Government department plans no cutbacks

The government department plans no cutbacks, according to Arnold. "In the short run, it (the hiring freeze) does hamper our ability to meet student demand for classes ... of an optimum size," he said.

The result is classes that are too large, as well as an inability to reach departmental goals, he said. The department must be committed to helping undergraduate education through smaller classes and intensive advising, while being committed to research and doctorate training, Arnold said.

The department is equally committed to each goal, but Arnold said that resources are the key to meeting these goals. Because the department does not have these resources, the negative effects hit both undergraduate education and research and graduate programs.

Fauci: HIV on the rise among heterosexuals

By ANDREW RUNKLE

The 1990s will mark a continued shift of the HIV epidemic, which causes AIDS, toward the heterosexual community, according to Dr. Anthony Fauci, director of the AIDS research office at the National Institute of Health.

"There is a shift in the epidemic from gay men ... to IV (intravenous) drug users, their heterosexual partners, wives, and children," said Fauci to a packed Feshbach Library auditorium yesterday.

According to a study done in New York City, the percentage of homosexual or bisexual HIV-infected individuals has dropped from 54 percent to 37 percent from 1986 to 1990. The percentage of drug-infected individuals who were IV drug users has increased from 33 percent to 46 percent during those years.

"There is no such thing as a risk group, only risk behavior. Forget about characterizations of risk groups," Fauci added.

Fauci emphasized that AIDS is an epidemic evolving in large metropolitan areas, where IV drug use is most prevalent. IV drug use has introduced AIDS to the heterosexual community, he said. "What's tragic is that AIDS is now occurring in a group inner-city young people ages 25-44, which over the years has received poor health care," said Fauci. This lack of proper health care will only encourage the spread of the virus, he said.

Fauci referred to a study performed in Baltimore on 5,000 random clinical patients, 5 percent of which were infection positive.

U.S. needs family leave legislation

While most Notre Dame seniors are busy worrying about where they'll be next year, how many have given thought to where they'll be in ten years? Will they be married? Will they have any family?

If any seniors are even remotely concerned about how difficult it will be to balance career maintenance with raising a family, then they should pay attention to the Family and Medical Leave bill which will be voted upon in Congress this week.

Last month, the U.S. Senate passed a bill that would guarantee workers "up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave in family emergencies," according to the Associated Press. This would mean that men and women could take this time off to care for a newborn or a sick family member, with guaranteed job security. Companies with less than a specified number of employees would be exempted from the legislation.

This week, the House of Representatives will vote on both the Senate version of the bill and a weaker one that guarantees only six weeks of unpaid leave in certain situations. Either version faces a possible veto by President Bush, he vetoed last year's version of the bill.

Many components of the family leave bill fear that employers might be hurt by federal laws forcing them to cut into routine operations. And since the economy is in its current poor condition, federal intervention might do more harm than good.

But opponents of the family leave bill ignore not only complex issues surrounding American family life, but they also keep the U.S. far behind other Western industrialized nations in family leave programs.

In France, parents can receive 15 months paid leave when a child is born, according to an article in September's Vogue magazine. In France, women must take a partially paid leave and the government both before and after delivery for a total of 14 weeks. Germany's and Japan's maternity leave programs are identical to France's, except employers either pick up the tab (Germany), or pay for it themselves (Japan). Most of the above countries also offer additional optional time off with partial benefits.

Successful family leave legislation could not be a model for the U.S.—their socialist government can provide many benefits due to high tax rates. However, family leave programs in Germany and Japan, both of whose economies rival the U.S., show very little evidence that a nation can compete in the world market with such job guarantees for family leave.

Opponents of family leave legislation prefer that companies voluntarily offer family leave packages. Only a small percentage actually do so, and even if most offered family leave, they would probably cut such a service as soon they ran into economic hardships. A federal guarantee would prevent this.

Successfully raising a family is essential to the well-being of this country. It requires not only initiative on the part of the parents, but also guaranteed means by which to do so. It is time that President Bush, with all his rhetoric about family values, sit on his veto-happy hands and act constructively on an important domestic issue.

Baker warns about Asian arms race

TOKYO Secretary of State James Baker today urged the major powers, including the United States, Japan, China and the Soviet Union, to head off a nuclear arms race on the Korean peninsula. Baker, who traveled to Korea on Tuesday to attend an economic meeting, noted the growing concern over reports that North Korea, one of the world's last hard-line communist regimes, is moving forward to develop nuclear weapons. The real threat of nuclear proliferation on the Korean peninsula is now the No. 1 threat to security in northeast Asia, said Baker in a speech to the Japan Institute for International Affairs. Experts have voiced concern that North Korea could be much closer to developing nuclear warheads than previously thought, as was Iraq before the Persian Gulf War. The North Korean government in Pyongyang has denied it is trying to develop nuclear weapons but it also has refused to permit international inspection of its nuclear facilities.

Fusion advance offers new hope

CULHAM, ENGLAND Europeans scientists are drilling a major advance in nuclear fusion research after a dramatic experiment replicating the sun's heat, but they say its use as a clean and unlimited source of energy is still decades away. The Nov. 9 experiment at Culham, 50 miles north of London, achieved fusion for two seconds and produced about 1.7 megawatts of power for nearly a second, said physicist John Mathew, the project spokesperson. This is the first time that a significant amount of power has been obtained from controlled nuclear fusion reactions, project director Paul-Henri Reboulet said. A commercial fusion reactor remains at least 50 years away, Reboulet said. Nuclear fusion, the process that gives the sun and stars their energy, is safer than nuclear fission, the reaction that powers today's nuclear plants.

Parents of 44 children honored

NELKHM, IND. For some couples, eight is enough. But for Clarence and Willie Toliver, 44 is just right. Their family is composed of four natural children, 20 foster children and 10 adopted children. The Tolivers were named the 1992 Adoptive Family of the Year by the One Church One Child program and honored at a dinner in Indianapolis last Saturday. The family goes through about seven gallons of milk and six loaves of bread each week with the 10 adopted children living in their home. He and his wife, Willie, 47, work in the laundry of an Elkhart nursing home for a combined salary of $1,300 a month. The Tolivers said they decided to adopt so many kids because there are too many kids out there that don't have a home and parents to care for them. They adopted children range in age from 5 to 15. Five of them are birth siblings.

Costs double for two spacecrafts

WASHINGTON A $70 million cost overrun has doubled the price of two NASA spacecraft being developed to study the interaction between the Earth and the sun, according to a report. Costs are projected to reach $140 million for the spacecrafts, named Wind and Polar, Aviation Week magazine said in a report published Sunday. They are being built for use by the 17-nation International Solar Terrestrial Physics Program, founded for 1997 and 1993, will be delayed five months to six months, the magazine said. The scientific survey had planned to integrate data collected by Wind and Polar with that from several other spacecraft, and the launch delays could effect the results. The overall program involves a total of eight spacecraft being developed by the United States, Japan and the European Space Agency. Total costs are expected to run about $3 billion, much as was spent for the Hubble space telescope program.

