muslim kidnappers.

The longest held hostage is American journalist Terry Anderson, who was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

The Tehran Times, Iran's leading English-language newspaper, reported Sunday that an American hostage would be freed shortly. Its predictions on previous releases have been accurate.

Picco had returned to the region in July after holding separate talks in New York with Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati and Uzi Landau, the top Israeli involved in the hostage issue.

The Lebanese kidnappers are seeking the release of about 200 Arabs held in Israeli jails or at the Khiam detention center in the Israeli-occupied enclave in south Lebanon.

Israel has demanded firm word on the fate of six of its soldiers missing in Lebanon. American and Israeli officials have said the kidnappers if Israel freed the Arab prisoners.

U.N. intervention in the hostage ordeal was requested by the kidnappers in a letter handed to Pere de Cuellar via British television journalist John McCarthy, who was freed from captivity Aug. 8. American hostage Edward Thomas was released the same day.

On the Sept. 12, Israel freed 51 Arabs and repatriated the bodies of nine Hezbollah guerrillas, according to the kidnapped American journalist, receiving proof that one of its missing servicemen, Rahamin Alsheikh, was dead.
Fortune ranks Atlanta best city for business

WASHINGTON (AP) — Banking regulator L. William Seidman ended his six-year term Wednesday with a warning that the Bush administration’s plan to replenish the government’s deposit insurance fund could fall short.

On his last day as chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., Seidman said the proposed $70 billion in taxpayer-backed borrowing, pending before Congress, may not be enough to pay for all bank failures in the next few years.

The Bush administration, however, has maintained the $70 billion should be more than enough, although Treasury Department officials said they could not guarantee that.

Seidman said his agency expected “very soon” to complete a forecast of bank failures for 1993. It said previously it expects as many as 400 failures this year and next.

In the meantime, Seidman wrote, “It is incumbent upon me before leaving office today to emphasize that it would be very unwise to go beyond this session of Congress ... without a recapitalization of the fund.”

The fund has shrunk to $2.4 billion, from $4.5 billion on June 30, and continues to decline, Seidman said. Without replenishment, failed bank resolutions may be curtailed, he said.

Seidman said he looks back on his term legally expired.

“After more than a year of saying he would quit soon as chairman of the FDIC and the Resolution Trust Corp., the 70-year-old, blunt-spoken banking regulator finally left office on the day his term legally expired,” Seidman said.

During periodic bouts of squabbling with the Treasury Department and White House staff, Seidman often talked of quitting, assuring anybody who asked he would not stick around for his full six-year term.

But there always seemed to be one more big bank to rescue, one more banking disaster for Congress to help settle.

When Seidman took office in October 1985, he and the FDIC were little known outside financial and political circles. But after more than 1,000 bank failures, his face and gravelly voice became familiar to television viewers and his agency, which insures bank and S&L deposits, became nearly a household name.

Seidman plans to remain in the public eye. He is writing a book and has joined CNBC as chief commentator on the cable network’s business programs.

In a wide-ranging interview with The Associated Press, Seidman said he looks back with satisfaction on a legacy of toughened laws and regulations, a larger and more experienced examination force at the FDIC and a functioning S&L bailout agency that two years ago did not exist.

“When you look at the magnitude of the task, the fact that nobody has tried anything like this before, I’ve done a remarkable job,” he said.

Despite their sometimes unflattering stance, Seidman and top Treasury officials have been allies this year in pushing legislation that would permit banks to diversify geographically and into other businesses such as securities and insurance.

The alliance, however, has not prevented Seidman from rebuffing the administration’s suggestion that the new legislation attempt to reduce the nation’s recovery from recession.
Administration only wants what’s best

Dear Editor:

As a senior, I’m getting tired of hearing all the complaints from students about the amount of control the administration has over students’ lives. The administration only wants the best for us. They know what a shock it can be for the average college student to have to leave the craziness of college life to enter the real world and want it to be as much fun for us as possible.

Since most college students abhor the thought of having to take on real responsibilities upon graduation, the administration has designed Notre Dame so that for four years, all students do is beg for it.

Single-sex dorms and part-time relationships are not meant to simulate social interaction and growth, but in fact are in place only to make real life that much more enjoyable after we leave our Lady’s womb. I think about it: When are things the most memorable and enjoyable? The first time, obviously. The administration doesn’t want us to waste all those good times and memories on our college years.