Small fire forces student evacuation

BROOKE, W.VA. Some students were evacuated from LaFayette Student Center early Sunday morning after a small electrical fire began above a false ceiling near Irish Gardens. According to Captain Mark Eisenwein of the Notre Dame Fire Department, the fire lasted only a short time and caused minimal damage to the ceiling tiles. The fire, which occurred at 1:55 a.m., may have been caused by short circuit in the wires above the false-ceiling, Eisenwein said.

NEW DART INFORMATION

Because of a concern over equal access to closed courses which reopen, there will be a change in the way DART handles them. Instead of reopening immediately, closed courses eligible to reopen (meaning that at least one person has dropped) will be listed in the Observer. After this listing appears, the courses will be opened for the next call back period.

We have also developed a contingency plan in case of computer failure or any other emergency that severely disrupts registration. All appointment times will be moved back two days, from Monday to Wednesday or from Tuesday to Thursday for example. This two day move is necessary since appointment times are assigned so that they do not conflict with current classes and a Wednesday schedule should be very similar to a Monday schedule. The (same is true for Tuesday and Thursday schedules.) If registration is delayed for more than two days, the appointments would be pushed back a corresponding length of time. The appointment times would remain the same, only the date would change. If such a change ever becomes necessary it will be published in the Observer (if possible) and posted at the Registrar's office and all departmental and college offices.

Remember that you can use the DART Course Exchange Option to attempt to register for a different class without dropping one you already have. The old course will be dropped only if you are successful in adding the new course. This option is useful if you have a full load, if you want to try to get into a different section of a course, or if a course you want has a time conflict with one you already have. For more information see page 15 in the DART book.

GROZNY, U.S.S.R. (AP) - Separatists in the southern Chechen-Ingush region fired automatic weapons to celebrate the Russian legislature's refusal Monday to approve Boris Yeltsin's state of emergency in their Muslim enclave.

Gen. Zhokhar Dudayev, formerly a bomber pilot in the Soviet air force and now president of the Chechen-Ingush region, had threatened terrorist attacks on Moscow's nuclear power stations and subways if the decree was not repealed.

The 177-4 vote Monday against the decree was reversed Tuesday by the usuallypliant Russian lawmakers as the first major show of no confidence in Yeltsin since his election in June as president of the Russian Federation -- a mosaic of scores of restless ethnic groups scattered among the Russian majority.

The legislature's refusal was likely to damage Yeltsin's authority, which was greatly enhanced by his successful opposition to hard-liners who tried to oust Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev in August. The vote was not binding, but may force Yeltsin to withdraw his decree.

Yeltsin did not attend the debate and had no immediate comment on the resolution, which also called for negotiations toward a political solution. Dudayev said he was asked to take part in talks and was prepared to do so.

Two Yeltsin allies, Russian parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov and Vice President Alexander Rutskoi, the author of the decree, reversed their earlier defense of the crackdown. They backed the lawmakers' move for negotiations, signaling that Yeltsin had decided against confrontation.

Boris Yeltsin

Alexander Rutskoi, the author of the decree, reversed his earlier defense of the crackdown. They backed the lawmakers' move for negotiations, signaling that Yeltsin had decided against confrontation.

Yeltsin's apparent indecision in using force, the limited number of troops he was able to send to the region to enforce his decree and the failure of his representatives to carry out an order to arrest Dudayev showed his government to be weak in areas not dominated by ethnic Russians.

In the Chechen-Ingush capital of Grozny, cheering militants fired their automatic weapons in the air and honked car horns to celebrate the Russian retreat.

Dudayev said the Russian vote represented a "victory for democracy and truth." There was no sign of compromise from the Chechen-Ingush leaders on their Nov. 2 independence declaration from the Russian Federation.

Immediately before the Russian legislature voted, Dudayev said he would order terrorist strikes against atomic power stations around Moscow if Yeltsin did not back down.

"Why should our mothers cry, our old people cry, why should our children cry and live so much in fear?" he said. "Why shouldn't Russia, which is where this evil is coming from, feel fear?"

The Student Senate will approve a task force to study the alcohol policy in general and its possible relation to off-campus crime.

In Monday's meeting the Senate discussed inviting William Kirk, assistant vice president for Residence Life, to attend a future meeting in order to discuss these issues. The Senate decided that more specific suggestions, resulting from in-depth study by a task force, were necessary to accomplish anything.

"We do not want Bill Kirk to come now, but we do want to address the issues," the Senate concluded.

The Senate discussed expanding the present task force on off-campus crime to include the alcohol policy. However, it was decided that the alcohol policy deserved more specific attention.

Targeted areas of study are the ambiguous wording of the present policy and the possibility that the policy encourages more off-campus parties.

The Senate also discussed the possibility of passing a resolution supporting the inclusion of more off-campus input in changes to the future.

WHO: Heterosexual sex causes most HIV cases

GENEVA (AP) — Heterosexual sex has caused the infection of 75 percent of people with the AIDS virus worldwide, and the infection is now rising in Western countries, the World Health Organization said Monday.

The majority of the heterosexually infected people are in the developing world, particularly in Africa, and it still remains only a small percentage of cases in North America and Europe, the Geneva-based agency said in an extensive report.

The U.N. group says up to 5,000 people are infected each day around the world, and officials fear an increase in pregnant women infecting their babies.

Concerns about heterosexual transmission of the AIDS virus were heightened after basketball star Magic Johnson announced Monday he had the HIV virus and said he had no homosexual contacts.

Merson said tests of possible AIDS vaccines are planned for Thailand, Uganda, Rwanda and Brazil — nations with some of the highest AIDS rates. The tests — which will involve several thousand volunteers — mark a departure from previous approaches favoring early testing on animals.

About a dozen potential vaccines to slow or halt the onset of infection are being tested in animals. Roughly 3 million men and 3 million women thought to be infected. An estimated 900,000 infants have been born infected with HIV.

WESTERN EUROPE

In 1986 and 1990, there was a nine-fold increase in the number of AIDS cases due to heterosexual transmission, from 140 to 1,300. These AIDS cases came from a fraction of the total number of infections.

ASIA

Pandemic is growing more rapidly than anywhere else. Predominantly transmitted heterosexually, India has reported that as many as one million people may already be infected with HIV.

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — U.S. diplomats returned Monday to Cambodia's capital after a 16-year absence as part of an international effort to maintain a cease-fire in a devastating civil war and bring free elections.

Cambodians are particularly hopeful the arrival of American diplomats and U.N. peacekeeping troops will prevent the return to power of the murderous Khmer Rouge communist guerrillas.

The Khmer Rouge says it has abandoned the radical policies under which hundreds of thousands of Cambodians were killed during its reign of terror to transform society in the 1970s. But Western analysts say it has hidden troops and arms in the jungles for a possible attempt to seize power if it does not win elections called for in a U.N.-sponsored peace treaty.

Khmer Rouge documents show it plans to form a political party that publicly espouses capitalism and democracy but is secretly run by the same fascists who oversaw its 1975-78 rule, analysts say.

The treaty was signed in Paris on Oct. 23 by the Vietnamese-installed government, the Khmer Rouge and two rebel groups supported by the United States.

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Cambodia is secretly run by the same fascists who oversaw its 1975-78 rule, analysts say.

The worldwide reported cases of AIDS is 371,803. According to Fauci, this 1990 figure is considered to be very low. There are "probably a million cases worldwide," said Fauci. In the United States, as of 1990, there were 192,406 reported AIDS cases. Men accounted for 90 percent of the U.S. cases, while only 10 percent were women.

"I'm optimistic that we will have an AIDS vaccine by the end of the 1990s," Fauci said. He said that a realistic goal for the present would be to develop a treatment which would suppress the virus for a long period of time. "We hope to develop tailor-made drugs which will have a specific effect against the HIV virus," he added.

The drugs presently available for AIDS are "all imperfect," according to Fauci. "There is still no cure; they (drugs) work for a couple of years, but then they don't work anymore," he said.
American bishops urged to continue activism

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Roman Catholic bishops began work Monday on policy statements calling for a moral debate on the environment and the plight of poor children after being urged by a church leader to take the heat that comes with involvement in the political arena.

In addressing the fall meeting of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, Archbishop Daniel Pilarczyk of Cincinnati said prelates are being "conscientious church leaders and good citizens" when they enter political debates on issues including abortion and Central America.

"The dignity of the human person is the pivotal point on which both souls and nations turn," Pilarczyk said. "I think we think that it is right and just for us to keep proclaiming that dignity."

But even as the bishops sought to speak to a national audience with an environmental statement that resists "coercive methods" of birth control, they were reminded of the more immediate concerns of their flocks in internal debates over a proposal to slash the number of holy days of obligation from six to two.

"The one species extinction which I'm sure you didn't check was the extinction of holy days," Bishop Anthony Borus said in using the discussion of environmental policy to have the last word Monday on the more contentious holy days issue.

The bishops have been criticized in recent years by both abortion-rights advocates, who accused the prelates of trying to legislate Catholic morality by pushing for bans on legalized abortion, and by conservatives, who charged the bishops the fees in mediating where they don't belong.

In his remarks, Pilarczyk said the bishops' conference is not a political power bloc, but a group of pastoral leaders who share with the nation's founding fathers a concern for "the truth that all are created equal and all enjoy certain inalienable rights."

The bishops' conference president said the church is not "irrelevant" to the arena of political parties and candidates.

"We bring values and convictions about right and wrong, about care for the weak and the vulnerable," Pilarczyk said.

Pilarczyk's speech drew modest applause, but the bishops gave an enthusiastic reception to the introduction of the proposed policy statements on the environment and the rights of children.

The statement on "Renewing the Earth," the U.S. bishops' first foray into the environmental debate, attacks the consumerism and the lifestyles of the affluent.

While the statement acknowledges that unrestrained population growth can add to the environmental problem, the proposed policy departures from the agenda of some environmentalists in resisting "coercive methods of population control and programs which bias decisions through incentives or disincentives."

"I just think we have to face the fact that there will be some challenges," said Archbishop John Roach of St. Paul and Minneapolis, chairman of the bishops' International Policy Committee. "Overconsumption is in fact a larger problem than overpopulation."
Bush salutes Gulf War, Vietnam vets

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Leading the nation's Veterans Day observances, President Bush placed a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns on Monday and said victory in the Gulf War had kindled overdue respect for Vietnam veterans that was "good for the nation's soul.

Bush pledged the United States would "always be a force for peace in the world" as he paid special tribute to veterans of the nation's two most recent wars.

His toecap drawn tight against a chilly wind, Bush said at the annual ceremony in Arlington National Cemetery that Desert Storm veterans "freed a captive nation and set America free" by renewing our faith in ourselves.

The president also promised that the nation would "never forget the POWs and the MIAs yet to be accounted for" from the Vietnam War.

Across the Potomac River in Washington, several thousand people came to the Vietnam Memorial for brief ceremonies in which eight names were added to the wall of Americans whose deaths were attributed to the war — making 58,183 in all.

In a sampling of other Veterans Day Day observances:

• ROTC students based at Wright State University kept a vigil at the Ohio National Cemetery in Ohio to remember any American prisoners of war who didn't return from Vietnam.

• The National Commander of the Disabled Veterans of America said that the government should do more than just praise war veterans. At a ceremony at the Indiana War Memorial, a variety of medical and educational services to veterans are being cut back or threatened even as the nation celebrates its success in the Persian Gulf.

Chinese document points to new religion crackdown

HONG KONG (AP) — China's Communist Party has ordered intelligence agents and police to start a nationwide crackdown on "illegal" religious activities, according to a Central Committee document obtained by The Associated Press.

The 12-page directive, titled "Circular on Further Tackling Certain Problems of Religious Work," was issued Feb. 5 following a nationwide gathering of religious officials in Beijing.

Chinese sources recently passed along the document to AP. It takes months for such directives to be passed down the many levels to local enforcement and businessmen and religious leaders have reported signs of a new crackdown in recent weeks.

The crackdown comes as Secretary of State James Baker readies for a trip to China this week for talks, which will reportedly include human rights.

In firm language, the document orders "public security departments at all levels" to "resolutely attack those counterrevolutionaries and other criminal elements who make use of religion to carry out destructive activities." The document defines illegal activities as the establishment of religious organizations outside of state control and the use of religion to foment separation.

The Chinese sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity for fear of retribution, said China's increasingly restive Muslims and Tibetans along with a growing number of Catholics and Protestants would be targets of the campaign.

The paper said that while freedom of religion must be respected in China, security organs must "attack the use of religion to perform unlawful and criminal activities and firmly resist the infiltration of foreign religious imitational forces." In the southern province of Canton, 67-year-old Pastor Samuel Lam, the leader of a fast-growing evangelical Christian sect, says police have begun to pressure his 1,000 or so followers who attend his church a couple of times a week.

"I started a month ago," he said in a telephone interview from Canton. "Police are warning people not to come to my house.

Two of Lam's followers were recently detained in Canton for distributing Bibles and proselytizing, church sources said.

The document says "illegal" religious groups have set up temples, churches, seminars and publishing institutions to "suffer with us for the allegiance of the youth."

Qiao Shi, the chief of China's police services and a Communist Politburo member, urged police in Sunday's edition of the official Daily to smash "reactionary religious forces and secret societies which come to China from outside our borders."

Muslims of China's northwest have become increasingly restive under Chinese rule. Islamic activists in Xinjiang province launched a variety of rebellion in April 1990, urging the establishment of an independent Eastern Turkistan Republic. Scores of rebels have been reportedly killed since then.

Dozens of Tibetan Buddhists have been killed in battles with Chinese security forces in Tibet over the last three years. Many Tibetans want independence from Chinese rule.