If we aren’t for the thoughtful interference of the administration with our lives, we would end up like those poor souls from other schools who are condemned to look back forever at their college years as the best of their lives. This way, we can only look forward to experiencing life to the fullest when we are grudgingly released from the Notre Dame community.

When I think of the benefits of living under the loving yoke of the Notre Dame Family, I envy all those who choose to live on campus for all four years. I’ve practically ruined the first few years of my life after graduation by moving off-campus.

That great feeling of relief that most feel after graduation is going to be that much more diminished for myself. Instead of being ecstatic at being allowed finally to lead my own life, I’ll have to resign myself to the simple pleasure of leaving South Bend.

So, stop complaining. Stop writing letters about co-ed dorms, responsibility, safe-sex on campus, the Notre Dame-Saint Mary’s relationship, and all the other stuff that makes up the majority of post-parietal conversation. Just remember, if the administration does it, it’s done for you, be grateful. When you rotate back to the world, everything will be so much the better for it.

Condoms would ‘promote sin’

Dear Editor:

I find two main faults in John Blakely’s letter to the editor (Oct. 10), in which he tries to argue that the University should provide condoms to the students.

He likens a parent driving home a drunken child to the University handing out condoms.

The parent is giving the child a “safe ride” as the University would be giving the students’ “safe sex.”

The faulty logic lies in the order of events of each action. The parent is driving the child home, not to the party. If the “safe ride” were equivalent to “safe sex,” the parent would buy the child the alcohol and drive him/her to the party.

Of course, I suppose Mr. Blakely’s “parent” would be saying, “I don’t condone drunkenness,” as the University would not be condoning sex while distributing condoms.

Another faulty point is that Mr. Blakely states that condom distribution is valid because it “is part of the Catholic character to prevent these evils” of disease, abortion, and unplanned pregnancy. True, these should be prevented, and that is why Christ calls all to abstain from sex outside of marriage.

Suppose there is a murderer who slowly tortures his victims to death. Do we give him a guillotine to prevent the evil of torture? No, we should see to it that he ceases killing. Likewise, one must abstain in order to prevent the evils that may come about from sexual intercourse.

Yes, suffering is a part of life, and we should all be more helpful to those in need. But we must never “prevent” evil by promoting sin. And it is also true that “Christ reached out to those in need” to “prevent” evil.

Dear Editor:
A quick response to the letter by Joe Clark, which was printed in The Observer (Oct 8, 1991).

No, Joe Clark's speech wasn't a dour political address. Joe Clark is a very entertaining, insightful and honest man; and his words of advice to younger people are more Americans would be wise to heed.

The French writer, Andre Breton, put it this way: "The most important thing is to be able to laugh without fear of being dismissed as foolish."

Joe Clark seems to have captured something of this spirit, and the way he addressed the issues of "politicisation of religion" and of "the church's role in the national and international community" gives me hope that we will have a brighter future.

But I do have to say that Joe Clark's speech was a source of great disappointment to me, and that it is a shame that he did not take up this challenge to speak more boldly about the issues that matter most to the people of his country.

"You never know who's going to be a onetime this summer.

"I grew up watching 'All in the across several with Act Three Communications. Morris would be to do what he could. After corresponding several times with him (Lear) a great cultural critic," said Morris. "It was a terrible to get this call."

"Pizza connoisseurs will notice that the prices at Papa John's are competitively priced. The pizza is fast, cheap and delicious. On three separate occasions, the pizza has arrived in less than 30 minutes. On this front, Papa John's is even with Dominos, and the two of them are miles ahead of their competitors."

"Pizza fans should be warned that the quality is a little green peppers that pack a punch. They're spicy -- but not too spicy and they're great with beer."

"Sure enough, in August, Morris was invited to Lear's home in Vermont (Robert Frost's former abode) where Lear asked him to co-host a talk show, dealing with -- you guessed it -- spiritual and philosophical issues. The show is not yet definite, but according to Morris, Lear said they would continue to talk about it. "He gave me a big hug and said, 'We're going to be seeing each other a lot,'" said Morris."

"Once again, Morris found himself in a situation that opened the door to opportunities. While waiting for the talk-show to pan out, Lear introduced Morris to several influential individuals in the entertainment business. "Lear loves to put people together," according to Morris. "I knew he was a nice guy, but he was a loving person too. His character was totally contrary to the Hollywood stereotype."

"It was through Lear that Morris contacted David Friend of 'Life' magazine. Friend was in the middle of compiling a series of essays on the meaning of life and asked Morris to contribute. "The meaning of life -- two hundred fifty words or less and one week to do it in," Morris laughed. He kinds of talents, he said. Drabek loses hard-luck game
Avery spoils injured Drabek's masterful performance

PITTSBURGH (AP) — You couldn't pitch much better than Doug Drabek did. The trouble for the Pittsburgh Pirates was that Steve Avery did.

The Pirates were shut out only twice at home all season but Avery and Alejandro Pena — the Killer Bs who have silenced Pittsburgh's Killer B's in a gut-wrencher of a National League playoff series — now have shut them out twice in two playoff games.

After the Atlanta Braves tied up the tightest NL playoff series in history by beating Pittsburgh 1-0 Wednesday night in Game 6, the Pirates were almost apologetic.

As bad as they felt about blowing a chance to clinch the series on their home field, they felt even worse for Drabek, who is now 1-1 in this series despite allowing just one run in 15 innings.

"I've had a lot of great pitchers, but he's as good as any of them," pitching coach Ray Miller said. "He's as good as any of them. He pitched with a lot of heart."

He also was pitching with a bum left leg, but Drabek still didn't allow a run until Greg Olson's two-out, run-scoring double in the ninth broke Drabek's scoreless history.

"He got it out, he really gutted it out," catcher Don Slaught said of Drabek, who spent more than 60 minutes after the game icing down his sore hamstring.

"He wasn't all right physically, but that might have helped him because he didn't overthrow and he used all of his pitches," Drabek said the injury probably cost him his fastball, but he compensated by blending a variety of breaking pitches and relying on his slider for big outs. And there were plenty of them.

"I didn't have my fastball," he said. "Trainer Kent Biggersstaff really did a great job with me between innings, working on my leg. I felt fine. It was a well-pitched game ... on both sides."

In a series of ever-shifting momentum in which both teams have won more games on the road than at home, the Pirates got the kind of well-pitched game it takes to win in the postseason.

Except they didn't score. As Bobby Bonilla said, "We got nada."

The Braves didn't get much more than that off Drabek, who is only 2-2 in the postseason despite allowing just four earned runs in 31 1-3 innings, a 1.15 ERA. The Braves' run was the only one he has allowed in this series.

"He wasn't healthy," Andy Van Slyke said. "He pitched this game with his gut. He's pitched with his gut a lot of times, more than I can count."

"He's the pitcher you want out there in the big game," Barry Bonds said.

Drabek pitched the division title-clinching game each of the last three seasons, and he also won Game 5 with Pittsburgh on the verge of elimination in the 1990 playoffs against Cincinnati.

The Pirates felt very good with Drabek going in Game 6, but they again couldn't get their offense going.

For that they can thank Avery, who has shut them out on nine hits over 16 1-3 innings in a series that has already featured three 1-0 games — or one more than in the previous 22 NL playoffs combined.

"I've seen a lot of great pitchers — (Rob) Gibson, (Dandy) Koufax — and if Avery's not up there with them now, he soon will be," Miller said.

"There's been some incredible baseball in this series," third baseman Steve Bybonilla said. "These have been incredibly fun games to play in, but they must be miserable for the fans — they're really gut-wrenching."

This is the best playoff series in a long time."

"Steve Avery is the best pitching I've seen," Barry Bonds said. "If Avery's in the league much longer, I'm going to develop a new disease — Avery-itis," Van Slyke said. "That's what we've had in this series — Poison Avery-itis."

Cunningham gives out braille football cards

PHILADELPHIA — Randall Cunningham gave some blind Philadelphia school children his new football card — in braille.

"This is just great," Cunningham said. "It's amazing that they know what I've done. And they always say that they've seen me. Like one kid said 'I saw you dive for that touchdown against the Giants.'"

"They're just normal kids. Just like everyone else.

Noah deciding who'll play against U.S.

LYON, France — Vincent Noah, the captain of France's Davis Cup team, is still thinking about himself to play in the finals against the United States.

Noah would not rule himself out, even after losing in the first round of the Lyon Grand Prix to Thierry Champion 6-4, 6-4, Tuesday night.