"This University-wide endeavor will be the most comprehensive description of us in a common reflection about the future priorities of Notre Dame. It will be the beginning of a COP (Committee on University Priorities, 1973) and PAC (Priorities and Commitments for Excellence) involvement."

"In the same spirit, and I hope with the same level of energy, the Colloquy will seek to review the present reality that is Notre Dame and, bearing in mind our distinctive Catholic mission and heritage, it will identify the most appropriate steps we ought to take to reach our vision for Notre Dame's future."

"COP and PAC preceded major and unprecedented commitment and challenge."

"One of the major responsibilities of COP was to produce a model of the University. The Colloquy will have this as a secondary goal as well. But its primary mission is to provide a forum for us in sharing our insights and perspectives and recommitting ourselves to the common task."

"In the days of Sorin this could be achieved by calling a general meeting and gathering everyone in a large room. Because of the present complexity of the University and because of the many demands on our time, today this effort requires representative structures."

"First a word about the overall structure. A committee for the whole, made up of 25 people, will be responsible for planning and organizing the Colloquy and for writing the final report."

"I personally will chair the committee on academic life; the provost, the executive vice president and the president will chair the student affairs—will serve on it, and the remainder of its membership will be a cross-section of faculty, staff and students, including the leadership of the faculty senate, student government and the graduate student union. Each member of the committee for the whole also will serve on one of four other committees that will focus on major areas of University life."

"The provost will chair the committee on academic life; the executive vice president will chair the committee on finances, University relations and athletics; the president will chair the student affairs committee. These four committees will have 25 members, including appropriate officers, deans, and representatives of a cross-section of students, faculty and staff."

"As you can calculate, there will be a total of 95 people involved in one or more of these committees. Once again this is a representative role. The intention of the Colloquy is to engage as many people in this process of reflection as possible. These committees will be expected to invite participation in as many formats as possible."

"I cannot stress too much how important I consider this Colloquy, with both the committee for the whole and the committee on opportunity, challenges and the like, to want to solicit the most candid opinions and the very best ideas available." (excerpted from Father Malloy's announcement to the faculty, delivered October 1, 1991)

Coverage of murders does not merit media's sensationalism

Dear Editor:

In response to Ms. Neufold's letter (The Observer, Oct. 31) concerning the lack of urgent coverage of the "Texas cafeteria letter" and the reaction in the media, I would like to clarify the lack of urgency in the coverage.

The coverage of the Texas murders is important, but it does not compare to the level of coverage given to other events. The media's focus on the Texas murders is understandable, but it is important to remember that there are other issues that need to be addressed.

Sincerely,

Pay-per-view would alienate ND's loyal supporters

Dear Editor:

Pay-per-view is a strange way to reward the University of Notre Dame. According to the article, it seems that the University is interested in rewarding loyalty and support by broadcasting games over free TV.

I suppose the question is: "How much is the rewarding of loyalty by broadcasting football games over free TV costing the University?" This is not as easy a question as it seems.

One approach to answering this question is to compare the value of a contract to broadcast games over free TV versus the value of a contract to broadcast games over pay TV for a contract which gives a network or cable distributor the choice of whether to broadcast on a pay-per-view basis.

It is my understanding that free TV contracts have been highly lucrative for the University. However, I assume that since Rosenthal is excited about this pay-per-view scheme, he expects it to bring more money to the University. I would be interested in learning how much more the University expects to earn in TV revenues as the result of going to pay-per-view.

Another way to approach the question is to tie TV football revenues to changes in alumni and other supporters' contributions in the Brave New World of pay-per-view.

One common reaction to pay-per-view among University contributors may mirror my own: cut annual contributions to the minimum level required to participate in the football ticket lottery. In my own case, this means that I will cut my $75 annual contribution to $50, and I will not submit a matching contribution form for the Union's foundation. Since I will also refuse to pay to watch the football games on TV, the net result for the University will be a reduced contribution of $100.

Therefore, assuming the University receives $2 of the $10 charged for a pay-per-view game, 50 additional households will need to sign up to watch the game for the University to break even on my reduced contributions. An informal poll of other graduates in my age group reveals that other contributors will respond in a similar manner.

Another common and less reactionary response to pay-per-view will be to reduce contributions by the amount paid to watch games on TV. So now, for every $10 paid to watch a game, the University will get $2 (assuming I have estimated the University's cut correctly) while contributions will decline by $10.

In summary, pay-per-view looks like an effective way to make Mr. Rosenthal look like a hero by increasing Notre Dame's football revenues. The cost of heroism is to effectively increase the burden of the fundraisers for the University's General Fund and to alienate heretofore loyal contributors.

Professor clarifies comments about gay groups

Dear Editor:

I did not say that homosexual organizations in no way "indicate advocacy of homosexual conduct prohibited by Christian or Catholic moral principles." Clearly, there are homosexual organizations that do just as there are also heterosexual organizations that do.

Rather, I indicated that Gays and Lesbians at Notre Dame/Saint Mary's College (GLND/GSMC) and Gay and Lesbian alumni of Notre Dame (GALA-ND), the two organizations that have been barred from advertising in the campus media because they are not recognized and which have been denied recognition because they are composed of homosexuals, do not advocate conduct that violates Catholic morality. Insofar as such conduct is conceived, they leave it to the decision of their individual members.

Ticket policy shortchanges students who need more time

Dear Editor:
The deadline is near if you like, but I didn't purchase student football season tickets at the beginning of fall semester. Since Notre Dame is not a Conference USA school, I just knew I was going to have a busy semester anyway. This doesn't mean I'm a semester, nor normally purchase tickets.

Notre Dame is so different because of the new student ticket policy. If I had purchased tickets at the beginning of the semester, I would have been running a great risk of not being able to resell my tickets for the games. I could have attended, that is, if I had more important things to do, like studying. So, I could resell the tickets which I was too busy to use. This semester, the tickets were not worth the risk financially.

I understand the purpose behind the ticket policy. The idea is that students should be better aware in which to achieve the same means with the same financial system. Students either sell to friends in which they trust, or require a high deposit for the reasons: to make a profit and/or to make time.

This week, I share with you the ways in which student government is addressing the concerns of undergraduates as Notre Dame establishes itself as a "National Catholic Research University."

Intuitively, many of us can include the understanding of teaching as being harmfully compromised as Notre Dame continues to emphasize, among other things, research. Such revolutions in the business community infrastruct over the next few weeks as we DART into our classes.

And the budget problems in the College of Arts and Letters serve to complicate the problem. As a school rooted in a tradition established by the Jesuits and all teachers of Jesus Christ, Notre Dame must understand that teaching is a special function - even for higher education. Our job is to complete relevant opinions and statistics, and see if our intuitive conclusions can be based on more sound reasoning.

Showing of Madonna's 'Truth or Dare' lowers prestige

Dear Editor:
The Friends of the Snite Museum of Art are offering for sale a superb collection of Christmas and all-purpose cards featuring some of the most important works in the Snite Museum of Art's collection. The sample card sent with the mail solicitation to members of the Notre Dame community featured a reproduction of Madonna and Child by Jacopo Sansovino.

During this pre-Christmas season, I was interested in purchasing another Madonna, a famous print by Francisco de Goya, whose autobiographical film, "Truth or Dare," will be shown at the Snite on Nov. 15 and 16.

The film is a sort of a documentarian, or so-called "Blond Ambition" concert tour. The title of the film, according to Movietube, "refers to a game Madonna plays with band members. They must answer a question truthfully or dare to expose their genitals" or perform other feats of sexual athleticism.

As Joseph Sobran described one of the scenes in this classic work of art, Madonna "lies on a bed on stage. The stage is dark, except for the bed. Standing beside her are two black male dancers, wearing Avoiding all reference to the name of Jesus Christ, Notre Dame must understand that teaching is a special function - even for higher education. Our job is to complete relevant opinions and statistics, and see if our intuitive conclusions can be based on more sound reasoning.

Need an escape?
Saint Mary's Clarissa Dalloway's Coffeehouse, named after the Virginia Woolf novel, opened on Wednesday, November 6.

Located in the Saint Mary's Clubhouse, the Coffeehouse is an attempt to bring members of the Saint Mary's and Notre Dame communities together. The purpose of the Coffeehouse is to provide students with a place to meet friends, study and listen to music.

"What is exciting about (the Coffeehouse) is that it's the essence of what Saint Mary's is," said Peggy Abod, coordinator and founder of the Coffeehouse.

Promoting a sense of community which is able to enjoy their own unique styles and talents, the Coffeehouse environment is an informal gathering place on the Saint Mary's campus.

The environment is "reminiscent of a European cafe," according to Abod. A volunteer staff helps to make and sell cappuccino, espresso, flavored mineral water, and baked snacks.

"It's like going into Agnew's house," said Ellen McQuillan, President of the Residence Hall Association, which has helped to promote the Coffeehouse.

On opening night, Wednesday, November 6, as many as 60 people crowded into the Coffeehouse to experience the informal environment which provides the opportunity for students to listen to, play or practice music among friends. Faculty, volunteers, SMC and ND students crowded this new on-campus escape.

A group of six Saint Mary's juniors called the Sister Chain gathered in front of the fireplace to sing their combination of original songs and Irish love ballads at 9 p.m. Sister Chain entertained the audience with their particular brand of music created by acoustic guitars, a portable keyboard, bongos, and voice.

Sister Chain is not a professional band, and that is precisely the emphasis of the Coffeehouse. "It was exciting to see the women working together," Abod said.

The Coffeehouse encourages the unique talents of students by allowing the artistic freedom of coloring on the tablecloths. The students wrote on the tablecloths in vibrant reds, greens, and blues, exactly what the Coffeehouse can be: something different to each person.

Slayer's most recent release energizes their audience

By ROLANDO DE AGUIAR

Musicscribe

Slayer concerts can be dangerous.

The band appeals primarily to those of us who are young-hearted youngsters whose first passion is the release of angst and long-restrained rage which takes place in the pit.

As rap has emerged as the predominant voice of the inner city, the brand of metal popularized by Slayer and its kin serves as the voice of disillusioned suburban and rural America.

The music, indeed, must be heard.

The release of Decade of Aggression, a two-disc exhibition of the band's 1990-1991 world tour, unleashes Slayer's power on the unknowing masses.

Decade of Aggression begins with a foreboding chant from the audience. Made up largely of kids frustrated with high school and subsequent dead-end jobs, the crowd screams Slayer's name, as if in trance.

But the band's entrance soon breaks that trance. It takes over a minute of preparative guitar, the four-member outfit launches into a blistering rendition of the classic "Hell Awaits."

"Sport the war, war support/ This sport is war, total war/ When victory is a massacre/ The final swing is not a drill/ It's how many people I tell/" Slayer turns to show another face with "Expendable Youth."

It's theme universal, this track is both a lament for wasted youth and an eye-opening denunciation of inner-city drug wars.

If nothing else, the song serves to educate a principally Caucasian audience of their ghetto-bound brothers' fight to survive in American society.

With songs like "Expendable Youth" and "War Ensemble," Slayer shows that metal bands can teach their audience, and still rock harder and heavier than anyone else signed to a record deal.

And that is what Slayer does throughout Decade of Aggression. Driven by the beat created by drummer Dave Lombardo, the group's energy is nearly unbelievable.

Araya's shouts burst forth with rage while Kerry King and Hanneman's guitars scream for mercy throughout the fastest songs.

While every track is better when played at eleven, some of the best at high decibel levels are "Raining Blood," and "Black Magic," featuring more
German magazine accuses Atlanta of using bribery to win Olympics

ATLANTA (AP) — The president of the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games demanded Monday that a German news magazine retracted for the Olympic article was libelous. He demanded that the magazine's No. 4 article be libelous. He demanded the magazine print a correction, and threatened legal action.

Your reckless publication has the potential to harm both Atlanta and the International Olympic movement. We cannot know the extent of any damage done by your libelous statements," Payne wrote to Der Spiegel publisher Rudolf Augustin. The article claimed Atlanta Olympic officials offered member of the International Olympic Committee gold credit cards, free heart surgery, scholarships for universities and children and bribes of up to $120,000.

"I'm not optimistic at the moment," Morris said. "I've had several conversations with Andy and they're one thing we agreed on was that if anyone's going to be at the top of the salary structure, it's Jack Morris. What I take all this to be is just decided whether to pay the money that's all."

Meanwhile, clubs began to get ready for the market's opening bell. The top pitcher available, left-hander Frank Viola, rejected a $13 million, three-year offer from the Mets during the season. He then slumped to 12-15 with a 3.97 ERA.

"Last week I faxed the doctor's report to all the major league teams other than the Mets because I was hearing all sorts of rumors about his elbow," said Viola's agent, Craig Fenech. "That's about all I'm going to say. I'm going to hold to a policy that I'm not going to comment on the rumors and I'm interested and which teams have been in or not."

Hurricanes lose two players, including starting fullback, after an altercation lands them in jail

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Florida State plays host to the second-ranked Hurricanes. Corpse officers were angered at Jonathan Harris, a backup wide receiver. He said the fight started when officers pushed him away from an ambulance that was transporting Harris to Doctors Hospital. Buckley is treated for scrapes and bruises. Paton injured his ribs in the fight.

"I did not initiate the conflict," Paton said. "I was upset. I thought the police officers were angry at Jonathan for riding the cycle and needed to deal with him and let out some frustration." Shortly before the accident, Harris was driving at a high rate of speed, police said. "He was moving at a very high rate of speed in excess of 70 mph and he was wearing no helmet," said South Miami Police Capt. Greg Feldman. As a result, the police officer followed him but Harris sped up and the officer was forced to give up the chase for safety reasons, he said. A short time later, Harris crashed his motorcycle in Coral Gables. Paton said he was in the hospital and that he was not seriously injured.