"I have made some progress since my last match against Thierry," Noah said. "I'm faster, better on defense and on the net.

Champion is also a candidate for the team along with Fabrice Santoro, Arnaud Boetsch, Cedric Pioline and Henri Leconte.

"Two or three will be disappointed," said Noah, who has not played much in the past year.

Troubled Bengals activate Ickey

CINCINNATI — Coach Sam Wyche was not anxious to activate Ickey Woods because the Cincinnati Bengals fullback did not have a standout practice since being cleared by doctors.

But Woods was activated Tuesday in one of several moves that followed a meeting between Wyche and general manager Mike Brown.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mark Trudea, backup quarterback for the winless Indianapolis Colts, was put on injured reserve today following surgery on his right thumb.

To fill his spot on the roster, the Colts re-signed quarterback Rusty Hilger, who was waived at the end of training camp in August.

The surgery performed by Dr. Arthur Retting on Tuesday repaired ligaments Trudea sustained on the outside of his right thumb when his passing hand struck a helmet in Sunday's 42-6 loss at Buffalo.

Trudea played in only two games this season, completing two of seven passes for 19 yards and no touchdowns. He was intercepted one time, on the play he injured his thumb.

Today's move marked the third time in four years that Trudea was put on flight. Both previous times were for knee injuries.

If Trudea is out for the rest of the season before building up two extra weeks before Trudea will be able to return to the team.

He left Methodist Hospital shortly after the surgery was performed, a hospital spokeswoman said.

"My understanding is the team won't have any free moves to put me back on the active roster when I'm ready to play," he said.

Each club is permitted five free moves during the season to transfer a player from the injured reserve list to the active roster.

The Colts used one of those moves last week on offensive lineman William Schultz. They are expected to use the other four within the next month on tight end Pat Beach, offensive linemen Jim Pankow and Randy Dixon and safety Mike Prior.

Beach, out the past four games with a shoulder and neck nerve problem, was placed on the practice roster Tuesday and is expected to be activated later this week.

To prepare for the anticipated move, center Mark Cannon was waived Tuesday.

Last year, Trudea had reconstructive surgery on his left knee after being hit while scrambling Oct. 28 against Miami. In 1988, he had reconstructive surgery on his right left knee after being injured at Cleveland during the third week.

One run was enough for Avery and the Braves

Olson's two-out hit scores Gant in top of ninth to give Braves victory.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Atlanta Braves finally scored, and again that was all Steve Avery needed.

Avery pitched like a 31-year veteran rather than a two-year-old and the Braves broke their record scoreless streak at 26 innings on Greg Olson's two-out double in the ninth off Doug Drabek, beating the Pittsburgh Pirates 1-0 Wednesday night and forcing the NL playoffs to a seventh game.

Ron Gant stove on home plate and stared at it after he scarred, as if to stamp out Atlanta's frustration. He became the first Brave to get a hit off the Pirates in their last 137 postseason at-bats.

Olson, who failed to get a hit in nine plate appearances from the first base to the seventh inning, decided the old-fashioned way in this series. There had been just four previous 1-0 games in the 22-year history of the NL playoffs and never before in 137 postseason series there had been three 1-0 decisions. "We felt we would score, sometime," Gant said. "It was a lot of tension on the bench. Things were not going our way. But Steve pitching, one run would be enough."

He was right and now, John Smoltz, baseball's winningest pitcher since the All-Star break, will try to extend Atlanta's improbable season when he faces 20-game winner John Smiley on Thursday night in a rematch of Game 3 starters.

Doug Drabek

"I don't think there's any more pitching tonight," Braves manager Bobby Cox said. "I don't know if I was shaking because it was freezing or because I was so nervous."

While Avery was overpowering Pittsburgh with fastballs, Drabek battled the Braves with breaking balls.

Drabek showed no ill effects of the hamstring he strained running out a hit in Game 1 and shut down Atlanta on six hits for eight innings.

But in the ninth, Gant drew a one-out walk, stole his payroll record sixth base of the series with two out and scored on Olson's double down the left-field line.

"In the seventh inning, I had a guy on third on one out and he hit me inside with a fastball," Olson said. "I told him, 'Hey, 5' and I went on the plate and I told myself that he wasn't going to hurt me with a fastball again. He threw me a fastball and I got it by Buechele."