Hurricanes lose two players, including starting fullback, after an altercation lands them in jail

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Startling fullback Martin Paton and teammate Jonathan Harris were suspended Monday by the Miami Hurricanes football team after a weekend motorcycle accident in which police said they plan to file charges against both of them.

Coach Dennis Erickson announced the suspension effective immediately. The second-ranked Hurricanes play No. 1 Florida State Saturday. "Martin Paton and Jonathan Harris were involved in incidents over the weekend which violate our team policy," Erickson said. "This is not a decision that was made based on whether they are innocent or guilty. This is an incident that is separate from the fact that theyviolated team policy." Paton, a 6-1, 196-pound redshirt junior, was arrested early Sunday after a flight with Coral Gables police officers. He was jailed on charges that included battery to a police officer and resisting arrest with violence.

"I'm not trying to handle the conflict," Paton said. "I was upset. I thought the police officers were angry at Jonathan for riding the cycle and needed to deal with him and let out some frustration." Sedale Threatt prepares to replace Magic

A smaller version of Magic Johnson?

“No, no way,” said Threatt. “I’m just going to go out and try to distribute the ball, play the way Magic would on the fast break.”

Little did Threatt know on Oct. 2 when he went from Seattle in L.A. for three future second-round draft choices that he’d be the team’s starting point guard, what with Magic around.

But that’s the case since Johnson announced last Thursday he was retiring after testing positive for the HIV that causes AIDS.

Like most of his teammates, Threatt didn’t do very well Friday night at Phoenix in his first game since Johnson’s retirement.

Besides being only 6-foot-2 at Magic’s 6-9, Threatt had a very un-Magic like performance — 3 points, 2 assists and 2 rebounds in a 113-85 loss.

But he kept his night against Minnesota, Threatt was much better — 27 points, 14 assists and two rebounds in a 96-86 win.

“The game at Phoenix, we were all real down, so I came out tonight and really wanted to turn it up,” Threatt said afterward. “They were setting some good picks on the side and I got my shot. I had four turnovers, though. I’m going to have to work on that.”

At age 30, Threatt said he’s out under pressure despite the circumstances.

“If I would have been a rookie in this situation, there would be a lot of pressure,” he said. “I’m an old veteran in this league. I know what goes on around here. I’m just going out and trying to win.”

Threatt was a sixth-round draft choice of the Philadelphia 76ers in 1983 after playing at West Virginia Tech. He played more than three seasons with the 76ers before being traded to Chicago, where he played briefly before moving to Seattle.

Before this season, he averaged 8.6 points and a little less than three assists in 544 regular-season games. In five games with the Lakers, he’s averaging 17.6 points, 7.6 assists and 5.0 rebounds.

Threatt came to the Lakers labeled as a backup to Johnson who would also play some at shooting guard.

He had no qualms about his role.

“That’s the only reason I came here, playing with Magic, no question about it,” Threatt said. “He said, ‘Let me work with me and another guy, we could win it all. It was real positive talking to him.’

Now, he’ll be a big part, much bigger than he imagined.

If Threatt can never be Magic Johnson, he has something in common with the rest of the league’s players. Neither will they.

“Earvin was such a big part of everything we did — he had the ball, we posted him up, a lot of what we did defensively was based on his size and his ability,” coach Mike Dunleavey said.

“We’re going to have to do a lot of things differently,” Dunleavey said.

The family suggests that memorial contributions be made to the American Heart Association.

CAMPUS MINISTRY... A Tradition That Ought To Die

There are many traditions woven into the fabric of our Notre Dame common life. Morrissey Manorites, dressed up in their best pajamas, eat breakfast cereal out on the quad, early on the morning of the first home football game. Each Spring the gentlemen of Keenan Hall promise once again that this year their Revue will be gentler and kinder than the year before. In late October, someone puts a pumpkin up on the finger of the Moses statue by the library so that we will all remember that Halloween is approaching.

There used to be a tradition at Notre Dame that the only undergraduates who could climb up the main steps of the Administration Building were the Seniors. For the first few weeks of the new school year, burly seniors would stand around the top and bottom of the steps and remind the freshmen and anyone else who forgot over the summertime that the distinction and privilege of using those steps was reserved for seniors only, and as for the rest of us, the lower door would do just fine, thank you.

These days any scruffy student can use the steps at the Main Building as that previous tradition has died and been forgotten. I wish the same would happen for another Notre Dame experience.

Last Spring I was going into Club 23, at the corner of Notre Dame and South Bend Avenues, when I watched two Notre Dame women, both completely limp, being pulled out the front door of the bar and dragged through the then totally muddy parking lot, to be dumped like two dirty sacks of potatoes into the backseat of somebody’s car and returned to campus.

When I asked around a bit, I was told that these women and their friends had been busy celebrating the girls’ 21st birthdays. And as part of the ritual behavior of the night, the friends had bought the ladies Libbou a gallon shots of tequila and drank it in honor of the occasion, a notion that liquor in this Association Tournament. By the time it was all over, the women were wasted, their dignity and nice clothes trashed, and their friends were nursing headaches and empty wallets. A great tradition -- and one that really ought to die.

If the truth were known, many times the birthday boy or girl dreads the coming ordeal, and wishes for escape, but doesn’t know how to control his or her friends. The friends, supposedly committed to showing how much they care for their buddy, don’t want to.

...CONSIDERATIONS

A Newer Tradition

The Office of Campus Ministry has been trying to reach out to students in off campus housing for the last several semesters. One action which has brought good response has been the offer to help celebrate Eucharist in off campus residences. Mass has been said in Campus View, Castle Point, and Lafayette Square Apartments and on Marian, St.Peter and St. Louis streets. Anyone wishing to gather friends together for such a prayer in their home should contact Campus Ministry in the Library for assistance.

Colts' first victory brightens Venturi's life

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Skies were brilliant over Indy as the Indianapolis Colts headquarters methed, but coach Rick Venturi's outlook brightened the room the day after his team's first victory of the season.

"The sun is certainly shining in Indianapolis today," Venturi said at his first weekly news conference as a winning pro coach.

The Colts suffered through nine losses in 11 games to open the season, the first five under coach Ron Meyer, before coming away with a 13-6 victory over the New York Jets Sunday.

"It's a real credit to guys who can survive, who can persist through tough times. Nobody likes to be the butt of jokes," Venturi said. "It's a real credit to guys to be able to fight through that tough period. Anyone can be a winner.

You can bet Eric Dickerson won't be getting one, though, and not just because he wasn't in the building Monday. The talented but insubordinate running back is home in Malibu, Calif., sitting out a four-week suspension Venturi handed down last week after Dickerson left a practice early. He also was fined one week's pay in addition to the four weeks' pay he'll lose with the suspension.