The Braves were 1-for-26 with runners in scoring position during their NL-record shutout streak breaking the mark of 22 shutout innings by St. Louis pitchers against San Francisco in 1987. The AL record is 30 shutout innings, done by Oakland pitchers to Baltimore in 1974.

The Braves, who stranded a runner in the third base of the series out in the third, drew two big chances much later. In the seventh, Gant led off with a single, stole second and took third on a wild pitch to Andy Van Slyke in the ninth. But Gant struck out pitching, and Avery shut the door on the Braves.

As catcher Olson made a diving catch on Drabek's popped up "hunt in front of the plate," 5-foo-9 Sid Bream made a nifty turn at first for a 3-6-3 double play on Gary Redus' grounder.

While Avery was overpowering the Pirates, Drabek was frustrating the Braves.

Atlanta managed only four hits through six innings off Drabek, and Avery outpitched off-speed pitchers. Plus, the Braves were faced with a bad man on the start.

Smith opened the game with a one-out walk to Bobby Bonilla in the first before being stranded when Jeff Treadway grounded out and NL batting champion Terry Pendleton flew out, leaving a runner in scoring position for the fourth time in the game.

Avery struck out the side in the first and managed the Pirates to score only once, and again that was all Steve Avery needed.

He was right and now, John Smoltz, baseball's winningest pitcher since the All-Star break, will try to extend Atlanta's improbable season when he faces 20-game winner John Smiley on Thursday night in a rematch of Game 3 starters.

Irish freshmen are rated third best

Finally, Notre Dame is getting some recognition.

Yes, know, most people would never dream of a team under the Dome not getting it's share of the limelight. This is not the case, however, for the "no respect" Notre Dame baseball team.

The Irish have quietly gone about their business, compiling one of the best records in Division I baseball in the past two years and knocking off major league teams such as Louisiana State, Texas and Miami. Yet they were passed over in the NCAA tournament, despite their excellent record and tough schedule. Lower ranked teams with less impressive records made the unheralded Irish force to sit at home.

The well kept secret in Jake Kline Field has leaked out, however. The 1991 baseball recruiting ratings are out and for the first time in Notre Dame history the Irish have landed a top 10 recruiting class. The freshman class has been rated as the number three recruiting class in NCAA Division I by Collegiate Baseball.

Anthony King
Assistant Sports Editor

Only LSU and the University of Miami hired Notre Dame on the recruiting trail. Those teams, however, benefitted from junior college transfers, whereas Notre Dame's recruits were all freshmen.

The Irish landed nine-quality freshmen, all of who were All-State first team players in high school. Three of the freshmen were drafted by major league teams.

Shortcut Steve Verdunzo of St. Jose, California was a fifth round selection of the Philadelphia Phillies. Pitcher Tim Kraus of Indiana was a 18th round draft pick by the San Francisco Giants. Backup quarterback and shortcut Paul Failla of Allegheny, Pennsylvania was chosen in the seventh round by the Kansas City Royals organization.

Other standout freshmen are catcher Bob Dalsaso, pitcher Craig Allen, shortstop Craig Buechele, and second baseman Casey Clevenger.

The freshmen should make an immediate impact in the upcoming season, and help to continue the formula for success of the Irish. Add them to the current nucleus of last year's successful unit and this year's team stacks up with some of the top teams in the country. The 1992 baseball season should prove to be an exciting one, as the team journeys toward national prominence and a NCAA bid. Don't be surprised this spring, you have been warned.

Belles scrimmage IUSB, look toward post-season

The Saint Mary's soccer team (7-2-4) faces the Indiana University-Southern (7-1-4) squad Sunday at 3:30 p.m. at Saint Mary's.

The Belles were chosen earlier in the week to host the title game as they compiled an 8-0 victory over Albion College in their final game this past weekend.

"I hope we'll get a post-season bid," Saint Mary's head coach Sheila Beck said.

Daisasso's third score came on a feed from Kelly Cook. Daisasso scored the decisive 8-0 victory against Albion College on Saturday, and Beck's 1-0 goal for the Belles was scored in the match against the Red Devils.

"We did lose to some Division I teams, but we think that we have a chance at a post-season bid," Beck said.

"Since I've been here, we have been working hard to improve our team. We have improved our game and are now looking at the post-season bid," Beck said.

"We are looking forward to the Belles' return early this season and will be working hard to improve our team," Beck said.