Venturi moved up the timing of his news conference Monday, possibly to catch a plane. The Indianapolis News reported he, general manager Jim Irsay and four other members of the Colts organization were flying on team owner Robert Irays' plane to San Francisco for an arbitration hearing Tuesday.

Venturi refused to discuss Dickerson or the report.

"I really don't want to talk about it," he said.

The Colts' only comment came in a brief statement: "Pursuant to the terms of the collective bargaining agreement, Eric Dickerson has requested expedited arbitration with respect to his fine and suspension, and the Indianapolis Colts have agreed. The Colts expect the arbitrator to uphold the club's position."

On "The Eric Dickerson Show" broadcast Monday on local radio station WIBC, the running back said he had watched part of the Colts' victory via satellite. He said he also watched an episode of "Star Trek."

"I thought they played hard, and I'm glad they won. No matter what, I'm still a part of that team, and I want to win," Dickerson said.

"I talked to a couple of players yesterday. They were happy. They were like, 'I can't believe we won,'" Dickerson said.

Equally hard to believe was that the Colts scored four touchdowns after going five games without managing even one. Jessie Hester scored on a 49-yard pass from Jeff George with 1:07 left in the first half. Clarence Verdin then returned the kickoff to open the second half 88 yards to tie the score 14-14.

"It's uplifting," Verdin said Monday while strolling through the building. "We ended the first half with a touchdown and we opened the half with a touchdown.

"It feels good just to be celebrating a win. It's not like we won the Super Bowl around here," Verdin said.

Sixers win fourth straight, beating Bucks 102-99

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Hershey Hawkins scored 21 points and Charles Barkley had 17 points and 15 rebounds as the Philadelphia 76ers won their fourth consecutive game, 102-99 over the Milwaukee Bucks on Monday night.

The Bucks trailed by as many as 17 points in the second period, but closed to 81-80 on a three-point play by Jeff Grayer with 7:05 remaining.

The 76ers rebuilt their advantage to 89-83, but the Bucks rallied once again, and a 3-pointer by Jay Humphries made it 94-93 with 1:18 left.

A jumper by Johnny Dawkins and a hook shot by Manute Bol gave Philadelphia a five-point lead with 17 seconds to play, but another 3-pointer by Humphries trimmed Philadelphia's lead to 96-94 with 11.9 seconds left.

Two free throws each by Armon Gilliam and Dawkins completed the scoring.

Milwaukee, which got 20 points from Moses Malone 18 by Dale Ellis, trailed 63-43 one minute into the second half, but Alvin Robertson scored six points and added a pair of 2-pointers, closing the Bucks within 10 with 5:49 remaining in the third period.

Do it out of respect for the dead. And the living.

IU gets #1 seed in NCAA soccer

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Indiana, coming off its Big Ten tournament championship, received one of the four top seeds in the NCAA soccer tournament, which gets underway this weekend.

Indiana will host the second-round match on Saturday, Nov. 12, at 12:30 p.m. in Bill Armstrong Stadium. Indiana defeated Wisconsin 1-0 last weekend in the Big Ten tournament final, avenging a 1-0 loss to the Badgers during the regular season.

Indiana last met Evansville in 1990 in the NCAA quarterfinals last year, where the Purple Aces claimed a 1-0 win at Evansville to go to the Final Four.

"It's one of the two biggest rivalries we have had," Indiana coach Jerry Yeagley said. "We have had a two-year cooling off with Evansville because the competition got a little bit too keen. I'd certainly like to have a chance to host them here."

other AIDS organizations, said Weinmann.

Meanwhile, black churches, which have been criticized for skipping discussions of AIDS, vowed Monday to tackle the issue head-on.

"If I'm going to get knocked off this pedestal, I'm going to make sure I do something to be knocked off," he said. "I'm not going to let someone else knock me off for no apparent reason or comments that I didn't say."

Attempts by The Associated Press for further comment from Jordan were unsuccessful.

A phone message left at Jordan's agent's office was not returned.

Forward Horace Grant, who occasionally is critical of Jordan, denied the incidents reported by the Sun-Times' report of the book.

"It's untrue, of that stuff is untrue. It's bunch of nonsense," Grant said.

Trumborne spokesperson Jeff Bierg said his newspaper had not received a copy of the book. The Tribune would not provide a book to Smith but agreed to call him; he did not call The Associated Press on Monday.

Chicagotribune sports writer Sam Smith, will soon be published by Simon & Schuster. The Chicago Sun-Times said in a column on Monday's editions that it had obtained an advance copy.

The book reportedly details the infighting the Bulls overcame to win the NBA title and is advertised as "an inside story of a turbulent season."

According to the Sun-Times accounts, the book reports that Jordan warned teammates against passing the ball to center Bill Cartwright in the final four minutes of a game. "If you do, you'll never get the ball from me," Jordan reportedly said.

The book also reports that Jordan slugged backup center Will Wade during practice.

Jordan has seen galley proofs of the book. The Sun-Times reported that his only comment problems for black preachers because it relates to the tricky of sexuality.

"I think some of us will be a little more open and less judgmental," said Robinson-Gaither, whose church has had an AIDS program since 1987. "I want to believe that. I'm praying for that. I think we will lose a whole generation of people from this disease if the church doesn't become the focal point in the community on this issue."

The fallout from the Johnson announcement also rippled through the business world.

The Target Stores discount chain, based in Minneapolis, decided against airing a commercial featuring Johnson because the focus would be on his disease if the church becomes the focal point in the community on this issue.

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Defending his title at the ATP Tour World Championships will be only a warm-up for Andre Agassi.

"It's very important, but the Davis Cup is more important than anything else this year," Agassi said Monday.

Agassi will lead the United States in the Davis Cup final against France Nov. 29-Dec. 1 in Lyon.

"I am looking forward to the Davis Cup final and I wasn't all that concerned about being here or not," Agassi said.

Agassi has dropped to No. 8 in the world rankings, and at one point was in danger of not qualifying for the showcase tournament of the top eight players in the world.

The $2.25 million tournament is the year-ending event on the Association of Tennis Professionals circuit. The winner can collect as much as $1.08 million.

The eight players are split into two groups, playing each other under a round-robin format with the top two in each group advancing into the semi-finals.

Stefan Edberg, No. 1 in the world, withdrew because of a knee injury, forcing organizers to reshuffle the two groups.

Agassi's group now consists of Germans Boris Becker and Michael Stich, the Wimbledon champion, and Pete Sampras, the other singles player on the U.S. Davis Cup team.

Edberg's withdrawal left Jim Courier, the French Open champion who has risen to No. 2 in the world, the top seed. His group rivals are Ivan Lendl, Guy Forget and Karell Novacek, the Czechoslovak who replaced Edberg.

Unlike most of the other top players, Agassi skipped a series of European indoor tournaments and stayed home in Las Vegas.

"I feel that as the defending champion I should have been able to qualify directly for this event," Agassi said. "But even if I had failed to make it, I would have been happy to concentrate on the Davis Cup.

"I was burned out, I played more tournaments this year. But now that I am here, it's very important to me.

Agassi was drawn to play Becker in his opening match Tuesday. In other matches, Courier faces Novacek and Lendl plays Forget.

Agassi has played 17 tournaments this year, less than most of the other top players, and said Monday that he would skip the Australian Open, the first Grand Slam event of 1992.

"I need to get re-charged, re-freshed and refocused," he said. "This year hasn't been anything that I'd hoped for."

Agassi's ATP win in 1990 was the biggest of his career, vaulting him to No. 4 in the world. He won tournaments at Orlando and in Washington in 1991, but had a disappointing Grand Slam season.

He was runner-up for the second straight year in the French Open, reached the quarterfinals in his first Wimbledon since 1987 and lost in the first round of the U.S. Open.

With a poor second half of the year, Agassi needs to do well here or he could drop out of the top 10 for the first time since 1988.

"This year ... showed me what I need to do on my game, how much more work I need to become more consistent," Agassi said.

Agassi spent the past few weeks practicing with U.S. col­legians and said he was "feeling great."

"My group is not going to be easy, but that's the world championships," he said.

Agassi has won his last four matches against Becker, includ­ing the semifinal at the French Open.

"I play well against him ... but he also plays well against me," Agassi said.

Becker said he was fully recovered from a flu that forced him to drop out of the Paris Open two weeks ago.

"I am fully fit, I've been training hard," said Becker, this year's Australian Open champion.

Players should salute the students after losses too

Notre Dame is an institution filled with tradition. From placid-clad alumni to the state Irish guard, from offices of Tim McCarthy's play-calling, to drinking to the melodious strains of the Irish band, every home football game provides an opportunity to experience the Notre Dame mystique.

One of the more meaningful traditions involves the rapport between the football team and the faithful student body, which braves any inconvenience to support their team wholeheartedly.

At the end of every home game, as the team walks off the field (usually in triumph), the players fold their golden helmets into the air as a sign of their appreciation for the students' support.

Last year, the unthinkable happened. Twice.

Not only did the Irish lose the last home game when a victory was within their grasp, disappointing and shocking their fans, but then they did the unthinkable, an act of high infidelity at this University.

The players simply walked off the field, ignoring the students, helmets lowering in a protective huddle. This is something the fans are not used to, as the Irish have only lost three home games in the last five years. However, on each of these occasions, starting with last year's St. Valentine's Day, the team simply bailed for the locker room.

The act was a total shock to the student "Jenny, the die-hard Irish fans who endured the freezing weather to watch their heroes play. It was especially dejectionary to see those same fans watching the last home game of their team under the Dome.

Such an act was a slap in the face to the Irish students, but all wounds heal over time, right? One would think the team would have learned a lesson, right?

A year later, with the Irish hosting Tennessee in the last home game of a season fraught with national championship potential, the football team did the unthinkable—they repeated the atrocity.

It's bad enough that the Irish lost a 31-7 lead, that Notre Dame fans who have performed disappeared faster than beer on a weekend. But the team couldn't be satisfied with those felonies.

They wanted more, and so, deja-vu, no salute.

How many senior classes are going to say fare-well to the Irish on a sour note? It's had enough that we lost, but to see the team simply walk off the field after the game, ignoring those who cheered them on, even in defeat, is a tragedy. It's nice to see that when the team loses, the students get acknowledged.

But it's a fair-weather helmet salute.

The students stand for the entire game, voice their support for over three hours. Then, on a brave the lost their spirit just because they want to see the team play. When the team loses, the students remain in the stadium, listening to the band, enduring to the end.

Why should the fans take the blame for a loss, and be shunned by the team? It's one of the ones that let us down, and not the other way around. It's not as if the fans were responsible for the performance of the team. We can't call the plays and make the players execute them properly.

If the home season ends with an improbable loss, then the fans at least have the inner strength to see SALUTE/page 17.

Reports have Notre Dame headed to Sugar Bowl

(AP) — Notre Dame is headed to the Sugar Bowl. Penn State will play Tennessee in the Florida Citrus Bowl and Florida State will probably go to the Cotton Bowl if it loses to Miami, several bowl and school sources said Monday.

Although official announcements won't be made until Sunday, most major matchups apparently fell into place after Notre Dame's 35-34 loss to Tennessee on Saturday.

Sources said Notre Dame will play Florida in the Sugar Bowl even if the 12th-ranked Irish lose to No. 8 Penn State on Saturday. No. 5 Florida can clinch the outright Southeastern Conference title — and the automatic Sugar Bowl berth — with a victory by beating Kentucky this week.

One source said the Sugar Bowl was a "slap in the face" to take Notre Dame (8-3) with three losses because of its television drawing power and the fact that the Irish haven't been to New Orleans in 11 years. The Sugar got poor TV ratings on ABC last week when its Tennessee-Virginia telecast competed with the Colorado-Notre Dame title game on NBC.

Sources also said Penn State No. 10 Tennessee in the Fiesta regardless of what happens this weekend. The Volunteers play Mississippi on Saturday. If Notre Dame loses to Tennessee, it became clear that the game between No. 1 Florida State and No. 2 Miami would play the Big Eight champion — either No. 11 Nebraska or No. 16 Colorado — in the Orange Bowl.

On Monday, however, sources said Florida State was leaning toward the Cotton Bowl if it loses to Miami. The other Cotton bid goes to the Southwest Conference champ, which will be Texas A&M if the 13th-ranked Aggies can win two of their last three games.

If Florida State beats Miami, sources said, the Hurricanes will end up in the Cotton or Blockbuster Bowl. Whichver of those bowls doesn't get Miami will probably invite No. 7 Alabama.

There has been speculation that the Cotton Bowl would shy away from Miami because of the Hurricanes' heavily criticized behavior last year's game against Texas. But sources said Monday that the Cotton might invite Miami again if the Hurricanes lose to Florida State.

Sources also said that No. 6 California appears to be headed to the Citrus Bowl for a meeting with the Atlantic Coast Conference champion.

Bowl may add Magic to AIDS group

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Bush administration is considering naming Magic Johnson to the National Commission on AIDS, a face commission member Belinda Mason, who recently died from the disease, according to a published report.

The Los Angeles Times reported Monday that some Washington officials said there was great support for the würde superstar to head the 15-member AIDS commission.

"I cannot think of a more wonderful appointment that the national commission on AIDS," said Minnie Johnson, who chairs the commission.

Johnson left for a vacation on Monday and could not be reached for comment.

The effects of Johnson's announcement last Thursday that he was HIV positive are just starting to be felt:

— An AIDS telethon, given by Johnson, raised $1 million.

— Black churches nationwide began to confront questions of whether they've done enough to address the AIDS issue frankly.

— The 463-store Target discount store chain said it would pull a commercial starring Johnson as inappropriate.

— The Broadway department store chain said it would end its AIDS awareness campaign.

The foundation will use some of the money for its two hospitals and clinics and donate the rest of the funds to the National Commission on AIDS, according to a published report.
